do not study Gīta, Upaniṣads etc. It does not matter, start with a simple prayer; early morning get up; (not that I am telling do not come to the next class!!) talking about the other people, if they cannot do all those things, they need not, get up early, that itself is a big challenge; get up early in the morning, take a bath and before starting your day, before starting your coffee; just go in front of the Lord and do namaskāra; and pray for all-round growth; physical, emotional, intellectual and spiritual. You must start somewhere; one minute is enough; சரண கமலாலயத்தில் ஒரு நிமிடம்; அரை நிமிடம் caraṇa kamalālayattil not even oru nimitam; arai nimitam; start somewhere; so anityam-lōkam.

And not only it is anityam-asukhaṁ-lōkam; it is full of problem; therefore do not postpone, because you do not know what all problems will crop up; health problems may come, if you want to read, eye-problem may come; if you want to hear, ear problems may come. We do not know; therefore in this fleeting problem-riddled-world, the best thing that you can do is spend some time for spirituality; the rest will be taken care of; and Kṛṣṇa concludes in the 34th verse:

मन्मना भव मद्भक्तः मद्याजी मां नमस्कुरु ।
मामेवैष्यसि युक्तवैवम् आत्मानं मत्परायणः ॥ ९.३४ ॥

manmanā bhava madbhaktō madyājī mām namaskuru |
māmēvaiṣyasi yuktvaivamātmānaṁ matparāyaṇaḥ || 9.34 ||

मन्मना भव manmanā bhava fix the mind on Me मद्भक्तः madbhaktaḥ (be) my devotee
मत्परायणः matparāyaṇaḥ (keep) Me as the Supreme goal; मद्याजि madhyāji (be) My worshipper; नमस्कुरु माम् namaskuru mām surrender to Me युक्त्वा yuktvā fixing (the mind)
एवम् ēvaṁ in this manner एष्यसि eṣyasi you will reach माम् एव mām ēva Me alone आत्मनम् ātmanam who am the self.

34. Fix the mind on Me; (be) My devotee; (keep) Me as the Supreme goal; (be) My worshipper; surrender to Me. Fixing the mind in this manner, you will reach Me alone who am the Self.

So the lifestyle of a bhaktha is beautifully delineated in this slōkā. It is a beautiful verse; it is popular verse. If somebody asks: who is a bhaktha? What is the type of life that he leads? That is beautifully defined here.

So five factors are mentioned here; I will arrange the words for the sake of development.

Madbhaktāḥ bhava; Develop devotion or love towards Me; develop bhakthi towards Me; and I have said before: that Lord can be looked upon as a means to worldly end or Lord can be looked upon as an end in itself. In the beginning stages; you need not look up God as an end; does not matter: Bhagavān is ready to accept that; you have your own worldly goals; dhānyam, danam, paśum, bahu putra lābhām, śata samvatsaram, whatever that be. Therefore, you learn to love God at least as a means for the fulfilment of worldly ends; which we call as sakāma-bhakthi; or āṛta, artārthi-bhakthi. And when you use Lord for worldly ends, certainly you will find it successful. As I told, even it has been statistically proved that a person who is religious, whatever be his concept of God; there is a general piece of mind; and therefore better resources for a bhaktha. And that is why Kṛṣṇa said, in whatever form you worship Me, I will fulfil your desire. So this is the first stage: use Bhagavān as an assistant; your assistant for worldly goal; this is madbhaktāḥ. In fact in all the purāṇas; that is predominantly presented.

Then next you have to graduate to matparāyaṇaḥ; you understand that the worldly-goals have their limitations; they cannot really give me peace; they cannot really give security; they cannot really give happiness; because they themselves are insecure in nature; how can an insecure human being give security; how can an insecure money give security; how long? How much time it takes for the earthquake to destroy everything; a few seconds only; not even one minute; a few seconds; what security we have; and all the documents themselves get lost or burned; who knows and therefore understand that peace, security and happiness have got only one source or one locus; that is called God or Brahman. Therefore may you take Brahman as the goal of life and when God is converted into your goal; you are called matparāyaṇaḥ. So param ayanam means what? Ultimate goal of life. So from sādhana, Bhagavān has become sādhyam, the goal.

Then what is the next stage? Manmanā bhava; once Bhagavān has become the primary-goal; your mind does not or should not lose sight of the goal. It should keep the ultimate-goal in your mind all the time; in your preoccupation with incidental-goal of earning money, building house, getting married, getting children, getting grandchildren, you have so many commitments; nothing wrong; but in and through your pre-occupation, do not forget for what purpose I am living. And this is called manmanā bhava; keep me in your mind, in your sub-conscious mind, as the goal; just as a musician never loses sight of the tambura śṛuti. That does not mean he is all the time hearing tampura, therefore no music at all; what is he doing; listening to the tampura śṛuti carefully: who will sit in front of him; so you expect him to sing well; rāga; kalpana svaram; rāgam, tālam, pallavi, with difficult tāla. So the deliberate thinking is involved; but whatever the musician does; in the back of his mind; the tanpura śṛuti he does not miss; Similarly do not forget your destination; thīvra mumukṣuḥ bhava; this is the third stage; What is that; not forgetfulness of the goal.

Then what is the next one? Madyājī bhava; convert every one of your actions into worship of the Lord; contributing to spiritual-growth; utilise every moment for spiritual-growth. Whatever you do; remember, yat karōśi; yad aśnasi; yad juhōsi; dadasi yat; even eating can be converted into a purificatory right; very simple; what to do; you should not eat immediately what is served. So in some places, they start serving here and after serving the last leaf, and you turn, this first leaf is empty. They do not know whether they have served or not. Do not do that; wait for a minute; do namaskāra; and acknowledge that it is Lord gift and remember God; and eat; then eating becomes a spiritual-sādhāna; Convert everything into a spiritual-sādhāna, yajña; Even sense pleasures can be converted into yajña; We saw in the 4th chapter, dravya-yajña; tapō-yajñāḥ; apanē-juhvati prāṇam, etc. care of fourth chapter. Therefore madyājī bhava; worship Me through every action of yours; Become a karma-yōgi; this is the 4th definition.

What is the fifth and final? Mām-namaskuru; naturally you will progress spiritually; if you are following these four steps you will certainly grow spiritually; but remember, when you grow spiritually, do not become arrogant; Pride goes before a fall; therefore all the time: whatever growth I am getting is because of the grace of the Lord; and in future also; my success requires the grace of the Lord. Therefore Mām-namaskuru; surrender to Me; under my shelter you follow all the spiritual sādhāna; So thus madyājī indicates the use of freewill; Mām Namaskuru; indicates the importance of grace; Freewill is also important; Īśvara anugraha is important; both should go hand in hand.

So thus what are the five conditions to be a bhaktha?:

1. Develop devotion to Me.
2. Make Me as your ultimate goal;
3. Do not lose sight of Me as the goal;
4. Convert every moment of your life into a purificatory exercise; and
5. Always surrender to the Lord and do everything with Lord's blessings.

If these five-conditions are fulfilled; what will happen to you Kṛṣṇa says: ēvaṁ ātmanam yuktvā; thus engaging yourselves in this devotional-life, religious-life, vēdic-life, mām ēva eṣyasi; you will certainly attain Me alone; you will certainly attain mōkṣa. So thus bhakthi will take every person to Mōkṣa; whatever be the level of the person. Therefore let everyone start with devotion; and initial stages, the real nature of God need not be known, God can be imagined as a person. Then gradually from ēka-rūpa, you can go to an anēka-rūpa, then you can go to arūpa. Start somewhere.

Thus ends the ninth chapter named Rājavidya rājaguhya yōga in Srimad Bhagavad-Gīta, which is the essence of the Upaniṣads, which deals with Brahman - knowledge as well as the preparatory disciplines, and which is in the form of a dialogue between Lord Kṛṣṇa and Arjuna.

128 Chapter 09, Summary

I will give you a summary of the 9th chapter of the Gīta. The 9th chapter of the Gīta is very similar to the 7th chapter and very much different from the 8th chapter; and therefore Lord Kṛṣṇa wants to show the difference of the 9th chapter from the topic of the 8th chapter. In the eighth-chapter, saḡuṇa-Īśvara-upāśana was elaborately described. Saḡuṇa-Īśvara-upāśana means meditation upon the Lord with various attributes; various virtues; and this saḡuṇa-Īśvara-upāśana has the capacity to give liberation in an indirect manner. This method of getting liberation in an indirect manner is called kṛama-mukthiḥ; and this kṛama-mukthi was discussed in the 8th chapter. And in this a person practices saḡuṇa-Īśvara-upāśana throughout the life, without coming to the nirguṇa-Īśvara-jñānam; without coming to Brahma-jñānam; he avoids nirguṇa-jñānam; and confines himself or herself to saḡuṇa-upāśana.

And we know that saḡuṇa-upāśana cannot directly lead to liberation; and therefore it has to lead to liberation only in an indirect way. And what is that indirect method? As a result of saḡuṇa-upāśana; a person travels after death; He will not merge in Īśvara or Brahman, he will not get jīvan mukthi; he will not get vidēha mukthi also; but he will travel after death and go to Brahma-lōkā.

And how do we know? Certainly we cannot see all these things; we come to know of these through scriptures. And scriptures point out that this saḡuṇa-upāśaka will get all the ideal conditions for nirguṇa jñānam, in Brahma-lōkā. What he successfully avoided here; he will have to face in Brahma-lōkā, which means vēdānta-sṛavana-manana nidhidhyāsanam. He can convertibly do in Brahma-lōkā, in very conducive-circumstances, and that too given by not an ordinary-ācārya; but by caturmūka-Brahma himself; and when the conditions are vēdānta ideal; and the teacher is wonderful; that upāsaka will get nirguṇa-Īśvara-jñānam; in Brahma-lōkā and as a result of that knowledge, he will become liberated. So this method of liberation is called kṛama-mukthi.

And what is the uniqueness of kṛama-mukthi? A person will not come to jñāna-yōga in manuṣya-janma. A person will confine to only saguṇa-upāsana throughout. And as I said before, Kṛṣṇa is not interested in prescribing kṛama-mukthi for us: Why he is not interested in prescribed kṛama-mukthi? Kṛama-mukthi is postponement of the liberation to Brahma-lōkā. As far as Kṛṣṇa is concerned, he wants us to enjoy liberation in this janma itself; and therefore he wants to prescribe sadyō-mukthi. As opposed to kṛama-mukthi; he wants to prescribe sadyō-mukthi; which means liberation here and now; jīvan-ēva mukthi is called sadyō-mukthi; sadyaḥ, means instant; like instant idli; instant sambar; instant sevai; if you can have all these things instant; why not liberation? So like fast food restaurant; we have got fast liberation restaurant.

And in this method what do we do; we practice saguṇa-upāsana and having practised saguṇa upāsana for some time, and having acquired enough qualifications or yōgyata; we switch over to nirguṇa-jñānam in this janma itself; instead of postponing to Brahma lōkā. And switching over to nirguṇa-jñānam is nothing but vēdānta vichāraḥ; Upaniṣad vicāraḥ; sṛavana-manana-nidhidhyāsanam; because in the Upaniṣad, the nature of the Lord discussed is nirguṇa nature.

Munḍaka One.I. 6 ||

अशब्दमस्पर्शमरूपमव्ययं

aśabdamaśparśamarūpamavyayam

tathā:'rasam nityamagandhavacca yat | || Part I. Canto III. 15||

Upaniṣad also discusses the nature of God; but not the saguṇa-nature; but nirguṇa-nature; studying the nirguṇa-svarupām of Īśvara is: Īśvara-jñānam; otherwise called jñāna-yōgaḥ.

And as a result of jñāna-yōga; a person will attain what? Nirguṇa-Īśvara-jñānam; the knowledge of the higher-nature of God; saguṇa-svarupām is considered lower-nature; inferior-nature.

In the 7th chapter, what was the word used? What was the name attributed to the saṅuṇa, inferior-nature? Aparā-prakṛti. And for the nirguṇa-higher-nature of Lord, name given was parā-prakṛti. And this parā-prakṛti jñānam; a person attains here and now, and as a result of that; one enjoys jīvan-mukthi; and later vidēha-mukthi.

So thus in the seventh chapter, sadyō-mukthi; in the 8th chapter, kṛama-mukthi; and in the 9th chapter, again we come back to sadyō-mukthi itself; that is why the 8th chapter is the odd chapter out; 7 and 9 both deal with nirguṇa-Īśvara-jñānam; which is the liberating knowledge.

And when we talk about nirguṇa-Īśvara-jñānam, a person may think that it is extremely difficult. Nirguṇa means too abstract, too subtle. Kṛṣṇa says in the introduction, he talks about nirguṇa-Īśvara-svarūpam and points out that it is easiest; it appears to be difficult for an unprepared mind, once you prepare your mind; nirguṇa-Īśvara-jñānam is like swallowing peeled banana. In Tamil they say; உரிச்ச வாழ்ப்பழ் சாப்பிடறமாதிரி; uricca vāḷappaḷ cāppiṭaramātiri.

Naturally you will ask how I should prepare for nirguṇa-Īśvara-jñānam; the preparation is saṅuṇa Īśvara upāsana. And therefore the 9th chapter wants to deal with saṅuṇa Īśvara upāsana, preparation of the mind, nirguṇa-Īśvara-jñānam; liberation. This is the approach of the 9th chapter. With this background, you have to see the 9th chapter.

Now going to the text proper, the first three verses happen to be the introduction to the chapter and in the introduction Kṛṣṇa mentions the subject matter of this chapter. And what is the subject matter? Īśvara-jñānam. And that too which Īśvara jñānam? The higher-nature of Īśvara, parā-prakṛti Īśvara-jñānam; nirguṇa-svarupā-jñānam; and since this knowledge is not available or accessible to the unprepared mind; this will remain a secret for the unprepared mind; like the theory of relativity; they say only a few people know; because it requires preparation.

And therefore this knowledge; remains a secret for many, because many have not prepared the mind, therefore it is called rāja guhyam; the greatest secret, and at the same time, since this knowledge alone liberates a person, since this knowledge alone is the liberating knowledge; Kṛṣṇa calls it rāja vidya, the greatest knowledge. And this rāja vidya rāja-guhyam, otherwise known as nirguṇa-Īśvara-jñānam is the subject matter of the 9th chapter; which he mentions in the first three verses.

And incidentally he mentions an important qualification which is also required. Among different preparations, one important preparation is śraddhaḥ; keeping an open mind, until I am able to understand; do not reject the teaching; do not reject the teacher; be patient, until you understand.

अश्रद्धधानाः पुरुषा धर्मस्यास्य परन्तप ।
अप्राप्य मां निवर्तन्ते मृत्युसंसारवर्त्मनि ॥ ९.३ ॥

aśraddadhānāḥ puruṣā dharmasyāśya parantapa |
aprāpya māṃ nivartantē mṛtyusaṃsāravartmani || 9.3 ||

If you reject the teaching; the loser is not the teaching; the loser is not the ṛṣi; ṛṣis are not going to lose. Anything if you do not study, and they are not going to gain anything; but you are the loser. Therefore if you want, you should have an open mind; this is the introduction in the first three verses.

Then from the 4th verse up to 10th verse, we get the central theme of the chapter, wherein Nirguṇa-Īśvara-svarūpam is revealed; the nature of the real God; the nature of the higher-nature of God. And Nirguṇa-Īśvaraḥ in Vēdānta is called Brahman; and therefore these seven verses deal with Brahma-svarupām.

And Kṛṣṇa mentions a few important features or nature of Brahman extracted from the Upaniṣads. So nothing is Kṛṣṇa's invention; everything is borrowed from the Upaniṣads; that is why at the end of each chapter, Bhagavad-Gītāsu Upaniṣadsu.

What are the features mentioned, he will enumerate?

The first feature Kṛṣṇa mentions is: Arjuna, the real I or real God is all-pervading; sarvagataḥ aham asmi; and therefore any personal God who is located in a place is not the real God; because real God does not have location. And therefore the idea that God is in Kailāsa, God is Vaikuṇṭha; God is in Brahma-lōkā; Brahma is the Father in the heaven; all these are the inferior form of God; presented for the beginning of spirituality. We do not criticise that; we do not condemn that; we all require that; but that is not the ultimate; remember my statement, which is very important. Without saguṇa-Īśvara, one cannot come to nirguṇa Īśvara; without nirguṇa Īśvara; remaining in saguṇa-Īśvara is incomplete spirituality. And therefore, a sādakā has to go to saguṇa and then it has to culminate in nirguṇa. So therefore feature No.1: Īśvaraḥ-sarvagataḥ.

And the second feature that Kṛṣṇa mentions is that: avyakthaḥ aham; avyakthaḥ means indriya agōcara-avyakthaḥ; not available for sensory perception; aśabdām, asparśām, arūpām, arasam, agandam Brahma. And therefore if anybody talks about seeing God with the eyes, Bhagavān's darśanam I saw with my eyes, we do not dismiss that darśanam; but what we say that the Lord of the darśanam is only of the aparā-prakṛti nature. Why, if you have seen, it is not the real God; and therefore indriya agōcaraḥ Īśvaraḥ; what is the word used here; avyaktham.

And the third feature that Kṛṣṇa mentions is mithyā-jagat adisthānam; the Lord is the support of the world which has got only a lower order of reality; which is unreal, compared to the higher order. Just as the dream world is real from the standpoint of the dreaming individual; but the dream world is unreal from the standpoint of the waker. Similarly this world is real from the standpoint of the waking individual; but this world is unreal from the standpoint of the parā-prakṛti; the higher-nature. And therefore what is the third definition; Lord is the substratum of the unreal world, or the world of a lesser order of reality; In Sānskrīt, mithyā jagat-adisthānam; If you remember Lalitha Sahasranāmam, one of the nāma is

लास्यप्रिया लयकरी लज्जा रम्भादिवन्दिता ॥ १४२ ॥

mithyā jagat adisthāna muktida mukthi rupāni |
lasya priya layakari, lajja rambadhitha vanditha ॥

Mithyā-jagat-adisthānam; this is the third feature.

Then the fourth-feature is Lord is asaṅga-svarupāḥ; asaṅgaḥ means what? Even though Lord is the support of this entire world; the impurities of the world do not sully the Lord, the āśraya. Because normally if a dirty object is kept over a pure cloth, what happens? The dirt of the object, will sully the cloth, because the āśrayaḥ is sullied by the aśṛita; the object. This is the normal convention; but in the case of Īśvara, Īśvara supports the whole world, but the impurities do not taint him; And therefore Lord is compared to ākāśaḥ; just as the space accommodates everything; without getting sullied by anything. Lord is ākāśavat asaṅga svarūpaḥ; this is the fourth feature. The verse is:

यथाकाशस्थितो नित्यं वायुः सर्वत्रगो महान् ।
तथा सर्वाणि भूतानि मत्स्थानीत्युपधारय ॥९.६॥

yathā"kāśasthitō nityaṃ vāyuḥ sarvatragō mahān|
tathā sarvāṇi bhūtāni sthānītyupadhāraya || 9.6 ||

Then the fifth feature that is mentioned is: Īśvaraḥ-sṛṣṭi, sthithi, laya-kāraṇam; jagathaḥ; the higher-nature of the Lord is the very cause of the origination, existence and the resolution of the creation.

यतो वा इमानि भूतानि जायन्ते ।
येन जातानि जीवन्ति ।
यत्प्रयन्त्यभिसंविशन्ति । तद्विजिज्ञासस्व । तद् ब्रह्मेति । 3.1.1. | Taittariya

yatō vā imāni bhūtāni jāyantē |
yēna jātāni jīvanti |
yatprayantyaabhisamvīśanti | tadvijijñāsasva | tad brahmēti | 3.1.1. | Taittiriya

all Upaniṣadic ideas Bhagavān has dumped it here completely. This is jagat-kāraṇatvatvam.

Then the next feature is this: If you say Īśvara is the creator of the universe; then it appears that Īśvara is also a kartā; because creator means He is doing something; He is doing a big job; He is creating the vast universe; preserving this universe, which means even the earthquakes, etc. must be his job. And because of that millions are dying; who must be responsible? Īśvara; He quakes the earth; we do not do it; So if Īśvara is doing all these work; Īśvara must become kartā, bhōktā; then if Īśvara kartā and bhōktā; He will have puṇyam, pāpam etc. such a doubt will come; And therefore Kṛṣṇa says: I do not create anything; in my presence, sākṣi-matrēṇa; the creation arises, exists and resolves.

Just as the light is only present in the hall, the light is not responsible for the type of activity that we do; One person may do noble activity in the light; another person may do an ignoble activity in the presence of light; but light will not get the good result or the bad result; Similarly Īśvara is sūrya alōkāvāt; sākṣi-mātram; this is the next feature.

And the last one which is corollary of this. Since the Lord is only the witness; Lord does not have kartṛtvam or bhōktṛtvam; kartṛtva bhōktṛtva rahita; kartṛtvam means doership; bhōktṛtvam means enjoyership; both do not belong to Īśvara.

So these are the features of the higher-nature of the Lord; that is Brahman. This is the portion from verse No.4 to 10.

Then in the 11th verse, Kṛṣṇa pointed out why there is saṁsāra; Why there is suffering in the world; saṁsāra kāraṇam kim? Kṛṣṇa says: saṁsāra kāraṇa is ignorance of this Īśvara. This Īśvara means what: the higher Īśvara; nirguṇam Īśvara; ajñānam ēva; parā-prakṛti ajñānam ēva; Brahma ajñānam ēva saṁsāra kāraṇam; Why do we say so? You cannot just say so; you have to give logic. Nirguṇam Brahma alone is beyond time and space. It is nirguṇam Brahma, only because it is beyond time and space.

What do you mean by Nirguṇam? Attributeless. And anything other than nirguṇa Brahma, that is saguṇam Brahma, which comes under aparā-prakṛti, is within time and space.

The moment you come to properties, it is subject to change; there will be increase; there will be decrease; you will take your own physical properties; is it the same. In a few days it is suddenly changing to this side; and then to the other side; therefore increase is there; decrease is there; complexion changes, hair changes; changes or disappears. Can you tell any properties that is changeless? Therefore saṅgūṇa Īśvara, aparā-prakṛti means within time and space, which means it is subject to decay and it is subject to disappearance and it is subject to association and disassociation and whatever is subject to time cannot give you security. Whatever is subject to time cannot give you security? Why; because time will destroy.

मा कुरु धन जन यौवन गर्व
हरति निमेषात्कालः सर्वम् |

[mā kuru dhana jana yauvana garvaṁ
harati nimēṣātkālah sarvam |](#)

And therefore if I do not know parā-prakṛti; what will I do? I will seek security from aparā-prakṛti; Parā-prakṛti if I understand, you will know where you will get security; and once I do not know parā-prakṛti; I will seek peace, I will seek happiness; I will seek permanence, I will seek security in the fluctuating, highly fleeting, ephemeral aparā-prakṛti and when hold on to aparā-prakṛti; what happens? Right under my nose it disappears. If it does not disappear, I disappear; either one; aparā-prakṛti is the cause of all our struggles; because expectation can never be fulfilled. We will be disappointed; we will be frustrated; and you will get angry with the Lord also.

So therefore what is the cause of saṁsāra? Wrong expectation; and what wrong expectation is; permanence from aparā-prakṛti; and why do we expect permanence from aparā-prakṛti; because we do not know that parā-prakṛti is the real and permanent. So 11th verse points out that ignorance is the cause of saṁsāra.

Then from 12th verse up to 19th verse, the remedy is given; and what is the remedy; Bhakthi is given as the remedy; and when we say bhakthi, we should remember very very clearly; bhakthi is not a sādhana, but bhakthi is a serious of sādhana culminating in jñānam; Bhakthi should culminate in jñānam; Why, because the problem is ajñānam; if ignorance is the problem, the only solution is knowledge.

विद्याविद्यां निहन्त्येव तेजस्तिमिरसङ्घवत् ॥ ३ ॥

[avirōdhitayā karma nāvidyāṁ vinivartayēt |
vidyāvidyāṁ nihantyēva tējastimirasaṅghavat || 3||](#)

Śankara beautifully says in Ātma bōdha; if darkness is the problem; what is the solution. You want to remove the darkness; and suppose you take a broomstick and sweep darkness; all together, collective endeavour; kara sēva. You go on sweeping, 12 hours, What happens? You get tired; and another person does yōgāsana; In this darkness, at the end of yōgāsana, will darkness go: No; another person chants viṣṇu sahasranāma; viṣṇu sahaśranāma is very good; but it cannot remove darkness, Very simple, light a lamp. Similarly Kṛṣṇa has pointed out nirguṇa Brahma; ajñānam is Brahma; therefore nirguṇa Brahma jñānam alone is the solution. Therefore, bhakthi must be a series of sādhanā which should culminate in jñānam.

And this series of bhakthi-sādhanā has three levels; which will be clearly discussed in the 12th chapter, but it is indicated in this chapter,

What are the three levels of bhakthi? Karma-rupā-bhakthi; upāsana-rupā-bhakthi and vēdānta-vicāraḥ-rupā-bhakthi;

First level of bhakthi should be in the form of karma-yōga; wherein we dedicate every action to the Lord;

यत्करोषि यदश्रासि यज्जुहोषि ददासि यत् ।
यत्तपस्यसि कौन्तेय तत्कुरुष्व मदर्पणम् ॥ ९.२७ ॥

yat karōṣi yadaśnāsi yajjuhōṣi dadāsi yat|
yat tapasyasi kauntēya tat kuruṣva madarpaṇam || 9.27 ||

Be active; do a lot of karma; but convert every karma into a worship and this level of bhakthi is called karma-rupā-bhakthi; bhakthi in the form of action.

And thereafter we have to graduate to the next level of bhakthi called upāsana-rupā-bhakthi; because the extrovert mind has to be turned inward; karma has a knack of making me extrovert; whether it is selfish activity or selfless activity; many people who have been very active doing selfish-activity, they cannot sit and study vēdānta. They will have to do something; because they are highly restless people. You can serve the society wonderful; but a time should come when we should turn away from that. Giving the service to the next generation; I do not say do not do it; but hand it over to the next generation; and then we have to train our mind to turn inward; antarmuka-samarādhyā bahir-mukha-sudurlabhaḥ; an extrovert mind cannot absorb vēdānta; And therefore how to turn the mind inwards; upāsana-rupā-bhakthi; bhakthi in the form of meditation; saḡuṇa meditation only; this is also bhakthi; but it is second stage.

And then we have to come to third and final stage of bhakthi; which is called vēdānta vicāraḥ-rupā-bhakthi; jñāna-yōga-rupā-bhakthi; in which I study the scriptures; śravaṇa manana nidhidhyāsana. In fact when you are attending the class; you are only practising only jñāna-rupā bhakthi only. In the fourth chapter, Kṛṣṇa called it jñāna-yajñāḥ; not only Kṛṣṇa called this jñāna-yajña; Kṛṣṇa even pointed out that jñāna-yajña is superior to all other forms of yajña; Where did He say this?

सर्व कर्माखिलं पार्थ ज्ञाने परिसमाप्यते ॥ ४.३३ ॥

sarvaṁ karmākhilam pārtha jñānē parisamāpyatē || 4.33 ||](#)

Therefore we have to come to jñāna-lakṣaṇa-bhakthi; and when a person has gone through all this three levels of bhakthi, he becomes what; jñāni-bhakthaḥ; Jñāni-bhakthaḥ, a devotee with the knowledge of Īśvaraḥ. Which Īśvara? Aparā-prakṛti or parā-prakṛti?; jñāni of parā-prakṛti; nirguṇa-Brahma-jñānam and how will be that knowledge. We are seeing that on Saturday classes:

मय्येव सकलं जातं मति सर्वं पोरतिष्ठितम् ।
मयि सर्वं लयं याति तद्ब्रह्माद्वयमस्म्यहम् ॥ Kaivalya. I. १९ ॥

[mayyēva sakalam jātam mati sarvaṁ pōratiṣṭhitam |
mayi sarvaṁ layam yāti tadbrahmādvayamasmyaham || Kaivalya. I. 19 ||](#)

That is correct jñānam; we need not go to that now; we will see that later; nirguṇa Īśvara jñāni-bhakthaḥ;

So when I say bhakthi leads to liberation; we should remember bhakthi which consists of all the three levels of sādhana. If you do only bhajana; you will not get jñānam. That is only first-stage of bhakthi; only meditation if you do, jñānam will not be there; you have to study the scriptures; under the guidance of a competent ācārya; who says? Do not say that I am promoting myself; Kṛṣṇa tells this:

तद्विद्धि प्रणिपातेन परिप्रश्नेन सेवया ।
उपदेक्ष्यन्ति ते ज्ञानं ज्ञानिनस्तत्त्वदर्शिनः ॥ ४.३४ ॥

[tadviddhi praṇipātēna paripraśnēna sēvayā |
upadekṣyanti tē jñānam jñāninastattvadarśinaḥ || 4.34 ||](#)

Arjuna you have to necessarily go to an ācārya. And in the Upaniṣad, [tad vijñārtham gurumēvādi gavēd; api gacēt;

samidpāni stōthriyam Brahma niṣtam;](#)

Thus when bhakti consisting of all these three stages; is followed, then he becomes a jñāni; and such a jñāni; is liberated.

So thus bhakthi as a means of liberation was pointed out and Kṛṣṇa said that to become a bhaktha; whatever be the level; to become a bhaktha, a person should have done lot of puṇyam; Those who do not have enough puṇyam; they will never like coming to any level of bhakthi; they will never come to karma, upāsana and they will never come to jñānam; they will be wandering.

मोघाशा मोघकर्माणो मोघज्ञाना विचेतसः |
राक्षसीमासुरीं चैव प्रकृतिं मोहिनीं श्रिताः || ९-१२ ||
mōghāśā mōghakarmāṇō mōghajñānā vicētasah |
rākṣasīmāsurīm caiva prakṛtiṁ mōhinīm śritāḥ || 9. 12 ||

So they are confused, misguided people; whereas fortunate ones will come either to karma-lakṣaṇa-bhakthi; and if he is already advanced, he will come to upāsana-lakṣaṇa bhakthi and suppose you still advance, lot a spiritual-genius, they will directly come to jñāna-rupā-bhakthi. This is the topic from verse 12 to 19.

Then from 20 to 29, Kṛṣṇa talks of two forms of bhakthi; based on the motive; previously we divided bhakthi into three levels; based on the type of sādhana; so the previous-one is sādhana-based division; the present one is motive-based division; bhāvana-based division;

- Sādhana-based division: how much; three; karma, upāsana; jñānam;
- Bhāvana-based division; two; one is called sakāma-bhakthi; and another is called niškāma-bhakthi.

And what is the difference in the motive? It is indicated by the sankalpa; māmōpātha, samasta, durikṣaya dvāra, śri paramēśvara prīthyartham; (up to this common); Then afterwards, what list is he making; how does he fill up the blanks. So if a person is an indiscriminate, unintelligent-manthāḥ; Kathōpaniṣad beautifully says:

तौ सम्परीत्य विविनक्ति धीरः ।
श्रेयो हि धीरोऽभि प्रेयसो वृणीते
प्रेयो मन्दो योगक्षेमाद्गृणीते ॥ Part I. Canto2. Mantra.२ ॥

śrēyaśca prēyaśca manuṣyamētaḥ
tau samparītya vivinakti dhīraḥ |
śrēyō hi dhīrō:'bhi prēyasō vṛṇītē
prēyō mandō yōgakṣēmādvṛṇītē || Part I. Canto2. Mantra.2||

Bhakthi can be used for infinite-goal also; bhakthi can be used for finite-goal also; Intelligent-person will use bhakthi for infinite. These idiots, manthāḥ; they will use bhakthi for all the ephemeral ones; manthāḥ prēyaḥ vṛṇītē; Election is coming; therefore you should select and elect the proper one. Therefore sakāma-bhakthas are the unintelligent ones; therefore they use the bhakthi for all the ephemeral goals; prēyaḥ; or dhamārta-kāmaḥ.

But Kṛṣṇa says, it only reveals their non-discrimination; but one thing even sakāma-bhakthi will be valid and fruitful; because it is not a pāpa karma; it does not mean any pāpam; if a person takes to sakāma-bhakthi, I will certainly fulfil his desires.

But he will happen? He will enjoy the benefit; tē taṁ bhuktvā svargalōkaṁ viśālam; kṣiṇē puṇyē martya lōkāṁ viśanti. There life will be the snake-and-ladder-game; will be climbing very very fast in the ladder and also come down faster through the snake mouth; and again go up and come down; endlessly this game goes on and on and on; this is sakāma-bhakthi; Whereas niṣkāma-bhakthās are those people, who have understood nitya-vasthu alone can give lasting security; Parā-prakṛti alone can give me peace, security and happiness; And therefore if at all he uses bhakthi; he will use the things connected with parā-prakṛti jñānam.

So he if he does not have a prepared mind, he will utilise the mind for preparing the mind; Oh Lord; make my mind ready for the knowledge; It is inbuilt in sandyāvandanam.

उश्तीरिव मातरः ॥ तस्मात् अरंगमाम वः ॥ यस्य क्षयाय जिन्वथ ॥ आपो जनयथा च नः ॥ ओं भूर्भुव सुवः ॥

om āpō hi ṣṭā mayō bhuvah || tā na ūrjē dadhātana || mahēraṇāya cakṣasē || yō vaḥ śivatamō rasaḥ || tasya bhājayatē hanaḥ || uśtīriva mātarah || tasmāt arāṅgamāma vaḥ ||
yasya kṣayāya jinvaṭha || āpō janayathā ca naḥ || om bhūrbhuvā suvaḥ ||

So mahēraṇāya cakṣasē means whatever I need for Brahma-jñānam; I do not know; kindly fill up that; that is your job; and a beautifully example is given. Just as a mother decides what type of food should be given at the right age; the child does not know; even injections are there; So many are there; bcj; dtp. whatever the injections; the child does not know; mother gives the appropriate one. Similarly I do not know what qualifications are required. It is your job to choose the required qualifications and inject me; uśtīriva mātarah; What a mantra!; like the suckling mother; mother gives milk from her own body; which is ideally suited for the child's growth; not permanently milk; after some age, kuzhu, rice, etc. just as a mother gives; Oh Lord, citta-śuddhi; asking for citta śuddhi is also niṣkāma-bhakthi; asking for a guru is niṣkāma-bhakthi; asking for an appropriate opportunity to study is niṣkāma-bhakthi; after coming to the class, asking for continuity is niṣkāma-bhakthi; And if you do not understand the class; asking for Oh Lord I do not understand, that is niṣkāma-bhakthi. After understanding, if you keep forgetting, asking for non-forgetfulness is niṣkāma-bhakthi.

And having talked about niṣkāma-bhakthi. Bhagavān says: sakāma-bhakthi is very very difficult to practice and the result is finite; niṣkāma-bhakthi is the highest result; and it is very easy to practice. So how unintelligent people should be; they practice difficult bhakthi; they pay more; and get less; whereas niṣkāma-bhakthā pays less and gets what: not more but the infinite itself!

So bhakthi is full of rules and regulations; when should be the pūja be done; what dakṣina must be given; what naivēdayam should be offered. And any mistake, you have to do prayascittam; mantra lōpē, tantralōpē, kriyā-lōpē, that is prayascitta mantra; the prayascitta mantra says: If I have chanted any mantra wrongly, Oh Lord please forgive me; but the problem prayascitta mantra itself is chanted wrongly; mantra-lōbhē, it is not mantra-lōbham is: it is mantra lōpē, for prāyascitta mantra you require another prāyascittam; It is ad-infinitum problem. So sakāma bhakthi all these things are very important. In niṣkāma-bhakthi;

तदहं भक्त्युपहृतम् अश्रामि प्रयतात्मनः ॥ ९.२६ ॥

tadahaṁ bhaktyupahr̥tamaśnāmi prayatātmanaḥ || 9.26 ||](#)

So thus Kṛṣṇa differentiated sakāma-niṣkāma-bhakthi and he expects all intelligent-people to follow niṣkāma-bhakthi. And if you are not able to follow: Swamiji I have so many desires: OK; you are allowed to postpone; some more time you spent for the home; but your aim should be the proportion should gradually become lesser and lesser. Let it be a long-term target; and this is from verse No.20 and 29.

And from verse No.30 to 34; Kṛṣṇa completes this teaching by glorifying bhakthi and what is the greatness of bhakthi. Since bhakthi has got several layers, it is like a flight of steps; it is like mādipadi, beginning from the lowest rung of the ladder; karma-lakṣaṇa bhakthi; then upāsana-lakṣaṇa-bhakthi; and then jñāna-lakṣaṇa; Since it has many rung, anybody can start bhakthi; according to his level; Not that you have to study nirguṇam Brahma; you need not start there; Start with karma-yōga; very easy; even you can practice sakāma karma; but dedicate it to the Lord, We will see the details in the 12th chapter; thus anybody can start bhakthi; whatever be the level.

And Kṛṣṇa goes one step further, even if a person has been a very very corrupt person, taking to all kinds of negative activities, even that person need not entertain guilt; because guilt is one of the most powerful-obstacles; because guilt leads to diffidence; and diffidence is the greatest-obstacle because if I am diffident; even if all others are confident; no use; on the other hand, if I am confident, even if all others are diffident, I will work; and therefore spiritual-sādhana requires self-confidence; and all others can only encourage; I have to be confident; in a running race, mother, father, brothers, etc. they can clap the hands; they can cheer you up; come on, etc. buy who has to run; the running has to be done only by the child only; Similarly the spiritual-sādhāna, I have to do; guru can encourage; śāstra can encourage, Bhagavān can encourage; and biggest obstacle to confidence is guilt; and therefore Kṛṣṇa says never have guilt, once you have understood that your lifestyle has been unhealthy; decide to change; once you have turned a new leaf; and decided to change, the very decision makes you a saint.

अपि चेत्सुदुराचारः भजते मामनन्यभाक् ।

साधुरेव स मन्तव्यः सम्यग्व्यवसितो हि सः ॥ ९.३० ॥

sādhurēva sa mantavyaḥ samyagvyavasitō hi saḥ|| 9.30 ||

And not only that, there may be some people who have got disadvantages because of their very birth; because of their parentage; because of their location, etc. There can be people with inherent disadvantages but even those disadvantaged people can practice bhakthi and attain liberation.

And therefore Arjuna: be a bhaktha and how to be a bhaktha, He said in the last verse; the definition of a bhaktha, beautifully presented.

First madbhaktā bhava; first you learn to love Me. at least for the sake of worldly goals; does not matter; that is first stage;

Then in due course, learn to love Me as the very goal itself. Can you understand the difference between these two stages?

In the first stage, Bhagavān is not the goal; through Bhagavān I want to achieve worldly ends.

Next stage is madparāyaṇaḥ; keep Me as the goal.

Then the third stage is never forget this goal; manmanā bhāva.

Then the fourth stage is convert your very life into a form of worship, taking you towards the goal; madyājī bhava.

And then the last and final factor is even when you are progressing, remember the grace of the Lord is required; therefore be humble; Mām namaskuru; Never become arrogant because of your spiritual-progress; Then the snake will take you down; therefore be humble; seek the grace of the Lord.

If these five factors are taken care of, you are My bhakthā; and sooner or later, you will certainly attain Me; mām ēva iṣyasi. So with this glorification of bhakthi, Kṛṣṇa concludes this particular discourse. And the since the subject matter is rāja-vidya rāja-guhyam, the chapter is called rāja-vidya rāja-guhyā-yōgaḥ.

The Yōga of Divine Manifestation

अथ दशमोऽध्यायः | विभूतियोगः

daśamō'dhyāyaḥ - vibhūti yōgaḥ||

In the chapters beginning from the 7th chapter of the Gīta, Lord Kṛṣṇa has been primarily dealing with Īśvara-svarūpam or the nature of God. It is a progressive topic; progressively developed by Kṛṣṇa in these chapters. In the 7th chapter, he dealt with the nature of God; in the 8th and in the 9th chapter, also we discussed the same topic. And in the following chapters, 10, 11 and 12th also this will be the central theme.

In the preceding three chapters, Lord Kṛṣṇa defined God as Jagat-kāraṇam. Jagat kāraṇam means the cause of the universe. And Kṛṣṇa also talked about the nature of God; pointing out that God consists of two aspects; one known as parā-prakṛti, the higher-nature; and the other known as aparā-prakṛti, the lower nature. And we also saw parā-prakṛti is of the nature of consciousness and the aparā-prakṛti is of the nature of matter. Thus basic matter-principle plus the Consciousness principle, this put together is God.

And we saw what are the common features of these two aspects and what are the uncommon features also. What is the common feature we saw; Consciousness is also beginningless; matter is also beginningless; Consciousness therefore cannot be created; matter also cannot be also created. This uncreated-beginningless-consciousness-matter-unit or composite is called Īśvaraḥ.

And we also saw their differences. Parā prakṛti or consciousness is not subject to change; it is changeless principle, whereas the matter-principle is subject to change, is subject to evolution to become this universe, Matter is capable of evolving; and not only it is subject to evolution; after sometime it is subject to involution also; involution means folding back into again the fundamental form. Thus matter expand and contract; it is subject to change; therefore aparā-prakṛti, the matter is savikāram; the parā-prakṛti, the consciousness is nirvikāram; Parā prakṛti the consciousness is nirguṇam; free from all attributes or properties and therefore not available for any type of study; all scientific studies are based on attributes and properties; consciousness is free from all attributes; therefore it is not available for an instrument of experimentation; Nirguṇam; whereas matter, the aparā-prakṛti is full of attributes; therefore it is saḡuṇa satvam.

And then finally, we made one more point; which is not very much relevant here; but an aside note, that is consciousness is satyam; having independence; svatantram; whereas matter is mithya; it is parā tantraṁ, depending on consciousness. Thus cētanam-acētanam; nirvikāram-savikāram; nirguṇam-saguṇam; satyam-mithya; such consciousness-matter mixture is called God.

And this alone is symbolically presented as the father principle and the mother principle. Do not ask me which is father and mother, I do not want to create problems for you; Since they are two inseparable principle, parā and aparā, we compare it to the inseparable made-for-each-other, really made for each other couple!! Never taking to divorce. In fact, impossible.

Kalidāsa says just as a word and its meaning can never be separated, vāgarthau iva. Like that parā and aparā-prakṛti; are like the father and the mother principle. And this God is jagat kāraṇam; which means God is responsible for the emergence of this universe.

And the understanding of kāraṇam status is generally done in three stages; depending on the maturity of the student. For a beginner, God as the cause is presented in one way; and once a person is slightly mature; the presentation is modified to suit the intellectual capacity and then we have got a third level for the most advanced student, I have talked about this before; I am just reminding you.

For the first level of student; we say God creates this world; God is the creator of the world and comparison is given; just as a carpenter creates the furniture; just as goldsmith produces the ornaments; similarly God is the creator of the world. In Sānskrīt we use the word nimitha kāraṇam. And at this level, when we say God is the creator; the students assumes God as a person; as a human being. Because when you imagine a creator; the creator has to be an intelligent principle, skilled person and therefore God also is like a human being. And naturally you will like to know where is He? Carpenter should have an address? What is the address of that creator God? In the beginning stage, we have to give an appropriate answer, I cannot give the local Adyar, Besant Nagar address; and therefore I give the address c/o vaikunthaḥ;

rukmiṇī satyabhāmābhyām sahitaṁ kṛṣṇamāśrayē || 7 ||

So where is the Lord? Pārijāta vrikṣasya chāyāyām. In Vaikuṇṭha; pārijāta vṛkṣam is there; In the shade of that tree; chāyā means shade and not the tea as in Hindi; chāyāyām. And there also hēmasimhāsanōpari; swarna simhāsanam; āsīnam beautifully seated; ambudaśyāmam; dark like a cloud; āyatākṣam; means one who has a got a beautiful long eye; alaṅkr̥tam; various ornaments; candrānanaṁ; (some bharatha natya students are there; therefore looking at them I get inspired) candrānanaṁ means having a beautiful moonlike face; caturbāhuṁ; śrīvatsāṅkita vakṣasaṁ; rukmiṇī satyabhāmābhyām sahitaṁ kṛṣṇamāśrayē.

This is the creator: Viṣṇu. How he creates? Out of Viṣṇu's navel comes Brahmā; Viṣṇu does not directly, he only creates Brahmāji and thereafter hands over the creation job; employs Brahmāji; only one He creates; thereafter others should create. So this is the idea of God as a creator; for a beginner, wherein God is a person. And this will help a beginner; it is wonderful; it is useful for meditation also.

And once a person has remained in this state for some time, when the mind is mature; when the mind begins to ask further questions; how can infinite God be located; questions will come; how can infinite God be located; and where did God find the materials for creating the world; when such questions come; we have the next stage of teaching.

What is that? God creates the universe is equal to God himself manifests as the universe; because for God to create, there is no outside material; a carpenter has got a piece of wood outside; goldsmith has got a piece of gold outside, but when God has to create, where he will find the raw material. In fact even ākāśa itself is not there; even the pañca bhūtam is not there; where will the Lord find the material; the scriptures point out that the Lord finds the material also in himself. And the Upaniṣads gives the example; यथोर्णनाभिः सृजते गृह्णते च yathōrṇanābhiḥ sṛjatē gr̥hṇatē ca || Muṇḍaka 1.1.7 ||

Just as a spider finds the material in itself, for creating the web; Lord finds the material in his own body; because He consists of not only consciousness-principle, He consists of matter-principle also. Therefore Lord does not create the world. Lord himself manifests as the world. At this stage, in Sānskrīt we use the word, Īśvaraḥ jagat pariṇāmi upādhāna kāraṇam. That is the technical word. What is the Sānskrīt word? Nimitha kāraṇam; God is seen as a person somewhere.

In the second stage we say God himself becomes God himself manifests as the universe. Once I know that God himself manifests as the universe, I will never ask the question, where is God? Why I won't ask the question?; God himself or herself is available in the form of the creation. Therefore ākāśa is the manifestation of God; Vāyu is manifestation of God. This we saw in the seventh chapter;

rasō'hamapsu kauntēya prabhā'smi śaśisūryayōḥ |
praṇavaḥ sarvavedēṣu śabdaḥ khē pauruṣaṃ nṛṣu || 7.8 ||

Therefore the sunlight is not created by God; sunlight itself is the manifestation of God. Therefore I worship the rising Sun.

What a beautiful Rudra mantra? Lord Śiva is daily raising in the form of the colorful Sun; initially dark red; thereafterwards golden yellow; thereafterwards bright white; in the month of March, at 12 noon; look up. (Do not look, you will lose your eyes) and the Rudra says that this Lord Rudra darśanam is available for all the gōpis; all the gōpās, all the shepards also; without going to the temple, because they have no time; they have to take the cow and even they get the darśanam; And the ladies who are carrying water: udahāryaḥ; you would have seen; they would have even three pots and they talking and even quarrelling they walk, the pot would not fall; in the village you see this; even those women who do not go to the temple, Bhagavān wants to give darśanam to them; and what way they have darśanam; in the form of Sūrya. And not only for the illiterate people; even for the most evolved dvija; who performs sandhyāvandanam by mistake; (if anyone does today, it seems to be a mistake!) even they worship,

hārī hiraṇmayavapurdhṛtaśaṁkha cakraḥ ||

Therefore once you come to the second level (What is the second level? God has become the universe for me) God darśanam is always available. And what is the body of the Lord? Bhūḥ pādaḥ yasya nābhirviyadasuranilaścandra sūryau ca nētrē; the whole cosmos is the avathāra of the Lord; is the manifestation of the Lord; I need not stand in a big queue whether it is dharma darśanam or special darśanam. Dharma darśanam or non-dharma darśanam; I do not have to wait in queue, open the eyes, the Lord is there. This is called viśva rūpa Īśvaraḥ; for more mature people, this is the second stage. And it is the second stage that is elaborated in chapters 7, 9, 10 and 11; in all these chapters, for madhyama adhikāris Lord as Viśva-rūpam.

And if a person is able to dwell upon this remain in this appreciation for sufficiently long time; then we have the final stage, which cannot be easily accepted and what is that? God does not create the universe; God does not become the universe; because becoming means undergoing change. Then what is that? God apparently appears as the universe. Therefore the universe is a false manifestation of the Lord. In which stage alone we say the universe is unreal; Brahmā satyam, jagat mithya.

But to appreciate the universe as unreal; it requires tremendous intellectual and emotional maturity and therefore that is kept as the final stage; which we will see from the 13th chapter onwards; but in these chapters, what is the topic? God manifests as the universe. Therefore the whole universe is nothing but the Lord himself; sarvaṁ viśnu mayam jagat.

And once I am able to appreciate this; this is viśva rūpa darśanam; divinisation of this world. In the first stage God is elsewhere; He is sitting there; world is elsewhere; both are in different places. And God is sacred and the world is secular or still worse; so we have a sacred-secular-dichotomy in the beginning stage; but once you have come to the middle stage; I do not separate God and world; because God alone is in the form of world; just as Gold alone is in the form of ornaments; wood alone is in the form of furniture; I cannot say God and world; when you use "and" two things should be separate; "gold and ornaments" can you say: No. because there are no ornaments other than gold. You cannot say "wood and furniture" because there are no furniture other than wood. Similarly I cannot say God and world; because there is no world separate from, other than God. Therefore, to see the Bhagavān, I do not have to go to the temple or to close the eyes: pārtha iḍam yellām; pārkum iḍam yenga neekka; a beautiful Tamil line is there. Wherever you see, is nothing but Īśvaraḥ.

And once you have got this vision, whatever glory is there in the creation; any glory, the glory of the Sun, as the uninterrupted power supply, the original UPS is Sūrya bhagavān; Our UPS is not uninterrupted; the real UPS is Lord Surya; how long; for how many billions of years, it has been giving powers what is the amount of energy it sends; you will soon know in the month of March April in Chennai. Now we are under the roof; Sun has already set; but even now, you can see; what an energy; and we are trying to imitate the Sun; we have not been able to; still power is a problem. So Surya is a glorious thing and then you can take so many things in the creation; glory of earth; the glory of water, the most ingenious chemical ever made is water. And therefore Kṛṣṇa wants to say that since God is everything, any glory found anywhere in the creation, that belongs to God alone.

What about my glory? A doubt will arise in that. First question is do you have glory; that itself is doubtful; let us assume we have some glory; Kṛṣṇa wants to say that also belongs to God alone, because you are also a mixture of aparā-prakṛti; the matter aspect and parā-prakṛti, the consciousness aspect, aparā-prakṛti belongs to the inferior aspect of the Lord; parā-prakṛti belongs to the superior aspect of the Lord. Now tell me where are you? And therefore, give of all the glories to the Lord.

And this seeing of all the Vibhūthis as God's vibhūthi is Vibhūthi darśanam; and the greatest advantage is we will be humble; because we never claim any credit; if you remember morning class, Kēnōpaniṣad, even dēvās became proud of their capacity and God had to teach a lesson even to dēvās. And similarly here also off and on, pride rises its hood, if you remember vibūthi yōgaḥ; I will be humble.

And not only that; when I see any glory in any other person, I will see that also as the glory of the Lord. And therefore there is no comparison of two people. Suppose I have some glory and you have some glory; then we have to fight; who is more glorious; I now I have no glory; no glory; means what my glory belongs to the Lord and I also know that your glory also belongs to God; there is only one source of all glories. Where is the question of jealousy?

So for a real bhaktha, viśva-rūpa bhaktha, arrogance will never come; jealousy will never come; because he sees Īśvara vibūthi everywhere. And it is this transformation that Lord Kṛṣṇa wants to bring in our minds. What transformation, seeing the glory of the Lord everywhere and since this is the topic, sarvathra Īśvara vibūthi darśanam is the topic. This chapter is called vibūthi yōgaḥ. With this background, we will enter into the chapter proper.

श्रीभगवानुवाच।

भूय एव महाबाहो शृणु मे परमं वचः ।

यत्तेऽहं प्रीमाणाय वक्ष्यामि हितकाम्यया ॥ १०.१ ॥

Śrī Bhagavān uvāca

bhūya ēva mahābāhō śṛṇu mē parāmaṃ vacaḥ |

yattē'haṃ prīyamāṇāya vaksyāmi hitakāmyayā || 10.1 ||

श्रीभगवान् उवाच Śrī Bhagavān uvāca the Lord said महाबाहो mahābāhō Oh ! Arjuna भूयः एव bhūyaḥ ēva once again शृणु śṛṇu may you listen to, मे परमं वचः mē parāmaṃ vacaḥ My supreme words यद् अहम् yad aham which I हितकाम्यया hitakāmyayā wishing your welfare वक्ष्यामि ते vaksyāmi tē shall tell you, प्रियमाणाय priyamāṇāya who are delighted.

1. The Lord said --- Oh Arjuna! Once again may you listen to my supreme words which I, wishing your welfare, shall tell you who are delighted?

So in this chapter, we do not find any question from Arjuna, and therefore we come to know that Kṛṣṇa himself volunteers to talk more about Īśvara-svarūpam. Kṛṣṇa gives the answer; Hey Arjuna you are very very dear student to Me. And it is very rare to get nice students. And now that you are here in front of Me, I want to make use of that opportunity. Just as śiṣyās are interested in good gurus; in the same way, gurus are also interested in good śiṣyās; because good śiṣyās inspire the guru and guru's creativity is activated when there is an bright inquisitive responding face. If the śiṣyā's face is Castrol oil, of and on looking at the watch, Guru will forget what little he knows.

In Kathōpaniṣad; Yamadharmarāja himself congratulates Nachiketas, and Yamadharmarāja offers prayers to the Lord: Oh Lord; May I get more disciples like Nachiketas; tvadṛgnnō bhuyāt Nachiketaḥ praṣtā. Like that Kṛṣṇa has got a wonderful śiṣyā in Arjuna and therefore Kṛṣṇa says Arjuna, I am inspired; therefore I am going to continue. Therefore Hē mahābāhō Arjuna, bhūyaḥ ēva; mē paramaṃ vacaḥ śṛṇu; may you once again listen to my supreme words.

What do you mean supreme words? Words are always the same; how can you say words are supreme or not. So the here supreme words means words which are dealing with the supreme law. Therefore the words are called supreme words. So about the nature of God I want to tell more.

And what is the reason? Priyamāṇāya tē; to you who are very very dear disciple of Me; priyamāṇāya means favorite disciple. Of course, guru should not have favorite and non-favorite disciple; here the idea is: that you are responding one; priyamāṇāya.

And not only I see you as a dear disciple with srāddha; I am teaching because this teaching is beneficial to you; hitakāmyaya vakṣyāmi; this topic is useful to you; this knowledge will help you in getting liberation; Therefore hitakāmyayā means hita iccayā; for your own benefit. The idea is Kṛṣṇa is not going to get any benefit out of it; because Kṛṣṇa does not require any benefit. Remember third chapter-

नानवाप्तमवाप्तव्यं वर्त एव च कर्मणि ||३-२२||

na mē pārthāsti kartavyaṃ triṣu lōkēṣu kiñcana |
nānavāptamavāptavyaṃ varta ēva ca karmaṇi ||3.22 ||

I have nothing to accomplish in this universe; but still out of compassion for you, I am going to teach you more.

न मे विदुः सुरगणाः प्रभवं न महर्षयः ।
अहमादिर्हि देवानां महर्षीणां च सर्वशः ॥ १०.२ ॥

na mē viduḥ suragaṇāḥ prabhavaṃ na maharṣayaḥ |
ahamādirhi dēvānām maharṣīṇām ca sarvaśaḥ || 10.2 ||

न सुरगणाः na suragaṇāḥ neither the Gods न महर्षयः na maharṣayaḥ nor the great sages
विदुः viduḥ know मे प्रभवम् me prabhavam My origin हि अहम् आदिः hi aham ādiḥ because I am the origin देवानाम् devānām of the gods च महर्षीणाम् ca maharṣīṇām and the great sages, सर्वशः sarvaśaḥ in all respects.

2. Neither the Gods nor the great sages know My origin, because I am the origin of the Gods and the great sages in all respects.

So these verses are introductory verses; wherein the subject matter is introduced from verse No.1 to 3. So Īśvara svarūpa jñānam; Īśvara vibūthi jñānam is the subject matter, which is being introduced. And in this verse, Kṛṣṇa points out that Arjuna: Do not tell me that you will learn the same topic from other gurus; I will learn the very same thing from somebody else, you cannot tell me because, nobody else knows My glory in its entirety.

I alone can know the glory in its full measure. Nobody else can know, because all others are born later; No.1; and all others are finite in nature; and therefore how can a finite mind ever know the glory of the infinite Lord. Therefore Arjuna, you have to learn from only one source, only I know and therefore you have to learn from Me. So better continue to listen. So suragaṇāḥ mē prabhavaṁ na viduḥ; even Gods do not know my full glory.

And that is what we found in Kēnōpaniṣad also. When the dēvās were very proud, Lord appeared in a mysterious form and dēvās could understand what that form is: Agni got humiliated; vāyu dēvathā got humiliated; Indra dēvathā got humiliated; when Indra dēvathā prayed to the Lord; Parvathi dēvi: Umadēvi comes and teaches Indra. So thus though the Kēnōpaniṣad story it is pointed out that even dēvathās cannot know the full nature of God.

Therefore suragaṇāḥ means dēvagaṇāḥ, na viduḥ; they do not know; mē prabhavaṁ; prabhavaṁ means My glory; My power, My origin, they never know.

And what about ṛiṣīs, maharṣayaḥ api na viduḥ; even great ṛiṣīs do not know My glory.

And what is the reason? He himself gives the reason, because aham ēva Ādiḥ; I am their cause; I am their creator; they have come much later; and not only they have come later, they have got limited mind, limited intellect, limited instruments of knowledge.

So therefore aham ādiḥ means kāraṇam. I am the cause of dēvānām; all the dēvās, including Brahmāji. In the purāṇās, if you read, when Brahmāji appears from the navel, He sees darkness everywhere; He does not see a second thing; He does not know anything including his own nature; imagine suddenly you find yourselves surrounded by darkness; nothing is there; and Brahmāji got frightened also: So bhibhēt; tasmāt ēkāki bhibēti; saha api bhibhēt; Brahmāji got frightened; then he did tapas, as a result of tapas, He acquires knowledge given by Viṣṇu, the original creator; yō Brahmāna vidhadati pūrvam; yōvai vēdaṁsca prahinōti tasmai; Viṣṇu creates Brahmādeva; Brahmāji is ignorant initially; then Viṣṇu himself and sends him all the knowledge; yo vai vēdāṁsca prahinōti tasmai. And therefore how can anybody talk about My glory; because they themselves do not know; so I am the kāraṇam of everyone including Brahmāji; Maharṣinām, I am the kāraṇam behind all the ṛiṣīs also.

sarvaśaḥ in its total sense; and what do you mean sarvaśaḥ? I am not only the nimitha kāraṇam; I am also the upādāna kāraṇam; it is not that I create them; in fact I myself manifest as those people.

यो मामजमनादिं च वेत्ति लोकमहेश्वरम् ।
असंमूढः स मर्त्येषु सर्वपापैः प्रमुच्यते ॥ १०.३ ॥

yō māmajamanādiṃ ca vētti lōkamahēśvaram |
asammūḍhaḥ sa martyēṣu sarvapāpaiḥ pramucyatē || 10.3 ||

मर्त्येषु marthēṣu among the mortals, सः असंमूढः saḥ asammūḍhaḥ that discriminative one यः वेत्ति yaḥ vētti who knows me माम् अजम् mām ajaṃ to be birthless अनादिम् anādiṃ beginingless च लोकमहेश्वरम् ca lōkamahēśvaram and the great Lord of the universe प्रमुच्यते pramucyatē becomes free सर्वपापैः sarvapāpaiḥ from all sins.

3. Among mortals, that discriminative ones who knows Me to be birthless, causeless, and the great Lord of the Universe, becomes freed from all sins.

And if a person is an intelligent one, he will certainly apply his mind to know the jagat kāraṇa Īśvaraḥ. It is only the inferior ordinary type of mind, which will be satisfied with knowing a few little things here; sufficient learning for earning food; that is why modern day education is based on what?

One time it was CA, then it was computer, computer; So we are learning something not for knowing something and improving ourselves; which degree will fetch me a job in which I can work the least and get the most. So many people are satisfied with that knowledge, because their intellect is not mature; sufficiently developed; any developed intellect will always ask the question; from where did all these come? kastaṃ kō:'haṃ kuta āyātaḥ kā mē janānī kō mē tātaḥ. A developed intellect will certainly ask this question: Is there a cause? All the scientists are struggling to arrive at the one cause alone; they want the theory of everything. T... O... E.... They want to reduce everything to one basic principle, which alone evolves into the entire creation; which means what? Cause hunting is the job of a thinking intellect; when an apple falls, Newton asks the question; How; what will we do; in one second, the apple will be swallowed into our stomachs; we will never question why it came down and why it did not go up or to the side, etc. So why should we bother about all the things; this is the mediocre intellect. A thinking intellect will like to arrive at asmin vijñātē, sarvaṃ idaṃ vijñātaṃ bhavathi. Such a mature intellect is called asammūḍhaḥ.

A mature intellect, a discriminate intellect is one; yaḥ vētti; which wants to know God, the cause of the universe. If you do not like the word God, you use any word; but the question is what? What is the cause of all these?; and therefore yaḥ mām vētti; that intelligent person knows Me, the jagat kāraṇam.

And what type of God he is? Ajaṃ anādiṃ ca; who is birthless; cause of the universe; ajaṃ means what; birthless; Why ajaṃ? If God also has birth; then God will not be the ultimate cause of the universe, because God will have His cause. Then again the next question will come. God's creator, who is He? What about that? It has got a cause or not. Therefore an ultimate cause should be a causeless-cause.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa says, I am the beginningless God; And therefore anādiṃ cha; I am without a cause; So ajaṃ birthless; anādiṃ means causeless; because birthless therefore causeless; because causeless, therefore birthless; both are interconnected; and if you read the purāṇās, they will put in a normal form; that is God is father and mother; they will be sitting in Kailāsa or Vaikuṇṭha; And somebody will ask: who are your parents; and they will say that we do not have parents; here we say causeless; in purāṇās they will say that Parvathi does not have mother-in-law and father-in-law.

Parvathi is the luckiest daughter-in-law; one lady who does not have the problem from mother-in-law; because Lord Śiva does not have parents; this is purāṇa; it is put in the form of family, inlaws, etc. but if you scientifically analyse God is causeless and therefore only lōkamahēśvaram; and I am the Lord the creator who is the controller of the whole universe.

Not only sṛṣṭi-kāraṇam, but also stithi-kāraṇam; and such a sṛṣṭi-stithi-laya-kāraṇa Īśvara, this discriminate person comes to know; vētti; and saha marthēṣu asaṃmūḍhaḥ; he is the most intelligent person among human beings; he has utilised his life for a worthy knowledge.

And such a great person, what benefit he gets; sarvapāpaiḥ pramucyātē; he becomes free from all the papas of the saṃsāra; he becomes liberated.

So when I say he will become liberated; you should be very careful, the Īśvara that we are describing now is only the second stage; we have to go to the third level of knowledge; and this person will sooner or later go to the third level also; and will get liberated; third level we will have to supply.

Verses 10.4 and 10.5

pṛthagvidhāḥ bhāvāḥ (all these) different dispositions, भूतानाम् bhūtānām of beings, भवन्ति bhavanti are born, मत्तः एव mattaḥ ēva out of Me alone

4 & 5. Intelligence, knowledge, non-delusion, patience, truthfulness, sense-control, mind - control, pleasure, pain, birth, death, fear, Fearlessness, non-violence, equanimity, contentment, austerity, generosity, fame, and ill-fame --- (all these) different dispositions of beings are born out of Me alone.

So with the third verse, introductory part is over; and in the introduction Lord Kṛṣṇa pointed out that the subject matter is Īśvara-svarūpam; Īśvara vibhuthiḥ; the glory of the Lord.

Now Kṛṣṇa presents the subject-matter briefly in the following verses from verse No.4 up to verse no.11. He presents the subject-matter briefly; then Arjuna will ask for elaboration; and Kṛṣṇa will elaborate.

So in this portion Kṛṣṇa points out that God alone has manifested in the form of the entire universe; because God is a mixture of consciousness plus matter; the universe is a mixture of consciousness plus matter and therefore Lord alone has magnified himself, elaborated himself, in the form of this universe.

For the sake of convenience, the world is divided into two; one is the external world of objects, bāhya prapañcaḥ; and the internal world of thoughts; ānthara prapañcaḥ.

And Kṛṣṇa says internal world is also born out of Me alone, the external world is also born out of Me alone; which means see God, you need not look at a special direction, if you open the eyes, Bhagavān, if you close the eyes, Bhagavān. Therefore God is everywhere.

First the ānthara prapañcaḥ is enumerated; What is there inside; varieties of thoughts; no पञ्चमं pancam; We have got any number of thoughts, Kṛṣṇa gives a list; buddhihi. So this is the list of internal universe; buddhiḥ is intelligence; so we have intelligence; I hope; At least some, if not much; buddhiḥ intelligence, jñānam knowledge; asaṁmōhaḥ means clarity of thinking; not delusion; saṁmōhaḥ means delusion; asaṁmōhaḥ non delusion; means clarity of thinking.

Then kṣamā; you can understand kṣamā means patience, satyam, truthfulness, damaḥ means sense control. Even though sense control is the property of the sense organs, but to control the sense organs the message should be given by what; the mind alone; because we have seen Kathōpaniṣad, sense organs are like the horses, mind is like the reins; and therefore if the sense organs are under control; it is because of the mind's controlling power; That is called here damaḥ; directing power of the mind.

Then śamaḥ mind control; then sukham; you can understand happiness; duḥkham unhappiness, bhavaḥ means birth, origin of these thoughts or emotions and अभावः abhāvaḥ; means dissolution or resolution of these thoughts, arrival and departure, bhayaṁ. You can understand, fear, abhayam; fearlessness.

Then in the next slōkā the list continues, these are all what? internal world, ahiṁsā; ahimsa means what; non-violence; that is that mental attitude of non-violence; ahiṁsā; samatā. samatā means equanimity poise, tranquility, any word, tuṣṭiḥ contentment; tapaḥ; austerity, discipline or austerity, dānam; generosity, a charitable disposition; a generous disposition; yaśaḥ, fame, the thought; ayaśaḥ, ill-fame.

This is not an exhaustive list; Kṛṣṇa has just given a list; you can fill it up with more.

Bhūtānām bhāvāḥ; these are all various inner conditions or dispositions of the living beings; so bhūtānām means the living beings.

And all these conditions originate from where? mattaḥ ēva bhavanti. They all are born out of Me alone; in their own distinct nature; pṛthagvidhāḥ; in their distinct nature; they are all born out of Me alone; therefore I am the cause of the inner world of thoughts and later he will point out I am the cause of the outer world also; combining them together I am the cause of everything; and therefore I am everything; this is going to be the development; details of which we will see in the next class.

130 Chapter 10, Verses 06-08

We have entered into 10th chapter of the Gītā, and in the first three verses of this chapter, Lord Kṛṣṇa has introduced the subject-matter of the 10th chapter; and the subject-matter is Īśvara-svarūpam, the nature of God. And this is the main topic of all the chapters beginning from the 7th chapter. While in the first six chapters, Kṛṣṇa dealt with jīva-svarūpam, the nature of the individual. From the 7th chapter onwards, the Lord is dealing with Īśvara, the nature of God. And this has been topic in the 7th as well as in the 9th chapters.

In the 10th chapter also, the same topic is being continued. Kṛṣṇa talked about the glory of Īśvara-svarūpa-jñānam in the first three verses and then from the fourth verse onwards, Kṛṣṇa has entered into the nature of God topic. And in the previous chapters, God has been defined as jagat-kāraṇam, the cause of the universe. In all the scriptural literature God is defined as the cause of the universe.

And this jagat-kāraṇam status of the Lord itself is explained in the scriptures in three different ways, depending upon the intellectual-level of the student. Jagat-kāraṇam explanation level No.1; jagat-kāraṇam explanation level No.2; jagat-kāraṇam explanation level No.3. This explanation will depend upon the intellectual caliber of the listener.

In the beginning stages when we defined God as jagat-kāraṇam, we translate this as God being the creator of the universe and as the creator of the universe, Lord is presented as the omniscient, the omnipotent creator, who creates the whole universe. And the moment we hear that description, we will imagine different creators we know; the creator of an ornament in the form of goldsmith; the creator of a desk, in the form of a carpenter; the creator of the building in the form of mason or architect. Similarly we imagine an intelligent-creator as a person. And the scriptures also feed our imagination and fancy and describe the omniscience of the Lord by providing many heads.

How do you symbolise omniscience? We have got one head and therefore we have got limited knowledge, if the Lord should have limitless knowledge. How do you symbolise? Either four heads, chaturmukhaḥ or pañca-mukhaḥ or ṣaṇmukhaḥ; or aṣṭamukhaḥ or sahasra śiṛiṣa puruṣa you describe.

And once you visualise the Lord as an intelligent being, your curiosity could further question about the residence of the Lord; we want the introduction card of the Lord. Similarly you want the God's card also; where does the Lord reside, what is his phone number, what is his email address; dot com; vaikunṭa dot com. Because this is how we understand a creator. And the scriptures also describe the creator as a person residing in Vaikunṭa, residing in Kailāsa; residing in Brahma-lōka; this is the initial introduction to the Lord, the creator. And this satisfies most of the people.

And once we have grown up sufficiently; intellect is capable of thinking further, we will ask the next question, if God is the creator of the universe, where did he find the raw material out of which he created this world? Because we know carpenter requires a raw material; gold smith requires a raw material; mason requires cement and all those things. If the God is the intelligent creator, what is the raw material?

Then the scriptures go to the second level of explanation; before the universe emerged, God alone was there; ēkam ēva advitīyam. Therefore, there is no raw material outside God. In fact there is no question of outside itself; because the very concept of outside comes, only after the emergence of space. We are talking about a situation; even before the concept of space arise.

And therefore where is the question of a raw material outside God. There is no question and therefore scriptures point out that not only Lord is the creator, but Lord himself finds the raw material in himself or herself; you can fill up the blank, as the case may be; Himself or herself. And therefore, there is no question of Lord creating the universe. Lord being the very raw material, Lord himself evolves into the universe.

Just as the seed evolves into the tree, just as the wood itself manifests as the furniture; just as the gold itself manifests as ornaments; the Lord himself is ākāśa, vāyū, etc. and therefore we revise our statement; we do not say God creates the world, we say God himself evolves; becomes the world.

And therefore what we are experiencing now is none other than the Lord himself manifesting in the form of this cosmos; and therefore ākāśa is Īśvara; vāyū is Īśvara; Agni is Īśvaraḥ; this is the second level; for the slightly advanced intellect.

And once a person has remained in this stage for some time, it is called madhyama avastha; the technically the first stage is called, nimitha kāraṇa Īśvaraḥ; second stage is called pariṇāmi upādāna kāraṇa Īśvaraḥ; then in the third stage when the intellect is still sharper and finer, scriptures point out; since the Lord is infinite; and therefore beyond time and space, there is no question of the Lord becoming the Universe. Because the language of becoming indicates transformation and transformation indicates limitation by time. Since God is dēśa kāla adithaḥ; there is no possibility of Lord transforming into the universe; then what happens? Lord remaining changeless; the Lord appears as the universe:

Ajāyamānō bahuda vijāyatē; ajāyamānaḥ; without really undergoing transformation, retaining his absolute nature, the Lord appears as this world; just as we at the time of dreaming continue to remain as the waker on the bed, but in the dream, our mind gets transformed into what, the dream-time, the dream-space, the dream-object, the dream-transaction; the dream-nightmares, the dream-festivals; all are the waker himself; transforms without really undergoing any change.

If the waker really transforms into the dream world; what happens? He would not wake up; he will be out; just as once the milk has transformed into curd, etc. you cannot retrieve the milk again. If Bhagavān has really transformed into the world; Bhagavān is gone for good; but it is not like that; remaining as Bhagavān; just as I continue to remain as waker, and seemingly become pluralistic, transact, enjoy or suffer the dream, and when I wake up what happens? The whole dream world is resolved. And again I can project another dream world and again I can resolve. Even if hundreds of dreams I project and resolve, I continue to be undisturbed and transformed and destroyed individual.

So this third stage of jagat-kāraṇatvam is presented as the Lord appearing as the universe; and in Sānskrīt, it is called vivartha-upādāna-kāraṇa-Īśvaraḥ. So what are the three stages?

God creates the world, level No.1;

God becomes the world; level No.2;

God appears as the world; level No.3.

Of these three levels, Lord Kṛṣṇa is discussing the second level in this chapter, and therefore the Lord says that I am the cause of the universe and therefore I myself project out of myself; I myself evolve into the entire universe. And this universe is divided into two; the internal universe of thoughts and the external universe of objects; ānthara prapañcaḥ; bāhya prapañcaḥ. Lord Kṛṣṇa says the inner-world also arises out of Me; the external-world also arises out of Me.

Of this in the fourth and fifth verses, the internal universe was described; buddhirjñānamasammōhaḥ kṣamā satyaṃ damaḥ; etc. are the inner world of thoughts; they also are born out of Me; and later in the following verses, Lord Kṛṣṇa will say that the external world of things and beings are also born out of Me. Therefore I alone become everything. So that we have to see now; verse No.6.

madbhāvāḥ who possess My nature येषां प्रजाः yēṣāṃ prajāḥ and whose progeny इमाः imāḥ are these लोके lōkē in the world जाताः jātāḥ are born मानसाः mānasāḥ of (My) mind

6. The seven great sages, the earlier four (sages) and the (fourteen) Manus, who possess My nature and whose progeny are these in the world, are born of (My) mind.

Now the creation of the external world is being talked about and before all the regular human being, animal etc. came, first the Lord created the sapta ṛiṣīs, as well as the sanakādi ṛiṣīs, and thereafter only all the other human being came; one set of ṛiṣīs indicating the gṛhastha ṛiṣīs; in pravṛtti-mārga; other set of ṛiṣīs representing the nivṛtti mārga. So the sapta ṛiṣīs represent the gṛhastha-parampara and sanakādi four ṛiṣīs represent the sanyāsi parampara; and out of these eleven; all the other beings came.

Therefore He says sapta maharṣayaḥ, the seven great ṛiṣīs, these seven ṛiṣīs are described in the purāṇas. Of course in different purāṇās, the different names are mentioned; even in sandhyā vandanam; we have got sapta ṛiṣī; I do not know whether you remember, atri-bhṛgu-kutsa-vasiṣṭa-gautama-kāśyapa-āṅgirasa ṛṣayaḥ; gāyatri-uṣṇik-anuṣṭup-br̥hati-paṁkti-tūṣṭup jagatyaśchandāṁsi; seven meters; and Agni -vāyu-arka-vāṁgīśa-varuṇa-indra-viśvādēvā dēvatāḥ; seven dēvatās; seven meters and seven ṛiṣīs are mentioned; those seven ṛiṣīs you can take.

Or there is another version also; Briguṁ, Marichim Atrim ca, Pulasthyam, Pulaham Krutum Vasiṣṭam ca mahātejāha. So srujat mānasāḥ sutān; Brigu, Marichi, Atri; Pulasthya, Pulaha and Kratu, Pulaha and then the seventh one Vasiṣṭa; Vasiṣṭam ca mahātejāḥ; mahātejāḥ means Brahmāji. First Brahmāji came out of the navel of Lord Viṣṇu, we know in the purāṇās; Lord Viṣṇu created only Brahmāji, the rest of creation, Viṣṇu transferred the job to Brahma. And Brahmāji created the initial one, through mere saṅkalpa; saṅkalpa mātrēṇa saḥ mahātejāḥ.

Mānasāḥ; that is why they are called mānasa-putrā. So there is no question of the regular creation; but saṅkalpa mātrēṇa; and suppose you ask the question, how is it possible to create all these by mere saṅkalpa; my answer will be we are doing it regularly; by saṅkalpa mātra, we do creation? When? At the time of dream; and do not say dream is unreal; vēdānta will say that this world is unreal; anyone you may say dream is unreal during the waking state; but remember dream is very very real at the time of dream. So such a real dream world which is capable of frightening you; just as you create by mere saṅkalpa, Brahmāji created the sapta ṛiṣīs; through saṅkalpa means what; by mere visualization.

And not only the sapta ṛiṣīs, these sapta-ṛiṣīs represent the gṛhastha-parampara or pravṛtti-mārga; So even though they were ṛiṣīs, they were not sanyāsis, they were vānaprasthās; and therefore they had wife, children, like Vasiṣṭa, etc.

And before that there were earlier four ṛiṣīs, so purvē catvāraḥ; purvē means what; even before the sapta-ṛiṣīs, there were four earlier ṛiṣīs, who are called Sanakādhi munayaḥ; Sanakā; Sanāntaḥ, and Sanatkumārāḥ; and Sanat Sujāthāḥ.

So why Brahmāji created the seven ṛiṣīs, four ṛiṣīs could have been sufficient; the reason is: Brahmāji created four ṛiṣīs and hoped that these four ṛiṣīs will get married and get children and the parampara will be protected; that was the intention of Brahmāji but what did these four do? They straightaway brahmacaryad-ēva sanyāsa; So all plans of Brahmāji failed. So even now sometimes when the child wants to take sanyāsa; many parents do not like; and if that child happens to be the only one; they are worried about kula parampara; who will do the srāddham? This problem Brahmāji himself faced; and Brahmāji was very angry with his children; disobedient children; and that is why nowadays we also get such children; because Brahmāji, the original himself, faced that problem; and they say Brahmāji got angry at that time. Therefore from Brahmāji eyebrows, the ēkadaśa rudrās, came out of his eyes; because of his anger. That is why they are called rudrās; and how should they get anger, because of these four ṛiṣīs; and since these four people took to nivṛtti mārga; Brahmāji had to create another seven for the pravṛtti mārga.

And all these eleven ṛiṣīs and not only that mānavaḥ; the fourteen manus who preside over a particular age, a particular era called manvantharam; a manvantharam is supposed to be consisting of 71 catūr yugas; and not 71 years; 71 catūr yūgas is a manvanthara and that is presided over by a Manu; like that 14 Manus are there; and that is why in the saṅkalpa also;

Svāyambuva; Sarōjiṣa; Uttama, Tāmasa, Raivatha, Cāksusakyēṣu ṣatsu manuṣu vyathithēṣu.

You will get that in upākarma mantra, the avaṇi avitta mantra; which comes in July; so they do that; we do not know all these, as they are difficult to pronounce; also we only say idli idli because of hunger; and who wants svāyambuva; sarōjiṣa etc. ṣatsu manuṣu; six manus are gone.

And now we are in which manvanthara? Saptamē, Vaivastha manvantharē; this is the seventh manvanthara presided over by Vaivasvatha. And this manvanthara has got how many catur yūgas; 71 catur yūgas; and now this is howmanyeth catur-yūgas. This is supposed to be the 28th catur yūga; aṣṭāvimśathi tamē kaliyūgē; and 28 minus 71; 43, still 43 catur yūgas are more should be there; then the Vaivasvatha manu will go away. Thereafter the 8th manu will come; and like that 14 manus will come and go; and Brahmāji's day time gets out; Brahmāji's one waking day, 12 hours time; 14 Manus appear and disappears; therefore these manus were also created; and that is why we are called mānava; we are called manuṣya; and in English we are called Man; Man came from Manu. And why Manu; manutē cintayati iti manuḥ; the thinking human being, man is derived from the root man, to think, manutē; manyatē iti man. In English dictionary you do not get this derivation; it is our derivation.

All these are created and how are they created: manasāha jātha; they are born out of mere saṅkalpa or the will of the Brahmāji, the Lord; and matbhāvaḥ; and each one of them has got the same nature of mine; mat-svarūpaḥ. So everyone is satcidananda svarūpa, and that is why we are also happily able to say, Aham satcidananda svarūpaḥ asmi; aham Brahmāsmi. Just as every spark has got the same nature of the original fire, we all have the same nature; So madbhāvā.

And there is another meaning for the meaning bhāvaḥ; bhāvaḥ means bhakthi also; one meaning is nature; the second meaning is devotion; all these people have devotion towards me.

And thereafter what happens? out of these eleven ṛīṣīs alone, not only eleven ṛīṣīs; out of these 14 manus alone, all the later beings are born; yēṣāṃ; yēṣāṃ means manunām; for the 14 manus alone, all the imāḥ prajāḥ; all these prajāḥs or living beings are born; Lōkē in this world.

Ētām vibhūtim yōgam ca mama yō vētti tattvataḥ |

सः saḥ he यह तत्त्वतः वेत्ति yah tatvataḥ vētti who really knows एतां विभूतिम् ētām vibhūtim this glory च योगम् ca yōgam and power मम mama of Mine युज्यते yujyatē is blessed अविकम्पेन योगेन avikampēna yōgēna with unshaken knowledge न संशयः na saṃśayaḥ there is no doubt अत्र atra in this

7. He who really knows this glory and power of Mine, is blessed with unshaken knowledge. There is no doubt in this.

So in the previous verse it was pointed out that the Lord being the cause of the universe, the Lord has the potentiality to manifest as pots, etc. Just as the seed has the potentiality to manifest as the tree; similarly the Lord has the potential; which is called śaktiḥ to evolve as the universe. This power of manifestation; this śakti is called yōgaḥ; yōgaḥ śaktiḥ this is called or māya śaktiḥ it is called. Thus Lord has got this māya. So what is the definition of māya? The potential power is māya; and any potential is always in dormant form. Therefore it is invisible; just as the butter which is potentially there in the milk is very much there. But you cannot see the butter in the milk, you will have to extract and bring out; therefore any śakti is invisible; it is inferable; anumēyam. And this is called Īśvara yōgaḥ.

And later, when the potential comes to manifestation; the manifest form is always pratakṣam means what? Visible; When the seed's potential has become kinetic; In science we talk about potential energy and kinetic energy; potential is hidden; kinetic is activated; it is actualised; when the seed has the potential; you do not see; when it has become a tree, that yōga has become what? Visible. And the visible version is called vibhūthiḥ; the unmanifest power is called yōgaḥ; the manifest version of the same power is called vibhūthiḥ. So for example, I have got a particular knowledge and therefore I have the potential to give you a talk or discourse; and when I come and sit here; at 6 p.m. that lecture, today's talk is there in my brain; in what form; yōga form; you do not know, what I am going to talk; it is your prārabdha. You have to only hope that today will be useful. It is a big hope; sometime it may fail; sometimes it may succeed; so when I am sitting here at 6 p.m. the whole 1 hour's talk is there in my mind or not? If it is not there; anyone can come and talk; it is there but in what form; yōgarūpēṇa vartatē. It is unmanifest; but the moment I begin to express, that potential thought is converted into words, either in written form or recorded form; and when it has come out in manifest form; it is available for whom? For everyone it is available; at 6 p.m. it is available for anyone; it is called yōga form. At 7 p.m. it is available in vibhūthi form.

And not only for you; if it is recorded, it can be heard by other people and if it is transcribed and printed; it is available for even generations. Śankarācārya's bhāṣyam after 1000 or 100s of years, we are reading and therefore the Bhāṣyam we read is what; vibhūthiḥ. Similarly the universe that we seek is yōga or vibūthi; the universe that I see in vibūthi; but before the manifestation; at the time of pralayakalē, it will be in yōga form. That is why we say the Lord is in yōga nidra; yōga nidra means what a stage in which the whole creation is in potential form; and therefore Kṛṣṇa says, vibhūtiṃ yōgaṃ ca mama. I have got both the yōga which is inferable; and vibūthi, which is perceptible. I have got both the potential and kinetic energy. I have got both the avyaktha and vyaktha mahima.

yaha vēthi; suppose a person knows this glory of the Lord; what is that glory? Yōga glory which is called kāraṇa śaktiḥ; vibūthi is otherwise called kāryam; yōga is kāraṇam, vibūthi is kārya; yōga is nirvikalpam; vibūthi is savikalpam; yōga is avyaktha, vibūthi is vyaktha; yōga is inferable; vibūthi is perceptible. Both these yah vētti; suppose a devotee knows; tatvataḥ; comprehensively, completely. Suppose a bhaktha, a scriptural student recognises this glory, for him what will be the advantage? Bhagavān is no more sitting in Vaikunṭa; he need not travel to have Īśvara-darśanam; for him where is God; for him where is God, if you ask, he will ask a counter question; tell me where is God not? And that is why an atheist wrote a statement; God is nowhere; a theist or a bhaktha came and put a comma, after Now, how will you spell nowhere; instead of nowhere; If you put "W" along with No what will happen; Now Here; so sarvam viṣṇu mayam jagat.

And this darśanam is virāt-Īśvara-darśanam; viśva-rūpa-Īśvara-darśanam; anēka-rūpa-Īśvara darśanam. Previously God was in Vaikunṭa in one form. What is that one form?

candrānanam̐ caturbāhum̐ śrīvatsāṅkita vakṣasam̐
rukmiṇī satyabhāmābhyām̐ sahitam̐ kṛṣṇamāśrayē || 7 ||

Rugmini cannot go even beyond, because both sides they are sitting; Rukmiṇī satyabhāmābhyām; therefore sandwiched Bhagavān cannot even expand; there is nothing wrong; we have to start from there; but later; bhūḥ pādau yasya nābhirviyadasuranilaścandra sūryau ca nētrē.

Then what will happen to him? So children when hear stories from our parents or grandparents, we go on saying: im im, im, etc. what next what next, like that; what next if you ask; Kṛṣṇa says: saḥ; who understands that world is God's form; yōgēna yujyatē; he will be taken to next level of Īśvara-darśanam; because this is also only the middle level.

And what is the next level? As I told you; God does not transform himself to become the universe; God only appears to have all these forms; but the original God does not have anyone of these forms; from anēka-rūpa Īśvara, he will go to what level? Arūpa Īśvaraḥ; So yōgaḥ means arūpa-Īśvaraḥ-jñānam; he will go to nirguṇa-Īśvara-jñānam; which is the third level; pariṇāmi-upādānam to vivartha-upādānam.

And not only he will get arūpa-Īśvara-jñānam; avikaṁpēna; and it will be a strong conviction for him; formless God is the real God; and that real formless God assumes either one form or many forms; depending upon the devotee's prayer; yōyō yām tanu bhakthā, in whichever form, he wants to have darśanam; Bhagavān assumes that form; but really speaking; the Lord is arupaḥ. And that arupa Īśvara; dr̥da jñānam is called avikampa; avikampa means what; unshaken knowledge; which means conviction.

And that does not mean he will reject ēka rūpa Īśvara and anēkarūpa-Īśvaraḥ; he has got all the three versions; all the three channels; previously it was only one channel; only one form; later he comes to two channels; one can change. Now he has got three channels; he can enjoy arūpa Īśvara whenever he wants; he come down to anēka Īśvaraḥ; when he enjoys nature; and he can come down to ēka-rūpa-Īśvara; If you read Śankarācārya's works; all these are there.

In Śivānanadalahari, Śankara says I can meditate upon you as carācarātmakatanu, means what; the Lord whose body consists of the moving and non-moving creation. I will enjoy that also; bhavānīpatē; I can also see you as bhavānīpatiḥ; saṁbaśivaḥ. I enjoy all the three; I can talk to you as a person; I can admire you as the nature or creation; and I can close my eyes and enjoy you as aham brahmā asmi; yujyatē; all the three he will come to know.

And suppose we have a doubt; what is the guarantee? We want always the guarantee card; warranty guarantee; whatever you say; Kṛṣṇa says I am giving you guarantee; na atra saṁśayaḥ; start with ēka rūpa Īśvara; you will come to Me ultimately.

Verse 10.8

अहं सर्वस्य प्रभवः मत्तः सर्वम् प्रवर्तते ।

ahaṁ sarvasya prabhavō mattaḥ sarvaṁ pravartatē |
iti matvā bhajantē mām budhā bhāvasamanvitāḥ || 10.8 ||

अहं प्रभवः ahaṁ prabhavaḥ “I am the source” सर्वस्य sarvasya of everything सर्वं प्रवर्तते sarvaṁ pravartatē everything proceeds मत्तः mattaḥ from Me” मत्वा इति matvā iti knowing thus बुधाः budhāḥ the wise ones भावसमन्विताः bhāvasamanvitāḥ who are endowed with devotion भजन्ते माम् bhajantē mām worship Me

8. "I am the source of everything, everything proceeds from Me." - knowing thus, the wise ones, who are endowed with devotion, worship Me.

With the previous verse, Īśvara-svarūpam topic is over; which started from the 4th verse, 4th to 7th; Īśvara-svarūpam topic; and now from the 8th onwards; Lord Kṛṣṇa talks about anēka rūpa Īśvara bhakthaḥ; those devotees who are in the intermediary level; intermediary between what and what? The lowest level in which the Lord has only one iṣṭa dēvathā svarūpa; the highest level is what; God who does not have any form; between these two is what: anēka-rūpa-Īśvaraḥ; viśva-rūpa-Īśvaraḥ.

This viśva-rūpa-bhakthi will give a lot of benefit to the student; viśva-rūpa-bhaktha himself enjoys lot of virtues; In fact, many values will come naturally when I have viśva-rūpa-Īśvaraḥ because the greatest advantage is: rāgaḥ-dvēsaḥ will weaken; rāgaḥ-dvēsaḥ; likes and dislikes are purely because of my categorisation of the world as favourable and unfavourable, as good and bad, purely because I look at the world from my personal standpoint.

And once I know that the whole creation is the manifestation of the Lord, how can I dislike one part of God and how can I like another part of the God? Everything is divine; so the whole creation is divine; and therefore, everything is welcome to Me, No resistance to the experiences in my life. All our tension and stress are only because of mental resistance, I am willing accept certain forms of experience; I do not want to accept certain other forms of experience. And even I cannot imagine such experiences; even the very imagination gives me stress and strain. Like the imagination that I may fail; or the child may fail; the imagination that admission may not come; very imaginary thing I cannot accept. So much stress must be there; Kṛṣṇa says for virāt-bhaktha. There is nothing that is unwelcome; everything is welcome for him; why, because he sees every experience as originating from the Lord.

Therefore Kṛṣṇa says ahaṁ sarvasya prabhavaḥ; for this virāt-bhaktha, Lord is the source of everything; pleasure, pain, association, disassociation, birth, death, health, disease, success, failure, everything has got only one source, and that is ahaṁ, means viśva-rūpa-Īśvaraḥ; and therefore only sarvam mattaḥ pravarthathē; everything proceeds from Me.

And therefore everything is Īśvara-prasādaḥ; he will become an ideal karma-yōgi; because what is the criterion to become a karma-yōgi? Primary criterion is willingness to accept everything as Īśvaraēprasādaḥ.

Just as in a temple, we do not know what type of prasāda going to come; it may be beautiful laddu, with all kalkaundu, raisin, cashews; All those things are; or it might be a little bit mud; in Subramanya Temple; there you get the mud from the snakepit as prasāda; you may get the mud, you may get leaf, you may get water, you may get payasam with lot of stone; but you have got only one attitude; prasāda bhāvana; and therefore mattaḥ sarvaṁ pravartatē iti matvā with this prasāda-buddhi mām bhajantē; these viśva-rūpa-bhaktha, worship me and

What type of bhakthas? they are, budhā; they are the learned bhakthas; they are informed bhakthas, what information they have, that Lord is both the intelligent and the material-cause of the creation; And that is called here budhāḥ; not that they know the nirguṇa-Īśvaraḥ; here budhā does not mean nirguṇa Īśvara jñānis; they are the knowers of virāt-Īśvara-jñānis;

And because of this attitude; bhāvasamanvitāḥ; there mind is always soaked in devotion; so there is always the relaxation; there is no stress management course is not required separately; the greatest stress management course is what? This wisdom; I hope for the best; but I am prepared for the worst also; And the preparation is what: welcome:

॥ āgatē svagatam kuryāt | gachchantām na nivarayatē ||

Both are important; when it comes svagatham; and when it goes; welGo; WelGo is our English; Pōnāl pōgattum.... budhā bhāvasamanvitāḥ. More in the next class.

Hari Om

131 Chapter 10, Verses 08-12

After giving the introduction in the first three verses, the Lord briefly presented Īśvara-svarūpam from verse No.4 up to verse No.7; and while giving Īśvara-svarūpam. He pointed out that Lord is both the intelligent-cause of the creation; as well as the material-cause of the creation, which means that Lord alone has evolved into this universe, because the Lord does not have any other external material to convert into the creation. And since there is no external raw material available for the Lord; the raw material also must be part of himself; and therefore the Lord himself has evolved into the universe, which means when I am looking into the universe, I should remember that what I am seeing is only the manifestation of the Lord. I need not put forth separate effort to have the darśan of the Lord. When I have got ornaments in my hand, I need not put forth separate effort to have the darśanam of the gold; because the very ornament that I am handling is the manifestation of gold. Gold darśanam does not require separate effort. Similarly when I have furniture in my hand; in front of me, I know that the wood alone is manifesting in the form of furniture, which means I need not put forth separate effort for wood darśanam, because the furniture-darśanam is wood-darśanam. Kārya-darśanam is always kāraṇa-darśanam; because there is no kāryam other than the kāraṇam. And therefore for that person who has this wisdom, he does not feel like closing the eyes for getting the darśanam of the Lord.

Until we get this wisdom, we think Lord is somewhere else seated and I have to do tapas for the darśanam of the Lord but once I have this wisdom, I know I need not close my eyes to have Īśvara-darśanam; whatever I am seeing is Īśvara alone. When I see bangle, I am seeing gold; when I am seeing ring, I am seeing gold. Whatever I am seeing is Īśvara- darśanam.

And this appreciation of the Lord, as the very manifest universe itself is called virāt bhakthiḥ; is called viśva-rūpa-bhakthiḥ. And for such a viśva-rūpa-bhaktha; a temple is not required for invoking devotion; an immature mind, an uninformed mind, a scripturally illiterate mind requires a temple to invoke devotion; but for a viśva-rūpa-bhaktha, whatever he sees can invoke devotion. And in fact, he will become the greatest karma-yōgi because, whatever experience comes from any part of the world, is an experience given by the Lord only, because there is no world other than God. And therefore Kṛṣṇa talked about or he is talking about the virāt-bhaktha from verse No.8 up to verse No.11.

And how does a virāt-bhaktha look at life's experiences? For a virāt-bhaktha, every experience is coming from the world. And world is nothing but manifestation of God and therefore every experience is coming from the Lord alone. And therefore no experience he can reject. And therefore Kṛṣṇa said ahaṃ sarvasya prabhavaḥ; mattaḥ sarvaṃ pravartatē; I am the source of everything; prabhavaḥ means source and therefore sarvaṃ; every experience, sukham, duḥkham, lābha alābha, jaya parājaya, māna apamāna; all pairs of opposites, they are all coming from the Lord alone; iti matvā; with this awareness, they receive every experience and therefore there is no question of resistance with regard to any experience. So therefore iti matvā bhajantē mām.

This non-resistance to experiences is called prasāda-buddhiḥ; and this non-resistance is the healthiest attitude because, whatever experience arrives is a choiceless situation. With regard to future I can try to change the experience; but with regard to the present, I can never change the experiences because it has already arrived. Therefore past is choiceless; present is also choiceless; we have a choice only with regard to future. At this moment you are in this hall; you have no choice; but next minute, whether you are going to continue to sit in the hall; or you are going to walk out is your choice. Future there is choice; past there is no choice; it has arrived and gone; present also no choice; because it has arrived.

And with regard to choiceless situations; we can do only one thing; what is that? Accept this; and the only method of acceptance is look at it as the prasāda of the Lord; and therefore the greatest karma-yōgi is a virāt bhaktha.

जगत ईशधी युक्त सेवनं
अष्टमूर्ति भृद् देवपूजनम् ॥ 5 ॥

jagata īśadhī yukta sēvanam
aṣṭa-mūrti bhṛd dēva-pūjanam ॥ 5 ॥

And therefore Kṛṣṇa said mām bhajantē; they worship Me; not present in a particular temple, but Me who am present everywhere; bhajanthē mām bhudhā;

And why they are able to do that? because they are informed people; And what is the information they have? The whole creation is the manifestation of the Lord. They are not wise with regard nirguṇa-Īśvara; nirguṇa Īśvara they do not know; but viśva rūpa Īśvara they know and therefore they are called budhāḥ.

And not only that; bhāvasamanvitāḥ; they are soaked in devotion; and how they get devotion? Because they know that if the whole creation is the manifestation of the Lord; whatever glory is there in the creation; all of them must belong to the Īśvara only. So if there is a particular animal with an extra ordinary capacity; the glory belongs to the Lord; not the animal. If the human-beings have got an extra-ordinary capacity; that also is the glory of the Lord. Thus they see Īśvara-vibhūthiḥ; in everything. And therefore the devotion and appreciation is invoked in and through every experience.

So somebody sent me a paper cutting; a small article which had appeared in the Times of India. It is an article by an astronaut who went to the moon and who was an astronaut, gone to space several times, and he writes his experiences about when he was in the moon and he was looking at the glory of the earth; and it is a beautiful article; I just read only a portion of that article; which was highly impressive for me; so he writes; he is an astronaut; "There must a creator; a creator who stands far above all religions; a creator who put a small part of the universe together, that I was privileged to see"; small part of the universe, he means the earth; and we are already part of the earth and therefore we cannot objectify; but remaining in the moon, he could see that earth; that is what is he is telling here; a small part of the universe together, that I was privileged to see; when I went back to the Moon on Apollo 17, I had a chance literally to challenge that theory; that theory that there is a creator; and he says: "and it came back loud and clear; There is no question in my mind that there is a creator of the universe; when you go to the

And then he himself puts a question: after all he is himself in the moon; we have got enough worry; whether the rocket would go back; we could have worried about the family whether I will return and whether they will be safe; and of course as an astronaut, he would have so many duties also; he himself raises a question; “Did all these distract me from my work”? Thus people think, to be a devotee of the Lord, you have to drop all the work and all the time do pūja; so here he asks the question; did all this distract me from my work; not really; but you keep wanting to steal a look at the earth and everything around you.

What he says is: To appreciate God you need not drop your duties and work; if only you have a sensitive mind; even when you see a small ant or when you read the book sometime there will be a very very small insect running inside the book; I do not know whether you have seen that; it would of the size of the tip of the needle; In fact, you cannot even brush that, because it will die; so small it is; now that small insect has got a mind, and it knows how to survive; how to procreate; how to eat; and if you put a hand in front of it, it will run away; within that dot, everything is available. Looking at that insect you can wonder at the glory of the Lord; Looking at a rose you can appreciate the Lord. Looking at the sky, you can appreciate the Lord; virāt bhakthi does not require dropping your career or profession; it requires only a sensitised and informed mind.

And such a virāt bhaktha is described by Kṛṣṇa in these verses; therefore they are bhāvasamanvitāḥ; every plant, every insect, every star, every tree, every river, evokes devotion in their mind. And naturally if at all they want to talk with people, they do not want to talk about this and that; they would love to talk about only these higher things. Having enjoyed some higher things, the mind cannot come down; cannot discuss these mundane things; and therefore Kṛṣṇa says virāt bhakthas cannot think of anything else other than this cosmic beauty and order and divinity. That is said in the next ślōkā:

मच्चित्ता मद्गतप्राणाः बोधयन्तः परस्परम् ।
कथयन्तश्च मां नित्यं तुष्यन्ति च रमन्ति च ॥ १०.९ ॥

maccittā madgataprāṇā bōdhayantaḥ parasparam|
kathayantaśca mām nityaṁ tuṣyanti ca ramanti ca || 10.9 ||

मच्चित्ताः maccittāḥ Fixing the mind मद्गतप्राणाः madgataprāṇāḥ and senses on Me परस्परं बोधयन्तः parasparam bōdhayantaḥ mutually sharing the knowledge (about Me). च

कथयन्तः माम् ca kathayantaḥ mām and speaking of Me, नित्यं तुष्यन्ति च nityaṃ tuṣyanti ca they are always contented च रमन्ति ca ramanti and delighted.

9. Fixing the mind and senses on Me, mutually sharing the knowledge (about Me) and speaking of Me, they are always contented and delighted.

The virāt bhakthas see the Lord alone in and through all their experiences. Not through the physical eye. Physical eye will report only physical matter. Like that astronaut; his eyes saw only the earth; but his sensitive mind saw the Lord. Seeing is not the physical perception; but through the eye of maturity; through the eye of wisdom, he was able to discern the invisible, organising, co-ordinating, intelligent, harmonising principle. So thus for a bhaktha; God vision is not at a particular time; but at all the time; and therefore maccittāḥ; their mind is always fixed on Me; they cannot lose sight of Me; and madgataprāṇāḥ; prāṇāḥ means sense organs; their sense organs also fixed on Me.

So in short they are never away from the presence of the Lord; and if at all they talk also; like the astronaut; he could have shared anything else; but he could share this and this sharing, parasparaṃ-bōdhayantaḥ; mutually, they can never discuss the mundane politics of fights, gossip, hatred, criticism, and jealousy etc. they are all so cheap for them; they do not spend their valuable time on such petty topics; they discuss only these higher things. Therefore parasparaṃ bōdhayantaḥ; they share their divine experiences.

And kathayantaḥ ca; and if they want to educate their children; they would like to give such an education. So education should be 'elevating the mind to see what is not physically perceptible, but what can be appreciated by only a mature mind'. It is very easy to study chemistry and physics. I told you the other day; the wife was crying; the husband is a great chemical scientist; he does research of anything. Anything he gets, he does immediately research. Then wife asking: I am crying; do not see my tears; then he says: I know what is tears; it is NaClH₂O. It is nothing but water with sodium chloride. So on chemical analysis, you can only see the physical part but no instrument can see the emotion behind the tears. That emotional pain or emotional deprivation for that you require a sensitive mind which can understand, a person is craving for company; that is the meaning of the tears; not NaClH₂O. A mind which can discern that; which no chemical analysis will reveal. Similarly God is discerned not physically analysed and arrived at. And therefore kathayantaḥ ca; education is giving that mind which will discern the invisible God, behind the physical universe.

So kathayantaśca mām nityaṃ. And having enjoyed that, the mind does not like anything inferior, lower than that; therefore nityaṃ; all the time, they enjoy this; not that they drop their duties and activities; remember, the astronaut did all his duties, in and through that, he appreciated. Similarly we can take care of family, we can bring up children, we can do everything, but still sensitise the mind to appreciate the viśva-rūpa. And what is the advantage of that? tuṣyanti ca ramanti ca; here in this very appreciation, there is fulfilment. In family front, there may be failures; and in professional front there may be failures; but as long this appreciation is there, you never look upon your life as a failure; this will make the life a success; even if there are failures in other front; and therefore there is fulfilment, that I am able to appreciate the Lord.

And not only fulfilment; ramanti ca; they revel in that appreciate, they are grateful to the Lord; that they have got a sensitive mind to appreciate this. Then what will happen to them?

Verse 10.10

तेषां सततयुक्तानां भजताम् प्रीतिपूर्वकम् ॥
ददामि बुद्धियोगं तं येन मामुपयान्ति ते ॥१०.१०॥

Tēṣāṁ satatayuktānāṁ bhajatām prītipūrvakam |
dadāmi buddhiyōgam taṁ yēna māmupayānti tē ||10.10||

तेषाम् tēṣāṁ to them सततयुक्तानाम् satatayuktānām who are ever steadfast भजताम् bhajatām and who worship (me), प्रीतिपूर्वकम् prītipūrvakam with devotion ददामि dadāmi I give, तं बुद्धियोगम् taṁ buddhiyōgam that yōga of wisdom येन yēna by which ते tē they reach उपयान्ति माम् upayānti mām Me

10. To them who are ever steadfast and who worship (Me) with devotion, I give that Yōga of wisdom by which they reach Me.

And these bhakthās are satatayuktānām, so their life is ever connected to Me; they never forget their relationship with Me; in and through their relationships with other people. I have told you before; a wave in the ocean is fundamentally related to the ocean alone; because wave is born out of ocean; it rests in ocean and it goes back into the ocean. Therefore the wave is primarily related to the ocean; therefore it is called the fundamental relationship. And imagine when a wave rises, in the neighbourhood there is another wave; and this wave looks at the other wave; and they like each other; fall in love; therefore this wave begins to love the other way; and they decided: why can't we get married; and was born a child wave; and whole wave-family is moving about; but we know that the relationship between one wave and the other wave is incidental and secondary, because two waves are not born simultaneously; and two waves do not disappear simultaneously; wave-wave relationship is incidental; wave-ocean relationship is fundamental.

A virāt bhaktha is one who has understood that I am like a wave and Lord is like the ocean; and all the other human-beings are also like what? Other waves only. So I might have and I do have several human relationships; they are all sacred alright; but much more profound, much more sacred, much more fundamental; and much more universal is my relationship with the Lord. The human relationships can last maximum for one life only. In the next life, same husband and same wife need not be husband-wife, even though some people tell; next janma also you should come as my wife; as my husband; (they did not enquire about the way to mōkṣa!) Anyway; that does not matter; next janma also I want also same wife; same husband; who knows both are going to be human beings; one may be cat, another may be rat; already in this janma it is happening.

So therefore even the most sacred human relationship can last for only one life. So much more sacred is my relationship with the Lord. It does not mean we have to discard or disregard human relationship; but what scriptures say is human relationship should never be at the cost of relationship with the Lord. Therefore that relationship should be revived of and on; that is why regular prayers; I should tell Lord; Oh Lord! Let me not forget my relationship with you in my preoccupation with the incidental relationship. And therefore for a virāt bhaktha; there is a tāmra śruti behind. Just as a musician, whatever song he sings; however complicated the song may be, he has got the śruti behind, he does not want to go out of that. If that is forgotten, apaśruti. Similarly, for a virāt-bhaktha; Īśvara-sāmbanda is the background śruti and all the other songs it will come and go; different rāgās will come and go.

And therefore virāt bhaktha is called satatayuktāḥ; a very profound and significant word satatayuktata means one who never forgets the relationship with the macrochip; and again this relationship is not maintained as a duty forced by others. I cannot create devotion by force; you should start loving from today or tomorrow; It is something to be discovered by knowledge; and therefore prītipūrvakam bhajatām.

And those who worship Me, who remember Me with love born out of understanding; love is always born out of understanding; you can never love someone whom you do not know at all; I introduce a person; tomorrow 7.35 onwards you should start loving; And then I put a gun also; if you do not I will shoot you. Love is not an action that you do; but it is something you discover as a result of understanding. The more you study the scriptures, the more you know the nature of God. The more you know the nature of God, devotion is automatic; no will is required; therefore bhajatām prītipūrvakam.

And this bhakthi also has got several levels; I have told you before; 7th chapter we saw; initially I look upon God as a means for worldly ends; that is the lowest form of love; it is called business love; contract love; you do this; I will do that; and that too you should do first; then only I will do; if I give and if you do not do; because that is our experience; and we do not want to feel cheated; give money to someone and he goes away; and we do not want to try with God; you complete the job; not even advance; you complete the job and I will do that; this is business love; so this is called mandha bhakthi.

The next one is learning to look upon God as an end in itself, because God represents pūrṇatvam; and once I know that Lord means pūrṇatvam, I understand that my goal of life is self-fulfilment; self-sufficiency; and this is called madhyama bhakthi; avyabhicāriṇi bhakthi and that is the bhakthi that these people enjoy; so prītipūrvakam means they look upon the God as the goal itself.

And what I will do? Bhagavān will say: I will also help them; How will I help them? By taking them to the next stage of sādhanā; for the next stage of bhakthi;

What is the next stage of bhakthi? They have progressed from ēkarūpa bhakthi and anēka rūpa bhakthi. I hope you remember; Lord with one form to Lord with many forms; this anēka rūpa bhakthi is also not the ultimate because the ultimate Īśvara is neither ēkarūpaḥ nor anēka-rūpaḥ. Then what is this form? Arūpa-Īśvaraḥ.

Therefore Kṛṣṇa tells I will take them from anēka-rūpa-Īśvara to arūpa-Īśvaraḥ; virāt-Īśvara to nirguṇam-Brahma.

And how to arrive at nirguṇam-Brahma? Only by one method; and that is called jñāna-yōgaḥ.

So nirguṇam-Brahma can be discovered only through jñāna-yōgaḥ; therefore Kṛṣṇa tells I will promote them to jñāna-yōga; dadāmi-buddhiyōgaṃ taṃ; buddhi-yōgaḥ means jñāna-yōgaḥ. And jñāna-yōga means what?; discovery of the formless God, So buddhi yōgam aham dadāmi; vēdānta sṛavaṇa manana nidhidhyāsanam aham dadāmi.

And through that what will they accomplish? yēna māmupayānti tē; through that jñāna-yōga; they reach the ultimate Me; which is neither ēkarūpa nor anēka rūpa; the ultimate Me is nirguṇam Brahma;

So if a guru is required; Kṛṣṇa says I will provide guru; I will provide śāstram ; I will provide opportunity to study the śāstram. I will provide the necessary qualification to gain. I will take the contract work. For what? Convert this bhaktha into a nirguṇa jñāni. That Kṛṣṇa tells in the next verse:

तेषामेवानुकम्पार्थम् अहमज्ञानजं तमः ।
नाशयाम्यात्मभावस्थः ज्ञानदीपेन भास्वता ॥ १०.११ ॥

tēṣāmēvānukampārtham ahamajñānaḥ tamah |
nāśayāmyātmabhāvasthō jñānadīpēna bhāsvatā || 10.11 ||

अनुकम्पार्थम् एव anukampārtham ēva out of compassion तेषाम् tēṣam for them अहम् aham I आत्मभावस्थः ātmabhāvasthaḥ remaining in their intellect नाशयामि nāśayāmi destroy तमः tamah the darkness अज्ञानजम् ajñānaḥ born of ignorance भास्वता ज्ञानदीपेन bhāsvatā jñānadīpēna by the brilliant light of knowledge.

11. Out of compassion for them, I remaining in their intellect, destroy the darkness born of ignorance by the brilliant light of knowledge.

Kṛṣṇa says I will light the lamp of wisdom, in the mind of the virāt bhaktha. In the mind of viśva-rūpa-bhaktha, I will light the lamp of wisdom; wisdom means what? Jñānam; Jñānam of whom? Īśvara-jñānam; And what type of Īśvara? Not ēka-rūpa or anēka-rūpa; but arūpa-nirguṇa-Īśvara-jñānam; or aham Brahmāsmi iti jñānam; advaita-jñānam; that is the lamp; Advaita-jñāna-dīpam, I will light in their mind.

So how can Kṛṣṇa light the lamp of wisdom? Do you have a special match box; so that Bhagavān will come and invite each one separately and make a hole in your head and light the lamp within you by putting inside the head? Remember, the lighting the lamp of knowledge is not a physical job; Not only this knowledge; imagine a physics professor has to light the lamp of physics-knowledge in the mind of the student. What will he do? What can he do? So can he light physically; he cannot do; can he call and touch the students' head; sparśa-dīkṣai; darśana-dīkṣai; he looks at him and suddenly light burns; Does it happen? Or he touches, does it happen? Or he asks the śiṣya to do regular pāda pūja; physics teacheraya namaḥ. If the physics-teacher has to light the lamp of physics knowledge, there is only one method; consistent, systematic teaching. Any knowledge is lighted only by consistent-teaching; and if consistent-teaching should be there; student should consistently listen. If the student is not there; what will the teacher do? And therefore systematic teaching is called lighting the lamp.

And how long teaching should go? Until the student understands and every doubt is removed; And therefore when Kṛṣṇa says I will light the lamp of wisdom; what Kṛṣṇa means is I will provide the opportunity for systematic teaching of the scriptures and I have got many gurus like the security board; like that Bhagavān has got a guru board and he can send any guru for you; and if no guru is available, Bhagavān himself will come.

For Arjuna when he was ready, Kṛṣṇa himself became the teacher; and Kṛṣṇa also did not use any other shortcut to give knowledge to Arjuna. What did he Kṛṣṇa do; he did not strike a match stick; Kṛṣṇa did not touch the head of Arjuna; in TV and all you can show. Kṛṣṇa touching the head of Arjuna; and a ray coming from Kṛṣṇa and entering Arjuna, etc. and then with background music; in TV you can do and not in real life. Kṛṣṇa never found any short cut to give knowledge; there is only one cut; there is no short cut or long cut. And it is systematic communication; either I will do or I will provide you a guru.

And all because of what; my compassion; Kṛṣṇa says; anukampārtham; anukampa means compassion; out of compassion for them, I will provide an ācārya; I will make the student learn systematically; I will make him go through, sṛavana manana nidhidhyāsana and thus light the lamp.

ātmabhāvasthaḥ; all these how will I do? Remaining in his own mind; so ātmabhāvaḥ; the student's mind; that is not a problem for Bhagavān, because he is already everywhere; therefore remaining in the student's mind, I will make the knowledge happen.

And what type of light it is? Bhāsvatā jñānadīpēna; because you light up a lamp; initially the flame is very feeble; And therefore one should be very careful; that is why when you strike the matchstick, the flame is very feeble; easily it will be put out. Therefore what you do? You protect the flame; and if you want to make it a conflagration; you have to slowly fan it; and so the flame becomes big; and once it becomes sufficiently big, you need not thereafter protect it; in fact, any fuel you add thereafter it will burn all of them; there is no fear.

Similarly at the time of sṛavaṇam; the lamp is lit; but you should never stop with sṛavaṇam; if you stop with sṛavaṇam; your knowledge is so feeble; that one painful experience in life, vādānta will be thrown out. Therefore sṛavaṇam should be followed by mananam; you should spend time, revising what you have learnt; and not only mananam; nidhidhyāsanam also and once the knowledge becomes a conviction, whatever happens in your life, it does not hurt you. And therefore bhāsvatā jñānadīpēna; by the powerful lamp of knowledge.

What do I do? tamaḥ nāśayāmi; I will remove the darkness in the mind which is born of ignorance. So ignorance born darkness; and that internal darkness alone appears as the external gloom in the face; Whether a person is a saṁsāri or not; he need not tell; you can discern from the face; there is an eternal castor oil in his face. And ask how are you? He will say: going on: that is shortest answer for saṁsāra; Then you sit and ask what is happening; then there is a serial; chithi, swantham, bandham and all will be smaller ones; he has got a huge serial of complaints; starting from 1915. Thus that is the gloom in the face; that will go away; and the face will bloom with joy; not the problems are gone; but the problems lose their capacity to disturb me.

And therefore tamaḥ; the gloom which is born of ignorance, I will destroy. In short, this virāt bhaktha will become a Brahma jñāni.

And without becoming a Brahma jñāni, there is no question of mōkṣa at all. These verses are important because, many people think that without Brahma jñānam; that by going through a different bhakthi route, like the route to Amarnath, etc. and try to circumvent the jñāna route and try to reach the Lord through bhakthi only; Bhagavān clearly says; there is no short cut; you have to gain knowledge.

At the same time, you need not be frightened also; if you surrender to the Lord; Lord will provide the conditions for knowledge. Nothing to worry; so thus, virāt bhaktha becomes Brahma jñāni is the essence of these verses. And he becomes Brahma jñāni with the assistance and support of the Lord.

āhustvāmṛṣayaḥ sarvē dēvarṣirnāradastathā |
asitō dēvalō vyāsaḥ svayaṁ caiva bravīṣi mē || 10.13 ||

12 & 13. Arjuna asked --- You are the supreme Brahman, the supreme light, and supremely holy. All the sages (including) the divine sages, Nārada, Asita, Dēvala, as well as Vyasa speak of you as the Self of all, eternal, divine, the primary God, birthless, and all- pervasive, You are also telling me (the same).

Kṛṣṇa has talked about Īśvara-svarūpam and Kṛṣṇa has talked about viśva rūpa bhakthi or virāt bhakthi; and Kṛṣṇa has talked about the benefit of virāt bhakthi; which is Brahma jñānam; which will lead to mōkṣa. So with this Kṛṣṇa's teaching is over. If Arjuna had kept quiet, the 10th chapter would have been over. Om Tat Sat would have come; but Arjuna is raising a question here in the following verses beginning from 12th up to 18th; 12-18 Arjuna praśnaḥ. This question is based on what Kṛṣṇa said before.

What did Kṛṣṇa say? I am the cause of the universe and therefore I alone am appearing as this universe and therefore every glory in the universe is My glory; No human being has any glory; but My glory is manifesting through every object in the creation. So Arjuna is interested in knowing the details of Bhagavān's glory because Kṛṣṇa has said everything is My glory. In Sānskrīt glory is vibhūthiḥ.

So whether it is a microcosmic world with its glory or the macrocosmic creation with its glory. All are My glory. Kṛṣṇa says. But Arjuna says: Do not give me a general statement. Do not just say that everything is Mine; Please say what are your glories? Please list it; I am interested in knowing the Īśvara vibhūthi.

So Arjuna introduces the topic: Hey Kṛṣṇa: paramṁ Brahma You are none other than the highest Nirguṇam Brahma which is appearing as saguṇa-Īśvara, because nirguṇa Brahma with vēṣam is saguṇa-Īśvara; dressed Brahman is Īśvara; undressed Īśvara is Brahman. Therefore do not think that Īśvara and Brahman are two different things; Brahman plus vibhūthi is Īśvara.

Therefore Arjuna says: Originally you are paramṁ Brahma; not only that paramṁ dhāma, and you are the supreme light of consciousness. So dhāma has the meaning of light also; dhāma means abode also; both meanings are OK. You are the abode of the whole universe or you are the light of consciousness, caitanya svarūpaḥ.

And not only that, paramaṁ pavitraṁ. And you are the most sacred one, the holiest of the holly. And why the Lord is the holiest of the holy; because anything else becomes holy; only because of the association with the Lord. Suppose a building is there like this; it does not have any holiness at all; brick and mortar; nobody is going to namaskāra; but imagine you install a deity here. The moment a deity is installed, the wholeness of the deity gets pervaded into the entire hall, and the hall also becomes holy. And therefore everything else has got borrowed holiness; whereas Īśvara has got intrinsic holiness and therefore Īśvara is the holiest of the holy; and even a saint is holy; not because of his being a human being; he has become a saint because of what? Because of discovering the Lord in himself.

And therefore a saint is a saint; again because of the association with the law. And therefore you are the holiest of the wholly. And that is why when you buy a fruit from the shop, the moment you get the fruit, what is your first tendency; eat it; swallow; that is the tendency; as children we have done that; it continues. But the same fruit comes from the Lord; that fruit is given for the pūja and at the end of the pūja the fruit is given back. Now the fruit is associated with the Lord; therefore you do not put straight into the mouth; first it goes into the eyes; indicating your vision of the holiness; the invisible holiness you see with this eye; you discern and the next job is what? Eat; That is afterwards; so thus, a fruit becomes holy because of association with Lord; a place becomes holy, because of the association with the Lord; Lord becomes holy, because of association with? No. Lord never becomes holy; Lord is holy; and therefore paramaṃ pavitraṃ; pavithranam pavithram yo maṅgalānam ca maṅgalam.

Not only that; puruṣaṃ; You are the indweller; You are the resident in human body; every human body is a temple, and every heart is the sanctum and you are there as the Sākṣi caitanyam; So dēhō dēvālaya prōkatha; jīvaḥ dēva sanātana.

Since you are indwelling everybody, you are called puruṣaḥ; puru means body śaḥ means residing; or resident; puruṣaḥ means resident of the body.

Then śāśvataṃ; You are the eternal one; because when we say Lord is residing in the body, we may conclude, when body goes, Lord also finished;! Because house is gone; No No No. Even if the residence goes; the resident never dies; śāśvataṃ; nityam ādidēvam ajam vibhūm.

Thus Arjuna gives a wonderful description of Īśvara to please Lord Kṛṣṇa; because he is going to ask for a favour. Whenever you are going to ask for a favour; first maska you apply; it is taught in Bhagavad-Gīta; Apply lot of maska and thereafter Kṛṣṇa you do all these; these are all pleasing the Lord. Of course not bluffing; talking about the real glory; the details we will in the next class.

Hari Om

132 Chapter 10, Verses 12-17

Lord Kṛṣṇa has given the essence of vibhūthi-yōga in the first eleven verses which we have already covered and the main points that Kṛṣṇa discussed here is that Lord is the material-cause of the universe, by which the Lord meant that Bhagavān alone is manifesting as the universe. Because the material-cause alone expresses as the product. And by which Kṛṣṇa indirectly points out that there is no thing called world; there is no substance called world; because there is no product at all; substantial, separate from the cause. Cause alone is the only substance, effect is nothing but nāma and rūpa; name and form added to the cause; which means since the world is a product of the Lord which has emerged from the Lord, Lord is the only substance and appearing as the world with varieties of nāma-rūpa.

And appreciating the world, as the very manifestation of the Lord is called viśva-rūpa darśanam; or virāt-darśanam. Viśva-rūpam means viśvaṁ-ēva-rūpam śarīram yasya saḥ; the Lord whose body is nothing but the very universe itself. The universal Lord is called viśvarūpa and another name for viśva-rūpa is virāt. Virāt means vividham rājatē iti virāt; derived from the root "rāj"; to appear, to manifest; virāj; that or he who appears in manifold forms. In fact every material-cause can be called virāt. Gold can be called virāt because, gold alone appears manifoldly as bangle, chain, ring, ityādhi, vividha rūpēna rājathē, prakāśathē. Similarly Bhagavān is called virāt because he himself appears as ākāśa; vāyu, Agni , etc. And the one who appreciates this viśva-rūpam is called virāt bhaktha.

And Lord Kṛṣṇa said, for a virāt-bhaktha a special temple is not required to invoke devotion. In fact for him devotion is the basic thing which is there in and through all transactions. Because the Lord never goes out of his mind, out of his sight. And he appreciates the Lord everywhere, he has got satata bhakthi or nitya yukthaḥ he is. And Lord Kṛṣṇa pointed out for such a virāt bhaktha, nirguṇa Brahma jñānam is closer.

For those people who are worshipping personal God, nirguṇa-jñānam is farther. From personal God, nirguṇam Brahma, a person cannot directly reach; between personal God and nirguṇa Īśvara. There is an intermediary step and what is that step? Learning to appreciate the universe, as the manifestation of the Lord; which means I have got an expanded mind. Only a mind which has expanded sufficiently to appreciate the universe as the Lord, only such a mind can discover I am the very substratum of the entire universe. I am the infinite nirguṇam Brahma. To discover I require an expanded mind.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa said for virāt-bhaktha, viśva-rūpa-bhaktha, I will provide all the facilities for gaining nirguṇa-jñānam; Thus ēkarūpa-bhakthi to anēka-rūpa bhakthi to arūpa bhakthi; all these three levels are indicated in the first eleven verses.

And with this 10th chapter is actually over, because everything is the glory of one Īśvara only, but Arjuna feels that he should get a list of an enumeration of the Lord's glories; available both here and elsewhere. And therefore in the following verses beginning from the 12th which I introduced in the last class; up to the 18th, Arjuna makes a special request: Hey Kṛṣṇa! I know everything is your glory but I would like to have an exhaustive enumeration of your glory. And before seeking this favour, Arjuna wants to please Kṛṣṇa. As I told you in the last class. Never go and ask for a favour directly; you go and apply maska; remember that. And that is why in the Śiva temple also; we never start with chamakam, chamakam is never the beginning. Before camakam, what do you do? Rudram which is otherwise called namakam; rudra is called namakam; why it is called namaka, because you say namaḥ, namaḥ;

नमो नीलग्रीवाय च शितिकण्ठाय च
नमः कपर्दिने च व्युप्तकेशाय च ॥ ५- १ ॥

namō bhavāya ca rudrāya ca namaḥ śarvāya ca paśupatayē ca
namō nīlagrīvāya ca śitikaṅṭhāya ca
namaḥ kapardinē ca vyuṣṭakēśāya ca || 5- 1 ||

namaḥ namaḥ namaḥ; How? you glorify Lord Śiva; and to such a wonderful I offer namaskāram and when Lord Śiva hears all these glorification; he is extremely happy and when he is in such a happy mood, before his mood goes out, because we are worried; because our mood does not stay for long; so we are worried Lord Śiva will also lose his mood.

And therefore before that happy mood goes away; you want to present a list of demands. And therefore immediately after Rudram will follow Camakam. And generally they will chant it in Rājadhāni express speed; because if you chant slowly, before you finish, Śiva may lose his mood; and therefore vājaśca mē prasavaśca mē; kada pida you want to complete, because Lord Śiva, as even he says given given given; given.

And then only he will think whether you deserve it or not; by that time you have got it; we have been manipulating like that; And Lord Śiva has not yet recognised this; our diplomacy; anyway that is aside. Always sthuthi and after sthuthi you ask for your boon.

Arjuna knows this method and therefore first he glorifies Kṛṣṇa and when Kṛṣṇa is in a happy mood; he will ask for this vibhūthi varṇānam; And how does he glorify: Hey Kṛṣṇa: Bhavān param brahma; you are the supreme infinite nirguṇam Brahma and you are param dhāma; you are the supreme and infinite consciousness principle, supreme light of consciousness, and you are the supremely wholly principle; pavitram paramam; everything else becomes sacred; because of your association, whereas you are sacred not because of somebody else's association; you are sacred because that is your nature.

And what is meant by holiness or sacredness? Ānanda is called holy; What is holy? Whatever gives me ānanda is holy; therefore you are ānanda-svarūpa.

Up to this we saw in the last class. We have to see the second line of verse No.12, therein Arjuna says puruṣam śāśvataṁ divyam. And here the interesting thing is Arjuna is not very sure what is Nirguṇam Brahma; because remember Arjuna is only in the process of learning; he has not yet become a pucca jñāni. And therefore what does Arjuna do? He enumerates all these things; and then he puts within quotes "thus people, the great people declare". What does it mean? It means I do not know for sure; they declare. So these are all put in quotes; the completion of this verse is in the next ślōka only; iti āhuḥ; sarvē ṛiṣayaḥ āhuḥ; All the great ṛiṣis declare like this; like what; puruṣam; so you are the indwelling principle, indwelling every living being as the very consciousness behind every organ.

Copied from Gaurav Pradhan

Every organ is sentient because of the presence of the awareness and that awareness principle you are indwelling every inert body. So puru here refers to śarīram and ṣa means the resident, puruṣaḥ means the resident of the body. And that is why when we meet anyone, we do namaskāra; our Indian greeting is what? Not hi hi; hi high, is used for buffalos and cow, when they walk on the road; because they are obstructing your way. Therefore you have to drive away; in front of human beings, our greeting is not high high or low low, our greeting is namaskāra is namasthe and the namaskāra does not go to that person; because we are very doubtful whether the person deserves namaskāra; still we boldly do namaskāra, because inside the body is the Lord.

And he also says Namasthe. And therefore, puruṣam and śāśvataṁ and you are in the impermanent body and you yourselves are not impermanent; therefore śāśvataṁ; you are the eternal ātma-tatvam;

नित्योऽनित्यानां चेतनश्चेतनानाम्

एको बहूनां यो विदधाति कामान् । ...Kathōpaniṣad || Part II. Canto II. १३॥

ēkō bahūnām yō vidadhāti kāmān | ...Kathōpaniṣad || Part II. Canto II. 13||

The nitya Īśvara is inside the anitya-śarīram. Therefore you are the eternal one and divyaṃ; divyaṃ means what: cētana tatvam, because body by itself is inert, made of matter, sense organs by themselves are inert, even mind according to our sāstra is inert subtle matter or energy and if these inert organs are functioning, it is because of the caitanyam; and therefore the Lord is called divyaḥ; Divyaḥ, dyōthana svarūpa; svayam prakāśa svarūpaḥ; self-evident consciousness;

And ādidēvaṃ and you are the primal God who was existent even before the dēvathās came into being. So even before Brahmāji was born, you were there. So first from the Lord Brahmāji arises, the purāṇa you know from the navel of Viṣṇu; Brahmāji comes and from Brahmāji all the other dēvathās like indra, varuṇa, etc. are born. And therefore you are a dēvathā; or the kāraṇa dēvathā; all others are kārya dēvathā. And being the kāraṇam; you are the आदि ādi; existing before all; so ādidēvam.

And then who is the cause of the Lord; it is a natural question; when you say Lord is the parent of the universe; and even children will ask who is the parent of the Lord? Because I know my parent has got his parent; and his parent has got his parent; this goes on and on; if the Lord is the universal parent, who is the parent of the Lord? If you ask; Kṛṣṇa gives the answer; ajaṃ; the Lord does not have a parent, because Lord was never born to have a parent; therefore ajaṃ means unborn; birthless; And therefore only causeless-cause; fatherless father; motherless mother, he is the Lord.

And where is he located? vibhum; vibhum means the all-pervading one. All these descriptions how does Arjuna know; he says thus the ṛiṣīs declare; that will come in the next verse.

आसितो देवलो व्यासाः स्वयं चैव ब्रवीषि मे ॥ १०.१३ ॥

asitō dēvalō vyāsaḥ svayaṃ caiva bravīṣi mē || 10.13 ||

Arjuna says I have gathered all these information from the scriptures given out by the Ṛiṣīs; sarvē ṛṣayaḥ āhuḥ. So all the ṛiṣīs declare thus: ṛiṣīs means a jñāni; ṛṣathi jñāthi iti Ṛiṣiḥ; So Ṛiṣi does not mean the one who should live in the forest only and one who should have lot of jata and one who should have a long beard; preferably white. So they are only the external thing, Ṛiṣi has nothing to do with external conditions, it relates to knowledge. So whoever has got knowledge, he is the real Ṛiṣi; even though he is coated, suited and booted. So those traditional jñānis declare so; you have to connect to previous slōkā. Whatever has been said in the previous slōkā, the ṛiṣīs declare;

And not only the ṛiṣīs of this world, this bhūlōka say so; dēvarṣirnāradaḥ; also the sages of the heaven; the heavenly sages; previously the word ṛiṣayaḥ means the earthly sages; bhūlōka ṛiṣayaḥ; dēvarṣi means dēva lōka ṛiṣayaḥ. And there are several ṛiṣīs and who is the most popular one, Nāradaḥ;

Nāradaḥ means the one who gives knowledge to people; nāram means jñānam; da means giver; dadāthi iti daḥ; nāram is equal to jñānam. So Nāradaḥ means nāram jñānam dadāthi iti Nāradaḥ, the one who is a travelling teacher; mobile teacher. So he travels and educates people. Of course he uses different methods; generally some kalaḥa he starts; Nāradaḥ kalaḥa is well-known, Even if he starts some kalaḥa he starts; it is meant to educate people; therefore he is called Nāradaḥ;

And not only Nāradaḥ, other sages also; asitaḥ dēvalaḥ and vyāsaḥ. All these three are names of sages; asitaḥ is the name of a sage; dēvalaḥ is the name of his son; asita pūtraḥ dēvalaḥ.

Then the next one is Vyāsaḥ; and who is writing this. Remember Vyāsa alone is compiler; do not doubt how can Vyāsaḥ write his own name; Remember Vyāsa is only quoting what Arjuna has said; not Vyāsa's insertion; therefore all these sages say so; and even those ṛiṣīs I may doubt or may not doubt; but the ultimate authority is what; svayaṃ caiva bravīṣi mē; you yourselves declare so; and I have got full śraddhaḥ in you; the other people may give the right knowledge or not; but you will never mislead me; and therefore You are Brahman, You are paraṃ brahma paraṃ dhāma pavithram, etc. All these are what; glorifying Kṛṣṇa; not that Kṛṣṇa is going to fall for the glorification; for Arjuna's tripti he is doing this.

सर्वमेतदृतं मन्ये यन्मां वदसि केशव ।
न हि ते भगवन्व्यक्तिं विदुर्देवा न दानवाः ॥ १०.१४ ॥

Sarvamētaḍṛtaṃ manyē yanmāṃ vadasi kēśava |
na hi tē Bhagavānvaktim vidurdēvā na dānavāḥ || 10.14 ||

केशव kēśava Oh Kṛṣṇa ! मन्ये manyē I consider सर्वम् एतत् sarvam ētat all this, यद् वदसि माम् yad vadasi mām which You tell me ऋतम् ṛtam to be true हि hi because न देवाः na devāḥ neither the Gods न दानवाः na dānavāḥ nor the demons विदुः viduḥ know ते व्यक्तिम् tē vyaktim your manifestation भगवन् Bhagavān oh Lord !

14. Oh Kṛṣṇa ! I consider all this which You tell me to be true, because neither the Gods nor the demons know Your manifestation, Oh, Lord.

Whatever glory has been enumerated, I accept all of them as truth; ētaḍ sarvaṃ ṛtaṃ; sarvaṃētaḍṛtaṃ is; it will be ētaḍ ṛtaṃ; ṛtaṃ means satyaṃ; valid truth, authentic, reliable information they are. What information? Remember that slōkā; which slōkā; the verse No.12, the glories are mentioned; all the glories mentioned in 12th verse, I accept as complete truth. Because yad māṃ vadasi kēśava; because you are saying so; and you will never bluff; you are never unreliable. You are pramāṇikāḥ and therefore I accept all of them; and I cannot cross-check your teaching with the other local people because, the local people will never know your glories completely; because they all have got their own limitations. And therefore Arjuna says; nobody else knows this fact; you alone are the knower: Hey Bhagavān: Oh Lord; dēvāḥ dānavāḥ tē vyaktim na viduḥ; Even God's do not know your full glory; God means like Indra, Varūṇa, etc.

And this we have seen in Kēnōpaniṣad also; In Kēnōpaniṣad, when dēvas were celebrating victory over asūras, Lord wanted to reveal their limitations; therefore appeared in a mysterious Yakṣa form and all the dēvās could not know even who that Yakṣa is; and we saw in the story; Vāyu went and got humiliated; Agni went and got humiliated; Indra went and the Yakṣa itself disappeared; and all of them understood that we all have our own intellectual limitations. And thereafter Indra becomes humble and surrenders; I can never know the truth with the help of the limited intellect, because our intellects are meant to know only the finite thing, existing within time and space. In fact, our intellect is not even able to understand the big bang.

And what was their before the big bang, you must be knowing big bang; I do not want to go into that; When we are not able to understand these things very clearly; how can we know the truth which is beyond time and space. And therefore Indra becomes humble; paurūṣēya pramāṇam useless; paurūṣēya pramāṇam means our instruments of knowledge is useless.

And therefore Indra surrenders; then Umadēvi comes; Umadevi representing the scriptures; Sarasvati; so the same idea is conveyed here; dēvāḥ indra varūṇadāya; they can never you clearly; and dānavāḥ; if dēvās themselves cannot know, Asūrās know; because dēvās with purified mind; they are not able to know, then what to talk of Asūrā, with the impure mind; they also do not know; Therefore who knows your glory; there is only who knows your glory; and that is you; therefore I have got the right person; let me get straight from the horse's mouth; Let me get a description from you yourselves; So Hē Bhagavān tē vyaktim; here means manifestations or glory.

स्वयमेवात्मनात्मानं वेत्थ त्वं पुरु षोत्तम ॥
भूतभावन भूतेश् देवदेव जगत्पते ॥ १०.१५ ॥

svayamēva"tmanā"tmānam vēttha tvam puruṣōttama |
bhūtabhāvana bhūtēśa dēvadēva jagatpatē || 10.15 ||

पुरुषोत्तम puruṣōttama Oh Supreme Puruṣa, Kṛṣṇa भूतभावन bhūtabhāvana the creator of all beings भूतेश bhūtēśa the sustainer of all beings देवदेव dēvadēva the god of all gods, जगत्पते jagatpatē and the protector of the Universe ! त्वं स्वयं वेत्थ tvam svayam vēttha you alone know आत्मानम् ātmānam Yourself आत्मना एव ātmanā ēva by yourself

15. Oh Kṛṣṇa ! The creator of all beings, the sustainer of all beings, the God of all gods, and the protector of the Universe! You alone know Yourself by Yourself.

Here interesting we find that Arjuna is increasing the number of different namās or names he uses for the Lord. So in previous slōkā, he said Keśava and Bhagavān; and in this slōkā, it is increasing, hey puruṣōttama; hey bhūtabhāvana; Hey bhūtēśa; a mini archana he is doing; hey bhūtēśa; hey dēvadēva; hey jagatpatē, these are all different epithets of the Lord; revealing his glory.

And what are those glories? Hey puruṣōttama; Puruṣōttama is a technical word; which will be explained in the 15th chapter, wherein Kṛṣṇa divides the entire universe into three; kṣara puruṣa; akṣara puruṣa and uttama puruṣa;

kṣara puruṣa means manifest matter; or matter,

Akṣara puruṣa is unmanifest matter or energy, and Uttama puruṣa is the consciousness principle;

Thus the whole universe consists of only three; matter in tangible form; matter in intangible form, and the consciousness which is different from both tangible and intangible matter. Tangible matter is called kṣara puruṣa; intangible matter; Energy is intangible matter only, is Akṣara Puruṣa; and the consciousness is called Uttama Puruṣa; And Uttama Puruṣa reversed is what? Puruṣōttama; Puruṣōttama means the pure consciousness which is beyond matter.

And Oh Lord! You are not the physical body that I am seeing; your body is an incidental vēṣa; but the real You is nothing but pure consciousness; Hey Puruṣōttama; caitanya svarūpa; cid-rūpa;

And bhūtabhāvana; bhūta means all things and beings in the universe; bhāvana means creator; sṛṣṭi-kartā; therefore bhūta means sṛṣṭi; bhāvana means kartā; bhūta-bhāvana means sṛṣṭi-kartā; bhūtāni bhavāti udpādayathi ithi bhūta-bhāvana. So you are the fundamental-consciousness-principle from which alone the matter evolves and creation comes and ultimately the material creation devolves and dissolves in the consciousness. Therefore bhūta-bhāvana.

And bhūtēśa; not only you are the creator of the world, you are also the controller of the world. It is easy to create something; and thereafterwards you should know how to manage it; our own children; OK; we do, we do not know how to handle them; afterall we feel that we should not have had them.

Similarly so many things; when they are doing some genetic research. There are some people objecting this research because some new bacteria or germ may be created and which may prove to be a deadly disease of the germ and we may not know how to handle and there are some people who say that AIDS is born out of some misfired research. Of course this is the belief and not the truth. We are worried that we may produce something that we may not know how to handle. Therefore who is omnipotent one; omnipotent one is he or she who not only can create, but also can maintain or manage.

And therefore oh Lord; not only you are sṛṣṭi kartā; you are also sthithi kartā; the great manager; then dēvadēva; which word we have seen before; you are the primal god; the lord of all gods; the controller of even dēvathās; dēvathās meaning Indra, Varuṇa, Agni etc. they control our life; but they themselves are controlled by you; if you remember Kathōpaniṣad:

भयादस्याग्निस्तपति भयात्तपति सूर्यः ।

भयादिन्द्रश्च वायुश्च मृत्युर्धावति पञ्चमः ॥ Katha. Part II.Canto III.३॥

bhayādasyāgnistapati bhayāttapati sūryaḥ |

bhayādindraśca vāyuśca mṛtyurdhāvati pañcamah || Katha. Part II.Canto III.3 | |

Even dēvathās are functioning because of your control; therefore you are dēvadēva; dēvānām dēvaḥ.

And jagatpatē; jagat pathi means the protector of the world from those people who try to destroy the world:

परित्राणाय साधूनां विनाशाय च दुष्कृताम् |

धर्मसंस्थापनार्थाय सम्भवामि युगे युगे ||४ -८||

dharmasamsthāpanārthāya sambhavāmi yugē yugē|| 4.8 ||

Whenever there is a threat to this world, you yourselves find out methods of protecting this world; therefore jagatpatē;

And why I want to everything from you; the reason is given in the first line, svayamēva''tmanā''tmānaṃ vēttha; You alone know yourselves completely; The other people do not know your glory Oh Lord; only you know; so svayam vēttha.

And how did you come to know? Who was your guru? If Lord requires another guru; then the next question will be what; who is his guru. Therefore Arjuna says here: atmanā vēttha; you know not because of any guru; but you know by yourselves. So Lord was never ignorant to become a jñāni. All the other people were ajñānis; were born ajñānis and they struggle, went to a guru; and studied repeatedly and at last somehow they become jñānis; but in the case of Lord; never become jñānis. So you are Sarvajñāḥ. Therefore you know yourselves by yourselves; and therefore you are the best person; tell me the details.

वक्तुमर्हस्यशेषेण दिव्या ह्यात्मविभूतयः ।
याभिर्विभूतिभिर्लोकान् इमांस्त्वं व्याप्य तिष्ठसि ॥१०.१६॥

[vaktumarhasyaśēṣēṇa divyā hyātmavibhūṭayaḥ |
yābhīrvibhūtibhīrlōkānimāṃstvaṃ vyāpya tiṣṭhasi || 10.16 ||](#)

अर्हसि अशेषेण arhasi aśēṣēṇa you should completely वक्तुम् vaktum narrated दिव्याः हि आत्मविभूतयः divyāḥ hi ātmavibhūṭayaḥ those divine glories, याभिः विभूतिभिः yābhiḥ vibhūtibhiḥ by which glories त्वं विष्टसि व्याप्य tvam viṣṭasi vyāpya you remain pervading इमान् लोकान् imān lōkān these worlds

16. You should completely narrate (those) divine glories of Yours by which glories you remain pervading these world.

Up to the previous verse is glorification. The Namakam part; now comes after the Chamakam part; Camakam part means asking favours. He says: vaktum arhasi; You should teach me. Arhasi is a mild commandment; humble commandment; OK; arhasi.

You should teach me; what ātmavibhūṭayaḥ; all your glory; all your manifestation; ātma is reflexive pronoun of your own glory.

And that too what type of glories; divyāḥ, which are extra ordinary; because almost everything that we do is a glory; even walking is a glory that we enjoy; we will know only when we meet the people who are struggling to walk. Go to any place where physiotherapy sessions are going. They are struggling to keep one step forward; similarly opening and closing a glory; we never know because it is working; all these glories are called loukika vibhūṭi; it is great. Still since it is there; so commonly, we do not recognise; only when one organ fails to function. Suddenly when somebody said; I am very very poor; then this person too him to an organ transplant centre; where the cost of every organ for transplantation is mentioned; Kidney Rs.250000. Another kidney: Rs.250000. pancreases, If you have to put insulin, then only you will know the story; insulin; everybody enzyme; if you have to produce a few milligrams of enzymes, hundreds and thousands of rupees. Similarly skin, you take it lightly, you go to that burn centre, where they are culturing the skin; for each square inch, they charge so many. Then he calculated and he came to Rs.15 -20 lakhs; He said: you have one kidney or not; Rs.250000. add. And you have got two; Rs.5 lakhs. Then liver, brain, working or not; it is there! It is there Brain. You are the richest man in the world; but we take them for granted because from birth it is there; and it is all money.

So Arjuna says I do not want to enumerate them because they have all got it free; I want to enumerate the divyā; divyā means aloukika vibhūthaya; extraordinary glories; the noticeable ones. You have to tell all of them; enlist all of them.

Yābhiḥ vibhūtibhiḥ; with which glory; With those extra ordinary glories; imān lōkān vyāpya tiṣṭhasi; you are pervading the whole creation; in the form of these glories. So these glories are not found in one corner of the universe; take anything in the universe; you are present in one glory or the other.

So yābhiḥ vibhūtibhiḥ; with such extra ordinary glories you pervade the whole creation and remain. And such a list of glories I want to get from you. So this is the favour, that Arjuna wants. And what is the purpose? Why do I want it? Arjuna gives the purpose in the next verse.

कथं विद्यामहं योगिन् त्वां सदा परिचिन्तयन् ।
केषु केषु च भावेषु चिन्त्योऽसि भगवन्मया ॥ १०.१७ ॥

kēṣu kēṣu ca bhāvēṣu cintyō'si Bhagavānmayā || 10.17 ||

योगिन् yōgin Oh Lord of all powers ! सदा परिचिन्तयन् sadā paricintayan constantly thinking त्वाम् tvām of you कथम् अहं विद्याम् katham aham vidhyām how can I know (Your true nature)? केषु केषु च भावेषु kēṣu kēṣu ca bhāvēṣu in what all objects असि चिन्त्यः asi cintyaḥ are You to be meditated upon, मया mayā by me भगवन् Bhagavān oh Lord?

17. Oh Lord of all powers! Constantly thinking of you, how can I know (your true nature)? In what all objects are you to be meditated upon by me, Oh Lord?

Arjuna says the purpose of this favour that I am asking from you is I will be able to take anyone of the enlisted glories. I can use that glory for dhyānam or meditation upon you.

Because among the enlisted glories; anyone glory will be appealing to me. Some people love flowers; some people love sunrise; some people love the ocean; different things appeal to different people; I can take anyone of them; and use it as a symbol or alambanam for Īśvara-dhyānam.

And thus every glorious object becomes an alambanam; alambanam means symbol for meditation upon the Lord. And that is why in our culture; we worship anything and everything in the creation. And when we worship anything, we do not worship the thing by itself; but the things symbolises the Lord is behind; whether we worship the Sun, or moon, or trees or snake or river, each one becomes a pratheekam.

Otherwise alambanam; therefore Arjuna says; kēṣu kēṣu ca bhāvēṣu; in which all alambanam or glorious objects can you be meditated upon.

Cintyaḥ; upāśyaḥ. So in what all glorious objects can you be meditated upon, I want that list; bhāvaḥ means what; a glorious object; which you are going to enumerate; out of which I can select one and I can invoke You in that; OK. And by practising such a meditation; what meditation, virāt meditation; meditation upon the total Īśvara; but symbol is what; an individual symbol; any glorious symbol; it can be even a cow; we worship cow; and you would have seen the picture on the cow; different dēvathās are there; indicating what? Virāt, the total; what is the symbol we use; the cow; but what we meditate upon is the total.

Bṛhadāraṇyaka upaniṣad starts with meditation upon a horse; aśva dhyānam; and there also Bṛhadāraṇyaka describes each limb of the horse and ask us to see that totality in that one part;

uṣā vā aśvasya mēdhyasya śiraḥ sūryaścaḥṣur vātaḥ prāṇō vyāttamagnirvaiśvānaraḥ saṁvatsara ātmā:śvasya mēdhyasya. dyauḥ pṛṣṭham antarikṣamudaram pṛthivī pājasyam [I.i.2]

You take any glorious thing, whichever you like and see the totality in that.

And what is the benefit out of that virāt upāsana. Arjuna says: sadā mām paricintayan; by visualising the viśva rūpa Īśvara, in any such glorious object, I will later come to know your higher-nature; Even in Sandhyāvandanam, first before they start, they have to take the water in the hands; and they have to look at the water; and chant the mantrās; and what is the mantras?;

आपो वा इदं सर्वं विश्वा भूतान्यापः प्राणा वा आपः
पशव आपोऽन्न मापोऽमृत मापः सम्राडापो विराडापः
स्वराडाप श्छन्दास्यापो ज्योतीष्यापो
यजूष्यापस्स त्यमापस्सर्वा देवता आपो
भूर्भुवस्सुवराप ओम् ॥

āpō vā idaṁ sarvaṁ viśvā bhūtānyāpaḥ prāṇā vā āpaḥ paśava āpō:'nna māpō:'mṛta māpaḥ samrāḍāpō virāḍāpaḥ svarāḍāpa śchandāṁsyāpō jyōtīṁsyāpō yajūṁṣyāpassa tyamāpassarvā dēvatā āpō bhūrbhuvassuvarāpa om –Mahānarāyaṇa Upaniṣad 4.29

I do not know whether some of you feel familiar. Water is one of the glorious things in the creation; and Madras people know that very well; and you take that water in your hand and you say all the dēvathās and all the vēda s, all the animals, all the insects; you superimpose on that water; and thereafter it is no more inert H2O, but it is Īśvara for me. Thereafter Aapō hiṣṭa mayō bhuva thana ūrje dadha thana. So I invoke the grace of the Lord who has been invoked in that water. Thus anything can be taken to invoke the viśva-rūpa;

And by doing that; what will happen? Tvām ahaṁ vidhyām; I will come to know your higher-nature; what is higher-nature; higher to viśva-rūpa Īśvara is what; arūpa-Īśvara; nirguṇam-Brahma I want to know ultimately; viśva-rūpa Īśvara is saguṇa-Brahma. From that saguṇa, I will come to know Nirguṇam; because remember without nirguṇa-jñānam; no mōkṣa; you can never circumvent the nirguṇa-jñānam; you can postpone if you do not like, but you can never avoid it.

And therefore Arjuna says, by meditating or visualising the viśva-rūpa in any glorious object, I will be able to come to nirguṇam jñānam later; therefore give me a list.

And the list should be as exhaustive as possible; when you want to buy some clothes, which departmental store we will go to; If there is a store with 2 options only green colour and red colour are there; there is another shop which has thousand varieties; in green itself 25,000 and in so many varieties and so many textures; and you will all go to that shop because you have variety. So give me a departmental store, where we have so many symbols of Lord to meditate upon. And other people criticise saying Hinduism is confusing; we say for them only there is a disadvantage. They have no form or one form; whether you like or not; you have to worship that. But in Hinduism you can take any form; and the Lord and prepare your mind and come to gain that knowledge and be free.

And therefore upāsanārtham, I want your glory. Upāsanā is for what? Jñānartham; for taking up jñānam; the details we will see in the next class. Hari Om

In the first eleven verses of this chapter, Vibhūthi-yōgaḥ, Lord Kṛṣṇa talked about the unique nature of God, because of which God becomes both the intelligent-cause of the creation and more importantly the material-cause of the creation also. Since the Lord is the intelligent-cause of this creation, we come to know that the cause is cētana tatvam, because the intelligence cause should have intelligence and to have an intelligence should be a sentient being, and therefore Lord being the intelligent-cause, God has got the omniscience and also omnipotence or the skill to create this universe. So sarvajñātvam and sarva-śaktimatvam and the cētanatvam, etc. are revealed by that. And this aspect is said in all religious scriptures, whichever religion accepts God, they all point out that God is Omniscient, Omnipotent, Omnipresent; this is common.

But the second unique feature that Kṛṣṇa pointed out is that God himself is the material-cause also because of which we come to know that God has the potentiality to manifest as the very Universe. Just as seed, the material-cause of the tree has the potentiality to manifest as the tree. Similarly Lord has the potentiality to manifest as the universe. And this first power of Omnipotence and the Omniscience is technically called Yōgaśakti and the manifestation of the Lord in the form of the creation is called Vibhūthi. And thus God has got yōga and vibhūthi; yōga referring to the Omniscience and Omnipotence by which He is the intelligent-cause, and Vibhūthi means the potentiality or the capacity by which the Lord manifests as the manifold universe.

And this was pointed out in the beginning part of the 10th chapter and thereafter Kṛṣṇa said because of this reason, a person need not make separate effort to have the vision of God, because once I understand that God alone is manifesting as this universe, everything in the universe is the manifestation of the Lord; therefore whatever I am seeing, I am seeing God only. So when I am seeing a bangle; I am having svarṇa darśanam; When I seeing a chain, I am having svarṇa-darśanam; when I am seeing a ring, I am having svarṇa-darśanam, why because svarṇa happens to be the material-cause of all these three; extending the same principle, whatever effect in this creation I experience, whether it is ākāśa, Agni or vāyu; or jalam or pṛthvi, I am having Īśvara-darśanam; when I am seeing ākāśa, I am having Īśvara-darśanam; whenever I am seeing vāyu, whenever I am seeing Agni . In fact I am sarvadā, sarvathra; sarvadā means at every time, sarvathra means in every place. I am constantly having Īśvara darśanam only. If only I know this fact that Īśvara is the very substance behind this creation.

And this appreciation of Īśvara as the very universe was called virāt-darśanam; or viśva-rūpa-darśanam, the details of which we will get in the 11th chapter. Kṛṣṇa had indicated this viśva-rūpa-darśanam in the 7th chapter also; in the 9th chapter also; and in the 10th chapter also.

And then Kṛṣṇa pointed out the one who is such a Virāt-Bhaktha, for him a temple is not required to invoke the devotee in him; because for him every place is temple because temple is defined as a place where God is; temple is defined as a place where God is. And since God everywhere for him; every place is a temple; and since every place is a temple, he is a devotee in every place. And therefore the basic transformation that takes place in him is that he is not a devotee at a particular place and time, but he is a devotee at all times in all places. So this conversion of the temporary devotee into a permanent devotee is a very big transformation, which is result of viśva-rūpa appreciation.

And once I am a permanent devotee, then my very response to situations in life will be different. Naturally rāga and dvēṣa will be heavily neutralised and therefore mental disturbances also will come down. In fact such a virāt-bhaktha will become sādhanacatuṣṭaya-sampannāḥ, effortlessly.

And once he has got that sādhanacatuṣṭaya sampannāḥ, he will have only goal in life, which is to recognise the next higher stage of Īśvara; virāt-Īśvara to nirguṇa-Īśvara. To remember what I had told before, ēkarūpa-Īśvara; anēka-rūpa-Īśvara to arūpa-Īśvara. Both stages are very important transformation, not that easy; First conversion is over; ēkarūpa-bhaktha to anēka-rūpa-bhaktha. From this to come to nirguṇa jñānam is not easy; but Kṛṣṇa promises my assistance will be there; I will cooperate with you.

I will make sure that his mind is a pāthram; fit mind. And if guru is required, I will send one; if śāstram sṛavaṇam is required, I will provide the opportunity; everything I will do, until the nirguṇa Īśvara jñānam takes place, which alone will give liberation.

So thus Kṛṣṇa has comprehensively presented the entire journey, ēkarūpa bhakthi to anēka-rūpa-bhakthi to arūpa-bhakthi.

And now Arjuna asks a question from verse No.12 up to verse No.18; which part we are seeing now. Arjuna is interested in knowing more about Viśva-rūpa-Īśvaraḥ. Of course Kṛṣṇa has pointed out that everything in the creation is Bhagavān's manifestation; Lord plus nāma rūpa is equal to creation. But even though everything is the manifestation of the Lord, certain things in the creation are more attractive. More appealing; so attractive manifestation of Īśvara; even among animals and insects also; if you see an elephant and that too a young elephant; you can go on watching; but you see a cockroach; are you at any time tempted to watch it; unless you are doing a research on cockroach; cockroach is wonderful. It is great, it has existed before us; and in the evolution ladder it has existed and if there is a huge atomic explosion we all will die but cockroach will survive; it has got a tremendous survival mechanism; so it is also there; it is also glory of Lord; but human mind finds it difficult to think of that.

Therefore Arjuna wants to know a list of glorious, attractive, beautiful things in the creation; in fact we ourselves can make a list; among the flowers we can take one flower, this is the most attractive flower and that is the Lord; even though other flowers are the Lord, you say this is the Lord. And similarly among animals you can take, among trees you can take; among human-beings you can take; among cricketers you can take; among chess players you can take, among teachers you can take; even though we can make our own list; even among Gītā chapters also; you can say which chapter is most appealing; suppose I ask; and ask every one of you to write in a chit and drop. You will find each one will have a different chapter; it is always a difficult question; one will say 12 is great; another will say 10 is great; another will say 15 is great; for eating!; of course it has other reasons also.

So take the attractive thing in the creation and what is the purpose, Arjuna says it is easier to focus the mind upon an attractive thing? The mind gravitates towards something beautiful; something glorious, something wonderful, and since the mind naturally gravitates, we can take that attractive object, as a symbol of the Lord; because even though Lord is everything, we can simultaneously meditate upon the totality; Because our mind has limitation; you can think of only one thing at a time; our eyes are limited, I cannot see all of you simultaneously; if I see here, I cannot see there; it is impossible to see everything at once. So how can I visualise the totality for meditation; it is impossible and therefore what do I do; I take a finite symbol to represent the infinite exactly like saluting a flag to represent the entire country; otherwise how will I salute India; I have to travel all over, keeping the hand like that; By the time I complete, the hand will be stuck on the head; it is not possible; therefore have a Bhāratmāta picture or have a flag and then you salute the flag; therefore you require a symbol to visualise and any attractive object can become such a symbol; we call it alambanam; In the upaniṣad classes, I have dealt with it in Kathōpaniṣad; ētat ālambanaṁ srēṣṭam, ētat ālambanaṁ paraṁ; ālambanaṁ means what? A finite concrete symbol to represent a limitless and abstract object.

And this ālambanaṁ is of two types and one is called prathimā ālambanaṁ and the another is called prathēka ālambanaṁ; prathimā means a ālambanaṁ which has got a human form; where all the limbs and organs are prominent; like Rāma, Kṛṣṇa etc. head is there; hands are there; eyes are there; Just as we have got clear limbs, if Lord also is represented as a human being, with clean limbs, anthropomorphism, visualising God as a person. Even though the all-pervading cannot have a personal form; but you still represent; when you do like that, it is called prathimā.

But when you use a symbol, which is not like a human being or animal but it does not have all the limbs etc. like a sāligrama; which has no hands, legs, eyes, etc. it does not have limbs; therefore sāligrama will become prathēka ālambanaṁ. Śiva-liṅga is prathika ālambanaṁ; if you take turmeric powder and make a lump, and call it Vignēśvara; it is prathēka ālambanaṁ. And in the lamp, when you do pūja, you take the flame and the flame does not have hands and legs; it is prathēka ālambanaṁ. Thus you can choose anything in the creation as a prathima or prathika ālambanaṁ.

In fact we can take human beings; and if we are attached to someone and if there is someone great; we can choose and worship; but better not to tell that person, because that person may develop ego; people are worshipping me. And therefore you can destroy a person by flattering him; and therefore since ego can be developed, we say we do not do that; but we worship matrudēvō bhava; mother is taken as a representative of God, father is taken; guru is taken, any jñāni is taken. Thus even a human being can be an ālambanaṁ. Therefore Arjuna wants a list of ālambanaṁs. And therefore he says Hey Kṛṣṇa : even though I can do the home work, I want you to help me by giving me the list;

केषु केषु च भावेषु चिन्त्योऽसि भगवन्मया ॥ १०.१७ ॥

[Kathām vidyāmaham yogin tvāṁ sadā paricintayan |
keṣu keṣu ca bhāveṣu cintyō'si bhagavanmayā || 10.17 ||](#)

kīdruṣu bhāvēṣu; ālambanaṁ bhāvēṣu; there bhāva represents what; any object which can serve as an ālambanaṁ; a symbol; an aide; not AIDS, aide, means help, support, Support for what, the mind, the mind needs the support of the concrete to visualise the abstract. For doing abstract dhyānam, we need the support of the concrete; and therefore it is called: ālambanam.

And what is the benefit that I will get? Not mōkṣa directly. By this upāsana; my mind will expand, I will learn to see god everywhere; when I see a river; I do not jump into the river in attraction; I will first go and do namaskāra and I do prōkṣaṇam; and then prayerfully I enter the water; that transformation takes lot of assimilation. It is very easy jump into the river; especially for Madras people who do not see have even water, So when they see a river somewhere you get exited; he will be tempted; but I do not do; Similarly when you see something nice, eatable; it is very easy to gulp it putuk, immediately; but I do not do that; I remember the Lord. So this transformation Arjuna wants and therefore he asks for Kṛṣṇa's assistance, and Kṛṣṇa is going to help Arjuna.

विस्तरेणात्मनो योगं विभूतिं च जनार्दन ।
भूयह् कथय तृप्तिर्हि शृण्वतो नास्ति मेऽमृतम् ॥ १०.१८ ॥

Vistarēṇātmanō yōgam vibhūtiṃ ca janārdana |
bhūyaḥ kathaya tṛptirhi śṛṇvatō nāsti mē'mṛtam || 10.18 ||

18. Oh Kṛṣṇa ! Tell (me) again about Your power and manifestation in detail, because there is no satisfaction for me who is listening to the nectar (of words).

So before requesting as we saw in the last class, first Arjuna glorified Kṛṣṇa so that Kṛṣṇa is very happy. And when Kṛṣṇa is very happy, Arjuna wanted to give the donation book; so that he can collect enough funds. Like that he wants to ask, after pleasing Lord Kṛṣṇa; because Kṛṣṇa is very happy, because he has been glorified param brahma param dhāma pavitraṃ, śāśvataṃ, ādidēvam, etc. a big arcana.

Now he asks for the request; What is that: Hey जनार्दन janārdana; who is sought after by everyone; the most wanted person, not in the negative sense; wanted person (most wanted person is the Lord; jaiḥ arcayatē yajyatē iti janārdana; arj means what begging; jana arjana means, one who is begged by all the people; constantly for this and that; solve this or that; constant-petition-receiver is called janārdana.

And hey janārdana; kathayaḥ; may you enumerate, narrate, enlist, what? ātmanaḥ yōgam; ātma here is reflective pronoun, your own yōga śakti, potentiality, What potentiality?; the potentiality to become the universe; the mango seed has the potentiality, alright, but it has the potential to become only mango tree; it cannot become coconut tree; and if milk is there, it has the potentiality to give you only what you call butter; but it cannot give you oil. Thus everything in the creation; one has a limited potential; we also have our own potential; but what is the greatness of Bhagavān's potential? He has the potentiality to become the whole cosmos.

Ākāśa sambhūtaḥ; Imagine Bhagavān becomes space itself; we do not even know what is space. We can see that later; Bhagavān manifests as space first; because anything is created; first you require what; space; to stay, then comes the food, clothing, etc. Therefore a Ākāśath vāyu; vāyōr Agni ; agnēr āpaḥ;

So this potentiality is called yōga; I told you before; and this potentiality is never seen perceptually; any potential is inferred. Suppose you have got a singing potential; How do I know; if you keep silent; how do you I know; who can sing; who can sing tolerably and who can sing well; how do I know; I can only infer; I cannot know by looking at your face; Then what should I do; I have to ask you to sing; and from the song which I hear I can infer your potential. Therefore yōga is always anumēyam; inferred; Bhagavān has got infinite power; how do I know? Because he has created this world; the world is the testimony; world is the signature of the Lord; so from the world I know Bhagavān's yōga; which is nothing but the maya śakti; yōga is nothing but the māya only.

Why māya is called yōgaḥ? Śankarācārya writes in his commentary; in this context, yōga means combination; ghatanam; and māya is called yōgaḥ because māya is a combination of three things; satva, rajas and tama guṇānām combination; like a three-string-stranded. Suppose you have got a string which is made up of three strands; exactly like that; māya is one thread and in that māya thread, three strands are there; which are known satva-strand, raja-strand and tama-strand. Since it is a mixture of three, it is called yōga; guṇānām misraḥ ityārthaḥ; that māya potential you have.

And not only that; vibhūthiḥ; this also I have told you before, Vibhūthi is what? When the potential is expressed and becomes visible; that visible expressed manifest perceptible power is called vibhūthiḥ. So yōga is to be inferred; Vibhūthi is to be perceived; yōga is anumēyam; vibhūthiḥ is prathyakṣam; I have told you earlier; You should remember but one week gap has happened so you might have forgotten.

So yōgam vibhūthim cha kathaya; you please teach me. How, vistarēṇa; elaborately. Now Kṛṣṇa feels bad; because Kṛṣṇa has already enumerated his Vibhūthis in the seventh chapter. You know where:

रसोऽहमप्सु कौन्तेय प्रभास्मि शशिसूर्ययोः |
प्रणवः सर्ववेदेषु शब्दः खे पौरुषं नृषु || ७-८ ||

praṇavaḥ sarvavedēṣu śabdaḥ khē pauruṣaṁ nṛṣu || 7.8 ||

I am the beautiful taste of water; I am the Omkara in the vēdas; I am the light in the sun and moon. Kṛṣṇa has already enumerated in the seventh chapter; and again in the 9th chapter Kṛṣṇa has enumerated.

अहं क्रतुरहं यज्ञः स्वधाहमहमौषधम् |
मन्त्रोऽहमहमेवाज्यमहमग्निरहं हुतम् || ९-१६ ||
पिताहमस्य जगतो माता धाता पितामहः | ... || ९-१७ ||

aḥaṁ kraturaham yajñāḥ svadhā'hamahamaṣadham | mantrō'hamahamēva"jyamahamagniraham hutam || 9.16 ||
pitā'hamasya jagatō mātā dhātā pitāmahaḥ |... || 9.17 ||

Now imagine after the teacher teaches everything, the student asks the same thing; What will the teacher feel. Like Dayānanda Swami says: this musician has sung rāgam, tanam, pallavi in Mōhanam rāgam and very elaborately with all kalpana svaram and atani avarthanam; everything finished; and nobody was appreciating because it was kalyāṇa kutcheri; wedding reception; only one person was appreciating, the musician was happy; and at the end of the whole, rāgam, tanam, pallavi and tani avarthanam also, this person says: I have only one request to make; please sing Mōhana rāgam.

Now what he will feel; like that; he has already told the Vibhūthis the 7th and 9th chapters; and if Arjuna asks for the same, Kṛṣṇa will feel, what is the use of teaching people like this; they come always with a fresh and clean mind. So therefore Arjuna knew that Kṛṣṇa will be disappointed if the student does not remember.

Therefore Arjuna says: bhūyaḥ kathaya; Hey Kṛṣṇa I remember you have taught it; do not mistake me; I am not asking this as a fresh topic; I am not asking as a fresh topic, as a very very new topic; but I know that you have already told. Therefore he says bhūyaḥ kathaya; I am also asking for repetition.

So in the olden days, in drama and all, they used to say: once more; so if MK Thyagaraja Bhāgavathar, Kittapa or whoever, sings if it is wonderful, they will say once more. Then they will again sing; I do not know; I have heard; and in the drama if he falls dead very beautifully; they will say once more; you get up and again fall; because so realistically he dies; Like that, Arjuna is also telling; once more, it is so nice to hear, Īśvara's glory. bhūyaḥ kathaya.

Why I am asking; triptiḥ mē nāsthi; I never get up; I never get bored by listening to this topic; it is ever fresh; it is ever rejuvenating; it is ever enlivening; I never get satiated or fed up; therefore thriptiḥ nāsthi. Unlike the other thing; even the most tasty food; if you eat the laddu you enjoy; first one you enjoy; the second one you will enjoy; third, fourth, fifth, six; and then it will become nauseating. Even a song; it was so nice to hear from the cassette in the first time, second time, etc. but after a time there is a saturation point, later it becomes unhearable; now how many cassettes are there in your house which have not been touched for years. Because over; so here Īśvara Vibhūthi sṛavaṇam is never like that; any amount you listen; it is enjoyable; therefore sṛuṇvathaḥ; tṛptiḥ nāsthi.

I am never saturated; why? Because amṛutham; because it is amṛutham; that is which I am listening; what I am listening is amṛutham; so amṛutham sṛuṇvantaḥ mama; sṛuṇvantaḥ is śaṣṭi-vibhakthi; kakārānthaḥ pullingaḥ sṛuṇvan sṛuṇvath sabdhaḥ; śakti ēka vacanam; sṛuṇvan, sṛuṇvathau, sṛuṇvathaḥ,.. amṛutham sṛuṇvathaḥ mē; mē word is there; it should go with sṛuṇvataḥ; tṛptiḥ nāsthi; therefore May you repeat the topic and do not repeat as you did in two verses, previously he said in two verses. vistarēṇa; now I want more elaborately. That is why several verses are going to come hereafter.

श्रीभगवन् उवाच
हन्त ते कथयिष्यामि दिव्या ह्यात्मविभूतयः ।
प्राधान्यतः कुरुश्रेष्ठ नास्त्यन्तोविस्तरस्य मे ॥ १०.१९ ॥

Śrī Bhagavān Uvāca
hanta tē kathayiṣyāmi divyā hyātmavibhūtayaḥ |
prādhānyataḥ kuruśreṣṭha nāstyantō vistarasya mē || 10.19 ||

19 The Lord replied --- well, Oh Arjuna I shall tell you the main divine glories of Mine, because there is no limit to My manifestation.

So with the previous verse Arjuna's request for Vibhūthi varṇanam, the description of Īśvarā's glories; that request is over. Now Kṛṣṇa is going to accept Arjuna's request and He is going to give a huge list; for which He gives introduction. And Bhagavān also will certainly accept Arjuna's request, Bhagavān has to talk about what; His own glory; who will not love to talk about himself or herself; we are waiting. Suppose I say please talk about yourselves; you will come immediately. Therefore I am not asking you at all; who will not love to talk about oneself; and that is why even if nobody asks, they will ask, I will like to introduce first; and then I will come to the topic; they will never come to the topic; the introduction takes 45 minutes; because I always love to talk about myself; even though I do not have any glories; that being so; why will not Bhagavān enjoy; and that is why everybody loves to take to vēdānta or listen to vēdānta; because vēdānta is talking about whose glory? My glory; that is why I am also not tired; and that is why you are also not tired; because I will say that I am talking about my glory; and how will you listen or how are you supposed to listen?

So when I am Satcidānanda; you can own up the same glory; when I say maiēva sakalam jātham, mai sarvam pratiṣṭitham; you can also claim all these glories as yours; and therefore Kṛṣṇa happily accepts to describe His glories; hanta; hanta means very well; OK.; fine; it is just a particle very well; ātmavibhūṭayaḥ tē kathayiṣyāmi. I shall certainly narrate; enumerate, enlist; ātmavibhūṭayaḥ; my glories; here also the word ātma is reflective pronoun; my own glory.

And what type of glory? divyāḥ; which are extra-ordinary; because even ordinary things are Bhagavān's glories only; as I said, opening the mouth itself is the glory of Bhagavān; we will know only when we meet a person who has got a locked jaw; locked jaw means what; he opened and is not able to close; somewhere something got stuck; and similarly anything that we are regularly doing, when you see someone who is not able to do that; then you suddenly recognise hand movement is the glory given by the Lord; it is the Vibhūthi of the Lord; but these are all what; loukika Vibhūthaya; and if I am going to enumerate all these ordinary glories like from winking onwards; why winking we do; eyes have to be kept wet; otherwise it will crack; so tear glands are there and at regular intervals, it is wiped; and somebody does not have tear glands; you know what you have to do; use the filler and constantly use the drops; imagine; so you have to all to sit with eyedrops and at regular intervals, start apply it in the eyes; how terrible it would be; but now these are all there automatically; loukika Vibhūthaya; Kṛṣṇa says if I have to enumerate them; it would be endless and therefore only going to talk about; divyaḥ Vibhūthaya; extra ordinary glories of Mine; which can serve as a symbol.

And that is why in Taittiriya upaniṣad, we have got meditation on very limb of the body; so that we will not take any limb for granted; as we grow old only, we will know that.

य एवं वेद | क्षेम इति वाचि | योगक्षेम इति प्राणापानयोः |
कर्मति हस्तयोः | गतिरिति पादयोः | विमुक्तिरिति पायौ | | Br ughuval i . 10.2 2 | |

ya ēvaṁ vēda | kṣēma iti vāci | yōgaksēma iti prāṇāpānayōḥ | karmēti hastayōḥ | gatiriti pādayōḥ | vimuktiriti pāyau | ... ||
Brughuvalli. 10.2.2||

Even the meditation on the organ of evacuation; so which we think it is an unholy organ, because it is removing the waste; then how can I think of such an organ; Upaniṣad prescribes meditation on the organ of evacuation; You will know its value only when it does not function; or it over-functions. Swamiji I had to go 25 times to the bathroom; then only you know; or constipation problem; this and that problem;

So vēda prescribes meditation; in Kenōpaniṣad we saw even winking meditation.

तस्यैष आदेशो यदेतद् विद्युतो व्यद्युतदाउ इतिन्न्यमीमिषदाउ इत्यधिदेवतम् ॥ Kena. I V. ४ ॥

tasyaiṣa ādeśo yadētaḍ vidyutō vyadyutadāu itinnyamīmiṣadāu ityadhidēvatam || Kēna. IV. 4 ||

You do not even take even your winking faculty for granted; that is another beautiful gift. Everything I should see the glory; it requires a mind which can pay attention. Right mindfulness; minding everything; and therefore, everything is Bhagavān's glory; but we are going to take the extraordinary ones; but divyāḥ ātmavibhūtaḥ; kathayīṣyāmi.

And even an extra ordinary glories are innumerable; even though it will be less than ordinary; but even if you take extra ordinary glories, they will be innumerable; we can never complete; the 10th chapter; therefore, Kṛṣṇa says prādhānyataḥ; I am going only to choose a few samples.

And what is the reason I am going to be selective; the reason is mama vistarasya antaḥ na asti; there is no limit or end to my Vibhūthi vistarāḥ means Vibhūthiḥ. So there is no end to my glories; because it consists of the whole universe. Not only bhūlōka, but all the 14 lōkās are there; therefore there is no end; kuruśrēṣṭa; Hey Arjuna; here itself Kṛṣṇa hints; among the kuru people also Arjuna, you are also glorious that you can become a symbol of meditation.

That is why when there is thunder and lightning; and a person is very frightened; they tell you remember Arjuna; therefore Arjuna has become a representative of Bhagavān's Vibhūthi; Kṛṣṇa himself is going to tell this later; pāṇḍavānām dhanañjayaḥ asmi. So He addresses appropriately; kuruśrēṣṭa; the greatest among Kurus; Kuru family.

गुडाकेश guḍākēśa Oh Arjuna अहम् आत्मा aham ātmā I am the Self सर्वभूताशयस्थितः
sarvabhūtāśayasthitaḥ residing in the heart of all beings, अहम् आदिः च aham ādiḥ ca
I am the beginning मध्यं च madhyaṃ ca the middle एव च ēva ca as well as the end अन्तः
भूतानाम् antaḥ bhūtānām of all beings

20. Oh Arjuna I am the Self, residing in the heart of all beings. I am the beginning, the middle, as well as the end of all beings.

So the list begins here; verse No.20, the list of Bhagavān's glory and it goes up to verse No.38. Kṛṣṇa gives a very elaborate list. And while enumerating Bhagavān's Vibhūthi, Kṛṣṇa wants to first talk about the Vibhūthi of Bhagavān as Nirguṇam Brahma, which is the subtlest and which is the highest order of reality. Among the three orders of reality; if you remember, Kṛṣṇa wants to first enumerate the highest order of reality; Vibhūthi;

And what is that? caitanyam is the fundamental glory and nature of God; because that caitanyam alone makes the entire living beings, species alive; If a plant is alive; animal is alive, if a human being is alive; and capable of discussing this topic, it is only because of caitanyam; śrōtrasya śrōtraṃ manasō manō yad; Every organ is an organ only because of sentiency; and that sentiency is my gift because I am caitanya svarūpaḥ; cidrūpaḥ; and that is why in Lalitha sahaśranāma, viṣṇu sahaśranāma, etc. various māya glories of mother is described; but in the list, we have got also the glory of nirguṇa mother; satcidānanda rūpiṇē; sat, cit and ānanda that rūpam is also described; Kṛṣṇa starts with caitanya Vibhūthi in this verse.

And so therefore what is our meditation now? That I am alive; that very life is the manifestation of Īśvara Vibhūthi; therefore respect life. So this is one of the fundamental principles, respect life and because of our respect for life alone, ahimsa becomes paramō dharmah; because I see every living being as endowed with God's gift of life and therefore I revere life. Therefore my aim is to avoid hiṃsa; or at least minimise hiṃsa; even non-vegetarianism is condemned; and vegetarianism is glorified; because of the fundamental principle of reverence for any form of life. Therefore first glory is what; caitanyam.

And then the last glory; also is the nirguṇa Īśvara-Vibhūthi; and you know what is that; satrūpam; or satta svarūpam; the very existence principle; because of which I am able to say, table is; chair is; pen is; book is. So when you say a pot IS, the very Is_ness of the pot is borrowed from where? Can you guess; the very Is_ness or existence of the pot is borrowed from where? Clay, the material-cause only; if you remove the clay from the pot; can there be pot. Therefore, an effect exists only by borrowing existence from the cause, an effect does not have its own existence. If an effect has got its own existence; then cause will be sitting there; gold will be sitting there; and bangle will be sitting there. Is it possible? Wherever bangle is; there gold must be there; because the very Is_ness of the bangle is the blessing of what? Gold;

And therefore cause is always manifest in the effect as the very existence. Cause manifests in the effect as the very existence; otherwise called Is_ness. Bhagavān being the cause, world being the effect, Bhagavān manifests in the world as what? As the very existence; Therefore space Is: when you say; Is_ness belongs to what? Air Is: Is_ness belongs to god; and when the whole creation resolves; only the nāma rūpas will resolve; the existence will go back to where? When the bangle chain and ring are melted; bangle is resolved; chain is resolved, ring is resolved, where does the existence go? The existence will go back to the very gold itself. So at the time of origination, bangle etc. take existence from gold and at the time of destruction, bangle etc. lends the existence back to the gold; and therefore Bhagavān is all over: தூணிலும் இருப்பார். எப்படி இருப்பார். இருப்பாக இருப்பார். இருப்பு என்ட்றால் "எக்ஸிஸ்டான்ஸ்" thunilim irūpār; ēppadi iruppaar; irūpāka irūpār; iruppu means existence; அவர் இருக்கிறார்; இவர் இருக்கிறார். Avar irukkirar; ivar irukkirar; common is what; இருப்பு தன்மை iruppu tanmai is the common; so in tunilum irūpāga irūpār; turumbilum irūpāga irūpār; தூணிலும் இருப்பாக இருப்பார்; தூரும்பிலும் இரூபாக இருப்பார். यस्यैव स्फुरणं सदात्मकमसत्कल्पार्थकं भासते yasyaiva sphuraṇaṁ sadātmakamasatkalpārthakaṁ bhāsatē.

So the two main glories of Bhagavān is Cid-rūpa-Vibhūthi; and Sadrūpa-Vibhūthi. So Kṛṣṇa starts with cid rūpa Vibhūthi in verse No.20 and He concludes with sadrūpa Vibhūthi in verse No.39; in 39 He concludes with sadrūpa Vibhūthi; So best form of meditation is what; sat cid rūpēṇa see the Lord everywhere.

And that is in whom, existence and consciousness are there in which person; in which person it is there? what is the answer; you should not answer; you should ask a counter question; in which person that is not there; That is why every person starts with what; who are you when I ask, you start with what: I consciousness Am existent; I am is universal.

But Kṛṣṇa finds when these glories are talked about many people raise their eyebrows; do not understand, because existence is an abstract concept; very difficult to conceive separate from the object; consciousness is an abstract concept and therefore Kṛṣṇa comes down; he says ideal will be to mediate as sat and cit; but if you find that your intellect is not subtle enough, intellect is not sharp enough, I will come down to concrete objects of meditation; concrete glories.

And therefore nirguṇa-mahima in the beginning and end; saguṇa mahima in the middle; this is Kṛṣṇa's approach.

Now look at the slōkā. Guḍākeśa; means Hey satvaguṇi; Hey Arjuna, I take you to be an advanced student; with a sharp and subtle intellect. And if you are such an intellect, then the ideal mediation will be what? as the consciousness which we have described often before.

Do you remember the description of consciousness; consciousness is not a part; property or product of the body, consciousness is an independent entity pervading the body and enlivening the body (have you forgotten) consciousness is not limited by the boundaries of the body, and consciousness survives even when the body dissolves. Such an abstract-formless-colourless-dimensionless-consciousness I hope you can meditate upon.

And that is why I am giving you the title; Guḍākeśaḥ, means sātvik one; guḍāka means tamō-guṇa ḥ; or nidra; guḍāka means tamō-guṇa or nidra; or a dull intellect is called guḍāka; īsaḥ means the master; the conqueror, the one who has conquered the dullness; the one who has conquered the tamō-guṇa; which means the one who is sātвика in nature. And therefore Arjuna, you look upon Me as the very consciousness.

And where is that consciousness? sarvabhūtāśayasthitaḥ; which is there in the mind of every living being; āśaya means mind; sthitaḥ means abiding, indwelling, residing; in sarvabhūtāḥ; not even every human being; every living being, including animals and plants; Therefore in my mind also; in your mind also Bhagavān is there in the form of ātma, the witness consciousness; and what does it witness; it witnesses the presence of thoughts; and it also witnesses the absence of thoughts. When I say I have thoughts, I am aware of my thoughts; and when you say my mind is blank, that blankness is also aware because of that caitanyam. That very caitanyam I am; so sarvabhūtāśayasthitaḥ; so this is Cidrūpa-Vibhūthi. More we will see in the next class.

Hari Om

Arjuna requested Lord Kṛṣṇa to enumerate all His glories so that we can take any one of the glories of the Lord as an ālambanaṁ or support for meditating upon the Lord. And Arjuna asks for a list of such glories, because according to our inclination, we can choose any one as the ālambanaṁ. And Lord Kṛṣṇa accepts and he begins the enumeration of the glories from the 20th verse onwards and first he enumerates his glory as the very nirguṇa caitanyam itself. Caitanyam is the greatest glory because that alone makes every living being sentient. So minus caitanyam the body mind complex being made of pañca bhūthās or elements, they will be only material jaḍa-svarūpam; if this jaḍa śarīram and jaḍa manaḥ is sentient it is only because of the presence of caitanyam. And therefore that is the greatest glory; and not only that caitanyam alone is pāramārthikam, the ultimate reality, whereas all other glories of the Lord to be enumerated; they are all born out of māya and therefore they are vyavahārika satyam, they are of a lower order of reality. And therefore first Lord Kṛṣṇa enumerates pāramārthika Vibhūthis and thereafter all vyavahārika Vibhūthis are to be enumerated. Of course if a person has to appreciate the Lord as nirguṇa caitanyam; one should be a jñāni. So without vēdāntic knowledge, one cannot appreciate the nirguṇa vibhūthi and therefore for all the ajñānis, this upāsana or this meditation is not possible.

And therefore only Kṛṣṇa is going to bring in saḡuṇa Vibhūthis from the second line onwards. So we completed the first line of verse No.20 in the previous class. Now we are seeing the second line wherein Kṛṣṇa says ahamādiśca madhyaṁ ca bhūtānāmanta ēva ca. I am the beginning, the middle and the end of the creation; beginning means the sṛṣṭi kāraṇam, middle means the stithi kāraṇam; end means the laya kāraṇam; I am the cause of the creation; which existed in the beginning; and I am the sustaining principle of the creation; because of which alone the world enjoys existence; and I am the cause into which the world resolves.

We can say the clay is the beginning, middle and end of all the pots. So before the origination of the pot; clay was, therefore clay is the ādhiḥ and when you destroy the pot, what will be there; again clay; in the middle also, when you are talking about pot, even though you do not use the word clay; whenever you are handling a pot; again the pot is essentially nothing but clay; And therefore clay was before the creation of the pot; clay is during the existence of pot; and clay will be after the destruction of pot.

And therefore always, kāraṇam exists in the past; present and future. And therefore Kṛṣṇa says I being jagat kāraṇam; I was, I am and I ever will be. People come and go; but I ever am; and this has got a practical psychological significance also; since Bhagavān alone is permanently there; if you want to security; you have to hold on to Bhagavān alone. If you hold to anything else other than Bhagavān; that will give way at some time, and we will lose our sense of security. So holding on to any created thing will not give me security and therefore the fundamental attitude of a religious person is in God alone. I am willing to love all the people, I am willing to share things with all the people, and if anybody asks who is your security; a devotee will never name anyone else; he will not say my son; he will not say my wife; she will not say my husband; he will not say parents;

he will not say NSG, the black cats; none of them can give security. The only security is the permanent one; and that permanent one is the Lord alone.

That is the fundamental training required. If you hold on to anything else, we always have the fear whether the son will take care of in the future; my son is very good now. After that girl comes, what kind of girls she will be; she may pollute my son's mind; it is the thinking of all the people; therefore never hold on to anyone except the kāraṇam. And what is that kāraṇam? The anchor for the ship is the Lord alone, for the human being; so aham ādiḥ sṛṣṭi kāraṇam madhyaṁ sthiti kāraṇam antaḥ laya kāraṇam. Of what? Bhūtānām; of all things and beings; the permanent ones.

आदित्यानामहं विष्णुः ज्योतिषां रविरंशुमान् ।
मरीचिर्मरुतामस्मि नक्षत्राणामहं शशी ॥ १०.२१ ॥

Ādityānāmahaṁ viṣṇurjyōtiṣāṁ raviraṁśumān |
marīcirmarutāmasmi nakṣatrāṇāmahaṁ śaśī || 10.21 ||

अहं विष्णुः ahaṁ viṣṇuḥ I am Viṣṇu आदित्यानाम् ādityānām among the Adityas अंशुमान् रविः amśumān raviḥ (I am) the radiant sun ज्योतिषाम् jyōtiṣām among the luminaries अस्मि मरिचिः asmi mariciḥ I am Marichi मरुताम् marutām among the Maruts अहं शशी ahaṁ śaśī I am the moon नक्षत्राणाम् nakṣatrāṇām among the luminaries of the night.

21. I am Viṣṇuḥ among the ādityās, (I am) the radiant sun among the luminaries, I am Mariciḥ among the Maruts, I am the moon among the luminaries of the night.

Now Kṛṣṇa enumerates various things and beings in the creation; which are very well known to us as a great thing; and Kṛṣṇa says all those glorious things of the creation are nothing but my own manifestation. And what is the first thing Kṛṣṇa enumerates? Ādityānāmahaṁ Viṣṇu. And while enumeration some of them are the loukika-vibūthis, the glories which are obtaining in the world; iha lōkā-Vibhūthis; but many others are based on purāṇās; and the other scriptures.

And in the scriptures they talk about various dēvathās in the heavenly world; and among the dēvathās; the most popular one is the ādityaḥ; dvādaśa āditya; And they say these twelve āditya, the heavenly dēvathās; the 12 faces of the Sun God; So the Sun obtaining in the 12 months, even though the sun is one and the son, in each month, the Sun we experience varies; the January Sun is benign; but the Sun of May and Sun of June we know very well. Therefore dvādaśa ādityas represent the dēvathās presiding over the 12 Suns obtaining in the 12 months; and they are considered to be important dēvathās; they enumerate 33 main dēvathās; dvādaśa ādityās; ēkādaśa rudrāḥ; aṣṭa vāsavaḥ; 12 ādityas; eleven rudrās and aṣṭa vasūs; 8 vasūs; vasū, rudrā and ādityās.

In most the rituals, especially in śrāddha and all; vasū, rudrā ādityā rūpān pithṛs; vasū, rudrā ādityā they repeatedly enumerate and those people who followed vēdic karma kāṇḍa, for them these groups of dēvathās are known well. So if you add them how many you get; $12 + 8 = 20 + 11 = 31$ and then Indra dēvathā and Prajapathi dēvathā; put together 33 dēvathās are supposed to be main dēvathās who receive oblations during rituals. Therefore they are called havirbhuk dēvathās; and they are well known in the karma-kāṇḍa and in the purāṇās.

And in fact the upaniṣad; the Bṛhadāraṇya upaniṣad says that these 33 dēvathās alone multiply themselves into 33 crores dēvathās; முப்பத்தி முக்கோடி தேவதை; muppathi mukkōdi dēvathāi; this is well known. And therefore Kṛṣṇa takes them first; among the 12 āditya dēvathās, I am Viṣṇuḥ; I am the Viṣṇuḥ dēvathā.

And why are these dēvathās called Ādithyās? Because according to Purāṇās, they are all born to Aditi, which is the name of their mother; adithihi; and adithi puthrāḥ; ādithyās; and all the dēvās are supposed to be aditi puthrāḥs. And among them I am Viṣṇuḥ; because Viṣṇuḥ in Vāmana avathāra was born as aditi puthrāḥ; and therefore I am Vāmana rūpi Viṣṇuḥ among aditi puthras; so ādityānāmahaṃ Viṣṇuḥ; All these are based on mythology.

Then jyōtiṣāṃ raviraṃśumān; among the luminaries; jyōtis means luminaries in the sky, consisting of stars, planets and of course the Sun, I am the Sun God; therefore ravihi; Among the luminaries I am the ravi; what type of ravi; aṃśumān, with brilliant powerful rays of light; aṃśuḥ means raśmi; aṃśumān means raśmimān.

पूजयस्व विवस्वन्तं भास्करं भुवनेश्वरम् ॥ ६ ॥

pūjayasva vivasvantaṃ bhāskaraṃ bhuvanēśvaram || 6 ||

So Sun God is very much adored in our tradition. In fact in Sandhyā vandanam, three times sandhya vandanam, we invoke the Lord in the Sun only; And even scientifically we know that without the Sun the planets will not survive; our survival is because of the glory of the sun; that we have got aditya hṛdayam; a special work in which the Sun God is glorified. It is considered to be a very glorious work, which is capable of giving all types of blessings. In Rāmāyaṇam; Agastya ṛṣi came and taught aditya hṛdayam to Rāma for both material victory as well as spiritual victory. Therefore āditya hṛdayam is a wonderful prayer for materialistic people also; for getting health; for getting money; for getting victory in examinations children can chant that; and for spiritual students also; it is supposed to be a wonderful prayer. Thus the Sun is glorified very much in tradition; and therefore Kṛṣṇa says: I am the Sun; pratyakṣa Īśvara.

And that is why in our tradition, when the Sun is rising; the pratyakṣa Īśvara is coming to bless us; and therefore when the Sun is coming to bless us; we should be fresh and ready to welcome the Lord. And that is why they say, we should wake up before the Sun rise. But unfortunately, now the philosophy is: not early to bed and early to rise; it is late to bed and late to rise; makes a man unhealthy, unwealthy and unwise. So therefore we are supposed to get up before sunrise and welcome the Sun, the prathyakṣa Īśvara. So I am Sun God.

Then marīcirmarutāmasmi; a group of dēvathās; are known as marut-dēvathās. So they are different colonies in the heavenly world. So in the heaven; different types, different types of colonies are supposed to be there; in each one, different types of benefit; and depending upon the amount of puṇyam we have done; we will be transported to one of the colonies. In one colony twenty-four hour water supply will be there; in other only 12 hours; in another air-conditioned room; different facilities; depending upon the puṇyam; you will become one of the dēvathās.

And among that, a set of dēvathās are called marut ganāḥ; 49 in number; sapta sapta; seven groups of maruts; in each group seven members are there; and they are supposed to preside over the vāyu tatvam. So there are different types of vāyu dēvathās; presiding over the wind. So among these 49 marut dēvathās; I am Marichi; Marichi is the dēvathā; who presides over that beautiful breeze which will make us feel very pleasant. Marichi means that tender beautiful breeze; not the cyclonic storm; that cool breeze which you get in Courtalam and all that places; that cool, gentle pleasant air-conditioning breeze is presided over by Marici dēvathā; Therefore Kṛṣṇa says I am the Marichi; among the marut ganāḥ.

And nakṣatrāṇāmahaṁ śaśī; among the night luminaries; nakṣathram, the luminaries of the night; I am the Moon; so what are the luminaries of the night; stars are there; planets are there; Moon is there; among all of them, the most brilliant and attractive one is the Moon; therefore I am in the form of Chandraḥ; And therefore we worship chandra dēvathā, as the manifestation of the Lord; māsi paurṇami, we specially offer what you call naivēdhyams, pālpāyasam which will be nice; we do not remember the Moon; that pāyasam is remembered; it is very very nice; so nakṣatrāṇām madhye, I am the Moon.

वेदानां सामवेदोऽस्मि देवानामस्मि वासवः ।
इन्द्रियाणां मनश्चास्मि भूतानामस्मि चेतना ॥ १०.२२ ॥

vēdānām sāmavēdō'smi dēvānāmasmi vāsavaḥ |
indriyāṅām manaścāsmi bhūtānāmasmi cētanā || 10.22 ||

अस्मि सामवेदः asmi sāmavēdaḥ I am Samavēda वेदानाम् vēdānām among the Vēdas अस्मि वासवः asmi vāsavaḥ I am Indra देवानाम् dēvānām among Gods, अस्मि मनः asmi manaḥ I am the mind इन्द्रियाणाम् indriyāṅām among the senses च अस्मि चेतना ca asmi cetanā and I am the intelligence भूतानाम् bhūtānām in all the beings.

22. I am Sāmavēda among the Vēdas, I am Indra among the Gods; I am the mind among the senses and I am the intelligence in all the beings.

Vēdānām sāmavēdaḥ asmi. So the vēdas themselves are the most sacred literature, directly coming from the Lord himself. And therefore all the vēdās are glorious but among the vēdās themselves which one is the most glorious one; at least according to Kṛṣṇa, sāma vēdaḥ is the most glorious. That means sāma vēdis remember this slōkā. Whether they know any other slōkā of the Gīta or not; remember proudly because Kṛṣṇa belongs or support our Vēda; and Why does Kṛṣṇa choose Sāma vēda? because sāma vēda is the only vēda which is musical in nature. So the other vēdas are chanted; but they have got only three svarās; but Sama vēda has got all the svarās; and therefore being musical, it is more attractive; if it is chanted properly; or else one feels like running away. If a person chants the Sāma vēda properly, is very very beautiful to listen and therefore Kṛṣṇa claims I am the Sāma vēda among the four vēdas.

Then dēvānāmasmi vāsavaḥ; among all the gods or deities, so who have become gods because of their puṇya. So we should remember we use the word God in two contexts; one is God with capital letter which is only one; who is the Lord māya sahitha caitanyam; who is sarvajñāḥ; sarvēsvara; sṛṣṭi sthithi laya kartha; that Lord is only one and that is written with capital G. then we use the word gods with small g, they do not come under Īśvara tatvam; all those gods are also jīvās only; created jīvās they are; but occupying the heavenly world. And because of their puṇyam; they have got higher powers, but they do not come under god and these gods also come under samsāris only. Because of the puṇyam, they have gone to heavenly lōkā and because of their puṇyam, they have some supernatural powers and they have got some enjoyment; but you should remember, once their puṇyam is exhausted. These gods also will be born as human-beings or animals. Therefore, the gods with small g and that too in plural numbers, they come under jīvaḥ; but the Lord or God with capital G is not a jīvaḥ, is not ajñāni; and He is Īśvara not because of puṇyam or pāpam, He is puṇya-pāpa athitha Īśvaraḥ.

So here when we write Devānām, we are talking about only the superior jīvaḥ, because of their puṇya-pāpam; and among their gods, celestials, I am Vāsavaḥ; means Indra dēvathā; so Indra dēvathā. Why Kṛṣṇa claims I am Indra? Because Indra is the controller of all the dēvathās and remember Indra also comes under a jīvā only and he has got the Indra post because of the puṇya karma he did as a human being; and he can continue to be an Indra until the puṇyam is exhausted and afterwards also Indra also will have to be born; and if he gains ātma jñānam, he will be liberated; But otherwise he is also subject to rebirth; and therefore Kṛṣṇa says I am the Indra who is the controller of all the dēvathās.

Then indriyāṇām aham asmi manaḥ; among all the sense organs, I am the mind; and why Kṛṣṇa claims I am the mind, because every sense organ is capable of functioning only in one particular field. So the eye can function only in the field of forms and colours; ear can function only in the field of sounds, whereas mind is the organ which is behind all the sense organs and therefore mind is capable of functioning in the field of śabdaḥ, sparśaḥ, rūpa:, rasa:, gandhaḥ.

And therefore mind is superior to all the sense organs and therefore Kṛṣṇa says I am the mind among all the sense organs and therefore if you want to invoke the Lord in any one of your organs mind is an ideal symbol; that is why Taitariya upaniṣad and in other Upaniṣads, mind meditation is very very prevalent. We will be seeing in Taittiriya;

So you visualise your mind and learn to see the mind itself as the greatest manifestation of the Lord. The more you think of the capacity of the mind, the more we have to wonder at the glory of the Lord. And therefore I am the mind in everyone; then bhūtānāmasmi cētanā.

And in every living being, I am in the form of the very life, the very sentiency; which is the most mysterious thing in the creation; scientists of all hues and colors have tried to find out what exactly is life. And what exactly is death; they are yet to understand these two; even though they claim to understand all the rest; what more is there other than these two! Neither we know exactly what is life; nor do we know exactly what is death; this mysterious life because of which every living being and especially if you see a minutest prāni. Always I wonder, sometimes when you read the book, between two lines, small insect, pūchi, but if you keep your finger, it will run away; and within that dot, there is digestive system and there is reproductive system and it has got a security system. Everything is there in that dot; and we have not been able to create even that micro organism. We can easily kill an insect but we are not able to create one unicellular organism and that mysterious life is the manifestation of the Lord and that is why for us ahimsa paramōdharmah.

Our aim is not to destroy life and that is why we prescribe vegetarianism; because in vegetarianism the destruction of life is minimum; adrōhaca bhūtānam; alpa drōhēna va punaḥ; avoid hiṁsa; or at least if it is inevitable, reduce it to the minimum. When you are taking vegetable, plants are not destroyed or killed; Therefore the injury is minimum; and there are some ṛṣis who do not want to practice even that, That is why they do not eat the regular vegetable; whatever is fallen on the ground, they eat that. So why do we value life; because Kṛṣṇa says I am the very life in every living being; so bhūtānām aham cētanā asmi; cidabhāsaḥ aham asmi.

रुद्राणां शङ्खास्मि वित्तेशो यक्षरक्षसाम् ।
वसूनां पावकश्चास्मि मेरुः शिखरिणामहम् ॥ १०.२३ ॥

rudrāṇām śaṅkaraścāsmi vittēśō yakṣarakṣasām |
vasūnām pāvakaścāsmi mēruḥ śikhariṇāmaham || 10.23 ||

अस्मि शङ्करः asmi śaṅkaraḥ I am śaṅkaraḥ रुद्राणाम् rudrāṇām among the Rudrās वित्तेशः vittēśaḥ (I am) Kubēra यक्षरक्षसाम् yakṣarakṣasām among the Yakṣās and Rakṣasās, अस्मि च पावकः asmi ca pāvakaḥ I am the Agni, वसूनाम् vasūnām among the Vasus च अहं मेरुः ca ahaṁ mēruḥ and I am the Meru शिखरिणाम् śikhariṇām among the peaked mountains.

23. I am Śaṅkaraḥ among the Rudrās; (I am) Kubēra among the Yakṣās and Rakṣasās; I am Agni among the Vasūs and I am the Mēru among the peaked mountains.

So dvadaśa āditya have been mentioned; that is why in Surya namaskāra also they do twelve namaskāras; Mitra Ravi Sūrya Bhānu, Khaga, Pūṣa, Hiraṇyagarbha Maricha Āditya Savithra Arka Bhaskarebhyo namō nāmaḥ.

So dvadaśa ādityas are worshipped everyday and now Kṛṣṇa comes to ēkādaśa rudrāḥ; 11 rudrās are enumerated in the scriptures; and that is why when we have got rudra ēkādaśini; eleven times chanting of Rudra is done. So they invoke the ēkādaśa rudra in the eleven pots; and all of them are rudras; but among them also, who is the most important one; Śaṅkaraḥ aham asmi. I am Śaṅkaraḥ. So they enumerate all the names; nilalōhita etc. in each one, middle one is kept and 10 around. And then pūja is done; among them I am Śaṅkaraḥ; why Śaṅkaraḥ? From the meaning itself you will know, Śaṅkaraḥ means the most auspicious one; śaṁ maṅgalam karōti iti Śaṅkaraḥ.

We saw in the Upaniṣad class; śaṁ nō mitra śaṁ varuṇaḥ; śaṁ means maṅgalaḥ; and therefore Śaṅkaraḥ means the maṅgala kartā rudraḥ aham asmi; and what do you mean by maṅgala kartā; maṅgalaḥ means ānanda; remember; maṅgalaḥ means ānanda; and that is why the very word rudraḥ means the one who removes sorrow; ruth duḥkham dravyati iti rudraḥ; ruth means duḥkham; sorrow; crying. In some houses, always somebody or the other would be always crying; that is amaṅgalaḥ; and Rudra removes the crying from the family; wherever rudra pāṛāyaṇam takes place, crying goes; grief goes away; and therefore He is called duḥkha nāśakaḥ; rudraḥ; and by way of that, he brings in Ānanda; and therefore I am Śaṅkaraḥ.

And vittēśaḥ yakṣarakṣasām; another group of dēvathās called yakṣa and rakṣasā; யக்ஷர்கள்; ராக்ஷஸர்கள் yakṣargal; rakṣasargal; yakṣa kinnara gandārva. In the slōkā they say; they are all various types of dēvathās; citizens of the heavenly world; so many varieties; colonies; and among these people, aham vittēśaḥ; vittēśaḥ means Kubēraḥ; I am Kubēraḥ; the one who proceeds over wealth. Kubēraḥ everyone knows. I have told you know.

In Badrinath, there is a place for Kubēraḥ. And there is a belief that if you keep a coin in Kubera's hand and take, and keep that coin in your safe, it will multiply. Therefore the moment you say Badrinath; nobody remembers Badri Nārāyaṇa; they remember Kubēraḥ. I never knew that; when I took students to Badri and Kēdarnath; somebody came and gave me some coin; I thought that it is for me; but they said that I have to keep it in Kubēra's hand and bring them back to them; I want to preserve it; then only I knew Kubēraḥ is so important. Therefore, vithānam īśaḥ; the Lord of wealth. And of course we do not condemn wealth; Kubēraḥ is also important.

Then pāvakaḥ vasūnām asmi; the next important group of dēvathās is aṣṭa vasavaḥ; So vasū rudra āditya; I told you; vasūs are eight, presiding over the eight directions. So among the aṣṭa vasūs, I am Agni dēvathā. So pāvakaḥ is Agni; Agni is called pāvakaḥ because he is the greatest purifier; punāthi or pāvayathi iti pāvakaḥ. In the relative sense also; if you want to purify anything it has to be heated; including food. If you have to remove all the impurities; why food; water. So the best way even now of purification is what; boil the water; and the surgeon if they want to purify their instruments, again they have to eat; and if you have to dispose of the dead body, even now cremation, fire is the best method of purification; and if you want to purify the various clothes and other things, putting in the sun is the best method. So loukika dṛṣṭya also; Agni is the purifier.

And from the śāstric-angle also, Agni is supposed to be the purifier of the mind; and that is why we worship Agni; and therefore Kṛṣṇa says, I am the fire principle; the greatest vēda, the rig vēda; its maximum number of mantrās begins with agniṁ īdē purōhitam;

Agni is very important for us; we start our day with lighting of lamp; I think we use to start our day, I think I have to say that way. Start our day because outside the light is the Sun. And not only that, when they light the lamp, they show to the Sun; the idea is that the Sun is the celestial light which represents the Lord is invoked in the flame and I keep the flame in my house. And therefore flame is worshipped; Agni is worshipped; and therefore Kṛṣṇa says I am Agni tatvam.

And Mēruḥ śikhariṇāmaham. So among all the mountains with peaks, peaked mountains, I am the Mēru parvatham. So Mēruḥ is a parvatham described in the purāṇās; not only purāṇās, even in the vēdās; they mention of mēruḥ is there; but people have got different opinions regarding the mēruḥ parvatham. Some people say the Himalayas are called the Mēru; there are some other people say that in the north pole there is a mountain; and that is the mēruḥ parvatham; because when they describe the mēru in the scriptures they say the Sun goes round that parvatham; if you take only the north pole mountain; the Sun will be going round; in a particular time, six month, in Norway-Denmark, you do not have Sunrise and sunset; because the Sun will be going round; and therefore they say the polar mountain is mēruḥ and there are some people who say that it is not any visible mountain; it is some invisible mountain belonging to the heavens. So best way to translate mēruḥ is what? mēruḥ; so I am not translating. Then only the problem comes; the mēruḥ among the peaked mountains; and it seems the mēruḥ pradakṣiṇam is supposed to be a pilgrimage prescribed in our scriptures.

and one Sāstry from Tamil Nadu, and according to him, the mēruḥ is that North pole mountain and therefore he made a pilgrimage and he has written a book and he has gone not with special dress and all; the regular pañchkacam and angavastram and he went to Norway-Denmark area and he went to that polar mountain area and he has described his experiences; it is a beautiful Tamil book in which he describes; and all the people, including the Government and everybody gave all the facilities to him, because he explained it is our religious practice; so he says mēruḥ is in that mountain in that polar region; and mēruḥ pradakṣiṇam is to be supposed to be a pilgrimage.

पुरोधसां च मुख्यं मां विद्धि पार्थ बृहस्पतिम् ।
सेनानीनामहं स्कन्दः सरसामस्मि सागरः ॥ १०.२४ ॥

Purōdhasām ca mukhyaṁ mām viddhi pārtha bṛhaspatim |
sēnānīnāmahaṁ skandaḥ sarasāmasmi sāgaraḥ || 10.24 ||

पार्थ pārtha Oh Arjuna ! विद्धि माम् viddhi mām know Me बृहस्पतिम् bṛhaspatim to be Brihaspati मुख्यम् mukhyam the foremost पुरोधसाम् purōdhasām among priests अहं

स्कन्दः ahaṁ skandaḥ I am skanda सेनानिनाम् sēnāninām among the commanders च अस्मि
सागरः ca asmi sāgaraḥ and I am the ocean सरसाम् sarasām among the reservoirs

24. Oh Arjuna! Know Me to be Bṛhaspati, the foremost among priests; I am Skanda among the commanders and I am the ocean among the reservoirs.

So among the purōhitās, the vēdic priests who officiate in rituals, there are two; the celestials purōhitās and also the earthly ones; among the celestial purōhitās, in the heavenly world; I am Bṛhaspathi, who helped Indra and the dēvathās; and therefore dēva purōhitēṣu madhyē, I am the main one who is Indrasya purōhitā, who is called Bṛhaspathiḥ. In fact, purōdhaḥ; the one who is kept in front as a guide; purāḥ dattē, the one who is placed in front, one who is seated in front and who guides me when I do rituals, is called purōhitā; I am Bṛhaspathi. These are all based on the scriptures.

Then sēnānīnāmaḥ skandaḥ; among the army commanders, he is not leaving any field; if you are an army man, you need an army man for upāsana; Kṛṣṇa wants to mention commander-in-chief, dēvasēna; dēvasēna, the army of Gods; and for them, who is the leader, Skandaḥ is Subramaṇya, he is known as dēvasēnapathi; the commander of the celestial army; I am; Skandaḥ means the one who flowed out; who emerged out of Lord's Śivā's third eye; to destroy some rākṣasās who had extra ordinary strength. Lord Śivā had to bring a special avathāra and out of Lord's śakthi; skandatē; skand means flow, to emerge out; to originate; from the third eye of Lord Śivā; third eye represents jñānam and that is why Subramaṇya is jñāna-Subramaṇya; jñāna Skandaḥ he is. So we can give philosophical meanings to this word; based on purāṇās, he is the best commander-in-chief, so I am Subramaṇyaḥ.

And then sarasāmasmi sāgaraḥ; among all the reservoirs of waters, among all of them, I am Sāgara, the ocean; which is worth worshipping. You can worship anyone; but I am the ocean, Sāgaraḥ. And in the purāṇās, there is a big story and many of the verses in this portion are based on that particular story. So we will have often refer to that story here. And therefore I will give the gist of the story and everybody will like story also.

Therefore so there is one story which occurs in several purāṇās and it occurs in Rāmāyaṇam also. When Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa were taken by Viśvāmitra; he told many stories; so they would not feel the pain in the legs; and there one story that Viśvāmitra tells is Gaṅgāvatharaṇam, the arrival of Gaṅgā from the heavens to the earth; is called Gaṅgāvatharaṇam; avatharaṇam means coming down. And this story occurs in several purāṇās; of course with slight changes. It seems there was a Rāja known as Sagara Rāja; known as sāgaraḥ; this sāgaraḥ had many children; it is purāṇa; do not get shocked, he had 60001 children; and they were all generally known Sāgaraḥ because sāgaraḥ putrāḥ; the sons of Sagara; they are called sāgaraḥ; and there was one putrāḥ known as Asamanjaḥ; normally Asamanja is used for idiot; anyway one son was called Asamanja and the Sagara Raja wanted to perform an Asvamēdha yāga and just as Rāmā did and in aśvamēdha and they will send one special horse all over and whoever challenges the horse and the army going behind, he has to be defeated; only then he can perform the aśvamēdha; because to perform the aśvamēdha, one should defeat all the kings around; and when he was about to do, Indra got frightened; that is Indra is also a jīva; his fear was anybody does 100 yāgās, he gets qualified for Indra padavi; and therefore his position is threatened if anybody doing more yāgās; therefore Indra's job is to scan the earth for anybody doing any yajña and yāgās; he will stop that; and therefore generally what he does is; if anybody does aśvamēdha yāgā, he steals the horse; and this aśvamēdha aśva also was stolen by Indra. But he had come in some other vēśaḥ; and naturally these 60000 sons except this one, which one, Asamanjas, all the 60000 started chasing Indra in some other form and Indra could not escape and therefore what he did? He went underground to the paṭāla lōkā. Do not ask me how?; This is purāṇa; mythological story; and these Sāgaras and they were not ready to leave him and they also started digging and 60000 people digging all over and a huge pit was created by them; and water started filling and that alone got the name sāgaraḥ; sarasāmasmi sāgaraḥ; huge reservoir of water, dug by whom, sāgaraḥ, sagara putraḥ; and therefore that got the name sāgaraḥ.

And what happened? They went to pātāḷa lōkā; and Indra knew he cannot escape and they are chasing and therefore he decided that I will tie the horse in pātāḷa lōkā and run away; because if I keep the horse, they will chase me; in pātāḷa Lōkā, Kapila Ṛṣi was doing tapas, it seems; and therefore Indra did a trick. What is that? he tied the horse near Kapila Ṛṣi and escaped; and then 60000 sagaraḥ; sagaraputraḥ came and saw the horse was there and nearby Kapila Ṛṣi; and therefore what did they conclude; natural; they concluded that Kapila Ṛṣi alone had stolen the horse; and he was sitting as though he does not know anything, doing tapas, therefore they started shouting at Kapila muni; poor Kapila muni he has not done anything and his tapas was disturbed by his shouting and therefore he opened his eyes and he got so angry with these 60000 people and therefore he stared at them and fire came out of his eyes; and all the 60000 got burned down into ashes; and he continued his tapas; for him it was nothing; like electrocution; like spiritcution you have to say; they were waiting for the horse to come; who Sāgaraḥ and the one remaining son Asamanja and 60000 were not seen and therefore Asamanja in search of them; and he went to Pātāḷa lōkā and found that all these 60000 burned to ashes; and he saw Kapila muni; he woke up and enquired and how all these happened and Kapila muni said that they disturbed and therefore they can be saved and revived only by Gaṅgā jalam. So Gaṅgā jalam alone can revive them. So Asamanjas came and told his father that to save them Gaṅgā jalam has to come and Gaṅgā is not in Kāśi or any place; originally it was in Dēva lōkā and Sāgaraḥ could not do anything; he was old; therefore he told Asamanjas you are in charge of bringing Gaṅgā; and Asamanjas he tried his best; how can he bring Gaṅgā from the heaven and therefore he also failed and he got a son by the name Aṁsumān; and therefore what did Asamanjas say to him; I could not bring Gaṅgā; at least you try; Then Aṁsumān thought he would do his best but he could not also bring Gaṅgā; then Aṁsumān had a son by name Bhagiratha; you would have heard Bhagiratha prayathanam; Bhagirathā decided to bring Gaṅgā and he enquired, decided to do tapas, invoking the grace the Gaṅgādevi; and Gaṅgādevi said that I am willing to come down but who can withstand the force of Gaṅgā; that too coming from the heavens. Even this Courtalam water falls you stand here; you will feel the force; what a momentum it would be. Therefore nobody could withstand it; earth itself will get destroyed; and he asked what to do; somebody must be able to receive; The only one who can do that is Lord Śivā; because he has got the cushioning jata is there; cushion effect.

Then how to propitiate Śivā? That is not easy; then again do tapas; previous tapas for propitiating Gaṅgā. Now tapas for propitiating Lord Śivā; and he did tapas; each one for 1000 years. So at least we should give one week time; so therefore what happened next; next week.

Hari Om

ॐ

In the last class, I was the middle of a story; the story of Gaṅgāvatharaṇam; how Bhagīratha brought Gaṅgā the river from the heavens to the earth. Bhagīratha came to know from his father Aṁsumān that his ancestors known as Sāgara puthrās were burned to ashes by the anger of Kapila Ṛṣi who was doing tapas in pātāḷa lōkā and they came to know that the ancestors could be saved only with the help of Gaṅgājalam and nobody else could attempt this big feat and therefore Bhagīratha had to work on that. And Bhagīratha decided to bring Gaṅgā down to the earth and that is why any person of determination is often called Bhagīratha and the effort is called Bhagīratha prayathanam. So he did tapas invoking the grace of Gaṅgādevi and Gaṅgādevi offered to come down to the earth but the problem was who will receive the river, because the momentum will be so tremendous that if there is no appropriate cushion effort, the earth will disintegrate.

And therefore Bhagīratha had to do another 1000 years of tapas; 1000 years for getting the grace of Gaṅgā; and then 1000 years he did tapas invoking Lord Śivā to help him;

Lord Śivā appears and offers to receive Gaṅgādevi and Śivā wanted to teach a lesson also to Gaṅgā; because she was arrogant that I am such a powerful river. Therefore Śivā was ready and therefore Gaṅgādevi came and Śivā did not use any special place or anything, his own jatā was enough; and as Gaṅgādevi came down, Śivā received Gaṅgā in his jatā. And not only that, even though Gaṅgādevi was so vast a river, the whole river was accommodated within the jatā, and Lord Śivā covered that river completely இருக்கற இடம் தெரியாம பண்ணிட்டார். She just disappeared into Śivā's jatā. And not only that, after teaching a lesson, Śivā went or continued his tapas. Lord Śivā loves tapas.

Now Bhagīratha was in trouble, because his purpose is not merely bringing down Gaṅgā; Gaṅgā must be available for saving his ancestors; and therefore again he had to do tapas; because if you disturb Śivā's tapas and Śivā gets angry like Kapila Muni and Bhagīratha also gets burned to ashes things will get worse; and therefore he did again tapas invoking the grace of Lord Śivā; and Gaṅgādevi also was praying to Lord Śivā. I am getting suffocated within your jatā; please let me out; let me breath fresh air. So because of the tapas of both of them; Lord Śivā agrees to release not the whole Gaṅga; but a portion of Gaṅga.

And incidentally if you take this whole story as a symbolic thing, Gaṅgādevi represents Brahma vidya and Gaṅgādevi coming out of Lord Śivā's head indicates the knowledge coming down to the earth from the Lord's wisdom. Because Gaṅgādevi can immortalise or save his ancestors. Similarly, Brahma vidya also can save all the people from mortality.

And therefore Lord Śivā released a small stream; you would have seen in the picture; Lord Śivā doing tapas and small fountain, a small stream of water coming. So Bhagīratha was very happy because after a lot of effort Gaṅgādevi has come down and therefore he requested Gaṅgādevi to come down to Pātāḷam; because this is Bhūlōkam; and so therefore from the heavens she has come down to the earth and from the earth she has to come to Pātāḷa and save his ancestors.

Then what happens; the story continues; long serial you know. So while Gaṅgādevi flows, she passes through the hermitage of a Ṛṣi known as Janhu Mahaṛiṣi; and when Gaṅgādevi flows and floods the hermitage of Janhu Mahaṛiṣi, naturally the āśramam is disturbed because of the flood; and therefore the Ṛṣi gets angry; and therefore what did Janhu Mahaṛiṣi do? Drank the whole Gaṅgā; First she got caught in Śivā's jatā; and she got caught in Janhu Mahaṛiṣi's stomach; Again Gaṅgādevi got suffocated, and Bhagīratha got frustrated; because the water has to save his ancestors.

Then what to do; again like if you have to get some certificates from bureaucrats, you have to fall at the feet of so many people at the office; everyone has to dakṣiṇa; from the gatekeeper itself; Rs.10 to someone, Rs.50 to someone, Rs.10000 to someone, etc. Then only ultimately you get; and you cannot argue with them because then if at all there is a possibility of getting that will also go away; one has to submit always; like Bhagīratha cannot get wild; therefore again he did tapas, propitiating Janhu Mahaṛṣi. I have brought down Gaṅgā for a particular purpose; please do not defeat that purpose. So Janhu Mahaṛṣi allows the Gaṅgā river to flow out through his ears; do not ask me how, he is Ṛṣi, therefore he can do anything;

So first came from the head of Śiva; and then it came from the ears of the Janhu, it all indicates that Brahma vidya is karṇa paraṁpara. That is, it will come from the head to the karṇa and from karṇa (kathu - ears to again another head); this is how the brahma vidya paraṁpara is. And since Gaṅgādēvi came again from Janhu Mahaṛṣi ear, it is called Jānhavi. So we will get that in the 10th chapter of the Gīta; at that time I will not tell the story again; I will remind you that srōtasāmasmi Jāhnavī; it is going to come; that is why I thought I can tell the whole story here itself and then hint at it when the occasion comes.

At last Gaṅgādēvi came down to pātāḷa lōkā and then all the Sagara putrās, how many, 60,000 Sagara putrās were saved. So this is the story of Gaṅgāvatharanam, And the place the Sagaraputrās were burned to ashes is called Kapilāraṇyam; the place in Pātāḷa, where the Kapila Ṛṣi did the tapas. And according to Kañci Paramācārya, that Kapilāraṇyam alone later got twisted and become Kapilāraṇyam; and Kapilāraṇyam is the modern California of America; Pātāḷa, dig deep and straight to America from India. Do not ask whether America is Pātāḷam; So California, Kapilāraṇyam; and to prove his point, Kañci Śankarācārya points out that nearby there is an Island called Ash Island; because all the 60000 got burned to ashes; therefore Ash Island and California; Whatever it is; that is aside; So the Sāgara putrās got saved and that is why the ocean which was dug by the Sāgara putrās got the name Sāgaraḥ. So sarasām asmi Sāgaraḥ; for that only I told the story; where does it come; verse No.24, second line, last word, Sāgaraḥ; and based on this alone, there is a well known slōkā written by Bhṛthhari.

प्रारभ्य विघ्नविहिता विरमन्ति मध्या ||
विघ्ने पुनः पुनरपि प्रतिहन्यमाना
प्रारभ्य तूत्त मजना न परित्यजन्ती ||

prārabhyatē na khalu vighnabhayēna nīcaih
prārabhya vighnavihitā viramanti madhyā || vighnē punaḥ punarapi pratihanyamānā
prārabhyatūtta majanā na parityajantī ||

Three types of people; one type of people they never undertake anything; why because they are afraid of failure; since they do not have the capacity to undertake failure, they never undertake and they declare to everyone I have never failed in life. Why, they should do something to fail! If I do something only there is the question of failure; These people are called manda puruṣa; then there is a middle, next higher type of people, prārabhya vighnavihitā viramanti madhyā; they have the courage to start, but once they face one or two failures; CA entrance examination; people cry; Swamiji I have written the examination so well but I did not pass at all. So if the failure comes, some people withdraw; stop from going further; but the madhyama people are those, who withdraw from the undertaking, when they see an obstacle; one or two obstacles. They are called madhyama puruṣa; and uttama puruṣas are those people, who continue again and again and again; how long, until they find success; vighnē punaḥ punarapi pratihanyamānā; any number of obstacles.

Gaṅgādevi refused to come; then she was willing to come; there was nobody to receive; and then Śivā had to be asked; and thereafter Janhavi Maḥarṣi's obstacles; and so many obstacle; but Bhagīratha decided, unless I get CA degree; unless I bring that Gaṅgā and save my forefathers; I will not stop my attempt. So prārabhyatūttamajānā na parityajantī; So thus Bhagīratha is an ideal example of perseverance.

महर्षीणां भृगुरहं गिरामस्म्येकमक्षरम्
यज्ञानां जपयज्ञोऽस्मि स्थावराणां हिमालयः ॥ १०.२५ ॥

Maharṣīṇām bhṛguraham girāmasmyēkamakṣaram |
yajñānām japayajñō'smi sthāvarāṇām himālayaḥ || 10.25 ||

अहं भृगुः aham Bṛghuḥ I am Bhrigu महर्षीणाम् maharṣīṇām among the great sages गिराम् girām among the words अस्मि एकम् अक्षरम् asmi ēkam akṣaram I am (the word Om consisting of) one syllable अस्मि जपयज्ञः asmi japayajñah I am Japayajña यज्ञानाम् yajñānām among yajñās हिमालयः Himālayaḥ (I am) the Himalaya. स्थावराणाम् sthāvarāṇām among the mountains.

25. I am Bṛghu among the great sages. Among words I am (the word OM consisting of) one syllable. I am japa-yajña among yajñās, (I am) the Himālayas among the mountains.

Maharṣīṇām Bṛghuḥ aham. Among the Maḥarṣis there are sapta Ṛṣis who are well known; who are supposed to be directly born out of Brahmāji's mind, they are called mānasaputrāḥ. And among those Saptaṣis also, Bṛghuḥ is considered the pre-eminent one. While dealing with a slōkā before we saw maharṣayaḥ sapta pūrvē catvārō manavastathā. Then I gave the name of Sapta Ṛṣis; the first one was Bṛhu. So Bṛhum Maricim Atrim ca; therefore Kṛṣṇa says all Ṛṣis are great; and the greatest one is Bṛghuḥ and that Bṛghuḥ Ṛṣi I am; and in the purāṇās several stories are said about Bṛghuḥ; and one story says that Bṛghuḥ tested the Trimurthis themselves to find out among the Trimurthis, who is the most patient one.

And then he went and irritated Brahma to find out whether they lose their temper; it seems Brahma lost temper; and Śivā one need not ask, he will get angry without any reason; So Śivā is Rudra, he also lost the temper, both of them failed in the exam; and then Bṛghuḥ and went and kicked Viṣṇu's chest; and instead of getting angry, Viṣṇu asked Bṛghuḥ, is your leg alright, is it paining; and they say because of that alone, Viṣṇu got the mark in his chest, Srivatsāṅgitam vakṣasam. Imagine if somebody should conduct an examination for Trimurthi themselves; certainly he must be greater; therefore that Bṛghuḥ, the great examiner I am.

Girāmasmyēkamakṣaram; among all the words, I am the Omkāraḥ; ēkam akṣaram means the word consisting of one syllable; the mono syllabled word. And what is that OM. And why do we say Omkāraḥ is the greatest word, because Omkāraḥ is considered to be the essence of the entire vēda s. In the Taittiriya upaniṣad class, we will be seeing;

छन्दोभ्योऽध्यमृतात्संबभूव |
स मेन्द्रो मेधया स्पृणोतु | Taittiriya 2 चतुर्थोऽनुवाकः ||

yaśchandasāmṛṣabhō viśvarūpaḥ |
chandōbhyō:'dhyamṛtātsambabhūva |

So just as we churn and bring butter; from the milk or the curds, and just as devas churned the milky ocean and brought out amṛtham. Similarly, Brahmāji churned the Omkāraḥ and brought out of the Omkāraḥ the butter called Om; therefore Omkāraḥ is considered to be vēda sāraḥ.

And therefore it is considered the most efficacious mantra, it is used in karma kāṇḍa for all rituals, we will be seeing that again in Taittiriya upaniṣad;

ओमिति सामानि गायन्ति | ओं शोमिति शस्त्राणि शँ सन्ति | ||१|| इत्यष्टमोऽनुवाकः ||

ōmiti sāmāni gāyanti | ōṃ śōmiti śastrāṇi śaṃ santi |... ||1|| ityaṣṭamō:'nuvākaḥ ||

For vēda pārāyaṇam, the first word is OM Sri Gurubhyō namaḥ; For all rituals the first word uttered is Om; and for upāsanas or meditations also, Omkāraḥ is used as an ālambanam or symbol. Thus in karma kāṇḍa Omkāraḥ is used; in Upāsana kāṇḍa is Omkāraḥ is used. And even in the vēdāntic section; Omkāraḥ is used for enquiry into reality. The entire Māṇḍukya upaniṣad is Omkāraḥ vicāra to arrive at the reality;

In fact, Māṇḍukya upaniṣad begins: om ityētat akṣaram idagm̐ sarvaṁ tasyōvyākyaṇaṁ. Omkāraḥ is not only the essence of the entire vēdās; Omkāraḥ is the essence of the entire creation. Bhūtam bhavat bhaviṣyatīti sarvaṁ omkārā ēvaḥ. Therefore in jñāna-kāṇḍa, Omkāraḥ is important; in Upāsana-kāṇḍa, Omkāraḥ is used, in karma-kāṇḍa, Omkāraḥ is used; thus Omkāraḥ is the most important mantra.

And that is why begin with Om̐ and end also with Om̐. And therefore Kṛṣṇa says among all the words, I am the most sacred word Omkāraḥ. Therefore girām, means what among the words. So geer, ghi, ghirau, ghiraḥ; ghīhi means a padam; a word is called gīhi and ghiram means among the padāni; among the words I am the mono-syllabled Omkāraḥ.

Then yajñānām japayajñaḥ asmi. Among all types of religious sādhanās; among all types of spiritual sādhanās, I am japa yajñāḥ. And why Kṛṣṇa chooses japa yajñāḥ? because it is one yajñaḥ which can be practised by all the people; where varṇa, āśrama restrictions are not there; brāhmaṇa kṣatriya vaiśyās śudrās brahmacāris, gṛhastha, vānaprasthās, sanyāsis, for all the people japa yajñaḥ can be used; whereas if you take other yajñās, there are restrictions, if you take agnihōtra; only gṛhastha can do; not a brahmacāris or sanyāsi. If you take a rājasūya yāga; only kṣatriya can do; brāhmaṇa cannot do. And there are certain rituals which can be done only by people who have got sacred thread; and other people are prohibited from doing that. So thus some are based on varṇās; some are based on āśramās; some are based on the upanayana ceremony, some are allowed for males; some are allowed for females; whereas japa yajñaḥ is open to all; it is a universal sādhanā; and therefore it is the greatest sādhanā.

And the second advantage is that you do not have a particular time or place, you can practice everywhere. If you want to do a hōma, a particular place is required; it has to be prepared, you have to face proper direction; whereas japa yajñaḥ there are no such restrictions. In all times, all places and all conditions; and thirdly there is a benefit in japa yajñaḥ, because there is no hiṁsa or effort involved. Because in certain vēdic sacrifices, animal sacrifice is mentioned; which can disturb many people.

In fact, Buddha turned against the vēdās only because he was against animal sacrifice. Many people cannot swallow that; so therefore there are certain rituals where hiṁsa is involved; and even if animal sacrifices are not involved, to do the rituals you have to undergo physical pain. If you say ritual, they will say, get up, do that namasakāra, do this, do that; etc. (for us sitting and standing up is a very big project for us, and if you are asked to repeatedly do namasakāra, it is all hiṁsa to oneself, in japa yajña, there is no hiṁsa. ஆடாமல் அசயாமல், உக்கரந்த இடத்திலேயே சொல்லணம்; āṭāmal acayāmal sitting you can do.

This is the third benefit. This is universal; it can be practiced in any place, in any condition at any time. Then there is no hiṁsa involved and finally and most importantly, most practically, no expenditure is involved. That is to be said; any ritual you want to do; you have to spend; and that too to get ghee at the rate it is selling; therefore it is expensive and dakṣiṇa for the priest. All those things; and for japa you have to use only organ of speech in which we are always expert. We go on talking; therefore very much used to use organ of speech; therefore instead of gossip; replace it with Om Nama Śivāyaḥ; Om Namō Nārāyaṇa; any word. So it is inexpensive but at the same time, it is as efficacious as other rituals.

And that is why they say a person who is a vaidika, who is born to vēdic culture must minimum do one sādhanā of japam; even if you do not any other greater religious disciplines; perhaps upavāsa you may not be able to do because of health reasons; rituals you may not be able to do because of professional constraints; you may not be able to do because of economic reasons; our śāstra says minimum sādhanā that everybody can practice and should practice is; some japa. Any nāma of the Lord, hundred and eight times a day; minimum; japyē naiva tu saṁsidyē; the full sādhanā catuṣṭāya sampathi by the mere sādhanā of japa. And that is why they give the definition of japa.

In japa two letters; the first letter ja indicates what janmavicchēdahḥ; the end to the cycle of birth and death. And the next letter pa indicates what pakāra pāpa nāśanaḥ; janma pāpa harō yasmāt. Since this sādhanā will remove all the pāpams and through that will put an end to the cycle of saṁsāra; japa iti uccayatē budaiḥ; and therefore japa is a great sādhanā.

Then what is japa? japa is great; japa is great; what is japa then; Japa means repetition of any sacred word is called japaḥ; which is different from pārāyaṇam. In pārāyaṇam you do not repeat a thing again and again; it is only a linear reading of the whole thing; you read the entire Gīta or a chapter of Gīta; you utter only once; that is called pārāyaṇam. In japa you take one word or few words and do avrithiḥ; means what; repeat that, Om Nama Śivāya; Om Nama Śivāya; Om Nama Śivāya. Such a sādhanā is called japaḥ, mantra avrithiḥ-japaḥ; and therefore Kṛṣṇa says among the sādhanās, I am japa-yajñāḥ.

Then sthāvarāṅgām Himālayaḥ; from one topic Kṛṣṇa jumps to a totally different topic; because whatever thought comes to him, that is his glory, therefore no thinking is required. So next item he mentions is sthāvarāṅgām; among the mountains I am the Himālayaḥ. So the most sacred mountain ranges in the world wherein Lord Śiva is there; Śivā's abode, Pārvati's father.

From that only somebody said that the best place on the earth is: father-in-law's house; What is the proof; observe Śiva; observe Viṣṇu; Viṣṇu lives where; in the milky ocean; Lakṣmi came from where; lakṣmīṁ kṣīra-samudra rāja tanayaṁ. So Lakṣmi is born out of kṣīra-sāgaram; so kṣīra-samudra is Lakṣmi's father and that means what: Viṣṇu's father-in-law; both Śivā and Viṣṇu, agreement in minimum thing; they have found father-in-law's place to be the best place. That is the different thing; sthāvarāṅgām among the mountains; I am Himālayaḥ.

अश्वत्थः सर्ववृक्षाणां देवर्षीनां च नारदः ।

अश्वत्थः aśvatthaḥ Asvattha सर्ववृक्षाणाम् sarvavṛkṣāṅgām among all trees नारदः nāradaḥ (I am) Narada देवर्षीणाम् dēvarṣīṅgām among divine Ṛṣis चित्ररथः citrarathaḥ (I am) Citraratha गन्धर्वाणाम् gandharvāṅgām among the Gandharvas च मुनिः कपिलः ca muniḥ kapilaḥ and (I am) Sage Kapila सिद्धानां siddhāṅgām among the siddhās.

26. (I am) the fig-tree among all the trees; (I am) Nārada among the divine sages; (I am) Citraratha among the Gandharvas and (I am) Sage Kapila among the siddhās.

Sarvavṛkṣāṅgām are the glories of the Lord only; but if you want to pinpoint a particular tree, which is the most revered and worshipped, that is aśvatha vṛkṣāḥ. And it is daily worshipped by Hindus; because it is supposed to be abode of the trinity. Therefore if you do aśvatha pradakṣiṅgām, then it is as good as pradakṣiṅgām to the three deities.

मूलतो ब्रह्मरूपायः , मद्यदो विष्णु रुपिणे ; अग्रत शिव रुपाय वृक्ष राजाय ते नमः ।

mūlatō brahmarūpāyaḥ, madyadō viṣṇu rupiṅē; agrata śiva rupāya; vṛkṣa rājāya tē namaḥ ||

So aśvatha is called the vṛkṣa rājā; the king among the trees; why, because in the mūlaṁ, the root of aśvatha vṛkṣa Brahmāji is residing; in the middle trunk madyado viṣṇu rupiṅē; and agrataḥ; on the top of the tree, Lord Śivā abides; and to that vṛkṣa rājā my namaskāra.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa says; aśvathaḥ; here you should not quote the 15th chapter; because in the 15th chapter, aśvathaḥ represents saṁsāra vṛkṣa; so it is a tree of bondage; in that it should not be said; here it is mūlatō brahmarūpāyaḥ; you have to see.

Then dēvarṣiṅām ca nāradaḥ; you know, so among Maḥarṣis Bṛhu was mentioned; among the celestial Ṛṣis, among them I am Nāradaḥ; the most popular Ṛṣi; trilōkā sancāri Ṛṣi; there is no purāṇa in which Nāradaḥ does not come; even in the upaniṣads, Nāradaḥ appears; not only mere purāṇic stories for kalaham.

In Chandōgya upaniṣad; in the 7th chapter, Nāradaḥ is the disciple of Sanath kumāra. And Nāradaḥ receives Brahma vidya from Sanatkumāra and that teaching is a very famous one; and it is called bhūma vidhya. So in the seventh chapter of the Chandōgya upaniṣad; brahman is called bhūma; Brahma vidya is called bhūma vidhya and that is received by Nārada from Sanatkumāra and therefore Nāradaḥ is a jñāni also.

Not only he was a great jñāni, he distributed the wisdom to all the people; in fact the very word Nāram jñānam dadathi iti Nāradaḥ; nāram means jñānam; dā means giver. So the one who enlightens all the people and that great Nārada I am among the celestial Ṛṣis. I am; who says; Lord Kṛṣṇa, do not forget Kṛṣṇa; we are talking about Kṛṣṇa only here.

Gandharvāṅām citrarathaḥ; Among gandharvās, so again gandharvās are the denizens, citizens of the heaven; another colony. I have told you several colonies are there; and one area is called gandharva lōkā, which is known for all forms of art. So dance, music, painting; sculpture, all of them are well-known there. And among those gandharvās, are you able to hear; you can hear, OK: among the gandharvās, I am the king of gandharvās; known as citrarathaḥ; citrarathaḥ is gandharvas' rāja. In fact, in Mahābhāratha story, when the Pandavās are in the forest; that gandharvas' rāja appears, if you remember the TV serial; there he appears; gandharvāṅām citrarathaḥ.

Siddhānām kapilō muniḥ; among the great siddhās, siddhās means people who have got extra ordinary powers; miraculous powers. They are called siddhāḥ and you should remember miraculous powers and spiritual knowledge do not have any connection at all. I have told you long before;

four types of people are possible; those who have got siddhi, but no self-knowledge.

and those who have got self-knowledge but no siddhi.

those who have got self-knowledge also, siddhis also.

and what is the fourth type, like us, no, no, not like us, we should not be said; we are all self-knowledged persons!!

Anyway; the fourth type people who have neither siddhis nor jñānam; of these four types of people who are liberated and who are not liberated; those who have got jñānam without siddhi or liberation; because for liberation, jñānam alone is required; you do not require any siddhi at all.

and those who have got jñānam and siddhis; of course, they are also liberated; and their liberation is because of jñānam.

and third type of people who have got siddhis and who do not have jñānam; they are all samsāris, even though they have miraculous powers. In fact, many of the rakṣasās had siddhis; but they did not have knowledge; whereas Kapila muniḥ is one who had both jñānam and siddhi. In fact, in Bhāgavatha Purana; Kapila is supposed to be one of the avathārās of Bhagavān; Kapilāvathara is very well known in Bhāgavatham. And Kapila teaches vēdānta to his mother Dēvahūti; Kapila Dēvahūti saṁvāda is very well-known portion. Vēdānta is beautifully taught by Kapila to his mother.

Of course, there is another Kapila Ṛṣi, who is not an avathāra of Bhagavān, who is a great philosopher, who has propounded Sāṅkya philosophy, which is totally different from Vēdānta. That Saṅkyā philosopher Kapila is not talked about here; here we are talking about the Vēdānta teacher; Kapila avathāram; and not only he was a great Vēdānta teacher; he was a siddha puruṣa also; a man of Siddhi.

And there also they say; a person can get siddhi through several methods. So a person can get miraculous powers through money, mantra, auṣadam.

Money means what certain types of precious stones. Like in the Aladdin lamps story, you take a precious stone, you get some powers; so that is called money.

Then auṣadam, certain types of herbs if you hold in the hand, you get miraculous powers.

And mantra, certain type of mantrās you do purscaraṇam; not any one day for 11 times; that mantrā you have do purscaraṇam.

What do you mean purscaraṇam? you have to find out how many letters are there in the mantra; suppose Om Namaśivāya; OM, Na, Ma, Si, Va, Ya; 6 letters; You have to multiply it with lakhs, that means 6 lakhs time minimum you have to chant; if it is aṣṭākṣaram, 8 lakhs; if it is dvadaśa ākṣaram; 12 lakhs; This is minimum;

What is maximum, multiply by crores; therefore five crores times, 12 crores times; then the potency of the mantra is released; like through nuclear fission or fusion; the energy within the atom is released, how much energy, it can destroy a Hiroshima or a Nagasāki. So much power is there in a small atom; similarly, every mantra has got tremendous potency, that potency is released by purscaraṇam of the mantra; through that also a person gets siddhis; So money, mantra; auṣadam.

Then the fourth method is yōgaḥ; meditation. So by concentrating the mind, focusing the mind like cakra-focusing etc. called yōga. Through yōga also siddhis can be accomplished.

And there is a fifth one and what is that? Janma; by birth itself, because of some extra ordinary pūrva puṇyam, certain people have some powers. Sometimes we read some freak news items; a person allows a big current to pass through him; I do not know whether you have read such an item. Normally if such a high current passes; a person will turn into ashes; but this person is a conductor of electricity and nothing happens; bulb also he holds and burns; there was a TV programme, the Incredible or something like that. This person holds the bulb and passes the current and the bulb burns; scientists say that he has got peculiar body configuration; how; not that he acquired; by birth; and another person pores acid over his body; nitric acid, hydrochloric acid, sulphuric acid, etc. he pours and the dress gets burned; but his skin is unaffected; this is for an example. Similarly by birth; certain people have got miraculous powers, such people are called siddhaḥ. So in this context, (for which I told the whole story) siddha means janmana siddhaḥ; those who have got miraculous powers by birth, not by any sādhanā; and among such siddha puruṣas, Kṛṣṇa says I am Kapila muniḥ.

So the one who has got the golden yellow colour; the complexion is golden yellow. Kapila is the gold colour is called Kapila dēvaḥ; that is how Kapil Dēv is named; it is a very beautiful name; Kapila Dēv, it is a wonderful name.

उच्चैःश्रवसमश्वानां विद्धि माममृतोद्भवम् ।

Airāvataṁ gajēndrāṇām narāṇām ca narādhipam||10.27||

अश्वानाम् aśvānām among the horses विद्धि माम् viddhi mām know Me उच्चैः श्रवसम् uccaiḥ śravasam to be Uccai sravas अमृतोद्भवम् amṛtōdbhavam which emerged (during the churning of the milky ocean) for nectar गजेन्द्राणाम् gajēndrāṇām to be airāvataṁ among the great elephants च नराधिपम् ca narādhīpam and to be the king नराणाम् narāṅām among human beings.

27. Among the horses, know Me to be uccaiḥśravas which emerged (during the churning of the milky ocean) for nectar, to be airāvataṃ among the great elephants, and to be the king (nara ādhīpa) among human beings.

In fact, in the previous verse, I forgot one point; when I said Kapila Muni, you should remember that story; that Gaṅgāvathāra story. Kapila came; he was doing tapas. So therefore, that Kapila Muniḥ I am. So that is why the story is used in all places.

Now we are ready for the next story, which is another equally popular story in our purāṅās. In fact two stories are the most popular; one is Gaṅgāvatharaṅam; and the other is samudra madhanam; churning the milky ocean.

And peculiarly enough, both these stories are teaching one fundamental lesson to us and that is, in life perseverance is the most important value; if you have to be successful in life, you should take everything as a challenge; failure should not deter you; failure should not make you fatalistic; failure should not make you pessimistic; failure should only trigger further energy; story No.1; Bhagīratha prayathana, story No.2; Dēva asura prayathnaḥ.

Here also you know the story; I need not elaborate; Dēvas and Asuras decided to churn the milky ocean and bring out amṛtham. And churning the milky ocean, you cannot use the local mixi; half a liter, What can you do with that; so they had to bring special churning rod; and what is that manthara parvatham; and they had to bring special rope: Vāsuki; and then they had to do the churning; and in the beginning itself differences of opinion; any job you start, you will find first thing that will come will be difference of opinion; you tell one thing and your wife tells the opposite; other way round; it is just natural.

So what is difference of opinion? Who should hold the head of the snake; who should hold the tail of the snake; what should they do? head or tail they have to toss; anyway somehow they solved the problem; I am not going to the details and they started churning; the churning rod went down; and therefore again they had to pray to Viṣṇu and Viṣṇu went underneath, tortoise form; and they started churning, varieties of things started coming; varieties of wonderful things, and varieties of dangerous things also. So therefore Kausthuba ratna came; Lakṣmidēvi came; airāvataṃ came, uccaiḥśravas came; So many things; Danvantari and all; I am not going to go to the details; Hālāhala viṣam also came.

And this symbolically again indicate Brahma vidhya. Just as Gaṅgāvatharaṇam is bringing brahma vidya down from the Lord. Samudra mathanam is also churning our mind; vichāraḥ enquiry in vēdānta class. What are you doing? Lot of churning is supposed to happen; I hope so; I am very optimistic; and the mind represents kṣira sāgara because kṣira sāgara is white in colour. White represents satva-guṇa and satva-guṇa represents the mind which is satvic and when you do the churning with the rod of scriptures, scriptural statements, varieties of things arrive; then what happens? It will continue.

Hari Om

136 Chapter 10, Verses 27-30

ॐ

Lord Kṛṣṇa continues with the enumeration of his glories; otherwise known as vibhūthi in this chapter and many glories are available in this world itself for direction like the glory in the form of Sun, moon or rivers etc. and many glories are based on purāṇic stories also. And I said that two stories are prominent in our purāṇās, one is the story of Gaṅgāvatharaṇam; avatharaṇam, flowing down or coming down, gaṅgāyaḥ avatharaṇam, which we saw before and the other prominent story is the Samudra mathanam story which was giving in the last class. Dēvās and Asuras planned to churn the milky ocean so that they can get amṛtham out of it; and then if they take the Amrutham, they will get immortality. So with this plan, they brought the Manthara mountain for churning and they brought Vāsuki as the rope and later Bhagavān Viṣṇu had to come as Kūrma avathāra to hold the Manthara mountain while churning; otherwise it was going down; and initially they had differences of opinion, but somehow they managed and started churning and varieties of things appeared. They say 14 virtuous things appeared out of the milky ocean at the time of churning; Cathur-daśa-rathnāni.

Kālidasa writes a prayer called Maṅgalāṣṭakam; which is supposed to be chanted in the morning, and in those prayers he talks about various sacred things to be remembered; sacred rivers, sacred deities; like that he enumerates various things and in one verse he mentions the 14 rathnās; rathnā means the precious things which came out of the milky ocean.

गावः कामदुहा सुरेश्वरगजो रम्भादिदेवाङ्गनाः।
अश्वः सप्तमुखो विषं हरिधनुः शङ्खोमृतं चाम्बुधेः।
रत्नानीह चतुर्दश प्रतिदिनं कुर्यात्सदा मङ्गलम्।

lakṣmīḥ kaustubhapārijātakasurādhanvantariścandramāḥ|
gāvahḥ kāmāduhā surēśvaragajō rambhādidēvāṅganāḥ|
aśvaḥ saptamukhō viṣaṁ haridhanuḥ śaṅkhōmṛtaṁ cāmbudhēḥ|
ratnāniha caturdaśa pratidinaṁ kuryātsadā maṅgalaṁ|

The 14 ratnās came from the ocean, of which the first one enumerated is Lakṣmi; Lakṣmidēvi herself came. When Lakṣmidēvi came, she is Samudra rāja thanayām; since she has come from the milky ocean, she is the daughter of samudra rāja; and it seems one poet writes; it seems the Samudra rāja wanted to give Lakṣmidēvi in marriage to someone. So he was trying to find out the proper son-in-law; Lakṣmidēvi to give to whom; then Śivā was there; Viṣṇu was there; Samudra rāja decided to give Lakṣmidēvi only to Viṣṇu; and the poet says, what is the reason; because Viṣṇu was well-dressed; and Śivā did not even know how to dress properly and therefore that poet says that if you want a good girl, dress up well.

वासः प्रधानं खलु योग्यतायाः kiṁ vāsasā tatra vicāraṇīyaṁ vāsaḥ pradhānaṁ khalu yōgyatāyā:

Dress is very important because it is a measure of yōgyatha; what is the proof?

पीताम्बरं वीक्ष्य ददौ स्वकन्यां चर्माम्बरं वीक्ष्य विषं समुद्रः ॥ pītāmbaram vīkṣya dadau svakanyāṁ carmāmbaram vīkṣya viṣaṁ samudraḥ ॥

Seeing Viṣṇu who was wearing pītāmbaram, silk and yellow garments, Samudra rāja gave Lakṣmidēvi to Viṣṇu and when the poison came, he handed over the poison to whom carmāmbaram vīkṣya viṣaṁ samudraḥ; carmāmbaram he was wearing elephant skin and deer skin and therefore he says that you should dress; that is a different thing.

What I wanted to say is the first one born out of the churning of the ocean; which indicates in the spiritual symbolism; it indicates the practice of spiritual sādhanā. Like meditation, japa etc. is like the churning of the milky ocean; as I was telling in the last class; white ocean milky ocean represents the satvic mind which is involved in spiritual Sādhanā; and when a person takes to spiritual sādhanā like japa-pūja, etc. various glories come to him like siddhis; various siddhis indicate Lakṣmidēvi; kausthubha rathna; airāvataṁ; women; all these represent various siddhis that they come; and if the Dēvās and asurās were satisfied with Lakṣmi and the various precious stones, they would not have got amṛtam. Similarly when we are in spiritual practice, we will get certain worldly benefit and many people are satisfied with those worldly benefit; they are really speaking obstacles or distractions and in fact generally people value siddhis only. If they want to talk about a mahān, why Śankarācārya is great you ask, they will never talk about self-knowledge or his teaching; they will say only golden nellikāi; he chanted, he prayed to Lakṣmidēvi; what is that: Kanakadhāra sthōthram. Various siddhis Śankarācārya did; that alone people talk about; so here śāstra says do not be enamoured by these siddhis. So all these rathnas indicate the distractions in the form of siddhis, and Dēvās could succeed only because they were not distracted by these things. They said we do not want all these things; we are interested in amṛutham; amṛutham means what? Mōkṣaḥ. So these are the positive obstacles in the form of positive benefits or siddhis.

And there is another thing that came out of the milky ocean; what is that? Towards the end; hālāhalākyam viṣam; poison; and here the poison represents various psychological problems that may come to some people when they seriously engage themselves in spiritual sādhanā; because I take away my mind from worldly problems and therefore the mind is relatively free now; and therefore the other problems which are in the sub-consciousness mind, which problems we might have acquired in our younger days as children, fifty years before; thirty years before, how our parents treated and what happened in our childhood; all those problems which are in the subconscious mind; sometimes they come out when a person practices spiritual sādhanā or meditation.

In Māṇḍukya kārika; Gaudapāda talks about these problems at the time of meditation; he talks about four types of obstacles; in meditation; one obstacles he calls is: Kaṣāyam.

Kaṣāyam means the deeper problems in our unconscious mind, which we may not know; And generally they do not appear in our mind because the past problems are suppressed because of the present problems. We are busy handling the present problem; where do we have time to worry about the past? My hands are full; in meditation I set aside all the present problems and for some people; not for all; these internal problems may come in the form of depression; reasonless fear, anxiety, tension and the mind often does not know what is the reason? But the mind is not able to operate well.

One ācārya calls it sthabdibhāvaḥ; sthabdibhāvaḥ means the mind is stuck; neither it is able to go forward; nor is able to go backward; and they are called Kaṣāyam.

So thus a spiritual-seeker may face these internal problems and especially when they have gurukula set up; in the gurukula the advantage or the disadvantage; you have no other thing to worry about; Because in gurukula, you need not earn money; everything is provided; you need not cook for food; you need not cook, food is provided; you do not have to worry about family; because you have left the family; you do not distract your mind through televisions and movies because in gurukulam nothing of that sort.

And you cannot meet new friends, because in gurukulam, same set of people. So now when there are no distractions, when there are no other worries to be faced, many people face the internal problems surfacing. And this is indicated by hālāhalākyam viṣam; poison coming from our own mind; when it is churned through śāstra vichāraḥ;

And nobody knew what is the remedy? All the people were running helter-skelter. Everybody was frightened; and the only remedy is what; they all prayed to the Lord and Lord swallowed the poison. Similarly, when we have got emotional problems, getting triggered and I am not able to find the reason behind it; the only solution is what; surrender to the Lord, let the Lord absorb those problem.

If you know the cause, you know the remedy; but there are many emotional situations, we do not know and therefore hālāhalākyam viṣam refers to the Kaṣāyam problem. Lakṣmi kousthuba pārijātha etc. indicate various siddhis that we may get.

And we have to transcend both of them; so do not be enamoured by the siddhis; and do not be overwhelmed by these emotional problems also. And if you still perceive continue after all these things, finally comes what? Amṛutham; Amṛutham means ātma jñānam. We have to survive until that; so what I want to say is in the samudra mathanam, 14 rathnams appeared; and based on that story only another poet wrote; many Sānskrīt scholars do write many things; many verses are there; so one poet wrote:

Bhāratha panchamō vēdaḥ (there are four vēdas; and mahābhāratham is fifth one); supūthraḥ saptamō rasaḥ; normally we about sat rasaḥ; six types of rasas; rasa means sweet, sour, pungent, etc. and if you have got a wonderful son or daughter (add that also), it is like the seventh rasa; dvadadaśam rathnam. So 14 ratnās came out of the milky ocean; caturdaśa ratnāni; and if in the world, there is a generous person who can give charity in plenty, that is a rare phenomenon, that a generous person is like the fifteenth rathnam; why fifteenth, 14 have come out of the milky ocean; and jāmāda daśamō grahaḥ. See from where to where he is going; may be the poet had too many daughters; the son-in-law is the 10th graham; so we all have got 9 planets affecting our lives positively and negatively and over which we have no control at all; and if you have a daughter and she is married, your life is governed by another planet and that is the son-in-law; that means that he influences you; but you have no control over. So anyway what I want to say; caturdaśa rathnāni came.

And out of those fourteen; one is uccaiḥśravas; where is the uccaiḥśravas; look at verse No.27; I am supposed to be teaching the 10th chapter; do not wonder that I have forgotten Gīta and wandering all over; for the sake of uccaiḥśravas; I had some meandering; because I can do that only in this chapter; in every other chapter I have to keep the topic in mind; I am tightly tied; but this is only chapter I can have elbow room and some fun. Anyway; among the aśvās, horses, I am the uccaiḥśravas; the special horse, which came out of the milky ocean. And the very word indicates it is the most famous horse; śravaḥ means famed, kīrthi. Uccaiḥśravas, that horse which is the most famous one; ucchaiḥ śravaḥ yasya śravaḥ uccaiḥśravaḥ; among the horses.

And how did that horse come; viddhi māmamṛtōdbhavam. So I am that horse; which emerged during amṛutha mathanam; amṛuta mathana kāla udbhavam.

And airāvataṃ gajēndrāṇām; among the elephants I am the airāvataṃ; airāvataṃ is another one which came during the Samudra mathanam; so airāvataṃ, the white elephant. I told you the other day, it is the white elephant of the heavenly world; on the earth white elephant you know; so airāvataṃ which is the vehicle of the mount of Dēvēndra; and which is supposed to have caturtantā, four horns etc; four tusks; airāvataṃ gajēndrāṇām.

Narāṇām ca narādhipam; among the human-beings I am the king; and that is why in our tradition, or in many traditions, the King is taken as the manifestation of the Lord himself; they look upon the king as God; because Bhagavān here says I am the King among the human beings. And not only that, the king has to support dharma, just as the Lord is śāsvatha dharma gōptha. Similarly the king has also to protect dharma; therefore as a protector of dharma, King is taken as the representative of God; and therefore the Lord enumerates.

prajanaścāsmi kandarpaḥ sarpāṇāmasmi vāsukiḥ || 10.28 ||

अहं वज्रम् ahaṃ vajram I am (Indra's) thunderbolt आयुधानाम् āyudhānām among weapons अस्मि कामधुक् asmi kāmadhuk I am Kāmadhēnu धेनूनाम् dhenūnām among cows अस्मि प्रजनः कन्दर्पः asmi prajanaḥ kandarpaḥ I am the productive passion च अस्मि वासुकिः ca asmi vāsukiḥ and I am Vāsuki सर्पणाम् sarpāṇām among the serpents

28. I am (Indra's) thunderbolt among weapons; I am Kāmadhēnu among cows; I am the productive passion and I am Vāsuki among the serpents.

āyudhānām among the weapons, ahaṃ vajram; vajrāyudam ahaṃ asmi; vajrāyudam is the special weapon of Dēvēndra; and in the purāṇa, the story is given how this special weapon was taken out of the backbone of Dadichi maharṣi; that Dadichi maharṣi had done plenty of tapas and therefore his very body had become strong because of the tapas he performed and therefore for the special purpose of destroying Vṛthrāsura. Vṛthrāsura story I told in śikṣavalli. So to destroy Vṛthrāsura, Dadici Maḥarṣi sacrifices his life and out of his backbone vajrāyudam is made; therefore it has got the strength born out of tapas śakti; because we consider spiritual power or meditative power is much stronger than the material power.

That is why they tell the story also; how Viśvāmitra decided become bhramashri. Viśvāmitra was a kṣatriya by birth; and Viśvāmitra and vasiṣṭa get into a problem; I do not want to go into the details; and therefore they had a war as it were. And Viśvāmitra was shooting weapons after weapons and Vaśiṣṭa kept his brahmadanda in front; in which he had invoked all his tapas śakti; and therefore all the missiles; the missiles system of America, all the missiles like the patriot missiles and all those things Viśvāmitra was shooting and they all came and they just fell in front of Brahma danḍa and they were defused.

Then only Viśvāmitra understands the kṣatriya bhalam or the material strength is far inferior to the mental strength which is born out of tapas or meditation. And therefore he says na kṣatriya balam; brahma tējo balam; physical and material strength is nothing, brahma tējo balam; Brahma tējō balam is tapas śakti is alone is superior and therefore he decides to do tapas and gets inner strength and that is how Viśvāmitra, the kṣatriya ṛṣi becomes the brahma ṛṣi.

And from this also we come to know that even if a person is a born śūdra or vaiśya or kṣatriya, by doing sādhanā; he can change the varṇa; a kṣatriya can become a brāhmaṇa; therefore Brāhmaṇatvam is not primarily by birth; Brāhmaṇatvam is by your character; sādhanā and lifestyle. Anyway what I want to say, vajrāyudam is stronger; because of the spiritual strength and therefore Kṛṣṇa tells I am the vajrāyudam of Indra.

dhēnūnāmasmi kāmadhuk; so among the cows, and that too the milch cows or the milk yielding cows; so many cows; among the cows which gives milk; we have a special sanskrit word, dhēnūḥ; dhēnū is the name of that cow which gives milk; and among such cows I am kāmadhēnū; kāmadhuk; kāmadhēnūḥ; And why kāmadhēnūḥ; because the other cows can yield only milk; whereas kāmadhēnūḥ is a unique cow which can yield anything you want; kāmam kāmam dōgdhi iti kāmadhuk.

So you have to only go near the cow and pray; instead of milk, you think of coco cola; direct it will come; pepsi; directly it will come; coffee; directly, without powder; not only this drinkable things; all things will materialise; but anything that you want, house you want; a car you want; anything you want; kāmaṁ kāmaṁ dōgdhi iti kāmadhēnūḥ. And incidentally kāmadhēnūḥ also emerged out of the milky ocean.

And this also indicates what; beautiful symbolic presentation; the mind is kāmadhēnūḥ. The human mind and intellect are so powerful that if you fully tap you can create anything; all the scientific advancements and gadgets; they are all born out of what?; human intellect; internet is born out of what?; human intellect; kāmadhēnūḥ. So therefore if a human being decides to tap his own mind intellect complex, he can achieve anything in life. All the fourteen lōkās he can accomplish, why he can attain mōkṣa also; mōkṣam api dōgdi; The mind-kāmadhēnūḥ mōkṣam also it will milk and give you; therefore it is called kāmadhuk.

Then prajanaścāsmi kandarpaḥ; kandarpaḥ means desire; manmatha is called kandarpaḥ; Manmatha, the deity of desire or passion; and desire is here seen as the greatest creator of things. So desire is the greatest producer of things; why do you build a house. So before the house comes; a multi-lakh Rs.50 lakh house comes into being; previously it exists in your mind, in the form of what? Desire. So everything that is produced in the creation is born out of human desire; In fact, according to vēdānta, I wanted because of its karma; because of the karma of the last janma, I have asked for this world.

Therefore is the greatest creator and that is why we say necessity is the mother of all creativity; all inventions; and necessity expresses in the form of desire; it is very hot; human mind wanted something and therefore fan was created; and that is not sufficient; A/C was created. Then the power goes away, at crucial times, generator was created; one thing after another, why do we create? Because there is a desire; And therefore among the creators; among the desire; productive desire; productive-passion; which is the cause of everything, including the desire for children; so the production of children is also born out of desire; so kandarpaḥ.

Sarpāṇāmasmi vāsukiḥ; among the serpents; so especially the poisonous serpents I am Vāsukiḥ; which is the ornament for Lord Śivā; and the snake vāsukiḥ snake symbolises the ahamkāra.

So ahamkāra is the greatest poison which leads to kartṛtvam and karma phala and punarapi-jananam and punarapi-maraṇam saṁsāra. And the Lord Śivā uses the poisonous snake as a ornament, because he knows how to handle the snake. If you know how to handle it; it is an ornament. Similarly, by ātma jñānam; we learn to handle our own ahamkāra.

And therefore for a jñāni, ahaṁkāra becomes a bhushanam; an ornament. Just as poisonous snake is an ornament for Lord Śivā; the poisonous ahaṁkāra is an ornament for a jñāni. Therefore vāsukiḥ ahaṁ sarpaṇām.

Verse 10.29

अनन्तश्चास्मि नागानां वरुणो यादसामहम् ।
पितृणामर्यमा चास्मि यमः संयमतामहम् ॥ १०.२९ ॥

anantaścāsmi nāgānām varuṇō yādasāmaham ||
pitṛṇāmaryamā cāsmi yamaḥ saṁyamatāmaham || 10.29 ||

अस्मि च अनन्तः asmi ca anantaḥ I am Ananta, नागानाम् nāgānām among the snakes अहं वरुणः ahaṁ varuṇaḥ I am Varuṇa यादसाम् yādasām among the water-deities; अस्मि अर्यमा asmi aryamā I am Aryama पितृणाम् pitṛṇām among the ancestors च अहं यमः ca ahaṁ yamaḥ and I am Yama, संयमताम् saṁyamatām among the controllers.

29. I am anantaḥ among the snakes; I am varuṇaḥ among the water-deities; I am Aryamā among the ancestors and I am yamaḥ among the controllers.

Nāgāḥ also means snake; and how to differentiate sarpa and nāgāḥ; both mean snake only. Therefore commentators give different meanings to differentiate; generally we do not remember; by the time we come to this verse; the previous verse we will forget; By chance if you remember, the previous verse was said; sarpaṇām; again nāgānām, why it is repeated; some commentators; Nāgās refers to non-poisonous snake; so saviṣa and nirviṣa. So among those Nāgās, I am ananthaḥ.

So Lord Kṛṣṇa might have felt that in the previous verse, vāsukiḥ was said, which is associated with Lord Śivā. Therefore reading that verse; Śivā-bhakthās will be happy; Viṣṇu bhakthās will feel bad, Śivā is mentioned and Viṣṇu has been forgotten; So anantha, it is a snake associated with Lord Viṣṇu; Lord Viṣṇu is called ananthaśayana. So he uses the coiled anantha as the bed; and it is like a foam-like bed only and also cool; because snake are supposed to be cool blooded ones; soft to touch and Dayānanda Swami says, it is the first spring coat in the creation; Bhagavān started it; coil means spring; So therefore anantha-śayana; of course philosophically speaking, anantha means nirguṇa brahma. So Viṣṇu the saguṇa Īśvara is located in his svarūpam of anantha, which is the nirgūṇa brahman; otherwise it is also called ādiśeṣaḥ; śeṣaḥ means what; that which remains everything is destroyed. In food also śeṣam; after you eat everything; what is left out is śeṣaḥ; in the creation during pralaya; after everything is destroyed; what is left behind is Brahman; and therefore Bhagavān śeṣasāyi; he remains in his svarūpam called śeṣa, which is the brahman, which is the ultimate remainder; therefore anantha śeṣasāyi; śeṣasāyi; that anantha among the Nāgās.

Then ahaṁ varuṇaḥ yādasām; yādās means water dēvatha; jala dēvatha is called Varuṇa; and therefore jala dēvathās because jalam exists in many forms; in the form of river, jalam is there; in the form of lake, jalam is there; and therefore even though jalam is one; it has got various forms of existence; for each one, we have got a dēvatha; river dēvatha; lake dēvatha; ocean dēvatha; well dēvatha; bore-well dēvatha (now it is also there) and then cloud dēvatha; parjanyaḥ; parjanyaḥ water in the form of cloud. You can include your own tears also; tear dēvath; So thus there are many water dēvathās; among all of them; Varuṇaḥ ahaṁ asmi; I am Varuṇa dēvatha who presides over the ocean; because that is the biggest reservoir of water. Therefore I am Varuṇa dēvatha; and that is why Varuṇa is worshipped during sāyam sandhya; so Varuṇa is not an ordinary dēvatha;

What beautiful mantrās; we are worshipping Varuṇa in the evening; as the representative of Īśvara; and therefore I am the Varuṇa dēvatha; why not surya dēvatha; because during evening Sun has set; we worship Surya dēvatha during the morning.

All gem of mantrās through which we ask for physical health; emotional health; intellectual health and money, money also we ask for; and ultimately we ask for mōkṣa also.

We ask for anything that will desire in life; so they have enlisted; because if we see the Lord we may forget; So He has got wonderful memory; so they have included all these in the mantrās; whatever your basic needs; paśyēma; first one is let my eyes be perfect; all wonderful prayers; Varuṇa is an important vēdic deity; There is a special suktham; called Varuṇa suktham; so I am the Varuṇaḥ.

Then pitṛṇāmaryamā cāsmi; there are many dēvathās in the pithṛ lōkā; as I had said before, heaven itself is subdivided into many colonies; depending upon the grade of your puṇyam; you will be given do you remember: LIG, MIG, HIG, low income group, middle income group, high income group, all those things will be given; therefore pithṛ lōkā is one lōkā and that lōkā is presided over by pitṛ dēvatha and the head of the pithṛ dēvathās is āryamā. So these are very prominent deities of the vēdās; vēdic deities; gradually the purāṇic deities overshadowed the vēdic deities; Aryamā, Varuṇa and Indra are prominent vēdic dēvathas; and I am Aryamā;

And whatever srāddha tarpaṇa etc; we do is supposed to directly go to Aryamā's department; just like whatever letter you post in any letter box, they all will go to the main post office and from there it is distributed to the proper addresses; similarly anybody does sṛadda, tarpaṇam, etc. all the offerings directly go to Aryamā's supervision; he has got courier service; very efficient service, they know the old number and new number; no mismatch; and the forefather may be in which lōkā, how do we know; so our forefathers, could have taken rebirth in manuṣya lōkā, they might have taken any animal body; or they might have gone to another lōkā; 14 lōkā courier service he has got; whatever type of food needed in whatever lōkā, appropriately it will be sent. Therefore Aryamā is a very important person. Therefore among the pithṛs, I am the Aryamā. In vivaha mantra and all; aryama and are all mentioned; they are all vēdic deities; aryama for sanskrit students not strilinga; it is nakāranthaḥ pulingah; Aryaman śabada; those who do not know Sānskrīṭ, you can be blissfully ignorant; do not bother.

yamaḥ saṁyamātāmaham; among the entire controllers of world of things and beings, I am yamaḥ; yamaḥ means kāla tatvam; because the time controls everything; in time generations come; in time generations go; and even the mind when we are young, there is that pride and arrogance; who can do anything to me; I am great; they will talk too much; in their walk one can see; with chest up; then see after 10 years; after getting married, first one, that itself will mellow him; thereafter one or two children, and you educate them and get married; you are fully mellowed down; all whose job;

हरति निमेषात्कालः सर्वम् |

mā kuru dhana jana yauvana garvaṁ
harati nimēṣātkālah sarvam |

Therefore anyone I will control. Therefore saṁyamātām; among the controllers, I am yamaḥ.

Verse 10.30

Lion मृगाणाम् mṛgāṇām among animals, च वैनतेयः ca vainatēyaḥ and Garuda पक्षिणाम्
pakṣiṇām among the birds

30. I am prahlādaḥ among the daityās, I am time among the reckoners or computers; I am the lion among animals and Garuda among birds.

Daityānām, among the diti putrās. So Diti is the wife of Kaśyapa prajāpathiḥ, who is an important personality mentioned in the purāṇas. When they say Brahmāji, the creation, the entire humanity had to come, and first from Brahmāji 14 Prajāpatis came and from the 14 prajāpatis alone, the entire humanity emerged. And therefore this Prajāpatis are enumerated; among them the most prominent one is Kaśyapa; and Aditi is his wife; Diti is another wife and Aditi's children are called Dēvās and Diti's children are called asuras. So Dēvās and asurās are born to two different mother's and father is one and same.

It indicates what; we have got a mind; Dēvās represent positive healthy thoughts; asurās represent unhealthy thought; from one Kaśyapa Prajāpati the mind alone. We get both Dēva vṛttiḥ as well as asura vṛththis; out of two different wives; one is called satva-guṇa wife; and the other is called rajō-guṇa wife; out of these three guṇas, especially these two guṇas; satva and rajas, two types of vṛththis are generated; one is called daivi sampath; and the other is called āsuri sampath. We will see in the 16th chapter.

And generally the asurās are negative; in their thinking; that you know; but even among the asurās; there was a great devotee born; who is Prahlādaḥ; the son of Hiraṇyakaśipu; who was an asura, who was enemy of the Lord; who was hating the Lord; you know the story of Hiraṇyakaśipu; to the hater of such a Lord, Prahlādaḥ was born. And not only that, he became a great devotee; and he became so great; that in the morning when we have to remember all the great devotees; the first one is Prahlādaḥ; in the morning, we are asked to remember the great devotees.

व्यासाम्बरीक्ष शुखः शैन भीष्म दार्द्यान्
रुग्माडदारुजुन वसिष्ठ विभीषणानि , पुन्याणिमान् परमभागवतान् स्मरामि ॥ prahlāda nārada parāśara puṇḍarīka, vyāsāmbarikṣa śukhaḥ śaina bhīṣma dārdyān;

rugmāṇadārujana vasiṣṭha vibhīṣaṇāni,
punyāṇimān paramabhāgavatān smārāmi ||

I am remembering in the early morning; before reading the newspaper, and spoiling the mind, I remember the names of all the great bhakthās; and the topmost one is Prahlāda; By birth he is asura jāthi; by character he is satva-guṇa. From this we also another important thing; jāthi does not make a person great, it is the guṇa that makes a person great; And therefore we can never look down a person based on jāti, the caste system became notorious because we started looking down upon people purely based on janma; and those people see the so-called brāhmaṇās; who are born from brāhmaṇās; and who are given to lot of vices and I respect a brāhmaṇās, just because he is born a brāhmaṇās, even though he does not have any character, there is something irrational in it.

And therefore, jāti does not make a person great, but character; and what is the example, Prahlāda was born asura; Rāvaṇa was a brāhmaṇā. Visravasa putraḥ putra Rāvaṇō nāma rākṣasaḥ; visravasa putraḥ; nobody in the list of people to be remembered, do we add Rāvaṇa; No. therefore it is not the jāti; jāti-brāhmaṇa Rāvaṇa is excluded; jāti-asura Prahlāda is included. Therefore always give importance to character.

Therefore prahlādaścāsmi daityānām; diti puthrāṇam madye; then kālaḥ kalayatāmaham. Among the ones who keep account, accountant is called kalayath; keep account.

So for many things you keep account; say computer also; Computer computes, keeps track of all the things; and among those computers, especially which keep track of puṇya pāpa karma of people; imagine what type of computer is required for keep track of all the karma; one has to keep feeding the computer. So from the morning the time you kill the first mosquito; and you do so many things; each one has to be punched; and everything that you deliberately do is a karma; and not only you do actions in this janma; anādi kāla pravritthāḥ; sañcita karma; āgāmi karma; prārabhda karma, all these karmas have to be stored in the computer.

And how many jīvas are there; human-beings alone if you take they are 6 billion or whatever it is. In India itself is 100 crores; china another 100; all over the world 600 crores human-beings are there; then mosquitos, ants, cockroaches are there; each one has sañcita karma; each one has prārabdhā karma; how to punch and not only that; every karma from this smallest karma to the biggest karma has to produce the result at the appropriate time; not one minute later; or one minute earlier; what type of computer is required.

And that computer is citraguptaḥ; called kālaḥ; kālaḥ tatvam or yamadharma rāja; that is why he is called dharma rāja, he gives the karma-phalam perfectly according to the justice or Lord of Karma. Therefore I am the kāla tatvam, which is responsible for the manifestation of every karma; and citra gupta is called it is kept secret; gupta means secret.

So vaisyas are generally called by the name gupta; in business most important thing is what; you should not tell the truth; śāstram accepts it; for vaiśya community the title given is guptā;

For kṣtriya community the title given is Varma; Varma means what kavacham; protection; protection of the society from other adharma; brāhmaṇās are called śarma; Rāmakṛṣṇā śarma nāmaḥ; śarma stands for quietude; peace, tranquility. Thus śarma varma gupta; why I am saying is all the karmas are kept gupta, secretly; that is why on a special day you do a special puja to citra gupta; there also you give something; we are not leaving him; we also bribe him so that some of the karmas, he will put under the carpet; So kālaḥ kalayatāmaham; mṛgāṇaṃ ca mṛgēndrō'haṃ; among the animals I am the lion.

More in the next class. because kālaḥ kalayatāmaham. Time up.

Hari Om

137 Chapter 10, Verses 30-33

ॐ

We are seeing Lord Kṛṣṇa's enumeration of Īśvara-vibhūtis or the glories of Īśvara. The entire creation being the manifestation of the Lord; the whole creation is the glory of the Lord only. Still Lord Kṛṣṇa chooses a prominent glorious things and beings in the creation and Kṛṣṇa claims those special things as his glory. And the purpose of this enumeration is that we can choose those objects as special objects in which the Lord can be invoked. For example, even though all rivers are the glory of the Lord only, Kṛṣṇa enumerates Gaṅgā as the glorious rivers and therefore we can worship Gaṅgā as a special river invoking the Lord in that. And that is why in our culture also; gaṅgā snānam is considered to be a special puṇyam because Kṛṣṇa enumerates that. So thus for upāsana purposes, this enumeration will be useful because everything enumerated here can serve as an alambanaṁ.

And as I said Kṛṣṇa enumeration is based on the things experienced here and many of the enumerations are based on the mythological stories also. And that is how we saw in verse No.30; daityānām Prahlādaḥ asmi. Kṛṣṇa assumes that we know the purāṇās and we also know the story of Hiraṇyakaśipu and Prahlāda, who even though born an asura, becomes the greatest devotee of the Lord. And Prahlāda stuthi in the Bhāgavatham is a very very well-known sthōthram; in which we find the highest Vēdānta talked about.

In the Bhāgavatham there are many sthuthi or sthōthram; Dhruva sthuthi; Prahlādaḥ sthuthi; Kunti sthuthi; Bhīṣma sthuthi; each character glories the Lord and the beauty is, in those sthōthram not only the purāṇic glories are there; the highest Vēdānta is also packed in those stuthi and in that Prahlādaḥ is also a great one; and Prahlādaḥ sthuthi in Bhāgavatham is famous; and as I said, this is an important thing because even though Prahlādaḥ is born an asura, by spiritual sādhanā he could change his character and become a jñāni.

Therefore one need not feel bad about one's janma; jāti does not indicate superiority or inferiority; what is important is karma and guṇa. If you remember the 4th chapter, I talked about the jāti brāhmaṇa; karma brāhmaṇa, and guṇa brāhmaṇa; jāti kṣatriya; karma kṣatriya; and guṇa kṣatriya. Do not focus on these jāti but focus on the right choice of karma; proper karma we have to choose and by doing that karma with proper attitude, we have to transform our character and ultimately we should become guṇa brāhmaṇāḥ; Prahlādaḥ became a guṇa brāhmaṇa. And therefore Kṛṣṇa takes this opportunity to name him Prahlādaścāsmi daityānām.

Then kālaḥ kalayatāmaham; I am the kālaḥ tatvam also who is responsible for the maintenance of the ripening of the karma at the appropriate time. Every karma that I do has to ripen and produce the phalam at the right time; and it requires the maintenance of the law of karma principle, and I am the kālatatvam who is responsible for that. And not only that when there is a group of people like a family or like an institution or even a class even. Simultaneously the karma of many people have to fructify. So my karma is fructifying in this class; and your karma is also fructifying; the karma of all the people.

And the most interesting thing is that somebody's puṇyam is also fructifying and some people's pāpam is also fructifying. If you are bored with the class and suffering unhappiness, then what karma is fructifying. In this class itself some people are exhausting the pāpam and some people are exhausting the puṇyam. What about me? I do not want to say, whether I am exhausting my puṇyam or pāpam.

Thus simultaneously one event taking place in the family has to take place in such a way, that the karma of every family member has to fructify. And imagine somebody falls sick and another member is serving that sick person. The sick person's pāpam is fructifying, and also he has got some puṇyam because another member in the family is serving that person, so that I have got some family member to serve me. It is my puṇyam; that they have to spend sleepless night for my sake, is their pāpam. So if they are keeping awake for your sake, their pāpam is being exhausted and your puṇyam is also being exhausted; and it is your puṇyam that you have got such a family member. Thus Bhagavān has to connect such people and karma has to fructify appropriately. Now you can imagine what a complicated order Bhagavān has to manage.

And that is why often in Bhāgavatham, Bhagavān names himself as kālaḥ. I am the intelligent kāla tatvam who makes the appropriate karma of the appropriate person to fructify at the appropriate time. Up to this we saw in the last class. So we have to come to the appropriate time to see the next line; what is that?

Mṛgāṇām ca mṛgēndrō'haṁ; all animals are also my manifestation; and every animal has got unique feature. And if you have doubt, watch the Animal Planet in the Television. Instead of some other serials; So whatever it is; I do not say that you should not watch them, but sometimes watch the Animal Planet, from the smallest ant to the big elephant; every animal has got a unique glory. And therefore all animals are my glory but among them who is the king of the forest; mṛgāṇām ca mṛgēndraḥ; mṛgēndraḥ means lion; lion is known as the king of animals; Therefore mṛgāṇām Indra, I am the lion among all animals.

And vainatēyaśca pakṣiṇām; all the pakṣis; pakṣi means a bird; pakṣaḥ means wing; and pakṣi means that which has got a wing. So two wings are there. Therefore pakṣau yasya sthaḥ iti pakṣi; the winged one; can you call aeroplane also pakṣi? According to definition, you can call an aircraft as a pakṣi. Because it has got wings; among the winged beings, the birds, I am Vainatēyaḥ; Vainatēyaḥ means Garudaḥ; Garuda is the son of Vinata; Vinata sutāḥ; Vainatēyaḥ; Garuda's mother is called Vinata; and Garuda is the most glorious bird, devoted bird, that it is mount or Vāhanam of Lord Viṣṇu. So pakṣi vāhana, Garuda vāhana, and in Vaiṣṇava sampradhāya, Garuda is given a prominent position; Garuda Azhvār; Azhvār means a great devotee; so the one who is immersed, azharathu; ஆழ்ந்து to get immersed; a devotee who immerses himself in the devotion of the Lord. Therefore I am that great devotee Garuda among birds.

पवनः पवतामस्मि रामः शस्त्रभृतामहं ।
झषाणां मकरश्चस्मि स्रोतसामस्मि जाह्नवी ॥ १०.३१ ॥

pavanaḥ pavatāmasmi rāmaḥ śastrabhṛtāmahaṁ |
jhaṣāṇāṁ makaraścāsmi srōtasāmasmi jāhnavī || 10.31 ||

अस्मि पवनः asmi pavanaḥ I am the wind पवताम् pavatām among purifiers अहं रामः ahaṁ rāmaḥ I am Rāma शस्त्रभृताम् śastrabhṛtām among weapon-wielders; अस्मि च मकरः asmi ca makaraḥ – I am the Makara (shark), झषाणाम् jhaṣāṇām among fish अस्मि जाह्नवी asmi jāhnavī I am the Ganges स्रोतसाम् srōtasām among the rivers

31. Among the purifiers, I am the wind, I am Rāma among the weapon wielders, I am the Makara among fish; I am the Ganges among the rivers.

Pavanaḥ pavatāmasmi; pavatām means among the purifiers so there are so many things which purifies. Gaṅgā jalam; or any water, if the water is pure. OK; in the local water if we take bath, we do not know whether we get cleaner by bath or dirty after the bath; we do not know; so pure water is capable of purifying; so water is a purifier; fire is a purifier. That is why for surgery, they heat all the instruments; it is for purification. In fact, cooking itself is a method of purification, why should we boil the water; it is purifier; and wind is also a purifier; so especially if things have got foul smell; dry it in the open; So smell will go. So Kṛṣṇa says among all the purifiers I am pavanaḥ; Vāyuḥ. So which moves; pavathē iti pavanaḥ; that which moves and also that which purifies, punāthi iti pavanaḥ; and that is why Ānjanēya is called Pavana suthaḥ; the son of Vāyu; Pavana sutha; Vāyu kumāraḥ. Therefore I am the purifier wind.

That is the reason we worship the wind also; not only we worship bhumi; we worship Agni ; and we worship vāyu also; Namastē vāyō; where did it come; In Śikṣavalli; in Śāntipāda;

नमो ब्रह्मणे । नमस्ते वायो । त्वमेव प्रत्यक्षं ब्रह्मासि ।
त्वमे वप्रत्यक्षं ब्रह्म वदिष्यामि ।

namō brahmaṇē | namastē vāyō | tvamēva pratyakṣaṁ brahmāsi |
tvamē vapratyakṣaṁ brahma vadiṣyāmi |

In which culture, a person will revel vāyu; what an attitude, because the Lord says I am in the form of vāyu also.

Then rāmaḥ śastrabhṛtāmaham. So among the Gods who wield different types of weapons? All our Gods have weapons; so Lord Śiva has got his paraśu hastha; he has got paraśu; he is called Pinākapāṇi; the one who has got a bow called Pinākam; and Rāma is called Kōthandapāṇiḥ; Viṣṇu is called Śārāṅgapāṇi; not Śārāṅgapāṇi; It is really Śārāṅgapāṇi. Thus all our Gods have got weapons. Why do they have weapons? Whoever has to protect Dharma will have to wield the weapons; We should know this clearly, there are some people who criticise our religion saying your gods are not compassionate; your gods really do not really loves; Our god only loves us; your gods do not love you; because all your gods have weapons; they frighten us; we also are idiots and listen to such stories. Let it be very clear; anybody who has to protect dharma.

धर्मसंस्थापनार्थाय सम्भवामि युगे युगे || ४ -८ ||

whoever has to do, will have to keep weapons, because to protect dharma; we have to use four upāyās; sāma, dhāna, bhēda and danḍa; sāma, dhāna bhēda are non-violent methods of protecting dharma; and we should attempt initially to protect dharma by non-violent method only and if non-violent methods fail; ultimately we will have to use violent method and violence for dharma rakṣaṇam is not wrong. Not only it is not wrong; it is right; and not only it is right, that alone is right.

And that is why in the case of Rāmāyaṇa also we find Rāma gives the last chance to Ravaṇā. In Kamba Rāmāyaṇam, it is said: Indrupōi nāLai vā இன்று போய், நாளை வா; i.e. Return today and come back tomorrow. And in Mahābhāratham also, last Kṛṣṇa goes as a messenger to avoid war; these are all non-violent methods; if all of them fails, violence has to be used; and it is not pāpam; it is puṇyam; that is why Kṛṣṇa advised Arjuna, dharmyāddhi yuddhācchrēyō'nyat kṣatriyasya na vidyatē (2.31). For Kṣatriya, dharma yuddham is a duty. Dharma yuddham produces puṇyam; and if a person takes to dharma yuddha; he will attain only veera svarga and never pāpam and naragam.

And not only Kṛṣṇa advised Arjuna to take to dharmayuddha; all our gods wield weapons only for the sake of dharma rakṣaṇam. It is exactly like I have told you often, a doctor amputating a particular organ for saving the patient; the first aim of the doctor is to cure the disease without any hurt or permanent handicap and if all the methods fail; and the disease will spread all over. Then he will have to take to amputation; and destroying Asuras, is amputation of a part of the society for saving the society.

tyajēt dēham kulasyārthē; you can sacrifice a person for protecting a family. grāmasyārthē kulam tyajēt; for saving a whole village, a family can be sacrificed; grāmaṁ janapadasyārthē, for saving the whole nation; a village can be sacrificed; ātmārthē pṛtvī tyajēt; for getting mōkṣa, you can sacrifice everything.

Anyway why I am saying all these is; our Gods are intelligently wielding weapons; it is not a defect, it is not a dūṣaṇam but it is a bhūṣaṇam.

Then in the case of devotee, how the weapons will be used; OK; in the case of rakṣasa the Lord has to use the weapons to destroy; but in the case of a devotees how will the Lord use the weapons; we say in the case of devotees also, the Lord will use the weapon for what; for destroying our inner enemy; kāma krōdhaḥ, lōbhaḥ, mōhaḥ, madaḥ mātsaryaḥ; all of them he destroys; that is why Lord's cakra is called Sudarśana cakram; Sudarśanam means what; it serves as a weapon of knowledge; darśanam; jñānam; and what type of darśanam; Sudarśana; right knowledge; Brahmajñāna ityarthāḥ; and by using the weapon of Samyak jñānam Lord destroys what? Ajñāna anthakāra.

Therefore Lord should wield weapon to destroy the external enemy as well as the internal enemy. And all Gods are great; but here Kṛṣṇa says among the weapon wielders, I am Rāmaḥ; Rāma is the greatest God among śastrabhṛt; And Rāma has got what bow, I told you, Khōdandapāṇi. So Sastrabhṛtām Rāmaḥ aham.

Then jhaṣāṇāṁ makaraścāsmi. Among the water animals; aquatic creatures. So there are millions of jīvarāśīs. In fact you should know that the creatures in the ocean are much more more than on the land; because on the earth only 1/3rd or so is the land; 2/3 is water. Therefore billions of jīvarāśīs are there; they are all called jhaṣaḥ; and among those aquatic creatures; I am Makaraḥ; I am Makara; Makara we can take the biggest one, the whale; so exactly is Makara is not known; different people give different meaning; some people say it is shark; some people say it is whale. And that is why I translated the word as Makara itself. So anyone you can take; whale being the biggest one, you can take that.

Then srōtasāmasmi jāhnavī; srōtas means rivers; that which flows; sṛu, sṛavathi to flow; srōtas means the flowing one; in short, the rivers, among all the rivers of the world, I am Jāhnavī; Do you remember the word Jāhnavī? I told you Gaṅgāvatharaṇam story only two weeks before; and I have not given sufficient time for you to forget; and therefore I hope you remember; from Jahnu mahaṛṣī's ears Gaṅgādevi came; and therefore Gaṅgā is called jahnu putri, jahnu kanya etc. and therefore Jāhnavī; I am Gaṅgā; and Gaṅgā as a river itself is considered to be a very sacred one; In fact they say Gaṅgā is agam pāpam gamayathi iti Gaṅgā; agaṅgā agaṅgā become Gaṅgā; agaḥ means pāpam; gamayathi, one who removes; therefore a dip in Gaṅgā is considered to be a great purifier;

मल निर्मोचनम् पुंसाम् जल स्नानम् दिने दिने ।
स कृत् गीतम्भसिस्थानम् ,संसार मलमोचनम् ॥

mala nirmōcanam puṁsām jala stnānam dinē dinē |
sa kṛt gītambhasisthānam, saṁsāra malaṁōcanam ||

And according to Vēdānta, Gaṅgā represents the Brahma Vidya pravāhaḥ; it symbolises the flow of spiritual knowledge; and why do we compare Gaṅgā to the flow of spiritual knowledge? Because there are so many common features between them.

Firstly, Gaṅgā originates from Lord Śivā's head for us; even though originally she was in Svarga lōka, when it came down on the earth; only Lord Śivā received and from Lord Śivā's head alone, Gaṅgā is coming down to bless us; And for brahma vidya also; who is the adi guru. So I have a guru; and you ask my guru; what will he say; I am not the originator; I got from my guru; if you ask him; he says My guru; Naturally the question will be who is the first guru; that is what we chant in the beginning fo the class; sadāśiva samārambhām. Therefore Gaṅgā comes from Śivā; Brahma vidya comes from Lord's Śivā's head; Therefore both are same; and the river flows from higher plane to lower plane. Because that is how water flows; gravitational flow from higher to lower; And similarly Brahma vidya also flows from guru to śiṣya. And generally Guru is seated on a higher plane; and śiṣyas are seated in lower plane and therefore brahma vidya teaching is flowing from the guru to śiṣya.

And that is why the gallery type of lecture hall we do not generally recommend. So there, the seats are like this; now guru has to pump the knowledge against the gravitational flow and even if Guru manages, naturally it flows out. So every day the śiṣya comes with an empty mind. So therefore it should be the other way; that is not the right method. Therefore Gaṅgā flows from higher to lower plane; Brahma vidya flows form guru to śiṣya; higher to lower. That is why in Muṇḍakōpaniṣad; parāvarē; parā avara; parā varām it was called parāvarām.

स ब्रह्मविध्यां सर्वविध्याप्रतिष्ठामथर्वय ज्येष्ठपुत्राय प्राह ॥॥ Muṇḍ.one I.1 ॥
अथर्वणे यां प्रवदेव ब्रह्माथर्वा तां पुरोवाचाङ्गिरे ब्रह्मविध्याम्
स भारद्वाजाय सत्यवाहाय प्राह भारद्वाजोऽङ्गिरसे परावराम् ॥ Muṇḍ.one I .2 ॥

....

atharvaṇē yām pravadeva brahmātharvā tāṁ purōvācāṅigarē brahavidhyām

Parāvarām means it flows from the higher plane; this is the second common feature.

Then the third common feature is Gaṅgā is a perennial river; unlike our local rivers which go dry; because even in the worst summer, Gaṅgā will have water melting, ice melted water would be there. That is why in summer, Gaṅgā is very cold; we think summer it would be pleasant; but in summer we feel the cold more, because the outside temperature is so high and the water is ice-melted water, the contrast is so much. Similarly brahma vidya parampara also is perennial; it never dries up. The flow never breaks;

What is the proof?; what is the proof?; very very brilliant question; it is like asking you the question; your family parampara is broken or not; what will be your answer; I am sitting here solidly 85 kgs; what other proof do you require; for the continuity of the santhathi; the very fact that even now we are able to learn Brahmailydia is proof for the perennial nature of the brahma vidya; this is the third common feature.

Then the fourth common feature is if you dip in Gaṅgā you feel very fresh and rejuvenated. Even if you walk 20 kilometers; once I walked from Gomukh to Gangōtri; 20 kms or something and I thought I cannot walk further; I had a dip in Gaṅgā in Gangōtri; and somehow got strength, another few kilometers I could walk. It is rejuvenating water; in the same way, if you dip in this teaching; what do mean by dipping in this teaching? Listening to this teaching; exposing yourselves to this teaching; is getting immersed in that; that also refreshes you; and therefore both are refreshing factors; rejuvenating factors.

Then the next common feature is: That is what I said sakrut gītāmbasi snānam saṁsāra malamōchanam; if you take in the Gīta river, you will be purified.

What is the next feature? Even though Gaṅgā flows from Gōmukh downwards up to Calcutta, you cannot take a dip anywhere you like. It is a dangerous risk, because you do not know where there is a whirlpool, where there are rocks, you do not what is the depth of the river, therefore you can take a dip only in that place, where there are steps available; they call it snāna ghāt; படிதூறை padithurai. Therefore that place which is specially built for taking the dip; that is called ghāt; just as you can take Gaṅgā Dip only in specified place.

Similarly the Brahma vidya snāna also, you cannot do anywhere, you have to go guru ghāt; the Brahma vidya guru represents, the special space. If you take a vēdāntic book and read, it is a dangerous preposition, because not only you will not understand, you will misunderstand. Therefore if you want to take a dip in Brahma vidya, you should go to the Guru ghāt. So thus in respects, Brahmavidya and Gaṅgā are similar. Therefore Kṛṣṇa says, srōtasāmasmi jāhnavī.

Verse 10.32

सर्गाणामादिरन्तश्च मध्यं चैवाहमर्जुना ।
अध्यात्मविद्या विद्यानां वादः प्रवदतामहम् ॥१०.३२॥

[sargāṇāmādirantaśca madhyaṁ caivāhamarjuna|
adhyātmavidyā vidyānām vādaḥ pravadatāmaham||10.32||](#)

32. Oh Arjuna! I am the beginning, the middle, and the end of the creations. (I am) Self-knowledge among all branches of knowledge. I am the constructive discussion among discussions.

sargāṇām, among the created objects or the creations, I am the ādiḥ antaḥ madhyaṁ ca. You can understand ādiḥ means beginning, antaḥ means end, madhyaṁ means middle. But this seems to be a repetition, the same thing has said in 20th verse also; 20th verse, which is the beginning of the Vibūthi, Kṛṣṇa says:

अहमात्मा गुडाकेश सर्वभूताशयस्थितः ।
अहमादिश्च मध्यं च भूतानामन्त एव च ॥ १०.२०॥

ahamādiśca madhyaṁ ca bhūtānāmanta ēva ca || 10.20 ||](#)

I am the beginning, middle and end. He has told there; and He is telling here; how to reconcile; because repetition is supposed to be a dōṣā. So it is called punarukthi dōṣā; how do we reconcile; the commentators point out that the one indicates the beginning, middle, and end spacially, another indicates beginning, middle and end, timewise. So whether you look at spacially or whether you look at timewise, I am the beginning, middle and end of the creation; one is sṛṣṭi, sthithi laya kāraṇam; and time-wise and space-wise I am the pātāla-lōka also and I am brahma lōkā also and I am the middle, Bhūlōkā also. Everything I am. So sargāṇām ādiḥ madhyaṁ antaḥ aham ēva Arjuna.

Then adhyātmavidyā vidyānām, Vidyā means any disciple of knowledge; any science is called Vidyā and there are so many branches of knowledge in the tradition also there are so many branches like the four vēdās; śikṣa, kalpa, vyākaraṇam, niruktham, chandaḥ, niruktham, jyōthiṣam etc. there are so many branches in the sciences and the modern sciences are many you know, and among all of them, Kṛṣṇa says: I am the spiritual knowledge; So adhyātma vidya aham asmi; because all other branches of science, deal with anātma only; whether it is physics, chemistry, biology, zoology, electricity or magnetism, etc. anything you know, they all deal with anātma, the material things; whereas adhyātma vidya is the one dealing with adhyātma vidya; ātma vidya. That is why in the 9th chapter, self-knowledge was titled rāja vidya; rāja vidya means the king among the knowledge or disciplines of knowledge.

And why do we say self-knowledge is the greatest one; you can give any number of reason. Just we will see a few; the first thing is that ātma is the only reality; everything else other than ātma is mithya or unreal; therefore all other branches deal with unreal; whereas this alone deals with satyam; so this is parā vidya and there are apara vidyas. In Kathōpaniṣad, Śankarācārya says, apara vidyāḥ avidyā; all the material knowledge is as good as ignorance, because they are dealing with non-substantial non-entity; Therefore being satya jñānam it is great.

And the second reason is, this is the only knowledge which liberates a person from the sense of limitation; which is the biggest problem of human being, the sense of limitation; the sense of physical limitation is expressing in the form of our desire to accumulate more and more and more because with myself I feel I am limited. So I have a sense of physical limitation, I have a sense of emotional limitation, that I am not loved by all; I am not loved by own children; no one enquires about me; they do not even check whether we are there or not. So all these are all what; emotional deprivation; emotional sense of limitation.

Then the next level of limitation is intellectual; any amount I know, I know that I do not know much; the greater I know, the greater the ignorance is exposed; and therefore, this sense of limitation is saṁsāra and any branch of knowledge other than self-knowledge; any other branch of knowledge, will not remove this limitation.

In fact, not only it will not remove, it will create only further limitation; like that scientists, Newton or Edison who said; I was only playing on the shore with a few pebbles; thousands of discoveries he made and at the time of death, he declared that I was playing with a few pebbles on the shore, while the vast ocean of truth is in front. Therefore, material sciences will only increase the sense of limitation; whereas this is the only knowledge which makes me say, pūrṇamadaḥ pūrṇamidam pūrṇāt pūrṇamudacyatē (do not get up and go ~ I am only quoting).

So I am pūrṇaḥ; that pūrṇātvam comes only by self-knowledge. Therefore this is liberating knowledge; it is the second reason;

If you want one more reason for superiority; this is the rarest of knowledge; most of the people do not come; Vyāsācārya said in the second-chapter of the Gītā, many people do not come to this knowledge and even among those come, many people do not understand. Therefore the number of people who know this, is very very very limited; And therefore it is the rarest of knowledge; therefore Kṛṣṇa says I am the spiritual knowledge.

Then the next one; vādaḥ pravadatāmaham; vādaḥ means a discussion for arriving at the truth; that is called vādaḥ. In our tradition, they talk about several types of discussions; anything you take, they have studied thoroughly; they talk about vādaḥ; they talk about jalpa, they about vithanda; they talk about jāthi; they talk about chalam; these are all different types of discussions. And vādaḥ or saṁvādaḥ between guru and śiṣya, both are meant for only one purpose and that is arriving at the truth; whereas in all other discussions, arriving at the truth is not the aim, winning the argument is the aim.

And that is why most of the discussions, both the people do not listen to the other; when I am arguing, the other person is preparing what he has to say, See in your house itself; most of the time, you will be doing that only. So when the other person is talking, we rarely listen; we are planning for our attack; so that means what; that person's speech, nobody is listening; and if that is true with regard to you; when you are shouting, not even speaking, do you think the other person is hearing; never; 99% be assured what we talk the other person is not listening; because when you start a discussion or dialogue, initially I start for the sake of knowledge, but soon my ego takes over and therefore I do not want to accept my ignorance. I do not want to accept my deficiency.

And that is why they say often, arguments or discussions produce more heat than light; that is why we use the expression, lighted argument we never say; heated argument. So vādaḥ means a discussion which never produces heat which never invokes my ego; I am all the time interested in knowing the truth; I am ready to accept I am wrong, if it is very clear to me. That means that I should be able to set aside my ego; and that is why when they come to vādāntic dialogue, the śiṣya is asked to do namaskāra. Doing namaskāra is symbolically declaring to the teacher; that Oh Teacher, I am ready to set aside my ego; I will listen without any prejudice; if I have got wrong notions, I am ready to drop the notion. If I listen with ego, I will never drop my notion; whenever I contradict you, in those case, you reject my mine, whenever I agree with you, you accept immediately; What that means; are you able to understand; listen again; whenever I contradict you, you reject me; whenever I am in agreement with you, you accept me; which means what; you hold on to your view alone; this is called filtered listening; whichever is convenient you take and the other things you are not able to drop.

That means I lack intellectual honesty; therefore a discussion wherein I set aside my ego; wherein I am ready to openly accept, not mentally verbally accept my mistake and I am interested in listening to other persons; it is the most difficult thing in any discussion or dialogue; our mind is itching to talk; and we are waiting for that person to take a breath; at that time you enter and you finish off your arguments; So if I can relaxedly listen to the other person and similarly I talk, that is called vādaḥ or saṁvādaḥ; that alone will lead to discovery of truth; and therefore Kṛṣṇa claims that I am vādaḥ.

So jalpa, vithanda etc. are there; for each one they give a definition; in one type of discussion, I am interested only in establishing my view; I am not interested in listening to the other; that is one type of wrong dialogue. In another one, I never establish my view; because I do not have; my only aim is demolishing your view; whatever it is; and why I want to demolish, only one reason, you are holding that view, that is why that is mistake; if the same view I hold, it is right; but if you hold that is not; so thus varieties of discussions are set, for each one, one one definition is given; and I do not want to get into those details; vādaḥ or saṁvādaḥ I am.

अक्षराणामकारोऽस्मि द्वन्द्वः सामासिकस्य च । अहमेवाक्षयः कालः धाताहं विश्वतोमुखः ॥ १०.३३ ॥

akṣarāṇāmakārō'smi dvandvaḥ sāmāsikasya ca |
ahamēvākṣayaḥ kālō dhātā'haṁ viśvatōmukhaḥ || 10.33 ||

अस्मि अकारः asmi akāraḥ I am the letter 'a' अक्षराणाम् akṣarāṇām among letters च द्वन्द्वः ca dvandvaḥ (I am) the dvandva सामासिकस्य sāmāsikasya among compounds अहम् एव aham ēva I alone am अक्षयः कालः akṣayaḥ kālaḥ the eternal time अहं धाता ahaṁ dhātā I am the dispenser, विश्वतोमुखः viśvatōmukhaḥ facing all the directions.

33. I am the letter 'a' 'अ' among letters; (I AM) the dvandva among compounds; I am the eternal time; I am the dispenser facing all the directions

So among the letters, what all things Kṛṣṇa takes you see; among the alphabetical letters, I am the letter ah अ. In any Indian language (in English language अ does not exist, you see - it starts with A, B, C, E, F, G..... z no अ ah in the list of 26 characters; when you are pronouncing a word then you may say अ. other अ you say; But in alphabetical letters अ does not exist at all; whereas in any Indian language you take, अ is the first letter, अ आ, इ, ई is the way it starts. So because अ is the most fundamental letter or the most fundamental sound; and why do we say that it is the most fundamental sound, because when you open your mouth and allow the wind to pass out, what will be the sound; what will come? Ah; when you open the mouth and allow the sound to come; letter anyone

Chinese, Russian, Japanese, let them open the mouth clearly and allow the sound to come, it will be ah alone; and that is why when we want the children to open the mouth, what we say, you say show ah; you do not say show a, or e, not u, not i; show ah; which means open the mouth; therefore ah is the basic sound and according to the science of phonetics, all the other letters are modified versions of ah alone. So ah is the pliable chappathi mavu like thing; you know that wheat māvu (dough), which can be shaped into any form;

Similarly अ ah is the basic sound and by changing your mouth and its position etc. you produce other sounds. For example, you allow the sound to come, and show your teeth; what will happen; it will become E. So when a dentist wants to show your teeth, he asks you to show E. So therefore you allow the sound and show your teeth, E. So thus U, k, kha, any alphabetic letter, ah modified, positioning by the aṣṭasthanāni; I said in ṣikṣavalli; 8 positions are there; to modify that; like a flute, the wind allowed pass out the same; but pressing the holes appropriately, one sound is modified in sa, ri, ga, ma; it is not a different wind; same wind; same playing; watch his mouth, it is only U; but by pressing that one sound is modified.

Similarly ah is the kāraṇa-akṣaram; all the others are kārya-akṣarāṇi; अ ah is the upādāna- kāraṇam for all alphabetic letters; and do you know who says this; Vēdā itself says this. The details in the next class.

Hari Om̐

138 Chapter 10, Verses 33-35

ॐ

Lord Kṛṣṇa continues with the enumeration of the vibhūthis of the Lord and we have seen up to verse no.32, and in the 33rd verse Lord Kṛṣṇa said अक्षराणामकारोऽस्मि akṣarāṇāmakārō'smi. Akṣarā means the alphabetic letters. And we look upon the alphabetic letters as sacred expression of Sarasvati herself.

आवर्णाम् नामरूपेण त्रिवर्णाम् प्रणवात्मिकाम् ।
लिप्यत्मन एकपञ्चशत् वर्णाम् वन्दे सरस्वतीम् ॥

āvarṇām nāmarupēṇa trivarṇām praṇavātmikām |
lipyatmana ēkapanchaśat varṇām vandē sarasvatīm ||

I worship Sarasvati-dēvi who is in the form of alphabetic letters. Lipyatmana ēkapanchaśat varṇām. So we look up all the alphabetic letters as Goddess Sarasvati herself and even among the alphabetic letters Lord Kṛṣṇa says, the most sacred letter is letter A.

And as I said in the last class, the letter अ A is supposed to be sacred because that is the basic letter which emerges from your mouth when you open the mouth without doing anything. To produce any other sound, इ, कु, अ, etc. you have to do something with your mouth. To say इ, you have to show your teeth. Say इ without showing the Teeth; you will not be able to. To say उ, you have to spout your mouth; for all other letters, a particular effort is required, but effortless sound which you can produce by just opening the mouth is अ. And therefore according to the science of phonetics, akāra is the basic sound which is a flexible sound which alone is modified into all other letters. Just as a pliable lump of clay is the basic-cause out of which you can shape varieties of things; similarly the letter A is like a pliable lump of clay which can be converted into इ, उ, etc. Therefore अ akhāra is kāraṇa-akṣarāṇām and all other letters are its products; modifications; kāryam.

And since the cause alone manifests in the form of all effects, just as clay alone manifests as all the products, according to vēda, the letter alone manifests as all the other alphabetic letters and therefore there is a vēdic statement; अकारः वै, सार्वः वाक् akharaḥ vi, sarvā vāk; the letter A alone is in the form of the alphabetic letters and the alphabetic letters rearranged alone is all the dictionary words. Therefore A multiplies into alphabetic letters, alphabetic letters rearranged are all the words of the dictionary. Therefore extending, you can say अ alone is every word, अकारः वै, सार्वः वाक् akharō vai sarvā vāk; all the words are nothing but the modification of the basic sound. And in our tradition every alphabetic letter has got a presiding deity; every alphabetic letter a presiding deity; and for the letter अ, the adṣṭāna dēvathā is Brahmāji, the creator himself.

So letter अ a is Brahmāji. In Mahānyāsa mantra this occurs. And why do we have Brahmāji as the presiding deity; because Brahmāji is the creator of all the objects of the world; the letter अ is the cause of all the alphabetical letters. And therefore अ stands for Brahmāji; and therefore Kṛṣṇa says akṣarāṇām madhyē, among all alphabetical letters, I am alphabet अ.

Then the next line says: dvandvaḥ sāmāsikasya ca. In Sānskrīt grammar especially, we have a particular usage called sāmāsaḥ. Sāmāsaḥ means formation of compound words; by joining simple words.

So you take two simple words and join them together by adding a hyphen in between, then it becomes a compound word. And therefore it is called Sāmāsaḥ; samyak asyathē iti Sāmāsaḥ; that which is properly and beautifully arranged is called Sāmāsaḥ. Of course, in English language also, and in other languages also, we have got simple compound words, but in Sānskrīt grammar it is a well-developed usage;

And by forming this compound words, the advantage is use save some preposition; for example, suppose somebody says: I have brought pūja-materials; pūja is one word; material is another word; you want to say: I have brought material for pūja; but you do not want to say the word for and you want to save some time and energy. And therefore what do you do; you say pūja-material; pūja material is compound word; the syntactical between them is through the preposition 'for'; you save the preposition 'for' by adding hyphen. I went to Śivā temple; Śivā-temple. Now what you really say is I went to a temple where Lord Śivā is worshipped; you do not want to say so many words; Śivā-temple; I have brought Gaṅgā-water; Gaṅgā is one word and water is another word; you want to say I have brought water from Gaṅgā; you swallow the preposition 'from' by adding a hyphen. Are you attending Adayar-classes? Adayar-classes; you put a hyphen, the classes conducted in Adayar. So thus we can form a compound word, by joining two simple word and adding a hyphen in between, the hyphen indicates that it is a compound word, and by forming a compound, you swallow preposition and that by that you save time and energy. So recently they had Agra-summit. So Agra summit means a summit in Agra. Then suppose I ask, do you know Agra-summit episode. Then it becomes Agra hyphen summit hyphen episode. An episode which took place during the summit in Agra. Instead of writing this lengthy sentence; Agra-summit-episode; it becomes a sāmāsaḥ; a compound. Thus a compound can be formed by forming two words, by joining three words, and the advantage is you save preposition.

And how do you know what preposition is to be used? From the context you know; Gaṅgā water means water from Gaṅgā; Pooja material if you say, material from we will not say, we will say material for pūja. And Adayar-class means not classes from Adayar or for Adayar; but classes conducted in Adayar. So in which place, which preposition is to be used, we get to know from the context. I went to Śivā mandir; temple, you know, in which Śivā is worshipped. I went to Viṣṇu mandir; I went to Birla mandir. What is the meaning; a mandir in which Birla is installed? No; there you know, a mandir which is built by Birla; so context you have to use; I have told you often; when you say turmeric power; powder of turmeric. Chilli powder; power of chilli; tooth powder; power of teeth? Powder for brushing the teeth. In Tamil, it is still interesting. Manja podi; podi of manjal; coffee podi; podi of coffee; mukku podi; So this snuff powder; In Tamil it is called mukku podi for the mooku.

So thus the resolution of a compound is one of the beautiful exercises we have in Sānskrīt grammar and this compound formation is very systematically done as a science and we have got several such compounds; four basic compounds are enumerated and this four are later expanded into 7 types of compound, then these types of compound are further expanded into 35 types of compounds. Thus we have got many compounds called sāmāsaḥ; and these group of compounds are called sāmāsikam; Sāmāsikām means sāmāsānām samūham; the group of compound, tatpurusha sāmāsaḥ; bahuvrihi sāmāsaḥ; karmadhāraya sāmāsaḥ; thigu sāmāsaḥ; dvandva sāmāsaḥ; avyayibhāva sāmāsaḥ. When we were studying, we were joking; samosa; samosa; etc. It is not samosa; it is sāmāsaḥ; and in Sānskrīt we can form compounds which can contain tens of words joined together.

And in Sānskrīt literature like Kādambari etc. a word will start in the beginning of a page and it will go on and on and on and the word (not sentence) will end at the end of that page. So Kalidāsa writes Shyamala Dandakam, full of such beautiful compounds.

Like that Sānskrīt can have innumerable compounds and therefore Kṛṣṇa does not want to leave it out. Therefore He says among compounds, there is a particular type of compound called dvandva sāmāsaḥ; I do not want to get into the details of dvanda samāsa; it will become a grammar class. Therefore I am leaving you from that pain; dvandva is the name of a particular type of sāmāsaḥ; and Kṛṣṇa says I am dvandva compound, among the compound.

And then ahamēvākṣayaḥ kālō; and I am the kāla-tatvam which puts an end to everything; but which itself does not have an end. So therefore ākṣayaḥ kālaḥ means inexhaustible time. So everything else gets exhausted in time, but the time continues throughout. In fact even during praḷaya kālaḥ; everything is resolved, but kāla is there, working potentially. And because of the continuity of kāla alone, the next cycle of sṛṣṭi is possible. Do therefore Kṛṣṇa says I am the kāla tatvam which is inexhaustible; ākṣayaḥ kālaḥ.

And dhātā ahaṁ; dhātā means karma-phala dhātā; the one who gives appropriate result for appropriate action; to the appropriate person, at the appropriate time; so I have got a cosmic computer; which cannot have (what virus, red hover) which will never be struck by any virus; a computer which has got in records, all the karmas of all the jīvās, done during all the time; the karma of ant, plant, animals, birds, living beings, dēvās, asurās, everything I have got, and at the right time, I give the karma-phalam; and therefore aham karma-phala-dhātā asmi; the ordainer.

And therefore only viśvatōmukhaḥ; my face is turned in all the 10 directions; because I have to see who is doing what karma; who is doing the mischief; so I observe all the karmas of all the people, register them and give the result at the appropriate time; therefore viśvatō mukha; the face turned in all directions.

saṁ bāhubhyāṁ namati saṁ patatraindyāvāpṛthivī janayan

So viśvata-cakṣuḥ; viśvatōmukhaḥ; I see everywhere.

Verse 10.34

अहं मृत्युः ahaṁ mṛtyuḥ I am death सर्वहरः च sarvaharaḥ ca the destroyer of everything

kṣamā and patience.

34. I am death, the destroyer of everything; (I am) the source of future prosperity. Among 'women' (I am) fame, prosperity. Speech, memory, intelligence, fortitude and patience.

Āhaṁ sarva-haraḥ mṛtyuḥ asmi. So I am the greatest robber, as it were, who will take away everything from a jīva. So a robber may take away so many of the things; but kāla is one which snatches everything from us; because we can never carry anything with us at the time of death. There is a beautiful slōka, I forget; you drop all your property at home. And all the relations come up to the street (like the one in Tamil: வீடு வரை உறவு; வீதி வரை மனைவி; காடு வரை பிள்ளை; கடசிவரை யாரேரா; vīṭu varai uravu; vīti varai maṇaivi; kāṭu varai piṭṭai; kaṭacivarai yārō). Like that one is there in Sānskrīṭ; So one by one you drop, and when you leave this body you cannot carry anything; what is that; what you carry is your own puṇyam and pāpam; other than that nothing can you carry. It is taken away by whom; mṛtyuḥ. Therefore mṛtyuḥ, Yamadharmā Rāja is called sarva-haraḥ; the one who takes away everything from you.

That is why they tell that story; a person had a challenge; a competition it seems; he had property; landed property; therefore he called people interested in acquiring; And he said it seems from morning 6 a.m. Sunrise up to evening sunset, you run; and whatever be the distance that you run, the whole land up to that distance will be yours; a particular width we have to understand; the whole land up to that; who will leave that offer free; you will have to only run. So this person thought I will acquire maximum and started running; running, running, covered lot of miles, and he was seeing the sun setting and 5-10 minutes more or there. And therefore he took all his energy and strength and mustered and ran and at the time of the sunset he had that extra energy; and then he ran and fell down and died.

Now tell me; what happens to all the properties he had by running; mṛtyuḥ sarva-haraḥ. So whatever you acquire, Yamadharmā rāja takes away at the time of death, and therefore Kṛṣṇa says; I am that destroyer; saṁhāra tatvam also.

Udbha-vaśca bhaviṣyatām. And I am the udbhavaḥ; the resource or source of all the future prosperity or future wealth; because if you have to produce anything in future, they all must be there potentially; we can never generate anything if that provision is not there and Kṛṣṇa says that provision is myself. Therefore udbhavaḥ means I am the source or womb of all future prosperity; bhaviṣyatām; Śankarācārya says: Bhāvi kalyāṇānām aham udpathi sthānam.

Then kīrtiḥ śrīḥ vāk nārīṇām; means among various dēvathās, the female dēvathās are here referred to as Nāris; and we have got dēvathās presiding over various thing. And as I said, we have got Lakṣmidēvi presiding over wealth; we have got Sarasvati dēvi presiding over knowledge. We have got Parvathi-dēvi presiding over śakti; thus we have got presiding deities called adiṣṭāna-dēvathā. And not only we have got adiṣṭāna-dēvathā for these things.

In fact, anything in the creation has got an adīṣṭāna-dēvathā; Why we have like this, because anything in the creation is governed by certain laws of creation; if you take the earth in general; earth is governed by so many laws; because of those laws, earth is going round its own axis, and earth is going round the sun also; that means earth is governed by so many universal laws.

Similarly every organ of ours is governed by so many laws. Thunder, lightening, gravitation; anything you mention; anything within creation must be governed by inexorable laws of the Lord and if those laws are functioning, it is only because of an intelligence principle governing those laws. Because any law can function perfectly only when there is a governing principle and that is why whenever government introduces a law, an officer is required to take care of that. Once there are traffic laws, you require traffic police; only then the law will be maintained. Any law can exist, only if there is a law governing intelligence principle. And therefore any object in creation is governed by laws and any law is governed by an intelligent principle and adding these two together, we require an intelligent principle to preside over every object.

One has to go in two steps. From object to object law one has to go; from that law to the intelligence governing that law. Joining these together we say, every object is a governed by an adīṣṭāna-dēvathā.

Bhumi has got bhumi-dēvathā; jalam has got jala dēvathā. And I told you that every alphabetic letter has got its dēvathā; every organ in our body has a dēvathā and if you invent a new thing, radio invented, radio dēvathā; means what; radio is functioning because a certain set of laws. And intelligence governing that is called dēvathā. So every dēvathā is an aspect of Īśvara or God only. So every dēvathā is nothing but an aspect of a facet of the Lord, the total intelligence.

And therefore we have got Dēvathā for what; kīrtiḥ; kīrtiḥ means fame; name and fame we say; that fame also is governed by certain principles and the deity presiding over the face principle is called kīrtiḥ-dēvathā.

Similarly Vāk-Dēvathā. Vāk-dēvi vadhanāmbhujē vasathumē trilōkyā mātha śubhā; Vāk dēvi is Vāk-dēvathā.

Then smṛtiḥ; memory is another power or faculty which is governed by again another set of neurological laws; if some of the wires are not properly connected, memory gone; amnesia; that word you forget; amnesia is the problem of loss of memory. When he went to the doctor saying I have amnesia, the doctor said: first pay my fees; thereafter I will treat, or you will forget that; like that; so memory power is a very important faculty which is again governed by the laws in the brain.

Then medhā; intelligence-principle, we do not know why brains are very intelligent; we do not know why some brains are very close to clay. We do not know. So there are again, it is not accidents; there are laws governing that; and that dēvathā is called medhā dēvathā; and we have got in vēdah prayers directed to each one; mēdhā sukhtam; a special prayer for mēdhā dēvi;

त्वया जुष्टा नु दमा ना दुरुक्तान् बृहद्वदेम विदथे सुवीराः ।

ōṃ mēdhādēvī juṣamāṇā naāgā"dviśvācībhadrā sumanasyamānā । tvayā juṣṭā nu damā nā duruktān bṛhadva dēma vidathē suvīrāḥ । tvayā juṣṭa ṛṣirbhavati dēvi tvayā brahmāgata śrī ruta tvayā ।
tvayā juṣṭa ścitraṃ vindatē vasusānō juṣasva draviṇō na mēdhē ॥

मयि मेधां मयि प्रजां मय्यग्निस्तेजो दधातु
मयि मेधां मयि प्रजां मयीन्द्र इन्द्रि यं दधातु मयि मे धां मयि प्रजां मयि सूर्यो भ्राजो दधातु॥ mayi mēdhām mayi prajāṃ mayyagnistējō dadhātu mayi mēdhām mayi prajāṃ mayīndra indri yaṃ dadhātu mayi mēdhām mayi prajāṃ mayi sūryō bhrājō dadhātu ॥

Mēdhā dēvi is very important; therefore medhā dēvathā.

Then dhṛtiḥ; dhṛtiḥ means perseverance; fortitude; Will power is called dhṛtiḥ; it is that faculty of a person by which a person continues the effort even if there is failure repeatedly. That capacity by which a person continues in spite of repeated failures; that capacity is called, that resilience, to get up again after each fall, the rubber-ball like resilience.

yatha kaṇḍuka pathēna; udpathathi arya padanāpi ।
dadathu anaryartha pathanam, mṛth pinḍa pathanam yathā ॥

Suppose a wet clay lump is dropped down; clay-lump. What samāsam? Lump of clay; clay samāsam; śaṣṭi tatpuruṣa samāsam. So when clay lump falls, it stays there; it will never get up; you have to push. Whereas when rubber ball falls; what is the samāsam rubber-ball; a ball made of rubber; not for the sake of rubber; made of rubber; we have so many compound in English; we do not think that is all; when rubber ball falls what happens; again it comes up; again how forcibly it comes; as forcibly as it falls; it comes up.

Similarly we have two types of people, one fails, he renounces; tyagē naikē. So this kind of sanyāsa becomes problem-sanyāsa; there is another person; even if he fails, he attempts again; he attempts again; that capacity is called dhṛtiḥ.

And there also we have a dēvathā called dhṛtiḥ dēvathā; and therefore Kṛṣṇa says among all the dēvathās; nārīṅām, dēvathānām madhyē, I am all these dēvathās; which are noble faculties of the mind.

and kṣamā; the word kṣamā has several meanings; we can take it as patience; forbearance; the capacity to wait, where you have to wait; when the red signal comes; they have written something; recently they have introduced; relax. If you do not have that; what do we do, by inch inch we proceed, and we are in the middle of the road; by the green signal; comes we are already on the other side. Let the green signal come; if you are behind a car, the moment green signal comes; you press the car; all the cars; let the front car start; half a second; no kṣamā. So therefore you watch yourselves; if you are driving the traffic signal; whether you have kṣamā or not; that is also a faculty; Kṛṣṇa says I am kṣamā dēvathā.

Verse 10.35

बृहत्साम तथा साम्नां गायत्री छन्दसामहम् ।
मासानां मार्गशीर्षोऽहम् ऋतूनां कुसुमाकरः ॥ १०.३५ ॥

[bṛhatsāma tathā sāmṇām gāyatrī chandasāmaham |
māsānām mārḡśīrṣo'hamṛtūnām kusumākaraḥ || 10..35 ||](#)

तथा tathā moreover बृहत्साम bṛhatsāma (I am) the bṛhatsāma (a class of Ṣṛuti) साम्नाम् sāmṇām among Sāma mantras अहं गायत्री āham gāyatrī I am the Gayatri; छन्दसाम् chandasām among the Vēdic metres; अहं मार्गशीर्षः aham mārḡśīrṣaḥ I am known as Mārḡśīrṣa मासानाम् māsānām among the months कुसुमाकरः kusumākaraḥ among the seasons ऋतूनाम् ṛtūnām I am the spring, the flowering season..

35. Moreover (I am) the Bṛhatsāma among sāma-mantras; I am the Gāyatrī among Vēdic mantras; I am the Mārḡśīrṣa among months; I am spring among seasons.

Sāmṇām madhyē; among all the sāma mantras; that is the mantras of the sāma vēda; sāma mantras; again a compound, mantras of sāma vēda. So there is one mantra, known as bṛhad sāma. Bṛhad sāma is the proper name of a sāma mantra; it is supposed to be a very auspicious mantra: it starts with au ho e thaavam iti havamahē; which is glorification of the Lord and the Lord being great and since this mantra is glorified the great Lord; it is called bṛhad sāma. It is not the mantra is big; mantra is relatively small only. Only 2 minutes or 3 minutes chanting; even though the mantra is smaller; mantra is glorifying the Lord, who is the infinite one and therefore it is called Bṛhad sāma;

Bṛhadīśvara sthavana sāma; Bṛhadīśvara temple you have called; why called Bṛhadīśvara; huge one; so this mantra glorifies the infinite Lord; it is called bṛhad sāma; a very popular one; among sāma vēdīs, So therefore Kṛṣṇa says; I am bṛhad sāma mantra.

Then the next one. gāyatrī chandasāmaham. So I am the gāyatrī mantra among all the vēda mantras.

The word chandas has two meanings; one meaning is a vēdic meter is called chandas; a vēdic-mantra is also called chandas. So you know what is vēdic meter; not meter-centimeter; meter the law by which a line of poetry is governed; in poetry writing, there are rules as to how many words can be there in one verse; and one line whom many letters can be there; and that arrangement of the poem is called metre. And in Sānskrīt; we have got hundreds of meters; anuṣṭup, tṛṣṭup. In Sandhyāvandanam itself we say. gāyatrī uśnik, anuṣṭup, bṛhathi, tṛṣṭup, jagatya chandāmsi; gāyatrī uśnik, anuṣṭup, bṛhathi (it will not enter the mouth itself) (like cursing someone) in that meter list also; gāyatrī is enumerated first; so thus a vēdic meter is called gāyatrī; a vēdic meter is called chandas; a vēdic-mantra is also called chandas; both meanings can be taken; But for convenience, I am taking the meaning vēdic-mantra; so among the vēdic-mantras; I am gāyatrī.

The word gāyatrī also two meanings; one is a particular type of meter is called gāyatrī meter. So what type of meter; a meter in which three lines are there; and in each line, 8 letters are there. So aṣṭākṣarā tripatha gāyatrī; 3 padams, 3 lines, and 8 letters in each, is called gāyatrī meter.

And also there is a second meaning; gāyatrī refers to a particular mantra also; gāyatrī mantra which is very very popular, today happens to be gāyatrī japam for some people in which they do gāyatrī japa avṛthi. Therefore Kṛṣṇa says: among vēdic mantras, I am gāyatrī mantra; and why gāyatrī mahima is very elaborately said in scriptures. There is a book itself; entire book deals with only Gāyatrī-mahima. To just tell you a few, because Gāyatrī-japa and it is a popular mantra.

The main glory of gāyatrī is that it is supposed to be vēda sāraḥ. So Brahmāji wanted to take the essence of the vēda; not all the vēdas, people do not have time to chant the whole vēda; and therefore what did Brahmāji do.

thrisra ēva tu vēdēbhyaha, padam padam aduduhat ।
dadi thrichōsya gāyatrīyah, param ēṣṭi prajāpathi ॥

Pramēṣṭi prajāpathi Brahmāji took the main three Vēdas. So three vēdas are considered to be main ones, because they are predominantly used in rituals; Atharvaṇa vēda is not much used in rituals and therefore they do not include in the three vēdas.

And what did Brahmāji do? He wanted to take out the sāraḥ; because the vēdas are voluminous; therefore what did he do; he took a mixi and put the vēda and dirrr..... and then the vēda was crushed and the rig vēda sāra came and you know what is the rig vēda sāraḥ; tasya vidhur varēṇyam; the first line of gāyatrī is rig vēda sāraḥ.

And then he took out the yajur vēda and put in the mixi and then crushed and took the essence; yajur vēda sāraḥ he got; what is that; bhargō dēvasya dhimahi.

Then he put the sāma vēda in the mixi; mixi is nothing but tapas; he performed the tapas for taking out the essence and then he got: dhihyō yōna pracōdayat; therefore this verse says.

Thisraivētu vēdēbhya pādādu duhat; adudhuhat. Means what; Brahmāji extracted one one pāda of gāyatrī; pāda, pāda means the line, from the three vēdas and he got the mantra which is originally called sāvithri mantraḥ.

It is called Sāvithri mantra; because the presiding deity is Sūrya Bhagavān and in Sānskrīt Sūrya is called Savitha dēvathā; that is why we say; sāvitrā viśvāmitraḥ niṣṭṛgāyatrī chndaḥ. Savitā dēvatāḥ. Since Savitha, Sun is the dēvathā, it is called Sāvithri mantraḥ; and since the mantra it is called in Gāyatrī meter, it is also called gāyatrī; from the stand point of meter, it is called gāyatrī mantra; from the stand point of the dēvathā worshipped, it is called sāvithri-mantraḥ.

At the time of upanayanam ceremony, the brahmacāri prostrates in front of his father, guru and he only says: Savithrim bhō anubrūhi. There Savithri means gāyatrī mantraḥ; and since gāyatrī is the essence of the vēda, Gāyatrī is called vēda itself; and therefore when the father wants to initiate the boy into vēda, he teaches him Gāyatrī mantraḥ.

So that whenever he chants Gāyatrī, he has repeated the whole vēda. So if you are repeating gāyatrī, you can say that daily you are chanting the entire vēda; but do not tell the secret: you daily chant the entire vēda because Gāyatrī is the essence. āyātu varadā dēvi akṣaram brahma saṁhitam; Brahma saṁhitam means vēda tulya; Brahma means vēda; Brahma saṁhitam is equal to vēda.

Therefore gāyatrī pārāyaṇam is equal to not one vēda pārāyaṇam; but three vēda pārāyaṇam. And by that chanting this gāyatrī mantra; this person is protected from all the pāpās and that is why it is called: gāyatrī gāyantām trāyatē iti gāyatriḥ. Gāyanthām means what; whoever chants; three means what; Sānskrīt means trāyatē; protector; Gāyatrī means that dēvathā; which serves like a kavacham, which immunizes the people; Kandṛṣṭi Gaṇapathi is spreading like wild fire; in every house it is hanging; kan dṛṣṭi Gaṇapathi; we are all worried; that our lives are affected by dṛṣṭi; all the time we are worried about all the evil forces of pāpa; for invisible negative forces, your protecting armour must be also invisible and that invisible armour is generated by Gāyatrī.

Then people ask; how all the people are not allowed to chant Gāyatrī? If Gāyatrī is so great; and how come many are not allowed to chant. It is not like that; I have told you. We have two types of Gāyatrī; Shroutha Gāyatrī; and Smārtha Gāyatrī; Shroutha gāyatrī appears in the vēdas; primary scriptures; Smārtha Gāyatrī occurs in the smṛtis, the secondary scriptures; Shroutha gāyatrī can be chanted by anyone who has been initiated into the upanayana ceremony and if a person has not been initiated; male or female, he also can chant gāyatrī; he or she also can chant gāyatrī; but the prescribed Gāyatrī is Smārtha-Gāyatrī.

Therefore everybody has got this two; one of these two Gāyatrīs; Shroutha Gāyatrī is तस्य वित्तिवरिण्यम् । भर्गो देवस्य धीमहि । धियो यो नः प्रचोदयात् ॥ tasya vitirvarēṇyam | bhargō dēvasya dhīmahi | dhiyo yō naḥ pracōdayāt || ओम् भूर्भुवसुवः om bhūrbhuvasuvaḥ is not part of Gāyatrī; Gāyatrī begins from tasya vidhur varēṇyam; but for the purpose of japa, om bhur bhuva suvaḥ is added; so this is shroutha gāyatrī.

यो देवः सवितास्माकम् धियो धर्माति गोचराः ।
प्रेरयेत् तस्य यत् भर्गः तत्त्वरेण्य मुपास्महेः ॥

yō dēvaḥ savitāsmākam dhiyō dharmāti gōcarāḥ |
prērayēt tasya yat bhargaḥ tatvarēṇya mupāsmahēḥ ||

perhaps I will get it written on the Board in the next class; anybody can chant this sacred thread is not necessary at all; male or female. But shourtha gāyatrī one has to go through the purificatory rite, this is the convention.

And what is the essence of this gāyatrī mantrah; the meaning is very simple: savithu dēvasya tat varēṇyam bhargaḥ vayam dhīmaḥ; vayam dhīmaḥ; we are meditating upon. Tat varēṇyam bhargaḥ; that glorious effulgence; bhargaḥ effulgence; varēṇyam; glorious, sacred; better sacred. Of whom? Savithu dēvasya of Sun God; So we are meditating upon the sacred effulgence of Sun God.

And why are we meditating and worshipping? What do we get out of it; what will I get? Yaḥ naḥ dhiyaḥ pracōdayāt; which effulgence activates our intelligence; dhiyaḥ means buddhi. So therefore, I worship the solar effulgence, because it is supposed to active my brain, mēdhā śakti increases, memory power increases; and that is why brahmacāris, the students, gāyatrī was emphasised; because it gives every student; one is brahmacāri or not; student means memory power should be there; or in the next class, whether it is Gīta or Upaniṣad, doubt will arise; in that also, whether it is the 9th or 10th chapter; minimum memory should be there; So therefore, gāyatrī activates buddhi śakti; and therefore Kṛṣṇa says, I am Gāyatrī Mantraḥ; if a person does not chant the gāyatrī; he loses all the advantages of being a vaidika-puruṣaḥ.

And it is said in tradition; without chanting gāyatrī; whatever other mantras he chants, they all will not be that effective; on the other hand, if he chants gāyatrī, then no other mantras is required at all. that Gāyatrī mahima said; it is very much elaborated in various sāstra granthās. Therefore Kṛṣṇa says; I am Gāyatrī.

And there also the Gāyatrī itself is divided into two; tat savithu varēṇyam (one reading, tat savithu varē niyam is another reading); if you split it and say varē niyam, there will be 24 letters, if you join and say tatsa vidhu varēṇyam, it will have 23 letters; 24 lettered Gāyatrī is called gāyatrī; 23 lettered Gāyatrī is called nichir-Gāyatrī.

And during sandhyāvandhanam; one is supposed to chant nichir-gāyatrī; That is why they say sāvitṛā ṛṣiḥ viśvāmitraḥ nicṛrgāyatrī chandaḥ | savitā dēvatāḥ; then you have to say varēṇyam; for japa; hōmam Gāyatrī. Those rules are said in the scripture; any way that is an aside point.

Then māsānāṃ mārگاśīrṣō'ham; among the 12 months of an year; I am mārگاśīrṣa month, the December 15 to January 15; whether it is true for others or not; for Madras it is true because it is the only month in which the temperature is relatively tolerable; and all other times we have only three; hot, hotter and hottest; and that is why all the people come only during that period only; foreigners also; visit and we have also that music we keep at that time; Mārگاśīrṣa month is supposed to be the sacred month; that is why so many religious rituals activities are kept at that time.

More we will see in the next class.

Hari Om

139 Chapter 10, Verses 35-42

ॐ

Enumerating the glories of the Lord, Kṛṣṇa said in the 35th verse, bṛhatsāma tathā sāmnāṃ gāyatrī chandasāmaham; I am the bṛhatsāma mantra, among the sāma mantrās, among the vēdic mantrās in general, I am gāyatrī mantrās and I said that gāyatrī is considered to be a representative of the entire vēda and that is why when vēda upadēśa has to be done, they do gāyatrī upadēśa at the time of upanayanam and vēda is otherwise called brahma.

And therefore Gāyatrī upadēśa is called Brahma upadēśa; that is why even now when they have the sacred thread ceremony, they right Brahmōpadēśam; Brahmōpadēśam is equal to vēda upadēśa; vēdōpadeśam is equal to Gāyatrī-upadēśa; because Gāyatrī is equal to vēda. Not only that in Chandōgya upaniṣad, Gāyatrī is itself presented for meditation; as Brahman. Not only Gāyatrī is considered to be Vēda; Gāyatrī is considered param̃ brahma itself, because such an upāsana is prescribed in Chandōgya upaniṣad and it is analysed in brahma sutra also. In short Gāyatrī is very very sacred and it occurs in the rig vēda originally and it occurs in the yajur vēda also and it occurs even in sāma vēda; In all the three vēdas, gāyatrī mantra occurs.

And then Kṛṣṇa said māsānām mārگاśīrṣō'ham; among all the months, I am the mārگاśīrṣa month, that is the month between December 15-January 15; Margazhi māsam in Tamil, And Kṛṣṇa chooses this month, according to some commentators because that is the month when the earth is rich with varieties of grains and the phalams; sasya phala adyathvath; because after the rainy season, the earth must be ready for sowing the seed and lot of grains can be harvested at that time and therefore because of prosperity or richness of the earth, sasya phala adyatvath, mārگاśīrṣatvath uchyath.

And there are some other commentators who point out that because that is considered to be the dawn of the early morning of the dēvās. For the dēvās or dēvathās, our one year is equal to one day; because their time scale is different, and dēvās' day is supposed to begin from Sankramaṇa day (Thai poṅgal) that is supposed to be the beginning of the day for the dēvās. And just before the beginning of the day, the time is called brahma muhurtha; sātvik time, early morning between 4-30-6.00 is considered to be brahma muhurtha. If dēvās' day begins with January 15, just before the 15th January, that duration must be brahma muhurtha for the dēvathās; and brahma muhurtha is supposed to be a sātvic period and therefore that month is considered is very good for all types of spiritual sādhanā; all types of religious practices. Because of that reason also, Kṛṣṇa chooses mārگاśīrṣa month.

Then ṛtūnām kusumākaraḥ; among the six seasons, vasantha, varṣa, śarat; hēmantha, śīśira; and the grīṣma; six seasons are there; one year is divided into six seasons or in Sānskrīt six ṛtu; ṛtu means a season; and one season last for 2 months. So grīṣma ṛtu is summer; then vasantha, once upon a time, that calendar was popular. Now we follow only English calendar; therefore we do not pakṣa, do not ṛtu; do not know ayanam; and therefore I have to tell all these things; grīṣma; and then Vasantha; and then varṣa; then śarat; and Hēmantha and śīśira. In English we have got only four seasons; words for four seasons; summer, spring, autumn, winter; the rainy season, and pre-winter season is called Hēmantam; the six ṛtus are there; Of the six ṛtus, I am the vasantha ṛtu, because that is the season when all the flower plants blossom.

And because all the flowers blossom during spring season, the people are all happy; it is the most pleasant season. And therefore Kṛṣṇa says that I am the spring season; kusuma akhāra. What is beautiful name for spring season? Kṛṣṇa does not use the word Vasantha; he uses the word kusuma ākhāra; ākhāra means abundance, store house, rich; kusuma means flower; kusumānam ākhāraḥ; it is a season which has abundance of flowers and therefore people are happy. (காலங்களில் அவள் வஸந்தம் kālaṅgaḥil avaḥ vasantham; an old Tamil song; that is regarding someone, but here we are addressing the Lord, OK. So therefore wrong address).

द्यूतं छलयतामस्मि तेजस्तेजस्विनामहं ।
जयोऽस्मि व्यवसायोऽस्मि सत्त्वं सत्त्ववतामहम् ॥ १०.३६ ॥ dyūtaṃ chalayatāmasmi tējastējasvināmahaṃ |

jayō'smi vyavasāyō'smi sattvaṃ sattvavatāmahaṃ || 10.36 ||

अस्मि ध्यूतम् asmi dhyūtam I am gambling छलयताम् chalayātām among all the deceivers (deceitful practises); अहं तेजः ahaṃ tējaḥ I am the brilliance तेजस्विनाम् tējasvinām of the brilliant अस्मि जयः asmi jayaḥ I am victory अस्मि व्यवसायः asmi vyavasāyaḥ I am effort अहं सत्त्वं ahaṃ sattvaṃ I am the virtue सत्त्ववताम् sattvavatām of the virtuous

36. I am gambling among all deceitful practices; I am the brilliance of the brilliant; I am effort; I am the virtue of the virtuous.

Chalayātām; among those activities which will rob our discriminative power; among those activities which will take a human being for a ride. Among those activities I am the gambling activity; because all forms of gambling will take a human being for a ride, because once a person enters into that, like alcohol or drug, a person will be completely addicted to that. And like any other addiction, gambling like card games or racing etc. like dices, all come under gambling.

In Bhāgavatham it is said; in Kaliyuga, the kaliyuga resides in a few places; Kali dēvathā means that dēvathā which will take a person for spiritual downfall. In Bhāgavatha a story is elaborately said; so Kali was to be driven out; then Kalidēvathā was to reside in some places, and delude the human mind; and I want to take them for a spiritual downfall; then Bhagavān allows Kali dēvathā to remain in a few places; and if a human places goes to such places, he will be sucked by; pulled down by Kali dēvathā; and Kali dēvathā means quarrel; fighting; shouting; drinking, all those things will come and therefore Kṛṣṇa says, I am dhyūtam.

In fact, in the entire Mahābhāratha; one important lesson is to be learned is; if we are not very careful, that gambling or such activities can suck us also down. And what is the example? Dharmaputra who was an embodiment of dharma, even that Dharmaputra got hooked to that and when Dharmaputra got hooked, he lost all the sense of propriety and he lost even his wife and brothers. Can any person think of keeping the wife and brothers as a stake there? Dharmaputra is an embodiment of dharma; he knows dharma śāstram; and even he lost his balance. If Dharmaputra can lose his balance; what to talk of we ordinary people, that is why, we were young, our parents never allowed us to touch the card; people say we play card only for fun. No money is involved; but our parents say; even for fun do not play cards; Why because there is a strong pull there; Kṛṣṇa himself warns dhyūtam aham asmi; among the deceiving activities; pulling down activities, taking for a ride activities; addicting activities; I am the gambling principle. So dhyūtam; literally dhyūtam means dices; and here it means any form of gambling.

Then tējas tējasvināmaham; I am the brilliance; the internal brilliance, the intelligence among all the intelligent or brilliant people. Perhaps we can define the brilliance as that by which a person resists the temptation for dhyūtam; gambling; because in all of them, first time saying No is much easier; whether it is alcohol; whether it is cigarette or whether it is drug or whether it is gambling; first time saying No is very easy; but if first time one succumbs; then the downslide is so powerful. That it will be very difficult to get out of that; and therefore I am that brilliant discrimination, which resists such a temptation.

Then jayō:'smi vyavasāyō:'smi satvaṁ sattvavatāmaham. I am the satva-guṇa in the sātvic people; So satvam; I am the satva-guṇa which represents spiritual inclination; rajō-guṇa represents materialistic inclination; Artakama inclination is caused by rajō-guṇa; Dharma mōkṣa inclination is caused by satva-guṇa; and tamō-guṇa obstructs our inclination for both of them; tamō-guṇa makes a person lazy; neither materialistic inclination, nor spiritual inclination. As I have often said, ഉണ്ടാൽ ഉറങ്ങണം, ഉറങ്ങിയാൽ ഉണ്ണണം; uṇṭāl- uṛaṅṅaṇaṁ; uṛaṅṅiyāl-uṇṅaṇaṁ. This is tāmasic.

And the general advice of the scriptures is a tāmasic person should initially cultivate a materialistic desire and thereafter gradually refine the materialistic desires to spiritual desire; and that spiritual desire represented by satva-guṇa; I am in all the sātvic people and once there is the spiritual inclination; it expresses in what form? Vyavasāyaḥ. Vyavasāyaḥ means the effort required for the fulfilment of spiritual desire; just as effort is required for the fulfilment of materialistic desires; you should remember, equal or more effort is required for the fulfilment of spiritual desire. like doing pañcamahā yajña; all the noble activities for citta śuddhi; it requires effort; so here the word Vyavasāyaḥ means prayathna; perseverance; industry; effort; not Tamil vyavasāyaḥ; Tamil vyavasāyam means agriculture. So in Malayalam vyavasāyaḥ means industry; that is closer of Sānskrīt; in Sānskrīt vyavasāya means industry; but industry as the character of the mind; we use the expression; he is an industrious person; that perseverance or effort is called vyavasāyaḥ.

And once there is vyavasāyaḥ or spiritual effort, what will it lead to? jayō:'smi; jayaḥ means victory; success; so that is why, look into the reverse order; satva-guṇa to vyavasāyaḥ to jayaḥ; satva-guṇa means spiritual inclination; vyavasāyaḥ means spiritual effort; jayaḥ means spiritual success or victory; all of them I am.

And from this what are to learn? If we get spiritual success, we should not become arrogant because of that; we should remember that is also because of the grace of the Lord only. One should not forget that; all the time remember, every step forward is because of the push of Īśvara anugraha; the pull of freewill should be backed by the push of Īśvara Anugraha; will and grace should go hand-in-hand.

वृष्णीनां वासुदेवोऽस्मि पाण्डवानां धनञ्जयः ।
मुनीनामप्यहं व्यासः कवीनामुशना कविः ॥१०.३७॥

Vṛṣṇīnām vāsudēvō'smi pāṇḍavānām dhanañjayaḥ |
munīnāmapyahaḥ vyāsaḥ kavīnāmuśanā kavīḥ ||10.37||

अस्मि वासुदेवः asmi vāsudevaḥ I am Sri Kṛṣṇa (son of Vasudēva); वृष्णीनाम् vṛṣṇīnām among the Vṛṣṇis (clan of Kṣatriyās); धनञ्जयः dhanañjayaḥ I am Arjuna (lit. a conqueror of riches) पाण्डवानाम् pāṇḍavānām among the pandavas अहं व्यासः ahaḥ vyāsaḥ I am Vyāsa मुनीनाम् munīnām among the sages अपि api and कविः उशना kaviḥ uśanā (I Am) sage Śukracārya कवीनाम् kavīnām among the seers.

37. I am Kṛṣṇa among the Vṛṣṇis; I am Arjuna among the Pāndavas; I am Vyāsaḥ among the sages and (I am) sage Śukrācārya among the seers.

Vṛṣṇīnām, among the descendants of vṛṣṇī vaṁśa, vṛṣṇī vaṁśa is Yadu vaṁśa, or the yadhava vaṁśa which Lord Kṛṣṇa belonged. Therefore among the descendants of vṛṣṇī vāṁśa, who am I; Kṛṣṇa says, I am myself; I am Vāsudevaḥ; Vāsudevaḥ means Vasudēvāsya puthra; Dēvaki putraḥ. I am Lord Kṛṣṇa, and that is why one of the name of Kṛṣṇa is Vārṣṇeya; we have seen that word elsewhere; Vārṣṇeyaḥ means vṛṣṇī vāṁśa samūdbhūtaḥ.

And why do we say or Kṛṣṇa himself claims that Kṛṣṇa himself is the greatest among the Vṛṣṇīs? One reason is that Kṛṣṇa himself is the avathara of the Lord himself; He is not a mortal jīva; He is Īśvara avathāra puruṣaḥ.

Then the next question comes? there are many avathāras; and why should we say Krishnavathāra is the most glorious among them; we can give several reasons but according to me, the primary reason for Glory of Kṛṣṇa avathāra is, in Kṛṣṇāvathāra alone Lord functions as Brahmavidya ācārya; a liberating preceptor.

In all other avatharās, Lord destroyed asurās and disappeared; but in Kṛṣṇa avathāra alone, vasudēva sutām dēvaṃ, kaṃsa cāṇūra mardhanam, dēvaki paramānandaṃ, kṛṣṇaṃ vandē jagatgurum.

And that is why Kṛṣṇa's teaching of the Bhagavat Gīta is considered as one of the three main text books of vēdanta śāstra. The vēdanta śāstra has got numerous text books; perhaps thousands or lakhs; among all the vēdanta-śāstra granthās, three are considered to be pillars of vēdanta; they are called Prasthāna trayam; the foundation grantha; and what are they:

- number one the upaniṣads, called the sṛuti prasthāna;
- the second one is Bhagavad-Gīta called the smṛti prasthānam;
- and the third one is Brahma sūtras, the nyāya prasthānam;

So thus sṛuti, smṛti and nyāya. Among these three-pillar-vēdāntic texts, one of them is Bhagavad-Gīta; and it is given out by Kṛṣṇa and that is why even after millennia, Bhagavat-Gīta in the 21st century also, it is alive and kicking and even now when we take Bhagavat-Gīta classes, thank God, people are coming. Indicating what? It is even now it is fresh and valid; it is not obsolete text book; but it is a valid teaching; and since Kṛṣṇa is Gītācāryaḥ, he is the greatest one.

Pāṇḍavānāṃ dhanañjayaḥ; among the pañca-pāṇḍavās, Kṛṣṇa is very smart; he does not want to get Arjuna's-anger; as such he is having the bow and arrow! Therefore the among the pāṇḍavās, (he is flattering) I am the Arjuna himself; pāṇḍavānāṃ dhanañjayaḥ; and why is the Arjuna the greatest; and why can't He say dharmaputra; he is the eldest one as well as the embodiment of dharma; why should Arjuna be taken as the greatest one? very simple, if Gīta is the greatest śāstra; Arjuna being the first receiver of the Gīta-śāstra; sarvōpaniṣadō gāvō dōgdhā gōpāla-nandanaḥ; then pārthō vatsaḥ; where it is coming? Gīta-dhyāna slōkā; pārthō vatsaḥ; Arjuna is the first one to get the Gīta śāstram.

And we are only the second hand teaching, from the local gurus; but Arjuna got from the greatest teacher; Sākṣāt bhagavatā nārāyaṇēna svayam; where it comes? pāṛthāya pratibōdhitām bhagavatā nārāyaṇēna svayam; he was lucky enough to get the teaching straight from the horse's mouth; straight from Kṛṣṇa's mouth.

And why did Kṛṣṇa choose Arjuna for giving this teaching? Another big debate; why should Kṛṣṇa choose Arjuna for giving the Gītā? Several people give several reason; but the reason is very simple; Kṛṣṇa gave Arjuna because Arjuna asked for it. Do not break your head; Dharmaputra never said śiṣyastē'haṃ śādhi mām tvām prapannam. Bhīma never said; Arjuna asked, Kṛṣṇa gave. So that Arjuna asked, makes him a great person; and therefore pāṇḍavānāṃ dhanañjayaḥ; Kṛṣṇa is great; Arjuna is great.

Now Vyāsa feels how can I leave out myself; therefore munīnām āhaṃ vyāsaḥ; so among the ṛṣis; I am Vyāsācārya. And why do we Vyāsācārya is the greatest; the same reason alone; Kṛṣṇa is the greatest avathāra because he is Brahma vidya ācāryaḥ; and Vyāsa is the greatest ṛṣi, because Vyāsa is also Brahmavidya ācāryaḥ; he is one of the brahma vidya ācāryaḥs in the tradition. And not only that; among the Prasthānatrayam, the same foundation granthas; one was the contribution of Kṛṣṇa; another is the contribution of Vyāsa; because Brahma sūtras, which is one of the foundation granthās; that brahma sutra is given by Vyāsa.

And not only that, even in the compilation of the Gītā, Vyāsa has a role; Kṛṣṇa taught Arjuna alight; but the compilation has been done by Vyāsācārya; therefore Mahābhāratham is written by whom; Vyāsa. So Bhagavat Gītā is part of Mahābhāratham and therefore the teaching is Kṛṣṇa's but the presentation is Vyāsā's. So Vyāsā's contribution is for two prasthānam. In Gītā prasthānam also Vyāsa is there; Brahma sutra prasthānam also Vyāsa is there; that is why we have great reverence for Vyāsa.

That is why in Avani Avittam also there is a special tarpaṇam called khānda ṛṣi tarpaṇam;... tām ṛṣigums tarpayāmi; I am expressing my gratitude to all the ṛṣis beginning with whom; with any ṛṣi; Kṛṣṇa dvaipāyana; who is he? He is Vyāsa; we do not mention the name of any other ṛṣis; all other ṛṣis are included in etc. ādayaḥ; only one name is mentioned; and that is Vyāsā's.

सर्वाऋषिपत्निस्तर्पयामि । सर्वऋषिगणपत्निस्तर्पयामि ॥ १३.१ ॥

kṛṣṇadvaipāyanādayō yē ṛṣayastān ṛṣiṃgstarpayāmi | sarvān ṛṣiṃstarpayāmi | sarvaṛṣigaṇāṃstarpayāmi | sarvāṛṣipatnistarpayāmi | sarvaṛṣigaṇapatnistarpayāmi || 13.1 ||

And in the ṛṣi tarpaṇam, the first person is Vyāsa; and therefore Kṛṣṇa says among the Munis or ṛṣis I am Vyāsaḥ.

And he got the name Vyāsa because he compiled and rearranged the vēdas also. So when he found that the people cannot remember all the vēdas; the entire vēdas people could not remember, he called four disciples and he asked each disciple to preserve a particular Vēda. So therefore this arrangement for vēdic preservation is also done by Vyāsa; So vēdān vivvyāsa; vyās means to compile and rearrange; and what is his original name; not Vyāsa; Kṛṣṇa dvaipāyana is the original name. And because of the compilation and arrangement of vēda; he got the name Vēda-Vyāsa; Then Vēda Vyāsa got shortened to v. Vyāsa. OK. V means Vēda. Kṛṣṇa dropped the initials.

kavīnāmuśanā kaviḥ; among the great seers; those who can see all the three kālās, trikāla darśis, trikāla jñānis; I am Śukra kavi; uśanā means Śukrācāryaḥ; the asura guru; Sukrācāryaḥ is a great ṛṣi; and therefore Kṛṣṇa says; I am Sukrācāryaḥ.

Therefore the word Kavi does not mean a poet; the poet means krānta darśi; the one who can see the future that is going to come; the one who has got ESP. Extra Sensory Perception; not only he can see the future; he can see the past also; therefore krānta darśi; krānta means that which is beyond the range of our sense organs; beyond the limit; beyond the range; and one who can see that is Sukrācāryaḥ.

दण्डो दमयतामस्मि नीतिरस्मि जिगीषताम् ।
मौनं चौवास्मि गुह्यानाम् ज्ञानं ज्ञानवतामहम् ॥ १०.३८ ॥

daṇḍō damayatāmasmi nītirasmi jigīṣatām |
maunaṃ caivāsmi guhyānām jñānam jñānavatāmaham || 10.38 ||

अस्मि दण्डः asmi daṇḍaḥ I am the rod दमयताम् damayatām of the punishers अस्मि नीतिः asmi nītiḥ I am diplomacy, जिगीषताम् jigīṣatām of those desirous of victory अस्मि मौनम् asmi maunam I am silence गुह्यानाम् guhyānām among secrets च एव ca ēva and अहं ज्ञानम् aham jñānam I am the wisdom ज्ञानवताम् jñānavatām of the wise.

38. I am the rod of the punishers; I am diplomacy of those desirous of Victory. I am silence among secrets and I am the wisdom of the wise.

Daṇḍō damayatāmasmi. Among the disciplinarians, among the causes of discipline or orderliness, I am daṇḍaḥ; daṇḍaḥ means the rod of punishment; because the discipline can be caused by several methods; one method is what? Requesting; kindly follow the rule; request; another is educating; so that a person follows because of understanding; and the third method is what? daṇḍa; the method of punishment, Kṛṣṇa says generally people are immature; generally the people are gross and therefore education, good words, etc. do not work; generally what works is what: daṇḍaḥ; punishment; So sāmā, dāna, bhēda, daṇḍa; among them, daṇḍa alone is the most powerful, which gives instantaneous result. And that is why parents also often the method of corporal punishment; corporal punishment; beating. In Schools also the teachers use this. Nowadays they have banned it; because they say it is highly damaging to the psyche of the child. Still many people are not happy banning it; because if you do not use punishment, you require lot of kṣāma. Using good words to change, one needs lot a kṣāma; but one beating serves the purpose. Kṛṣṇa says that I am the punishing rod, among the causes of discipline.

Nītirasmi jigīṣatām; among the causes of victory, or among the victors, among the victorious one, I am nītiḥ; nītiḥ means diplomacy; this is from the stand point of the rulers or kings; for the kings to be successful, in the statement, I am in the form of diplomacy, because that is responsible for success; I am nītiḥ.

Then maunaṁ caivāsmi guhyānāṁ; among all the secrets, I am maunaṁ; maunaṁ is the greatest secret because the moment you reveal that secret; it is no more secret. So therefore I am maunaṁ.

The word mounaṁ represents Brahman also. Amātras chaturtaḥ avyavahāryaḥ; so in Vēdānta, silence has the meaning of Brahman, because in silence, there is nothing except consciousness. In silence what is there? we generally say silence is that state, in which nothing is there; which nothingness is witnessed by the consciousness and therefore in Māndukya upaniṣad; brahman is called silence; and therefore we can mounaṁ as Brahman also; I am Brahman among the secrets. That is why it was called Rāja Vidhya Rāja Guhyaṁ; Guhyaṁ means secret.

Then jñānaṁ jñānavatāmahaṁ; among the wise people or in the wise people, I am the wisdom. So therefore the glory of the wise people is because of the wisdom; and wisdom belongs to the Lord. Therefore when you do namaskāra to a jñāni; the namaskāra does not go to that jñāni; but it goes to the wisdom which makes a jñāni and that wisdom is what? Bhagavān says I am; therefore no genuine jñāni accepts the namaskāra for himself. So whenever anybody does namaskāra; he intelligently hands over the namaskāra to the Lord, because Lord is the wisdom.

na tadasti vinā yatsyānmayā bhūtaṁ carācaram||10.39||](#)

अर्जुन Arjuna Arjuna! अहं तत् aham tat I am that यत् च अपि बीजम् yat ca api bījam which is the seed, सर्वभूतानाम् sarvabhūtānām of all beings अस्ति न तद् भूतम् asti na tad bhūtam there is no such being चराचरम् carācaram moving or stationary यत् स्यात् yat syāt which can exist विना मया vinā mayā without Me.

39. Oh Arjuna! I am that which is the seed of all beings. There is no such being, moving or stationary, which can exist without Me.

So Kṛṣṇa concludes the enumeration of His glories; and Kṛṣṇa says in fact, hey Arjuna, I am the very seed or material-cause out of which the entire creation has emerged. So aham sarvabhūtānām bījam asmi; bījam means upādāna kāraṇam. Just as the clay is the material-cause of all the earthen wares, just as gold is the material-cause of all ornaments; just as wood is the material-cause of all furniture; I am the material-cause of the entire creation.

And the material-cause always expresses in the effect; in the form of the very existence; when you say an ornament is: the very Is_ness or existence does not belong to the ornament, the existence actually belongs to what? The gold alone; ornament is nothing but nāma and rūpa; it is an non-substantial entity; if you say nāma rūpa 'is': that Is_ness is borrowed from where; the gold. How do you prove that? Remove the gold from the ornament; ornament loses its very existence. And therefore Kṛṣṇa says I am the material-cause who lend existence to every product in the creation; Therefore when you say wall is: Isness belongs to me; when you say: fan is: Is_ness belongs to me; In short, I am the Sat in the creation. What did he said in the starting; Aham ātma gudakēśa. There the word ātma means that I am the very consciousness in every being; in finishing he says: I am the very existence in every being; I am sat cit svarūpaḥ; obtaining in the entire creation.

And therefore maya vinā, yat carācaram bhūtam syāt; tat nāsti; there is nothing in the creation; moving or stationary; which can exist without my blessings. Just as gold can say there is no ornament in the creation; no golden ornament in the creation; which can exist without my blessings; who can say; gold can say. Similarly, Bhagavan says: I am the material-cause without which nothing in the creation, moving or non-moving can exist. And therefore if somebody asks, who is God? We say, Who "Is", is God; What does that mean; Is ness is the God; all others are nāma rūpa only. So yat carācaram bhūtam syāt maya vinā Asti; tat nā; there is nothing which can exist without me. Thus he started with cit, ended with sat; cit and sat are nirguṇa Īśvara vibhūthi; and all others are saguṇa Īśvara vibhūthiḥ; vibhūthiḥ means mahima.

नान्तोऽस्ति मम दिव्यानां विभूतीनां परन्तप ।
एष तूद्देशतः प्रोक्तः विभूतेर्विस्तरो मया ॥ १०.४० ॥

nāntō'sti mama divyānām vibhūtīnām parantapa |
ēṣa tūddēśataḥ prōktō vibhūtērvistarō mayā || 10.40 ||

परन्तप parantapa Oh Arjuna (vanquisher of foes) अस्ति न अन्तः asti na antaḥ there is no limit मम दिव्यानां विभूतीनाम् mama divyānām vibhūtīnām to My divine glories तु tu however एषः विस्तरः ēṣaḥ vistarāḥ this detail विभूतेः vibhūtēḥ of glories प्रोक्तः मया prōktaḥ maya has been mentioned by Me उद्देशतः uddēśataḥ (only) as an illustration.

40. Oh Arjuna! There is no limit to My divine glories. However, this detail of glories has been, mentioned by Me (only) as an illustration.

Here Kṛṣṇa says Hey Arjuna! I have stopped the enumeration of My glories, not because my glories have been exhausted. If I have to enumerate all the glories the list is inexhaustible; I can never complete the 10th chapter. Time is running out. And therefore, my intention is only to give a few sample glories; do not think that this is an exhaustive list. Therefore Kṛṣṇa says: mama divyānām vibhūtīnām antaḥ na asti; there is no end to my divine glory. It can be never be exhausted by Me; Hey Parantapa; Hey Arjuna.

Then why should Kṛṣṇa enumerate, if there is no end, why should he enumerate? Kṛṣṇa says: ēṣa tūddēśataḥ prōktaḥ vibhūtērvistarō mayā; this enumeration of my glories is only as a sample; a random sample. When you go shopping, especially for eatables, the shopkeeper will just give a piece of it, to taste the quality of it; like that; just a random items; there are some people, who just eat everything and come out; they take sample of every time and come away; So I have given this ūddēśataḥ; a random sample, as an illustration; I have given this much enumeration.

Then how to extend this list; Kṛṣṇa tells: I will tell you the method of extending the list; therefore you can yourselves do as a home work. Of course the 10th chapter must be continued at home by you yourselves. How to do that; He is going to say that:

यद्यद्विभूतिमत्सत्त्वं श्रीमदूर्जितमेव वा ।
तत्तदेवावगच्छ त्वं मम तेजोऽशसम्भवम् ॥ १०.४१ ॥

Yadyadvibhūtimatsattvaṁ śrīmadūrjitamēva vā |
tattadēvāvagaccha tvaṁ mama tējōśasambhavam || 10.41 ||

यद् यत् सत्वम् yad yat satvam whatever being (is there), विभूतिमत् vibhūtimat which is glorious श्रीमत् śrīmat rich एव व ऊर्जितम् ēva va ūrjitam or powerful त्वम् अवगच्छ tvam avagaccha may you recognise तत् तद् एव tat tad ēva that मम तेजोऽषसम्भवम् mama tejo:'śasambhavam to be born out of a person of My splendour.

41. Whatever being (is there which is) glorious, rich or powerful – may you recognise that to be born out of a person of My splendour.

Kṛṣṇa says you can make your own list; what is that? So when you are confronting various things and beings in the creation; if you see anything that is wonderful; which makes you wonderstruck, any such glorious living being or inert thing. They talk about the wonders of the universe; 7 wonders; 8 wonders; they enumerate; anything natural or artificial. Anything that you see; vibhūtimat, glorious, which makes your mouth open; which makes you awestruck; whatever it is, it may be the minutest insect or the greatest mountain; yad yat or śrīmat; whichever is rich or abundant; whichever is full of riches or abundance; śrīmat; or ūrjitam; abundance means what most valuable or invaluable diamond, they discover and they keep somewhere and they say it costs millions of dollars; śrīmat.

So anything rich or ūrjitam; anything powerful; like the energy of the Sun, which has been giving energy for us, imagine you have to light up the entire earth for 12 hours with some electric power; day-night matches; how much money they have to spend; the Sun has been doing that; how long; and still it is the reservoir of energy;

Therefore you take the Sun, you take the stars; you take the lightening; you take a water fall; which are all powerful; anything and you can add anything beautiful; attractive; all of them when you see, remember me. That is the indication of a religious person; a religious person whenever he sees an extraordinary thing; he does namaskāram to that. And even if he discovers some such thing; he never keeps it; in the olden days, he hands over to the temple; I do not deserve to possess that; anything extraordinary it is given to the temple; because we see the Lord in that.

Therefore Kṛṣṇa says. Tat tad avagaccha; may you understand that; that extraordinary powerful rich thing or being is only an infinitesimal glory of mine. Not my total glory; the highest glorious thing is only a part of a wee bit of My glory. My tejo:'śasambhavam; tējaḥ here means mahima; aṁśa means a part; a speck of my vibhūtiḥ; and that is why we worship nature.

Then Kṛṣṇa concludes:

Verse 10.42

अथवा बहुनैतेन किं ज्ञातेन तवार्जुन ।
विष्टभ्याहमिदं कृत्स्नम् एकांशेन स्थितो जगत् ॥ १०.४२ ॥

athavā bahunaitēna kiṃ jñātēna tavārjuna |
viṣṭabhyāhamidaṃ kṛtsnamēkāmśēna sthitō jagat || 10.42 ||

अथवा athavā Or किं तव kiṃ tava what use do you have ज्ञातेन jñātēna by knowing बहुना एतेन bahunā ētēna all these? अर्जुन Arjuna Oh Arjuna अहं अस्थितः ahaṃ asthitaḥ I remain विष्टभ्य viṣṭabhya supporting इदं कृत्स्नं जगत् idaṃ kṛtsnaṃ jagat this entire Universe एकांशेन ēkāmśēna without a portion (of Mine).

42. Or, What use do you have by knowing all these? Oh Arjuna! I remain supporting this entire Universe with a portion (of Me).

So here Kṛṣṇa says, Hey Arjuna, you can look at the whole thing in a different perspective also. So previously to give an example: suppose I say water is present in every wave; water is present in every bubble; water is present in every drop; this is one way of looking at the water. Or there is another way: Hey Arjuna, it is not that I the water or the water is in bubble or wave; really speaking, all bubbles; all waves are in water. Therefore, instead of saying I am in the creation; I would like to reverse it and say: the whole creation is in Me.

Therefore He says: athavā; otherwise to put in a different form; bahunaitēna jñātēna kiṃ; what is the use of this elaborate enumeration. I am in mountain; I am in intelligent people, I am in Gaṅgā; Yamuna; வாய் தான் வலிக்கும்; instead of saying I am in everything, I would like to say everything is in Me. So ahaṃ idaṃ kṛtsnaṃ jagat viṣṭabhya asthitaḥ; in fact I remain supporting the entire creation; or the entire creation is in me. Space is not within this Hall; that is not the correct statement; all the Halls are in space.

Similarly Bhagavān is not in the living beings; but all living beings are in Bhagavān; and that too they do not occupy the whole Bhagavān; I am only sustaining them; in one corner of Me; ēkāmśēna. So the whole cosmos is only occupying a part of Me; so how big I am; so the whole cosmos is like a bubble in Me; the ocean. So with this Kṛṣṇa concludes the description of His glories.

इति श्रीमद्भगवद्गीतासूपनिषत्सु ब्रह्मविद्यायां योगशास्त्रे श्रीकृष्णार्जुनसंवादे विभूतियोगो नाम दशमोऽध्यायः ॥

Thus, in the Upaniṣad sung by Lord, the science of Brahma, The scripture of Yōga, the dialogue between Sri Kṛṣṇa and Arjuna, ends the tenth chapter entitled "The Yōga of Divine Glories".

140 Chapter 10, Summary

ॐ

Today I will give you a summary of the 10th chapter of the Gīta. The 10th chapter of the Gīta by its position is occurring in the madhyama śatkam of the Gīta. If you remember, the first six chapters of the Gīta are called prathama śatkam, the first section consisting of six chapters. Then from the seventh to the twelfth chapter, we call madhyama śatkam, the middle section, and the last six chapters together called carama śatkam or the final section. And I had told you in the prathama śatkam, the nature of the jīva, the individual is highlighted; in the madhyama śatkam, that is the middle section, the nature of God or Īśvara is highlighted, and in the carama śatkam, the essential oneness of jīva and Īśvara; jīva Īśvara svarupa aikyam is predominantly discussed; I had said; which means in the madhya śatkam, Lord Kṛṣṇa is concentrating on Īśvara-svarūpam, so that we will have a clear knowledge regarding the nature of God; and Lord Kṛṣṇa started this topic from the very seventh chapter itself and he has been gradually developing it, and the culmination will come in the 12th chapter of the Gīta.

And in all the scriptures, the general definition given to God is Īśvaraḥ jagat kāraṇam, the Lord is the creator of the world; The Lord is the maker of the World. In Sānskrīt, we use the expression Kartā; Kartā means the creator. That is why in Christianity also, the Lord is addressed kartāvē, (they add a vē) Kartā means the creator.

When we learn that God is the maker or creator of this universe, naturally we conceive of the Lord in our own way. So we get the first concept of God based on this definition; what definition? God is the maker or the creator. And when I know God as the creator, what will be my concept of God? How will I conceive? The first problem that we find here generally whenever we see a product; any created product, we do not see the creator anywhere around. This is the first problem that we face; the created product is visible; and I am not able to see the creator. I know this mike has a maker; but I am not seeing the maker around; I know the desk has a creator; but I do not see the creator around; I know this hall has a creator; but I do not see the creator around; therefore generally creator is not perceived; the creator is inferred. Creator is not perceived but creator is inferred.

Therefore Īśvara in my concept is anumitha svarūpaḥ; anumitha svarūpaḥ means what; the Lord is not perceived by me, but Lord is inferred by me. And since the Lord is not perceived but inferred, the Īśvara that I conceive of is parōkṣa Īśvaraḥ; not parōkṣa Īśvaraḥ not; Prathyakṣa Īśvaraḥ.

First I think that there is one Īśvaran; and that Īśvaran is not seen anywhere near; and he is somewhere; he is there. So therefore concept No.1: He is inferred; concept No.2 He is remote; not anywhere around; and since Īśvara is the creator; only inferred; and not seen around, the nature of God I do not know. Therefore I have to only imagine.

So what will be the nature of the creator of this mike? Since I do not see the creator of mike, I have to only visualise imagine; Therefore the creator has what nature; kalpitha rūpam; kalpitham means imagine; I know this hall has a creator; but how he looks like I can only imagine. I know what all of you have great grandfathers. No doubt about it; but how your great-grandfather looks like, I have to only imagine; often; not only I have to imagine, even you have to imagine.

Therefore Īśvara has got a nature, which is imagined by me; so Īśvaraḥ is anumitha; Īśvaraḥ is parōkṣa; and Īśvara is kalpitha rūpaḥ; of an imagined form.

If I have to imagine the form of Īśvara; what will be my imagination? suppose I have to imagine, the creator of this desk; I know he is a sentient living being; the creator of the desk is certainly a sentient living being and I know that any animal does not have sufficient intelligence to conceive and create the desk; and therefore I imagine the creator of the desk as only a human being, because in my experience, human-beings alone have sufficient intelligence to conceive and create a product. And therefore when I visualise or imagine a God; what type of form I will imagine? Certainly a human form. Is it perceived form or imagined form? It is certainly an imagined form; because I do not see the creator around; and therefore I have an idea of God, as what? A very very intelligent human like being.

And since I know the intelligence of the creator God must be much much much higher, because an ordinary human being can create only ordinary things, since God has created the whole universe, his intelligence must be much much much greater; therefore in my imagination, how to put the extra intelligence. You may add a few more heads; the only thing you can head; because one head has got one head of intelligence; Bhagavān must have several units. And therefore, draw heads all over; 100 heads this side; and 100 heads that side; because Omniscience.

Similarly you want to imagine Lord as a powerful one, because He has not created an ordinary desk; ordinary mike or fan or hall; but the entire cosmos; therefore the power must be infinite; and how do you imagine infinite power; add a few more hands; hands in multiples of 2; 12, 20, or hundreds.

So when I say Lord as the creator of the world, I only imagine a personal intelligent God who is very very similar to a human being; but I still do not know the details; whether the Lord is black or white; (there are so many colours) yellow like Chinese; black like negro; white like, the westerners; or the middle ones, like us; What is the complexion of God, whether the Lord is male or female; that is also a problem; all I have to imagine; it is a very very confused concept of God; and to get some help I look to the scriptures, the confusion only increases because, instead of one form the scriptures give, many forms; Rāma form, Śiva form, Viṣṇu form, Kṛṣṇa form, etc.

So still my confusion is OK; there is a God, an inferred God, an omniscient, Omnipotent God, not anywhere around God; and that God must have some form like a human being; which form is the form of God; because there are so many Gods; mentioned in the scriptures; should I conclude that there are many Gods; the scriptures say that there is only one God; Thank God, or else the fight will erupt between themselves (Gods)!

Once I know that the creator God is only one, naturally the question will come, which one of the forms is the form of God; I cannot say all of them; because some description is that God is fair; in some description God is black; Kṛṣṇa is described as Mēga śyāmalaḥ; So black; black means Bhagavān a Negro; we do not know; so the description also; what varṇa I can take? What akhāra I can take?

Then you have to assume that only one form is the real form; the all other forms are only vēṣam; like cinema actors, he has got one form of his own; all other forms are vēṣam.

Now the problem is: if Bhagavān has got only one form and all other forms are only temporary vēṣam; what will be question?; which one is the real one, which are the vēṣams; if you ask a Vaiṣṇavite; he will say, Viṣṇu is original; Śiva is vēṣa. You call a Śiva bhaktha; he will say Śiva form is original, Viṣṇu form is the vēṣam. If you ask Dēvi Bhaktha he will say; the other two are not; and only dēvi form is the real, the others are all vēṣams.

Now my problem is what? What exactly is the form of God? Because all of them are my imagination, because I do not see the Lord around; And the scriptures point out that Lord darśanam; Īśvara darśanam alone gives you liberation; therefore I have now to work for Īśvara darśanam. Now I have a serious anxiety. When will I see Lord Śiva; when will I see Lord Viṣṇu; whether he will come or not. And if you read purāṇās they declare that some of the devotees had Rāma darśanam; Thyāgarāja had seen Rāma; Meera had seen Kṛṣṇa.

Now the question is will I ever see the Lord? And if I do not see the Lord, will I get liberation; all these are various ideas hovering around in my mind; I only know this much, that there is God, but all other details are only vague; full of vagueness. Whether he will be like this or like that; whether he will come or not; whether if he comes he will go or not. Because we are equally interested in his going back also; because limited accommodation. What to do with a small house. So Kṛṣṇa wants to transform our concept of God. It is very good to know God as the creator; but if you have to progress further in your sādhanā; you have to understand further regarding the nature of God; at present; God is inferred for you; God is remote; parōkṣaṁ for you; and God is kalpitha rūpa of imagined form.

And how to transfer this concept? That alone is Kṛṣṇa trying in the madhyama śatkam, the Gītā; and Kṛṣṇa says, if you understand God as only the creator of the world, your understanding is incomplete. If you know God as only the creator of the world, your understanding is incomplete, and as long as you have this incomplete understanding; you will always have confused ideas, vague ideas regarding God, and your sādhanās also will not be crystallised, it will be groping in darkness. And therefore your understanding has to be enhanced.

And how should we enhance? Kṛṣṇa says, when you say God is the creator of the world; ask another question, what is the material out of which God created this world? As long as you do not ask this question, you will have confused understanding. When I say carpenter created the desk; I know the wood is the material; when I say goldsmith created ornament; I know gold is the raw material; when I say God, who was only one God; without a second thing; this is very important; ēkam ēva advitīyaṁ; அவர் மட்டும் இருந்தார். He was only there; so when God alone is there to create the world; what is the material out of which God created? Unless you ask this question and find out the answer, your concept of God will be immature; and vulnerable to logical attack.

And Kṛṣṇa says when you ask the question what is the material out of which God made, the answer is what? God has to find the material also in himself; because there is no other second material. God is not only the creator, God is also the material part and therefore God has two aspects; one is the cētana aspect and the other is the acētana aspect. The intelligence principle also must be God; the raw material-principle also must be God alone. Thus God becomes a mixture of cētana acētana tatvam; which we saw in the seventh chapter as parā aparā-prakṛti. He is matter and spirit put together - is God. This is a very important breakthrough in the vēdic-teaching.

Once I know that Lord is the material out of which the creation has come, then we have to get some important corollaries. What is that?

Once I know the material-cause of the product, I know the material-cause is never away from the product. Material cause is never away from the product. Just as Gold is never away from ornaments; wood is never away from furniture; clay is never away from pots; kāraṇam can never be away from Kāryam. So the material-cause is a perceived object or an inferred object. I have got the desk. And what is the material cause? Wood. Whether wood I have to infer or I should perceive it; Remember, the material-cause need not be inferred; material-cause is very much perceived in the product. Therefore Īśvara is never an inferred object; a remote object; Īśvara is a perceived object; Īśvara is never remote.

Therefore Īśvara is parōkṣaṁ or pratyakṣaṁ? My concept has very much, drastically changed; Īśvara is pratyakṣa siddhaḥ; keeping the ornaments should you ask when you will get the gold darśanam; What will one say? You will say: foolishness it is to question thus. Keeping the furniture, wood darśanam when I will get if I question, what will other say: they will say மர மண்டை; Mara Mandai (that is wood headed!); Keeping pot, if you are looking for the clay darśanam; what will one say? Our answer is never work for clay darśanam; never work for wood darśanam; wood or clay or gold are all pratyakṣa siddha. Therefore Īśvaraḥ pratyakṣa.

So when you say Īśvara is creator; Īśvara become parōkṣa; but when you say Īśvara is the very material out of which the creation has come; Īśvara becomes pratyakṣam.

Then the next question is what is the form of Īśvaraḥ? If you ask, what is the form of gold, what will be the answer? All the ornamental forms, bangle form, chain form, ring form, all the ornamental visible forms are forms belonging to the gold alone. Therefore the bangle form of gold is an imagined form or perceived form? Bangle form of gold is perceived form or imagined form. It is a perceived form.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa says, all the forms of the products you get here, they are all the forms of God only, which you need not imagine, which are all the time available. Therefore, Īśvara does not have a kalpitha rūpam. Īśvara has got a pratyakṣa rūpaṁ and what should I do; what tapas should I do; to have Īśvara darśanam; for how many does I have to do nāma japam; how many days tapas should I do?

Kṛṣṇa says the idea of striving for Īśvara darśanam is because of incomplete knowledge of Īśvara. The very anxiety for Īśvara Darśanam is born out of the incomplete understanding of Īśvara. And what is incomplete understanding? That you should understand completely; the Īśvara is the creator, is incomplete understanding.

What is the complete understanding? Īśvara is not only the creator; Īśvara happens to be the very material-cause also; and once I have the complete understanding I come to the conclusion that I need not be anxious for Īśvara darśanam; because I am all the time having Īśvara darśanam only. When I am seeing bangle, I am having gold darśanam; ring, gold darśanam; chain, gold darśanam; sarvatra gold darśanam only. And if at all I should be anxious; my anxiety should be what? Oh Lord: let me not forget the fact that the entire creation is your manifestation only. This information should not be forgotten

So my only anxiety must be Oh Lord: I should not forget the fact that whatever I am seeing is your form only; and this darśanam of Īśvara is called viṣvarūpa Īśvara darśanam; anēka rūpa Īśvara darśanam. And once I have this Īśvara darśanam; whatever glories I see in the creation, they all will remind me of the glories of Īśvara only. So thus, for a viśva rūpa bhakthaḥ; sarvathra Īśvara vibhūthi darśanam ēva bhavathi. So for a viśva rūpa bhakthaḥ, there is the appreciation of Īśvara's glory in everything; he does not require a miraculous event. Now we are looking for miracles to take place. Somebody must be miraculously cured of some disease and then alone we will appreciate Īśvara Vibhūthi.

Kṛṣṇa says: you do not require miracles to appreciate Īśvara vibhūthi; every event in creation is the glory of Īśvara; that I am able to open my mouth and talk is Īśvara vibhūthi; and that you are able to hear is Īśvara vibhūthi. Transformation of the world; transformation of the perspective of the world.

And what is the transformation? Instead of looking the world as a world; I should learn to look at the world as the manifestation of Īśvara. Just as I do not forget the goldness when I am appreciating different ornaments; I appreciate the beauty of the ornaments; but in the back of my mind, gold, gold, gold (would I forget that, I never forget that). Similarly I should not forget this fact.

This transformation Kṛṣṇa wants to bring. Right from the 7th chapter onwards and in the Vibhūthi yōga also, the same idea is continued; and in the first eleven verses; Kṛṣṇa gives the introduction to this idea; this definition of God; and what is the definition, as I said, do not say, God is creator and stop; say that God is the creator and also the material out of which the creation has come; and I give you an example, Not that I give you, the upaniṣad gives you, which I reminded; what is the upaniṣadic example: यथोर्णनाभिः सृजते गृह्णते च yathōrṇanābhiḥ sṛjatē gṛhṇatē ca; just as a spider is the intelligent-cause of the web; and the spider finds the raw material also; in itself, Similarly Īśvara is both the parā-prakṛti, the intelligent-cause and the aparā-prakṛti, the material-cause and in Sānskrīt we use the technical word, abhinna nimitta upādāna kāraṇam.

And Kṛṣṇa said, not only the external world is my manifestation; maharṣayaḥ sapta pūrvē catvārō manavastathā. Not only the external world is my manifestation; also the internal world of thoughts are my manifestation only; Just as during the dream my own mind manifests as the cara acara svapna prapañca; what is the mountain; my own mind is the mountain; that means I am the mountain; My mind means what; the mountain in dream; and if somebody is climbing the mountain, I am the climber also, and while climbing the mountain, I am the drinker also; I am the water also. Just as I myself manifest as everything in the dream world; similarly the Lord himself is both bāhya and ānthara prapañca.

And Kṛṣṇa said those who appreciate this fact is a virāt bhakthāḥ or a viśvarūpa bhakthāḥ and for a viśvarūpa bhakthāḥ, God is not in the temple alone; He sees the Lord everywhere.

इति मत्वा भजन्ते मां बुधा भावसमन्विताः ॥ १०.८ ॥

ahaṃ sarvasya prabhavō mattaḥ sarvaṃ pravartatē |
iti matvā bhajantē mām budhā bhāvasāmanvitāḥ || 10.8 ||

मच्चित्ता मद्गतप्राणाः बोधयन्तः परस्परम् ।
कथयन्तश्च मां नित्यं तुष्यन्ति च रमन्ति च ॥ १०.९ ॥

kathayantaśca mām nityaṃ tuṣyanti ca ramanti ca || 10.9 ||

So when the virāt bhaktha looks at any head, he looks at the head of everyone as the head of the Lord only. All heads are Lord's heads; all hands are Lord's hands; so sahasṛa śīṛṣā puruṣa. So sahasṛa śīṛṣā puruṣa means what? Do not imagine that there is a Viṣṇu standing there with many heads; sahasṛa śīṛṣā puruṣa; all the heads that I see belong to the Lord; all the hands belong to the Lord; all the legs belong to the Lord; and therefore anyone I see, my method of greeting is what: not hi, high; that is not the method of greeting; not shaking the hand; you do all those things for modern days; but our traditional method of greeting is: namaḥ tē. Your superficial form is different from mine, but behind your form is Īśvara; behind my form is Īśvara; forms are many, Īśvara is one. Therefore I say Namaskāram to everyone whatever be the character of the person.

How is he, what is his character, I do not know; but still whatever be the form, I know that the one behind is Īśvaraḥ; Therefore maccittā madgataprāṇāḥ; whatever they see, they see as a God; and most importantly, whatever experiences come in their life, they never resist; whatever comes, comes from the Lord only; mattaḥ sarvaṃ pravartatē; painful experiences God's gift; pleasurable experiences, God's gift; all are God's gift only; iti matvā bhajantē mām budhā bhāvasamanvitāḥ.

kathayantaśca māṃ nityaṃ tuṣyanti ca ramanti ca || 10.9 ||](#)

Thus in the introduction Kṛṣṇa talked about the virāt svarupam and the virāt-bhakthi; and then Kṛṣṇa also said those people who remain in the viśva-rūpa-bhakthi after sometime, they will transcend the viśva rūpam also and ultimately come to Nirguṇa or arūpa-Īśvaraḥ. So the one who has transcended from ēka-rūpa, the one who has come to anēka-rūpa, sooner or later, he will come to arūpa-Īśvara; which is beyond all forms.

And why should we come to arūpa-Īśvara? Why can't we stop at anēka rūpa Īśvara? Anēka rūpa Īśvara is incomplete because; wherever forms are there, there, time and space also come. Therefore viśva-rūpa-Īśvara is also within time, space and modification; and therefore Kṛṣṇa says: I will take you beyond name and form and I will take you to arūpa-Īśvara; which is beyond dēśa kālā; which is called sat cid ānanda svarūpam.

I will give them arūpa Īśvara jñānam. So thus Kṛṣṇa introduces virāt Īśvara; virāt bhakthi and also the virāt bhakthi phalam. Thereafter from verse No.12 to 18, Arjuna presents a request to Lord Kṛṣṇa; because Arjuna feels that he is not yet ready for arūpa Īśvaraḥ; because from Ēka rūpa Īśvara we can never directly go to the arūpa-Īśvara; it is such a big jump.

So between ēka-rūpa-Īśvara and ēka rūpa Īśvara means God as a person; between ēka-rūpa-Īśvara and arūpa-Īśvara; we all require an intermediary stage; what is that stage? Anēka-rūpa-Īśvara; we have to learn to appreciate. I have to learn to see the creation as God. And only when I see creation as God; rāgaḥ and dvēsaḥ will become feebler, weaker and weaker. Otherwise there will be strong rāgaḥ dvēsaḥ; and with strong rāgaḥ dvēsaḥ; one can never come to nirguṇa-Īśvara.

And therefore how to neutralise rāgaḥ-dvēsaḥ; everything is the manifestation of the Lord; how can I be attached to something; And how can I be averse to something; how can I reject something. Nothing is rejectible in the creation; nothing I hate; hatred as an internal emotion; It does not mean that if there is a cobra, you should take the cobra in hand; you can keep safe distance. But mentally I accept that also as an integral part of the creation. So mentally I do not reject anything or hate anything.

So thus rāgaḥ-dvēsaḥ nivrithyartham; from ēka rūpa, we have to go to anēka-rūpa, therefore Arjuna requests Lord Kṛṣṇa; Hey Kṛṣṇa; please give me some more details regarding viśva-rūpa-Īśvara or anēka-rūpa-Īśvara; and also his glories that we find; directly perceived or enumerated in the scriptures.

And therefore from verse No.12 to 18; we get Arjuna's request for viśva-rūpa-Īśvara varṇanam; and the viśva-rūpa-Īśvara vibhūthi-varṇanam; vibhūthi means what; the glory.

And why should Arjuna asks for the glories of viśvarūpa Īśvara? Arjuna himself gives the logic also; I cannot visualise the viśva-rūpa with my mind because the viśva-rūpa-Īśvara is too vast for me to conceive of. I have got a limited mind and sense organs; that if I see in this direction, I cannot see what is here. So with this limited sense organs, I can I meditate upon the viśva rūpa, the totality. If I have to worship Mother India; where will I put flowers; because it is a such a vast country. So what is the best method; when it is too big; you invent a symbol; like a flag; a bharatha māta dēvi picture. And in that form you invoke the entire country and salute. Similarly Arjuna wants to take any particular object in the creation as a symbol; symbol means alambanaṁ. Just as we take a piece of saligrāma to invoke Lord Viṣṇu; a small flame to invoke dēvi; a lump of turmeric to invoke Ganapathy, Arjuna wants to invoke few alambanaṁs symbols to invoke. And therefore he says:

yābhirvibhūtibhīrlōkānimāṁstvam vyāpya tiṣṭhasi||10.16||

कथं विद्यामहं योगिन् त्वां सदा परिचिन्तयन् ।
केषु केषु च भावेषु चिन्त्योऽसि भगवन्मया ॥ १०.१७ ॥

[katham vidyāmaham yōgiṁstvām sadā paricintayan|
kēṣu kēṣu ca bhāvēṣu cintyō'si Bhagavānmayā || 10.17 ||](#)

cintyō'si means I can meditate upon you. This was Arjuna's requests and Kṛṣṇa accepts to fulfil Arjuna request and therefore we get from the 19th verse up to the 41st verse, Kṛṣṇa's enumeration of some of His vibhūthis; vibhūthi means what? Glories.

So Kṛṣṇa says any glorious thing in the creation is My glory; our earth itself is surviving because of Sun; Sun can be taken as a symbol for worship and that is what we have done also; daily morning we invoke the Lord in the Surya. But if Sun is not there; what to do? Light a lamp; fire is very important for my survival; and therefore flame, Agni becomes a symbol; Vāyu becomes a symbol; Bhūmi becomes a symbol.

And why, you take your own body, any organ is a glory of Lord; we can never create any organ; to maintain itself we are struggling with great difficulty; eye is a glory; so in the Upaniṣads; Indōhavi nāmaīṣaḥ yōyam dakṣināṣam puruṣaḥ; meditate upon your eye as Īśvara; in which culture you can see that; meditation upon your very eye as God; because the glory of the eye, the more you think, the more wonderful it is. Thus Kṛṣṇa enumerates a set of vibhūthis; some of the found in the scriptures, some of them found in the creation; I do not want to go into the details again; we have seen that in the class.

But in the beginning and end Kṛṣṇa mentions two important ones and what are they? In the beginning says: the very consciousness or the very life principle because of which your material body is a sentient one; not like one of the statues of Marina; there are many statues in Marina; but it cannot do anything; crow will be sitting on top of Gandhiji and dropping; Gandhiji has a stick; and can he not drive the crow away with that stick; he cannot do that?

So what makes the difference between that statue and this body; both are made of chemicals; that is also chemical; this is also chemical; but this chemistry is called bio-chemistry; because of the unique invisible feature called caitanyam; Kṛṣṇa says that caitanyam is the greatest glory of mine.

And then at the end Kṛṣṇa says; not only consciousness is my glory; in fact the very existence of the world really does not belong to the world, it is lent by Me. Like what? The very existence of the ornament does not belong to the ornament; it belongs to what: gold. How do you prove; remove the gold and try to keep the ornament. So when you say ornament is the very existence comes from gold; when you say desk is: the existence comes from the wood; when you say world is: the existence come from the basic stuff of the creation called Īśvara. Thus starting with the cit, Kṛṣṇa concludes with sat; all are my glories; but the problem is Cit and Sat are nirguṇa svarūpam.

Therefore meditating upon nirguṇa cit is difficult; meditation on nirguṇa sat is difficult and therefore you can take any saguṇa svarūpam. So you can take a river and worship; you can take a cow and worship. You can take anything and meditate, and worship as God.

And then in conclusion Kṛṣṇa says Hey Arjuna, until now I said I am in the creation; in the form of various glories; really speaking, I am not in the creation; but the creation is in Me; gold is not in the ornaments; gold is not in the ornaments; all the ornaments are nāma rūpas, resting on gold. All the ornaments are names and forms, resting on one gold. Similarly God is in the creation; on the other hand, creation is a bunch of names and forms; bunch of names and forms resting on the fundamental cause, that is Me. And if you are not satisfied with these glories; Kṛṣṇa says you can add your own. And he gives a clue; how to add to the list.

तत्तदेवावगच्छ त्वं मम तेजोऽशसम्भवम् ॥ १०.४१ ॥

tattadēvāvagaccha tvaṁ mama tējōśasambhavam || 10.41 ||](#)

Anything wonderful you see; that is the glory of the Lord; anything powerful you see, it is the glory of the Lord; the atom energy; which was not discovered before. Now that atom is what: again the glory of the Lord; and Kṛṣṇa says these glories can never be exhaustively mentioned because it is inexhaustible. Because from the ant onwards, everything has got its own glories; birds have its own glories. They say aero dynamics of the bird is never repeatable by any aero plane; even though aero plane is designed based on the bird; பறவையை கண்டான்; விமானம் படைத்தான்; paṛavayai kaṇṭāṇ; vimāṇam paṭaittāṇ (you must be remembering, it is only a cinema song, not Gīta, whether you remember it or not). Paṛavayai kaṇṭāṇ; vimāṇam paṭaittāṇ. Even though we are trying to imitate a bird, they say we are not able to; the aerodynamics of the bird is. Similarly the spiders' web; they are trying to imitate; they have never been able to. Therefore you can take a web and meditate; instead of getting angry with spider; so one bhaktha beautifully says:

सुर-तरुवर-शाखा लेखनी पत्रमुर्वी .
लिखति यदि गृहीत्वा शारदा सर्वकालं
तदपि तव गुणानामीश पारं न याति ॥ ३२ ॥

[asita-giri-samaṁ syāt kajjalaṁ sindhu-pātrē
sura-taruvara-śākhā lēkhanī patramurvī.
likhati yadi gṛhītvā śāradā sarvakālaṁ
tadapi tava guṇānāmīśa pāraṁ na yāti || 32 ||](#)

So one Bhaktha ~ (Śrī Puṣpadanta viracitaṁ śivamahimnaḥ stōtram) ~ beautifully writes; he says: Suppose Sarasvati dēvi herself plans to write all the glories of the Lord. Sarasvati; We are only half baked in knowledge; but Sarasvati is the goddess is the learning; Sarasvati plans and what did she do; she took a pen; and one pen is not enough. Therefore she had hundreds of pens made out of all the heavenly trees; she thought that on earth no deforestation need not be made; she took all the heavenly trees; she took; sura varu taru śāka lēkhanī; millions of pens she kept.

And what is the letter pad? Local letter pad not enough; Ūrvi; she took the entire surface of the earth as the letterpad.

And then she wanted ink; in those days, one has to dip in the ink and write; the entire ocean was emptied; and in the place of water, ink was kept;

And what is the weight of the ink; the weight of the Himalayās; asita-giri-samarṁ syāt; Himālayā mountain.

[asita-giri-samarṁ syāt kajjalaṁ sindhu-pātrē
sura-taruvara-śākhā lēkhanī patramurvī.](#)

And Sarasvati started writing the glories of the Lord.

When she started; some time back and continuously writing without going to sleep; without eating; likhati yadi gr̥hītvā śāradā sarvakālam; even if Sarasvati dēvi keeps on writing all the time; this bhaktha says; tadapi tava guṇānāmīśa pāram na yāti; still Sarasvati will not be able to exhaust your glories.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa tells; Hey Arjuna, I cannot exhaust; the time is up and the tenth chapter will never end; and therefore I have given you sample; the rest you can build up.

And having said that I am in the world in the beginning, Kṛṣṇa concluded saying I am not in the world, whereas the world is in Me; and this last verse becomes the seed for viśva rūpa darśana yōgaḥ.

So when we say God is in the world; it is called Vibhūthi yōgaḥ; when you say that world is in God; that is called viśvarūpa darśana yōgaḥ; both we must be able to appreciate. See the water in waves; that is also an appreciation. See all the waves in the water; that is also another form of appreciation. And since the glories of the Lord have been talked about in this chapter, this chapter gets the title Vibhūthi yōgaḥ, this chapter dealing Īśvara's mahima.

CHAPTER – 11.

THE YOGA OF THE VISION OF THE COSMIC FORM

Having completed the 10th chapter, titled Vibhūthi yōgaḥ, now we are entering the 11th chapter, which is called viśvarūpa darśana yōgaḥ; and the word yōgaḥ coming at the end of every chapter refers to the topic or episode. When we have got a serial in the TV, they have got episode 1, episode 2, etc. Similarly, in the Gīta also, each chapter refers to a topic.

So viśva-rūpa-darśana yōgaḥ; which means the episode which deals with viśvarūpa darśanam. Viśvarūpa darśanam means the vision of the Lord as viśva-rūpa. Viśva-rūpa Īśvara darśanam; Viśva-rūpa-darśanam, and viśva-rūpam is the name of the Lord. Thus viśva-rūpa-darśanam yōgaḥ; the vision of the Lord as viśva-rūpa. What do you mean by the word viśvarūpa? Rūpam means a form and Viśva means the universe or form; viśva-rūpa means viśva-ēva rūpam akhāraḥ yasya; viśva-rūpa, the Lord whose very form, is the universe itself. The Lord whose form is nothing but the very universe itself.

So the question is how can one have the darśanam of the Lord in the form of the world? Jagat rūpane Īśvarasya-darśanam katham sambhavathi? How can we have the darśanam of the Lord in the form of the world itself? When a devotee wants to have the darśanam of the Lord, in Rāma form, or Dēvi form, or in Kṛṣṇa form, what should he do? The scriptures talk about the sādhanās for getting Rāma darśanam; Kṛṣṇa darśanam; Dēvi darśanam; Lakṣmi darśanam; the scriptures talk about that. Such a darśanam of the deity is called Dēvathā sāḡṣātkāraḥ; the direct vision of the Lord, as Rāma, as Kṛṣṇa or as Dēvi. And to have a such a darśanam, Rāma darśanam, Kṛṣṇa darśanam, the Gaṇapati darśanam, etc., the scriptures talk about the sādhanā in the form of tapas. In the purāṇās, we hear the devotees performing tapas; tapas is nothing but concentration or meditation.

And what the devotee should do is, he should first decide which darśanam he wants; he has to decide which form. And if it is a particular form, then he has to concentrate on that particular form, as described in the respective dhyāna slōkā; and that is how the dhyāna slōkās becomes very very important; he has to learn that dhyāna slōkā and he has to concentrate on that particular description.

मेघश्यामं पीतकौशेयवासं
श्रीवत्साङ्कं कौस्तुभोद्भासिताङ्गम् ।
पुण्योपेतं पुण्डरीकायताक्षं विष्णुं वन्दे सर्वलोकैकनाथम् ॥ ४ ॥

mēghaśyāmaṁ pītakaśēyavāsaṁ śrīvatsāṅkaṁ kaustubhōdbhāsītāṅgam । puṇyōpētaṁ puṇḍarīkāyatākṣaṁ viṣṇuṁ vandē sarvalōkaikanātham ॥ 4 ॥

He has to visualise that particular form and generally a mantra is also taught, just as Nārada taught mantra to Dṛuva, Pṛahlāda etc. and the devotee has to do the Purascaraṇam of that mantra; Purascaraṇam means what akṣara lakṣam or akṣara kōdi; what do you mean by akṣara-lakṣam; you find out how many letters are there in that mantra; if there are six letters, you multiply it with as many lakhs; if it is aṣṭākṣara; 8 lakhs; or to be more effective, 8 crores; if it is dvadaśakṣaram 12 lakhs or preferably 12 crores; if it is Gāyathri, you had it!, 24 letters are there; 24 lakhs or 24 crores. So you do dhyānam; you do Purascaraṇam, as described in the scriptures; and if a person follows this kind of tapas, the śāstrās prescribe that the devotee will have the darśanam of the Lord in that particular form. Not that it is a mental projection, but the Lord himself with his māya śakti will give darśanam to the devotee in that particular form.

And this exercise is called Dēvathā sāṅkatkāraḥ; and we have got the stories of many devotees who had the darśanam of the Lord and who had even talked to the Lord and this Dēvathā sāṅkatkāraḥ is what? Rāma-rūpa Īśvara-darśanam or Kṛṣṇa rūpa Īśvara-darśanam; the vision of the Lord as Rāma, as Kṛṣṇa, as Dēvi; as Dakṣiṇamūrthy, as Gaṇēśa, etc.

Now the question is: if you want to have the vision of the Lord as the world itself; what to do? If you want to have the vision of the Lord as the world itself, what should you do? You have to invite the Lord to come in the form of what? In the form of what? If you want to have Rāma rūpa Īśvara rūpa darśanam, you have to invite Lord to come in Rāma form. And if your iṣṭa Dēvathā is Śiva and you want Śiva-darśanam, you have to invite the Lord to come in the form of Śiva; if you want Viśva-rūpa Īśvara-darśanam, you want to have the vision of the Lord in the form of the world, and for that what should you do; should you invite the Lord to come in the form of the world? Should you invite the Lord in the form of the world? What do you feel? If you say you have to invite the Lord to come in the form of world; that means I have not understood the meaning of the word Viśva-rūpa; this is the most confusing chapter. If I understand the significance of the word

Viśva-rūpa, it means I want to have the darśanam of the Lord in the form of world and unfortunately I cannot invite the Lord to come in the form of the world, because the Lord is what? Already Lord has arrived in the form of world; When? When? Even before our birth:

तस्माद्वा एतस्मादात्मन आकाशः संभूतः | आकाशाद्वायुः |
वायोरग्निः | अग्नेरापः | अद्भ्यः पृथिवी |

tasmādvā ētasmādātmana ākāśaḥ sambhūtaḥ | ākāśadvāyuḥ |
vāyōragniḥ | agnērāpaḥ | adbhyaḥ pṛthivī | ... |१|| इति प्रथमोऽनुवाकः || Taittiriya

The Lord in the form of viśva-rūpa has already arrived.

Now the question is what should I do, to have the darśanam of the Lord in the form of the world? What should I do to have the darśanam of the Lord in the form of the world? There is only one answer possible; which you have to understand very clearly. If you want to have the darśanam of the Lord in the form of the world, that is Viśva-rūpa Īśvara-darśanam; there is only one method; and you know what is that method? That method is learning to see the world; learning to see the world in the form of the Lord is the only answer. I should train myself; I should learn to look at the very world as Īśvara. When I learn to look at the world as Īśvara; then Īśvara is giving darśanam to me in the form of the world. Therefore Viśva-rūpa darśanam is possible only by one method; not Purascaraṇam; not tapas; not kōdirūpa avrithri; they are all meant for Rāma darśanam; Kṛṣṇa-darśanam. If you are interested in that; you can do Purascaraṇam; but if you want Viśva-rūpa Īśvara-darśanam; there is only one method; I have to train my mind to look at the very world as the manifestation of the Lord.

And how can I train myself? And this training is possible only by one method; and that method is: I should clearly understand and assimilate the teaching. What teaching? That the Lord alone manifests in the form of the world. To put in technical language, Lord alone is the material-cause of the universe, Lord alone evolves or manifests to appear as the universe, and therefore every appearance obtaining in front of me is different versions of the Lord; just as every ornament is different versions of that one gold alone/ Not only I should clearly receive this teaching; I should also assimilate this teaching. And only by receiving and assimilating the teaching; my perceptive or my vision will change.

And this change of perspective or this new perspective that I receive through the teaching is called divya-cakṣuḥ; or jñāna-cakṣuḥ; the eye of wisdom; the eye of understanding; and that understanding is that the Lord alone manifests as everything. And therefore it is not a physical eye; it is not a mystic vision that we are talking about. There is no mysticism involved in the 11th chapter, there is no mystery involved in the 11th chapter. It is only a new perspective that is developed by understanding the teaching which started from the 7th chapter; in the 7th chapter, 9th and 10th chapters, Kṛṣṇa has been trying to give only this understanding. It is like somebody gives you a piece of candy or laddu and you like laddu very much and therefore the moment you receive you are about to straightaway swallow. And that person says that this laddu comes from Tirupathi. Now you have got an additional information, which is purely an intellectual appreciation; that this piece of laddu is coming from Tirupati; the moment you get this knowledge, suddenly your perceptiveness changes, It is not a mere laddu with sugar and whatever be the material; it has some invisible factor; which gives the status of prasāda; so this laddu enjoys the status of a prasāda; which status is not physically visible; but which is appreciated through the eye of understanding; what is the understanding; it is coming from Tirupati. Now once this third eye, which is developed through this understanding, contacts the laddu; then I see prasādam. And the moment I understand it is prasāda, it does not go to the mouth directly, before going to the mouth; it has to go to your eyes.

How did this difference come about? Can you see the difference chemically? Suppose you do chemical analysis; will there be some chemical called prasāda; it has nothing to do with physicality or material feature. It is something purely adṛṣtam; which is born of understanding; this is called divinisation of the laddu; and it is brought out by a change in perspective and a change in perspective comes through the understanding or knowledge.

Similarly, a nāsthika also looks at the world. For him the world is a bundle of chemicals or protons or neutrons; electrons in violent motions. That is the world for a nāsthika. But for a person who has understood Kṛṣṇa's teaching, the world has got something more, which is not scientifically detectable; but it can be only appreciable or appreciable through the eye of understanding.

And therefore in the 11th chapter, Kṛṣṇa wants to communicate this idea; that if you assimilate this teaching, a perspective change will take place; the world will have an extra feature which is non-physical; and that feature is that it is divine. And once I learn to look at the very world as divine, I see that God is giving darśan all the time; I need not invite Lord to come in front of me, as we read in purāṇās. Śiva or Viṣṇu or any deity comes and blesses the devotee; shows the hand, bhaktha I am pleased, what do you want; invariably they ask for non-death state; and invariably the Lord says No; then something else he wants; and the Lord gives that and then: tatraivāntargatē prabhuḥ; he came, he left. We do not criticise that darśanam; but Kṛṣṇa says better than that darśanam is this āyārām gayārām-darśanam better than darśanam is having the darśanam of the Lord 24 hours; rasō'hamapsu kauntēya prabhā'smi śaśisūryayōḥ.... || 7.8 ||.

When I drink water, when I see the Sun, when I see the Moon, when I am entering the river OK. (no rivers are there now). When I am entering the river; or whatever I am doing; I have got contact with the Lord, which is nithya Īśvara saṁbanda. And if you want nithya Īśvara saṁbanda; prathakṣa Īśvara saṁbanda; an Īśvara who never comes and comes, but who is ever part of your life, you should have Viśva-rūpa Īśvara darśanam; and it is brought out by a change of perspective caused by the assimilation of this teaching. This is the important content of the 11th chapter.

So therefore do not imagine Viśva-rūpam is another form of God; like Rāma or Kṛṣṇa, and that Viśva-rūpa will appear for 2 minutes before you and will disappear; do not think. Viśva-rūpa is the Lord, all the time available in the pillar and the scratch; தூணிலும் இருப்பார்; தூரும்பிலும் இருப்பார்; காக்கை சிறகினிலே நந்தலாலா; tūṇilum iruppār; turumpilum iruppār; kākkai ciṛakiṇilē nnatalālā; see the Lord everywhere.

This is the background of the important chapter, Viśva-rūpa-darśana yōgaḥ. With this background, we will enter the chapter proper.

अर्जुन उवाच Arjuna uvāca Arjuna said यत् परमम् yat paramam This supreme गुह्यं वचः guhyaṁ vacaḥ secret teaching अध्यात्मसंज्ञितम् adyātmasaṁjñitam named Adhyātma उक्तं त्वया uktāṁ tvayā has been imparted by You मदनुग्रहाय madanugrahāya for blessing me. अयं मोहः मम ayaṁ mōhaḥ mama This delusion of mine विगतः तेन vigataḥ tena has gone vigataḥ tena by that

1. Arjuna said: This supreme secret teaching named adhyātma has been imparted by You for blessing me. This delusion of mine has gone by that.

In the first eight verses, we get an introduction to this topic of Viśva-rūpa-Darśanam and it begins with the Arjuna's summarisation and what he has learned in the previous 10 chapters. So he wants to summarise, to convey to the teacher that I have been closely listening to you. Oh Lord; I have not slept off. So therefore in two verses, he summarises 10 chapters. In this first verse, Arjuna summarises the first 6 chapters or to be precise, the five chapters beginning from the 2nd to the 6th.

In the first chapter there is nothing to summarise, because the teaching starts from the 2nd only; and from the 2nd chapter, 11th verse, which is the beginning of the Gītā teaching, up to the end of the 6th chapter, Arjuna summarises.

And what is the essence of these five chapters? The essence is Jīva-svarūpa varṇanam; so description of the essential nature of the individual-jīva; and what is the essential nature of the individual-jīva? Not the physical body; physical-body is only a superficial vesture; if you remember the 2nd chapter, vāsāṃsi jīrṇāni yathā vihāya, navāni grhṇāti narō'parāṇi |... || 2.22 || The physical body is only a temporary dress which we have taken at the time of birth and which we will have to divest or shed at the time of death. Therefore body cannot be myself.

Similarly the mind also is also a temporary instrument I use in the waking and dream state and which I shed at the time of deep sleep state. Therefore neither body am I; nor am I the mind; but I am of the nature of caitanyam; the consciousness principle.

And do you remember the description of consciousness I have given. Consciousness is not a part, product or property of the body; consciousness is an independent entity which pervades and enlivens the body, consciousness is not limited by the boundaries of the body; and consciousness survives even after the fall of the body; that eternal all-pervading consciousness is my nature. Kṛṣṇa gave a brilliant description of this essential nature, in the 2nd chapter from the 12th verse, up to verse No.25, He gave the description. Then he talked about that in the 3rd chapter,

मनसस्तु परा बुद्धिर्यो बुद्धेः परतस्तु सः || ३-४२ ||

[indriyāṇi parāṇyāhurindriyēbhyaḥ param manah |
manasastu parā buddhiryō buddhēḥ paratastu saḥ || 3.42||](#)

In the 4th chapter, in the 5th chapter (these are your homework, to find out where the nature of the jīva is presented in 3, 4, 5, and 6).

And Arjuna says I have understood that well. And he is grateful also. So he says: madanugrahāya tvayā vacaḥ uktārṁ. So the teaching was given by you; vacaḥ means the words of wisdom; was given to me; was imparted to me by you and for what purpose. Madanugrahāya purely for blessing me, saving me from the problem of sorrow, which was described in the first chapter;

What is the title of the first chapter; Arjuna viṣāda-yōgaḥ; there yōgaḥ does not mean spiritual-sādhāna; sorrow is not a spiritual sādhāna; because even before we start sādhāna, we are expert in sorrow. Therefore Arjuna viṣāda yōgaḥ means episode; it is an episode, the topic of Arjuna viṣāda. So to save Arjuna, to lift Arjuna from this sorrow, madanugrahāya tvayā vacaḥ uktām.

And what type of words they are? Arjuna gives a description of Bhagavān's words, paramam vacaḥ; they are the most sacred words; they are supremely valuable words, because they are the words revealing the ātma, the reality; vacaḥ paramatvam.

And not only it is the most supreme sacred holy words; guhyam; and they are the greatest secret also; which is not easily or ordinarily available in the world; because such words can come from only jñānis; and jñānis themselves are rare in the world;

मनुष्याणां सहस्रेषु कश्चिद्यतति सिद्धये |
यततामपि सिद्धानां कश्चिन्मां वेत्ति तत्त्वतः || ७-३ ||

[Manuṣyāṇām sahasrēṣu kaścidyatati siddhayē |
yatatāmapī siddhānām kaścīnmām vētti tattvataḥ || 7.3 ||](#)

A few people are interested in becoming a jñāni; and even those few who are interested, actually only a very few become. Therefore jñānis jñāni's teachings are rare; therefore guhyam; most secret.

Then adyātma-samjitham; these words are called spiritual-words; so adyātma-samjitham; called spiritual-teaching; because it is dealing with the spirit; spiritual means that which deals with Spirit is called Spirit; spirit means not methane alcohol; not that; Spirit is Ātma. So that which is dealing with spirit; that which is different from matter. So it is not a material science; but it is a spiritual teaching/

And by this wonderful teaching; uktam tvayā mama ayam mōhaḥ vigataḥ; my delusion is gone. So you should remember the context of the Gīta teaching; Arjuna surrendered to Lord Kṛṣṇa uttering the words,

कार्पण्यदोषोपहतस्वभावः
पृच्छामि त्वां धर्मसम्मूढचेताः |
यच्छ्रेयः स्यान्नश्चितं ब्रूहि तन्मे
शिष्यस्तेऽहं शाधि मां त्वां प्रपन्नम् || २-७ ||

[kārpaṇyadōṣōpahatasvabhāvaḥ
pṛcchāmi tvām dharmasammūḍhacētāḥ | yacchrēyaḥ syānnāścitaṁ brūhi tanmē śiṣyastē'ham śādhi mām tvām prapannam || 2.7 ||](#)

One side my mind says, killing my gurus like Bhīṣma, Drōṇa etc. is mahāpāpam; guru hathya is a mahāpāpam; on the other side of the mind says that even himsa is OK for the protection of dharma; because Bhagavān himself destroys people: paritrāṇāya sādḥnām vināśāya ca duṣkṛtām |.... || 4.8 || So himsa is OK; one corner of mind says;

himśa is not OK; another corner of my mind says; my doubts are getting cleared as I listen to your teaching.

Therefore ayaṁ mama mōhaḥ; mōhaḥ is two-fold; (1) dharma-adharma mōhaḥ; and (2) ātma-anātma mōhaḥ; confusion regarding what is right and what is wrong; ethical conflict; and philosophical confusion.

And Gīta is a unique teaching which is dealing with both the ethical conflict as well as philosophical confusion. Normally the vēda-pūrva-bhāga is meant to resolve ethical conflict; vēda-antha-bhāga is meant to resolve philosophical confusion. Gīta is a unique śāstra which deals with ethical conflict; as well as philosophical confusion. And therefore Arjuna says; I am getting clearer and clearer.

Having summarised the first six chapters, now Arjuna wants to summarise the next 4 chapters, 7, 8, 9 and 10. That comes in the 2nd slōkā.

भवाप्ययौ हि भूतानां श्रुतौ विस्तरशो मया ।
त्वत्तः कमलपत्राक्ष माहात्म्यमपि चाव्ययम् ॥ ११.२ ॥

bhavāpyayau hi bhūtānāṁ śrutau vistaraśō mayā |
tvattaḥ kamalapatrākṣa māhātmyamapi cāvyaḥyam || 11.2 ||

कमलपत्राक्ष kamalapatrākṣa Oh Kṛṣṇa ! हि hi Verily, भवाप्ययौ bhavāpyayau the origin and dissolution भूतानाम् bhūtānām of beings च अपि ca api as well as अव्ययं माहात्म्यम् avyaḥyam māhātmyam (Your) inexhaustible glory श्रुतौ śrutau were heard मया mayā by me त्वत्तः tvattaḥ from You विस्तरशः vistaraśaḥ in detail.

2. Oh Kṛṣṇa! Verily, the origin and dissolution of beings as well as (Your) inexhaustible glory were heard by me from You in detail.

Arjuna's reverence for Lord Kṛṣṇa is increasing chapter by chapter, because of this valuable teaching and Arjuna had never admired Kṛṣṇa never as a teacher; he had moved with Kṛṣṇa and seen several other roles of Kṛṣṇa; but here alone he sees Kṛṣṇa as jagat guruḥ.

And therefore he addressed, he uses beautiful words; kamalapatrākṣa; so kamalpatra means lotus petal; ākṣa means eyes; Oh Lord who is so beautiful with eyes like the lotus petals. So here the description of the external beauty is more to show the inner beauty. Therefore kamala patra lotus petal; not lotus leaf; lotus leaf is very big like a big tāmbālaṁ; if your eyes are like that, everybody will run away; lotus petal will be only beautiful; kamala patra; phullāravindāyatha patra; there I have told you in the introduction, but because it was years before I am reminding you now!.

So namō'stu tē vyāsa viśālabuddhē phullāravindāyatapatranētra. There patra means petal; not newspaper also; so kamala patrah ākṣa; from the 7th chapter up to the 10th chapter, you dealt with Īśvara-svarūpam; so from 2nd to 5th; it was the jīva-svarūpam, the nature of the individual.

from 7th to 10th, especially 7, 9 and 10, the 8th chapter is an odd man out chapter. So in these chapters, you described Īśvara-svarūpam.

And what was the description that you gave? Or definition that you gave; you defined the Lord as jagat kāraṇam. I knew that the Lord is the cause of the universe. And that too what type of cause? More importantly, Lord as the very material-cause of the universe, which means, the Lord is the basic stuff out of whom the universe has evolved.

And if Lord is the material-cause of the universe, it means out of the Lord alone the universe has emerged, in the Lord alone, the universe rests and back to the Lord alone the universe resolves; sṛṣṭi stiti layam kāraṇam; upādāna kāraṇam. The technical points one should remember; material-cause is the cause of sṛṣṭi stiti layam; just as ocean is the material-cause of the waves; So waves are born out of ocean; rests in the ocean and resolves in to the ocean;

Therefore Arjuna says, bhūtānāṃ tatvaḥ bhavāpyayau; bhavaḥ means utpathiḥ; sṛṣṭi; and apyayaḥ means layaḥ; or praḷayaḥ; So bhava apyayau means sṛṣṭi and praḷayam; and we have to supply the third one; sṛṣṭi, praḷayam; if you say what is balance; sthiti; so bhava apyayau means sṛṣṭi stithi laya.

Of whom? All the things and beings; cārācarātmakam jagat; this whole creation of things and beings tatvaḥ is from you alone, as the very adhāra, as the very āsṛaya.

That means what? If waves are born out of the ocean and resolves into the ocean, what is the conclusion I get; there are no waves separate from the ocean. In fact, waves is only an additional name given to the very ocean itself; similarly the whole creation is like a wave in the ocean of God; Śankarācārya beautiful presents in Ātma Bōdha;

सर्गस्थितिलयान् यान्ति बुद्बुदानीव वारिणि ॥ ८ ॥

[upādānē:'khilādhārē jaganti paramēśvarē |
sargasthithilayān yānti budbudānīva vāriṇi || 8||](#)

So the entire-cosmos of several billions of galaxies is nothing but bubbles. So each galaxy can be compared to a small bubble and all these bubbles of galaxies are rising from whom; upādānē:'khilādhārē; and there are no bubbles separate from ocean. Similarly there is no creation separate from God or to put in another language; God is in the form of world, I heard very clearly, śrutau; means this was heard by me; mayā śrutau;

And how did you teach? Vistaraśaḥ; very elaborately. The upaniṣadic teachers are not that patient; they give the sṛiṣṭi and all within a few mantras.

आकाशः संभूतः | आकाशाद्वायुः | वायोरग्निः | अग्नेरापः | अद्भ्यः पृथिवी | पृथिव्या ओषधयः | ओषधीभ्योऽन्नम् | अन्नात्पुरुषः |

ākāśaḥ sambhūtaḥ | ākāśadvāyuḥ | vāyōragniḥ | agnērāpaḥ | adbhyaḥ pṛthivī | pṛthivyā oṣadhayaḥ | oṣadhībhyo:'nnam | annātpuruṣaḥ |

Over; Now you can go; They will say; only a few lines and we are supposed to grasp by the time; otherwise they will send you to some tutorial college; you can go they will say; so the Upaniṣad assumes that the student needs only a crisp teaching, because the Upaniṣadic students are supposed to be utthama adhikāris, whereas in the Bhagavad-Gīta, Arjuna represents madhyama adhikāris;

And therefore Kṛṣṇa goes on repeating and therefore Arjuna says; vistaraśaḥ; in the 7th chapter what is said, he repeats in the 9th chapter, because Kṛṣṇa knows and Arjuna also knows that by the time we come to the 9th chapter, 7th chapter is forgotten; Whereas is the question, even the 8th is itself gone; it is too far away to remember; therefore he teaches every time as though fresh. I am not telling about YOU! I know you remember well.

So mayā vistaraśō śrutau tvattaḥ; not only you taught this, māhātmyamapi cāvyayam; So in the capping 10th chapter, the culminating 10th chapter, you also revealed your glories, which are strewn or spread all over the universe. If you have to appreciate the glory of the Lord as Kṛṣṇa, then they are particular individual glories which have to be found in the Bhāgavadam 10th chapter, there you read, Bhagavān killed this rakṣasa or that one and he lifted the Govardhana parvatham; etc. they are all particular description attributable to that particular form of lord; and if you want to say Kṛṣṇa mahima; that is Kṛṣṇa; Rāma mahima if you want to listen; listen to Rāmayaṇa.

And if you want to appreciate viśva rūpa mahima; which book you have to see; you need not see any book, but only open the eyes, it is the Vibhūthi.

And therefore this Viśva-rūpa-Vibhūthi is avyayam; avyayam means inexhaustible. So ēka-rūpa-Īśvara mahima is vyayam; exhaustible; whereas viśva-rūpa-Īśvara mahima is avyayam; limitless; that also you talked about in the 10th chapter, therefore Jīva svarūpam has been talked about; Īśvara-svarūpam has been talked about; Īśvara mātmyam; mātmyam means another word for Vibhūthi; mātmyam. All of them I have heard very well; I have also understanding; and what is the proof?

My delusion is gone; not totally; if it is totally gone; Om Tat Sat, we would all have walked out. The very fact that the Gītā continues, the 11th chapter comes, then comes the 12th,13th indicates that the delusion is gone to a great extent; but still some more is there; only the 18th chapter it is completely gone; naṣṭo mōhaḥ smṛtirlabdḥ; OK; if the delusion is gone; what is Arjuna's next request? That he wants to hear hereafter:

एवमेतद्यथात्थ त्वमात्मानं परमेश्वर ।
द्रष्टुमिच्छामि ते रूपमैश्वरं पुरुषोत्तम ॥ ११.३ ॥

ēvamētadyathā'ttha tvamātmānam paramēśvara |
draṣṭumicchāmi tē rūpamaiśvaraṁ puruṣōttama || 11.3 ||

परमेश्वर paramēśvara Oh Lord! एतत् ētat It is एवम् ēvam just so यथा त्वम् आत्थ yathā tvam āttha as You describe आत्मानम् ātmānam Yourself. पुरुषोत्तम puruṣōttama Oh Lord! इच्छामि द्रष्टुम् icchāmi draṣṭum I desire to see ते एश्वरं रूपम् tē eśvaraṁ rūpam Your divine form.

3. It is just so as You describe Yourself. Oh Lord! I desire to see Your divine form.

So in every verse Arjuna adds one or two words of the Lord's glory; so in the previous verse, kamalapatrākṣa he said; here he adds two words; paramēśvara and puruṣōttama.

Paramēśvara means the supreme Lord, the controller; not only the one who has created the world; but the one who sustains the world by maintaining the physical-laws of the creation. Therefore parama Īśvaraḥ; sthiti kāraṇabhuthā; you are.

Not only that; you are puruṣōttama also; puruṣōttama means the Supreme Lord; the greatest Lord; the word puruṣōttama has got a philosophical significance also; which Kṛṣṇa himself will teach in the 15th chapter. In fact, the entire chapter is titled puruṣōttama yōga; there Kṛṣṇa will point out puruṣōttama is nirguṇa brahma. So those details we will see later; here we will take the simple word, the supreme Lord. Here the interesting thing is paramēśvara thing is generally used for Lord Śiva; conventionally; Even Viṣṇu is also paramēśvara; and puruṣōttama is conventionally used for Viṣṇu; even though Śiva is also puruṣōttama; by using both these words, Vyāsācārya wants to make it clear; Śiva and Viṣṇu are one and the same; do not quarrel. You can continue to have Vibhūthi or nāmam; but do not compare and quarrel; both words are used.

Hey Kṛṣṇa, ētat yathā tvam āttha ēvaṁ; whatever you are teaching me is perfectly understandable; I have no difficulty in accepting the teaching because it is a systematic teaching; if Bhagavān is the cause, and world is effect; the logical consequence is what? The effect cannot be separate from the cause; therefore the world cannot be separate from God. It is a very very logical conclusion; and if the world is non-separate from God; all the non-glories of the world should naturally belong to the Lord; because of that, I have no resistance in accepting that teaching. Therefore, ēvaṁ ēva means OK; Arjuna is giving certificate to Kṛṣṇa as though Kṛṣṇa needs Arjuna's certificate. Anyway Kṛṣṇa must be smiling.

ātmānam; here ātmānam means what? You are teaching or talking about Yourself; because description of God means what? Description of Kṛṣṇa only; because Kṛṣṇa is the Lord; Therefore what you say about Lord is perfectly acceptable. Then what is my problem; but; this is the problem; everything is fine Swamiji, but.. !! That is why chapters should come; So long but comes, next chapter, next chapter, comes. You have to say fine without but; Here also Arjuna says but; what is the but?

Now intellectually I am able to understand that the whole world must be divine; Why? Because the whole world is the manifestation of God; therefore there is nothing that is unholy; everything is sacred; everything is holy; everything has to be worshipped. So there is nothing that I can accept; and what you call reject; there is no question of dividing the world into acceptable and non-acceptable, because when the whole creation is God; how can I look down upon anything.

Therefore if I have thoroughly assimilated this teaching, I should be able to look at the world as divine. And if I am able to look at the world as divine; I should never develop dvēṣa towards anyone. But my problem is what? One side I say everything is God; but when I come to interaction; there is heavy rāga-dvēṣa.

Therefore there is a discrepancy, a gap between what I know and what I am. My intellectual personality and emotional personality is not well harmonised and therefore you should help me in harmonisation. That means what? Whenever I look at this world, I should be able to have as much joy as I get in the darśanam of any form of Lord; any temple; any form of Lord I see; what ānanda I will get; that I should have in the appreciation of this creation also; but that is not there. Now tell me; what I should do, to bridge this gap?

Therefore he asks the question; tē rūpam aiśvaram draṣṭum icchāmi; I would like to have the Viśvarūpa darśanam when I am interacting with the world; as Dayānanda Swami beautifully say; we do not have the sacred-secular division at all in our culture.

In many other cultures, sacred means obtaining in one part of the creation; and outside the temple, everything is secular; but for a Hindu or for a vaidhika, there is nothing called secular, everything is sacred; eating is pūja; remember we are doing pūja daily; eating is pūja, brushing the teeth is pūja; snānam is pūja, everything that I do is pūja and that will come only if I remember that I am always in association with, in the presence of the Lord. How can I have that aiśvaraṁ rūpam? The darśanam, what you call, samparka or contact with that viśva-rūpa-Īśvara; you should help me. This is Arjuna's request; the details of which we will see in the next class.

Hari Om

This eleventh chapter is dealing with Viśva-rūpa-Īśvara darśanam; the vision of the Lord as Viśva-rūpam and we should have a clear understanding about what is Īśvara-darśanam, because in the scriptures Īśvara-darśanam is talked about very often. Especially in the purāṇās we get the description of the devotees having darśanam of the Lord. And it is described as a thrilling extraordinary experience for a devotee. It is a fulfilling experience; it is an elevating experience; this is how the scriptures talk about the devotee's Īśvara darśanam; whether you take purāṇās or Rāmāyaṇam or Mahābhāratham; we get the description; Śabari waiting for a glimpse of Rāma for several years; and at last Rāma gives darśanam to Śabari and the trilling experience that she goes through is described. Even Thyāgarāja sings about "enthathine Śabari bhagyamu"; whatever it is; I do not Telugu very well. Thyāgarāja is thrilled when he talks about Śabari's darśanam of Rāma. And similarly we get the description of Kṛṣṇa darśanam by various devotees in the Bhāgavatam. In all of them, it is described as a wonderful almost mystic type of experience.

And here we should understand, that any experience involves two things; whether it is Īśvara-darśanam, the experience of God or for that matter, any other experience involves two things. One is the object of experience which should be available for me. And it is not enough that the object of experience is available, but we require a subject of experience also, an experienter who is prepared enough to appreciate the experience. The importance of preparation on the part of the subject is very very important. Suppose I talk about the carnatic music of a great musician; and I say it is thrilling fantastic experience. And we arrange the music programme of that musician. But remember, even though the music programme is there, unless the listener has got some idea about what is carnatic music, what are the rāgas, what are the beauties of a rāga, if that person does not have an attuned, a prepared mind, the object of experience is available, but still he does not enjoy the experience, he does not get the impact and that is not because of lack of object, but it is because of the lack of the sensitisation; lack of the preparation on the part of the listener.

So generally we emphasise the object of experience, but we do not focus on the importance of the preparedness on the part of the subject of experience. This is not only true with regard to any experience in the world; this is true with regard to Īśvara darśanam also. When Rāma gives darśanam to Śabari and other devotees; they enjoy the thrill and happiness and we think that they got Īśvara-darśana-ānanda; because Rāma gave the darśanam; but we forget that it is not Rāma's contribution alone, but it is also the contribution of those devotees who have prepared their mind through sādhana.

How do you prove this? What should be done to prove this? Everything should be logically well founded; very simple. Very same Rāma was available for Rāvaṇa also; the very same Rāma, for whose one minute glimpse Śabari thirsted, craved; and she got the darśanam for a limited time only; and she was thrilled but the very same Rāma was available for Rāvaṇa and what happened to Rāvaṇa by Rāma-darśanam?; what happened?; nothing happened. The object is available; but there is no prepared mind to get the impact of the darśanam. Rāvaṇa did not get any impact, there is no question of mōkṣa for Rāvaṇa; even his mind did not change. Rāma gave him a final chance also; இன்ட்று போயி; நாளை வா; inṭru pōyi; nālai vā. You please understand that what you have done is a grave adharmā; kidnapping somebody's else's wife is the gravest sin. Rāvaṇa could not recognise the sin even after; even after what; Rāma darśanam; He went back and he was convinced that he is right; and again he came back for fighting with Rāma. That means what; if Rāmadarśanam should give an impact, contribution of Rāma alone is not enough; For Rāmadarśanam to give the thrill, give that extraordinary impact, there must be preparedness on the part of the person also; and if the person is not prepared, even God is helpless. Even Rāma is helpless because even though he gave darśanam; nothing happened to Rāvaṇa.

What happened to Kaṁsa through Kṛṣṇa-darśanam? Kaṁsa had Kṛṣṇa darśanam all the time; he never had any impact; he never changed from adharma. And we hear the stories of Rākṣasa doing tapas; and Lord appearing in front; and not only is their mind does not change. Even that Īśvara-darśanam they use for negative purposes. They ask for boons for what purpose? For destroying the people. Basmāsura you know. What did he do; he again abused Īśvara-darśanam.

From this a very very important point should be remembered: for Īśvara-darśanam to be Īśvara-darśanam; I should go through tremendous preparation. Without my preparation, even if Īśvara comes right in front of me, nothing will happen. Like the கொட்ட பாக் கு மாதிரி; betul nut, we will remain the same.

In the same way, Viśva-rūpa Īśvara has been described in Chapter 7, 9, 10 and Viśva-rūpa Īśvara is nothing but the Lord in the form of the very universe itself and therefore as I said in the last class, Viśva-rūpa Īśvara is available in front of me or not? If you know the meaning of the word Viśva-rūpa, you should know Viśva-rūpa is right in front; that is why in the Viṣṇu Sahasṛanāma, what is the first name? Viśvam; Then Viṣṇu vaṣatkārah; the first nāma of the Lord is Viśvam; Viśvam means universe, the very universe is Īśvarasya rūpam.

Therefore the object of experience namely Viśva-rūpa Īśvara is already available in front of us; but if we do not get the impact of Viśva-rūpa darśanam, if we do not get the thrill of Viśva-rūpa darśanam, the problem is not with the Viśva-rūpa Īśvara. He has come and is standing in front of us; even before our birth; he is every ready; the Lord as universe is already available even before our birth; but if you do not feel the Īśvara-darśanam, the problem is what? It is not with regard to the availability of Īśvara; but it is with regard to the non-preparedness of the seeker; the devotee.

And that preparedness is nothing but purity of mind; preparedness is nothing but the purity of mind, which is the reduction of the ṣadripūs; kāma, krōdha, lōbha, mōha, mada, mātsarya; They are the cataract obstructing the vision of the already available Lord. When the cataract of the obstacle of kāma krōdhādhi impurity, ahamkāra-mamakārādhi impurity, that scale which covers the vision is removed, God need not come; I begin to appreciate the already available Viśva-rūpam.

So Arjuna's problem is that alone. Arjuna tells the Lord: Oh Lord! I have understood very clearly from the 7, 9th and 10th chapters, that you are the jagat-kāraṇam and therefore you alone are manifesting as the world; and just as gold, the kāraṇam is available in and through all the ornaments, I can understand intellectually that You, the kāraṇam are available in and through all the nāma rūpas of this universe; but I do not get the impact of Īśvara darśanam. And I think that I have not got Viśva-rūpa Īśvara darśanam at all; even though technically, logically the Lord is available in front.

And therefore what must be missing? A prepared mind; an ahamkāra mamakāra rahitha mind; and that prepared mind is called the third eye or divya cakṣu. Just as the carnatic music programme remaining the same, one person is thrilled by the music, the other person does not get any impact, there is no defect in the audibility, hearing is OK;

therefore music programme is audible, but nothing happens? Why? To appreciate you should have a musical ear. Similarly, Arjuna is missing the divya-cakṣu which is nothing but mental purity and therefore Arjuna requests Kṛṣṇa whether he can help in getting the darśanam.

Therefore he asks in the third slōkā; ēva ētat vyatha tatvam ātmanam paramēśvara. You are describing viśva rūpa not as an extraordinary form elsewhere; but viśva rūpa as what?: bhūḥ pādaḥ yasya nābhīr viyatasuranila candrasūryō ca nētrē; the whole universe is Viśva-rūpa you described; I am able to understand; but nothing happens to me; when I am looking at the world; in fact, I am getting more angry with the way things are going.

And therefore where is the lacunae; where is the defect? Therefore Arjuna says; tē rūpam dṛṣṭum icchāmi; I would like to see your rūpam, which rūpam, Viśva-rūpam; aiśvaram rūpam Hey Puruṣōttama. Up to this we saw in the last class.

मन्यसे यदि तच्छक्यं मया द्रष्टुमिति प्रभो ।
योगेश्वर तो मे त्वं दर्शयात्मानमव्ययम् ॥ ११.४ ॥

Manyase yadi tacchakyaṁ mayā draṣṭumiti prabhō |
yōgēśvara tatō me tvaṁ darśayātmānamavyayam || 11.4 ||

प्रभो prabhō Oh ! Lord, यदि मन्यसे yadi manyasē if you consider, इति iti that तत् शक्यम् tat śakyam – it can be द्रष्टुं draṣṭum seen मया mayā by me, ततः tataḥ then, त्वं tvaṁ दर्शय मे darśaya mē you show me, अव्ययम् आत्मानम् avyayam ātmānam your inexhaustible form योगेश्वर yōgēśvara Oh ! Lord

4. Oh! Lord, If you consider that it can be seen by me, then You show me Your inexhaustible form, Oh Lord!

So we have seen the object of perception is available, Viśva-rūpa and still if I do not see, the defect must be only in the observer. There must be some problem with me; that is why I do not feel divinity; when I experience the world. And therefore Hey Kṛṣṇa, is it possible for me at all; to have that divinity or Viśva-rūpa darśanam? Tat draṣṭum śakyam yati manyasē.

Suppose you think that you can prepare me to have the darśan, you please help me; because normally purity of mind can never be brought out overnight; it is a tedious time consuming process which requires a lot of karma-yōga; a lot of upāsana; it is not a revolutionary process but it is an evolution; gradual transformation. You cannot suddenly do that.

And therefore Arjuna asks; Do I have any temporary method by which I will get a pure mind for the glimpse of Viśva-rūpa, Therefore he asks yadi tat śakyam; if it is possible for me; Hē yogēśvara. So Arjuna addresses Kṛṣṇa properly. Yōgēśvara means the Lord of miraculous powers. So you use your miraculous powers and temporarily remove the scales of impurity; the cover of impurity you remove from my eyes or mind and let me enjoy the Viśva-rūpa darśanam.

So Hē yōgēśvara; tataḥ; then, mē ātmānam darśaya; May you show the Viśva-rūpam to me. Here also we should be very careful; He says May you show the Viśva-rūpam really speaking there is no question of showing the Viśva-rūpam, because Viśva-rūpam is available right in front. Therefore showing the Viśva-rūpa is nothing but, may you temporarily remove the obstacles of my mind; darśaya ātmānam; ātmānam here means yourselves, reflexive pronoun; avyayam, means the form, the inexhaustible form, because Viśva-rūpa does not have ēkarūpam. But Viśva-rūpa is anēka rūpa Īśvara and since the Viśva-rūpa Īśvara has infinite forms, inexhaustible number of forms, Arjuna uses the word Avyayam rūpam. May you show.

bahūnyadr̥ṣṭapūrvāṇi paśya"ścaryāṇi bhārata || 11.6 ||

6. Oh Arjuna ! See adityas, vasus, rudras, asvins, and maruts. See many wonders which are not seen before.

Even though Viśva-rūpa is right in front of me, if I should get the impact of Viśva-rūpa darśanam, I should have prepared the mind, which I call, Divya chakṣu or purification and purification is a very slow and gradual process. It involves a long religious life and it also involves following dharmas or values of life. If devotion and values are not there, for such a mind, the benefit of Viśva-rūpa darśanam will not be available.

But even though it is a gradual and time consuming process, Arjuna was lucky enough because he had the Lord, Kṛṣṇa Avatāra in front of him; and therefore he makes a request for a temporary purification of the mind. But the problem is: when by a miraculous process, we get the purification of mind, it will be only temporary. It is like a person living with external support system; like dialysis machine, ventilator; heart purifier, it is an externally aided living; it cannot last long. Similarly by the power of miracle, by the grace of the mahatma or Lord, a person can get a temporary purification and get the impact of Viśva-rūpa, but it will be only temporary; and we find Arjuna getting that temporary benefit.

And not only that: since that purification of the mind is artificial; even the benefit is not fully appreciated. When it is an artificial process; that is Bhagavān aided artificial purification, the full impact is not gained. That is why we will find in the 11th chapter, Arjuna gets the thrill initially, but later, Arjuna is not at all happy with Viśva-rūpa darśanam. Everyone says Arjuna is lucky enough to get Viśva-rūpa darśanam; but Arjuna himself is not able to withstand the impact and therefore at the end of this Chapter, Arjuna says: Hey Kṛṣṇa; Viśva-rūpa-darśanam is wonderful; but I do not want.

So therefore when it is an artificial thing, first of all it will be temporary; secondly it cannot be assimilable experience. Only when we work hard and purify the mind, then alone Viśva-rūpa darśanam is permanent, and we are able to take that Viśva-rūpa darśanam also. However, because of Arjuna's request, Kṛṣṇa accepts and says that I am going to help you in getting the Viśva-rūpa darśanam. Means they give you a special goggle; they say it has come; I have not seen; My Dear Kuttichathān; 3D, I do not know whether anyone has seen; whatever it is; just as we require special goggles for that 3D effect, for Viśva-rūpa effect, we require a special goggles called purification, which is called Divya Cakṣu; Kṛṣṇa says, I am blessing you with that; and with that you will see what: paśya mē pārtha rūpāṇi: Arjuna may you see varieties of my form; and colours; śataśō'tha sahasraśaḥ; in hundreds and thousands; nānāvīdhāni; which are all varieties; varied in nature; that is different colours and different forms; and they are all divyāni; divya means divine; belonging to the Lord; and the nānāvarṇākṛtīni ca; with different shapes and colours; and here also we should carefully understand.

When Kṛṣṇa says May you see the Viśva-rūpa with varieties of colours and forms, what are we to understand? It is not that a particular God named Viśva-rūpa appeared with varieties of colours like Holi; like that it is not a particular form that appeared; but what does it mean? You have to learn to look at all the forms and colours of the universe as the beautiful colours of the Viśva-rūpa itself. Therefore different colours of the Sun and Moon; they are all nothing but Īśvara varṇa; just as different forms of ornaments belong to whom? What we call the form of bangle; it is not at all the form belonging to the bangle; but it is the form belonging to the gold only. So what I saw as bangle previously, because of my change in attitude, I see as gold only. Similarly when I see varieties of colours; I asau yastāmrō aruṇa uta babhruḥ sumarṅgalaḥ. So Sri Rudram describes Lord Śiva with various hues and colours; and what are different colours; tāmraḥ, aruṇaḥ, babhruḥ; sumarṅgalaḥ; These are not the new colours Lord Śiva shows; but they are the colours of the Sun when it is rising; Because Sri Rudram that all the early morning cowherd boys and girls who get up early in the morning, because others do not wake up and get up at 8 o'clock only, because that is the habit; and do not that there is a concept of Sunrise; I utainam gōpā adṛṣannadrṣannudahāryaḥ. This Viśva-rūpa-darśanam is available for Gōpaḥ; cowherds boys; what does it mean? When they come out; they see the rising Sun, which is red, thereafter it becomes golden; then it becomes slightly yellow; then it becomes white; they are not the colours of the Sun; but they are the colors of the Viśva-rūpa Śiva; the entire Rudram is the description of Viśva-rūpa-Śiva. And it talks about the colors of the leaves, dry leaves, as well as not so dry leaves; and the green colour; all of them are what: Lord Śiva's colour. Harikēśāyōpavītinē puṣṭānām patayē namō namō; harikēśāya; the Lord with green hair. What do you mean green hair? We know different colours of hair; we know the black one; we know the green colors; and sometimes you dye and it becomes brown; so brown hair we know; or in the west and all, other different colours. Have you ever seen green hair? What do you mean by green hair of Lord Śiva? It is nothing but all the leaves in the trees are Lord's-Śiva's hairs. So when I am seeing a forest or green tree; my mind should appreciate it as Viśva-rūpa Īśvara only. Therefore different colours are not new colours; but the old colours seen with a different attitude. I gave you the example; you remember. When the laddu comes in your hands, you only see the taste of it; straightaway you put it into your mouth; But before you put, when somebody says that it is from Tirupathi, there is no change in the physical laddu; but it becomes divine; and the divinity is not physically seen; it is appreciated by the mind; which has got devotion.

And therefore nānāvarṇāni; when I look at all of you with different colors of dress. What I am seeing? nānāvarṇākṛtīni; wherever you see Viśva-rūpa; Viśva-rūpa has got how many heads; sahasṛaśirṣaḥ puruṣaḥ; We think that one Śiva or Viṣṇu will stand and 100s of heads will be standing side-by-side; No; it is not one body with hundreds or thousands of heads hanging; It is all the heads of the people are the heads of Lord. That is Viśva-rūpa; therefore nānāvidhāni divyāni nānāvarṇākṛtīni ca.

And Paśya dityān vasūn rudrānaśvinau marutastathā; varieties of dēvathās are in the creation; in the form of various natural forces; every dēvathā represents one one natural phenomenon only.

So Paśya dityān vasūn rudrān; the aṣṭa vasūs; 8 vasūs are said in the scriptures; we symbolise them as various dēvathās; with different forms; but in Brihadāraṇyaḥ, a question is asked. What are the vasūs? Kathaṁē vasava iti; and Bṛhadāraṇyaḥ upaniṣad says:

agniśca pṛthivī ca vāyuścāntarikṣaṁ cā:'dityaśca dyauśca candramāśca nakṣatrāṇi caitē vasava; what are the eight vasūs;

And 8 natural principles you can understand, agniśca pṛthivī ca; Agni tatva; pṛthivī ca; āntarikṣaṁ cā; intermediary lōka; adityaśca and dyauśca; the Sun and the upper heavens; candramāśca and Nakṣatrāṇi ca; the moon and the stars are the eight vasūs. And therefore Kṛṣṇa says; may you see the eight vasūs in my Viśva-rūpa m; so paśya vasūn.

And then 12 ādityāns; they are nothing but the Sun god obtaining in the 12 months of the year; Dvadaśa māsa samvasarasya; Bṛhadāraṇyaka; dvadaśa māsa samvasarasya, ētē ādityāḥ. So this Sun god obtaining in 12 months; why we describe the Sun in 12 months; in each month the Sun God has got different power; the Sun of May and the Sun of January; there is a difference. They are the dvadaśa aditya dēvathā. May you see the Adityās; May you see the vāśus; and May you see the Rudrās; ēkadaśa Rudrās; Bṛhadāraṇya the question is asked; kathaṁē Rudrāḥ; and Bṛhadāraṇya answers; daśēmē puruṣē prāṇā ātmā ēkadaśaḥ; the ten sense organs; along with the mind are called the rudra dēvathās.

And all of them belong to whom? The Viśva-rūpa Īśvara only. Therefore May you appreciate the ādityās; may you appreciate the vāsūs; may you appreciate the rudrās; may you appreciate the Aśvini Kumārās; Aśvini Kumārās are the one presiding over the prānā.

So that principle and Marutha thatha; the maruth dēvās; which are different forms of vāyu; Therefore may you see all the dēvathās in the Viśva-rūpa of mine.

And all of them are adṛṣṭapūrvāṇi; which you have never noticed before, because where is the time for us to stand and stare; we are so busy with our personal life; our street; our wife or husband, our children; that we never appreciate the Viśva-rūpam. Therefore adṛṣṭapūrvāṇi; bahūni; and each one is a wonder; Sun is a wonder; rain is a wonder; which God alone can do; we are caught up and suffer you know; We can never create rain; they talk of artificial rain; by putting silver iodite crystal; you can bring artificial rains.

So I thought that it is very great; that scientists are able to produce the rain; They see you can produce the rain through silver iodite crystal; if there are clouds; how is it; who will give the crowds; will we take in aero plane from somewhere and bring it about above us and use the sprinklers; half an hour what God gives, we can never replace; and therefore rain is a wonder; earth is a wonder; Sun is a wonder; anything you take it is a wonder, which is the glory of the Lord. May your see that: temporarily drop your day-to-day business; temporarily keep your cell-phone somewhere. After its coming, there is no time for anything; so wherever you go drop it; and just watch the universe.

Therefore paśya''ścaryāṇi bhārata.

इहैकस्थं जगत्कृत्स्नं पश्याद्य सचराचरम् ।
मम देहे गुडाकेश यच्चान्यद् द्रष्टुमिच्छसि ॥ ११.७ ॥

Ihaikasthaṁ jagatkṛtsnaṁ paśya''dya sacarācaram |
mama dēhē guḍākēśa yaccānyad-draṣṭumicchasi || 11.7 ||

7. Oh, Arjuna! See here and now, in my body, the entire Universe with the movable and the immovable placed together and also anything else that you desire to see.

So iha; in Me the Viśva-rūpa Īśvara; whose body is the very sky itself. Yesterday if you remember; ākāśa śarīram brahma; the Īśvara's body is the very ākāśa itself; In the sky which is my body, kṛtsanmaṁ jagat paśya; see the entire universe; antaḥsthaṁ yasya viśvaṁ suranarakhagagōbhōgigandharvadaityaiḥ; and that alone is symbolised in the purāṇās, when Yaśoda asked Kṛṣṇa to open the mouth; she saw the whole universe and she is not able to withstand that; it requires preparation. Because she took Kṛṣṇa as her baby; then when she saw all the 14 lōkās; she said Shut up; double meaning; OK; Shut up; therefore what does it mean? Do you think that in the small mouth, all the lōkās are floating like the tablets.

It is symbolism; Kṛṣṇa represents the vast sky; vast sky is blue; Lord Kṛṣṇa is blue; Nīlamēgha śyamala; what do you mean by blue colour; can you imagine anyone with blue skin; we have got black colour; white colour; yellows; four races; and we have got middle; like us brown.

Have you ever heard of blue Lord? what does it mean; green hair Śiva we talk about; like that blue Lord Kṛṣṇa means what; the vast blue sky is the form of Lord Kṛṣṇa; and all galaxies are floating in him.

And therefore ihaikasthaṁ; in Me, kṛtsanmaṁ jagat, the entire universe, adya paśya; and see the vastness of the universe and then alone you will understand the vastness of my body; because the whole universe is contained within my body.

Last week or so, some student; I do not remember who that student is, gave a cutting. So I just read through it; it is a very interesting write up, I will read only the first para only. This is the description of the Viśva-rūpa universe; awe stultifying. So when we visualise the universe; it is only wonder; thrilled; he is a scientist; he is not a bhaktha and all.

Just think of the universe as a puff of dust; about a meter in diameter; he says visualise a puff of dust, which is one meter diameter; OK. About a meter in diameter. Every dust grain; in one meter how many grains will be there; every dust grain in that is a galaxy; he says it is a galaxy; you know what is a galaxy; galaxy is a cluster of stars; which is millions of light years in distance. And you know what is a light year; it is the distance travelled by light in one year; and do you know what is the distance travelled by light in one second; 3 lakh kilometers; not miles; 3 lakh kilometers; in one second. So in one year; go and calculate and then like that so many light years; is the distance of one galaxy; like that billions of galaxies are there; imagine that is a dust.

We live near a rather ordinary star; among millions of galaxies; there is one galaxy called Milky Way; and in milky way there are millions of stars and our Sun is one ordinary star; which is a member of a rather ordinary galaxy. Somewhere insignificant in the puff of dust. Every night we are shown that the universe has a beginning but most of us simple regret, use or enjoy the dark without perceiving that; it brings knowledge. If you are willing to learn from darkness, he says; even though so many stars are there; between the stars there is a vast emptiness is there. Then what must be the size of the universe; which accommodates all these galaxies and stars. And this universe with vast emptiness and galaxies is accommodated in space. So what must be size of the space; and that space is the size of the Lord; Mediate upon that; Try that.

Hari Om

Īśvara-darśanam, the vision of the Lord, requires two types of eyes. One is the ordinary eye, the loukika cakṣu; the other one, which is the more important one is the prepared mind; a purified mind, a mature mind, an informed mind, a religious mind, is also equally important second invisible eye; which is figuratively presented as the third eye and in the Gīta 11th chapter it is called divya cakṣu. Therefore remember, divya-cakṣuḥ means the refined mind, which is not a physical thing. Only when loukika cakṣu and the divya cakṣu join together, Īśvara-darśanam is possible. If loukika cakṣu is alone there, without the divya cakṣu, Īśvara-darśanam cannot take place.

I gave you the example, even though Rāma was physically available for Śabari's loukika cakṣu and Rāvaṇa's-loukika-cakṣuḥ. So Śabari also could see Rāma with her eyes; Rāvaṇa also could see Rāma with his eyes; but you know the difference in impact. For Śabari it was a great divine vision; which gave her a thrill whereas in the case of Rāvaṇa, nothing happens, even his character did not undergo any change. For Rāvaṇa the physical-darśanam of Rāma was not at all different from any other physical-darśanam, including Kumbakarṇa. For him, Kumbakarṇa darśanam, and Rāma-darśanam was identical.

Therefore what makes the difference? What makes the difference in the impact if you ask; there is nothing wrong with the physical eyes, they are common to both; the only difference can be Śabari had worked on her inner eye called divya cakṣuḥ, which Rāvaṇa has not done.

If you extend the same principle, Lord's Viśva-rūpa, Lord's universal form is available for all the people; and it is available for loukika-cakṣuḥ; with the physical eyes we are seeing the Lord who is in the form of the universe: bhūḥ pādau yasya nābhir-viyad-asūra-nīlaścandra sūryau ca nētrē. Therefore our loukika cakṣuḥ is functioning, Īśvara-śārīram as Viśva-rūpa is available.

But even though the physical vision of Viśva-rūpa is available, all the people do not get the same impact. Eyes remaining the same, all the people do not get the same impact, most of the people do not feel that they are having Īśvara-darśanam when they look around; Īśvara-darśanam!; I am only seeing plants and trees only. So if I do not feel like having Īśvara-darśanam, the defect cannot be in loukika-cakṣu, because it is already there; therefore the defect by pāriśeṣa nyāya; the defect can exist only in divya-cakṣu; which is nothing but a refined mind.

And as I said, refined mind can be defined in several ways, one of the ways is: kāmakrōdādi rahitham manaḥ; or you can say rāga-dvēṣadi rahitham manaḥ; or you can say ahaṅkāra mama kāradhi rahitham manaḥ; a refined mind can be defined. And therefore Lord Kṛṣṇa says: Arjuna Viśva-rūpa-darśanam is the easiest thing because Rāma Kṛṣṇa etc.; they have to come and give you darśanam; whereas Viśva-rūpa-Īśvara need not come; I am right in front of you; therefore you have no difficulty in seeing Me;

He said ihaikasthaṁ (the seventh verse which we saw in the last class) iha ēkasthaṁ; so here in my body; what is the body? not Kṛṣṇa śārīram; the entire universe, ākaśaśārīram brahma. So I, as the ākaśa, having the ākaśa as the body, am available in front of you and the whole creation is my śārīram alone; you can see; iha ēkasthaṁ, ēkasthin ākaśarūpē śārīram sthitham; ēkasthaṁ kṛstnam jagat paśya; you see the Viśva-rūpa right in front of you.

And what type of Viśva-rūpa; sacarācaram; consisting of caram and acaram; caram means the moving objects and acaram means the non-moving, the sthāvara jaṅgamaṁ; all the inert things are called acaram; all the living beings are called caram.

अन्तःस्थं यस्य विश्वं सुरनरखगगोभोगिगन्धर्वदैत्यैः
चित्रं रंरम्यते तं त्रिभुवन वपुषं विष्णुमीशं नमामि ॥ २ ॥

antaḥsthaṁ yasya viśvaṁ suranarakhagagōbhōgigandharvadaityaḥ
citraṁ raṁramyatē taṁ tribhuvana vapuṣaṁ viṣṇumiśaṁ namāmi || 2 ||

vasūs means śārīram; what is the body of the Lord; tribhuvanam, the whole universe; būlōkā, bhuvarlōkā, suvarlōkā, So that you can see right in front of you; mama dēhē, not Kṛṣṇa-dēhē, ākāśa-dēhē; Viśva-rūpa-dēhē; paśya; may you see Arjuna; guḍākēśa; guḍākēśa means satva-guṇa pradhānaḥ. Arjuna you can; it only requires some refinement, polishing, it is possible for you.

And not only you can see all these things, yaccānyad-draṣṭumicchasi; whatever else you want to see, you can see, everything has to rest in the body of the Lord only. So thus Kṛṣṇa; Kṛṣṇa offers to cooperate with Arjuna, for giving Viśva-rūpa darśanam.

न तु मां शक्यसे द्रष्टुम् अनेनैव स्वचक्षुषा ।
दिव्यं ददामि ते चक्षुः पश्य मे योगमैश्वरम् ॥ ११.८ ॥

na tu mām śakyasē draṣṭumanēnaiva svacakṣuṣā |
divyaṁ dadāmi tē cakṣuḥ paśya mē yōgamaiśvaram || 11.8 ||

तु tu However, न शक्यसे द्रष्टुम् na śakyasē draṣṭum you cannot see माम् mām Me अनेन एव anēna ēva with this (ordinary) स्वचक्षुषा svacakṣuṣā eye of yours ददामि ते tē dadāmi I shall give you, दिव्यं चक्षुः divyaṁ cakṣuḥ a divine eye, पश्य मे paśya mē see me ऐश्वरं योगम् īśvaraṁ yōgam My divine power.

8. However, You cannot see Me with this (ordinary) eye of yours. I shall give you a divine eye. See My divine power.

So herein Kṛṣṇa introduces the requirement of two types of cakṣu; two types of eyes, one is loukika cakṣuḥ; another is divya-cakṣuḥ; and therefore Kṛṣṇa warns; he tells Arjuna, you cannot have Īśvara-darśanam with the help of mere physical eyes; anēna svacakṣuṣā; sva-cakṣuḥ means what loukika-cakṣuḥ, the maṁsa-cakṣuḥ; with the help of that you cannot see mām draṣṭum na śakyasē; you will not see Me; even if you see Me, you will not have the impact, remember the example; just as Rāvaṇa did not have any sense of Īśvara darśanam or fulfilment when he saw Rāma; when Kamsa saw Kṛṣṇa nothing happened to him. So therefore so cakṣuṣā, mām draṣṭum na śakyasē; therefore you require an invisible eye.

In fact, some people even interpret the tilakam as symbolic of the divya cakṣu; difference significances are given for tilakam; one significance given is the third eye of prepared mind; proper bhāvana; proper attitude; bhāvana cakṣuḥ. Therefore that eye is also required; it is like a tourist going to a temple with a camera and taking the pictures of various idols; for him, not Lord, various idols; and he talks about the art and he asks the question whether it is AD or BC. If it is BC a few more pictures he will take; perhaps he may buy paying millions of rupees also; exhibition also he will put; he can see only the age, the art, the metal; but he cannot never fold his hands; he can never do sāṣṭāṅga namaskāra; he can never do this when the deepārādhāna is done; What makes that difference; how many of us really know what is the age of various idols in Kapāli temple or Pārthasarathy temple; or Rathna giriśvara temple; they are all material work, which we are not bothered; our eyes penetrate the superficial rock and see the Lord who has been invoked and worshipped; and that eye is the bhavāna. We have to be born in India; or we have to be exposed to this culture to do sāṣṭāṅga namaskāra to a dead stone; To do namaskāra to a lifeless stone. And if somebody has to receive ash; which has no worth at all; and applying ash on the forehead and even putting into the mouth without knowing how it is prepared (now it is said that the ash is prepared using so many chemicals, it is said).

So really speaking we are not even sure whether the ash is hygienically prepared; nothing a devotee cares; vibhūthi comes we do not even call it ash; vibhūthi comes, it goes to the forehead and for many people, it goes to the mouth and many people preserve it to carry it home; and also apply on their children's head; and what is the worth of the ash? nothing; but it is your bhāvana cakṣuḥ; which is seeing more in the ash, which no chemical analysis will reveal you test the ash in any lab in the world; it cannot never reveal its worth.

And what is that worth? It is a worth which can be seen only by Divya cakṣuḥ; and therefore Kṛṣṇa says Viśva-rūpa darśanam requires divya cakṣuḥ; to do namaskāram to rivers requires divya-cakṣuḥ; to do the prōkṣaṇam of the river water requires divya cakṣu; to do namaskārams to the mountain requires divya cakṣuḥ; without that it is not possible and Arjuna I shall bless you with that divya cakṣuḥ;

And once that attitudinal change comes, paśya mē yōgamaiśvaram; and then relook the same world in front of you; and what you see, mama aiśvaram yōgam; you see my divine glory; Even pañca mahā bhūthās become Lord's-Śiva; you will call ākāśa-liṅga as is worshipped in Chidambaram, we will call vāyu liṅgam as is worshipped in Kaḷahasthi; Agni liṅgam Lord Śiva as in Thiruvannamalai; water becomes God as in Jambukēśvaram, Thiruvanaikaval; and earth becomes God as in Kancheepuram.

And initially you worship the pañcabūthās, only in those respective temples, but that is not enough; later I should see the same divinity in the pañca bhūthās all over. And the day I can revere the pañca bhūthās, then the products of the pañca būthās, namely the pañca-boudika prapañca; they are all divine for me.

In fact I can never go away from the Lord; where is the question of going near God. So for a Viśva-rūpa-darśi; going near God is a meaningless proposition; because there is no question of going away from God; andādamulu; pindādamulu; brahmādamulu, anthā Rāma mayam. Everything is Rāma-mayam, Kṛṣṇa-mayam, Śiva-mayam; some mayam; Bhagavān mayam. Without that, it is all māyam; only māya. Therefore, see Viśva-rūpa with this divya-cakṣuḥ which I am blessing.

Now you have a imagine, there is a silence; because Kṛṣṇa is blessing Arjuna with divya cakṣus; if it is a TV programme, they will show Kṛṣṇa's hand, and from Kṛṣṇa's hand a light will pass; and it will directly go into the face of Arjuna and lot of background music; dun dun dun (some loud noise) because something miraculous and mysterious is taking place; and also the pictures also they also show round and round; we can do all that with camera thing; and all these things and in Arjuna's face, sweat also is coming; you can imagine all kinds of things; so when there is the silence; Kṛṣṇa does not speak; He is blessing through the hand, Arjuna does not speak because he is receiving the mystic eye; therefore there is silence and therefore Sañjaya comes and tells something; (if everybody keeps quiet, what to do); therefore Sañjaya comes and comes fills up the blank; what is happening at that time;

darśayāmāsa pārthāya parāmaṁ rūpamaiśvaram||11.9||

सञ्जयः उवाच sañjayaḥ uvāca Sañjaya said उक्त्वा एवम् uktvā ēvaṁ having spoken thus हरिः hariḥ Hariḥ, Sri Kṛṣṇa, महायोगेश्वरः mahāyōgēśvaraḥ the great Lord of all powers, ततः tataḥ thereafter, दर्शयामास darśayāmāsa revealed परमम् ऐश्वरं रूपम् paramam ēśvaram rūpam – the supreme divine form पार्थाय pārthāya to Arjuna राजन् rājan oh King!

9. Sañjaya Said --- having spoken thus, Kṛṣṇa, the great Lord of all powers, thereafter revealed the supreme divine form to Arjuna. Oh king!

So what happened during those silent moments? Sañjaya describes; Sañjaya uvāca; Hey Rājan; Oh King; whom is he addressing; Sañjaya is talking to Dhṛtharāṣṭra; Oh King Dhṛtharāṣṭra; hariḥ ēvaṁ uktvā; Lord Kṛṣṇa who is none other than Lord Viśṇu, the Viśva-rūpa Īśvara; that Viśṇu, he uses the word Hariḥ, other than Kṛṣṇa, to indicate that he is none other than Lord Viśṇu himself; and not only that the word Hariḥ is also a significant word;

हरिर् हरति पापानि दुष्ट चित्तैर अभि स्मृताः । अनिचयात् सस्प्रष्टः दहत् एव हि पावकाः ॥

harir harati pāpāni duṣṭa cittairā abhi smṛtāḥ |
anicayāt samsprṣṭaḥ dahat ēva hi pāvakāḥ ||

hariḥ pāpāni harati; Lord Viśṇu is called Hari becomes, the root, हृ Hṛ, harati means to suck, to absorb, to withdraw all the pāpams from the devotees mind; it is because of the impurity; I do not see the divinity in front of me; only I have to remove that thimiram, ajña thimiram, rāga-dvēṣa thimiram, Lord Viśṇu absorbs. Therefore he is called hariḥ;

And what type of Viśṇu he is? Mahāyōgēśvaraḥ; the one who has got great powers of purification; normally purification is a very long process; it requires years of karma-yōga; it requires years of pañca-mahā-yajñaḥ. I hope you remember, pañca-mahā-yajñaḥ (do you still remember that).

It is not a type of पञ्चमं pañjam; pañjam means drought. So years of pañca-mahā-yajñaḥ is required to refine the mind; but Lord Kṛṣṇa being a lord of miraculous powers, what could be achieved by elaborate and time consuming strenuous sādhana, Lord Kṛṣṇa simply removed; but as I said, it is only a temporary gift given; just to show the value of anthakaraṇa-śuddhi; the benefit of anthakaraṇa śuddhi, it is a trial; When they have certain machines and all, they say you take it; use it and see; and if it does not work, your money will be returned; like that Kṛṣṇa wants to temporarily give that refinement and see the benefit of looking at Viśva-rūpa.

And therefore mahāyōgēśvaraḥ hariḥ; ēvamuktvā; addressed Arjuna in this fashion, in this manner; in which manner, as said in the previous verses; What did He say in the previous verse? Loukika cakṣu is not enough; you require divya cakṣu; which is mental purity.

Having said that: paramaṁ aiśvaraṁ-rūpam darśayāmāsa; Therefore Lord Kṛṣṇa showed this Viśva-rūpam. So aiśvaraṁ-rūpam means the body, the form of the Lord; Aiśvaram means Īśvarasya idam Īśvaram; belonging to Bhagavān; So aiśvaraṁ-rūpam; Īśvara-rūpam darśayāmāsa; He showed.

And what type of Īśvara-rūpam? Paramam; He is the greatest rūpam; and why do you say Viśva-rūpam is the greatest one; because all the other rūpams are finite in nature; whether it is Rāma rūpam, Kṛṣṇa-rūpam, Dēva-rūpam, Ganēśa rūpam, they are all finite; and all of them are mutually exclusive; if Rāma-rūpam comes, Kṛṣṇa rūpam has to disappear; if Kṛṣṇa-rūpam comes, Ganēśa-rūpam has to disappear; they are finite; they are mutually exclusive. That means what; one displaces the other; and finally, they are subject to arrival and departure; this is all Rāmakriṣṇādi dēvathā rūpam. Whereas Viśva-rūpa is the most unique one, because it is all pervading and secondly it need not exclude any form; Viśva-rūpa includes Rāma-rūpam, includes Kṛṣṇa-rūpam, Śiva-rūpam; all the possible rūpams are included in Viśva-rūpam; therefore it is all inclusive; and finally Viśva-rūpam is not subject to arrival and departure; because it is right in front of me.

That is why even in Sandhyā vandana, we are learning to practice

प्राच्यै दिशे नमः । दक्षीणायै दिशे नमः । प्रतीच्यै दिशे नमः । उदीच्यै दिशे नमः । ऊर्ध्वाय नमः । अधराय नमः । अन्तरीक्षाय नमः । भूम्यै नमः । विष्णवे नमः । मृत्यवे नमः ॥

namaskāram to the east, namaskāram to the north; namaskāram to the west; namaskāram to the south; ūrdhvāya namaḥ, adharāya namaḥ, antarīkṣāya namaḥ; so namaskāram to the top, namaskāram to the bottom; why do we do namaskāram in all directions; because in other religions Lord may be in one place. Therefore everything should be looking at that direction; for us Bhagavān being everywhere, I do namaskāram all over. These are all the training given right from our young age. In fact, all our trainings are meant for seeing the world itself as God.

This is the culmination in vyavahārika Īśvara darśanam; not pāramārthikam; vyavahārika Īśvara-darśanam; in the relative appreciation of Lord; the highest vision is to learning to see the very universe as the Lord; so our culture is oriented; is to give us the orientation and therefore paramam Īśvaram rūpam darśayāmāsa. To whom? पार्थाय pārthāya; pārthāya means Arjunāya; and also you can take Tamil also; paarthaaya!; பார்த்தாயா (did you see); Hey Partha; did you see the viśva rūpam; you can take like that also.

divyamālyāambaradharam wearing divine garlands and garments, दिव्यगन्धानुलेपनम्
divyagandhānulēpanam anointed with divine perfumes, सर्वाश्चर्यमयम् sarvāścaryamayam and full of wonders.

10 & 11. (Kṛṣṇa revealed) the brilliant limitless (Cosmic form) with faces in all directions, with many mouths, and eyes, with many wonderful sights, with many divine ornaments, wielding many weapons, wearing divine garlands and garments, anointed with divine perfumes, and full of wonders.

So we get Sañjaya's description of Viśva-rūpa, Sañjaya describes and from this we come to know that Sañjaya is also getting Viśva-rūpa darśanam; because of association with all; he also is getting; one is face, another is mouth; many faces, and many mouths; and nayanam, many eyes; how are we to understand the Lord with many eyes? Does it mean that eyes are sticking all over; and if mouths are all over, how eyes will be all over; therefore do not imagine a form with countless eyes and ears; anēkavaktram means what; Arjuna learns to see all the mouths of all the people as the mouth of the Lord; and suppose you say No No No, it is my mouth, that is called ahamkāra; that is the problem; where is the question of my mouth when I myself am not there; because there is no individual separate from totality. There is no Tamil Nadu separate from India; there is no wave separate from ocean; there is no vaṣṭi separate from samaṣṭi. When I myself do not exist, where is the question of my mouth, my eyes; my land, tan man dhan sab kuch tērā; daily you say that!; They are beautiful prayers, if we utter with the mind backing the words.

As somebody said, it is better to have a prayer; a heart without words rather than words without heart behind. If you have the bhāvana and you are not able to verbalise, it does not matter; but if you have the words without the heart behind; that also tan man dhan sab kuch tērā in kada kada you tell and naivēdyam also is nearby; and that is important. Therefore kada kada you finish and eat the kadala or something. And therefore that bhāvana is important; all the mouths are Bhagavān's mouth; all the eyes are Bhagavān's eyes.

anēkādbhutadarśanam; there are innumerable wonders, not seven wonders or 14 wonders, there are innumerable wonders, all of them are Bhagavān's wonders; they belong to the Lord; anēkadivyābharaṇam. So Lord is wearing countless ornaments. What does it mean? again do not imagine that in His neck, there are many kilos of ornaments; then He will get spondylosis. And therefore anēka ābharaṇam; all the ābharaṇams that you are wearing are Bhagavān's ābharaṇam; if I say it is your ābharaṇam, it is loukika-ābharaṇam; if I look upon it as Bhagavān, it is divya ābharaṇam.

Therefore anēkadivyābharaṇam; that is why in our culture, before wearing any ornament, it is placed at the feet of the Lord; if you do not have that habit, better you start. Any ornament or why ornament, even dress, manjal kumkum you apply and keep in front of the Lord; Oh Lord, this also belongs to you; and I am taking for lease; and I will return it; and not like the local people tenant; after living for a certain number of years, the tenant becomes owner; not like that; I am a humble, simple devotee, I will use without claiming ownership; I will never develop mamakāra with regard to any dress or ornaments, I will remember all belong to you; and it will be returned with thanks at the appropriate time. Therefore all ornaments are his ornaments.

Divya anēka udyata āyudam. And the Lord with hundreds of weapons held in the raised hand; with hundreds of countless, literally hundreds are not there; countless weapons held in the raised hand. Here also what should we understand? Do not imagine a lord; with thousands of hands hanging, and in each one, one one weapon like the knife, sword, etc.; the Lord is standing like that; Viśva-rūpa picture is there; you have to see; they have to do that way; there is no other way.

So how do you imagine Bhagavān with countless weapons; Why Sañjaya mentions weapons here, because the whole Gīta discourse is taking place in the battle place, not Vidya mandir; in the battle field; here you have got books pens and other things; but there remember, 7 plus 11 akṣōhīnis, the armies of Kauravās and Pāndavās; they have all come with what; not pen and books; each one has come with nāna śāstra praharaṇā, sarvē yuddha viśāradhā; each one has come with different weapon and all those weapons belong to whom; again Viśva-rūpa Īśvara; Therefore anēka udyata; udyata means raised weapon.

And how do they become divine weapon? Any weapon is terrible; how can become divine weapon? Because of two reason; One reason is since the weapon is in the hand of a person; it is loukika weapon; but when I see the very same weapon as the Lord's weapon, it becomes divine. The difference between divine and not divine is association with the Lord.

Like the prasāda and apple; apple from the shop is apple; once it has gone to the temple and comes; it becomes prasāda. Therefore a secular thing becomes sacred only when it is associated with the Lord; if I see everything belongs to the Lord; I do not have anything secular at all. For a Viśva-rūpa bhaktha; there is no secular thing; sarvam sacred mayam; So this is one reason;

And the second reason is, all the weapons are divyam because, they are meant for dharma samrakṣanam;

परित्राणाय साधूनां विनाशाय च दुष्कृताम् |
धर्मसंस्थापनार्थाय सम्भवामि युगे युगे || ४ - ८ ||

dharmasaṁsthāpanārthāya sambhavāmi yugē yugē || 4.8 ||

The moment a weapon is associated with dharma, it is associated with the Lord; dharmah ēva Īśvaraḥ; that is why we say Rāmō vighrahavān dharmah; Dayānanda Swami often says: Bhagavān is in the form of Order in the creation; harmony in the creation. Therefore any weapon for dharma is divine weapon; so with such weapons Viśva-rūpa Īśvara is giving darśanam.

So in all these verses, the verb is not given. For Sānskrīt students; these are all adjectives, which are the description of aiśvaram-rūpam, which comes in verse No.9 second line, there the noun Viśva-rūpam is given, all these verses, No.10, and 11, they are all adjectives to Viśva-rūpa.

Therefore divyamālyāambaradharam Viśva-rūpam; divyagandhānulēpanam Viśva-rūpam; and what is the verb, darśayāmāsa; Lord Kṛṣṇa showed to Arjuna. And here also you should note, when we say Lord Kṛṣṇa showed to Arjuna it creates a confusion; it appears as though Viśva-rūpa was not there before, and after divya cakṣuḥ; Viśva-rūpa is brought forward, it is not Viśva-rūpa the Lord showed means; Bhagavān removed the obstacles for the appreciation of the universe as divine; that bhāvana if you give, the obstacle is gone, which means what was seen secular is now seen as sacred; therefore it is an attitudinal change; there is no physical event taking place.

Viśva-rūpa darśanam is not a physical event; it is an event of a attitudinal change and consequent perspective change; attitudinal and perspective change; nothing is happening outside. Mālyāambaradharam. So the Lord is wearing mālyam; mālyam means what? garlands; āmbaram means vastram or dress. So divyam means divine; celestial; so the Lord is wearing many garlands and many types of dress.

And here also how should you understand? Do not imagine a personal god with different mālas; all the mālas worn by all the people are Bhagavān's māla; and Bhagavān's dress; all the dress which are worn by all the people are Bhagavān's; the moment I see them as Bhagavān's, it becomes divyam. We saw divyagandhānulēpanam; and a Viśva-rūpa, which is smeared with lot of perfumes; gandha means perfume.

So in those days also perfume was there; now spray we use all over; back, front, top, bottom, everywhere; So in those days the modern spray was not there, their perfume was primarily candanam, and a few other things were there; and therefore ganda anulēpanam; a body which is smeared with the perfumes, which are all divine; and again what does it mean? different perfumes used by different people, they are all perfumes applied on the Lord; And that is why when we apply also vibhūthi candanam, etc. we are supposed to utter the nāma of the Lord; vibhūthi daraṇa mantra is there; and for Vaiśnavās when they apply on the various parts of the body, they have to remember Keśava, Nārāyaṇa, Mādhava, Govinda, etc. It means what; I am not decorating my body; I am decorating the body of the Lord; Lord's body deserves decoration, my body does not deserve decoration; cremation only; OK; just a joke; it does not deserve anything. Divyagandhānulēpanam.

Then viśvatōmukham; the Lord with faces, in all directions, Omni directional, multi directional faces, the Lord has got; because there are people with faces which are facing all directions; viśvatōmukham.

And anantaṁ; anantaṁ means whose limit cannot be seen at all; even now we do not know the limit of the cosmos. Last class I told you; if you have of 1 meter diameter, each grain of dust is equal to one galaxy; so there are billions of galaxies and each galaxy having billions of stars; the outside limit of the universe even now the scientists do not know; and not only that they say that the universe is expanding; as such the existing itself we do not know; and over and above that, they say it is expanding; all the stars are receding; and the more distant they are; the faster they are going; each star is getting farther and farther away from the other star. Imagine not in clusters; if each star gets farther and farther away from other stars, where is the limit of the universe?

पादोऽस्य विश्वा भूतानि । त्रिपादस्या मृतन्दिवि । त्रिपादूर्ध्व उदैत् पुरुषः । पादोस्यैहाऽऽभवात्पुनः।

Puruṣa sūktham says that this limitless universe occupies only an insignificant part of Viśva-rūpa; Even this limitless universe itself is in Bhagavān's one corner; then what should be the size of the Bhagavān; anantaṁ; limitless, both space-wise, and time-wise.

And therefore what I can say? Sarvāścaryamayam; Viśva-rūpa-Īśvara is the greatest wonder. So sarvāścaryamayam.

Dēvam; dēvam means Viśva-rūpa Īśvaraḥ; you have to connect; darśayāmāsa pāthāya; such a Viśva-rūpam; mahāyōgēśvarō hariḥ; pāthāya darśayāmāsa iti navama slōkēna anvayaha.

Verse 11.12

दिवि सूर्यसहस्रस्य भवेद्युगपदुत्थिता ।
यदि भाः सद्गुशी सा स्याद् भासस्तस्य महात्मनः ॥ ११.१२ ॥

[divi sūryasahasrasya bhavēdyugapadutthitā |
yadi bhāḥ sadṛśī sā syādbhāstasya mahātmanah || 11.12 ||](#)

यदि भाः yadi bhāḥ if the brilliance, सूर्यसहस्रस्य sūryasahasrasya of a thousand suns, भवेद् उत्थिता bhavēd utthitā were to rise up युगपत् yugapat simultaneously, दिवि divi in the sky सा सदृशी sā sadṛśī that will be comparable स्यात् भासः syāt bhāsaḥ to the brilliance तस्य महात्मनः tasya mahātmanaḥ of that great Lord.

12. If the brilliance of a thousand suns were to rise up simultaneously in the sky, that will be comparable to the brilliance of the great Lord.

So what should be the brilliance of the Lord? It should be glaring brilliance; because I am not able to see the Sun itself in the morning. I am not able to look at even the Sun and our Sun is 9 crores or miles are so away. For the sunlight to reach the earth, it takes 8 minutes or so; so far away is the Sun; and the Sun is one of the ordinary stars; even that sunlight I am not able to withstand. Imagine eyes seeing all the lights of all the stars; how brilliant it would be; its brilliance cannot be imagined.

And therefore Sañjaya gives an example. Suppose thousands of Suns, arise in the horizon simultaneously; sūryasahasrasya bhāḥ; sūrya sahaśrāṇam means thousands of sun; bhāḥ means brilliance; suppose the brilliance of thousands of suns, utthistā; has arisen, has emerged in the sky simultaneously. This is the example which is supposed to have been given by one atomic physicist; when the atom bomb was exploded. So that brilliance of that explosion; that too ordinary atom bomb; special ones were not there; when the explosion took place, the brilliance was indescribable; that one of those people quoted this line it seems; just see; when we cannot imagine even the brilliance of one atom bomb explosion; and we know every star is having thousands of atom bombs explosions every moment; that is how stars produce energy; imagine all of them appear. Now we do not have problem, because they are safely far away; imagine they all come closer; even now Madras in the month of September, we are not able to withstand.

Yugapat, simultaneously; suppose they emerge; what will be the brilliance? That is the comparison for the brilliance of Viśva-rūpa-Īśvaraḥ.

So tasya mahātmanaḥ bhāsaḥ sadṛśī syāt; so that will be the brilliance; that will be the comparison for the brilliance of the mahātma; mahātma means Viśva-rūpa-Īśvaraḥ; So mahān anathaḥ śārīram yasya mahātma; this place ātma does not mean satcitanānda ātma; here it means śārīram; mahātma means infinite body is the Lord; So that is the brilliance, it is indescribable.

तत्रैकस्थं जगत्कृत्स्नं प्रविभक्तमनेकधा ।
अपश्यद्देवदेवस्य शरीरे पाण्डवस्तदा ॥ ११.१३ ॥

tatraikastham jagatkṛtsnam pravibhaktamanēkadhā |
apaśyaddēvadēvasya śarīrē pāṇḍavastadā || 11.13 ||

तत्र शरीरे tatra śarīrē there, in the body, देवदेवस्य dēvadēvasya of the Lord of lords, पाण्डवः अपश्यत् pāṇḍavaḥ apaśyat Arjuna saw तदा tadā at that time कृत्स्नं जगत् kṛtsnam jagat the entire Universe, अनेकधा प्रविभक्तम् anēkadhā pravibhaktam with (its) manifold divisions, एकस्थम् ekastham placed together

13. There, in the body of the Lord of Lords, Arjuna saw, at that time, the entire Universe with its manifold divisions placed together.

So Sañjaya continues with his description. Arjuna in that infinite body of the Lord, it can be taken as the very space itself, the Lord for whom the infinite space is the very body, in that body Arjuna saw everything; kṛtsnam jagat ekastham apaśyat; Arjuna saw the entire universe resting upon that one infinite body of the Lord.

And what type of universe? Anēkadhā pravibhaktam, which is divided in manifold forms; as I said in the form of galaxies at the macro level; then solar systems at the next level; planetary system at the next level; thereafter we have continents; we have countries; Continents is Bhagavān's division; countries is our division; we draw the line and fight; so this line and that line, and LOC. So the whole universe divided in manifold form Arjuna saw in the body of the Lord; as I said just as Yaśōda in the purāṇic story saw the universe in the mouth of Kṛṣṇa. Remember it is only a symbolic presentation; a figurative presentation of Viśva-rūpa darśanam; and therefore apaśyat.

Where? dēvadēvasya śarīrē; in the body of the Lord; Dēva-dēvaḥ means Īśvaraḥ; and when we say śarīra; do not take the five feet or six feet śarīra of Kṛṣṇa, in Kṛṣṇa's limited body, the whole universe can never be accommodated; only the universal atlas can be accommodated; if you want to see the whole world in my limited body; how will you see; you stick the atlas onto your body; then you see Europe, Artic, Antartic and all. If you have to see the real universe, not Atlas universe, if you want to see the real universe, Kṛṣṇa's śarīram should not be a personal limited śarīram; it should be the vast space itself. Therefore dēvadēvasya ākāśātmaka śarīrē, anantha śarīrē, pāṇḍava, Arjuna, tadā.

At that time, means what; at which time, at the time when divya cakṣu was given. Before that he saw the same world; but it was a persecuting world; problematic world; unfaceable world; burdensome world. Now the very same world has become totally different and therefore tadā; divya cakṣu pradhāna anantharam; after being blessed with Divya cakṣu Arjuna saw the Viśva-rūpa. Who is reporting? Sañjaya is reporting.

ॐ

Arjuna asked for Viśva-rūpa darśanam and we saw that Viśva-rūpa darśanam involves two things; one is the regular eye which looks at the world which is the Viśvam, the universe, and we require a special perceptive of mind by which the very same Viśvam, the universe, is seen as the body of the Lord.

To see the world, we require the ordinary eye. To see the world as the manifestation of the Lord, we require a special attitude, which is born out of the study of the seventh, ninth, etc. chapters, as well as a prepared mind. And if that proper-attitude is not there; I will see the Viśvam but it will be seen as the Viśva-rūpa-Īśvara.

And therefore I am seeing the Lord; for me there is no question of Īśvara darśanam; exactly like Rāvaṇa seeing Rāma; physical eyes will see Rāma, but for Rāvaṇa, it is not Īśvara-darśanam; Kaṁsa will continue to see Kṛṣṇa physically with physical eyes, but he does not have Īśvara-darśanam because Kaṁsa does not have the prepared attitude.

Similarly here also the Viśva is available; but Viśva-darśanam should be converted into Viśva-rūpa-Īśvara-darśanam, what I require is a changed attitude, which is not only appropriate knowledge; what is the knowledge? Lord alone manifests as the creation; that knowledge is required, a cognitive factor is involved. And in addition to this cognitive factor, that is the understanding, there should be the purity of mind also; a mind free from rāga dvēṣa, a mind free from kāma krōdha, a mind which is free from ahaṁkāra, mama-kāra.

Therefore a pure mind plus an enlightened intellect, both put together is called divya cakṣuḥ; if the divya-cakṣuḥ is there, behind the māṁsa-cakṣuḥ; what is māṁsa-cakṣuḥ; the fleshy-physical-eyes; when they combine together; I look at the world as Īśvara.

And it is the divya-cakṣuḥ Arjuna was lacking; and Viśva-rūpam is already in front; but what Arjuna was missing, was divya cakṣuḥ and Lord Kṛṣṇa blessed Arjuna with this divya-cakṣuḥ.

And then there is a transformation, Arjuna looked at the same world alright; but there has been attitudinal change, and therefore he has the Viśva-rūpa darśanam; and when Arjuna has got such a vision, the impact is so much that he is dumpfounded as it were; in fact there is a silence a few minutes and during that silence, Sañjaya, waiting for an opportunity.

Because many people want to come to the stage and talk on the mike; in the functions; and once they get the mike, you had it; One more minute; one more minute, last but not the least, they will go on; Like that, Sañjaya never got an opportunity. Now he comes and he also has the benefit of the Viśva-rūpa-darśanam and therefore he gives the description of Viśva-rūpa as seen by Arjuna.

And how do you know how did Sañjaya know that Arjuna had Viśva-rūpa-darśanam; Remember, Sañjaya was given a special ESP; special power by Vyasācārya by the special power Sañjaya could remain in the palace with Dhṛtarāṣṭra and he could like closed circuit TV or satellite channel, he could have the total vision of the battlefield and not only he could see the people, it was a special satellite TV that Sañjaya could read even the mind of the people. And therefore Arjuna's feelings and emotions also Sañjaya is able to recognise and therefore Sañjaya gives the description here, which we are seeing now in the 13th verse:

अपश्यहेवदेवस्य शरीरे पाण्डवस्तदा ॥ ११.१३ ॥

apaśyaddēvadēvasya śarīrē pāṇḍavastadā || 11.13 ||](#)

The śarīram of the Lord is not a few meter height śarīram; but the very ākāśam is the śarīram of the Lord. Ākāśa śarīram brahma. And in the ākāśa śarīram of the Lord; we saw the whole universe which has been divided in manifold ways; in the form of galaxies and solar systems and planets and continents and island; therefore anēkadhā pravibhaktam apaśyanpāṇḍavaḥ. Arjuna saw, thus Sañjaya saw. Sañjaya saw, Arjuna seeing. Up to this we saw in the last class. This is what we saw. We saw that Sañjaya saw that Arjuna saw.

praṇamya śirasā dēvaṁ kṛtāñjalirabhāṣata || 11.14 ||](#)

ततः tataḥ Then सः धनञ्जयः saḥ dhanañjayaḥ that Arjuna, विस्मयाविष्टः vismayāviṣṭaḥ – who was wonderstruck हृष्टरोमाः hr̥ṣṭaromāḥ and thrilled (with hair standing on its end), प्रणम्य देवं शिरसा praṇamya dēvaṁ śirasā saluted the Lord with his head (bent low) अभाषत abhāṣata and spoke, कृताञ्जलिः kṛtāñjaliḥ with his palm joined together.

14. Then that Arjuna, who was wonderstruck and thrilled, saluted the Lord with his head bent low and spoke with folded palms.

So because of the change of perspective, Arjuna had a great impact, and this impact Sañjaya wants to bring out; and after all he has to describe the impact only through word-pen. If it is a TV programme, there are several methods of showing the impact, you can have a background, with dadda daa sound, you can show the whole world going around, you can show Arjuna's face having forward-backward close-up and you can perspiration appearing; but poor Vyasācārya had only poor pen and book; and therefore he had a poetic description; to reveal the impact.

Therefore he says; tataḥ saḥ viśmayāviṣṭaḥ; so Arjuna was struck by wonder; Not because he is seeing a new thing; but he has a new perspective towards an ordinary thing; it is not an extraordinary sight; but it is an extra ordinary attitude towards the ordinary word available; and because of this attitudinal change; vismayāviṣṭaḥ; he was wonderstruck; and this wonderment was so intense and deep that it began to express at the physical level also; because extreme emotions flow out to the physical body; because mind and body has connections;

We had in the first chapter, sīdanti mama gātrāṇi mukhaṁ ca pariśuṣyati; in the 11th chapter also, because of extreme wonderment, hr̥ṣṭaromāḥ, his hairs were standing on end; he was thrilled; so had horripulation or he had romañjaḥ; hr̥ṣṭarōmā dhanañjayaḥ; Arjuna and when he appreciated the Lord in the very form of the universe itself.

The magnitude of the Lord is so vast and in front of the Lord, we the ordinary people are speck of dust; so how do we express that feeling; praṇamya śirasā. Oh Lord, in front of you, we are speck of dust; as I told you the other day, if the whole cosmos is the body of the Lord, even solar systems are specks in that planets are still 'specker' or still smaller specks (and I do not know how to say that) and when planets are invisible things; what to talk of we ordinary dust; and our smallness; how do we express; by namaskāra; therefore praṇamya; Oh Lord, I am nothing in front of you; so śirasā praṇamya; he bowed his head; dēvaṁ, the Lord.

Kṛtāñjali; so with prostration añjali Mudra; with Namaskāra mudra, that is joining the palm is called añjali; with Namaskāra mudra, abhāṣata. So it took a few minutes for Arjuna to collect himself, because he could not speak.

Now Arjuna is going to speak; he is ready; therefore Sañjaya quietly withdraws to the green room. Now comes Arjuna; with a changed dress; I do not know; we will read.

अर्जुन उवाच Arjuna uvāca Arjuna said देव dēva O Deva Oh Lord! तव tava Thy dēhē देहे- in Your body पश्यामि paśyāmi - I see सर्वान् देवान् sarvān dēvān - all the gods तथा भूतविशेषसङ्घान् tathā bhūtaviśēṣasaṅghān as well as hosts of all various beings, ईशं ब्रह्माणम् īśaṁ brahmāṇam Lord Brahma कमलासनस्थम् kamalāsanastham who is seated on the lotus सर्वान् ऋषीन् च sarvān ṛṣīn ca all the sages च दिव्यान् उरगान् ca divyān uragān and celestials serpents

So now Arjuna takes over and he is describing the Viśva-rūpa as seen by him; and Vyasācārya wants to highlight the description of the Viśva-rūpa. So how to highlight, if it is in written form, you can have highlighter pen; colour print; you can print in bold letter, you can underline, italics, etc. But in olden days only the palm leaves were there; ōlai; What can be done in that? All those things are not there. So whenever they wanted to highlight something, the method used is to change the meter of the ślōkā; so you will be reading in one meter; and when the meter itself is changed, there is a jerk; if you sleep off, you will be woken up; try to read this in the previous meter; so you have to change the very tune; that is method of capturing the attention.

So when Arjuna experiences the Viśva-rūpa, he goes through several emotional faces; his responses are different; and we find three stages in Arjuna's response to Viśva-rūpa.

The first and foremost reaction or response is vismayaḥ or āścaryam; in fact the world is an āścaryam if you learn to objectively appreciate the world; the world loses its āścaryathvam, the moment you look at the world from your own private standpoint; you have a programme and rain is going to come. Then what will you say; even though Madras needs rain; suppose you have arranged the programme; you cannot look at rain as a wonderful phenomenon of nature; in fact you will pray specially: rain rain go away. So therefore rain becomes inimical to you because you look at the rain from your personal requirement mentally. And this private vision is in the śāstra as jīva-driṣṭi; subjective coloured vision; And the jīva sṛṣṭi alone expresses in the form of rāga and dvēṣa; kāma and krōdhaḥ; ahaṁkāra and mama kāra; And therefore world can never give you wonderment. It can never give you the sense that Arjuna is getting now; Since Kṛṣṇa has removed the obstacle from Arjuna's mind, Arjuna is no more in jīva-srṣṭi; he is in the public Īśvara's world, which is wonderful.

Then you may ask: Swamiji; do you say that the world is wonderful; even after the terrorist attack? How can you say that the world is wonderful? I would say still the world is wonderful; you know why; because when you talk about the world; you are looking into only the earth; and there also only the land; and there also only the few human beings; and that too those who have got, what you call, āsūric thinking. If you are going to look at the totality of cosmos; these entire devilry are nothing but a mosquito bite only. Even if the entire earth is blown up, it is nothing from the standpoint of total cosmos; a blot appears big if you are taking a square inch but the very same blot is nothing, if you have got a larger vision.

So we are all the time looking at a few negative people, and especially unfortunately in the newspaper, the only news worth reporting is negative. Any robbery it has to be reported; any murder, it has to be reported; any terrorist hand, it should be reported; only news is bad; So many wonderful things happen, they are not worth reporting and therefore we concentratedly read this alone and if we do not have the total perspective; therefore it looks that the whole world is consisting of this only.

If you look at the totality, even a world war is nothing but a small pin-prick in the cosmos. And therefore when you look at the world not from jīva-srṣṭi; ahaṁkāra mama kāra bhāva, Īśvara-srṣṭi; as it is wonderful, in spite of all the so-called evils taking place. And Arjuna has got such an Īśvara-darśanam; and therefore he is wonderstruck, this āścarya bhāva is expressed from verse No.15 up to 22.

And thereafter from 23 onwards; the response or emotion undergoes a change; which we will see, when we study that verse. So the first response is wonderment; Anything in huge magnitude creates wonderful; whether it is ocean or sky, or mountain; or even water falls. Why Niagra waterfalls is wonderful? Who has not seen water? Who has not seen water falls; but it is still considered wonderment, only because of, the only qualification it has is what? The hugeness alone; anything huge is wonderful. And what to talk of Viśva-rūpam; the more you look at it; it is a wonder?

Therefore Arjuna says, hē dēva; Oh Lord; तव देहे tava dēhē, in your body; aham dēvān paśyāmi; I am seeing all the Gods; here the word dēhē, not Kṛṣṇa śarīram remember, ākāśa-śarīrē, Viśva-rūpa-śarīrē, I see all the gods; sarvān dēvān tathā bhūta-viśeṣa-saṅghān; multitudes of different living beings; bhūta means, living beings, viśeṣa means, different species, right from the smallest microorganisms to the most evolved human beings, bhuta viśeṣa saṅghān; saṅghān means multitude.

Not only I see all of them, īśaṁ brahmāṇam; I also see God Brahmā, the creator, who is kamalāsanastham, who is seated on a lotus which is according to purāṇās, the lotus is born out of Lord Viṣṇu's naval, Padmanābha and upon the lotus.

So that is all symbolic; Lord Viṣṇu represents samaṣṭi kāraṇa śarīram; and lotus represents samaṣṭi sūkṣma śarīram; and Brahmāji represents samaṣṭi sūkṣma śarīra pratibhimbīta caitanyam; So vēdāntic technical aspect are symbolically represented; if you say samaṣṭi-sūkṣma-śarīram; pratibhimbīta-caitanyam etc. a lay person cannot understand. Therefore have a beautifully lotus, and Brahmāji sitting on it; you cannot ask how can a person sit on a lotus; thus the whole thing is symbolic.

So brahmāṇam īśaṁ; here īśa is adjective to Brahmā; īśaṁ brahmāṇam means Lord Brahmā; here īśa does not mean Śiva; he is God Brahmā, who is seated on the lotus.

Sarvān ṛṣīn ca; as well as all the ṛṣīs; celestial ṛṣīs; divyān, divyān means celestial; not only I see the ṛṣīs.

The uragān ca; serpents like Vāsuki, Anantha, etc. indicating I see all the fourteen lōkās in your body. OK.

Now this will lead to a question, when Arjuna saw Viśva-rūpam; did he see only the physical world that is perceptible; or did he see other higher lōkās like bhūvar lōkās, suvar lōkās, etc. because brahmāṇam ṛṣīm divyan etc. is said. Therefore did he see only the bhūlōkā or did he see the celestial world also;

You can look at it in two different ways; here the verse says that Arjuna saw all the lōkās because the word Brahmā is mentioned; Sarvān dēvān is mentioned; dēvās are not certainly here around, they are in svarga lōkā only. Therefore did Arjuna see Svarga lōkās in Viśva-rūpa. Once thing we can see is he did not see the svarga lōkās etc. But Vyasācārya is poetically describing that Arjuna saw everything; it can be taken as a poetic description of the Viśva-rūpa. How do you know it is a poetic description? Why it cannot be taken literally? We say we can take it as a poetic description because, later in the Viśva-rūpa varṇaṇam itself it is said Arjuna saw Bhīṣma Drōṇā etc. entering the mouth of Viṣṇu and getting crushed. In Viśva-rūpa varṇa ṇam itself it is said; all these

sahāsmadīyairapi yōdhamukhyaiḥ || 11.26 ||

वक्त्राणि ते त्वरमाणा विशन्ति दंष्ट्राकरालानि भयानकानि ।

kēcīdvilagnā daśānāntarēṣu, sandṛśyantē cūrṇitairuttamāṅgaiḥ||11.27||](#)

Bhīṣma, Drōṇā, Karṇa etc. entering the mouth of the Lord and getting crushed and killed. Is it a literal event of a poetic description? If it is a clear actual event; Bhīṣma Drōṇā etc. have actually got crushed; then where is the question Arjuna killing Bhīṣma Drōṇā etc? Since we know that Bhīṣma Drōṇā etc. were killed by Arjuna, so their entering the mouth of Viśva-rūpam is only poetic description. Similarly Vyāsācārya describes Arjuna saw all the lōkās; it need not be physically true; it is the uniqueness of vision; he looked at this lōkā as Īśvara's-sārīram;

Or suppose you want to say; No No No; it is not poetic description; some people will get disappointed; because they want to attribute something mystic; people want mysticism; NO No No; Arjuna saw the higher lōkās also. Then even if you say Arjuna saw the higher lōkās, then remember seeing higher lōkās is not the real important part of Viśva-rūpa darśanam; we do not want to give importance to seeing higher lōkās; because seeing higher lōkās will not guarantee liberation. If seeing higher lōkās will give liberation, Kṛṣṇa need not criticise the higher lōkās at all in the second-chapter.

Therefore remember even if Arjuna saw higher lōkās, we do not want to give importance to that aspect. What is more important in Viśva-rūpa darśanam is not seeing extraordinary things; but seeing the ordinary world itself as the Viśva-rūpam body of the Lord. Therefore remember: What Arjuna sees is not important; how we see is: Viśva-rūpam darśanam; the manner of seeing is highlighted; not the object of Viśva-rūpa m; whether it is ordinary thing or extra ordinary thing; what you see does not give you spiritual growth.

But how you see that; that alone guarantees spiritual growth; and that is why Indra is seeing svarga lōkā all the time; but that does not guarantee liberation to Indra; Indra is also mahāsaṁsāri only; all the time afraid of people doing tapas.

Therefore seeing extraordinary lōkās in Viśva-rūpa is not important; but seeing the ordinary lōkās as the very body of the Lord; that is to be emphasised here. Therefore ṛṣīṁśca sarvānuragāṁśca divyān; he saw everything as the Lord; that is to be highlighted.

अनेकबाहूदरवक्त्रनेत्रं ,पश्यामि त्वां सर्वतोऽनन्तरूपम् ।
नान्तं न मध्यं न पुनस्तवादिं ,पश्यामि विश्वेश्वर विश्वरूप ॥ ११.१६ ॥

Anēkabāhūdaravaktranētram,
paśyāmi tvāṃ sarvatō'nantarūpam|
nāntaṃ na madhyaṃ na punastava'dim, paśyāmi viśvēśvara viśvarūpa||11.16||

पश्यामि त्वाम् paśyāmi tvāṃ I see You सर्वतह् sarvatah everywhere अनन्तरूपम् anantarūpam with countless forms, अनेकबाहूदरवक्त्रनेत्रम् anēkabāhūdaravaktranētram with many arms, abdomens, mouths, and eyes, पश्यामि paśyāmi I see न तव आदिम् na tava ādim neither your beginning न मध्यम् na madhyam nor the middle न पुनः अन्तम् na punaḥ antam nor the end, विश्वेश्वर viśvēśvara Oh ! Lord of the Universe, विश्वरूप viśva-rūpa Oh Lord with Universal form

16. I see you everywhere with countless forms, with many arms, abdomens, mouths, and eyes. I see neither your beginning nor the middle, nor the end, oh! Lord of the Universe! Oh Lord with Universal form!

Here things become clear. Viśva-rūpa-darśanam is not an extra ordinary vision; but an extra ordinary attitude towards the ordinary things of the creation. And that is here beautifully pointed out; anēkabāhūdaravaktranētram Viśva-rūpam paśyāmi; I see the Viśva-rūpa of you the Lord, tvāṃ; which has got countless arms; hands; udaram, stomachs; vakthram, faces; and nēthram, eyes; I see countless hands and stomachs; vakthram can be translated as face or mouth.

So what does it mean? Again remember what I told you in the last class; Do not imagine one Lord standing and eyes all over the body; mouth all over the body (how will it be) stomach all over; it is not, the idea is what: all the hands of all the people; all the stomachs of all the people; all the mouth of all the people; they are all Viśva-rūpa Īśvarasya aṅgāni; it is that attitudinal change that is to be.

And therefore only ānanda-rūpam; so Oh Lord you have limitless forms. What a wonderful creation they say; one thump impression will not be the same as another; and one denture, teeth alignment will not be the same as another; in forensic department the use this information; and once skull joined will not be like another; what is the population of the world; each one is unique; you know is what? Each one is Viśva-rūpa Īśvaraḥ; ānanda-rūpam; eyes are different; earlobes are different;

So paśyāmi tvāṃ sarvatah anantarūpam; and nāntaṃ na madhyaṃ na tava ādim paśyāmi; I do not the middle, end or the beginning. Because the beginning middle or end or the beginning middle and end of the cosmos. Scientists have not yet found the edge of cosmos; still they are struggling. since we have not seen outer periphery of the cosmos; we do not know the physical up and physical down; and if we do not the beginning and end, how can you talk about the middle; because to talk about the middle;

what is the middle of the hall; how can you fix; first you have to see the edge; otherwise you can never fix up the middle; so if ādi and antha are unknown; madhyam̄ is also unknown; therefore Oh Lord; you are limitless.

Punastava''dim paśyāmi hēy viśvēśvara; Oh Lord of the Universe. Viśva-rūpa Oh Lord whose body is the universe; Viśva-rūpam derivation if you remember; the teaching will be clear; the derivation of the word Viśva-rūpa is: Viśvam ēva rūpam śarīram yasya; the one whose body is the world itself; the world-bodied Bhagavān; So Viśva-rūpa.

किरीटिनम् गदिनं चक्रिणं च

Kirīṭinaṃ gadinam cakriṇam ca
tējōrāśim sarvatō dīptimantam| paśyāmi tvām durnirīkṣyam samantāddīptānalārkadyutimapramēyam || 11.17 ||

पश्यामि त्वाम् paśyāmi tvām I see you तेजोराशिम् tējōrāśim as a mass of effulgence, दीप्तिमन्तं सर्वतः diptimantam sarvataḥ shining everywhere, किरीटिनं kirīṭinaṃ – with crown, गदिनं gadinam mace चक्रिणं च cakriṇam ca with weilding disc, समन्ताद् samantād (I see You) all around, दीप्तानलार्कधुतिम् dīptānalārkadhyutim radiant like the blazing fire and sun, दुर्निरीक्ष्यम् durnirīkṣyam blinding, अप्रमेयम् apramēyam (and) immeasurable.

17. I see you as a mass of effulgence shining everywhere with crown, mace, and disc, (I see You) all around, radiant like the blazing fire and sun, blinding (and) immeasurable.

Kirīṭinaṃ, you have got thousands of kirīṭam; kirīṭam means thousands; how come Bhagavān has thousands of kirīṭam again do not imagine, anything extra-ordinary or mystic; all the kirīṭam in the heads of all the kings, they are all the kirīṭams of Viśva-rūpa; because they all the heads of Bhagavān; and therefore all kirīṭams are Bhagavān's kirīṭam; sahasraśiṛṣā puruṣaḥ | sahasrākṣaḥ sahasrapāt.

Gadinam; because of battlefield; all of them have come with gada; and therefore I see You with thousands of gadas;

Cakriṇam ca; with thousands of cakraḥ; cakrāyudam.

And tējōrāśim; and you are a mass of effulgence; naturally the Lord consists of millions of stars, each one is a mass of effulgence.

Then sarvatō dīptimantam; shining in all directions; and directions are meaningless in the cosmos; if you look from the earth; you can talk about east, west, etc. keeping our ordinary Sun as the standard. If you are standing on the Sun; hypothetically, you cannot, what is the east, wherever the Sun rise; standing on the sun; all the east, west, etc. will go haywire; all the dates, etc. will go haywire. Remember, they are all imaginations by a petty mind; in Viśva-rūpa all these do not exist at all; therefore you shine all over.

And therefore only durnirīkṣyaṁ samantād; so your effulgence is so dazzling; so glaring; that I am not even able to open my eyes completely. If you have any doubt, tomorrow afternoon when the Sun is in the middle, try to look at the Sun; which is 9 crores miles away; that itself is impossible. So where are you going to see. Therefore durnirīkṣyaṁ; when the mountaineers go into the upper ranges of mountains; it is all over capped by snow; that anywhere you look, there is snow; and the sun reflects and there is a dazzle that if you do not have special goggles, you may lose your eyesight; We are not able to see even the pratibhimbā prakāśam; the reflected Sun; then what to talk of the original; and remember all of them are Viśva-rūpa. And having developed this attitude, go to Badrinath; go to Kēdārñāth and you see the enjoyment; gets a totally different dimensions.

I took the people to Amarnath by mistake; I did not know it was a risk; ignorance was bliss. Nearly 90 to 100 people; by idiocracy; I took the people; and all on the wrong side of 60 years. So later we used to tell Amarnath should not become marnath; mar means maraṇam; and I warned, I told all the people that it is an ice liṅgam; so purely at the mercy of the weather. If the temperature increases there is the warmth of the visitors; it is a cave, therefore the liṅgam can melt. So we take all the trouble and there you may not get the darśan; I kept warning; and many people came; at the time, OK Ok, they said; and unfortunately, what we did not want to happen; and then these people struggling, going in all kinds of vehicles, mules, etc. and falling from them, struggling and running, and all we see Nirguṇam brahma. That is how I consoled myself; that is because we are all sādhanā catuṣṭaya saṁpannāḥ adhikāri. So but I have planned to enjoy the whole 48 miles or kilometres route which is one of the most wonderful Viśva-rūpa of Lord; therefore I never had disappointment; but those who were looking only for liṅgam; liṅgam, and suppose after climbing on the donkey or the mule, and you cannot enjoy the site, because your whole attention is balancing. And unfortunately that person who has to guide, he does not like to walk along with the donkey; he always go somewhere; and then you are frightened; and then you do not know the language; and you scold him in Tamil; sitting on the donkey, you scold the other person; donkey, donkey, etc. but he does not understand anything so therefore neither they had Viśva-rūpa-darśanam; I walked, I enjoyed thoroughly, therefore I did not miss.

What I am saying; after appreciating the Viśva-rūpa, go to any one of the shrine; in fact, we have installed deities there; only for developing Viśva-rūpa darśanam. That is why we have temples in all unreachable places; otherwise why should there be a shrine in Amarnath; we could have had in somewhere in Adayar; Why did they choose? after-all God is everywhere; the purpose is gradually change the vision; to see the very nature as Bhagavān.

Anyway; tējōrāṣiṃ sarvatō dīptimantam why this example came to me; towards the Amarnath last few kms, maybe one or two kms is only frozen snow; you only walk over the frozen snow; therefore if there is a sunlight; then the dazzling sunlight comes.

So sarvatō dīptimantam; that reminded me of Amarnath; and therefore durnirīkṣyam; so dazzling, therefore cannot see.

and dīptānalārka-dyutim-apramēyam; the Lord's whose effulgence is like the effulgence of the well kindled or blazing fire; dīptānalām; blazing fire; and arka means blazing Sun; dyuti means effulgence; the Viśva-rūpa whose effulgence is like that of the blazing fire and Sun; and apramēyam; matchless; incomparable; such a Viśva-rūpa I see Oh Lord.

त्वं परमम् अक्षरम् tvam paramam akṣaram you are the supreme imperishable one,
वेदितव्यम् vēditavyam to be known, त्वं परं निधानम् tvam paraṃ nidhānam you are the ultimate support, अस्य विश्वस्य asya viśvasya of this universe त्वम् अव्ययः tvam avyayaḥ you are the eternal, शाश्वतधर्मगोप्ता śāśvata-dharma-gōptā protector of the eternal dharma मे मतः mē mataḥ I regard you त्वम् सनातनः पुरुषः tvam sanātanah puruṣaḥ – as the eternal Puruṣa

18. You are the supreme imperishable one to be known. You are the ultimate support of this universe. You are the eternal protector of the eternal dharma, I read You as the eternal Puruṣa.

Arjuna's reverence for Lord Kṛṣṇa is gradually increasing. It is not Kṛṣṇa's divinity is increasing; Arjuna's appreciation of the Lord's divinity is gradually increasing. Therefore he glorifies; Oh Lord; vaṃ paramaṃ vēditavyam tvammaṣaram asi; you are the imperishable God; eternal God; both from the standpoint of saṅguṇa as well as nirguṇa; Saṅguṇa Īśvara is eternal because remember creation is always there either in manifest form or in unmanifest form; And that is why in the purāṇās and all it is said during pralaya kāla Lord Kṛṣṇa will be floating on that leaf.

vaṭasya patrasya puṭe śayānam, bālam mukundam manasā smarāmi;

You know what is vaṭa pathram; samaṣṭi-kāraṇa-śarīram is vaṭa pathram; and lying on that means what, tatra pratibhīm̐ba or avāchinnā-caitanyam; So māya; māya, māya is vatapathra; vatapathram means not a leaf on which vada is there; vaṭa pathram means banyan tree; symbolic; So there on the māya, the Lord has withheld the whole creation which is called yōga-nidra of the Lord; anyway what I want to say is: the world is eternal; during pralaya it is unmanifest; during sṛṣṭi, it is manifest;

Therefore even the Viśva-rūpa Īśvara eternally exists in avyaktha or vyaktha rūpa and therefore Viśva-rūpa is eternal and of course nirguṇam brahma is also eternal; akṣaram; And here you can take as nirguṇam also because the adjective paramam is there; You are the highest eternal principle, the nirguṇam Brahmā.

and vēditavyam; which is to be known by all; sa ātma sa vijñēyah; so when we say vēditavyam, one should come to nirguṇam; therefore you are the turiyam Brahmā, jñēyam Brahmā, nirguṇam Brahmā which is to be known by all.

tvamasya viśvasya param̐ nidhānam; you are the ultimate basis or substratum of the entire creation; visvādhāram; gagana sadruśam; mēgha varṇam śubhāṅgam; sarva adhāram; So nidhānam means what? Nidiyathē asmin yasya, the support on which everything rests is called nidhānam; param̐ means the ultimate support;

Why do you add the adjective ultimate support? Is it not enough if we say just support; we have got two supports; one is relative support and another is ultimate support; for example, when I keep the book on the desk, the desk becomes what; the support of the book; but what type of support? It is a relative support, because the desk itself is supported by something else, the stage, the dias; can you say the stage is the ultimate; no; because that itself is supported by something else; therefore relative support is a support which itself is supported by something else and what is the definition of ultimate support? Ultimate support is that which supports everything and which itself is not supported by anything.

and according to vēdānta, ākāśa, the space is supporting everything; vēdānta says even space is not the ultimate support; because the space itself is supported by caitanyam;

for that one has to go to vēdānta; I am not going to go into the details; because the space itself is subject to arrival and departure. Therefore there is locus for space; therefore try to conceive of this; everything has got a locus in space; but space itself has a locus; if you say how to conceive of it; that is called vēdānta; conceiving the inconceivable. Therefore caitanyam is the support of even ākāśa; param nīdhānam.

You are tvamavyayaḥ; you are inexhaustible and unchangeable and unaffected by the onslaught of time; so avyayaḥ means kālāteethaḥ. So in all this Arjuna is describing nirguṇam Brahmā. Even though what he is seeing is saguṇa Viśva-rūpa, he is describing nirguṇam Brahmā here.

A question may come, how does Arjuna know nirguṇam Brahmā? Nirguṇam Brahmā, is in the learning process; for that we should know Arjuna does not know nirguṇam Brahmā but the nirguṇam description found in the Scriptures, he is rattling out.

This is called parōkṣa jñānam; he has just like, we do; Sachidānandāya namaḥ; sachidānanda means what? that is not known; but we Sachidānandāya namaḥ, same daily; so nirguna, niṣkala, nirapāya, nitya, so nirguṇa etc. Lalitha sahasranāma we chant. Therefore without knowing the meaning we can use the expression. Similarly Arjuna is using the expression, even though he is in the process of learning only tvam avyayaḥ.

I pointed out that to have Viśva-rūpa-darśanam, we require two things; one is the physical eyes, which looks at the universe, which is the very body of the Lord. Viśva-rūpam means the universe as the body of the Lord. To see the universe which is the body of the Lord; we require the physical eye; and fortunately we are all gifted with the physical eye. But this is not enough, we require another factor also and what is that? The attitude or the perspective by which I look upon this world as the very body of the Lord; which requires the vēdāntic teaching that the Lord is the material-cause of the universe and therefore being the material-cause the Lord himself is manifesting as the universe, and therefore I should not look upon the universe as mere dead matter, but I should learn to train my mind to look upon this universe as the body of the Lord. This inner training born out of this scriptural study and the consequent perspective change is the second factor required which we call by the name divya cakṣuḥ.

And I gave you the example, remember, when I get prasādam from the temple, the physical eyes sees the fruit, the banana, the apple or the laddu, and the eyes only reports that it is a food item which has to directly enter the mouth. But since I look upon it as a prasāda coming from the Lord; there is a perspective change by which there is no additional weight in the object, but it gets a holiness, a sacredness, which is discerned by the inner eye called divya cakṣuḥ. And when the divya cakṣuḥ tells me that this is a prasādam, before directly putting into the mouth, first I place it on my eyes.

So what brings about this change? It is not caused by the physical eye; it is caused by the inner-attitude born of understanding; and this divya cakṣuḥ has been temporarily blessed gifted by the Lord to Arjuna and therefore Arjuna looks at the universe with a totally different perspective; and therefore what was previously seen as a mere matter-bundle revolving is now seen as the live and vibrant body of the Lord.

And when this change takes place, Arjuna goes through several emotional transformations; because of the perspective change and I said that Arjuna goes through three levels of inner transformation.

The first one is vismayah; āscaryam or wonder in seeing the totality; which totality is all the time available but because of my ahaṁkāra and mama kāra, I never look at the totality; I have only a fragmented vision. So this fragmented vision is temporarily set aside by the grace of Kṛṣṇa and he has got one God for whom the entire creation, planets stars all of them are several organs or avayavams. And Arjuna is expressing the wonderment from verse No.15 and which runs up to verse No.22. And in this portion we are seeing the 18th verse, where Arjuna's reverence for Lord Kṛṣṇa increases.

Arjuna was looking upon Kṛṣṇa as Mr. V. Kṛṣṇa; V means Vasudeva; so V Kṛṣṇa who was born the other day, whose birthday was celebrated with cheedai and murukkku; so he was looking upon Kṛṣṇa as a contemporary and friend but not as the macrocosm and now with this appreciation, Arjuna's reverence shoots up and therefore Arjuna glorifies Kṛṣṇa with all the words he has heard in the Upaniṣads.

Remember Arjuna had also Gurukula-vāsam in keeping with the tradition; brāhmaṇās, kṣatriyās and vaiśyās; all of them had to study the vēdās. And therefore the vēdic description of the Lord is remembered by Arjuna and he rattles out in these verses which we started in the last class:

Thvam akṣaram; in Muṇḍakōpaniṣad, Brahman is known by the name Akṣaram, so; atha parā yathā tadakṣaramadhigamyatē; akṣaram means nirguṇam Brahma; Hey Kṛṣṇa, you are not this mere Viśva-rūpa, you are one even superior to that. Not only you are ēka-rūpa-Īśvara; not only you are anēka-rūpa-Īśvara but you are also arūpa-Īśvaraḥ; the formless Brahman.

which is paramaṁ, paramaṁ means the absolute one, not confined to time space and properties; dēśa, kāla vasthu, paricēda śūnyaṁ; unlimited by time, space and properties.

and vēditavyam; and you the nirguṇa-Brahma alone are the ultimate truth; which has to be known by everyone.

In the 13th chapter, Kṛṣṇa will use the word, jñēyaṁ yattat-pravakṣyāmi yajñātva'mṛtam-aśnutē. In Māndūkya Upaniṣad the word used is: sa ātma sa vijñēyaḥ. Nirguṇam-Brahma is the thing to be known by everyone ultimately; therefore you are vēditavyam; to be known;

And tvamasya viśvasya paraṁ nidhānam, you are the ultimate support base for the entire cosmos. You are the sthithi kāraṇam of the universe; and what do you mean by the ultimate support; I explained in the last class; ultimate support is that which supports everything and which itself is not supported by anything. To put in simple language, supportless support. Supportless support is called paraṁ nidhānam. Up to this we saw in the last class.

Now we will go to the third line; tvam avyayaḥ; Oh Lord you are the decayless or changeless reality or Brahman; Vyayarahitaḥ; without decay and death. So from this it is very clear that Kṛṣṇa is not a personal God with a body, if you look upon Kṛṣṇa as a personal God with body, that body has got asti, jāyathē, vardhatē, viparaṇimatē, apakṣiyatē, that is called vyaya.

So therefore you are the changeless reality; and śaśvatha dharma gōptā; and you are the one who maintains the harmony of the creation; the whole creation is governed by a set of physical laws as well as moral laws. And Lord is maintaining the universe through the physical and moral laws; and we are only falling within these laws; we have neither created them and therefore we cannot maintain them also. So the gravitational law I have not created; I am subject to gravitational law; I am not the creator.

And since I am not the creator; I cannot be the maintainer also; the creator has alone has to be the maintainer. Therefore you are the dharma gōptā; gōptā means the one who maintains. And these laws of the universe are the eternal laws which are natural, which will not be generally disturbed, and if at all these laws or disturbed, there is only one cause which disturbs. And do you know, who is the disturbing factor? The human being.

Wherever the human-beings enter, they violate the harmony; let them enter the ocean; ocean will be polluted and destroyed; let them enter the sky; ozone holes they will create and destroy; let them enter the forest; they will destroy. So human-beings alone endowed with free will can destroy and whenever such human-beings are born; Bhagavān maintains the law by paritrāṇāya sādḥūnām vināśāya ca duṣkṛtām. Whoever be the cause of the disturbance of the universal rhythm, the rhythm disturbing factors Bhagavān quietly amputates, eliminates.

Bhagavān need not create the rhythm, because it is already there. Just like health, you need not produce health in the body, because health is natural. So what you have to do is, if there is any cause, which disturbs the health, then the cause has to be eliminated; once the cause is eliminated; I am in my natural condition which is called health.

And that is why in Sānskrīt, health is called svasthatha; sva stha tha means svasmin svarūpe thiṣṭathi iti svasthaḥ; tasya bhāvaḥ thatha. So therefore Bhagavān takes avathāra. I discuss the avathāra in the fourth chapter, what is the principle avathāra; We have got a inbuilt system in our body, whenever there is a disturbance, immediately that force comes, like what if something enters my nostrils; some impurity, some toxin, immediately health principle takes the avathāram and what is the avathāra called? Sneezing avathāra; if something poisonous enters my stomach immediately what is activated? Purging avathāra; if something enters my eyes what avathāra comes? Tears avathāra; they are inbuilt in the system; they would not come normally; whenever there is a threat, that comes.

Similarly Bhagavān is the total order; total harmony; total rhythm, total health of the universe. Whenever human-beings become a toxin to the universe, Bhagavān comes as a sneezing avathāra; or tears avathāra, purging avathāra and finishes off them. And therefore he is called śāsvatha dharma gōptā; gōptā means protector; dharma means the cosmic rhythm, cosmic harmony, and śāsvatha means the eternal. Eternal is adjective to dharma also, eternal is adjective to the Lord also; you are the eternal God who protects the eternal dharma.

And therefore sanātana; you are always there; ever present; sanātanaḥ tvam puruṣaḥ sanātanaḥ mataḥ mē; puruṣaḥ means the all-prevading one, being the universal form, you are everywhere because the very ākāśa is seen as the body of the Lord.

Can you tell a place where space is not there? இந்த இடத்தில் ஆகாசம் இல்லை. If you say that in this place, ākāśa is not there; it is a contradiction in terms; in this place when you say, that is called ākāśa; therefore ākāśaless place is not there; Godless place is not there; and that is why somebody wrote: God is No Where; God is No Where. Then what did another man do; he made a slight change; how do you write nowhere; SO after w, he put a comma, what happened; nowhere becomes now here; தூணிலும் இருப்பார்; துரும்பிலும் இருப்பார்; tūṇilum iruppār; turumpilum iruppār; anyway you are sarvagata puruṣaḥ matō mē, this is my understanding;

पश्यामि त्वाम् paśyāmi tvām I see you (as one) अनादिमध्यान्तम् anādi-madhyāntam who has no beginning, middle or end, अनन्तवीर्यम् ananta-vīryam who has limitless power, अनन्तबाहुम् ananta-bāhum who has countless arms, शशिसूर्यनेत्रम् śaśi-sūrya-nētram whose eyes are the moon and the Sun, दीप्तहुताशवक्त्रम् dīpta-hutāśa-vaktram whose mouth is the blazing fire, tapantam and who scorches, idam viśvam this universe, svatējasā with your radiance.

19. I see you (as one) who has no beginning, middle or end, who has limitless power, who has countless arms, whose eyes are the moon and the sun, whose mouth is the blazing fire, and who scorches this universe with your radiance.

Anādimadhyāntam, you can understand; ādi means beginning, madhyām means middle; antam means end. So anādimadhyāntam means without beginning, middle or end, adimadhyanta rahitam.

So based on this only; a great sanskrit poet, great scholar, he was extremely poor, generally where Sarasvati is there, generally Lakṣmi does not go along with her; there seems to be some tiff between them! So this person is a great scholar Sarasvati is there, Lakṣmi, money is not there; so he was wearing only rags; tattered clothes; and being poet, everything he can put in verse form; he was looking at the tattered rags and was chanting this verse;

अद्वितीयम् अहम् वन्दे ,मद्वस्त्र सदृशम् हरिम् ॥ adimadhyānta rahitam, daśa hīnam purātanam |

advitīyam aham vandē, madvastra sadṛśam harim.

I offer my prostrations to the Lord; who is comparable to my clothes; how his cloth and Lord be compared; he says adimadhyānta rahitham; being tattered rags; you cannot find out which is beginning, middle or end; daśa hīnam; the word daśa has two meanings; one is the end of the cloth, is called daśa; and the various conditions like old age, disease etc. is also called daśa; or even astrological śani-daśa; rāhu-daśa; that is daśa. So this poet says; my cloth is also daśa-hīnam; everything is torn; And Lord is daśa hīnam; he does not have any daśa; śani, rāhu-daśa; you are also daśa-hīnam. Oh Lord; and my dress is also daśa-hīnam; purātanam; my dress is also the most ancient one; and Oh Lord you are purātanaḥ. Then advitīyam; matchless, you are also matchless, and you can never find a cloth like mine; advitīyam aham vandē, madvastra sadrṣam harim, the Lord who is like my vastram, to that Lord, I prostrate; namaskāra; anyway that is a different thing.

Here anādimadhyāntamanantavīryam; you are the Lord of infinite power and ananthavīrya anantha śaktimān, omni-potent; by which you are able to create this universe itself.

Then anantabāhuṃ; with endless hands or arms; anantaḥ bāhavaḥ yasya; anantabāhuṃ. Here also you should remember do not imagine one God standing with countless hands hanging all over. That is not the picture; the idea is what? All the hands belonging to all the people, really belong to the Lord alone; and therefore all the hands that I see, are Bhagavān's hands, therefore anantabāhuṃ;

Then Śaśisūryanētram; an important one, Oh Lord, your eyes are nothing but the Sun and the moon; Śaśi means moon; sūryaḥ means the Sun, because eyes are capable of making things visible; known; because of the eyes alone, things are visible. And similarly, because of sun and moon alone, the world during the day becomes visible; and therefore for me, these are the eyes, for the Viśva-rūpa Sun and the Moon are the eyes. And from this it becomes very clear; that Viśva-rūpa is not again another form, it is not a special form which appeared in front; but Viśva-rūpa is what, the very universe itself; for which the Sun and the moon are the illuminating principles.

sūryō yatā sarvalōkāsaya cakṣuḥ, na lipyatē cākṣuśur bāhya dōṣair; we saw. Not only that, if you remember Tatva Bōdha, there we mentioned that every sense organ has got a presiding deity; every sense organ has got a presiding deity; for example what is the presiding deity of the eyes; cakṣusasya sūrya. And since the Sun is the presiding deity of the eye, the Sun becomes the eye of the Lord. So therefore the approach is what; whatever is the presiding deity of my organ, that presiding deity becomes the organ of the Lord. So rasanāyāḥ varuṇaḥ; Varuṇa dēvathā is the presiding deity of the tasting tongue and Varuṇa becomes the tongue of the Lord. So therefore he it is said that Sūrya is the eye of the Lord; śaśisūryanētram.

And next one also you can see, dīptahutāśavaktraṃ; Agni or the fire dēvathā, Agni dēvathā is the mouth of the Lord. And why do we say Agni is the mouth of the Lord? Two reason, first reason, in Tatva Bōdha we have seen vācō dēvathā vanhiḥ; I do not know whether you remember; vācō dēvathā vahniḥ; presiding deity of the vāg indriyam is Agni dēvathā; therefore Agni dēvathā becomes the mouth of the Lord.

This is one reason and the second reason is what? Mouth swallows everything svāhā; whatever put in the mouth, it just disappears; Therefore it is a great swallower of the oblations you put all the time, right from the morning; svāhā, svāhā; svāhā; just as the mouth swallows everything, Agni, the fire principle also swallows everything, especially during the rituals and therefore Agni becomes the mouth of the Lord. And we are going to focus the fiery mouth of the Lord aside; we will bring this topic again.

And therefore Arjuna says, Oh Lord, I am looking at your mouth which is nothing but fire; so vaktraṃ means mouth.

And hutāśa means fire; it is called hutāśa means hutam aśnāti iti hutāśaḥ; that which consumes all the oblations; hutam means oblations; aśa means the consumer; the consumer of oblations, and that too what type of Agni? Dīptahutāśa; dīpta means well kindled, it has become a huge conflagration; this huge conflagration of fire is your mouth, ever ready to take any number of things, ready to swallow anything; and that mouth also I am seeing; And when Arjuna sees the fiery mouth of the Lord and therefore he is frightened and therefore turns his eyes away; he closes his eyes, because if you see it is frightening; not only that; this fire is so huge; the fiery mouth is so big that it scorches the whole universe with its radiation. So Arjuna says; svatējasā; with its radiation; with its heat.

Viśvamidaṃ tapantam; it is scorching the earth; do not we feel the heat of the Sun even during the night, after the Sun-set? Remember, that belongs to the Sun, the Lord; the fire in the Sun belongs to the Lord, we will see in the fifteenth chapter, I am the light, fire in the Sun; and how much heat it has got; not only day time, even now, those who are not under the fan, and those who are not under, they will feel the scorching heat of the Sun, which is 9 crores miles away, and which has already set and even after we are feeling; and what is that? Viśva-rūpa you are experiencing.

Therefore whenever you are feeling the discomfort caused by humidity, describe Oh Lord I am intimately experiencing the Viśva-rūpa; then you would not complain; sho you would not say; and imagine the power goes; a few days before it happened; and you can see the people running here and there; it is already 10 o'clock and AC is not working, fan is not working; therefore firing the TNEB all those things; why because Viśva-rūpa, I cannot withstand. But if you make an attitudinal change, you experience divinity; OK. So svatējasā viśvamidaṁ tapantam.

Verse 11.20

Dyāvāpṛthivyōridamantaraṁ hi
vyāptaṁ tvayaikēna diśāśca sarvāḥ | dṛṣṭvā'dbhutaṁ rūpamugraṁ tavēdam lōkatrayaṁ pravyathitaṁ mahātman || 11.20 ||

इदम् अन्तरम् idam antaram this space, द्यावापृथिव्योः dhyāvāpṛthivyōḥ between heaven and earth, ca sarvāḥ diśāḥ च सर्वाः दिशः as well as the quarters, hi vyāptaṁ हि व्याप्तम् – are indeed pervaded त्वया एकेन tvayā ēkēna by You alone, dṛṣṭvā दृष्ट्वा having seen idam adbhutam इदम् अद्भुतम् this wonderful ugraṁ rūpam उग्रं रूपम् (and) fierce form तव tava of yours, लोकत्रयम् lōkātrayaṁ all the three worlds, प्रव्यथितम् pravyathitam are frightened, महात्मन् mahātman oh! Great Lord.

20. This space between heaven and earth as well as all the quarters are indeed pervaded by You alone. Having seen this wonderful (and) fierce form of yours, all the three worlds are frightened, Oh great Lord.

Idam dyāvāpṛthivyōridamantaraṁ hi vyāptaṁ. So the entire gap between the earth and the heavens; the intermediary space between the earth and the heavens; that means the whole place around is pervaded by you; that means what? The whole universe obtaining in-between is your very body; So that is why in Viṣṇu Sahasranāma; bhūḥ pādau yasya nābhirviyadasuranilaścandra sūryau ca nētrē karṇāvāśāḥ śirō dyaurmukhamapi dahanō yasya vāstēyamabdhiḥ. The entire space is nābhiḥ; nābhiḥ means what; the central portion of the body is the entire universe; earth is the feet of the Lord; and the upper sky is the head of the Lord.

That is why Lord Śiva is called blue-necked Lord, because the sky is blue, which is the neck of the Lord; and all the planets and stars are the diamonds, the ornaments which are worn by the Lord. So when you are seeing the ākāśa, what are you to see; the alaṁkṛita nīlakaṇṭhaḥ; I should see bedecked nīlakaṇṭhaḥ Īśvaraḥ; therefore dyāvāpṛthivyōridamantaraṁ idam vyāptaṁ.

by you ēkēna; so ēkēna means what? Without a second thing; wholly pervaded by you; totally pervaded by you.

And not only that diśāśca sarvāḥ all the 10 directions are your body; pervaded by you; 10 directions means, 4 main directions; and 4 intermediary ones; NE, NW, etc. and then Up and Down below; all of them are pervaded by you.

And idaṁ adbhutam rūpam dr̥ṣṭvāḥ; I am able to appreciate this wonderful form of yours; which was there before also. But before I could not enjoy this wonder because I was looking at the universe from my personal angle.

The moment I look at the universe as a person; then immediately the world is fragmented; I just divide a certain portion as favourable; therefore rāga viṣaya; and another portion as unfavourable dvēsaḥ viṣaya.

And once that private colored vision comes, I can never enjoy; I will be worried about my future; ahaṁkara mama kāra etc. everything will come. Previously I could never stand and stare at the stars and appreciate You; but now I have forgotten myself as Arjuna and I do not remember anything as my possession; I and mine are not there; therefore You alone are.

Therefore adbhutam; but at the same time, Arjuna has seen the fiery mouth of the Lord; Everything else is beautiful; all the other areas are wonderful; but he has seen the fiery mouth of the Lord which is capable of swallowing everything; Lord as a destroying principle.

Lord as the creative principle, we all enjoy; Lord as the sustaining principle we all admire; but there is a third facet of Lord; not only sr̥ṣṭi kāraṇam, not only stithi kāraṇam; but the very same Lord is the laya kāraṇam; which is represented by the fiery mouth. When Arjuna saw the Lord as the death principle, the destroyer principle, Arjuna has got fear also. Therefore now Arjuna has got a mixed feeling, one side is wonder; another side is fear also. And therefore he adds both words; adbhudham and ugraṁ; it is wonderful and also frightening.

So ugraṁ means bhayaṁkaram; I am seeing the terrible destructive form of yours and seeing that aspect of destruction; Oh Lord lōkatrayaṁ pravayathitaṁ; the whole world is frightened. If we are afraid of one thing; what is that? Death. If there is any news of any terrible event anywhere in the world; immediately you phone your relative to check that they are alright; let 5,000 die or 10,000 die; my cousin is alright in Chicago; enough.

So one thing we do not want anything around is death, either for me or for a few people around; this is the fundamental insecurity and everybody has got this running sense of insecurity constantly throughout and therefore Arjuna says; lōkatrayam; all the lōkās; even the animals have got instinctive fear of death; therefore all the three lōkās including dēvās, asurās; manuṣyās, paśus, pakṣis, insects, even an ant; they are all frightened of You; the death principle, represented by the fiery mouth. Hey Mahātman means Viśva-rūpa; mahān; ātma śarīram yasya mahātma; sambōdhana is hēy mahātman.

अमी सुरसङ्घाः ami surasaṅghāḥ these hosts of gods, विशन्ति त्वां viśanti tvām are entering you, हि hi indeed, भीताहः bhītāhaḥ frightened, केचित् kēcit some (of them), गृणन्ति grṇanti pray, प्राञ्जलयः prāñjalayaḥ with joined palms, उक्त्वा uktvā having uttered, इति स्वस्ति iti svasti the word 'peace' महर्षिसिद्धसङ्घाः maharṣisiddhasaṅghāḥ – groups of sages and siddhas, स्तुवन्ति त्वां stuvanti tvām praise you, पुष्कलाभिः स्तुतिभिः puṣkalābhiḥ stutibhiḥ with complete hymns.

21. These hosts of God are entering You indeed. Frightened, some (of them) pray with joined palms. Having uttered the word 'peace', groups of sages and siddhas praise You with complete hymns.

How do different people respond to the Viśva-rūpa Īśvaraḥ? So that is described here; surasaṅghā amī viśanti; all the dēvās who are all informed people, relatively enlightened people, they appreciate the Viśva-rūpa Īśvara and they approach you with prayers; Therefore surasaṅghā; groups of Gods, your devotees; tvām viśanti; they approach you; even though You have got a frightening form, they have understood Bhagavān's destruction is dharmic destruction and it is constructive destruction; and once that is understood properly; it is not frightening. Maturity is required to face death; to face destruction; and the dēvās being mature; they approach you with prayers.

Kēcidbhītāḥ; there are some other people; they also approach you, not out of admiration or devotion or reverence, but out of sheer fear.

Different people approach God with different attitudes; wise people approach the Lord, because of understanding; and immature ignorant-people approach the Lord out of fear. In fact religion is often practiced because of fear. So if somebody has been doing a puja, and I do it; Swamiji I find it very difficult; but if I drop, I am worried, Bhagavān will punish me; that is what we have told our children; Bhagavān will cut the nose and put chilli powder there. So therefore they have to do; that is why if there are several photos in the pūja room; you carefully show deepāradana to everyone; or else Muruga will come and.... That is how religion is generally practiced.

Fear is required to keep a person in dhārmic path until maturity comes. So mother has to use sometimes; even government has to use fear; if you do not follow the law, you will be imprisoned; but it is used until a person becomes discriminative; but later, the fear should be replaced by wisdom-based appreciation.

So in the first line, mature ones approach with wisdom-based appreciation; the second-line we are talking about immature people approaching because of fear. Therefore kēcidbhītāḥ prāñjalayō; with prostrations; añjali; with añjali mudra they approach; by joining the palms together; that mudra is called añjali prāñjalayō grṇanti.

And there are several prayers to get out of fear; So bhaya nivāraka slōkāḥ; so they approach with that. In Kerala, they have a prayer which they say one should chant before going to bed:

pēdi svapnam kandālum jñētti unarthēnda |

is a prayer.

So ālathur Hanuman; wherever fear comes Hanuman is addressed; I should not have any frightening dreams; and even if such dreams comes, I should not suddenly get up with fright, it is not good for health and people get heart-attack and die; because of that.

So therefore we have got fear removing prayers; so some people approach with those prayers; grṇanti; they chant prayers.

And there are some other people maharṣisiddhasaṅghāḥ; groups of ṛṣīs who are enlightened, who know the Lord very well; and nature of the Lord; so maharṣīs and siddhaḥ; siddhaḥ means again great ṛṣīs; who have got great miraculous powers; those born with natural siddhis are called siddhaḥ.

And all such people also swasthi iti uktva; they declare aloud; they chant; let there be auspiciousness to the world; maṅgalam asthu; badram asthu; and especially such a prayer is required because the huge war is going to take place.

Now also the situation is going to be like that; in Mahābhārata also a war is about to start; though a war is supposed to start; therefore badram; even if such a war happens; let it be the destruction of amaṅgalam; let it be the destruction of evil; let the good be protected; and that is said by the word svasthi; svasthi means maṅgalam.

And stuvanti tvām stutibhiḥ; these maharīṣīs and siddhas glorify you; praise you; with sthōthram, hymns or prayers which are - puṣkalābhiḥ, which are complete and comprehensive; comprehensive means the prayers which talk about all the glories of the Lord.

rudrāḥ रुद्राः Rudrās, ādityāḥ आदित्याः ādityās, vasavaḥ वसवः vasus, yē ca sādhyāḥ ये च साध्याः sādhyās viśvē विश्वे viśvēdēvas अश्विनौ the two aśvins, marutaḥ च मरुतः च maruts, ऊष्मपाः च oṣmapāḥ ca pitṛs गन्धर्वयक्षासुरसिद्धसङ्घाः gandharvayakṣāsurasiddhasaṅghāḥ groups of gandharvas, yakṣās, asurās, and siddhās, सर्वे च एव sarvē ca ēva are all, वीक्षन्ते त्वाम् vīkṣantē tvām looking at You विस्मिताः vismitāḥ with wonder.

22. Rudrās, ādityās, vāsus, sādhyās, viśvēdēvās, the two aśvins, maruts, pitṛs, groups of gandharvās, yakṣās, asurās, and siddhās are all looking at You with wonder.

So Arjuna says Oh Lord this Viśva-rūpam is accessible not only to me; but it is available for all the people; who have got the divya cakṣuḥ. As I said, the Lord, as the universe is already there right from the moment of creation.

Viśva-rūpam comes into being the moment the world is created; because the world is Viśva-rūpam and therefore the availability of Viśva-rūpam is universal and if there are some people who are missing, it is not because of the non-availability of the Viśva-rūpa, but it is because the cataract vision; it is because of my ahaṁkāra and mama-kāra. It is my private projection which is denying me the Viśva-rūpam; wherever ahaṁkāra and mama-kāra are subdued or reduced; Viśva-rūpa is available; and therefore those who have got lesser ahaṁ-mama; they are already appreciating.

And who are they; big list is given; rudrāḥ; 11 rudrās; these are all various groups of celestials; in the higher lōkās. I have told you before, in Svarga lōkā also, several colonies are there; some of them with better facilities; more puṇyam; whoever has done and then lesser facilities; Indra has got special facilities are there; and these various groups are known by different names; rudrās is one group, 11 in number; ādityās, dvadaśa 12 in number.

Vasavaḥ; 8 vasūs. They are supposed to be the prominent ones like cabinet ministers; others are like ordinary MLAs and MPs, these rudrās, vasūs and ādityās have special right to receive oblations in rituals; they are all called hutabhuk dēvathās.

then sādhyās; another group of dēvathās are called sādhyāḥ.

then visvē another group of dēvathās which is very big; many in number, countless; so visvēdēvas; generally known as visvēdēvas;

aśvinau; another group of two members; aśvinikumārō.

then marutaḥ; another group of dēvathās; 49 in number; do not ask me, you are telling as though you have counted them; these are all said in scriptures who has seen; scriptures say 49; but if you say No No No; only 48, OK, you can take 48. whatever you take you take; set of dēvathās.

then gandharvayakṣāsurasiddhasaṅgāḥ; groups of gandarvās, yakṣās, asurās, siddhās, and saṅgāḥs you should not; saṅga means groups; therefore the saṅgāḥ is not the dēvathā; saṅgāḥ means group. So all of them.

Sarvē vīkṣantē; they are all appreciating the Viśva-rūpa. And not only they all see; they are also in wonderment; like me. They are all wonderstruck; like me; vismitāḥ, means āscarya carithā; stunned. More in the next class.

Hari Om̐

ॐ

Blessed by Lord Kṛṣṇa with divya cakṣuḥ, that means an appropriate mind by which a person can appreciate the whole universe as the body of the Lord; Arjuna is having Viśva-rūpa darśanam of the Lord. And I pointed out that Arjuna goes through three phases and in each phase, Arjuna response is different; and of these three phase, the first stage is one of wonder; because anything you appreciate in totality, in mass scale, it produces wonderment.

Even though you see water all the time, but when the same water flows in a huge quantity, as Niagra water falls, then it becomes one of the wonders of the world; there is nothing new; water you know; and the mountain you know; and waterfalls also you know; but still when it happens in a huge magnitude, there are five million people or so visiting that every year or something. So what is the difference? Anything in mass scale produces wonderment. When you appreciate Viśva-rūpa everything is in a huge magnitude. And therefore vismayaḥ or āścarya is the first response, and that is described very beautifully and poetically by Vyasācārya from the 25th verse up to the 22nd verse, and we were seeing the 22nd verse in the last class wherein Arjuna says not only I am appreciating the Viśva-rūpa and all those mature minded people; they are also having Viśva-rūpa darśanam all the time, rudrādityā vasavō sādhyā; later gandharva-yakṣā-sura-siddha-saṅghāḥ; all of them are vīkṣantē, they are appreciating.

And one advantage is: for this Viśva-rūpa appreciation, you need not stand in a long queue, buying Rs.100, Rs.200 tickets; all those things are not required; there is no crowd at all; anywhere you can stand without anybody saying: jaragandi; without anybody saying jaragandi, you can appreciate without any competition. Therefore sarvē vīkṣantē; for this I told; sarvē vīkṣantē, without any difficulty and the uniform appreciation of all the people is: vismitāścaiva; all the people are wonderstruck.

Now we are going to the next stage, where Arjuna's response changes and that is going to be described hereafter, from the next verse we will read:

रूपं महत्ते बहुवक्त्रनेत्रं महाबाहो बहुबाहुरूपादम्
बहुदरं बहुदंष्ट्राकरालं दृष्ट्वा लोकाः प्रव्यथितास्तथाहम् || ११.२३ ||

rūpaṁ mahattē bahuvaktranētram mahābāhō bahubāhūrupādam | bahūdaram bahudaṁṣṭrākarālam
dṛṣṭvā lōkāḥ pravyathitāstathā'ham || 11.23 ||

महाबाहो mahābāhō Oh Lord ! लोकाः प्रव्यथिताः lōkāḥ pravyathitāḥ people are frightened
दृष्ट्वा dṛṣṭvā by seeing ते महद् रूपम् tē mahad rūpam your huge form बहुवक्त्रनेत्रम् bahuvaktranētram which has many mouths and eyes, बहुबाहुरूपादम् bahubāhurupādam which has many arms, thighs, and feet, बहुदरम् bahudaram which has many abdomens बहुदंष्ट्राकरालम् bahudaṁṣṭrākarālam and which is fierce with many tusks;
तथा अहम् tathā aham so also am I (frightened)

23. Oh Lord! People are frightened by seeing Your huge form which has many mouths and eyes, which has many arms, thighs, and feet, which has many abdomens, and which is fierce with many tusks; so also am I (frightened).

While appreciating Viśva-rūpa, Arjuna happens to see the mouth of the Lord, the Viśva-rūpa, which was briefly mentioned in one of the previous verses; in the 19th verse, paśyāmi tvām dīptahutāśavaktram, Lord's mouth was described as a huge conflagration of fire.

And here the Lord's mouth represents the time principle. It is not the physical mouth that is being talked about but the mouth represents the time principle and the time not as the creator principle, but the time as the destructive aspect, because kāla has got all the three functions; kāla the time is responsible for the origination of thing; the very same time is responsible for the continued existence of a thing; and the very same time principle is responsible for the destruction also.

And when you look at the Lord as the constructive principle, the Lord is called Brahmā; when the very same God is looked upon the kāla the sustaining principle, then the same Lord is called Viṣṇu; and when you look upon God as the destroying principle, He is called kāla.

kālāya; praḷaya kālāgnirudrāya nīlakaṅṭhāya mrutyumjayāya sarvēśvarāya sadāśivāya śrīmanmahādēvāya namaḥ.

When Lord Śiva is described in Sri Rudram, one of the nāma is kālāgnirudrāya. Here Arjuna happens to see the mouth of the Lord, which represents the kālāgni, the destructive principle.

And when a person looks at the destructive principle, one is not going to be happy about it. So naturally the emotion is what; one of fear. So Bhagavān as Sṛṣṭi kartā, everybody loves; Bhagavān as sthiti kartā, everybody loves more; but Bhagavān as laya kartā, everybody is frightened. And Arjuna happens to see that laya, the destroyer and therefore he is frightened; and this represents the principle that the Viśva-rūpa consists of pairs of opposites.

So if you have to worship Viśva-rūpa, you have to worship both aspect of Viśva-rūpa, accepting one aspect of the Lord and rejecting the other aspect is a lopsided vision. Therefore Lord as Viśva-rūpa has opposite principles; and if you understand them as inseparable or complimentary features; you will not be frightened. If you see them as pairs of opposites, it will frighten you. If you look upon them as a complimentary whole, it will not frighten you.

And what is the first and most important pair of opposite; birth and death are the two sides of Viśva-rūpa. If you look at the creation; every moment things are Born, Is, Gone; Born; Is; Gone; Born; is; Born is Brahmā, Viṣṇu is Is; Gone is Śiva Tatvam.

Even in this moment, in our body itself, several cells are appearing, existing and disappearing; so if I should appreciate born aspect of the Lord, I should prepare the mind to accept the gone aspect also; our problem is what? We are happy that we are born; but we want to eternally remain. We do not mind other people dying; that is OK for me; when other people die, we quote Gīta; we are experts in Bhagavat Gīta; jātasya hi dhruvō mṛtyurdhruvaṁ janma mṛtasya ca. Birth and death are two sides of the same coin; the one who is born will have to die; but the question is?: Are we ready to accept when the very same death is going to come near us. Even sometime we are happy to accept our death; but we do not want death happening around to near and dear ones.

So Viśva-rūpa appreciation means, I should accept birth and death, both as maṅgalaṁ; I should not look upon one as maṅgalaṁ and the other as amaṅgalaṁ; that means I have a lopsided vision; birth is maṅgalaṁ; death is also maṅgalaṁ. Similarly growth is maṅgalaṁ; decay is also maṅgalaṁ; health is maṅgalaṁ; disease also maṅgalaṁ; union is maṅgalaṁ; people coming together and separation is also maṅgalaṁ; day is maṅgalaṁ; night is also maṅgalaṁ. Thus everything, we should see as integral part of Viśva-rūpa; there is nothing undivine to me; nothing that is unacceptable to me. This attitude is maturity. And if this maturity is not there; Bhagavān will appear to be compassionate at some time, and the very same Bhagavān will appear to me cruel at another time; the cruelty that I see in Bhagavān is not the cruelty in Bhagavān, it indicates my immaturity.

And in the case of Arjuna, he is not totally mature and therefore he is not able to withstand the other side of Bhagavān which represents destruction, disease, etc. And that Bhayam aspect is described from verse No.23 up to 30.

Viśva-rūpa as a source of fear, for immature people, ignorant people; ahaṁkāra mama kāra yukta people.

So he says here; tē rūpam mahad; Oh Lord your Viśva-rūpam is indeed infinite; wonderful.

Bahuvaktranētram, which has got countless number of faces and eyes; vaktram means face or mouth; nētram means eyes; they are infinite in number;

not only they are many, bahubāhurupādādam; your hands are many.

ūrū; thighs are many; pādādam, feet are many; Hē Mahābahō; Oh Lord with innumerable hands.

and bahūdaram; your stomachs are also many; your bellies are innumerable; why because every belly is your belly; remember, one Lord sitting with many bellies; every belly is His belly.

But only one part of you I do not want to see; if that comes I will close the eyes; like people going to the movie and if there is any bloodshed or violence; they close the eyes; and then they ask the neighbour, whether such a scene is over; similarly Arjuna has come to a horror movie it seems; and what is the terrible aspect; the mouth of the Lord.

Therefore Arjuna says, bahudamṣṭrākarālam. Your mouth is frightening with protruding teeth; protruding canines, like the sharp teeth of the tiger; when the tiger opens the mouth; we can see the sharp longer ones; Oh Lord You also have that producing task, the sharp teeth, which is called damṣṭrā; and when I look that; I thought that they are only for Rakṣasās; but I am in seeing in Your mouth also; and I have read in all the scriptures also that You are compassionate; You are Sowmyaḥ; You are pleasant to look; all of them are falsified; because I am seeing a frightening mouth; and not one or two; tiger may have 2 above and 2 below; but for You, bahu; countless.

And dṛṣṭvā; when I look at the mouth, with the protruding canines; lōkāḥ pravyathitāstathāham; all the people are frightened of that terrible aspect of Yours; pravyathitāstathāham; means frightened. Arjuna says the whole world is frightened. What about him? He feels ashamed to tell that; he is also frightened; but Arjuna is known for his valour; known for his courage and therefore he does not want to openly admit. Therefore he says the whole world is frightened; and that he is telling very loudly and thereafter in a silent murmur he says: I am also; Like in big function when they are serving pāyasam; you love that pāyasam; and that person is going all around except coming to you. Now you feel shy to call that person; so what do you please; please come; this person wants pāyasam; you call him and ask him; the other person does not need it; but after serving him, quietly you say; give me also some also; that is without the other people knowing; similarly Arjuna uses the trick, the whole world is frightened; tathā aham; I am also frightened; that is going to describe further.

नभःस्पृशं दीप्तमनेकवर्णं

vyāttānanam̐ dīptaviśālanētram |
dr̥ṣṭvā hi tvām̐ pravyathitāntarātmā
dhṛtim̐ na vindāmi śamam̐ ca viṣṇō || 11.24 ||

हि hi indeed, प्रव्यथितान्तरात्मा pravyathitāntarātmā I am frightened at heart, दृष्ट्वा त्वाम्
dr̥ṣṭvā tvām – by seeing you नभः स्पृशम् nabhaḥ spr̥śam who is touching the sky, दिप्तम् अनेकवर्णम् diptam anēkavarṇam who is brilliant with many colours, व्यात्ताननम् vyāttānanam whose mouths are wide open, दीप्तविशालनेत्रम् dīptaviśālanētram and who has large fiery eyes, न विन्दामि na vindāmi I do not find, धृतिम् dhṛtim courage च शमम् ca śamam composure विष्णो viṣṇō Oh Lord !

24. Indeed, I am frightened at heart by seeing You who is touching the sky, who is brilliant with many colours, whose mouths are wide open, and who has large fiery eyes, I do not find courage or composure, Oh Lord !

So one side Arjuna is appreciating the wonderful form; but even if he does not want to look at the mouth keeps coming; like a frightening movie, if you have seen; the picture comes repeatedly; Like that, it has given such a tremendous impact, Arjuna is going on describing that frightening mouth, which symbolises time principle.

Therefore first he describes: Oh Lord You are indeed wonderful; nabhaḥ spr̥śam; Your form is touching the sky; nabhaḥ means sky; in Viṣṇu Sahasṛanama.

Divahspr̥k sarvadṛgvyāsō vācaspatirayōnijaḥ (61); divahspr̥k or diviḥspr̥k, that is the word here; nabhaspr̥k, divahspr̥k etc. means touching the sky.

Diptam anēkavarṇam, You are effulgent; with millions of stars; and planets; You are effulgent diptam; anēkavarṇam; you have manifold colours; because all colours are Your colours only;

and again Arjuna's eye goes to vyāttānanam; he is trying to avoid; but again and again his thoughts go to the mouth; Bhagavān should have kept the mouth close; therefore he sees the mouth which is vyāttām; vṛvṛatham means fully open; vyāttānanam; I see the mouth which has got fire inside as well as sharp teeth also;

And dīptaviśālanētram; I see Your eyes also; which are very large and which are very shining. Your shining and large eyes also I see; and for the Viśva-rūpa Īśvara; the Sun and the Moon are the eyes; śuryaḥ candrāgni lōcanāḥ; I see the large eyes in the form of the Sun and the Moon.

And tvām dr̥ṣṭvā; seeing this form of Yours; and especially the mouth of Yours; pravyathitāntarātmā; my innermost heart is frightened; disturbed; tormented; afflicted; antarātmā means the mind; not the ātma; means the antakaraṇam, it reaches the innermost heart of mine.

dhṛtim na vindāmi; I have lost the steadiness of heart; I am disturbed, I am weakened.

śamam ca viṣṇō; I have lost my peace of mind; my tranquility is disturbed; I have become restless.

Because kālam has got several negative aspects; old age itself is frightening in old age, everything becomes weaker and everything against me becomes stronger; now we have got immunity against all diseases; systematically immunity will be taken. Every disease around will become stronger; any disease travelling anywhere, I will become very hospitable person for the disease; somewhere someplace sneezes; and I catch the cold; and systematically Bhagavān robs the immunity; one by one the diseases comes; loneliness comes; one by one people go away; till the day you start thinking about all these, it is OK; but once you think what happens?

pravyathitāntarātmā; I am frightened; all because of kālam; and kālam is an integral part of Viśva-rūpa Īśvaraḥ; in Bhāgavatha Lord is often named kālaḥ; in Viṣṇu Sahasranama also the word kālaḥ occurs. Therefore I have lost my peace of mind.

दंष्ट्राकरालानि च ते मुखानि दृष्ट्वैव कालानलसन्निभानि ।
दिशो न जाने न लभे च शर्म प्रसीद देवेश जगन्निवास ॥ ११.२५ ॥

dam̐ṣṭrākarālāni ca tē mukhāni, dr̥ṣṭvaiva kālānalasannibhāni |
dīśō na jānē na labhē ca śarma, prasīda dēvēśa jagannivāsa || 11.25 ||

दृष्ट्वा एव dr̥ṣṭvā ēva having just seen, ते मुखानि tē mukhāni your mouths, दंष्ट्राकरालानि dam̐ṣṭrākarālāni which are fierce with tusks, च कालानलसन्निभानि ca kālānalasannibhāni and which are like the fire of dissolution, न जाने na jānē I do not recognise, दिशः dīśaḥ the quarters न च लभे na ca labhē nor do I find शर्म śarma peace प्रसीद prasīda be gracious देवेश dēvēśa Oh Lord of Lords. जगन्निवास jagannivāsa who is the abode of the universe!

25. Having just seen Your mouths which are fierce with tusks and which are like the fire of dissolution, I do not recognise the quarters, nor do I find peace. Be gracious, Oh Lord of Lords, who is the abode of the Universe!

Arjuna's mind again goes to the mouth of the Lord; he is not seeing anything other than the mouth;

tē mukhāni; Your mouth which are frightening with the protruding teeth; protruding symbolises the pain that is caused to the individual; kāla as the cause of pain; that is symbolised by sharp teeth; so your mouth is frightening with the sharp teeth; and which are comparable to kālānalasannibhāni; which are comparable to pralaya kāla Agni .

Because according to the scriptures at the time of pralaya, the whole creation is gradually dissolved; and there are five elements; ākāśa; vāyu; Agni; jalam; pṛthvi. These five elements are created in a particular order; ākāśa; vāyu; Agni; jalam; pṛthvi; at the time of praḷayam; the resolution takes place in a reverse order.

So vipraryayaḥ athaḥ. That means what everything is supposed to be in pṛthvi tatvam; pṛthvi the earth principle is dissolved in jala tatvam; that is the pralaya; and jalam is supposed to be resolved in Agni tatvam; and that Agni and that Agni is called praḷaya kāla Agni which absorbs everything including the fourteen lōkās.

and that kālānalasannibhāni; similar to that praḷayakāla Agni is your mouth; and

When I look at that mouth, diśō na jānē; that seems to be pervading all over; that I have lost the sense of the direction, Directions you can talk about only when you look at from the stand point of one Sun. When you look at the totality of creation, East West and all of them are meaningless; even Time is meaningless; Even Date is meaningless; the date in our country is not the date in some other country. If you cross the dateline; date changes; all of them changes. Suppose you are standing on the dateline; of course imaginary line; then all becomes meaningless from the angle of totality.

Therefore diśō na jānē; I cannot think of the directions; na labhē ca śarma; I am greatly disturbed. So I wonder whether you are a compassionate Lord or whether you are cruel Lord; when you see suffering all over; that is why many people become atheistic seeing the suffering. They all love God as long as things are going fine; when a tragedy strikes them; or tragedy strikes some innocent people, some earthquake, you have to include that in Madras. Why Bhagavān creates earthquakes; why Bhagavān creates cyclones; so when you see suffering, then our opinion regarding God gradually get revised and some people even turn atheistic; Maturity is required to accept both aspect equally. Therefore Arjuna himself is reconsidering; I am greatly disturbed Oh Lord;

na labhē ca śarma; śarma means peace of mind, I have lost;

prasīda dēvēśa jagannivāsa; Oh Lord: Be gracious to me: at least do not open the mouth; everything is fine, if you please close the mouth.

Be gracious to me; Hēy Jagannivāsa; Oh Lord who is the abode of the whole cosmos.

अमी च त्वां धृतराष्ट्रस्य पुत्राः सर्वे सहैवावनिपालसङ्घैः ।
भीष्मो द्रोणः सूतपुत्रस्तथासौ सहास्मदीयैरपि योधमुख्यैः ॥ ११.२६ ॥

amī ca tvāṁ dhṛtarāṣṭrasya putrāḥ sarvē sahaivāvanipālasaṅghaiḥ |
bhīṣmō drōṇaḥ sūtaputrastathā'sau
sahāsmādīyairapi yōdhamukhyaiḥ || 11.26 ||

26. All these sons of Dhṛtarāṣṭra along with hosts of kings, Bhīṣmaḥ, Drōṇaḥ, and that son of the charioteer along with the prominent warriors of ours (are entering) You.

So this is the irony of the situation. When you try to avoid certain thoughts, what you very intensely try to avoid; that alone keeps coming. Similarly what Arjuna does not want to see Bhagavān's mouth; But what is happening is? The mouth becomes more and more prominent. And now he is getting a zoom vision; you know what is zoom vision; previously he saw only from distance; now he is getting a close up darśanam of Lord's mouth. Again remember, here Lord's mouth is what; symbolic of Kālam; And if you look upon kālam as the mouth of the Lord; what is the job of kālam? the mouth; keep on swallowing things; kālō jagat bhakṣakāḥ; lakṣmi sthōya taraṅga baṅga capala vidhyut calam jīvitham; kālaḥ is jagat bhakṣakāḥ.

How does Bhagavān eat or Kāla eat; there also it takes place gradually; the dishes are in the kitchen; it is going to be a destroyed by You; it is there in the kitchen; From the kitchen it is served on the leaf; and then it gets even after being served on the leaf; immediately they are not destroyed; after chanting the 15th chapter; Brahmārpaṇam chanting, etc. and there also all items you do not simultaneously eat; you cannot; some of them remains in the leaf; and then they enter into your mouth and they are destroyed. Similarly all of us are eatables for Bhagavān.

And some of us are in the kitchen; and some of us depending upon the age, already served on the leaf of the Lord; and some of us Bhagavān has not yet seen; (big leaf you see, the items like pacchadi, kicchadi, pāyasam, etc.). So some of us Bhagavān has not observed; some of us he has already taken (first heart attack, second heart attack cases) and some of us already in the mouth of the Lord; (we say that I went into the jaws of the death and I came out) and some of us; OK, do not say "us" if you are afraid; some people have been already partially bitten by Lord. All these descriptions are coming; be ready for these details; be ready to get over the fear of old age, death, disease; all of them by understanding that these are all integral part of life; the more we try to avoid, the more frightening it will be; better you meditate upon that aspect and understand that and get out of it.

Now you are getting more description. What is happening? so many people are entering into the mouth of the Lord; because sooner or later, what is going to take place here; remember, the whole Viśva-rūpa darśana is Mahābhāratha battle field, and Arjuna is going to start the war; and in a battle, thousands of people have to die; Therefore Bhagavān's mouth is going to become busier and busier and that is symbolically presented here. Arjuna says many soldiers, Oh Lord, are entering into your mouth. So this is poetic description; do not imagine that these people are flying into the mouth of the Lord; it is a symbolic expression; soon war is going to begin and thousands are going to die; and he has got a zoom lens and he is getting a vision of who are the people entering; who have not entered.

All these things Arjuna sees; who are the entering ones; he says: Dhṛtarāṣṭrasya putrāḥ; all the sons of Dhṛtarāṣṭra are entering Your mouth; indicating they are going to be destroyed very soon; so Dhṛtarāṣṭrasya putrāḥ; Kauravāḥ, amiḥ, these people who are right in front of me.

there is no verb in this verse; you have to supply the verb collected from the next verse; in the next verse vaktrāṇi viśanti, to be supplied here; vaktrāṇi viśanti means they are entering your mouth; vaktram means mouth; viśanti means enter; who are entering? dhṛtarāṣṭrasya putrāḥ vaktrāṇi viśanti.

not only the Kauravās are entering; I see many soldiers from our side also; it seems after Mahābhārata war; very few people survived; 7 members of 8 members; all of them finished.

Therefore sarvē sahaivāvanipālasaṅghaiḥ; with multitudes of kings; avanipāla means kings; Because in the olden days, there were small kingdoms; and each kingdom had a king, small king; big king, etc. So avanipālaḥ means rāja, saṅghaḥ, in groups, all of them simultaneously, Because they had powerful weapon, some people say that these weapons can be compared to atomic bomb; because the Brahmāstram description etc. we read in the purāṇa, it seems to be some kind of some powerful bomb only; therefore in one weapon, hundreds and thousands die.

and therefore Arjuna says; sahaivā; simultaneously hundreds and thousands are entering your mouth.

And the tragedy is Arjuna asked for Gītā wisdom only because of one reason; the primary reason was what? He could not accept the death of Bhīṣma, Drōṇa, etc. He could not even face the imaginary death of them; what to talk of actual death? Arjuna was trying to avoid. Here in Viśva-rūpa darśana; he is seeing the death of all those near and dear ones.

Bhīṣmaḥ; so Bhīṣma, who I love the most; on whose lap I grew, that Bhīṣma is also entering your mouth.

Then Drōṇaḥ, my guru, he is also entering even though he is the most powerful warrior; he is also entering.

Then there is a good news: Karṇa; No.1 enemy is Karṇa. So he sees Karṇa is also entering; then Arjuna seems to be appreciating and seems to say: Good: well done; deserving, etc. therefore sūtaputraḥ Karṇa is entering; tathā asau sūtaputraḥ; and along with all of them.

āsmadīyairapi yōdhamukhyaiḥ; many powerful warriors, Arjuna's own son Abhimanyu is going to have a very tragic death; which Arjuna cannot imagine at all; all these people are entering; Hey Kṛṣṇa I cannot accept this fact.

And what is the most important thing? Accept the fact. It is a fact of life, which we refuse to accept. As long as we refuse to fact, life is going to be miserable. That is why in the second-chapter itself, Kṛṣṇa said tasmādaparihāryē'rthē na tvam śōcitumarhasi. Intelligence is learning to accept choiceless situations in life; as long as we cannot accept choiceless situation, life will be miserable; in fact, education is strengthening the mind to accept the choiceless. And Arjuna is not ready; therefore Viśva-rūpa is frightening. Therefore yōdhamukhyaiḥ vaktrāṇi viśanti.

वक्त्राणि ते त्वरमाणा विशन्ति दंष्ट्राकरालानि भयानकानि ।

damṣṭrākarālāni bhayānakāni |
kēcidvilagnā daśanāntarēṣu
sandṛśyantē cūrṇitairuttamāṅgaiḥ || 11.27 ||

त्वरमाणाः tvaramāṇāḥ speeding, विशन्ति viśanti they enter, ते भयानकानि वक्त्राणि tē bhayānakāni vaktrāṇi Your terrible mouths, दंष्ट्राकरालानि damṣṭrākarālāni which are

fierce with tusks, विलग्नाः vilagnāḥ stuck, दशनान्तरेषु daśanāntarēṣu between the teeth, केचित् kēcit some (of them), संदृश्यन्ते samdṛśyantē are seen, उत्तमाङ्गैः uttamāṅgaiḥ with (their) heads, चूर्णितैः cūrṇitaiḥ crushed

27. Speeding, they enter Your terrible mouths which are fierce with tusks. Stuck between the teeth, some (of them) are seen with (their) heads crushed.

Arjuna continues to see the frightening mouth of the Lord. I hope that you will not have terrible dream tonight.

So tē vaktrāṇi viśanti; all these people are entering your mouth; and that too mouth; tvaramāṇāḥ; can they not go little slow? They are all rushing not knowing; like the python, it keeps the mouth open and all the preys; it does not know that it is python, therefore they enter the mouth and the python closes the mouth and svāhāḥ; those creatures do not know that. Similarly Bhagavān's mouth is like the python's mouth; all these people not knowing; they are entering your mouth;

And what type of mouth? Daṁṣṭrākarālāni; which frighteningly protruding teeth or canine;

Therefore bhayānakāni; it is terrible; and then when I look into your mouth; what is happening? many have entered; Like some people eat this groundnut, you see; some people eat one at a time; Some others do not have patience, some 15-20 they eat together and all of them you do not bite simultaneously; some of them are there in different part of the mouth and some of them are crushed. Similarly like ground nut, many are entering Bhagavan's mouth and some of them have been bitten; I am not saying; Arjuna is describing;

kēcit vilagnāḥ; some people are caught in between;

daśanāntarēṣu; between the teeth of the Lord;

samdṛśyantē; I am seeing them;

and how; cūrṇitaiḥ uttamāṅgaiḥ; they have been partly bitten by the Lord; head alone is crushed; leg alone is crushed; stomach alone is crushed; they are all symbolic; again what do they symbolise? different kinds of diseases; taking away different parts; kidney failure; heart attack; pancreas failure; what is diabetics? Pancreas failure; kālam has bitten kidney; kālam has bitten pancreas; all these are happening and nobody can stop all these things; in spite of medical advances; none of them can be stopped. Therefore better learn to accept them as part of life; so samdṛśyante cūrṇitaiḥ; cūrṇitaiḥ means what? crushed; uttamāṅgaiḥ means head; uttamāṅgaiḥ cūrṇitaiḥ samdṛśyantē.

Verse 11.28

यथा नदीनां बहवोऽम्बुवेगाः
समुद्रमेवाभिमुखा द्रवन्ति ।
तथा तवामी नरलोकवीराः
विशन्ति वक्त्राण्यभिविज्वलन्ति ॥ ११.२८ ॥

yathā nadīnām bahavō'mbuvēgāḥ samudramēvābhimukhā dravanti |
tathā tavāmī naralōkavīrā
viśanti vaktrāṅyabhivijvalanti || 11.28 ||

अमी नरलोकवीराः amī naralōkavīrāḥ those heroes of the world of men विशन्ति viśanti enter तव अभिविज्वलन्ति tava abhivijvalanti your blazing वक्त्राणि vaktrāṅi mouths तथा यथा tathā yathā just as, बहवः अम्बुवेगाः bahavaḥ ambuvēgāḥ many streams नदीनाम् nadīnām of rivers द्रवन्ति dravanti flow अभिमुखाः abhimukhāḥ samudram ēva towards समुद्रम् एव the ocean only.

28. These heroes of the world of men enter your blazing mouths, just as many streams of rivers flow towards the ocean only.

So this is not the lot of the soldiers alone; but this is the lot of all the living beings; because all of them will have to be ultimately resolved; because life is nothing but avyaktha avastha and vyakthavastha. We have all come; we have to go back to the Lord; and again punarapi jananam and punarapi maraṇam. This is the very course of life.

And therefore all of them are entering; and Arjuna wants to give an example; the example is that of the rivers. So there are countless rivers; innumerable rivers on the land; all of them are rushing towards only one destination; even though they may travel in zig zag motion; ultimately, ākāśāt patitaṁ yathā gacchati sāgaram.

Why they have to enter sāgaram; sāgaram means samudra; because they have all originated from the ocean only. Even though it appears they are originating from the mountains; remember that from the ocean alone water evaporates becomes clouds, becomes rains and becomes rivers, rivers originating from mountains. Ultimately rivers come from ocean; they have to go back to ocean; all of us are like rivers; we have come from the Lord; and we have to go back to the Lord;

And therefore he gives the example nadīnām ambuvēgāḥ; ambuvēgāḥ means streams or tributaries; so various streams of river; bahavaḥ; many in number, nadīnām; of rivers; samudramēvābhimukhā dravanti; they are all flowing only in one direction. And what is the direction? samudram abhimukhā; they are all going towards the ocean only; even though in a particular place it may appear to be flowing in opposite direction; ultimately they will go to the ocean alone; therefore samudramēvābhimukhā dravanti; facing the ocean; they are all rushing;

In the same way; all of us; tathā amī naralōkavīrāḥ; all these great warriors; with protective guards and all those things; bullet proof; arrow proof; all of them they are wearing; but in spite of all of them; What is the protection; we only saw; we that America is the most secure and safest place in the world; and they were talking about defence against extra terrestrial attack; if some people from Mars attack, how to send the rockets; so they were reading themselves for Mars attack; but it comes from their own soil; what security? No security will work; when kāla comes; nobody can stop;

Therefore all naralōkavīrāḥ api viśanti vaktrāṇi; they are all entering your mouth;

What type of mouth? Abhivijvalanti; which are blazing with Agni.

Verse 11.29

यथा प्रदीप्तं ज्वलनं पतङ्गाः विशन्ति नाशाय समृद्धवेगाः ।
तथैव नाशाय विशन्ति लोकाः तवापि वक्त्राणि समृद्धवेगाः ॥ ११.२९ ॥

yathā pradīptam̐ jvalanam̐ pataṅgā
viśanti nāśāya samṛddhavēgāḥ |
tathaiva nāśāya viśanti lōkāḥ
tavāpi vaktrāṇi samṛddhavēgāḥ || 11.29 ||

29. Again, people enter Your mouths with great speed for (their own) destruction just as moths enter the blazing fire with great speed for (their own) destruction.

So here another example is given to show how all living beings are rushing towards the mouth of the Lord. And here the example is that of small insects and other flies. So when there is a flame; a lamp is there with oil; oil lamp is there; especially if the power goes; you can watch. All the insects they will rush towards the flame; even though flame is going to be their destruction; they do not know; they are attracted by the brightness of the flame; and therefore they rush towards the flame; either they get burned or they get into the oil and they die. So they themselves rush towards their own destruction. Similarly here the Lord's mouth is like the oil lamp; and there is the blazing fire; and we are all what; ऋषोऽसौ ṛṣaḥ; is that insect; like insects we are all rushing towards the mouth of the Lord;

So Arjuna says pataṅgāḥ jvalanaṁ viśanti; pataṅgāḥ means insects or moth. So those insects which are attracted by bright object; and generally insects are attracted by the light; that is why even when the Īśal comes; once in a while it comes; it came here also; whoever is sitting under the tube-light had it; they rush. Similarly we are like insects; jvalanaṁ pataṅgāḥ viśanti; just as the moths rush towards the flame; jvalanaṁ means flame.

And for what purpose they go? Their own destruction; nāśāya; they invite their own destruction by rushing towards the flame.

samṛddhavēgāḥ; with increased speed; they rush towards the speed; tathaiva; in the same way; lōkāḥ tavā vaktrāṇi viśanti; all the living beings are rushing towards You only.

knowingly or unknowingly samṛddhavēgāḥ; with increased speed; as we grow older, speed also increases as it were;

for what?; nāśāya; for the destruction of themselves.

So thus kāla tatvam is described in these verses as an integral part of Viśva-rūpa Īśvaraḥ; therefore accept kāla without resistance; if you want to avoid kāla; there is only one way out; we have to, just as Mārkaṇḍeya embraced Śivaliṅga and then he was saved from kāla, Yamadharmarāja, similarly if you want to be saved from the mouth of the Lord, you should also embrace Śiva; and what is that Śiva? Ātma is the only place where dēśā and kāla are absent. Therefore ātma śaraṇāgadi; ātma jñānam alone takes you.

अहम् मतिर् मृत्यु मुपैति पूर्वम् ।
अहम् तस् स्वभावात् अमृतेषु तेषु न पुनर् मृत्यु भय अभावः ॥

mṛtyunjayam mṛtyubhiyāsīdhānām aham matir mṛtyu mupaiti pūrvaṁ । aham tas svabhāvāt amṛteṣu teṣu na punar mṛtyu bhaya abhāvaḥ ॥

I do not remember; the one who surrenders to Mṛtyunjaya Śivaḥ. Śivaḥ means ātma tatvam. Only in that place; there is no dēśā and kāla; and as long as we are away from ātma, we have to accept dēśā and kāla as integral part. That is tatvam; details of which we will see in the next class.

Hari Om

147 Chapter 11, Verses 30-33

While appreciating the Viśva-rūpa of the Lord blessed by a divya cakṣuḥ; Arjuna initially expresses wonderment, seeing the magnitude of Viśva-rūpa; which consists of the whole creation along with time which is an integral part of Viśva-rūpa. We should always remember that time-and-space are an integral part of the creation. In fact, they are the property of the creation. It is not that time and space existed before and thereafter came in time and space; it is not; Time and space can never be separated from the creation. In fact, time and space arise along with the creation; and once the creation is resolved; you can never conceive of time and space separate from creation.

And this we can very very clearly see in our sleep experience. When the whole world is resolved in deep sleep state; not only the objects of the creation resolves; once the objects go away; we do not experience time and space also. And again when we wake up; either to the dream world or waker's world, along with the creation; time and space also come. From this it is very very clear time and space are an intrinsic property of the creation. And therefore naturally when Arjuna experiences Viśva-rūpa, he experiences the time aspect of the creation also as an integral part of Bhagavān, the Viśva-rūpa. And this time principle is symbolised as the mouth of the Lord. The time principle as the principle of creation or manifestation and the very time principle which is cause of unmanifestation or resolution. In fact time is very much integrally there in every object and that time which is intrinsic in the object alone, makes the object arrive in the creation; makes the object grow old, as the body grows old; and make the object decay and make the object die also.

This invisible, all pervading, integral kāla tatvam is symbolised as the mouth of the Lord. And this kāla tatvam is two-fold śakti; one is the creative, as well as the destructive power; and if Arjuna had seen creative aspect of the time he would not have any serious problems, he would only have seen the baby boom; you know TV, they put the increase in population; every second or every minute, a few members are added to the world population; and the primary contributor is our country. Whether we contribute in any other field or not; we are contributing to one thing; what is that? Population tick; they will show 1, 2, 3, etc. Therefore the creative power of time is contributing to the boom of the living beings. If Arjuna had experienced that perhaps he would have seen it as a maṅgala karma; if baby is born, they will give only those things will be distributed, it is considered maṅgalaṁ, but since Arjuna was in the battle field and Mahābhāratha war was to start soon, it is the destructive aspect of kāla, which is prominent in the battle field.

And therefore Arjuna sees kāla tatvam represented by the mouth of the Lord devouring or swallowing a number of living beings including the soldiers in the battlefield. If Arjuna had the totality of vision; if Arjuna had seen the Viśva-rūpa as an integral part, having both birth and death as two sides of Viśva-rūpa; he would have seen both of them as maṅgalaṁ. If I have got the totality of vision; since both are aspects of Bhagavān, I can never accept one and reject one; I should birth is also Bhagavān; maṅgala svarūpi; death is Bhagavān maṅgala svarūpi. Union also is Bhagavān maṅgala svarūpi; departure is also association is maṅgalaṁ; disassociation is maṅgalaṁ; growth is maṅgalaṁ; decay is also equally maṅgalaṁ; health is maṅgalaṁ; and ill-health is also maṅgalaṁ.

Thus if I accept the whole thing as maṅgalaṁ, Viśva-rūpa will not be frightening. So this is one choice you have; what is that; accept everything as maṅgalaṁ; otherwise there is an alternative choice; what is that? See everything as amaṅgalaṁ. OK; death is amaṅgalaṁ; birth is also amaṅgalaṁ. In fact this is the Vēdāntic approach; janma is seen as saṁsāra;

पुनरपि जननं पुनरपि मरणं
पुनरपि जननी जठरे शयनम् |
इह संसारे बहुदुस्तारे
कृपयाऽपारे पाहि मुरारे ||२१||

punarapi jananam punarapi maranam
punarapi janani jathare shayanam |
iha sansare bahudustare
krpayā:'pāre pāhi murāre ||21||

In this verse Śankarācārya has included in saṁsāra, not only death; he has included punarapi jananam as also saṁsāra; as duḥkham as amaṅgalaṁ. And in that vision you should see the association as amaṅgalaṁ; So marriage also must be seen as amaṅgalaṁ; kalyanam you should not say, because everything is amaṅgalaṁ. So therefore see people coming together as also amaṅgalaṁ and of course people going away also as amaṅgalaṁ; then it is a uniform vision; See hell as amaṅgalaṁ; and also see heaven as amaṅgalaṁ; that is what Īśavāsya upaniṣad says:

अन्धतमः प्रविशन्ति येऽविद्यामुपासते ।
ततो भूय इव ते तमो य उ विद्यायाग्ँ रताः ॥

andhantamah pravisanti ye:'vidyāmupāsate |
tatō bhūya iva tē tamō ya u vidyāyāgṁ ratāḥ ||

According to vēdānta, svarga is also amaṅgala saṁsāra.

And therefore we have only two options; either accept the whole as maṅgalaṁ; or reject the whole as amaṅgalaṁ; but what is our problem; we want to see birth as maṅgalaṁ;

but we do not want to accept death; that is the problem. We want to accept the head of the coin; we do not want to accept the tail of the coin. We want the obverse of the coin; and we do not want the reverse of the coin. As long as we have this narrow attitude; world will be a cause of terror. Either totally embrace the world; or totally renounce the world; as long as you want one segment of the world and reject another segment; world will be a terror for you.

And Arjuna's problem is, he wants to accept one part of the Lord; the creative principle; he does not want to accept the other part; the destructive principle. And there also he is willing to accept the death of everyone, except a few members. Let everyone go no problem; but Bhīṣma should not die; Drōṇa should not die; Karṇa should die immediately; Karṇa is arch rival of Arjuna; let him go, it is good news; these near and dear ones, should not grow old; they should get disease at all; we should always together healthy healthy healthy, together; and together we should go to heaven; together we should go to Brahmaloṅka; together we should go to Vaikuṅṭa. Together we should go to naraka. Kṛṣṇa says this is not the law of creation; and therefore Arjuna has problem. Therefore we get the description here.

तथैव नाशाय विशन्ति लोकास्तवापि वक्त्राणि समृद्धवेगाः ॥ २९ ॥

yathā pradīptaṁ jvalanaṁ pataṅgā
viśanti nāśāya samṛddhavēgāḥ |
tavāpi vaktrāṇi samṛddhavēgāḥ || 11.29 ||

Arjuna sees the kāla tatvam active; and the mouth of the Lord is busy swallowing all the people and they are rushing into the mouth of the Lord; like the rivers gushing into the ocean or the moth flying into the flame of the lamp. Up to this we saw.

Verse 11.30

लेलिह्यसे ग्रसमानः समन्ता-

भासस्तवोग्राः प्रतपन्ति विष्णो ॥ ११.३० ॥

lēlihyasē grasamānaḥ samantāt
lōkān samagrān vadanairjvaladbhiḥ |
tējōbhirāpūrya jagat samagram
bhāsastavogrāḥ pratapanti viṣṇō || 11.30 ||

ग्रसमानः grasamānaḥ swallowing समग्रान् लोकान् samagrān lōkān all the people समन्तात् samantāt from all directions ज्वलद्भिः वदनैः jvaladbhiḥ vadanaiḥ with blazing mouths, लेलिह्यसे lēlihyasē You repeatedly lick (with relish) आपूर्य āpūrya Filling समग्रं जगत्

samagrām jagat the entire universe तेजोभिः tējōbhiḥ with radiance, तव उग्राः भासः tava ugrāḥ bhāsaḥ Your fierce rays.

30. Swallowing all the worlds on every side with thy flaming mouths, thou art licking Thy lips. Thy fierce rays, filling the whole world with radiance, are burning Oh! Viṣṇu.

So what is Bhagavān's response, when he is swallowing people. All the near and dear ones in the world are hitting their chest and crying. All the other people are crying and what is Bhagavān's attitude; does he feel sympathy for those people, who are crying because of the death of near and dear ones. Bhagavān does not seem to have any sympathy at all. It looks as though Bhagavān wants to tell all the people, if you did not understand the law of birth and death; and if you did not become mature enough to accept birth and death, it is your problem that you are suffering; do not blame me at all.

By giving you an intelligent break, by giving you scriptures which will give you maturity, I have given you an opportunity to understand the death, before people die away. In fact, before we die, we should very clearly know what death is. And scriptures have provided enough input for assimilating that; and if we are closing our eyes; அதை பத்தி பேசாதே; அதை பத்தி பேசாதே; (do not talk about that; do not talk about that). You know in the villages and all; they will not like to talk about insurance policy, because insurance policy means you have to imagine suppose someone dies;) do not bring that; that is amaṅgalaṁ; do not say the words: suppose I die; that means what: we do not want to even talk about death; imagining death we do not want.

By closing our eyes to the death principle, we are losing the opportunity to face it and understand it. Scriptures never say that; they say you have to thoroughly understand that. And if we do not grow in maturity; and if we cry for our death or somebody else's death; Bhagavān will have no sympathy at all. I have given you enough scope for wisdom; you did not get that; therefore Bhagavān does not seem to bother about that.

On the other hand, Arjuna says Bhagavān seems to enjoy swallowing these people, For Him, it appears to be a wonderful pañca bhakṣya paramānnaṁ.

So Arjuna says: samagrān lokān samantāt grasamānaḥ like a good eater; who has got a huge leaf in front of him; and in a big feast; varieties of materials, dishes are served. So He looks at the kicchadi or pacchadi on the right hand corner, tastes it; and to balance that; He takes the pāyasam from the lower right side corner; and then in between takes the pickle a lit bit and licks; and we say; it is really wonderful. Just as a good eater enjoys a wonderful feast; the whole space seems to be the leaf of the Lord. And every object in the creation seems to be a food item because Bhagavān swallows everything.

Therefore samantāt; in totality; so samantāt; stretching all over; lokān samagrān; all the people of the world; grasamānaḥ, the Lord devolves; with what; jvaladbhiḥ vadanaiḥ; with his huge mouth; which are blazing with kāla agniḥ;

and what are you doing; lēlihyasē; lēlihyasē means what; You are relishing it; You are licking your own lips; that is lēlihyasē, licking the lips.

And not only You are destroying people are who are inside your mouth; samagram jagat āpūrya. So the heat, the radiation of the fire in Your mouth, seems to spread all over the world; so samagram jagat.

the entire universe; tējōbhirāpūrya; You pervade with your radiation.

and ugraḥ bhāsaḥ; the heat of the radiation; these are symbolic. The kāla tatvam does not affect You in old age only; kāla-tatvam is affecting even right now, because every moment we are growing old. That is why we ask the question: how many years young you do not ask; how many years old you ask; between the beginning of the class and the end of the class; you are one hour old; We are; not only you are; why I should put you only in the list; We are one hour older; and that is all what; the heat of the kāla; is cooking; we are all cooked by kāla and when the cooking has taken place to the appropriate பாகம் pākam, Bhagavān will have his lunch; and how many years of cooking; it varies; some dishes you have to cook for long time; some of them, for short time; some of them we show and take. And we are all being cooked by Bhagavān and svahāḥ;

And therefore he says tava ugrāḥ bhāsaḥ; fierce heat of your radiation; pratapanti is scorching, is tormenting; all the people Oh Lord; viṣṇō; what an appropriate name; Viṣṇu means the one who pervades all; sarvam vīvēṣṭi iti Viṣṇuḥ; viṣ means to surround; from that only the word vēṣṭi has come; vēṣṭi means what; that which surrounds the body; so hey Viṣṇu; that is your work.

Then Arjuna has begun to doubt the nature of God; because all the time he has heard Bhagavān is all sympathy; all compassion; all beauty; all smiles; this is what His picture of Bhagavān; and when we see here; He is eating everyone; So Arjuna is wondering; Bhagavān is karuṇāmūrthi or Bhagavān is extremely cruel. So that doubt has come.

Whenever we suffer in life, we all will get this doubt, Is Bhagavān really compassionate or not; or still worse question is: Is there a Bhagavān at all; that is the next step. Is the Bhagavān really compassionate is the first question; and the next question is there a Bhagavān at all; so Arjuna also gets into that problem and therefore he is raising a question to Lord Kṛṣṇa; in the next verse; we will read;

आख्याहि मे को भवानुग्ररूपो
नमोऽस्तु ते देववर प्रसीद ।
विज्ञातुमिच्छामि भवन्तमाद्यं न हि प्रजानामि तव प्रवृत्तिं ॥ ११.३१ ॥

ākhyāhi mē kō bhavānugrarūpō namō'stu tē dēvavara prasīda | vijñātumicchāmi bhavantamādyam
na hi prajānāmi tava pravṛttim || 11.31 ||

कः भवान् kaḥ bhavān Who are you उग्ररूपः ugrarūpaḥ with (this) fierce form? आख्याहि मे ākhyāhi me Tell me, देववर dēvavara Oh Supreme Lord! नमः अस्तु namaḥ astu Salutation be ते tē To You प्रसीद prasīda Be gracious इच्छामि विज्ञातुम् icchāmi vijñātum I desire to know भवन्तम् आध्यम् bhavantam ādhyam You, the primal one हि hi Indeed, न प्रजानामि na prajānāmi I do not know तव प्रवृत्तिम् tava pravṛttim Your function.

31. Who are you with this fierce form? Tell me, Oh supreme Lord! Salutation be to You. Be gracious. I desire to know You, the primal one. Indeed, I do not know Your function.

Arjuna asks fundamental questions: Oh Lord clearly tell me; Who are you? Are you sowmya Īśvaraḥ; pleasant compassionate one; or the उग्ररूपः ugrarūpaḥ; the terrible ones;

So first he asks: kaḥ bhavān ugrarūpaḥ; who are you? The fierce formed one; the frightening one; the terrorizing one. You seem to be worse than even a terrorist; so who are you, the terror causing one;

ākhyāhi mē; May you tell; because now I have got fundamental doubts. Whenever problems come in life; we all will become philosophers. Till that time, Gīta will not be thought; only when problems torments; fundamental questions; why did Bhagavān create.

Till now these thoughts did not raise; because we were regularly படைகலிந்க padaikaling and eating. How a mosquito bite or some problem comes, why did the Bhagavān create this world; could He not kept quiet; If at all He created the world, He being Omniscient and Omnipotent; He should have created wonderful world; all are sādhanā catuṣṭaya sampanāḥ; Why only sādhanā catuṣṭaya sampanāḥ; Why not Mukthās; why can't we keep that; why should there be half-rājyam in the manō rājyam; മനോരാജ്യത്തിലെത്തിനാ ഒരു അർദ്ധ രാജ്യം (manōrājyathil ēnthina or ardha rājyam). So why can't all be gems; wonderful people and whole world is wonderful; no mosquitoes; no diseases; Why should Bhagavān create; and if at all He should create; why should He create suffering also along with the enjoyment; why can't He create only Maja Maja Maja Maja. And then suddenly die; and that too suddenly; pop off; in sleep preferably.

So these are the nature of human beings; problems come, thought of Gīta; thought of Upaniṣad; thought of guru; after two days you forget; again back to square one; called smaśāna vairāgyam.

BBBB

Anyway, ugrarūpō bhavān kaha ākhyāhi; please tell; and I am not able to withstand this frightening form; therefore namostu; my namaskārams to you; tē, Oh Lord; dēvavara; the greatest among Gods; you are, dēva sṛṣṭaḥ; dēva dēvōthamā you are. prasīda; may You be gracious; may you cool down; and may you show me a pleasant form of Yours; and not only I am not able to decipher Your form; I want to also know what is Your job? all these things we ask; Who are you?; What are you? Two questions. Who are you? What are you? What are you? means what, the designation; I am GM; I am the President, I am Secretary, I am clerk, etc. Similarly, Oh Lord what is Your designation. So You seem to have only one job. Eating seems to be Your only job; What is your designation.

bhavantamādyarṇ vijñātumicchāmi; I would like to clearly You; who is the cause of this Universe. ādyarṇ means sṛṣṭi kartāram who existed even before the sṛṣṭi and not only I would like to know who You are clearly, tava pravṛttim nahi prajānāmi; I do not know Your function also. pravṛtti means function; because Your present function seems to be only a frightening function; Is this alone your function; or something else; do You do any other good work or you keep only swallowing.

Much is there for human being to grow; how we never think in these lines at all; we are busy thinking in the narrow mindedly doing a few things; and we never try to understand the creation, the destination. And now Arjuna seems to be asking the fundamental question. So Bhagavān is very happy; therefore He gives the answer.

So with this second phase of Arjuna's response is over. I had told you long before; I do not know whether you remember; when Arjuna appreciates the Viśva-rūpa, he goes through three stages of response I said; the first response is one of wonderment; ascharyam or vismayah;

Thereafter the second stage especially when you looked into the mouth of the Lord it was fear or bhayam.

Now we have to enter into the third stage; but before that; Kṛṣṇa is going to answer Arjuna's question.

Verse 11.32

श्रीभगवनुवाच ।
कालोऽस्मिलोकक्षयकृत्प्रवृद्धो
लोकान्समाहर्तुमिह प्रवृत्तः
ऋतेऽपि त्वां न भविष्यन्ति सर्वे
येऽवस्थिताः प्रत्यनीकेषु योधाः ॥ ११.३२ ॥

Śrī Bhagavān Uvāca
kālo'smi lōkākṣayakṛt pravṛddhō lōkān samāhartumiha pravṛttaḥ | ṛtē'pi tvām na bhaviṣyanti sarvē yē'avasthitāḥ pratyanikēṣu yōdhāḥ || 11.32 ||

श्री भगवान् उवाच Śrī Bhagavān uvāca the Lord said अस्मि asmi I am, प्रवृद्धः कालः pravṛddhah kālah the mighty 'Time' लोकक्षयकृत् lōkākṣayakṛt destroyer of the world; प्रवृत्तः pravṛttaḥ I am proceeding, समाहर्तुम् samāhṛtum to destroy, लोकान् इह lōkān iha the people here सर्वे योधाः sarvē yōdhāḥ all the warriors, ये अवस्थिताः yē avasthitāḥ who are arrayed, प्रत्यनीकेषु pratyanikēṣu in both the armies, न भविष्यन्ति na bhaviṣyanti will cease to exist, अपि ऋते त्वाम् api ṛte tvām even without you.

32. The Lord said – I am the mighty Time, the destroyer of the world. I am proceeding to destroy the people here. All the warriors who are arrayed in both the armies will cease to exist even without you.

Sri Bhagavān uvāca; the Lord answered Arjuna's question asked in the previous verse. So he asked two questions: Who are You? And what is your function? He answered the first question;

Kālah asmi; I am the Kāla tatvam also; which is an integral part of the relative world; that is why in Vēdānta; we talk about two planes of reality;

one is called vyāvahāriha satyam.

and other is called pāramārthika satyam.

Vyāvahāriha satyam is a plane in which time principle is integral, intrinsic, inherent feature aspect and therefore in vyāvahāriḥ plane and everything will have corresponding opposite. So arrival-departure, growth-decay; union-disassociation; birth-death; it is an integral part which is called vyāvahāriḥ satyam.

And Vēdāntins advice is what; with regard to vyāvahāriḥ satyam, we have only two option; either you accept it totally or you reject it totally; it seems in one aircraft; aeroplane, in Indian Airlines or Air India; a personal was traveling, he used to travel in other flights which are all advanced; and they give varieties of food in the flight; And they ask for varieties of choices also; do you want this or that; and whatever he names, they give; and in this flight, this person; brought the food and asked the passenger; this is the food and would you like to taste; and then that passenger; Do we have choice; then the airhostess perhaps said you have choice; what choice he said; Yes or No; So no choice for idli or dosa or veg or non-veg etc.; Do you want or not; that is your choice. Like that; with regard to the world you have got only one choice; the whole thing should be accepted as one peace as divine; or the whole thing should be rejected. So this is called vyāvahāriḥ satyam.

And the other one is called pāramārthika satyam where there is no time; there is no space; and therefore there is no pairs of opposite also; anyathra dharmāt; anyathra adharmāt; dhamam is not; adharmam is also not there; good is not there; bad is also not there; birth is not there; death is also not there; na jāyatē mriyatē vā kadācit nāyaṁ bhūtvā bhavitā vā na bhūyaḥ.

Therefore either vote for pāramārthika and reject the vyāvahāriha totally or you learn to accept the vyāvahāriha totally; only one side you cannot take; அந்த கதை நடக்காது; That story will not work. And one thing; for total rejection also you require mental strength; total renunciation requires mental strength. You have to renounce everything; so enemies also renounce; that we happily do; but Vēdānta says; renounce friends also; diseases you renounce; health also you renounce; disassociation you renounce; association also renounce; death you renounce; birth also you renounce. Total renunciation requires inner strength; total acceptance also requires inner strength. Both requires strength; Vēdānta says that strength you get only from one source; and that is self-knowledge.

Ātma jñānam gives you that inner strength; by which either you can accept everything or you can reject everything. You choose gṛhastha āśrama; you have to accept people coming; and people going; children are born, you enjoy their association; and for education after marriage etc. they go away; you have to accept what; totally the creation. Or take sanyāsa āśrama; in which you renounce everything; but partial acceptance is not acceptable; partial rejection is also not acceptable.

Therefore Kṛṣṇa says aham kālaḥ asmi; so vyāvahāriha dṛṣṭya; I am kāla tatvam; pāramārthika dṛṣṭya; I am kālātitha tatva.

and as kāla tatvam; I have got two fold function; What are they; creating and destroying; And here what is the context; Mahābhāratha battlefield and therefore Kṛṣṇa says; lōka kṣaya kṛt; now prominently I am doing the job of destruction; so lōka kṣakṛt means the destructive principle.

Pravṛdhdaḥ means which has been activated now; because in Mahābhāratha battlefield; destruction is going to take place in a mass magnitude. And therefore pravṛdhdaḥ means activated destroying principle; because in lakhs; like earthquake; not in one or two; a few thousands svahaḥ; cyclone, another few thousands; therefore there Kāla tatva is what? Pravṛdhdaḥ; activated time principle.

And why have I come here; Kṛṣṇa says: iha pravṛdhdaḥ; here I have come and engaged myself in the job of lōkān iha samāhṛtum; in the job of destroying all these people, eleven akṣouhinis; of Kaurava army and seven akṣouhinis of Pāndāva army, and thousands and millions and only a few people are going to survive; who can be counted; one digit; seven or eight; in Mahābhāratha it is given; How many survived; so I am engaged in that activity.

And then Kṛṣṇa gives the warning. Arjuna, this is going to happen whether you decide to start the war or whether you decide against the war. Because I have decided to destroy; whether you want to cooperate with Me or not; if you are not there; like if one tyre is punctured; what do you do; you do not stop the journey; with another tyre you proceed.

So therefore Kṛṣṇa gives a warning to Arjuna; ṛtē'pi tvām; even if you are not there; even without your involvement in the Mahābhāratha battle.

sarvē na bhaviṣyanti; all these people have to disappear. The time has come for the world to be vacated of a huge mass of people; and who are they?

yē'vasthitāḥ; all the people; the ocean of humanity that is in front of you; belonging to pratyanīkēṣu yōdhāḥ; means soldiers who are present in both the armies; No doubt your army is standing for dharma; and the opposite army is standing for adharma; it is dharmādharma yuddam only but still even on the dhārmic side; in spite of dharma being with you; many people in your army also will have to die; That is why pratyanīkēṣu; anikam means army; prathi means on both sides; Solders on both sides have to perish; there is no way out; there prarabdha is over. And therefore what; Arjuna carefully note.

तस्मात्त्वमुत्तिष्ठ यशो लभस्व
जित्वाशत्रून्भुङ्क्ष्व राज्यं समृद्धम् ।
मयैवैते निहिताः पूर्वमेव
निमित्तमात्रं भव सव्यसाचिन् ॥ ११.३३ ॥

tasmāt tvamuttiṣṭha yaśō labhasva jītvā śātrūn bhuñkṣva rājyaṁ samṛddham | mayaivaitē nihatāḥ pūrvamēva
nimittamātraṁ bhava savyasācin || 11.33 ||

तस्मात् tasmāt therefore त्वम् उत्तिष्ठ tvam uttiṣṭha get up लभस्य यशः labhasya yaśaḥ (and) attain fame जित्वा शत्रून् jītvā śātrūn conquering the enemies, भुङ्क्ष्व bhuñkṣva enjoy, समृद्धम् राज्यम् samṛddham rājyam the prosperous kingdom, एव एते ēva ētē indeed पूर्वम् एव pūrvam ēva they have been already निहिताः मया nihatāḥ mayā killed by Me भव निमित्तमात्रम् nimittamātram bhava be a mere instrument, सव्यसाचिन् savyasācin (ambidextrous bowman) Arjuna.

33. Therefore get up (and) attain fame. Conquering the enemies, enjoy the prosperous kingdom. Indeed, they have been already killed by Me. Be a mere instrument Oh! Arjuna, the ambidextrous bowman.

Therefore Arjuna whether you are going to get involved in this battle or not; the time has come for all these people to perish. If you are going to be involved; the advantage is you will get the name and fame for fighting on the side of dharma, The name and fame will not come to the Lord; but people will say Arjuna fought for dharma and Arjuna established dharma; You will get name and fame; if you fight this battle. And if you run away; anyway the result is going to be the end of this people in one way or the other. Bhagavān has got other methods of destruction. It is not a very big deal at all for Bhagavān; if you run away also; these people will have to die in one form or the other. And the result will be what? For your running away, you will get a bad name; because a kṣatriya has relinquished his duty, which is called a prathyavāya dōṣa; which is called omission; you will have ill-fame and you will even have pāpam. But either way these people are going to be destroyed. Therefore which is better; You join and do your duty.

Therefore he says; Tasmāt; therefore, means wherefore; since the time has come for these people to disappear from earth; and since I am going to remove them anyway from the face of the earth.

tvam uttiṣṭha; you get up and cooperate with Me; tvam uttiṣṭha.

And not only that; yaśō labhasva; I am not interested in name and fame. Bhagavān wants to get the things done. So I am not interested; you can take the name and fame.

How; śatrūn jitvā; so by winning over; by becoming victorious; by defeating your enemies; jitvā means defeating your enemies; and not only you will defeat your enemies and get name and fame; samṛddham rajyaṁ bhuñkṣva; you can enjoy the prosperous kingdom which you have lost; and you are struggling in the forest; without even proper bedding; no mosquito net; No A/c; all suffering you are undergoing; you can enjoy the kingdom.

And mayaivaitē nihitāḥ pūrvamēva; all these people have been already destroyed by Me; because their prarabhdā karma is over and therefore the means of destruction alone can vary; but the end of destruction is going to anyway happen; which is My department; therefore ētē pūrvamēva nihitāḥ; therefore you do not require a big brahmāstram; simple bow and arrow with which you played in the childhood in dramas etc; with the coconut leaf broomstick material; that is enough. So Rāvaṇa will be standing there and Rāma will be there with the broomstick, and instruction has been given that, the moment Rāma releases, Rāvaṇa has to fall; therefore instructions are very clear; when this boy shoots and that broomstick falls down only and whether it goes or not; Rāvaṇa has to suddenly fall; Similarly Arjuna; you do not require Pāśupathāstram and brahmāstram and all those things; you have to go through motions and these people will go away.

And therefore hē savyasācin; Arjuna; so the one who can shoot the arrows with the left hand also; savyam means left hand; So savyēna hastēna saīthum śīlam asya asthi iti savyasācin; that means what he can shoot with right hand also and left hand also; ambidexterous; the one who can use both hands equally well; and therefore even if you use your left hand; it does not matter; you just act, and they will all fall.

Like that Mulla; Nasuruddin Mulla have you heard; Mulla was telling; he had invited some guest; and he had shown some trophies. So various parts of the wild animals; some animal's nakham; that nails he had kept; various parts also; so then this person went through and saw and he asked; I saw various parts of the body of the animals; but I do not see the head at all; you are a great hunter; you seem to have destroyed all these animals; I do not seem to see at all. Then Mulla said: I could have done that; but when I went for hunting; the head was already taken by somebody; what is the meaning; he has not killed a single animal. Like that; you have to be only like Mulla; I have already finished them; and therefore your job is what? Nimittamātraṁ savyasācin bhava; may you become a simple instrument in My hands. Do not protest; do not run away from the battlefield; do not be frightened; you can never escape from this eventuality; therefore better you become my instrument for the destruction. So nimittam means instrument.

And this line is a very very often quoted line; nimitha mātram bhava; nimitha mātram bhava; but this line is often quoted in a different context, and therefore we have to understand this line properly. When we read in this context, it look as though Arjuna is only an instrument in the hand of the Lord; he seems to be only a puppet in the hands of the Lord and it looks as though the Lord is getting everything done even in advance; because he says: there is an expression also; mayaivaitē pūrvamēva nihitāḥ; pūrvam is an important word; pūrvam ēva means what; earlier itself it is written on their head; that they have to die; I have already decided. And therefore it looks as though everything is pre-determined by the Lord; which we call as destiny; தலயில் எழுத்து; talayil eḷuttu; that means at the end of the class we should reach home or not has already been predetermined by the Lord; and it looks as though human-beings do not have any choice at all. And then we have got enough slōkās and statements that everything is destined; everything is already written.

ललट लिखिता रेखा ,परिमार्तुम् न शक्यते ॥ hariṇāpi harēṇāpi brahmaṇāpi surairapi । lalaṭa likhitā rēkhā, parimārtum na śakyatē॥

It is all destiny-oriented slōkā; lalāta likhithā rēkhā; means what; தலயில் எழுத்து talayil eḷuttu; what is written on your head; or what is in your jātakam or what is on your palm, all these are pre-determined; even Hari cannot change; Hari means Viṣṇu cannot change the destiny; Harēṇāpi, Śiva cannot change destiny; Brahmaṇāpi; Brahmāji cannot change destiny; Suraiḥ api; even Gods cannot change the destiny.

That means fundamental question is what? If even they cannot change the destiny; where is the question of I changing the destiny. So thus these two lines of the 11th chapter, will give a big boost to the fatalistic people; already they are fatalistic. This line is halwa for them. What is there in our hands Sir; everything has been pre-determined; we are all humble simple puppets in the hands of the Lord. He is kapada-nātaka sūtra dhāri; and He is pulling the string and we are dancing on the stage; and therefore the conclusion will be what? There is no free-will at all. There is no free-will at all, it appears; therefore is only one doer; who is the doer; Bhagavān alone is the doer of everything; Bhagavān determines everything; there is nothing in our hands at all. This will be the wrong conclusion which can come out of these two lines. And therefore I have to spend some time to eliminate these false idea of fatalism and we have to reinstate the freewill. Human beings do have the freewill to handle things; and how to do that; and if you do not accept the freewill; what all will be the consequences, we should carefully understand, which we will do in the next class.

Hari Om

Appreciating the Viśva-rūpa of the Lord, Arjuna went through two emotions; the first emotion was one of wonder; āścaryam or vismayaḥ; and the second was fear or bhayam; because he saw the Lord destroying everything. And the seeing the destructive aspect of the Lord; Arjuna had a fundamental question; whether the Lord is really compassionate at all; as he is described in the scriptures, and therefore he puts a question to the Lord; Who are you? What is your function? And Lord Kṛṣṇa is answering Arjuna's questions in these verses beginning with the 32nd up to verse no.34; three verses.

And there Lord Kṛṣṇa said in the third second verse; we saw: That I am the kāla tatvam; because kāla or time is non-separate from the universe; if universe is My body; time is also an integral aspect of Mine; And therefore from the standpoint of time, I am called kālaḥ; I am called Yamaḥ; the one who controls the movement or controls all the processes of the creation; Yamaḥ means ētachathi niyachathi iti Yamaḥ; all controller is called Yamaḥ.

yamāya namaḥ | yamāya dharmarājāya mṛtyavē cāntakāya ca | vaivasvatāya kālāya sarvabhūta-kṣayāya ca || (somewhere it comes!)😊😊. In daily Sandhyāvandanam; Yama namaskāra is a part because the Lord as kāla tatvam is called Yama. Yama controls everything perfectly according to the universal laws. Therefore he is called Yamayā dharmarājāya; Yama never knows injustice and therefore You Lord; who are You when he asked Lord Kṛṣṇa said that I am the kāla tatvam; yama tatvam.

And then he said now I am going to destroy all the warriors or soldiers belonging to both the sides; because there kālam has come; their prarabdha is over; and therefore they have to die, according to the law of karma.

And when Bhagavān has to kill the people according to the law of karma; He does not come with pistol or sword; He finds some other means; வல்லவனுக்கு புல்லும் ஆயுதம்; SO He can use anything to destroy. And Arjuna, I thought I will give you an opportunity to become My instrument; and if you become an instrument; the advantage is: I will get my job done and you will get parama vīra cakra and maha vīra cakra; I have already Sudarśana cakra; that is enough for me; and I do not any other cakra; therefore He made a crucial statement, which we have to analyse; nimittamātram bhava; May you simply become my instrument. These people are already dead and gone.

And if we superficially study these two lines, we will get this idea; That everything is already determined by God, because Bhagavān clearly says I have killed them; which means destruction has already taken place; even before Arjuna's started the war; therefore the idea of pre-determinism; that everything being determined in advance; that seems to be one idea conveyed; which is otherwise called fatalism.

Everything is already determined; we do not do anything at all; this is one thing;

And the second idea that is conveyed is Kṛṣṇa uses the word nimitamātram; be only an instrument; in my hands; from which we get the idea that we are all only puppets or instruments; Bhagavān is the ultimate controller; and we have also the word like Kapada Nāṭaka Sūtra Dhāri. So Bhagavān holds the strings of the puppets and our hands and legs move; நான் அசைத்தால் அசையும் அகிலம் எல்லமே nāṅ acaittāl acayum akilam ēllamē; அறிவாய் மனிதா ஆணவம் பெரிதாய்; arivāy maṇitā āṅavam pēritāy; cinema song. So all these lines also come handy. So therefore, அவன் இன்றி ஓர் அணுவும் அசையாது. avaṅ iṅṛi ōr aṅuvum acaiyātu; we are all puppets in the hands of the Lord; we are instruments; அவன் ஆட்டறான், நான் ஆடறேன். Avaṅ āṭṭarāṅ, nāṅ āṭṭarēṅ. So this fatalistic idea; the idea of determinism comes and therefore we have to be very careful in reading this.

And we should mainly understand our śāstra does not accept fatalism. Our śāstras totally reject fatalism; our śāstras do not look upon ourselves as puppets in the hands of the Lord; because to say that we are puppets means, that we do not have a freewill at all. Therefore the theory of fatalism is the rejection of freewill for the human being and this is totally against the teaching of the śāstram.

Therefore remember; fatalism is to be rejected outright; but we should be very careful; when we reject fatalism, we are not rejecting fate; we are making a very subtle difference; when we are rejecting fatalism; we are not rejecting fate; what is the difference? I am going to say: the difference I will tell you.

Fate is very much accepted by Śāstras. Fate is defined as the result of the actions that we have done in the past; in the past of this janma; as well as the past of the previous janmas. All those karma-phalam is called fate. Śāstras accepts fate as karma-phalam; which is otherwise known as destiny; which is otherwise called prārabhdam; which is otherwise called daivam; which according to our tradition is indicated by our horoscope. Therefore the planetary positions at the time of birth; they are indicators of our prārabdhā; which prarabdha influences our life.

We never say planets influence our life; very careful; planets do not influence our life; stars do not influence; the Sun does not influence; then what influences? Prārabhdam influences, which prārabhdham is indicated by the planetary position; like if you have got a fuel meter in the car; it has got green shade; yellow and red; and that indicates whether your fuel is sufficient; or it is about to get over; or zero. Now that fuel meter is not responsible for the running of the car. It is not the meter is pushing the car; the fuel-meter is the indicator of the petrol, which petrol alone is responsible for the movement of the car; the meter is the indicator; but not the influencer. Similarly stars or indicators of the prārabhda; they are not influencers of your life. And who influences; prārabhda influences; it is fate; it is accepted.

And what is the difference between fate and fatalism. According to our śāstra, fate is one the factors which influences your life; fate is not the only influencer of your life; If you say fate alone determines everything, it is called fatalism; if you say fate alone determines everything, it is fatalism. But what does śāstra say fate is one of the factors. In addition to fate there is another factor which influences your life; and what is it? That is called freewill or puruṣārta; therefore if you fate and freewill together defines your future; it is śāstra.

If you say fate and freewill together decides your future; it is śāstra. If you say fate alone decides; it is called fatalism.

In fatalism; freewill is rejected. In fatalism; freewill is rejected and rejecting the freewill the fatalistic people say that everything is determined by destiny in advance; or they use the expression everything is pre-determined by God's will. He has written everything before itself.

Now what are the problems if you accept this theory; we should know. Suppose we say everything is decided by God; and you say God's Will alone exist; and all of us are only instruments in the hands of the Lord. What will be the problem in this theory? There are certain minor advantages. That we will see first; the problems we can see later; there are certain minor advantages in the theory. The great advantage is, you need not take responsibility for your atrocities. As somebody nicely said; To err is human; To put the blame on someone else is more human.

Therefore when we are facing problems and when we do not take responsibility for our mistake and when we are looking for some scapegoat on whose head we can put the akṣathai; This theory is very nice; and we can say that He has done all the akramams; you can put the blame on God; it becomes an escapist route. For the fatalistic people, there is a beautiful route of escapism; they can avoid guilt. That is one thing; and that is incidental.

And there is another minor positive advantage; which is useful, and what is that? When you say everything is done by God; and we have got reverence for God and since we know that God is always just only; God cannot never be unjust at any time; this theory is useful to accept the sufferings of life. It is a useful technique to accept the suffering and therefore in śāstra; fatalism is sometimes temporarily employed to help in accepting the problem. And you tell that Bhagavān has got some purpose in giving the suffering; it must be meant for my purification.

As a very nice saying goes: Bhagavān brings you under water often; not for drowning, but for cleansing; And therefore, துன்ப புடத்தில் இட்டு, தூயவானாக்கி வைத்தாய்; tuṅpa puṭattil iṭṭu, tūyavāṅākki vaittāy; Bhagavān's Will I think; Oh Lord You are giving me suffering only for purifying me; thus the fatalism is with a limited purpose employed on occasions. In fact Rāma himself employs this method; when he has to go to forest; and Lakṣmaṇa is fuming with anger. He has taken his sword out and he says I want to cut the head of the old man. You know who is the old man; mātr̥ dēvō bhavaḥ | pitr̥ dēvō bhavaḥ; They are all out; Lakṣmaṇa is so wild; when a person is so wild and incapable of accepting the choiceless situation; temporarily, it is applied often. Even the scriptures Rāma himself talks as though fatalism. So these are all temporary advantage for fatalism; But we should remember, on real enquiry fatalism is not accepted by śāstra.

Śankarācārya also repeatedly tells in his commentary; any perspective you give which dismisses free will, we should not accept. Any perspective; any interpretation which rejects freewill should not be accepted.

Śankarācārya discusses this in his commentary on indriyasyēndriyasyārthē rāgadvēṣau vyavasthitau; in third chapter, there two verses Śankarācārya also tells; if you reject freewill and you say everything is God's will; what are the problems? We are coming to that; I am going to mention 6 problems.

The first problem is this. If you say God is doing everything; and we are only instruments; God becomes kartā; and we are only kāraṇam; kāraṇam means instrument. And according to the Law of Karma; the rule is yaha kartā bhavathi; can you fill up the blanks; saha ēva bhōktā bhavathi; whoever is the doer of any action, he and he alone must reap the karma-phalam in the form of puṇyam and pāpam. Therefore if you say Bhagavān is the ultimate doer of all actions; all the puṇyas and pāpams would go to Bhagavān. And not the action of one person; all the actions including the WTC attack; all the pāpams, murder, stealing; all of them; are all His actions. We just told that; எல்லாம் அவன் செயல் ēllām avaṅ cēyal; all the sañcita, agāmi prārabhda karmas will go to Bhagavān and whoever has got puṇya pāpa karma is a saṁsāri and therefore what is the first absurdity of this theory; Bhagavān will become Mahāā saṁsāri; because of all...ll the karmās happening all over will go to the poor Bhagavān. This is absurdity No.1.

And the second thing is what: whether it is absurdity or advantage, I do not know; Since we are all instruments only, instruments will never get any karma-phalam; the instruments will never get the karma-phalam; because it is only kāraṇam; and not kartha. If a car hits a person and he is injured or dies; who will be arrested; car or driver; car is arrested! we do not do that; Why, even though actual hitting and killing is done by the car, we go behind the car to the person behind only; and car is never responsible; knife is never responsible; instrument is never arrested. In the same way, if I am only the instrument in the hands of the Lord; for all the actions I do, I will not get karma-phalam; puṇyās or pāpams. Therefore all the jīvās will be free from what: puṇya-pāpams.

And freedom from punya pāpa is called what; mōkṣa; Therefore the greatest advantage is what; all are free; not necessary to come to the class; Why we require mōkṣa? Who has to come to the class then? Bhagavān; because the poor Bhagavān who is saṁsāri; he alone work for mōkṣa. All of you are here and now free from all the sañcita agāmi prārabhda karmās; Therefore the second contradiction; jīvā's asamsaritvam; All the jīvās will be free. Nitya muktās; whereas what is our contention? jīvās are saṁsāris; not Bhagavān.

Therefore first dōṣam is Īśvarasya saṁsāritvam; second dōṣam is jīvasya asamsāritvam.

Then what is the third dōṣam? if Bhagavān alone does everything; nothing is in our hands; all the sufferings undergone by all the people must be caused by whom; Bhagavān only, because everything is done by Bhagavān; all the suffering, caused by war or bombing; whether it is caused by diseases; whether it is caused by congenial deficiencies caused in the world, who must be responsible; Bhagavān. If God is responsible for all suffering; that God is compassionate God or sadist God?; The one who causes suffering He or She must be the cruel God. He can never be called karuṇamūrthi.

How many people are today still suffering because of some third degree torture done by some person in some jail in some country; you cannot imagine those suffering; as even you listen, you will lose your sleep. Go to the hospitals; emergency ward, all the suffering; who is responsible? Not you; Not me, Not that person; because we are all instruments; therefore who must be responsible; God;

Therefore God can never be said to be compassionate; he will become an embodiment of sadism; this dōṣam is called Nairgrinnya dōṣam. In Brahmasūtra, Vyasācārya has mentioned this. Nairgrinnya dōṣam means God will be subject to the charge of cruelty. Grinna means compassionate; Nirgrinna means no compassion; Nairgrinnyam means compassionlessness; Means what? cruelty. This is the third dōṣam, if you say Bhagavān is responsible for the suffering.

And you cannot say Bhagavān is helpless because, Bhagavān is said to be omnipotent; omniscient; in spite of being omniscient and omnipotent; why can't he put an end to all the suffering; just by showing the hand, like just as he gave dress to Draupadi; let Bhagavān with thousands of hands, after-all we saw in the eleventh chapter itself thousands of hands; let Him go to all the hospitals, and just show the hands in a line; and it should cure whether it is cancer or any other thing; aids cure; kidney trouble cure; why can't He cure; you cannot say that He is incapable because, He is omnipotent; you cannot say He does not know; because he is omniscient; and He is also supposed to be compassionate; why can't the compassionate God put an end to all the suffering. So in the theory of fatalism; which says God does everything; God will be subject to the charge of cruelty.

Then what is the fourth dōṣam? God is becoming villain; in fatalism; God becomes villain. He will never be hero; He will be zero; they do not know the consequence of fatalism; they are dumping God into the wastepaper basket by the theory of fatalism. And in fact, it will make, if you deeply think, hate God. These are the consequences of fatalism.

Then the fourth dōṣam is what?; Ok; God has made every people suffer; He has made many people enjoy also. Many places there is Kondattam; TV has also come; In Kerala kondattam is the dry vadam, karuvadam, etc. So many people are enjoying, there also the problem; all the people are not uniformly enjoying; Even in the enjoyment, some people are happy; some people are (you know three are four degrees) happier; happiest. You have got an Ambassador car; another one has a Benz; even though everyone may have car, there is a degree of difference, even in happiness; Tāratamyam; means gradation.

So who is responsible? According to the theory of fatalism; Since Bhagavān alone responsible; who should be happy, who should be happier; who should be happiest..est; then Bhagavān will be subject to the charge of what? Partiality; this is the fourth dōṣam; previous dōṣam is what? cruelty with regard to the sufferers; partiality with regard to enjoyers; because all the people do not uniformly enjoy; சிலர் சிரிப்பார்; சிலர் அழுவார்; சிலர் அழுத்துகொண்டே சிரிப்பார்; cilar cirippār; cilar aḷuvār; cilar aḷuttukoṇṭē cirippār; (some laugh; some cry; some laugh will to cry). Such group is also there, Isn't it? Therefore this dōṣam is called Vaiṣamyā Dōṣam. Partiality; this is the fourth problem with regard to the theory of fatalism; the rejection of freewill. Two more are there.

Then the fifth dōṣam is the following. Since the Bhagavān is the doer of all actions; and according to this theory, we are only instruments; the instruments need not know what is proper-action and what is improper action; the traffic rules must be learned by the car or driver; traffic rules who should learn; car should attend? No; the instrument need not know what is dharma and what is adharma; what is proper and what is improper. Then the one is behind the instrument; the operator of the instrument, the kartā, should alone should learn all the rules; That means dharma śāstra must be meant for whom; we need not learn at all. According to the theory of fatalism, we need not study dharma śāstra; you know we saw it yesterday;

सत्यं वद | धर्मं चर | स्वाध्यायान्मा प्रमदः | ||४|| इत्येकादशऽनुवाकः || Taittiriya

vēdamanūcyācāryōntēvāsinamanuśāsti |

satyaṁ vada | dharmam cara | svādhyāyānmā pramadaḥ | ||4|| ityēkādaśa'nuvākaḥ||
Taittiriya

All those things, we do not study, because we are all only instrument nimitha; therefore who should study dharma śāstram; Bhagavān has to go to Gurukulam; and find out what are the rules? So for us great advantage is that one need not study ethics, morals we need not study; the constitutional rules; traffic rules; we need not study all those; who should study the traffic rules; the Indian traffic rules, Bhagavān should learn; American traffic rules, Bhagavān should learn; and should not get mixed up. He should know which driver in which country is driving the car in which road, because Americans, Indians; we are all what? instrument; what an absurdity you arrive at; and therefore what is the next dōṣam; Dharma śāstra vaiyārthyam. Our study of dharma śāstra is futile; it is not required at all; according to the theory of fatalism. Then why can't Bhagavān study, you cannot ask; Bhagavān need not study, because he is the very author of dharma śāstra; So the fifth dōṣam is this.

And the sixth and final dōṣam is this. If we do not have freewill; if we are only instruments in the hands of someone, we will never have a conflict in life; because an instrument need not choose a course of action; an instrument need not choose a course of action. And since we need not choose a course of action, we will never have conflict in life; all the conflicts will go to whom? Again the original operator; the Lord alone. Therefore, if we do not have freewill; we will never have choice; and if we never have choice; we will never have conflicts in life. When do you get conflicts? Suppose to go to your house, there is only one route; there is only road, you need not think and choose, availability is only one. But if there are two roads, then there is a choice; one road is longer, but the road is good. Another road is shorter, and full of potholes; then you have a conflict, which road to choose. Therefore wherever choice is there; there is conflict; wherever freewill is there; there is choice; therefore these three will always go together. Freewill, choice and conflict. Wherever one is there; the other two are automatically there. What are the three; Freewill, choice and conflict.

So whether human-beings have freewill or not; how to find out. Ask the question whether human-beings have conflict or not.

In fact, every moment, Dayānanda Swami says; earning morning waking up itself is a big conflict; the alarm has gone; then you have to wake up; then you look for excuses; which excuse you can find out and postpone getting up; getting up is a conflict; whether to take bath or not is a conflict; because water problem; whether to take coffee or not is a conflict; whether to attend this class now or not is a conflict. In fact, human life is a series of conflicts.

And very presence of conflict indicates it is because we have a choice; and we have a choice, because we have a freewill. And that is why suppose you have employed a driver; and both of you get into the car. Now the driver will never have a conflict at all; why, because driver is only your instrument, he is only an employee; he need not think when to start and in which direction to go; he has no conflict; you have to decide and say Start Now; then he should start when you say start; you say Go to Adayar; go to theatre; or go to a hotel; the driver who is only your instrument will never have a conflict; the conflict will be for whom; the person, the owner who is sitting behind. Similarly, if Bhagavān is what you call the yajamanā, and I am the simple driver in the hands of Bhagavān; I would never have faced any conflict; but the very fact that I am facing conflict every moment indicates that I have choice; and choice indicates that I have a freewill and therefore in the absence of freewill for human beings, there will be no conflict at all; So mōha abhāvaḥ; vikalpa abhāvaḥ will be the consequence, if we have no freewill.

But what is our experience? we have got conflict; and suppose the person argues, Swamiji; I do not have conflict; I do not feel the choice at all; conflict at all; freewill at all; if anybody claims!, then what will we do you know; we will never talk to that person thereafter; because according to the śāstra, only animals are free from Will, Choice and Conflicts. Animals never face conflicts in life; because they go by instincts; they do not go by freewill; a cow does not have a conflict; whether I should be a vegetarian or non-vegetarian; after going to America; is conflict coming after going to America; I do not know; wherever a cow is; it eats grass; it does not have choice; it does not have conflict also; a tiger has never a conflict; whether I should be a veggi or non-veggi.

But human beings, you see he does not have any policy of what to eat and what not to eat; walking, flying, a crawling; all varieties of things. So therefore if human being claims that I do not have conflict and therefore I do not have choice or freewill, according to that śāstra; that person comes under animal category; and we can never talk to that person; we can only pray that at least in next birth, this person must be a real human being. And therefore what is our conclusion? We have a freewill.

Then do we say that our future is determined by freewill alone: No. We say freewill plus fate; these are two factors which contribute to human future; in the case of animals only fate will contribute, because they do not have freewill. But in the case of human beings, there are two forces, If you know in physics they say; the resultant force; the force of the freewill is there; force of fate is there; every second of the future is caused by the interaction between fate and freewill.

In one particular context, freewill may be prominent; it will suppress the fate; In another particular context, it might be like one day match; one match India beats South Africa; which is fate, which is fate, which is free will you can decide; In another match, it is other way round; that is the day; Similarly, every moment is one day match between fate and freewill. Sometimes it is a tie also. Very rarely it can end up in a tie also; this is in the case of a human being.

And therefore what does śāstra say? Never vote for fatalism; accept fate; accept freewill and understand that your future is determined by fate and freewill together; You are one of the contributory factors in addition to the freewill; By our prayer we try to influence the fate; and by our planning, we try to contribute to our Will.

Then comes the final question. Then why did Kṛṣṇa say nimittamātraṃ bhava savyasācin; Why did He say be an instrument in the hand of the Lord. What do you mean by becoming an instrument? In the case of a human being, becoming the instrument in the hands of the Lord is following a dhārmic course of action; because Bhagavān controls the world through dharma. Bhagavān harmonies the world through dharma; and when I use my freewill to be in alignment with dharma; because everytime I have to choose, I can go either by dharma or I can go by my rāga dvēṣa. Rāga dvēṣa tells You do that or you do not that; Pay tax or do not pay tax. Or violate the traffic rules or do this. Therefore everytime you have a choice; We can go according to our Rāga dvēṣa or we can go according to the dharma śāstra. When my life is governed by dharma śāstra; when my freewill is in alignment with dharma śāstra, I become the instrument of the Lord. And therefore Arjuna himself is facing a conflict. Dharma śāstra says Arjuna has to fight this war:

धर्म्याद्धि युद्धाच्छ्रेयोऽन्यत्क्षत्रियस्य न विद्यते || २-३१ ||
svadharmamapi cāvēkṣya na vikampitumarhasi |
dharmyāddhi yuddhācchrēyō'nyat kṣatriyasya na vidyatē || 2.31 ||

According to dharma, Arjuna's duty is fight the war; because Kṣatriya has to fight for the sake of dharma. And Duryōdhana has explicitly taken to adharma; therefore dharma tells Arjuna fight. In fact, because of that alone, Arjuna has to battlefield. But before he started the fight, his rāga dvēṣa came. And rāga dvēṣa tells after-all, Bhīṣma, Drōṇa, etc. are my kith and kin;

कथं भीष्ममहं सङ्ख्ये द्रोणं च मधुसूदन |
इषुभिः प्रतियोत्स्यामि पूजार्हावरिसूदन || २-४ ||

katham bhīṣmamahaṁ saṅkhyē drōṇaṁ ca madhusūdana|
iṣubhiḥ pratiyōtsyāmi pūjārhāvarisūdana || 2.4 ||

कार्पण्यदोषोपहतस्वभावः
पृच्छामि त्वां धर्मसम्मूढचेताः |
यच्छ्रेयः स्यान्निश्चितं ब्रूहि तन्मे
शिष्यस्तेऽहं शाधि मां त्वां प्रपन्नम् || २-७ ||

kārpaṇyadōṣōpahatasvabhāvaḥ
pṛcchāmi tvāṁ dharmasammūdhacētāḥ |
yacchrēyaḥ syānniścitaṁ brūhi tanmē
śiṣyastē'haṁ śādhi māṁ tvāṁ prapannam|| 2.7 ||

Arjuna faces conflict because he has a freewill; he has a choice; he has to choose between what and what; His dharma knowledge tells that you have to fight the war; but his attachment tells: do not fight the war; His conscience tells fight the war; his attachment tells do not fight; Therefore there is a conflict.

And what is becoming the instrument of the Lord? Kṛṣṇa tells: do not go by your rāga dvēṣa. Then what you go by: you go by dharma; and when you go by dharma, you are going by the Will of the Lord, because dharma is God's will. So my freewill is now aligned to dharma; my freewill is not gone; my freewill is aligned with dharma; my freewill has aligned with God's will; and when my freewill is in alignment with God's will, I become an instrument in the hands of the Lord. Therefore this statement is not saying: you do not have will; this statement tells: Arjuna, May you align your will to my Will. In short, follow dharma. I hope you have no conflict now.

द्रोणं च भीष्मं जयद्रथं च

karṇaṁ tathā'nyānapi yōdhavīrān |
mayā hatāṁstvaṁ jahī mā vyathiṣṭhā
yudhyasva jētāsi raṇē sapatnān || 11.34 ||

त्वं जहि tvam̐ jahi kill द्रोणं च drōṇam̐ ca Drōṇa भीष्मं च ca bhīṣmam̐ ca Bhīṣma जयद्रथं च Jayadratham̐ ca Jayadratha कर्णम् karnam̐ Karna तथा tathā as well as अन्यान् अपि योधवीरान् anyān̐ api yōdhavīrān̐ other great warriors, हतान् hatān̐ (who are already) killed मया mayā by Me, मा व्यथिष्टाः mā vyathiṣṭāḥ Do not fear, युध्यस्व yudhyasva fight जेतासि jētāsi you will conquer सपत्नान् रणे sapatnān̐ raṇe the enemies in battle.

34. Kill Drōṇa, Bhīṣma, Jayadratha, Karṇa, as well as other great warriors (who are already) killed by Me. Do not fear. Fight, you will conquer the enemies in battle.

So here Kṛṣṇa tells what is the course of the creation in keeping with the law of karma or the law of dharma; which Arjuna has to align with. He says all these people's time has come. According to dharma or law of karma, they require disappearance from the earth; Who are they? Drōṇam; Bhīṣmam; Jayadratha; Karṇa; all these people yōdhavīrān; as well as the others belonging to both sides of the army.

Mayā hatān; they are already dead; which means the law of karma or the law of dharma has indicated their death but in the case of Arjuna, the Lord is here to come and tell what has to happen.; What is according to the law of karma, the time of death has come; Bhagavān comes and tells; but imagine somebody is seriously sick in the family; I do not know whether their prārabhda end has come or not; Suppose Bhagavān comes and tells beforehand it would be convenient; their prārabhda is to survive; then also you need not spend money; because he will survive somehow; Suppose Bhagavān comes and tells prārabhda is over; then also you need not worry; how nice it would be; but unfortunately we do not know, therefore in such cases, we can only go by what is appropriate; we can give the necessary treatment which is dhārmic course of action; which is your freewill; And the freewill and the fate will have to interact; and the result may be operation success and patient collapse or that person may survive also.

Therefore here the difference is in the case of Arjuna, Bhagavān is here to come and tell what is the fate but in our case, our fate is not known or knowable. That is why it is called adṛṣṭam. Therefore we can never know clearly what is our fate; And therefore we know only what is the freewill or our capacity. Therefore do your action as though everything is in your hands; receive the result as though everything is in God's hands. This is the working approach. Because when you do the action, you do not know the power of fate. Therefore what to do; advance letter if He gives it would have been better.

That is why they try to read the fate through astrology; so astrology is supposed to indicate the direction of the fate and they give prāyascitha etc. also. But there also a person may read it properly, or it may be improper and especially if you go to two astrologers you had it. Even if you want to make use of astrology, confine to one;

otherwise this astrologer will say this is the best jātakam in the world for your daughter; and another astrologer equally famous will say; do not touch it at all.

Therefore we may get some indication from astrology; there is nothing wrong; but for everything you should not go to him; whether to go to the class or not; so then you will have to stay in astrologer's house all the time; therefore there is nothing wrong, but for important and major cases you see, otherwise have surrender to Lord; do your best and leave the rest.

Hari Om

ॐ

Lord Kṛṣṇa gave an important advice to Arjuna and that advice is whenever an individual acts according to dharma, then his individual-will he has surrendered to dharma. So acting according to dharma is surrendering the individual-will to dharma. And dharma is the teaching given by the Lord and therefore dharma can be taken as the Will of the Lord.

And therefore acting according to Dharma is surrendering the individual-will to dharma and since dharma is the will of God, we can say that surrendering to dharma is surrendering to the Will of the Lord; and when you are surrendering your-will to the Will of the Lord, you have not lost your will. Still you have got your own-will; you can still chose to act according to your Rāga dvēṣa and when you are going by your Rāga dvēṣa; without bothering about dharma, the individual-will is not in alignment with dharma and then it is not in alignment with God's will.

And therefore the teaching here is you do have a will; you do have a freewill and freewill can choose a course of action based on Rāga dvēṣa OR based on dharma-adharma. Arjuna's Rāga dvēṣa tells run away from the battle, because he is attached to Bhīṣma-Drōṇa.

Arjuna's freewill has got two aspects; his Rāga dvēṣa tells him, do not fight the battle; it is better to go to the forest and live on bhikṣa. We saw in the second-chapter. At the same time, his dharma-jñānam tells that the dhārmic course of action is fighting the dharma yuddam.

So thus his freewill has got two courses of action; Rāga dvēṣa based renunciation of the war; or dharma-based fighting of the war. What Kṛṣṇa advises is: If you are going by your Rāga dvēṣa, you are not using your will properly; in fact you are abusing your freewill; which will lead to your downfall; which is your choice. Bhagavān cannot help, if a person has decided to have a downfall. Rāvaṇa chose downfall; Karmāsa chose downfall; Arjuna can choose.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa is requesting Arjuna. Arjuna do you want to abuse your freewill and choose a spiritual downfall or are you going to use your freewill properly, which means even though this war is a bitter war; even though the duty is an unpleasant duty; even though the duty involves destruction of your own kith and kin; still you do not go by your attachment; but you go by what is dharma? Dharmyāddhi yuddhācchrēyō'nyat kṣatriyasya na vidyatē.

If because of your intellectual-conviction, you suppress your emotions and you go by your intellectual-conviction and choose the painful duty, even though the duty is painful, then your dhārmic-course of action will be equal to surrendering your will to the Will of Lord.

And if you surrender your freewill to the will of Lord; which means choosing a dhārmic-course of action; even though it is painful; then it will lead you to spiritual-growth. So dhārmic course of action is using the freewill and adhārmic course of action is abusing your freewill. Rāga dvēṣa based action is the abuse of freewill; Dharma-adharma based action is use of freewill; which is in another language called surrendering to the Will of the Lord.

And this is real devotion. Here you will find karma yōga and bhakthi merging because a true karma-yōgi has to act according to dharma, which means every karma-yōgi has surrendered his freewill to the Will of the Lord. When it is a forced surrender, it is suppression. But when it is a forced-surrender with maturity. Like there is a traffic signal and there is no one around and I have got a freedom to violate the signal; if police stops me; it is suppression. But if I choose that even though it is easier to violate, but I do not want to do that; this voluntary surrender is called the real bhakthi.

Thus there is no true karma-yōgi, without being a bhaktha; because a karma-yōgi is all the time following dharma; which means surrendering his will and Rāga dvēṣa to dharma. Dharma means God and therefore every karma-yōgi is a real bhaktha. And therefore Arjuna become a bhaktha and do what?

द्रोणं च भीष्मं च जयद्रथं च
कर्णं तथान्यानपि योधवीरान् |

मया हतांस्त्वं जहि मा व्यथिष्ठा
युध्यस्व जेतासि रणे सपत्नान् || ११-३४ ||

Drōṇaṁ ca bhīṣmaṁ ca Jayadrathaṁ ca
karṇaṁ tathā'nyānapi yōdhavīrān |
mayā hatāmstvaṁ jahi mā vyathiṣṭhā
yudhyasva jētāsi raṇē sapatnān || 11.34 ||

Tvaṁ jahi. It is very difficult; you have to do that; what: shoot at sight order as it were; Drōṇa, your own Guru alright; but unfortunately he is in the adhārmic side; therefore it is bitter; it is painful, but you should never go by emotions; you should not go by manōmaya-kōśa, you have to go by vijñāna-māyā-kōśa. Discrimination should dominate your action; not impulse.

Therefore Drōṇa you have to finish; Bhīṣma you have to finish; Chatak; Chatak; cut-cut, though painful; Jayadratha you have to kill. And Kṛṣṇa himself loves all of them; it is not that they are third people. Remember, whoever is related to Arjuna is related to Kṛṣṇa also. In fact, Kṛṣṇa had to kill his own Uncle Kāṁsa. So Arjuna these are painful, but you should transcend.

Then Karṇa, which is very easy for you. Because you are waiting to get an opportunity; karṇaṁ tathā'nyānapi yōdhavīrān. And in the process, you have to lose many on your side also. And therefore jahi and the time has come for them to die, because their prārabhdā is over.

mayā hatān; I have already closed their file. Their next janma is ready. So therefore mayā hatān, those people who are already destroyed by me; you have to kill.

mā vyathiṣṭāḥ; do not be upset over this; do not be depressed over this; these are all facts of life. Many things you have to do in life; even though you do not like. mā vyathiṣṭāḥ; do not grieve.

yudhyasva; May you take to this battle; because you are a born kṣatriya. If you are Brāhmaṇa, you can get away from all and sit somewhere and do japa and all; all these things, kṣatriya 's duty is what; policeman. You cannot say I do not touch gun or lathi; army people do that as part of work; As a kṣatriya your duty is kṣatāt trayatē is kṣatriya; saving the society from Adharma is the duty of kṣatriya; Kṣatham means adharma.

And therefore yudhyasva; jētāsi; certainly you will defeat your enemies; sapatnān means enemies; certainly you will defeat your enemies in the war; because Arjuna in the second-chapter has expressed a doubt, whether

I do not even know whether we will defeat them or whether they will defeat us; Kṛṣṇa says you are going to win the war; not because you are powerful; but because dharma is on your side.

Verse 11.35

सञ्जय उवाच--
एतच्छ्रुत्वा वचनं केशवस्य कृताञ्जलिर्वेपमानः किरीटी ।
नमस्कृत्वा भूय एवाह कृष्णं सगद्गदं भीतभीतः प्रणम्य ॥ ११.३५ ॥

sañjaya uvāca
ētacchrutvā vacanaṃ kēśavasya kṛtāñjalirvēpamānaḥ kirīṭī | namaskṛtvā bhūya ēvāha kṛṣṇam sagadgadam bhītabhītaḥ praṇamya || 11.35 ||

सञ्जयः उवाच sañjayaḥ uvāca Sañjaya said श्रुत्वा śrutvā having heard, एतद् वचनम् ētaḥ vacanam these words, केशवस्य kēśavasya of Kēśava (Kṛṣṇa), वेपमानः किरीटी vēpamānaḥ kirīṭī the trembling Arjuna, नमस्कृत्वा namaskṛtvā saluted, प्रणम्य praṇamya and bowing down, भीतभीतः bhītabhītaḥ with great fear, सगद्गदम् sagadgadam falteringly आह कृष्णम् āha kṛṣṇam spoke to Kṛṣṇa, भूयः एव bhūyaḥ ēva once again, कृताञ्जलिः kṛtāñjaliḥ with folded palms.

35. Sañjaya said - having heard these words of Kṛṣṇa, the trembling Arjuna saluted and, bowing down with great fear, falteringly spoke to Kṛṣṇa once again with joined palms.

So when Kṛṣṇa answered Arjuna's question, how did Arjuna respond? Because Arjuna has now understood that Kṛṣṇa is not responsible for the sufferings or enjoyments of people. Kṛṣṇa is only karma phala dātha; exactly like a judge; judge is not responsible for the enjoyment or suffering of the people; if a person suffers punishment in the jail; that suffering is not caused by the judge; but the suffering is the result of his own action. Bhagavān has only worked for the karma-phalam to reach him. Just as the judge's role is to make the law the karma work properly. And therefore Lord's compassion does not mean he will alter the karma-phalam; Lord's compassion is in the form of the maintenance of the law of karma.

And therefore if a person has to receive pāpa phalam; a person has to certainly receive it; Bhagavān is compassionate alright; but where pāpa phalam has to go, Bhagavān will have to do that. If out of compassion, Bhagavān is not going to give karma phala, then the moral order of creation will be disturbed. Imagine Bhagavān changes the law of karma; because a person has to suffer; then what will be the problem? Then He will have to change the laws which maintains the orderliness of the creation. Then a single individual may benefit alright; but the world at large will have to suffer; and therefore when you look from short-sighted angle; it is like when a person is falling down; he says let the law of gravitation stop; because he is falling down. Then what will happen? OK; Bhagavān says OK for 10 minutes, the law of gravitation will not function, because this fellow is falling; what will happen? We will all start flying; Remember, if the law of gravitation stops, we will not be on the earth; like the cosmonauts and astronauts; we will be floating all over. Suddenly somebody in T. Nagar is falling down; and He prayed the Lord: Oh Lord for two minutes the law of gravitation should stop. Bhagavān comes and out of compassion, says that the law of gravitation stop; You will all hit the fan.

Therefore, remember that it is shortsightedness to complain to the Lord and ask him to change the course of the law, for the sake of our personal benefit. The law of karma should go on for the survival of the world. Just as the traffic signals should be functioning; even though one person may miss the train because of the traffic signal. Just because a person is going to miss the train; for him only switch off the signal, if you say; it would not work; and therefore Arjuna understood, the Lord is not partial or cruel; the job of the Lord is the maintenance of law of karma.

Therefore, if my pāpa karma brings suffering to me, I should change my attitude to accept the suffering without, what you call; getting frustrated; without complaining against the Lord; without cursing the Lord as unjust or cruel; I should change my attitude; in accepting the suffering.

And what is the best method of accepting? There is a method; the trick I will teach you; what is that; Every time I am suffering; it is the result of what? Puṇyam or pāpaṁ; the suffering is the result of pāpaṁ. That means, every time I am suffering, one pāpa has produced the result; that means what? In our பாப மூட்டை; pāpa mūṭṭai; the weight is reduced. Therefore instead of saying I am suffering, learn to say; I am becoming purer; because pāpa mūṭṭai is becoming lesser means what? I am becoming purer. And that is why we say: துன்ப புடத்தில் இட்டு தூயவன் ஆக்கி வைத்தாய்; tuṅpa puṭattil iṭṭu tūyavan ākki vaittāy.

And in fact, when you are enjoying you should not be happy. In fact, your puṇyam is becoming less. Anyway, we need not see that; when you are enjoying, enjoy. At least when suffering comes, tells yourselves, one pāpaṁ gone. So thus, change the attitude when suffering comes. That is the only way; this Arjuna seems to understand and therefore Oh Lord, your ways are inscrutable; you love everyone; alright, you are embodiment of compassion alright, but your compassion expresses in the form of maintaining the law of karma.

OK; this will lead to an aside question. Even though it is not the topic of the Gītā; I will raise that question and answer that also. So if Bhagavān is going to make the law of karma function; then does it mean that prāyascitta karmas are waste or useless? Because law of karma has to take its own course of action; So if karma-phalam has necessarily to fructify; why should we pray. Why should we do prāyascitta karma; will it not be a waste.

No; prayāscitta-karma will never be a waste; prāyascitta-karma also functions according to the law of karma only. How does it function? By prāyascitta-karma, I am producing another puṇyam; which is exactly opposite to the pāpam. It is just like I have thrown a stone upwards; and by the law of karma, the stone is coming down straight towards the head; and that too my head; therefore it is coming straight to my head. Does it mean that I should suffer? No, I can throw another stone; which is again within the law of forces; one force is coming down; I produce another force which will go up and that force and this force will hit and it is capable of neutralization. I have taken some food which is not suitable to my system and therefore allergic reaction has come. That is according to the law of my system; that does not mean I have to suffer; I can take another medicine which will act exactly counter to that. Therefore prāyascitta karma are based on the law of resultant forces. In physics it is called the law of resultant forces. So prāyascitta will produce an āgāmi and that āgāmi can neutralise what? Prārabhdam.

And suppose somebody asks; Swamiji I have done prāyaschitta; but still I could not neutralise; then what does it mean; the force of āgāmi is lesser to compared to the force of prārabhdam; and therefore naturally imagine a huge meteorite is coming down and I take a pebble and throw up. I cannot stop it. And therefore whether prāyaschitta will neutralise prārabhdam will depend upon the relative strength of prāyaschitta and prārabhdam. If prārabhdam is very powerful and prāyaschitta cannot do much. That is why I have talked about this before; suppose you go to a doctor and ask. Doctor can you cure my disease? What will the doctor say? If he is an intelligent doctor; he will say; My reply will depend upon the type of disease. Certain diseases I can outright cure. If it is an allergic reaction to kathirikkai or something like that; I may give an injection or remove it; and if it is an appendicitis problem, I may do surgery and remove it; appendectomy and remove. So for certain types of diseases total cure. Then for certain types of diseases, not total cure; I will give tablets, like for BP, sugar etc. you will have to continue lifelong and then the disease can be controlled. You would not be a total victim; and you cannot be totally cured; but you will be able to manage. This is medium type; total cure one type; manage; second type and there are certain cases, third degree cancer; advanced AIDS or something; then the doctor says 3 months; 6 months or a few years; doctor says there is no remedy; therefore I cannot say a disease cannot be cured; I can never say the disease can be cured; it will depend upon the individual cases and there are three possibilities; total cure; management or helplessness. Similarly, every prārabhda that comes to us; can be of three types; medium; weak or full. Every prārabhda has got an individual tag; I can never give a uniform answer. That prārabhda can be changed or not; because the prārabhda is so many karmas have been done and therefore it is not one prārabhda; but it is a flow of several individual prārabhdas.

And each individual prārabhda is either prabhālam; or durbhālam or madhyamam. In the case of durbhāla prārabhda; prāyascitta will completely remove; in the case of madhyama prārabhda; prāyascitta will help in what? Managing. And in the case of prabhāla prārabhda; prāyascitta will not be able to do anything. But the greatest tragedy is when the prārabhda comes, you do not know which category it belongs to. If it comes and tells you this is prabhāla prārabhda; we can sit quiet. But prārabhda being adṛiṣṭam, you never know, it is prabhālam, madhyamam or durbalam; your job is what? If you want to do prāyascitta; you do, whether it is prabhālam, durbālam or madhyamam, after doing prāyascittam, see how it works; then you will know what type of prārabhda it is; therefore prāyascitta-karma also falls within the law of dharma. So this is an aside topic.

Incidentally here, Bhīṣma, Drōṇā etc cannot be saved by any prāyascitta; hey Arjuna; their case the death is prabhāla prārabhdam and therefore you finish them. So when Arjuna recognised the Lord as the karma phala dhātā, then Arjuna's attitude changes totally. So now the attitude of āsaryam and bhayam; both of them are replaced by the attitude of surrender or bhakthi. This is called the surrender of the freewill to the law of karma; Dayānanda Swami defines the Lord, as the Order of the creation. So surrender your will to the order of the creation; the laws of the Lord. So that the transformation Sañjaya is reporting first. Thereafter Arjuna will come:

So Sañjaya uvāca; Sañjaya reports; kēśavya ētaḍ vacanam śrutvā; Arjuna understood the law very clearly; you cannot say Lord is cruel or compassionate; that is our judgment; Lord is neither cruel nor compassionate; samō'haṃ sarvabhūtēṣu na mē dvēṣyō'sti na priyaḥ; I am neither cruel nor compassionate; I run the world; according to the law of karma; kirīṭī means Arjunaḥ; and vēpamānaḥ; he has trembling; because as an individual, I am subject to the laws of karma, I can never escape; just as within the earth or on the earth, I can never escape gravitation. Similarly the law of karma is as inexorable as the law of gravitation; there is no question of whether you like it or not; if you do not like it, better become mature enough to like the law. Because if you dislike, the law will not change; you have to suffer. You cannot say gravitation is pulling; gravitation is pulling; better learn to like it; that is called surrender.

So surrender is a physical expression of the intellectual appreciation and the intellectual acceptance of the law of karma. Therefore vēpamānaḥ trembling Arjuna did namaskāra to Lord Kṛṣṇa.

And bhūya ēvāḥ kṛṣṇaṁ namaskṛtvā. So the namaskāra indicates the surrender of the will to the law of karma. So having done this namaskāra; bhūya ēvāḥ; again and again.

Bhītabhītaḥ; Arjuna was extremely frightened; because the law of karma is so powerful and in front of the law of karma, I am a puny little creature. Seeing the smallness of the individuality and seeing the inescapability of law of karma; Arjuna was trembling. Initially this will happen; the more I grow mature; the more it will become natural. And that is called bhakthi; the ripeness of bhakthi is what? That bhayam is gone. Not because problems are gone, but because I have learned go along with these problems; people come by law of karma. And by the same law of karma people are separated. By the law of karma, the body grows; by the law of karma, the body weakens. So all these I learn to accept, which is indicated by namaskāra; Therefore bhītabhītaḥ with extreme fear.

Sagadgam, with choked voice, because he is not a table to swallow or assimilate; because remember Arjuna's maturity is artificial maturity caused by Kṛṣṇa; like ripening the fruit in naphthalene box or something; there is a difference in taste; natural ripening and artificial ripening; there is a difference; Arjuna's appreciation is not borne out of natural ripening. Kṛṣṇa has artificially blessed him with this divya cakṣu; artificial divya cakṣu will not work for long, hardly we get the divya cakṣu; which is nothing but karma-yōga. Then, this fear will not there; therefore with a choked voice, with extreme panic; Arjuna repeatedly did namaskāra; and addressed the Lord in the following verses:

स्थाने हृषीकेश तव प्रकीर्त्या जगत्प्रहृष्यत्यनुरज्यते च ।
रक्षांसि भीतानि दिशो द्रवन्ति सर्वे नमस्यन्ति च सिद्धसाङ्घाः ॥ ११.३६ ॥

Arjuna uvāca
sthānē hṛṣīkēśa tava prakīrtyā jagat prahrṣyatyanurajyatē ca |
rakṣāṁsi bhītāni diśō dravanti
sarvē namasyanti ca siddhasaṅghāḥ || 11.36 ||

अर्जुनः उवाच arjunaḥ uvāca Arjuna said हृषीकेश hr̥ṣīkeśa Oh! Lord, (lit. the inner controller of beings) स्थाने sthānē it is but proper that, जगत् jagat the world प्रहृष्यति prahr̥ṣyati is delighted च अनुरज्यते ca anurajyatē and gratified प्रकीर्त्या prakīrtyā by the glorification तव tava of You भीतानि रक्षांसि bhītāni rakṣāṁsi the frightened demons द्रवन्ति dravanti run दिशः diśaḥ in all directions, च and सर्वे सिद्धसङ्घाः ca sarvē siddhasaṅghāḥ all the hosts of siddhās नमस्यन्ति namasyanti bow down (to You).

36. Arjuna said – Oh Lord! It is but proper that the world is delighted and gratified by the glorification of You. The frightened demons run in all directions and all the hosts of Siddhas bow down (to You).

So Arjuna begins his response. So this is the third stage of Arjuna's response, which is one of devotion or surrender. Āscaryam or wonderment is over; second stage is bhayam or fear, the second stage. Now it has given away to the surrender; śaraṅāgatiḥ. But still the fear part is lingering in the background; the fear never goes. Because as long as we are narrow minded, creation will be a source of fear; only when we expand our mind to appreciate the totality and the laws of the creation; then only the fear and insecurity grow.

In fact, according to vēdānta, only through Viśva-rūpa appreciation, we can go to nirguṇam brahma. From ēkarūpa bhakthi, one has to necessarily come to the Viśva-rūpa appreciation, the universal law of karma; the law of dharma-adharma. There is no question of skirting that and aham brahmāsmi; that story will not work; and even if you avoid that and come to vēdānta and repeat Aham Brahmāsmi, śuddhōsmi, buddhōsmi, etc. you will that on the lips aham brahmāsmi is there; in the heart, fear will be there.

If you want to conquer fear; if you want to conquer insecurity, you have to necessarily expand your mind; appreciate the totality; and see the laws of the creation; not only the physical laws but also the moral laws, which extent not only to the present janma, but which extends to the past janmās and innumerable future janmās, and you should see that as an individual, you cannot escape the law.

If you want to escape the laws, it is only by transcending the ahaṁkāra and going to nirguṇam Brahma; but you transcend the ahaṁkāra only by going through the Viśva-rūpa darśanam. Ahaṁkāra should grow; then it should fall. Just like the skin of a banana; it is required for the growth of the banana. Then alone it can escape; you can escape from your ahaṁkāra, only after the ripening of ahaṁkāra; and the ahaṁkāra ripens only through Viśva-rūpa darśanam; and once Viśva-rūpa darśanam has ripened the ahaṁkāra, vēdānta will quietly pluck the ahaṁkāra. Then it will be easy; it will fall on touching by vēdānta; urvārukamiva bandhanānmṛtyōrmukṣīya māmṛtāt You can never escape from Ahaṁkāra; without ripening it; and the ripening method is Viśva-rūpa darśanam.

And therefore Arjuna here says: Hey Kṛṣṇa now I understand why great mahatmas appreciate the Viśva-rūpam of yours; the mature ones; the ones who have got the infinite vision of the totality; why they appreciate the Viśva-rūpam I can understand. I also can understand how the narrow-minded people are afraid of Viśva-rūpam; and in fact when I am narrow-minded, the problem is even religion becomes the cause of fear; even Bhagavān becomes the source of fear; if I do this mistake, He will cut my nose; if I do that mistake He will cut my tongue; etc. etc. when we are children that this the fear given. He will cut the nose and put chilli powder; why should they do like that? We do not know; so cut the nose and put chilli powder. Even religion becomes the source of fear; even God becomes the source of fear; if my ahaṁkāra does not ripen; and therefore Arjuna tells; Kṛṣṇa I understand how immature people are frightened of you; and how mature people are enamored; charmed by you.

So hē hr̥ṣīkēśa; tava prakīrtyā; by glorifying you; the Viśva-rūpa; tava Viśva-rūpasya prakīrtyā; sthōthrēṇa; jagat prahr̥ṣyati; the mature people prahr̥ṣyati; they revel; they enjoy; because the beauty of totality is far superior to the petty pleasures that we get through attachment to a few people around. So always when we are attached to the few people; children, wife or husband, there is a joy; குழல் இனிது; யாழ் இனிது; kuḷal iṇitu; yāḷ iṇitu; they say. Certainly there is an enjoyment; but there is also a fear; what will happen to the children; what will happen?

So narrow-minded attachment will give you kicks and pleasures; along with that there is a constant anxiety and concern also. But the pleasure which is born out of non-attachment to a few; and the appreciation of the totality; That ānanda is of a totally different dimension and that ānanda a few people have and I am able to appreciate why they have.

Therefore; jagat the mature people prahr̥ṣyati; they revel; anurajyatē ca; and they are attached to you as Viśva-rūpam; the narrow attachment they are not interested in.

There is a beautiful Malayalam composition called Harināma keerthanam; it is a very popular one in Kerala; in that the author writes ഞാൻ എന്ന ഭാവമതു തോന്നാക്കുവേണം, ñān-ēna bhāvamatu tonnāykaveṇam; Oh Lord; I should never have the idea of individuality; as I related to a few people; this man's uncle; this man's grandpa, this man's son; etc. etc. that is called ഞാൻ എന്ന ഭാവം ñān-ēna bhāvaṁ. Then he says തോന്നുന്നതാകിൽ tonnunnatākil. Even if that I should rise in me; അകിലം ഞാൻ എന്ന ഭാവം തോന്നേണമേ വരദാ നാരായണായ നമഃ akilaṁ ñān-ēna bhāvaṁ tonneṇamē varadā nārāyaṇāya namaḥ. If I should develop an I, let that I be identified with അകിലവും ഞാൻ akilavum ñān. Either I should never have identification; zero identification or total identification. Zero identification; you are brahman; total identification, you are Īsvara; in both you have no saṁsāra; but our problem; neither zero identification; nor total identification; a select few; we suffer with them; so that few identification makes me a miserable in-between jīva; Īśvara has no saṁsāra; Brahman has no saṁsāra; jīva has got mahā saṁsāra.

And jagat prahr̥ṣyatya anurajyatē ca; and rakṣāṁsi; all the rākṣasās who do not appreciate the dharma of the Lord. They are afraid of You, the Lord; who is afraid of the police. Why should I be afraid of police if I am following the rule of law; so the Viśva-rūpa God becomes a source of fear and panic; for whom rakṣāṁsi; that mean adhārmic people are bhītāni frightened of you Oh Lord and they try to escape from the law of karma.

How can you escape? diśaḥ dravanti; they run helter skelter; they run all over; you can escape from the local police; but you can never escape from the law of karma. So diśō dravanti.

and siddhasaṅghāḥ sarvē. All the siddha puruṣās; all the jñānis; who know what is what; sarvē namasyanti; they do namaskāram to you; they are willing to accept whatever comes according to the law of karma; and if at all pray, their prayer is what; Oh Lord; you need not change the law for my sake; but give the attitude to accept what cannot be changed; if things can be prāyascittam, give me the knowledge and strength to do prāyascittam; nothing wrong; but whatever is choiceless; and irremediable; tasmāt aparihāryē artē; let me accept the choiceless situation; So that is called namaskāra; sarvē siddhasaṅghāḥ; groups of wise people do namaskāra to you.

कस्माच्च ते न नमेरन्महात्मन् गरीयसे ब्रह्मणोऽप्यदिकर्त्रे ।
अनन्त देवेश जगन्निवास त्वमक्षरं सदसत्तत्परं यत् ॥ ११.३७ ॥

kasmācca tē na namēran mahātman
garīyasē brahmaṇō'pyādikartrē |
ananta dēvēśa jagannivāsa
tvamakṣaram sadasattatparam yat || 11.37 ||

महात्मन् mahātman Oh great Lord! कस्मात् च ते kasmāt ca tē why would they न नमेरन् na namēran not salute (You), गरीयसे garīyasē who are greater, अपि ब्रह्मणः api brahmaṇaḥ than even Brahma आदिकर्त्रे ādikartrē (and who are) the first creator? अनन्त ananta Oh limitless one, देवेश dēvēśa who is the ruler of gods, जगन्निवास jagannivāsa (and) the abode of the Universe ! असत् सत् asat sat (You are) the cause and the effect, त्वं तद् अक्षरम् tvam tad akṣaram (also) you are that imperishable truth यत् परम् yat param which is beyond (both).

37. Oh! Great Lord, why would they not salute (You) who are greater than even Brahma (and who is) the first creator? Oh limitless one who is the ruler of Gods, (and) the abode of the Universe! (You are) the cause and effect. (Also) you are that imperishable Truth, which is beyond (both).

So here Arjuna says; anyone who appreciates your glory as Viśva-rūpa; the totality; doing namaskāra to you is very very natural and instinctive. Like those scientists who discover more and more the uniqueness of glory of creation. As Einstein said; the more I am studying the creation; I cannot but surrender or appreciate the glory of Lord. In fact, more you see the totality; vinayaḥ; humility is very very natural.

And therefore Arjuna asks; why won't people do namaskāra. So if they are doing namaskāra; there is no āscaryam; if they do not do namaskāra alone is āscaryam; because so wonderful is the totality and that is why to develop bhakthi; even studying any aspect of creation; after Viśva-rūpa reading; you read any science; read biology; read entomology, the study of insects; insects will make you wonder; astronomy will make you wonder; any science you take and go in depth; See Discovery Channel; National Geography, anything you see; wonderment cannot be avoided. If you are mere scientists; it will stop with wonderment; if you are a bhaktha; the wonderment will express in the form of devotion.

And therefore any aspect of creation; makes me do namaskāra to you. Therefore Arjuna says who will not do namaskāra; and if a person cannot do namaskāra; it only shows his smallness of the mind; so what that person requires is only sympathy; because he is missing something greater. Like if a child cannot appreciate music; it is because of what; the child has not reached that level of sensitivity to appreciate the music. Therefore child is missing a dimension. Similarly whoever is nāsthika and whoever has not understood the scriptures properly; we do not get angry with them; our attitude is what; they are missing a totally different dimension. They have to sensitize the mind to enjoy music; Otherwise, it is like donkey life only. Somebody said:

साहित्यसङ्गीतकलाविहीनः
साक्षात्पशुः पुच्छविषाणहीनः।
तृणं न खादन्नपि जीवमानः
तद्भागधेयं परमं पशूनाम्॥

sāhityasaṅgītakalāvihīnaḥ
sākṣātpaśuḥ pucchaviṣāṇahīnaḥ
tṛṇam na khādannapi jīvamānaḥ
tadbhāgadhēyaṁ paramaṁ paśūnām||

he one who cannot appreciate literature and music which requires a sensitive mind; That person is sākṣāt paśuḥ; only difference is what; puccha viṣaṇa hīnā; tails and horns are missing; and the only difference from the cows is triṇṇanna kādannaḥ; he lives without eating grass; what is that; tat bhāgadēyaṁ paramaṁ paśūnām. In fact paśus feel happy that one competitor is less. So therefore if I do not have music; it is not the music is absent; it is that I do not have that faculty which can sense the music.

Similarly if I say there is no God; it is not absence of God; but I do not have the extra antenna; kudumi; I do not that extra antenna to sense the Viśva-rūpa harmony.

Anyway; kasmāt ca tē na namēraṁ; why won't people become devotee? If they are sensitive, they will certainly become devotee; and how great You are. Sensitivity talks about the glory of the Lord; garīyasē Oh Lord the greatest one; because macro is always the greatest compared to any micro.

Garīyasē brahmaṇō'pyādikartrē; You are the creator of even Brahmāji. In purāṇās, we hear from Viṣṇu's navel only he came; Padmanābha he is called; and there on the lotus Brahmāji appears. This is the purāṇic approach; what is the vēdāntic approach; Īśvarais the samaṣṭi kāraṇa caitanya śarīram; Brahmāji is samaṣṭi sūkṣma śarīram; samaṣṭi sūkṣma śarīram is born out of samaṣṭi kāraṇa śarīram; if you have forgotten sūkṣma śarīram and kāraṇa śarīram etc. Do not mind you are the creator of Brahma, ādi kartē; Brahmaṇa here is not satyam jñānam anantham Brahma here is Brahmāji; anantha; you are the infinite one; because time and space exist in You; you do not exist in time and space; dēvēśa; one who is the Lord of all Gods; jagannivāsa; you are the abode of the universe; you do not live in the universe; the universe lives in you.

Tvamaṣaramṁ sadasattatparamṁ yat; You are the cause You are the effect; You are beyond both also; You are kārya rūpaḥ; kāraṇa rūpaḥ; kārya-kāraṇa vilakṣaṇā ca; suddenly he comes to vēdānta; details in the next class.

Hari Om

150 Chapter 11, Verses 38-43

ॐ

Arjuna was overpowered by fear, when he looked at the Lord as the kāla tatvam and that too as the destructive kāla tatvam; swallowing all the people, especially his near and dear ones. And then Arjuna asked the question: Oh! Lord who are You; I thought that You are a compassionate one; but now I have doubts regarding that, because you seem to enjoy destroying everything.

When Arjuna asked such a question, Lord Kṛṣṇa answered; He said there is no question of having compassion or not having compassion. As we saw in the 9th chapter, Bhagavān has neither likes towards something or dislike towards something else. Samō'ham sarvabhūtēṣu na mē dvēṣyō'sti na priyaḥ. My job is only to maintaining the order of the creation and the maintaining the order of the creation involves my role of the maintenance of the law of karma also; and by way of maintaining the law of karma, I have to give karma-phalam to every jīva.

And my compassion is giving the karma-phalam; it is not looking into what type of karma-phalam it is; giving the karma-phalam is my compassion; and when the karma-phalam happens to be painful, it appears as though the Lord is cruel; you have to change your attitude and look at it in a positive manner. When suffering comes, you take it as the exhaustion of the negative karma-phalam; pāpa phala apakṣaya; exhaustion is taking place; and therefore instead of seeing it as suffering process; you learn to look at it as purifying process.

When a doctor gives a painful treatment, you can look at it in two different ways; one is the doctor is giving me pain; that is the superficial approach; and if I have got some maturity; I can look at it differently; doctor is giving me health; he is curing me; he is removing the negativities or toxins from me. So the doctor removes the gross impurities; whereas Bhagavān, the Vaidyanātha removes the inner diseases; pāpam is a form of spiritual disease only.

And therefore look at every suffering as spiritual purification. And if I do not have this strength to have that attitude, I pray to the Lord, Oh Lord, give me the change in my perspective. So that I will say; துன்ப புடத்தில் இட்டு தூயவனாக்கி வைத்தாய்; tunpa puṭattil iṭṭu tūyavaṇākki vaittāy. This should come from my innermost heart: Oh Lord You are purifying me, removing the pāpās that I have done.

So when this understanding came to Arjuna, in the place of fear, he gets devotion to the Lord; even though Lord appears to be cruel; like a doctor appears to be cruel for a child, because it is paining; but if I understand the doctor properly. I would not look at him, as a cruel person; that is why Bhagavān is often described as Vaidyanāthaḥ; and therefore Arjuna's fear is replaced by devotion. And therefore in the later verses, beginning from the 36th onwards, Arjuna expresses devotion to the Lord, the Lord as karma phala dātha. And there we are seeing; we completed the 37th verse, wherein Arjuna said

गरीयसे ब्रह्मणोऽप्यादिकर्त्रे |
अनन्त देवेश जगन्निवास
त्वमक्षरं सदसत्तत्परं यत् || ११-३७ ||

[kasmācca tē na namēran mahātman
gariyasē Brahmāṇō'pyādikartrē](#)

tvamakṣaram sadasattatparam yat||11.37||

Immature people do not understand you. Therefore they think You are unjust and cruel; whereas mature people understand You properly and they know that Lord can never be unjust; I am not able to understand certain experiences in my life; not because the experiences are unjust; but I do not have the totality of the picture.

Whoever has got complaint against God; they always say that I have never harmed anyone. Why should Bhagavān give me trouble? Let Him give to the neighbour OK. Let the cyclone go to Andhra. So when we say that we have not done any harm; any pāpām; we are only talking of our limited life period of a few years before. We do not even know what we have done as children; and how are we going to remember what we have done in our previous birth. Therefore when we look at ourselves; we look at a very very narrow mind; whereas when Bhagavān looks at ourselves, it is from the totality of all the karmas done in the past janmās also.

Therefore we have no right to pass judgment; when we go through varieties of experiences. Our only attitude is God knows best. And that is they give the stories of Dharmaputra who is supposed to be an embodiment of dharma but goes through all types of problem. And Dharmaputra himself gets doubt; how come I go through all these suffering; He is Dharmaputra; why Me; this approach is called why Me; that means anybody else OK; Good; but why me. So Dharmaputra gets the doubt in the forest; he gets frustrated; he gets angry with Lord; he thinks that there is full of injustice alone in the world. Then ṛiṣīs and come and tell him stories; Dharmaputra himself has to be consoled. In those stories what the ṛiṣīs point out that nobody can escape the karma-phalam; even Gods when they take the avathāra; even they go through the difficult situations;

तदा दुःखैर् न लिप्येरन् नळराम युधिष्ठिरः ॥

avaśyam bhāvi bhāvānām pratīkāro bhavēt yati |
tadā duḥkhair na lipyēran naḷarāma yudhiṣṭiraḥ ||

If all the sufferings in life have got cure, then Rāma would not have suffered; Yudhiṣṭira would not have suffered. The very fact that even they suffered indicate that there are many curable pāpams and incurable-pāpams. If that comes, what to do; పాప మణిమే పాప; paṭu maṇame paṭu; suffer only. Only we should learn to accept.

And that mental preparation, we can never try to get when the suffering comes. If you want to develop immunity and you want to do exercise; when should you do exercise; not when you are sick; the immunity should be developed when you are healthy, do exercise or do walking, etc. Similarly this mental preparation, we have to do not at the time of suffering, but when things are relatively better; we have to say to our own mind then itself that Lord is never unjust; Lord gives every experience according to my karma only. There is no injustice in the world; இதை சொல்லி சொல்லி உரு போட்டுதுன்னா; we have to repeat that constantly to ourselves for many years; and if that happens, then when tomorrow something comes what vāsana acceptance vāsana will work. But our problem is when everything is fine, we do not want to think of these things; Because enjoy; so that preparation we have to do when everything is fine. Oh Lord; Give me the strength to accept my prarabdha.

And once that maturity comes, they only surrender to the Lord; they can never criticize the Lord; kasmācca tē na namēran mahātman. So the mature people would certainly do namaskāra. Why would not they do namaskāra? Up to this we saw in the last class.

tvayā tataṁ viśvamanantarūpa || 11.38 ||

त्वम् आदिदेवः tvam ādidēvaḥ You are the Primal God, पुराणः पुरुषः purāṇaḥ puruṣaḥ the ancient puruṣaḥ त्वं परं निधानं tvam paraṁ nidhānam you are the supreme ground of dissolution अस्य विश्वस्य asya viśvasya of this Universe, असि वेत्ता asi vēttā you are the knower, वेद्यं च vēdhyam ca the known, च धाम ca dhāma as well as abode, परम् param which is beyond (both), विश्वं ततम् viśvaṁ tatam the Universe is pervaded, त्वया tvayā by You, अनन्तरूप anantarūpa Oh Lord with endless forms!

38. You are the primal God, the ancient Puruṣa, you are the supreme ground of dissolution of this Universe. You are the knower, the known as well as the abode which is beyond (both).The Universe is pervaded by You, Oh ! Lord with endless forms!

So Lord's Kṛṣṇa stature is increasing, in the vision of Arjuna. Even though the Lord has been great all the time, Arjuna begins to understand that now only; therefore his devotion also becomes deeper and deeper. Previously his namaskāra was a mere mechanical act, because we have been taught to do namaskāra in front of the Lord right from the childhood, and since we have mechanically practised it; it is only a physical exercise; but for an enlightened person; every namaskāra is a very very significant inner expression of his attitude. The Lord represents the law of karma; and my namaskāra represents; I will never question the law of karma; and that unquestioned acceptance is indicated by a physical action.

And therefore Arjuna expresses that devotion here; tvam adi dēvaḥ; Oh Lord, You are the first and foremost God; So ādidēvaḥ; because Brahmā is also considered God only; but Brahmā is ādidēvaḥ because even before Brahmā originated or emerged Lord Viṣṇu was there; and therefore he is called ādidēvaḥ.

Puruṣaḥ; You are the all-pervading one and also you are indweller in every human body. puruṣaḥ has two meanings; purayathi sarvam iti puruṣaḥ; the one who is all pervading; and the second meaning is: the one who resides in the body; puru means body; ṣaḥ means indweller. So puru ṣaḥ means body resident; body indweller.

And purāṇaḥ, you are the most ancient one; without a beginning; purāṇaḥ. Then tvamasya viśvasya paramṁ nidhānam; the ground of dissolution or destruction; And you are the ultimate ground into which the whole creation dissolves or resolves; laya sthānam; pralaya sthānam. And why do we say the Lord is the ultimate resolution ground? Because then the scriptures describe praḷayam; they describe it as a gradual process. All the living beings are resolved into pṛthvi. Therefore earth becomes the laya sthānam for all the plants and animals, insects all of them. Then the earth itself dissolves into jalam of the five elements; jalam is the next one; and the jalam itself is supposed to resolve into the Agni tatvam; Agni into vāyu tatvam; vāyu into ākāśa tatvam; and ākāśa into Brahmā tatvam; and Brahman resolves into? (I am just seeking whether you are listening). So all these things resolve into something else; but Brahman does not resolve into anything and therefore it is called the ultimate resolution ground; whereas pṛthvi jalam Agni etc. are relative resolution ground and therefore the adjective paramṁ nidhānam. So paramṁ nidhānam.

Vēttāsi vēdyam ca; though you are the knower of everything; that means that you are every living being; which is the experiencer of the world; So vēttā means bhōktra jīvaḥ; the sentient experiencing living beings are called vēttā; and vēdyam means the insentient object of experience; so one is pramātha and another is pramēyam; one is bhōktā and another is bōgyam; one is subject; the other is object; one is sentient; the other is insentient. In fact the whole creation is only a mixture of the cētana-acētana and Arjuna says you are both the cētana tatvam as well as the acētana.

And not only you are bhōktā and bōgyam; and paramṁ ca dhāma; so you are beyond both of them also; you are the ultimate reality also; who is neither the experiencer nor the experienced. pramāthṛḥ pramēyam athithaḥ tvam ēva. That means the absolute consciousness.

So here the idea is conveyed Māṇḍūkya idea; So vēttā refers to viśva taijasā prajñā; vēdyarṇ refers to the stūla sūkṣma, kāraṇa prapañca. Three pairs; and param ca dhāma means that which is beyond the three pairs; that is the turiya tatvam; a philosophical idea is conveyed here; param ca dhāma; dhāma means caitanyarṇ; the turiyarṇ caitanyarṇ You are, in which all the knowers as well as the object of knowledge rest; param ca dhāma.

In short, tvayā tatarṇ viśvamanantarūpa; Oh Lord; the entire universe is pervaded by You; As turiyarṇ; you are the substratum upon which the relative world rests; tvaya; by you the turiyarṇ; the absolute visvam tatham; the universe is pervaded; So this you can clearly understand; if you only remember the upaniṣadic teaching; therefore those who do not know Māṇḍūkya, you can leave it aside; you note this much; that vēttā and vēdyarṇ represents the relative world; and param means the absolute. You are both the relative as well as the absolute. So tvayā tatarṇ viśvam; Hē anantarūpa; Oh! Viśva-rūpa Īśvara.

वायुर्यमोऽग्निर्वरुणः शशाङ्कः प्रजापतिस्त्वं प्रपितामहश्च ।
नमो नमस्तेऽस्तु सहस्रकृत्वः पुनश्च भूयोऽपि नमो नमस्ते ॥ ११.३९ ॥

vāyuryamō'gnirvaruṇaḥ śaśāṅkaḥ prajāpatistvaṇ prapitāmahaśca | namō namastē'stu sahasrakṛtvaḥ
punaśca bhūyō'pi namō namastē || 11.39 ||

त्वं वायुः tvaṇ vāyuḥ you are the Vayu, यमः yamaḥ yama अग्निः agniḥ Agni वरुणः varuṇaḥ Varuṇa शशाङ्कः śaśāṅkaḥ the moon, प्रजापतिः prajāpatiḥ prajāpati च प्रपितामहः ca prapitāmahaḥ and the great grand father सहस्रकृत्वः sahasrakṛtvaḥ a thousand fold, नमः नमः namaḥ namaḥ salutation अस्तु ते astu tē be to You नमः नमः namaḥ namaḥ salutation be ते tē to you, पुनः च भूयः अपि punaḥ ca bhūyaḥ api again and again

39. You are vāyuḥ, agniḥ, yamaḥ, varuṇaḥ, śaśāṅkaḥ, the moon, prajāpatiḥ, and the great grandfather. A thousand fold salutations be to you; salutation be to You again and again.

So You are everything; that is the essence of the verse; tvaṇ vāyuḥ agniḥ, yamaḥ agniḥ varuṇaḥ śaśāṅkaḥ; all You alone are; vāyuḥ means Vāyu dēvathā; the wind or air; yamaḥ means kāla dēvathā, (yamaḥ not the motor bike - see what a name). So yamaḥ is the kāla tatvam; and agniḥ means the fire principle, varuṇaḥ means the water; śaśāṅkaḥ means the moon; prajāpatiḥ; so vāyuḥ agniḥ, yamaḥ agniḥ varuṇaḥ śaśāṅkaḥ; you are all of them.

You should know the logic behind it also; what is the logic; in the seventh chapter itself Kṛṣṇa has introduced that Bhagavān is the kāraṇam; and the whole creation is the kāryam; and we know the fundamental law that the kāraṇam alone appears in the form of manifold kāryam. Cause alone with different names and forms appears as various effects; just as one gold alone with different nāmās and rūpās appears as different forms of ornaments. There are no ornaments separate from gold; there are no furniture separate from wood; there are no waves and oceans separate from water; generalising, there are no products separate from cause. And the cause being God; there are no creations other than God. Therefore God alone is in the form of ākāśa, Agni, vāyuḥ, āpaḥ, that logic you should remember. It is given in one particular section of Brahmā sūtra.

So this logic is a powerful adikāraṇam; tat ananyatvam arambha śabdadibhyaḥ. It is called ārambhanādi kāraṇa nyāyā. So what is the logic; Effects do not exist separate from cause. Or to put in another language; cause alone appears as manifold effects.

prajāpatiḥ; prajāpatiḥ; there are fourteen prajāpatiḥ; whose department is the expansion of the population. That is why they are called prajāpatiḥ; Therefore they all will have many wives; something like that; people each one has three wives and all and one family will be forty fifty people would be there; that is true in the case of prajāpatiḥ; kaśyapa prajāpatiḥ; dakṣa prajāpatiḥ etc. They are all described in the purāṇās; Viṣṇu creates Brahmā; and Brahmā creates 14 prajāpatiḥ; and from the 14 prajāpatiḥ all the other human-beings are born. And therefore Arjuna says all those prajāpatiḥ also you alone are.

And then pitāmahaḥ; all the fourteen prajāpatiḥ are born out of pitāmahaḥ are whom? Brahmāji; that is not there in the verse; we have to supply; prajāpatiḥ You are; 14; Brahmā You are 1; not fourteen; one Brahmā you are; and Brahmāji himself is born out of Viṣṇu's navel; So Brahmāji is pitāmahaḥ.

Viṣṇu becomes what? Prapitāmahaḥ; so You are the father of even Brahmā; So You are prajāpatiḥ; You are Brahmā; You are Viṣṇu; and therefore what do I want to do? What can I do namō namastē:'stu; I offer my namaskārams; how many times? sahasrakṛtvaḥ; thousands of times; I offer namaskārams to you; still I am not satisfied; punaśca bhūyō'pi namō namastē; again and again I offer namaskārams to you; because the more I think of your greatness, the more I feel like offering namaskāras to you;

नमः पुरस्तादथ पृष्ठतस्ते नमोऽस्तु ते सर्वत एव सर्व ।
अनन्तवीर्यामितविक्रमस्त्वं सर्वं समाप्नोषि ततोऽसि सर्वः ॥ ११.४० ॥

namaḥ purastādatha pṛṣṭhatastē namō'stu tē sarvata ēva sarva | anantavīryāmitavikramastvam
sarvaṁ samāpnōṣi tatō'si sarvaḥ || 11.40 ||

नमः पुरस्तात् namaḥ purastāt salutation (to You) in front, अथ atha and ते tē (salutation) to You, पृष्ठतः pṛṣṭataḥ behind नमः अस्तु ते namaḥ astu tē salutation be to You, सर्वतह एव sarvataḥ ēva all around, त्वम् tvam You are, Oh Lord ! अनन्तविर्यमितविक्रमः ananta-viryam-ita-vikramaḥ of limitless power and infinite courage, समाप्नोषि samāpnōṣi you pervade, सर्वम् sarvam everything, ततः असि tataḥ asi (and) hence you are सर्वः sarvaḥ everything.

40. Salutation (to You) in front and (salutation) to you behind. Salutation be to You all around. Oh Lord! You are of limitless power and infinite courage. You pervade everything (and) hence, You are everything.

Arjuna is still not satisfied; he has offered thousand namaskārams; verbal; not physical, he would have lost his leg; verbally he said; sahasrakṛtvaḥ namaḥ; still he is not satisfied; and therefore he says; my namaskārams to you in front of you; my namaskārams to you in behind; to your right side; to your left; all over, and all sides; I offer namaskārams.

So purastāt tē namaḥ; in front of you; pṛṣṭataḥ; behind you; because really speaking there is no front or behind; because Lord's face is all over and facing all the directions; pṛṣṭataḥ means to your back; behind; I offer namaskāra; and in short; instead of describing each direction; north east, north south, etc.

Therefore he says; sarvata ēva namaskāra; so all around You I offer namaskāra; sarvata ēva tē namaḥ asthu; sarva rūpaḥ; who is not in the form of Kṛṣṇa alone; who is not in the form of Rāma alone; but who is in the form of everything in the creation. And that is why we have got pañca bhūthā liṅga also. You should remember; there are all based on this teaching only; ākāśa rūpēṇa You alone are in the form of Vāyu You are, Agni You are; therefore I do namaskāram to the pañca bhūthās also; because You are everything.

And how great You are; anantavīryāmitavikramastvaṁ; You have got infinite strength or power; omnipotent You are; anantavīryām yasya; Because any power that is anywhere belongs to you only; in one lightening itself; so much electricity is there; they say; that is we know how to tap the electricity from one flash of lightening, we can burn, we can provide electricity to a city for one year. But the problem is that we do not have the technology to tap; and how many flashes of lightening are coming; every second somewhere in the world; lightening is striking; every second; how much power should be there.

And all these power belongs to whom; therefore anantavīryā; like that you can take; so much power in the creation; all You alone have.

And amitavikrama; and You have got enormous valour, courage also; some people have power; but no courage; So they have the power; so they are terrified; some people have got courage; but no power; you have got both; anantavīryaḥ; amitavikramaḥ; amithaḥ vikramaḥ; anantavīryāsya ayam; amita amitavikramaḥ ayam; viśeṣaṇa upāya dhāraya karma-samāsaḥ.

For grammar students; others can be blissfully ignorant; anantavīryaḥ amita vikramaḥ tvam; sarvaṁ samāpnōṣi; You pervade everything. So the idea of travelling and reaching God should go out of our mind.

So when we start religion, our idea is we have to reach God; we have to reach God; and after death; and that too we have to travel; பரம பதம் அடைந்தார்; சிவ பதம் அடைந்தார்; விஷ்ணு பதம் அடைந்தார்; parama patam aṭaintār; civa patam aṭaintār; viṣṇu patam aṭaintār. We have got a conditioning that we have to travel and reach God; the 11th chapter should demolish that conditioning. There is no question of reaching God; because we are never away from the Lord; to reach him.

Then why do scriptures talk about reaching God? Reaching God is dropping the notion that we are away from God; See whether you understanding; Reaching God is dropping the notion; dropping the conditioning that we have to reach God. For the one who has got viśva-rūpa-darśanam, I have got my birth; my movement; my death; everything on the lap of the Lord only; how many kilometers the wave should travel to reach the ocean. So there is no question of travel; the idea of travel and the idea of distance is born out of ignorance; it is a notional distance; it is neither time wise distance nor space-wise distance; it is purely ignorance-wise distance. If space-wise distance is there; you have to travel; if timewise distance is there; you have to wait.

What is time-wise distance?; a child wants to become a major; minor wants to become major; the distance between minor and major is determined by what?

Time. So what should you do; wait; whereas in the case of reaching God; there is no question of space-wise distance; we need not travel; there is no question of timewise distance; இப்படி இருந்துண்டு இருந்தால் ஒரு நாளைக்கு பகவானை போயி அடைவோம்; ippaṭi iruntuṅṅu iruṅṅāḷ oru nāḷaikku pakavāṇai poyi aṭaivom; If we continue like this, we will reach God one day; that concept is also not there; the distance is purely ignorance-wise; how do you remove the ignorance-distance; only by knowledge. And therefore viśva rūpa darśanam should remove the idea of reaching God because you are sarvaṁ samāpnōṣi; are all pervading.

and therefore tatō'si sarvaḥ; and therefore you are everything; first I say You pervade everything; then I say You are everything; like saying Gold pervades all the ornaments; that is statement No.1. Then the next statement; there is no question of gold pervading all ornaments; in fact, gold is in the form of all ornaments; therefore tatō'si sarvaḥ.

सखेति मत्वा प्रसभं यदुक्तं हे कृष्ण हे यादव हे सखेति ।

मत्वा इति matvā iti regarding you, इति सखा iti sakhā as my friend, इति यत् iti yat expressions like हे कृष्ण hē kṛṣṇa Oh Kṛṣṇa, हे यादव hē yādava Oh Yadava हे सखे hē sakhē Oh friend प्रसभम् prasabham (have been) rudely, प्रमादात् pramādāt indifferently, वा अपि प्रणयेन vā api praṇayēna or affectionately उक्तं मया uktam mayā uttered by me, अजानता ajānatā who did not know इदं महिमानम् idam mahimānam this glory, तव tava of Yours.

41. Regarding You as my friend, expressions like “Oh Kṛṣṇa! Oh Yādava! Oh friend” etc. have been rudely, indifferently, or affectionately uttered by me who did not know this glory of yours.

Now Arjuna looks back; because he has understood that Kṛṣṇa is not an ordinary jīva; but Kṛṣṇa is Bhagavān himself. So who deserves all the namaskāras. All the reverence the Lord requires. So now he knows how to treat the Lord; how to respect the Lord; but he looks back and he remembers that before knowing this, he has never treated the Lord as the Lord; he has treated him only as a friend. And therefore he has never given the respect the Lord deserves and therefore he feels very bad about it. Even though Lord Kṛṣṇa does not feel; he feels that he has insulted Him and therefore he asks for forgiveness in these verses.

Hē Kṛṣṇa sakhā iti matvā, I thought You are an ordinary human being and that you are a friend of mine; sakhā means a friend; especially a friend of equal age. And therefore I have used irreverent words.

Prasabham yat uktam; prasabham means rudely, irreverently, without respect, impolitely I have used many words; I should have addressed you; Hey Bhagavān; but what did I do; I said hē kṛṣṇa; I have addressed You; in some cultures, they have got the first name basis; second name; who can be called with the first name; who can be called with second name; and therefore I have addressed You in a very very impolite manner. In Sānskrīt, hē is disrespect; like using vāda, pōda, using da. That hey is something like that; hē yādava; I have addressed as Yādava; and hē sakhā; as friend, Oh Friend; in this manner I have impolitely address You; but it is not because of my disrespect to You.

but because of sheer ignorance; tava mahimānam ajānatā. In fact it is your mistake; you have taken an ordinary human form. If you had come with a few more extra heads; extra hands; at least I would have known that You are an extra-ordinary person; but You have come with only an ordinary human form; therefore tava mahimānam; Your real glory ajānatā; I did not know.

Tava imarṁ; that is another reading also; idam; idam mahimānam; or imarṁ mahimānam; both readings are there; idarṁ mahimānam is grammatically incorrect; because mahimānam is masculine gender; and idam is neuter gender; therefore they do not go together. So if it is idam mahimānam; it is grammatically wrong; but we cannot say Vyāsa is wrong; so therefore we say it is poetic license; and we justify somehow; if it is taken imarṁ mahimānam. Then grammatically it is appropriate and therefore I have taken the imarṁ mahimānam reading; which is grammatically correct; so without knowing Your real glory; I have done that.

Or mayā pramādāt; pramādāt;; or inadvertently; casually, carelessly, I have used such expression; because we have been very very close; and therefore when I speak and I do not think generally, we generally think; but when we are moving with friends, where are you going to think; I might have such words; pramādāt inadvertently or unwittingly;

Or praṇayēna; because of my closeness to You; because of our intimate friendship I would have used such expressions; we are not going to use reverentially expression; when a friend comes, you say vāda; pōda; therefore do not take it to Your heart; do not take it seriously.

Verse 11.42

यत् च yat ca Moreover अवहासार्थम् avahāsārtham for the sake of fun असि असत्कृतः asi asatkr̥taḥ you have been slighted by me विहारशय्यासनभोजनेषु vihāraśayyāsanabhōjanēṣu while playing, reclining, sitting or eating अथवा एकः athavā ēkaḥ either in privacy अपि
तत् समक्षम् api tat samakṣam or in public अच्युत achyuta Oh Kṛṣṇa ! तत् tat for that अहं

क्षामये aham kṣāmayē I seek forgiveness, त्वाम् tvām from You, अप्रमेयम् apramēyam the incomprehensible one.

42. Moreover, for the sake of fun, You have been slighted by me, while playing, reclining, sitting, or eating, either in privacy or in public. Oh Kṛṣṇa! For that I seek forgiveness from you, the incomprehensible one.

Not only that; Arjuna says; I might have insulted you several times; for the sake of fun; avahāsārtham; for the sake of fun I might have disrespected you; I might have pulled your leg; we say in that meaning; asatkṛtaḥ asi; because You are friend, I might have played friendly pranks with You; I might have done, during several occasions like vihāraśayyāsanabhōjanēṣu; because You should Arjuna and Kṛṣṇa were very intimate friends and therefore they have been together during several occasions; like what? vihāra; while playing; śayyā; on the bed; when sleeping together; śayyā; āsana; while sitting together on the āsana; or bhōjana; while eating; during all these occasions I might have played several pranks and thus I might have insulted You.

And sometimes I might have insulted You when we only were there; but sometimes I might have done that in front of others also; so playing fun; therefore ēkaḥ; when we were alone in private; or tat samakṣam; publicly in front of others also; I might have made fun of You; for all of them You should give me forgiveness. Tvām Tat aham kṣāmayē tvāmaham; please pardon me; please excuse me for such a treatment; And I know You will do that; because you are apramēyam; You are unlike the worldly people; worldly people will keep that in mind; but You are extraordinary; apramēyam means matchless; incomparable; unlike the worldly people.

पितासि लोकस्य चराचरस्य त्वमस्य पूज्यश्च गुरुर्गरीयान् ।
न त्वत्समोऽस्त्यभ्यधिकः कुतोऽन्य लोकत्रयेऽप्यप्रतिमप्रभाव ॥ ११.४३ ॥

pitā'si lōkasya carācarasya
tvamasya pūjyaśca gururgarīyān |
na tvatsamō'styabhyadhikaḥ kutō'nyō
lōkatrayē'pyapratimaprabhāva || 11.43 ||

asi pitā असि पिता you are the father अस्य लोकस्य asya lōkasya of this world चराचरस्य carācarasya moving and stationary त्वं पूज्यः tvam pūjyaḥ you are the adorable one, च गुरुः ca guruḥ and the teacher, गरीयान् garīyān who is superior (to all), अस्ति न asti na there is none, त्वत्समः tvatsamaḥ equal to You कुतह् kutah how can there be, अन्यः anyāḥ another one, अभ्यधिकः abhyadhikaḥ superior (to You), अप्रतिमप्रभाव apratimaprabhāva Oh Lord, whose power is unmatched लोकत्रये अपि lōkatrayē api – in all the three worlds

43. You are the father of this world, moving and stationary. You are the adorable one and the teacher who is superior to all. There is none equal to you. How can there be another one superior to you. Oh Lord, whose power is unmatched in all the three worlds?

Some tongue twisters. Ok. Asya carācarasya lōkasya pitā asi; So You are the father; You are the kāraṇam of the entire creation. And what about mother; mother also You are; because in the vēdic-teaching; father and mother are inseparable; one is Brahmā tatvam; another is māya tatvam; Brahman and māya are inseparable. And that is why Viṣṇu and Lakṣmi are inseparable; Lakṣmi always occupies the chest of the Lord; we also keep Lakṣmidēvi in our pockets; Lakṣmi on the chest; now we are keeping somewhere back; that is a different thing; that is not supposed to be the right thing; because Lakṣmidēvi is sacred; you cannot keep it behind; therefore you are supposed to keep here; that is what Viṣṇu is teaching; vakṣasthala sthitha lakṣmi.

And Brahmāji keeps Sarasvati where? In the tongue itself; and Śiva still further; half of the body is occupied; therefore all the trinity we find, father and mother, they cannot be separated; the philosophical significance is Brahman and māya are inseparable; that is why when you worship mother, father is included; when you worship the father, mother is included; you need not even separately do; therefore pithāsi means you are both the father and mother; we saw it before; mātha, dātha; pithāmahaḥ.

So asya lōkasya; what type of lōkā; carācarasya; the world consisting of the moving and non-moving things; so the moving referring to the cētana the living being and the non-moving referring to the acētana.

And not only that; tvam asya pūjyaḥ ca; and you are the one to be worshipped by the entire creation; the ultimate object of worship. And that is why even if anyone else receives worship, suppose we receive worship; our children do namaskāra to us; whether they will do is doubtful! Suppose the children do namaskāra to us; or we are teachers; therefore śiṣyas do namaskāra to us; or anyone does namaskāra to us; what are we supposed to do; we never deserve namaskāra; that is the basic truth; but they do namaskāra because they have a duty to do namaskāra because mātr̥ dēvōbhavaḥ pitr̥ dēvō bhavaḥ; it is there; and therefore they have to do namaskāra; therefore as parents we cannot stop them from doing; and as a guru; we cannot stop the śiṣya; therefore what we do; we get the namaskāra; we do not deserve it; therefore how to solve the problem; quietly hand over the namaskāra to the Lord.

So therefore Oh Lord I am receiving it; and without keeping it for long time, I immediately pass on to my guru; one is short cut, relay race; I give to my guru; and he gives to his guru; and then sadāśiva samārambhām; it will go there; Or if our children are doing namaskāra; we hand over to our parents; they will hand over to their parents.

Therefore there is only one who deserves all the pūja; and who is that; tvam ēva pūjyaḥ; if you remember this; namaskāra to us; will not create problem; otherwise according to śāstra, if we do not handover the namaskāra to the Lord; it will cause spiritual downfall; We are not supposed to receive namaskāra; when we receive; our ego gets bloated; and it can lead to our downfall; that is why there are some svami; they will not allow anyone to do namaskāra; I remember when I was in āśrama; one Swami had come; he even before coming to the place, he sends the instructions; Nobody should do namaskāra to him; and then he got down from the car; And somebody who had newly come, he did not get the advanced instructions; so he fell flat at his feet; so that Swami was very much disturbed. So there are many people who refuse to receive namaskāra; because according to śāstra; receiving namaskāra is supposed to cause downfall because, we do not deserve it; and therefore what to do? Handover to God.

More in the next class.

Lord Kṛṣṇa while answering Arjuna's question pointed out that I am the kāla tatvam and we should remember that the time is not separate from the creation and therefore when I appreciate the Lord as kālaḥ, I simultaneously appreciate the Lord as dēśaḥ also; because time and space are inseparable entities; and once I appreciate dēśa and kāla as Īśvara; then everything existing in time and space also must be Īśvara because the world cannot exist separate from dēśaḥ and kāla. As I said the other day, previously it was thought that time and space are separate and the creation is separate; this was the thinking under Newtonian physics. Later we have revised our opinion; creation cannot be separated from time and space; or time and space cannot be separated from creation.

That is why Śankarācārya in Dakṣiṇamūrti sthōthram; māyākalpita dēśakālakalanā vaicitrya citrikṛtam. It is not time and space existed before and Bhagavān thought in time; one day to create the universe; that is not the idea; Bhagavān created the world means Bhagavān created time, place and the world; and that is why we get into a logical problem; (it is an aside topic; not part of Viśva-rūpa darśanam; once I know Bhagavān created time and space and world, we will have difficulty in answering the question); when did Bhagavān create time? What will be your answer? When did Bhagavān create time? You try to find out an answer intellectually that question can never be answered. If I say Bhagavān created time at 8 0 clock. Then what does it mean? the time was existing before; 7.50, 7.51, 7.52, and 7.59, like the TV news; 7.59 Time created; does it happen? You can never answer the question when time arrived.

Similarly the next logical knot is where does space exist?

And the last and most difficult question is how did the cause effect principle come into being; How did the cause effect principle come when I ask; (this is the subject of Māndūkya), The question is what is the cause of the cause-effect principle. These three questions, you can never answer; that is why we use the word: Māya. Māya does not mean we do not mean how to answer; Māya means intellectually these questions are Undecipherable. So that is an aside; we will see the details in Māndūkya. So here what I want to say is: Bhagavān says I am time, we should understand that Bhagavān is Time, Bhagavān is Space; Bhagavān is the objects also.

And once I know Bhagavān, Time Space and Objects, it is proved Bhagavān is all the events also. Because Time and Space includes events, including the event of the Gīta Class. Gīta class is not an object, but it is an event.

Therefore Lord is Time; Lord is Space; Lord is Objects; Lord is Events; and finally and most importantly, Lord is the Order or the laws; L... a. w.. s; not loss; Lord is the all laws also, which govern all the events. Therefore a particular event happens; because of a particular law; when you boil water to make coffee; the boiling of water is an event, which is governed by one law; What is that? water boils at such and such temperature; when it is in TP; in normal temperate and pressure; the pure water; not our local water; it is the most impurest water boils at such and such temperature. This is universal law for everyone; that means what every event is governed by set of physical laws; as well as moral laws.

Those laws are also integral part of the creation; which Dayānanda Swamiji calls the order; with capital O; which governs the music of the creation; which governs the orchestra of the creation; all of them Bhagavān is: dēśaḥ; kāla; vasthu; sambhavaḥ; Sambhavaḥ means events as well as Niyathiḥ or Niyamāḥ; all of them are Bhagavān himself.

So instead of saying Bhagavān created all of them, we have progressed a little bit, Bhagavān is all of them; by which we mean whenever I experience anyone of them; I am experiencing Bhagavān intimately.

The other day one person was asking: Can I have the darśanam of the Lord? In fact many devotees have this question; Can I have the darśanam of Lord; what does the Gīta say:

the question itself is meaningless because you are having the darśanam of God only; you are only not aware of the fact that you are having sarvadha Īśvara-darśanam.

So our problem is not Īśvara-darśanam; Our problem is that we are not aware of the fact that we are having Īśvara-darśanam all the time. And the moment we become aware of that; we have got a mature mind. When you look for Īśvara darśanam; you are adama bhakthaḥ. When you are aware of the fact that I need not work for Īśvara darśanam; because Īśvara, dēśaḥ; kāla; vasthu; sambhavaḥ; as well as Niyamaḥ; then I am madhyama bhakthaḥ. Uttama bhaktha is above that; I am Īśvara; that is a little taking; we need not say: I am Īśvaraḥ; but it is enough if we are aware of the fact that I am not experiencing anything other than Īśvara.

And therefore this Viśva-rūpa-bhaktha is the greatest appreciator of the nature; so he is a great nature lover; but when he appreciates the nature; he appreciates it, not as nature, but as Bhagavān. And Arjuna also gets a glimpse of this appreciation and therefore his mind is overwhelmed by devotion; and therefore he says: I do namaskāram to you from all directions because you are facing all directions:

So there is a Śiva saṅkalpa mantra occurring in the Mahānyāsa which is chanted generally before ēkādaśa rudra abhiṣēka; that Śiva saṅkalpa mantrās are so beautiful; let my mind have auspicious thought; and one of the auspicious thought is what? All the legs, all the eyes; all the faces are the faces of the Lord alone. And when Arjuna appreciates this; he looks back and as I was telling you in the last class. Arjuna feels a great deep guilt in his mind; because I should have worshipped Lord Kṛṣṇa as Viśva-rūpa Īśvara. I should have worshipped Him properly. In fact, I should not have sat along with Him; on the same table even; I should have sat down; with great respect and humbleness, but I should have treated Kṛṣṇa properly; I insulted Him; even though Kṛṣṇa does not feel that; Arjuna is feeling a deep guilt in Him; and therefore he surrendering to the Lord and he says Oh Lord; please forgive Me Oh Lord for all the insults for all the offences that I have done to You and that is why in our culture we say, we should not disrespect the earth because, everything is Bhagavān, because earth is also Viśva-rūpa Īśvaraḥ; we should not disrespect water also; nāpsu mūtra puriṣam kuryāt; na niṣṭivēd; na vivasana snyāt. So never disrespect water; do not spit in water; do not take bath in the river without clothes; all these advices are given by the Vēdās; why so much respect; varṣathi na dāvēd; when it is raining; you do not run; it has two meanings: varṣathi sati na dāvēd; generally what do we do; we run; we want to protect us from the rain; so do not run two meanings; if you run during rain, generally the place will be wet and slippery; we will fall; that is the practical advice.

The second thing is: why do you try to escape from rain, which is nothing but Bhagavān Himself. It says soak yourselves in rain and not only we run, if we are not able to run, we protect ourselves with Gīta book. That is still verse. So the Bhagavad-Gīta whether it is useful for anything, if it is raining, you can protect yourselves from rain. So therefore rain is one of the best gifts; varṣathi na dāvēd. Surya namaskāra it comes. Here Arjuna says:

पितासि लोकस्य चराचरस्य
त्वमस्य पूज्यश्च गुरुर्गरीयान् |
न त्वत्समोऽस्त्यभ्यधिकः कुतोऽन्यो
लोकत्रयेऽप्यप्रतिमप्रभाव || ११- ४३ ||

pitā'si lōkasya carācarasya
tvamasya pūjyaśca gururgarīyān |
na tvatsamō'styabhyadhikaḥ kutō'nyō
lōkatrayē'pyapratimaprabhāva || 11.43 ||

This is the verse I introduced in the last class. Oh Lord: You are the father of the universe. Here we have to see two things; In Vēdāntic-teaching, three stages are there; I have told you before; philosophically first we say:

Bhagavān creates the world; stage one.

Stage two is Bhagavān himself becomes as the world; therefore the world is world Bhagavān himself; this is the next stage.

And the last stage is Bhagavān appears as the world without undergoing change.

First stage is called nimitha kāraṇa Īśvaraḥ or ēkarūpa Īśvaraḥ; the second stage is called upādāna kāraṇa Īśvaraḥ or anēkarūpa Īśvaraḥ; the third stage is called vivaṛtha upādāna Īśvaraḥ or arūpa Īśvaraḥ.

Arjuna is here doing both. He says: You are the Father of the world and You are the world. Therefore pitā'si lōkasya; the entire creation consisting of carācarasya, the mobile and immobile; the moving and the non-moving; and tvaṁ pūjyaḥ; because in the Vēdā it is said; matṛu dēvō bhava; pitṛu dēvō bhava. Just now we saw; father has to be respected and the God is the universal father.

And therefore pūjyaḥ and not only the Lord is the creator of the world; Lord is the creator of the scriptural teaching tradition also, So the teaching tradition also is initiated by the Lord. Therefore Lord is adiguruhuḥ also; that is why, sadāśiva samārambhām śaṅkarācāryamadhyamām; or if you are viṣṇu bhaktha. Nārāyaṇa samārambhām; you can use anything; but Bhagavān is not only pithā; but also guruḥ; so pūjyaḥ guruḥ.

And garīyān; and you are a greater guruḥ; superior to all gurus. In short you are the greatest guru; compared to all other gurus; Why? What is the logic? Just saying is not enough; one has to give logic; why is Bhagavān the greatest guru; you know the answer; because all the other gurus; while they are gurus now; they have been śiṣyas before learning under someone else; Śaṅkarācārya is a great guru alright, but himself was a śiṣya. Govinda bhagavatpada was a great guru; but he himself was a śiṣya; So everyone is a relative guru; whereas is the absolute Guru, because He is the only guru, who was never a śiṣya; who never had His guru. Therefore, He is not only fatherless father; but also Guruless Guru; Guruless Guru is here called Gariyān; Guru tamaḥ; Adi guruḥ.

And therefore tvatsamaḥ na asti; so the third line, you have to split it properly; na tvatsamaḥ asti abyatikaḥ kutaḥ anyahaḥ; so tvatsamaḥ na asti means there is no one equal to You. You are matchless. You are incomparable. Because infinite can never have a match because there is no second infinity; and when there is nobody equal to You; where is the question of somebody being greater than You; When I say that there is no second infinite, you ask whether there is something infiniter; infiniter is not possible; therefore, there is neither someone equal to you; nor someone superior to you kutaḥ anyahaḥ; and therefore Oh Lord; lōkatrayē api apratimaḥ; therefore in all the three world, you are the matchless one; apratimaḥ means upamāna rahitha; prathima means upamāna comparison; apratimaḥ means matchless one.

And not only you are matchless; prabhāva; prabhāvaḥ means glory; so you are the Lord of matchless glory; So apratimaḥ prabhāvaḥ yasya saḥ; bahuvrihi; apratimaḥ prabhāvaḥ yasya saḥ; and its sambōdhana vibhakthi; Hey apratimaḥ prabhāvaḥ; Oh Lord of matchless glory.

तस्मात् प्रणम्य प्रणिधाय कायं प्रसादये त्वामहमीशमीड्यम् ।
पितेव पुत्रस्य सखेव सख्युः प्रियः प्रियायार्हसि देव सोढुम् ॥ ११.४४ ॥

tasmāt praṇamya praṇidhāya kāyam prasādayē tvāmahamīśamīdyam | pitēva putrasya sakhēva sakhyuḥ
priyaḥ priyāyārhasi dēva sōḍhum || 11.44 ||

तस्मात् tasmāt therefore प्रणम्य praṇamya saluting प्रणिधाय कायम् praṇidhāya kāyam and prostrating the body अहं प्रसादये aham prasādayē I propitiate त्वाम् tvām You ईड्यम् ईशम्

īḍyam īśam the adorable Lord देव dēva Oh Lord ! अर्हसि सोढुम् arhasi sōḍhum You should forgive (my offences) इव पिता iva pitā – just as a father (forgives those), पुत्रस्य इव putrasya iva of the son सखा sakhā just as a friend (forgives those) सख्युः sakhyuḥ of the friend प्रियः priyaḥ (and just as) a husband (forgives those), प्रियायाः priyāyāḥ of the wife.

44. Therefore, saluting and prostrating the body, I propitiate you, the adorable Lord. Oh Lord! You should forgive my offences just as a father forgives those of the son, just as a friend forgives those of the friend, and just as a husband forgives those of the wife.

Arjuna's guilt does not leave him; even though he has not done any serious offence; he has only treated Kṛṣṇa as a friend. He has not hurt him; or harmed Him; but even Kṛṣṇa as a friend, Arjuna feels is a very great insult. How can I treat Kṛṣṇa as a friend? In fact treating God as a friend is an accepted in the bhakthi literature; which is called sakhya bhakthi.

अर्चनम् वन्दनम् दास्य, सक्य अत्मनिवेधनम् ॥

śravaṇam kīrtanam viṣṇōr smaraṇam pāda sēvanam |
arcanam vandanam dāsya, sakya atmanivēdhanam ||

Treating the Lord as a friend is acceptable but still Arjuna feels bad, guilty, and therefore again he says: tasmāt, because I have offended You; insulted You; belittled You; praṇamya; I offer extra prayascitta namaskāra and what kind of praṇāmaḥ? Not the short cut praṇāmaḥ; just by joining the palms; and still shorter ones. So therefore it is not a short cut namaskāra; kāyam praṇidāya; you wonder whether it is Christian or Hindu; for them they do like this: So therefore we also do that; so kāyam means śārīram; praṇidāya; falling prostrate; falling down, dandavat praṇāmaḥ; sāṣṭāṅga praṇāmaḥ. So having done sāṣṭāṅga praṇāmaḥ to you; tvām aham prasādayē; I propitiate you as a compensation for the insult I have done; cool you down; Bhagavān has not got heated up at all; but this Arjuna feels so and says that I am cooling You; tvām prasādayē.

and what type of You: īḍyam īśam; īśaḥ means the Lord of the whole creation; sarvasya jagathaḥ īstē iti īśaḥ; īstē means rule over; so īśam; same as Īśvaraḥ; so tvām aham īśam; you have to split properly; tvām aham miśai, you cannot split; it is not miśa; it is aham īśam;

Then īḍyam; īḍyaḥ means the adorable one; the only one who deserves namaskāra; other than Bhagavān; nobody deserves namaskāra; any honour belonging to anyone, ultimately comes from the Lord only; remember the Kēnōpaniṣad Story; Indra took glory; Agni took glory and they got censure from the Lord. So nobody in the world deserves Namaskāra; and that is why I told you in the last class; even if you do Namaskāra to jñāni; a guru or a sanyāsi; What does he do? He does not put it in his pocket. That it will cause his downfall; therefore immediately he should hand over to the Lord; through the Guru parampara. And therefore īḍyam means īḍ means to worship; to honour; agniṁ īḍē purōhitaṁ; īḍē to worship; īḍyam means worshipful, adorable, God I propitiate; and for what purpose I do this? So that you will forgive me and forget all the offences; all the insults that I have done to you. And Oh Lord; You have to forgive and forget the offences like the following examples; he gives three examples; for forgiveness;

The first one is pitā; a father; with regard to the offences of the children. So Arjuna says just as a parent or father forgives the children; even though they commit mistakes because of immaturity. So from this example, what are we suppose to learn indirectly; we have to forgive our children; when they commit mistakes; We should not say; படிசைய மிதிக்கப்படாது paṭiyai mitikkappaṭātu; so do not step on the steps; so he will cross it; so you said I should step only; so I cross.

So nowadays children do all kinds of things because they are exposed to the culture from all over the world; in village life they had only one culture; now we have all kinds of culture, which is coming to your pūja room and drawing room; children are attracted by that and therefore they are bound to commit mistake. Here Arjuna says; the parents are supposed to forgive the children; Oh Lord; you being a parent, you should forgive Me.

Then the second example. A husband forgiving the wife for her mistake; offences, insults; when the husband was elder; and wife was younger; and husband is considered to be a guru; and the wife is considered to be a śiṣya; even though no wife is willing to become a śiṣya, because husbands do not have that status; that is a different problem. So therefore just as the husband forgives the wife; that is priyaḥ priyāyāḥ; priyaḥ means wife; literally priyaḥ does not mean wife; priya means dear one. So here wife is called priyaḥ means, wife is supposed to be dearer; OK. if she is not dear; make her dear .

So, I am not saying all these; Gīta is saying: What do I know?! So I am the wrong person to talk about these issues and all, and you should not be merely letter writing; I do not know how you write; whether you use dear, I do not know; So therefore both should be dear to each other;

Then finally, sakhēva sakhyuḥ; just as a friend forgives the offences, the insults of the friend; So similarly Oh Lord; You are like father; and You are like husband also; in fact that is also a form of bhakthi called madhura bhakthi; where the devotee looks upon himself as Gōpi or Rādha and Lord is the only puruṣaḥ and that kind of bhakthi is called madhura bhakthi. And therefore you are like the husband; and you are of course my friend also; from whatever angle you see; you have to forgive and forget. So priyāyāḥ arhasi; priyāyāḥ plus arhasi; priyāyā arhasi; then sandhi is made even though it is not permitted rule; a grammar violation is here; but Vyasācārya's poetic license, it is allowed. So it should be priyāyāḥ arhasi; and then you have supply a word: aparādhān; offences; priyāyāḥ arhasi pitā aparādhān sōḍhum arhasi; Sakhā sakhyuḥ aparādhān sōḍhum arhasi; or sahatē; and priyaḥ priyāyāḥ aparādhān sōḍhum arhasi. Similarly, you also.

अदृष्टपूर्वं हृषितोऽस्मि दृष्ट्वा भयेन च प्रव्यथितं मनो मे ।
तदेव मे दर्शय देव रूपं प्रसीद देवेश जगन्निवास ॥ ११.४५ ॥

adr̥ṣṭapūrvam hr̥ṣitō'smi dr̥ṣṭvā bhayēna ca pravyathitaṃ manō mē | tadēva mē darśaya dēva rūpam
prasīda dēvēśa jagannivāsa || 11.45 ||

दृष्ट्वा dr̥ṣṭvā seeing (Universal form), अदृष्टपूर्वम् adr̥ṣṭapūrvam which has not been seen before अस्मि हृषितः asmi hr̥ṣitaḥ I am delighted च ca at the same time मे मनः mē manaḥ my mind प्रव्यथितम् pravyathitama is afflicted भयेन bhayēna with fear देव dēva Oh Lord ! दर्शय मे me darśaya show me तद् रूपम् एव tad rūpam ēva that (familiar) form itself, देवेश dēvēśa oh God of gods! जगन्निवास jagannivāsa Oh Lord, who is the abode of the Universe ! प्रसीद prasīda Be gracious

45. Seeing the universal form which has not been seen before, I am delighted. At the same time, my mind is afflicted with fear. Oh Lord! Show me that familiar form itself, Oh God of gods! Oh Lord!, who is the abode of the Universe! Be gracious.

So here Arjuna expresses his two-fold emotions; which are simultaneously occupying the mind; Arjuna says I am in a conflict now; one part of mind says; I am one of the few lucky ones; blessed ones; because Bhagavān gave me divya cakṣu; which is not easily available for others. So because of the special divya cakṣuḥ gift; I have got this rare Viśva-rūpam darśanam.

And since it is a very very rare one; in fact people are going to glorify Arjuna; you are lucky; you are lucky; people are going to be envious of Arjuna; and therefore from that angle, I feel like continuously like seeing the Viśva-rūpa m; because I have a got a rare darśanam; but at the same time; one corner of my mind, is only looking into the mouth of the Lord; into which all these near and dear ones are entering; and some are crushed; remember that how the people are entering and Lord is ruthlessly killing all of them; looks like cruel God; from that angle of Lord as the destroyer my mind is extremely in the grip of bhayam. So one part of my mind is happy; another part of my mind is distressed with fear. And since one part of my mind is happy it tells; continue to see it; and the other part of mind with fear says; close your eyes; do not see; in Malayalam they say: കച്ചിട്ട് ഇറക്കാൻ വയ്യ; മധുരിച്ചിട്ട് ഇപ്പാൻ വയ്യ; kaccittṭ irakkānuṁ vayya; madhuricciṭṭu tuppānuṁ vayya. In Tamil there is a parallel; it is better, therefore I am not able to swallow; and not able to swallow; at the same time, it is also sweet; bitter sweet; I am not able to spit it out also; but Arjuna feels between these two.

Bhayam is more dominant; it is only because divya cakṣuḥ is an artificial one given by Bhagavān; Divya cakṣuḥ should be claimed by us by our own sādhana; so by sufficient karma yōga sādhana rāga-dvēṣās; ahaṁkāra mamakārās comes down; that mind has got naturally developed divya cakṣu; And when we have got naturally developed divya cakṣuḥ; Viśva-rūpa will not be frightening; but in the case of Arjuna; it is artificially given; and therefore Arjuna is not able to totally enjoy.

And therefore he says Oh Lord! World is congratulating me, but I am not able to withstand. And therefore what is my request? Enough is enough; please withdraw the Viśva-rūpam. Who asked for Viśva-rūpam; Arjuna only. The very same Arjuna who said I would like to have Viśva-rūpa, the very same Arjuna says I cannot withstand, Which means from ēka rūpa bhakthi if I have to go to anēka rūpa bhakthi; rāga-dvēṣās must be tremendously decreased.

Nirguṇa bhakthi is later; that is not necessary. Ēka-rūpa to anēka-rūpa bhakthi I have to go; I have to reduce rāga-dvēṣā tremendously. To put in another language; ahaṁkāra mamakāra must be reduced; நான் எனது nāṅ eṇatu; these two must come down; when they come down; Viśva-rūpa will be enjoyable.

So here Arjuna says adṛṣṭapūrvam dṛṣṭvā; I have seen something which is unique which I have not experienced before; because Viśva-rūpa experience is for the first time and therefore it is unique; So adṛṣṭa-pūrvam means apūrvam; in Tamil we ask; why have you come to my home? Apūrvamā; means you do not generally come. So similarly this is apūrva-darśanam.

And having seen this asmi harṣitaḥ; I am extremely elated; because especially when we have something rare, and the neighbour does not have; we have that extra happiness; anything including dress; they ask you from where did you purchase it; when you receive that question; it takes to as though mōkṣa! So then you say that; you do not want to say; because if they also purchase that, your importance would be lost. Therefore you say that I got it from that shop and that person goes there and enquires and comes to know that it was never sold in that shop, or it is no more available; and he comes and tells that it is never available and you get brahmānandam. So similarly here also Arjuna feels that nobody has it; and I have got it; therefore I am extremely happy.

But the problem is internally, I am terribly frightened also; bhayēna ca; because of the mouth; remember it; bhayēna ca; bhayēna ca mē manaḥ mē pravyathitaṁ. So with fear my mind is afflicted; tortured; tormented; distressed; pravyathitaṁ.

So it is like the experience. I also like to share this experience. In the village we have got the village function; temple function and in Kerala for any festival; elephant is a must; so we have two three elephants; and the middle elephant carry the Lord; and there is a pradakṣiṇam of the whole village and when the elephant goes, people would like to go on to the top of the elephant because we have to hold the deity and umbrella, such other things; a few items along with the Lord. So there is big adi-thadi among the villagers as to who should climb the elephant; and then one time I also got on the elephant. Now, in the village and all; on the top of the elephant, they do not spread anything. In the movies and all, they show with clothes; cushion, a small stand, etc. So you do not know what it is all about; so on top of the elephant there is the backbone; it is really the hardest stuff in the world; perhaps harder than the diamond; and the hair of the elephant is also very sharp like a needle. So when you get on the elephant; and look around, all the other children would be envious of me; and therefore all smiles for 10 minutes; thereafter, it will be like: When I am going to get down; and you do not want to let it out because others are envious of you. So why to let out that secret; you put a smile outwards and inside you wait for the śeeveli to end.

When I read this slōka of Arjuna, I only get that remembrance. So very happy, but miserable also. So like wearing coat in Madras; in summer season, you wear coat and everybody appreciates the coat; but inside, not suitable to India you know; in Madras in May in 43 degrees; what coat; you do not want even a banian. And often we experience; for the sake of the world you feel like smiling; but inside you are miserable.

So similarly, bhayēna ca pravyathitaṁ manō mē; and between these two; which is dominating bhayaṁ alone is dominating and therefore Kṛṣṇa; tadēva rūpam mē darśaya; Oh Lord! I would like have the good-old Kṛṣṇa; my koochu guruvarappan, they say; the Lord Kṛṣṇa, smiling, beautiful; adaram madhuram; vadanam madhuram; nayanam madhuram Kṛṣṇa alone I want; so tadēva means what? ēkarūpa Īśvaraḥ.

So from this we come to know that graduating to anēka rūpa Īśvara itself is not an easy job; and only if I have graduated and remained in anēka rūpa Īśvara; Viśva-rūpa Īśvara for sufficient length of time; thereafter only rūpa Īśvara will get inside you; but we try to jump from ēka rūpa to arūpa; And that is why Vēdānta appears to be, the upaniṣad appears to be more academic; it does not seem to help because upaniṣad is talking about:

अस्पर्शम्, अशब्दम्, अरूपम् अव्ययम्,
तत रसम् नित्य अगन्धवच्चयत् ||

asparśam, aśabdham, arūpam avyayam,
tata rasam nitya agandhavaccayat

So sādhanā catuṣṭaya samppatti means Viśva-rūpa Īśvara bhakthaḥ; அது இருன்தால் தான் அருப ஈசுவரனுக்கு போக முடியும்; if only it is. Then only you can go to arūpa Īśvara; therefore tad ēva rūpam; that is ēka rūpa Īśvaram darśaya; May you show me. prasīda dēvēśa jagannivāsa.

Kṛṣṇa can argue: Only you wanted; therefore I will not withdraw; if He says what to do; therefore Arjuna says: prasīda. Be gracious to me. Hē dēvēśa; Lord of all Gods; jagannivāsa; oh Lord who is the abode of the universe; visvādhāraḥ.

So jagannivāsa means the Lord in whom the whole universe is resting; jagatam nivāsaḥ; śaṣṭi tatpuruṣaḥ; bahu vrīhi also can justify; but in this context, śaṣṭi tatpuruṣa would be go; and this idea is symbolically presented when Yaśōda asks Lord Kṛṣṇa to open the mouth. When Kṛṣṇa ate mud, you know the story Yaśōda scolded and said; Open the mouth. She thought that she will see only mud inside the mouth but instead of mud, the whole cosmos with all the akhilānda kōdis are there; and just as Arjuna could not withstand the Viśva-rūpa; even Yaśōda could not.

Therefore instead of saying; I am not able to; she commanded Kṛṣṇa to Shut Up. Shut Up; means what, only it seems to be a command, but inside it is all fear; It is not to be literally take up; how come all the cosmos would be inside the Kṛṣṇa's mouth; even the Tirupati Laddu we are not able to put inside as a whole into our mouth; do not take literally. This symbolises the Lord as the viśvādhāram gagana sadṛśam.

किरीटिनं गदिनं चक्रहस्तं इच्छामि त्वां द्रष्टुमहं तथैव ।
तेनैव रूपेण् चतुर्भुजेन सहस्रबाहो भव विश्वमूर्ते ॥ ११.४६ ॥

Kirīṭinaṁ gadinam cakrahastam
icchāmi tvāṁ draṣṭumahaṁ tathaiva | tēnaiva rūpēṇa caturbhujēna
sahasrabāhō bhava viśvamūrtē || 11.46 ||

अहम् इच्छामि aham icchāmi I wish द्रष्टुं draṣṭum to see You, तथा एव tathā ēva in the same form as before; किरीटिनम् kirīṭinam with crown गदिनम् gadinam with mace, चक्रहस्तम्

cakrahastam and with disc in Your hand सहस्रबाहो sahasrabāhō Oh Lord, with thousand arms! विश्वमूर्ते viśvamūrtē Oh Lord with Universal form! भव bhava appear तेन एव tēna ēva with that very same, चतुर्भुजेन रूपेण caturbhujēna rūpēṇa four-armed form

46. I wish to see you in the same form as before with crown, with mace and with disc in your hand. Oh Lord, with thousand arms! Oh Lord, with Universal form! Appear with that very same four-armed form.

So Arjuna concludes his prayer. That is the third stage of appreciation. No.1 āścaryam; No.2 bhayam; No.3 bhakthiḥ. The third stage of bhakthi expression is being concluded here; with Arjuna's request to the Lord to get back to his own ēkarūpa.

Therefore he says; tvām aham draṣṭuṃ icchāmi; I would like to see You; tēnaiva rūpēṇa; with Your old form only; ēka rūpēṇa; Kṛṣṇa rūpēṇa aham draṣṭuṃ icchāmi; and what is that old rūpam? Arjuna wonders Kṛṣṇa remembers or not; therefore I tell him what was his old form; therefore kirīṭinam; so with kirīṭam; gadinam; with gada; cakrahastam; with cakra; with all these caturbhujēna; in your own; caturbhujā rūpa; so caturbhujam; lord with four hands; previously it was anēkahastham; now it is caturbhujam; so he himself says: sahasrabāho; Now You are sahasrabāho; thousand armed one; I want You to be four-armed one; Hey sahasrabāho; Caturbāho bhāva.

There are people who make a very big analysis here. Anyway I am not going to say: How does Arjuna say caturbhujēna? So before Īśvara rupa darśanam; Kṛṣṇa was moving with Arjuna alright; but was Kṛṣṇa with four hands or two hands; we have no idea. Thinking is what; Kṛṣṇa was moving with Arjuna as only an ordinary manuṣya; therefore he had only dvibāho; how come Arjuna says here caturbhujam; and different people giving explanations; ingenious explanation and all; we need not go into that; we can conclude that Kṛṣṇa might have four hands; or still easier; Arjuna is confused because of overwhelming and changing emotions. So he was confused between two and four; and therefore he said caturbhujēna; you can take it that way. Do not break your head on that; So tēnaiva rūpēṇa catur-bhujēna sahasra-bāhō bhava; Oh Lord may you appear; viśvamūrtē; viśvamūrtiḥ means Viśva-rūpam: sambōdhana pradhama; addressing the Lord; Oh Viśva-rūpa Īśvara; I do not want viśvamūrtiḥ; I want Krishnamūrthy. So Kṛṣṇa rūpam I do not want; Viśva-rūpa m; but I want only Kṛṣṇa room.

So with this Arjuna's response to Viśva-rūpa-darśanam is over; the last phase is from verse No.35 up to this verse. Now the ball is in Lord Kṛṣṇa's court; So there is some silence; because Arjuna has made his request and Lord Kṛṣṇa has to do respond.

What is the Lord going to do is given in the next verse; which we will see in the next class.

Hari Om

152 Chapter 11, Verses 47-50

ॐ

From verse No.35, up to verse No.45, which we completed in the last class, Arjuna expresses his appreciation of Viśva-rūpa and he surrenders at the feet of the Lord. Even though he is very happy to have Viśva-rūpa darśanam; because of the special blessings of the Lord; Arjuna is not mature enough to withstand the Viśva-rūpa darśanam; because Viśva-rūpa darśanam means learning to look at the whole creation as the Lord; whether we like it or not; the creation is a relative entity consisting of pairs of opposite and therefore I am going to see the universe as the Lord; I should be able to accept the both the pairs of opposite equally. I should have a reverential attitude of acceptance with regard to every event in the creation. Not only the things consists of pairs of opposite; even events are pairs of opposites. As I had said often, if birth is an integral part of Bhagavān; death is also integral part of Bhagavān only. Therefore, to become a Viśva-rūpa bhakta; I should be able to accept any death of anyone, without any complaint, which means a tremendous inner maturity is required; which is also as an integral part of Bhagavān. And therefore it requires a reverence; rather than complaint. That is why in Sandhya vandanam; we regularly worship Yama as Bhagavān.

यमाय नमः। यमाय धर्मराजाय मृत्यवे चान्तकाय च । वैवस्वताय कालाय सर्वभूत क्षयाय च

Sarvabhūta kṣayāya; one who is the cause of old age and death; kṣayam; old age; apakṣiyathe; apakṣayaḥ; which culminates in maraṇam; yama is the cause of old age and death; and we should reverentially worship yama dharmarāja daily; we should be able to accept these two as an integral of Bhagavān. We need not even develop a reverential attitude; at least if we can have a non-critical non-complaining attitude that itself is a maturity. Similarly every association I have to accept and I have to equally accept every disassociation also; without grumbling. Similarly, health and sickness. Similarly war and peace; as long as human freewill is there; there will be rāga and dvēṣā; which means there will be war even in heaven; dēvās and asurās will be quarreling.

And therefore most of the things are integral part of Viśva-rūpa; I should be able to accept them without grumbling; which means I should have a very very rarified mind; which sees the totality and therefore for an immature mind, Viśva-rūpam can be a threat, and Arjuna proves that his mind is immature because he says I am not able to withstand.

Then the question is how can I make myself mature. Until I get the maturity to accept Bhagavān, the anēka rūpa Īśvara, the only alternative I have is to accept the ēkarūpa Īśvara as the Lord; that is why we start with Iṣṭa dēvathā bhakthi so that I will be able to accept the situation by feeling the presence of my Iṣṭa dēvathā in my heart; this is how I begin; Śankarācārya writes a beautiful sthōthram called Śiva Śankara Sthōthram:

अतिभीषणकटुभाषणयमकिङ्किरपटली
कृतताडनपरिपीडनमरणागमसमये ।
उमया सह मम चेतसि यमशासन निवसन्
शिवशङ्कर शिवशङ्कर हर मे हर दुरितम् ॥ १ ॥

atibhīṣaṇakaṭubhāṣaṇayamakiṅkirapaṭālī
kṛtatāḍanaparipīḍanamaraṇāgamasamayē |
umayā saha mama cētasi yamaśāsana nivasan
śivaśāṅkara śivaśāṅkara hara mē hara duritam || 1 ||

Oh Lord; I will also have old age. and I will have to face them; And how death is coming to come I do not know; They say we do not know; that they will be seeing the Yamakinkarās coming; Yama dhūtās coming; some people have told also; I do not know. Some old people say that somebody has come and all the other persons would not see; and this person would only see; so they say they are all messengers of Yama and they come threatening because this person does not want to leave his family and near and dear ones and his new கொள்ளு பேரன்; kollu pēran; etc. so leaving that I do not want to go and therefore whipping their whips they come, and at that time, I should not be frightened of all these people; yama dhūtās; I want Lord Śiva you should come; because you are the right person because you have kicked yama dharma rāja in his chest; you remember Mārkaṇḍeya story and all you know; and therefore when such a frightening occasion comes, I should not be affected by anyone of these things. Even the family members may be standing around and weeping; my attention should not go to those people who are temporary; my attention should be on you and you should come and do not come alone; come with Pārvathi also. And I am giving you a programme; advanced booking; and what is that programme? A beautiful thāndavam; along with Pārvathi's lāsyam; Śiva thāndavam and Pārvathi's lāsyam; on the stage of my heart; you should give me a programme; and I should be so much observed in that programme; that I should not even know the arrival and departure.

Śankarācārya has written all these for us; he has no such problem; because he is nitya mukta; So atibhīṣaṇa; bhīṣaṇa means bhayankara; kaṭubhāṣaṇa; they are not going to politely request; கூட வறேளா? If they request, are we going to go with them. Therefore they will only say pack up; pack up; Therefore kaṭubhāṣaṇayamakiṅkirapaṭālī; last messengers when they come; kṛtatāḍanaparipīḍanamaraṇāgamasamayē. So they beat me; and they torture me or torment me; physically or psychologically; And when such a death comes; What should you do; umayā saha; along with Pārvathi dēvi; mama cētasi; in my heart; yamaśāsana; what an address. Oh Lord Śiva you are yamaśāsana; the one who punishes even yama dharma rāja; nivasan; Śivaśaṅkara Śivaśaṅkara hara mē hara duritam; Śiva Śaṅkarāṣṭakam is 8 slōkās.

So this very thought of your iṣṭa dēvathā; can give you great relief when pain comes; diseases come; people disappear; people die or we ourselves die; iṣṭa dēvathā bhakthi also can relieve our pain; only thing is we have to develop that bhakthi by abyāsaḥ; I will start that bhakthi when I am 93 years old; that will not work; start your training right now; feel the presence of your iṣṭa dēvathā right now; and this iṣṭa dēvathā bhakthi or ēka rūpa bhakthi will give you sufficient strength to expand your vision to Viśva-rūpa bhakthi; and when it is getting converted to Viśva-rūpa bhakthi; iṣṭa dēvathā bhakthi need not go away; I see the iṣṭa dēvathā itself as all the rūpam; if Kṛṣṇa is my Iṣṭa dēvathā; all people are Kṛṣṇa in different vēṣam; and even if I go to Śiva temple; Kṛṣṇa is Śiva vēṣam; then the whole creation becomes brahmāṇḍavyāptadēhā bhasitahimarucā.

My own iṣṭa dēvathā is the Śiva liṅgam; the whole cosmos becomes Śiva liṅgam; therefore if I am not ready for Anēka rūpa bhakthi; I need not feel bad; I can continue in ēka rūpa bhakthi; that will also give tremendous inner strength; I can say everyone go away; like in the cinema song; யாரை நம்பி நான் போறன்தேன்; போங்டா போங; yārai nampi nāṅ pōraṅtēṅ; pōṅṭā pōṅga; all of you get lost; I do not depend on any one of you; my support comes from somewhere; It is a wonderful training that we can have. So anyway; Arjuna proves he is not yet ready for Viśva-rūpa bhakthi itself; after remaining in Viśva-rūpa bhakthi for sufficiently long time; and thereafter only we have to get ready for arūpa īśvarḥ; does not matter; whatever be your level; take to appropriate bhakthi; and therefore Arjuna confesses to Lord Kṛṣṇa and says tēna ēva rūpeṇa caturbhujēna; I do not want to see thousand hands; it is all confusing; beautifully two or maximum four hands enough; more than that I will not be able to see Kṛṣṇa. I want simple Kṛṣṇa. Up to this we saw.

श्रीभगवानुवाच Śrī Bhagavān uvāca The Lord said अर्जुन Arjuna Oh Arjuna ! आत्मयोगात् ātmayōgāt by My power इदं परं रूपम् idam paraṁ rūpam this supreme form, दर्शितं तव darśitaṁ tava has been shown to you, मया प्रसन्नेन mayā prasannēna by Me who is pleased (with you), यद् मे yad mē such a form of mine, तेजोमयम् tējōmayam which is radiant विश्वम् viśvam universal अनन्तम् anantam limitless आध्यम् ādhyam and primal न दृष्टपूर्वम् na dṛṣṭapūrvam has not been seen त्वदन्येन tvadanyēna by anyone other than you.

47. The Lord said – Oh Arjuna! By My power this supreme form has been shown to you by Me, who is pleased (with you). Such a form of Mine which is radiant, universal, limitless and primal has not been seen by anyone other than you.

So when Arjuna made this request, Lord Kṛṣṇa says: Arjuna I am not responsible for showing this Viśva-rūpam. In fact, I know you are not yet ready; but since you made a special request, I choose to show you; and now that you do not want Viśva-rūpa, I will bless you accordingly.

Therefore He says: Hē Arjuna tava idam rūpam darśitaṁ; so idam rūpam means idam Viśva-rūpam, this universal form of mind has been shown to you.

How? Ātmayogāt; because of my Māya śakti; Yōgāḥ means māya; so the word Yōgāḥ has several meanings. According to context, we have to take, in this context, Yōgāḥ means an assembly; a சேர்க்கை; cērkai; māya is called Yōgāḥ because it is an assembly of thriguṇās; satva rajas tamas guṇānām saṁyōjane Yōgāḥ śabda ucyatē. And therefore Yōgāḥ means and this māya represents Bhagavān's Māya śakti.

And word Ātma is reflexive pronoun and not satcidānanda ātma; cidānanda ātma; ātma means My own Yōgāḥ śakti; My own Māya śakti I used for showing the Viśva-rūpa.

And why I chose to do that; prasannēna; because I was pleased with your devotion; I was pleased with your sincerity and therefore I showed this; and how did I show you? By giving you this special cakṣu called divya cakṣu;

And what type of Viśva-rūpam is? Kṛṣṇa says Viśva-rūpam remaining the same; if you are mature you will enjoy it; if you are not mature; the same Viśva-rūpa will frighten you; What is enjoyment to one, is a fright to another person. Just like this roller coaster ride; so one person may be thrilled and he may go up and down repeatedly; whereas for some other people, seeing itself is giddiness giving. So by itself it is neither good or bad; it all depends upon the candidate.

Similarly, here Kṛṣṇa Viśva-rūpa is really wonderful Arjuna; because it is tējōmayam; it is the most brilliant form; which consists of galaxies; it consists of billions of stars and all of them are included Viśva-rūpa; tējōmayam;

Viśvam which consists of everything; Vivida prathyaya gamyam Viśvam. So which is cognised in manifold form; śabda rūpēṇa; sparśa rūpēṇa; rasa rūpēṇa, gandha rūpēṇa; it can be appreciated.

And anantam; which is limitless; both spatially as well as time-wise; anantham ādhyam; so which is the first born; which is created first;

तस्माद्विराळजायत विराजो अधि पूरुषः ।
स जातो अत्यरिच्यत पश्चाद्भूमिमथो पुरः ॥५॥

tasmādvirāḷajāyata virājō adhi pūruṣaḥ |
sa jāto atyaricyata paścādbhūmimatho puraḥ ||5||

So Viśva-rūpa is born first; and thereafter alone paścādbhūmi; atha puraḥ puraḥ means śarīrāṇi individual bodies, everything is born later only and therefore virāt is ādhyam; the first born; brahmā dēvānām prathamam sambabhūva; we have seen.

Not only that Arjuna you are a blessed devotee because nobody else had the good fortune of seeing this; so tvadanyēna; other than you, the rare one; blessed one, nobody else has seen; of course nobody else has seen is an exaggeration; it is not Arjuna alone has seen; some other people have also seen; others have also seen; in Mahābharātha itself we find Kṛṣṇa shows Viśva-rūpa in two or three occasions. And therefore here to highlight that; it is said that nobody has seen; it is not literally true; it is figurative expression.

draṣṭuṃ tvadanyēna kurupravīra || 11.48 ||

न वेदयज्ञाध्ययनैः na Vēdayajñādyayanaiḥ neither by the study of the Vēdas and yajñas न दानैः na dānaiḥ nor by the charity, न च क्रियाभिः na ca kriyābhiḥ nor by the rituals, न उग्रै तपोभिः na ugrai tapōbhiḥ nor by severe austerities शक्यः अहं द्रष्टुम् śakyaḥ ahaṃ draṣṭum can I be seen एवंरूपम् evaṃ rūpam in this form नृलोके nṛlōkē in the world of mortals त्वदन्येन tvadanyēna by anyone other than you कुरुप्रवीर kurupravīra Oh Arjuna !

48. Neither by the study of the Vēdas and yajñas, nor by charity, nor by rituals, nor by severe austerities can I be seen in this form in the world of mortals by anyone other than you, Oh Arjuna!

Here Lord Kṛṣṇa wants to point that Arjuna could see the Viśva-rūpa m; because of his devotion, bhakthi. Therefore Kṛṣṇa wants to highlight bhakthi or sincere desire to appreciate Viśva-rūpam as an important sādhanā; and when Kṛṣṇa wants to highlight the Bhakthi sādhanā, for the sake of underlining, underscoring Bhakthi, He brings down all the other sādhanā.

This is a methodology used in the scriptures, which has to be very carefully understood. All spiritual sādhanās are equally important; whether it is satyam; tapaḥ; yajñāḥ; or Vēda adhyanam. All sādhanās are equally important; but in a particular context, the scriptures highlight a particular sādhanā and in that context, the scriptures will bring down the other sādhanās. So there we should look down the other sādhanās; we have to only focus on the importance of a particular sādhanā; highlighting the sādhanās is important; not bringing down the other sādhanās.

This particular law is called nahi nindhā nyāyaḥ; scriptures themselves criticize certain sādhanās; there the value is not on criticism; but the value is on highlighting something else. In Taittiriya śikṣavalli we saw various values was highlighted and there it was said; svādhyāya pravacanam; the study of scriptures is the most important value; ṛtaṁ ca svādhyāyapravacanē ca | satyaṁ ca svādhyāyapravacanē ca.

And thereafter the Upaniṣad itself asks the question; what is the highest tapas?; then several ācāryās rishis give different opinion; and the Upaniṣad says: the greatest tapas or sādhanā is svādhyāya pravacana only. Therefore if you read that portion; svādhyāya will be highlighted and all the others will be brought down; and here you find Kṛṣṇa says all the other sādhanās are useless; but bhakthi is important.

Now we will be confused; which one we should take; śikṣavalli if you see it says svādhyāya; is highest. If you see this portion, it says bhakthi is greatest; therefore what should be the conclusion? One person concluded nothing is important. Very convenient; so from that portion I come to know that bhakthi is not important; because in śikṣavalli bhakthi is not mentioned. Here svādhyāya is criticized; in different portions different values are brought down and therefore no value is important; he concluded that way; or we can say all values are equally important.

So what should be our right conclusions? All values are equally important; but here Kṛṣṇa is highlighting Bhakthi and for that purpose He is criticising all the other sādhanā; criticism is not literally meant; it is not meant literally; very important. Here Kṛṣṇa says;

Vēda adyana is not a great sādhanā at all. It cannot give you Viśva-rūpa darśanam; Therefore Vēda adyanam is an inferior sādhanā.

And what about yajña? Yajña adyanaiḥ; the study of yajñas, that is rituals; what is the difference between Vēda adyana and yajña adyana. Vēda adhyana is learning to chant the Vēdas; and yajña adyana means analysis of the Vēdas; and learning how to do the rituals. Kṛṣṇa says Vēda adyanam is useless; yajña adyana is useless; all of them will not give you Viśva-rūpa darśanam.

na dānaiḥ; what about dānam? Useless; in fact, we note it very carefully. We say Bhagavān himself has said; therefore I am not giving! As such giving is problem; over and above that; if slōkās are like this; everything is gone; So here Kṛṣṇa says dānam is also an inferior sādhanā; whereas in śikṣavalli what did we see?

श्रद्धया देयम् | अश्रद्धयाऽदेयम् | श्रिया देयम् | ह्रिया देयम् | भिया देयम् | संविदा देयम् |

śraddhayā dēyam | aśraddhayā:dēyam | śriyā dēyam | hriyā dēyam | bhiyā dēyam | saṁvidā dēyam.

It is repeatedly emphasized; whereas Kṛṣṇa says dānam is also useless. From that it is clear that Kṛṣṇa's aim is not criticism; but highlighting something else.

Then what about other various activities; loukika karmaṇi; na ca kriyābhi; also useless; because they cannot help you in getting Viśva-rūpa darśanam; so yajña can be taken as śāstriya karma; and kriya can be taken as loukika karma;

So vaidika karma is useless; loukika karma also useless; and what about various form of tapas; like ēkadaśī upavasa etc. also useless;

na tapōbhi; so therefore we can again conclude that therefore I do not fast all; but Kṛṣṇa said Upavasam is useless.

and even Ugriaiḥ tapōbhi; even very big or severe austerities also are useless; because through all these sādhanās, ēvaṁ rūpam na draṣṭum śakyaḥ; ēvaṁ rūpaḥ means Viśva-rūpa Īśvara can never be seen by all these sādhanas.

So each time you have to read; Vēdayajñādyayanaiḥ rūpaḥ n na draṣṭum śakyaḥ; dānaiḥ ēvaṁ rūpam na draṣṭum śakyaḥ; kriyabhi na draṣṭum śakyaḥ; in each things na is there.

In lōke; among the human-beings or in the human world; it can be seen only by those people who are like you; Arjuna's head Kṛṣṇa is placing ice. So it cannot be seen by anyone other than you; because you alone have got that special qualification, unique qualification meant for Viśva-rūpa darśana; and therefore by other people it is not possible.

Now Kṛṣṇa does not say what is that unique qualification; very important; and what is that? Kṛṣṇa himself answers that later; so that we can supply here and that unique qualification is bhakthiḥ. So bhakthi alone will alone help in Viśva-rūpa darśanam; and that too what bhakthi? That also we have to note; because in the 7th chapter, Kṛṣṇa has talked about four types of bhakthi; artha bhakthi; artharthi bhakthi; jijñāsu bhakthi and jñāni bhakthi.

Artha bhakthi will not help; because artha is person in crisis; a person in crisis does not want Viśva-rūpa darśana; when there is no water at all in the home, is he going to ask the Lord for Viśva-rūpa darśanam? he will only ask water; If Lord asks Shall I come; this man will reply as such there is no water for the already available people; So you do not come; You be where you are; sent water only; so let the local Kṛṣṇa come (புரியுந்தோ? Are you understanding?) Let this Kṛṣṇa come, not that Kṛṣṇa.

Similarly when a person is craving for wealth and Bhagavān says I will give you Viśva-rūpa darśanam; who wants?; therefore he will not; therefore by bhakthi He means not mean arta or artharti bhakthi; but jijñāsu bhakthiḥ; jijñāsu bhakthi means a devotion through which a person wants an ēkarūpa Īśvara darśanam; I should know the value of Viśva-rūpa darśanam; such a mature bhakthi alone can help you see;

Hē kurupravīraḥ; Hey Arjunah, you asked for that; and therefore I gave you that. So do not put the blame upon Me; I did not want to threaten you; You asked for it.

दृष्ट्वा dṛṣṭvā seeing ईदृङ् इदं घोरं रूपम् īdṛṅ idam ghōram rūpam such a frightening form, मम mama of mine मा ते व्यथा मा mā tē vyathā mā may you have neither fear, च विमूढभावः idam tad ēva rūpam that very same form मे mē of Mine.

49. Seeing such a frightening form of mine, may you have neither fear nor delusion. With a pleased mind free from fear, see again that very same form of Mine.

So here Kṛṣṇa says Arjuna if you are not ready for Viśva-rūpa darśanam; I do not want to impose that upon you. This is the most unique aspect of our vēdic-teaching; we never impose anything upon a seeker; there are many people who are very clear that they do not want mōkṣa; because either they have not understood mōkṣa or frightened of mōkṣa; because mōkṣa is defined as advaitam; advaitam means if I stay alone; what should I do? I would like to have people around; that is only nice; even though some pidungal problem is there; it is nice to have people around; and mōkṣa means I should be free from all these things; I do not want freedom; even if there are problems I would like to be amongst people. So therefore remember appreciating the value of mōkṣa itself requires a tremendous maturity; and therefore Vēda says if you do not feel or appreciate the value of mōkṣa; you need not work for mōkṣa; you work for artā; you work for kāma; fulfil your desires.

So one lady asked; Swamiji I want to become one of the gōpis and want to have rāsa kṛīda dance with Kṛṣṇa; that desire is there; if mōkṣa is coming before that, I do not want mōkṣa; because after mōkṣa rebirth is not possible for fulfilling that desire. If I get mōkṣa I will not have an opportunity to get gōpi śārīram; I would like to have that; and another person said I would like to visit svarga lōka once. At least sādhanā camp there? Just have a 7-8 days camp there and drink a little of the amṛtam etc. witness some dance of Rāmbā and Ūrvaśī; and go places; Vēda says.

If you have any such desires; do not hurry; mōkṣa can wait; because it is eternal; So therefore if you are not even ready for Viśva-rūpa darśanam. I do not want to impose; have ēka rūpa bhakthi; ask for artā; ask for kāma; only one condition is follow dharma. And whatever you get legitimately, take it as Bhagavān's gift. That is the only sādhanā we request you to practice; you need not study upaniṣad; follow only karma kāṇḍa; you follow only karma Yōgāḥ by which we mean fulfil your desires legitimately and take whatever you get as Īśvara prasāda. Start there, it will lead you up to Mōkṣa. In fact, Kṛṣṇa himself is going to tell this beautifully in the next chapter. So I do not want to tell too much; then in the next chapter, I would have nothing to say.

So therefore there will we will see, how we can see from the lowest rung of the ladder and therefore Kṛṣṇa says do not worry; we can come back to ēka rūpa Īśvara. So tē vyathā; may you not be mentally pained; may you not be pained looking at my mouth which is crushing all the people; the crushing mill mā ca vimūḍhabhāvaḥ; may you not have any mental confusion also.

So here vimūḍhathvam means sthabdatha; mentally being overpowered; immobilization. Suddenly you see behind; imagine, there is a huge wild elephant standing; wild elephant without mahout standing behind; what we say; the mind gets stunned; it is not able to think or do anything; that stultified condition; immobilized kind of the mind is vimūḍha bhāvaḥ. Arjuna is experiencing that now and therefore Kṛṣṇa says "May you not suffer from that; I will cooperate with you".

Dṛṣṭvā rūpam; by seeing my rūpam and what type of rūpam? Gōram idruk rūpam; which is gōram frightening according to you; for mature people it is not frightening.

Thējōmayam; viśvam; anandam, adhyam; that is the description for mature people; but for you it appears to be gōram; like even seeing blood; many people cannot see blood; they will swoon. Imagine a doctor has that problem. Would it work? Therefore it is a mental preparation; for a few people a few drops, you cannot visualise. Similarly, for you it appears to be ghōram; and therefore what should you do; fourth line, may idam tadēva rupam pravasya; Now may you see my good old ordinary Kṛṣṇa form; tad ēva rūpam; Kṛṣṇa rūpam; ēka rūpam; may you see; punaḥ; once again; so let us change the channel. This button is there: you have only to press the appropriate button; let us change the channel from anēka rūpa Īśvara to ēkarūpa Īśvara. Therefore may you see; how?

Vyapētabhīḥ; without any fear; without any tension; vyapetabhīḥ; bhaya rahitha and prithamanāḥ and with a pleasant mind; relaxed mind; stress free mind; may you again see the ēkarūpam, which again word is used; because up to the 10th chapter; it was only ēkarūpa Īśvara; the 11th only channel was changed; So again we can go back to the old channel itself.

सञ्जय उवाच --

इत्यर्जुनं वासुदेवस्तथोक्त्वा स्वकं रूपं दर्शयामास भूयः ।

svakam rūpam darśayāmāsa bhūyaḥ |

āśvāsayāmāsa ca bhītamēnam

bhūtvā punaḥ saumyavapurmahātmā || 11.50 ||

सञ्जय उवाच Sañjaya uvāca Sañjaya said – उक्त्वा uktvā having said, इति तथा iti tathā thus, अर्जुनम् arjunam to Arjuna, वासुदेवः vāsudēvaḥ Lord Kṛṣṇa दर्शयामास भूयः darśayāmāsa bhūyaḥ showed again स्वकं रूपम् svakam rūpam his own form च भूत्वा सौम्यवपुः ca bhūtvā saumyavapuḥ and, having assumed the pleasing form, पुनः punaḥ once again महात्मा

mahātmā the great Lord, आश्वासयामास āśvāsayāmāsa consoled एनम् भीतम् ēnam bhītam that frightened (Arjuna)

50. Sañjaya said – Having said thus to Arjuna, Lord Kṛṣṇa showed again His own form. And having assumed the pleasing form once again, the great Lord consoled that frightened Arjuna.

So Arjuna requested the Lord to change the form and Lord Kṛṣṇa has also agreed to change the form. And now that is a silent period; wherein the transformation is taking place; from anēka rūpa to ēka rūpa. And since there is silence; Neither Kṛṣṇa talks nor Arjuna talks; you have to imagine; if it is a TV programme; some background music will be there and they will be showing; that advantage will be there and here it is not there;

And therefore Sañjaya comes and gives a running commentary. So what is happening in the battle field; So Sañjaya reports:

Sañjaya uvāca; vāsudēvaḥ Arjunam iti uktvā; Vasudēvaḥ; Lord Kṛṣṇa, so here the word also is appropriately put; Vasudeva has come; So Vāsudēvaḥ means Vasudēvasya puthraḥ. So whether it is ēkarūpa or anēkarūpa? Vāsudēvaḥ means Kṛṣṇa; Lord Kṛṣṇa uttered these words to Arjuna; uttered these words and then svakaṁ rūpaṁ darśayāmāsa. So once again He showed the ēkarūpa Kṛṣṇa form, to Arjuna; so svakaṁ rūpaṁ means ēkarūpam; Kṛṣṇa rūpam; bhūyaḥ darśayāmāsa.

As I said; changed the channel; and having changed the form; āśvāsayāmāsa ēnam bhītam; even after changing the form from Anēkarūpa to ēkarūpam; Arjuna's fear continues for some more time, Like a child; if the child has missed the mother; and cried for hours; and the mother has come and the child is on the body of the mother; but the child continues to cry; but the mother will say; I have come; please therefore shut up; but still the child will recollects that and continues the crying; OR if you have a nightmarish dream; after waking up; you know it is dream; but still that fear continues sweat continues; palpitation continues; Similarly Arjuna continues to be disturbed; like a baby and Kṛṣṇa like a mother is consoling Arjuna.

So bhītam ēnam Arjunam. So this Arjuna who is frightened; āśvāsayāmāsa; Lord Kṛṣṇa consoles;

How; saumyavapuḥ bhūtvā; previously it was said ghōra rūpam; Now the ghōra rūpam is replaced by saumya rūpam; adharam madhuram, vadanam madhuram, nayanam means saumyam; sweetie; like sweetie pie; So Kṛṣṇa again gave the cho chweet! (like that) talk; so many languages is there; saumyavapuḥ bhūtvā mahātma; mahātma means what; anēkarūpa Īśvara; Viśvam ēva ātma yasya saḥ; maha ātma; பெரிய உடம்பை

So here also we have to make a note, what do you mean by withdrawing the Viśva-rūpa m? Does it mean Lord Kṛṣṇa removed the Viśva-rūpa m? And then brought in Kṛṣṇa rūpam. If Bhagavān is going to remove the Viśva-rūpam; what will happen? The world itself will disappear because, I have repeatedly told you that Viśva-rūpa Īśvaraḥ means what; the very world itself as the body of the Lord. Therefore since Viśva-rūpa Īśvaraḥ is equal to the universe; there is no question of arrival of Viśva-rūpa Īśvara; because it is already arrived; and there is no question of departure also; because if Viśva-rūpa departs, the world itself will disappear; it will be praḷayaṁ; the world would not be there; Kurukṣetra would not be there; Arjuna will not be there; Bhīṣma Drōṇa will not be there; in fact the 12th chapter of Gītā itself will not be there. So what do you mean by withdrawal of Viśva-rūpa? As I said before, Kṛṣṇa withdrew the Divya cakṣuḥ from Arjuna; it is only change; bringing about a change in the mind of Arjuna. And what is divya cakṣuḥ? I have defined divya cakṣuḥ in the beginning; now you should remember once again.

There I told you how divya cakṣuḥ was given; now here how divya cakṣuḥ was removed; so you should remember what is divya cakṣuḥ; divya cakṣuḥ means a mind which is not overpowered ahaṁkāra and mama kāra; As long as the mind is in the grip of aham and mama, Viśva-rūpa darśanam will not be there. I will not see the totality; my mind will be narrow only; When aham and mama goes away; Viśva-rūpa comes.

So it is like again I gave you an example; a person is standing; in the background there is a mountain range; there is no peaked mountain; you have got a camera; now you want to take the picture of your friend and the mountain; the mountain is far away; now you face a problem; what is that? If you focus the person; the mountain range gets defocused; if you adjust to the mountain range; person is defocused; so if Aham-Mama are dominant; my focus is never on viśva rūpam; it will be one segment of the creation alone; but when aham and mama I and mine come down; then and then alone, Viśva-rūpa appreciation would come.

I would give you another example. In school, they will have the drama programme for the yearly anniversary. And this drama there will be several scenes; and it is generally played by the children themselves. And you find that children are playing various role, the parents will come; and with a camera also. In the programme whoever walks with the camera this side and that side; assume that their child is in the programme. After every scene you will find 4-5 people 4-5 people disappear. Why is that? Their children's scene is over. Do you think that they are interested in the drama? They come and their child may be only the dvāra pālaka without a dialogue; Only with a kundam-spear and you have keep it across and when the rāja passes you have to lift it and put it back when he has gone inside or outside; this is the only role played by this child; for that particular two minutes role; mother and father comes with a camera; and all the time they will be watching whom; only dvāra pālaka dṛṣṭi; other members are not seen; in the story there is no focus; there is no Viśva-rūpa darśanam; there is no darśanam of the totality of the character or drama; because myyyyyyyyyy son is there; myyyyyyyyyy daughter is there; that photo we have to take and frame it and send it across the whole world; and that too should be shown to the Swamiji!!.

Otherwise how do I know; Did I go and took the photo? This is how I come to know; therefore, dvāra pāla dṛṣṭya drama tyāgaḥ. If you are interested in the totality of drama; you are not going to focus on a particular child; the whole universe is the drama of Bhagavān; but we can never see that; a few chittappas and periyappas and wives and children; they have contracted our consciousness into a dot; We are all trapped in enclosed consciousness; we do not have a rarified consciousness, to appreciate the totality; so divya cakṣu was gone; that means Arjuna has come back to my Bhīṣma; my Drōṇa; பழய கதைக்கு வந்தாச்சு; he has come back to the old story. More in the next.

Hari Om

By the grace of Lord Kṛṣṇa, Arjuna gets an opportunity for Viśva-rūpa-darśanam; and he was extremely happy about that; but at the same time, because of his mental immaturity, he is not able to appreciate Viśva-rūpa in its totality, because Viśva-rūpam is a picture of both positive and negative things. Because as long as we are in the relative world; everything has got its opposites; Therefore whether you like or not; the world is full of dvandva; which means Viśva-rūpa itself is dvandva; so if Lord has to be the sṛṣṭi kāraṇam; very same Lord will be laya kāraṇam also. If Lord gives you the punya karma-phalam; the very same Lord will give pāpa karma-phalam also. So if I learn to appreciate it in its totality; I will not see them as pairs of opposites; but I will see them as complimentary. Therefore I understand; I should either accept them both or reject them both; but an immature mind only wants the positive aspect of the creation; it does not want the negative aspect; it is interested in the birth; but not willing to accept the death, But the mind is interested in association; but it does not want disassociation. The mind which is willing to have growth; but cannot accept decay or death, Such a mind is an immature mind. So Arjuna is able to accept everything in Viśva-rūpa and when he sees his own kith and kin; dying by the law of creation; he is not able to swallow that; and therefore he says: I do not want this Viśva-rūpa; and therefore he requested Lord Kṛṣṇa; please withdraw the Viśva-rūpa and I would like to have ēka rūpa Krishnaḥ only; and Kṛṣṇa also accepts that; and Kṛṣṇa shows the good old Kṛṣṇa rūpam; saumya rūpam to Arjuna; and that is being reported by Sañjaya to Dṛtharāṣṭra; which verse we are seeing now.

इत्यर्जुनं वासुदेवस्तथोक्त्वा
स्वकं रूपं दर्शयामास भूयः |
आश्वासयामास च भीतमेनं
भूत्वा पुनः सौम्यवपुर्महात्मा || ११- ५० ||

[Ityarjunam vāsudēvastathōktvā svakaṁ rūpaṁ darśayāmāsa bhūyaḥ |
āśvāsayāmāsa ca bhītamēnam
bhūtvā punaḥ saumyavapurmahātmā || 11.50 ||](#)

Mahātma means Viśva-rūpa Īśvaraḥ; anēka rūpa Īśvaraḥ. He became saumya vapuḥ; ēka rūpa Īśvaraḥ He becomes and thus consoled Arjuna; Arjuna do not worry; I will not impose Viśva-rūpa darśanam on you. Up to this we saw.

But we have to understand the significance of this verse; what does Kṛṣṇa means by withdrawal of Viśva-rūpa? As I said in the last class; Viśva-rūpa cannot be withdrawn physically because, Viśva-rūpam means the very world itself as Īśvaraḥ; so if Viśva-rūpa ḥ is to be withdrawn; it means the world itself has to be withdrawn; which means praḷayaṁ should come; but that is not possible.

Therefore what do you mean by withdrawal of Viśva-rūpa darśanam? It is nothing but removal of the Divya cakṣuḥ; which Lord Kṛṣṇa blessed Arjuna with. That divya cakṣuḥ; taking away alone is withdrawal of Viśva-rūpa m;

What do you mean by taking away the divya-cakṣuḥ? I said divya cakṣuḥ means a freedom from ahaṁkāra and mama-kāra. As long as I have got ahaṁkāra and mama-kāra, my mind will be preoccupied with small little things; that I will not be able to enjoy the Viśva-rūpa Īśvaraḥ. Therefore ahaṁkāra and mama-kāra is obstacle to Viśva-rūpa darśanam; and divya cakṣuḥ is freedom from ahaṁkāra and mama-kāra. And withdrawal of divya cakṣuḥ is nothing but Arjuna getting back his own ahaṁkāra and mama-kāra.

And I gave you the example; that is the nice example. That when you have a got a camera and a friend is standing and behind a beautiful scenery is there; you can focus upon only one thing; when you focus the person, the background scenery; that is Viśva-rūpa; that is gone. On the other hand if you focus the scenery; naturally, the friend is out of focus. Similarly, as long as you have strong ahaṁkāra and mama-kāra; your mind will be preoccupied with that private personal world only; that Bhagavān public world will not be available. Even though you are in the beach; wonderful ocean is there; stars are there; moon is there; Viśva-rūpa is in front; but you will be preoccupied with your family problem or eating வேர்கடலை; peanut. So preoccupation with வேர்கடலை peanut is ahaṁkāra -mama kāra and you miss the beautiful ocean which is Viśva-rūpa and therefore Arjuna got back his petty little mind; which means he lost this beautiful universe from his sight. That is how it has to be understood.

अर्जुन उवाच --

दृष्ट्वेदं मानुषं रूपं तव सौम्यं जनार्दन ।

इदानीमस्मि संवृत्तः सचेताः प्रकृतिं गतः ॥ ११.५१ ॥

Arjuna uvāca

dr̥ṣṭvēdaṁ mānuṣaṁ rūpaṁ tava saumyaṁ janārdana |

idānīmasmi saṁvṛttaḥ sacētāḥ prakṛtiṁ gataḥ || 11.51 ||

अर्जुन उवाच Arjuna uvāca Arjuna said - जनार्दन janārdana Oh Kṛṣṇa! दृष्ट्वा dr̥ṣṭvā seeing, इदं सौम्यम् idaṁ saumyam this pleasing मानुषं रूपम् mānuṣaṁ rūpaṁ human form, तव tava of yours, अस्मि इदानीम् asmi idānīm I have now संवृत्तः saṁvṛttaḥ become, सचेताः sacētāḥ peaceful गतः gataḥ I have come, प्रकृतिम् prakṛtim to normalcy.

51. Arjuna said - oh Kṛṣṇa ! Seeing this pleasing human form of yours, I have now become peaceful, I have come to normalcy.

So when Arjuna got back his own ahaṁkāra -mama kāra and naturally he missed the Viśva-rūpa beauty of the Lord. Of course for him it is not a beauty but a terrible thing. Now he looks at Kṛṣṇa as personal God; from Anēkarūpa bhakthi He comes back to ēkarūpa bhakthi.

From this it is very clear; for anēkarūpa bhakthi; my mind has to become mature; otherwise anēka rūpa bhakthi will be a frightening thing. It will not be enjoyable at all. When anēka rūpa bhakthi itself is frightening; then what to talk of arūpa; for an immature mind; arūpam brahma will not appeal at all. Nirguṇam Brahmam will not appeal at all; சப்புன்னு இருக்குனு சொல்லுவா. It will be chapp; when the food is without kāram and salt; you say it is chapp; like that, Who wants that nirguṇam Brahma? which does not have śabda sparśa rūpa rasa and gandha; nothing is there; So when the mind is immature; anēkarūpa bhakthi also will not appeal; arūpa bhakthi also will not appeal; it does not matter; better we confine to ēkarūpa.

And therefore Arjuna says; Hē Kṛṣṇa I love this God only; Hē janārdana; Hē Kṛṣṇa; Literally the word Janārdana means the tormenting one; the one who hurts. So janān ardhayati iti janārdanaḥ. So here Arjuna is addressing that way because he now only saw a Kṛṣṇa who was eating everyone; tormenting everyone; and that is why he got frightened also; Hē janārdana; I do not want the tormenting form of yours; I want saumya vapuḥ; saumyam rūpam dṛṣṭva; pleasing form is mānuṣam rūpam; which is human form; adharam madhuram; vadanam madhuram; nayanam madhuram; hasitham madhuram; if I see that, I am at home.

Idānīm asmi saṁvṛttaḥ I have come back to my normal state of mind. Sacētāḥ; I have got back my mind; so previously, my mind was stunned by the vision of Viśva-rūpa; that I had lost my mind; now only I have got back my mind; sacētāḥ; cētāḥ means mind; sacētāḥ; I have got back my mind as it were.

And prakṛtim gataḥ; now I am my natural self; I am at home; I am normal, seeing the ēkarūpa Īśvaraḥ.

Verse 11.52

श्रीभगवानुवाच --

सुदुर्दर्शमिदं रूपं दृष्टवानसि यन्मम ।

देवा अप्यस्य रूपस्य नित्यं दर्शनकाङ्क्षिणः ॥११.५२॥

Śrī Bhagavān uvāca

sudurdarśamidaṁ rūpaṁ dṛṣṭvānasi yanmama|

dēvā apyasya rūpasya nityaṁ darśanakāṅkṣiṇaḥ||11.52||

श्री भगवान् उवाच Śrī Bhagavān uvāca The Lord said –इदं रूपम् idam rūpam this form मम mama of mine यद दृष्टवान् असि yada dṛṣṭvān asi which you have seen सुदुर्दर्शम् sudurdarśam is very difficult to see, अपि देवाः api dēvāḥ even gods, नित्यं दर्शनकाङ्क्षिणः nityaṁ darśanakāṅkṣiṇaḥ are always craving for the vision अस्य रूपस्य asya rūpasya of this form

52. The Lord said – This form of Mine which you have seen is very difficult to see. Even Gods are always craving for the vision of this form.

Now Lord Kṛṣṇa winds up by glorifying the Viśva-rūpa darśanam. Even though Arjuna was happy about Viśva-rūpa. Kṛṣṇa says: Hey Arjuna what you got was very very rare thing; idam rūpam sudurdarśam. So this form means Viśva-rūpa; anēkarūpam; yada asi yanmama; which you saw just now; not because you deserve it; not because you are fully qualified; but because of my grace and your surrender; I gave you this darśanam; which is sudarśanam; which is extremely difficult; so sudarśanam; which is extremely difficult to have this darśanam; why it is extremely difficult?

dēvā apyasya rūpasya nityam darśanakāṅkṣiṇaḥ; even Gods are eagerly craving for getting this Viśva-rūpa darśanam; anēkarūpa darśanam; when it is rarely available for Gods themselves; what to talk of ordinary human-beings and therefore it is a glorious thing; and devāḥ asya rūpasya; in asya Viśva-rūpasya.

darśanakāṅkṣiṇaḥ; they are eagerly waiting.

nityam, regularly praying for that, and I have not given them; I have chosen you for giving this darśanam.

Verse 11.53

नाहं वेदैर्न तपसा न दानेन न चेज्यया ।
शक्य एवंविधो द्रष्टुं दृष्टवानसि मां यथा ॥ ११.५३ ॥

nāhaṁ vēdairna tapasā na dānēna na cējyayā |
śakya ēvaṁvidhō draṣṭuṁ drṣṭavānasi mām yathā || 11.53 ||

नाहं वेदैः nāhaṁ vēdaiḥ neither by the study of Vēdas न तपसा na tapasā nor by austerity न दानेन na dānēna nor by charity न च इज्यया na ca ijyayā nor by worship शक्यः अहं द्रष्टुम् śakyaḥ ahaṁ draṣṭuṁ can I be seen एवंविधः ēvaṁ vidhaḥ in this form यथा दृष्टवान् असि yathā drṣṭvān asi as you have seen माम् mām Me.

53. Neither by the study of the Vēdas, nor by austerity, nor by charity, nor by worship can I be seen in this form as you have seen Me.

In the previous verse Lord Kṛṣṇa said that Viśva-rūpa darśanam is a rare rare thing. So naturally the question would come, if it is a very rare thing what is the means of getting the Viśva-rūpa darśanam? Because even dēvās has not been able to get that; then what is the means of getting Viśva-rūpa darśanam?; and Kṛṣṇa wants to give the means, Viśva-rūpa darśana sādhanām; He wants to give in these two verses; 53 and 54.

And the means that Lord Kṛṣṇa wants to mention is bhakthi. So eagerness, a sincere desire or craving, called thīvra bhakthi is the sādhanam; for Viśva-rūpa darśanam; and Kṛṣṇa wants to glorify this thīvra bhakthi; and as I said in the other day, in the scriptures to glorify one sādhanā, they put down all other sādhanā. But we should be very careful; not that the other sādhanās are inferior; they are all equally important; and extremely important; but focus one sādhanā, the other sādhanās are ninditham; and what is that nyāya called, nahi nindha nyāyaḥ; so literally it is not bringing down; but this is to be focused.

And therefore in this verse, Kṛṣṇa is saying all the other sādhanās are inferior; of no consequence at all; bhakthi alone is the most important sādhanā.

And what are the other sādhanās mentioned here? vēdaiḥ ēvaṁ vidhaḥ ahaṁ draṣṭum na śakyaḥ; even if you are a great vēdic scholar; and even if you can chant the entire vēdaḥ; and you can even be a jata vallabhaḥ ghanapadi; even if such a great vēdic scholar, that will not give you Viśva-rūpa darśanam.

So ēvaṁ vidhaḥ ahaṁ; Viśva-rūpaḥ aham; Viśva-rūpa darśanam is not possible even by Vēda adyayanam; then ēvam vidhaḥ ahaṁ draṣṭum na śakyaḥ; so you have to add to each one;

Tapasa ēvaṁ vidhaḥ ahaṁ draṣṭum na śakyaḥ. Even you practice elaborate and intense tapas; all types of vṛtham; austerities and practices, even through tapas one cannot get Viśva-rūpa darśanam.

Vēdas will not help you; tapas will not help you.

But we should remember; if you are doing any such things; it does not mean that you have to drop all of them; as I said it is not meant for dropping; by glorifying something else.

Then na dānēna; here one has to be careful; dānēna ēvam vidhaḥ ahaṁ draṣṭum na śakyaḥ. By charity also Viśva-rūpa darśanam cannot be attained. This we will note very well. Bhagavān has said charity is useless; that is only the reason why I am not giving at all from the beginning; already giving is a problem; these lines can mislead; be very careful; charity is also important.

In Bṛhadaraṇyaka; tam ēdam vēdanu dānēna; yajñēna, dānēna, tapasa; in Śikṣvalli also it is said; śraddhayā dēyam | aśraddhayā: 'dēyam, etc. Dānam is important but in this context, it is put down.

Then na ca ijayā; so the next one; ijayā means yajña; rituals; even by performing rituals one cannot have Viśva-rūpa darśanam; that is also an inferior sādhanā only and such a rare Viśva-rūpa; which cannot be attained even through all these sādhanās; such a rare Viśva-rūpa Arjuna you got; and the irony is what? You wanted it back. So śakyaḥ ēvaṁ vidhō ahaṁ draṣṭum; Viśva-rūpa ḥ, please remember; இப்பேர்ப்பு; Like this, means Viśva-rūpa; dṛṣṭvān asi yathā mām; as you had seen me; just a few minutes before; such a Viśva-rūpa cannot be attained easily. So if all these sādhanās cannot help; now the question is which sādhanā will really help; which will be said in the next verse; we will see.

भक्त्या त्वनन्यया शक्यः अहमेवंविधोऽर्जुन ।
ज्ञातुं द्रष्टुं च तत्त्वेन प्रवेष्टुं च परन्तप ॥ ११.५४ ॥

bhaktiā tvananyayā śakyam ahamēvaṁvidhō'rjuna |
jñātuṁ draṣṭuṁ ca tattvēna pravēṣṭuṁ ca parantapa || 11.54 ||

54. Oh Arjuna! However, by undivided devotion I can be seen in this form, known truly, and merged into Oh Arjuna!

So here Kṛṣṇa gives the means of Viśva-rūpa darśanam; and that means is bhakthi alone; bhakthi means devotion or love for the Lord. Now the question comes what type of bhakthi is indicated here?

So Kṛṣṇa adds an adjective ananya bhaktiā ēvaṁ draṣṭuṁ śakya; not ordinary bhakthi but ananya bhakthiḥ. So now the question is what is ananya bhakthiḥ; you have to go back to the 7th chapter of the Gītā; where we have talked about four levels of bhakthi; ārtah; artarthi; jijñāsuḥ; and jñāni; which can be reduced into three levels; So this four levels can be understood in three levels; ārtah and ārtarthi is one level; jijñāsu is another level; jñāni is the third and final level.

So what are these three levels? I hope you remember; I will remind you in this context; initially, our devotion to Lord is only for the benefit of worldly goals; which is otherwise called sakama bhakthi; I am devoted to the Lord; I go to the temple; I do pūja; everything I do; but I use Īśvara as a sādhanā; only as a means for the sake of worldly ends. Which means if I get such and such thing done, then I will do this to you; this is called business bhakthi; purely commercial bhakthi. You do this and for You I will do that. There also we are very intelligent; we will not do that in the beginning; I will just keep one rupee as a token; that means what; I am not even willing to trust God. You do that; and after that only I will do; and that too what? We offer the cheapest thing that we have; our hair; or something like that; no cost at all; we will only become lighter; So this is called business bhakthi; sakāma-bhakthi where God is the means worldly things are the ends.

And once a person practices this bhakthi for some time, even though it is a sakama bhakthi there is some bhakthi; it is better than no bhakthi; sakāma-bhakthi is certainly better than no bhakthi at all; and because of his bhakthi; the mind gets purer and purer and then he begins to understand that it is better to have God; not as a means, but as the end itself. Because he has become mature enough to understand that everything in the world has got the threefold dōṣa.

So you remember what we have seen in the Upaniṣad class; What are the three fold dōṣa.

Duḥkha misritattvam; everything in the creation is mixed with pain also.

the athriphthi karathvam; whatever get I will never get total fulfillment; I will seek more and more only;

and finally bandhakathvam; and I will only get only addicted to them; I will be only enslaved by them.

So this dōṣa or defect of the worldly finite things I understand; and I know that God is the only reliable one; which is free from all these three dōṣas.

शश्वन् नश्वरमेव विश्वमखिलम्
निश्चित्य वाचा गुरोर् ।
नित्यम् ब्रह्म निरन्तरम् त्रिभिःशता, निर्व्याजं शान्तात्मना ॥

śāśvan naśvaramēva viśvamakhilam
niśchitya vācā gurōr | nityam brahma nirantaram vrimriśatā, nirvyāja śāntātmanā ||

I get nithya-anithya vivēkaḥ. So jagat is anityam; Īśvara alone is śāsvatham; therefore reliable.

And therefore once this vivēka comes to me; the direction changes; instead of looking upon the world as the end; and God as means; it is reversed; the world becomes means; all the activities become means; even gṛhastha aśrama becomes means; all the people coming and going also becomes means; the only end is what? Īśvaraḥ; becomes the end, which in vēdānta language we call brahman; in the religious language we call Īśvaraḥ.

Now Īśvaraḥ is sādhyam and world is sādānām; this is the second level of bhakthi; which Kṛṣṇa calls the jijñāsu bhakthi otherwise called mumukṣutva bhakthi; otherwise called ananya-bhakthi. If this ananya-bhakthi is there; then Viśva-rūpa darśanam is possible; and this will lead to the highest bhakthi; it is not mentioned here.

But to complete the discussion; what is the third and final level of bhakthi; it is a bhakthi in which God is neither the means nor the end; then what is God; it is neither sādānā or sādhyam; but it is I the siddha vastu itself. Because as long as I look upon God as the means or the end; Lord is different from me. So when I look upon Lord as sādhanā I am in Dvaitam; when I look upon God as goal; then also I am in dvaitam; in the third level; I come to advaitam; wherein God is neither the means nor the end; God is not destination; God is the traveller himself. God is not the sought; but the God is the very seeker himself. That is the final stage; that we need not see now; here we are talking about ananya bhakthi; where God is the goal itself.

Therefore ananyaya bhakthya; ahaṁ ēvaṁ vidha draṣṭum śakyaḥ. And this will lead to what; tatvēna jñātum śakya; and in due course, you will know the Lord in his real nature; and what is the real nature of God; is neither the sādhanā; or sādya; neither the means nor the end; but the Lord is I myself; aham brahmāsmi.

Tatvēna draṣṭum means advaita jñānam prāptum. A person can come to that; and through that jñānam pravistum ca śakya; and through this knowledge the devotee merges into the Lord; he becomes one with the Lord; the wisdom that the Lord is never different from me; the notion of division is removed. The removal of the notion of division is called merger; it is purely a cognitive process; there is no question of any change outwardly. All these are possible; To start with bhakthi; that is the idea; and that is summed up in the next and final verse of this chapter.

55. He who does works for Me, who is My devotee, who keeps Me as the supreme goal! who is free from attachment, and who is free from hatred towards all, reaches me, Oh Arjuna!

So this is a capsule verse. This is a seed verse, which will be expanded in the next chapter. It is the definition of bhakthi. So we will be seeing this elaborately in the next chapter; but however, here I will give you a bird's eye-view of the idea contained.

According to Kṛṣṇa, Bhakthi is not a particular sādhanā. Bhakthi is not a particular sādhanā; but it is the name of the entire range of spiritual-sādhanās. It is not one sādhanā;

but it is the common name for the entire range of spiritual-sādhānās which will take a person to mōkṣa. And the entire range of spiritual-sādhāna is broadly divided into three in the śāstrās; which Kṛṣṇa will divide into five in the next chapter. The vēdās it is divided into three; in the 12th chapter, it will be divided into 5. That five we will see in the next chapter, because if I tell now; it will leave me with nothing in that Chapter to tell you. So I will present you the three levels.

The first level of sādhāna is called karma-lakṣaṇa bhakthi; bhakthi which is in the form of karma-yōgā. Bhakthi which is expressed in the form of karma-yōgā; How can you call karma-yōgā as an expression of bhakthi? Because karma-yōgā is only karma; karma-yōgā is only a form of karma. How can it be bhakthi? If you ask, Kṛṣṇa's answer is Karma-yōgā can be called bhakthi; because karma-yōgā requires intense bhakthi to the Lord. Without devotion to the Lord; karma-yōgā is impossible; and therefore karma-yōgā is a form of bhakthi.

Then the next question is how do you say that karma-yōgā involves bhakthi? All these we have seen before; I am just putting them together; because karma-yōgā involves two stages. In the first stage I am a kartha; as a kartā I am doing various actions; And whatever actions I do, they will be converted into karma-phalam; and this karma-phalam, I have to necessarily receive and when I am receiving the karma-phalam; I become a bhoktā. Karma kartā I am initially; phala bhoktā I am later. And the phalam can be anything; favourable result; unfavourable result; terrible result; disappointing result; anytime of phalam is possible.

Now in karma-yōgā most important thing is a kartā; karma kartā; I have to dedicate all actions at the feet of the Lord by a saṅkalpa; Sankalpa means a thought; mamōpātha samastha duritha kṣaya dvāra sri paramēśvara prīthyartham; aham idam karma kariṣyē; I need not all the time keep the hand joined like this. That is only the thought you have to have in the background; it is in the mind. Therefore as a Kartā I have to dedicate all the karmās to Īśvaraḥ; This is called Īśvarārpaṇa bhāvana; and Īśvarārpaṇa bhāvana requires what? Bhakthi; and these karma phalas are going to come tomorrow; tomorrow means in the future. They are going produce the phalam and I have to pay through my nose, I have to face the music; In fact; every experience you get in life; is your own karma-phalam; including the mosquito bite; if there are mosquitoes and it is biting you. That is also what karma-phalam only; Every experience is what? Karma-phalaṁ. So when I receive the karma-phalam, the bitterest to the happy experience, I have to accept without resistance; as what; Īśvara prasāda bhāvanaya. As a kartā I have got Īśvarārpaṇa bhāvana; as a bhoktā means what? The enjoyer of the result; I have got the Īśvara prasāda bhāvana; And because of this bhāvana; karma-yōgā becomes what? A form of bhakthi;

And once I follow this karma-yōgā sufficiently, I may graduate to the next level of sādhanā; which is called upāsana rūpa bhakthiḥ; bhakthi in the form of meditation or dhyānam. And why this level of bhakthi is required? This is required because a karma-yōgi is always extrovert; because he is all the time a kartā, a bhōktā. Therefore he is interacting with the world all the time. Therefore his mind is extrovert, whereas as a vēdāntic seeker; ultimately he has to discover the Lord; not outside; but the Lord has to be and can be discovered only in ourselves. In Taittiriya Upaniṣad, we are going to see that: satyam jñānam anandam brahmā, yō vēda nihitam guhāyām paramēvyōman.

So the real God is not outside; the real God is in my own heart; so an extrovert mind can never discover the real God. And therefore one has to convert the extrovert mind into an introvert or non-extrovert mind; that is the second level of sādhanā called upāsana lakṣaṇa bhakthi; That is also a form of bhakthi. And here I visualise the Lord within myself; so that I learn to turn my mind inward; śāntākāram bhujagaśayanam, padmanābham surēśam. When I chant I try to visualise the Lord within my mind itself; an extrovert mind cannot do that; śāntākāram before you chant, it will go somewhere; Therefore we train the mind; there also ēkarūpa Īśvaraḥ; anēkarūpa Īśvaraḥ, etc. but the main idea of upāsana gives what? turning the mind inward; this is called upāsana lakṣaṇa bhakthi.

And then comes the final stage; called jñāna lakṣaṇa bhakthiḥ; which is the study of scriptures to discover the real nature of God; which is called vēdānta vicharaḥ; which is called jñāna yōgāḥ; and that is also a form of bhakthi only; That is why it is called jñāna-yajñā; all the Gīta discourses; Swami Chinmayānanda named Gīta Jñāna Yajñā; which means study of scriptures also is a form of pūja only. For what you are doing now is what; form of pūja; a form of bhakthi only. So thus karma lakṣaṇa bhakthi; upāsana lakṣaṇa bhakthi; jñāna lakṣaṇa bhakthi; bhakthi in these three fold form; a person has to practice and ultimately become one with the Lord.

These three stages Kṛṣṇa will present in the next chapter. Karma lakṣaṇa bhakthi itself He divides into two; Upāsana itself He divides into two; jñāna one; 2+2+1; five is going to come. This is trailer. Like the TV and movies; so the next week what will be there; like that முன்னோட்டம்; a trailer Lord Kṛṣṇa is presenting here.

Therefore Bhakthi Yōgā is not a particular sādhanā; but it is karma plus upāsana; plus jñānam. Therefore He says: matkarmakṛt bhava; Hē Arjuna, first become a karma-yōgi; as a kartā whatever you do.

यत् यत् कर्म करोति तत् तत् अकिलम्, संभो तवाराधनम् |

yat yat karma karōti tat tat akilam, sambho tavārādhanam |

कायेन वाचा मनसा इन्द्रियैर् वा, नारायणयेति समर्पयामि |

kāyēna vācā manasā indriyair vā, nārāyaṇayēti samarpayāmi ||

Need not be religious action whether it is secular or sacred; everything you dedicate; and as a bhoktā; never protest; whatever comes welcome. All these in the 2nd and third chapter, siddhyasiddhyōḥ samō bhūtvā samatvaṃ yōga ucyatē; with a mental balance accepting all the experiences in life; is karma-yōgā rupa bhakthi. May you follow that; matkarmakṛt bhāva.

And then madbhaktaḥ bhavaḥ. I am changing the order for the sake of convenience. Madbhaktaḥ bhavaḥ; may you become My devotee. That is slowly convert your goal as God himself; take your own time; initially nobody would choose God as the goal; or mōkṣa as goal; it is not there in the list at all; and even if it is in the list; it is the last item; and we have got an excuse also; God can wait; because it is eternal; whereas the other things are important and immediate. Bhagavān says does not matter; and therefore initially you might have worldly desires; fulfil them; of course legitimately, enjoy them also; and understand their limitations and gradually convert your goal from artha kāma to mōkṣa. From prēyas to srēyas; let your goal become; so madbhaktaḥ bhavaḥ; thīvra mumukṣu bhavaḥ; be a desirer of mōkṣa. Seek the eternal not the ephemeral. So the reliable and not the unreliable object. Remember the cardboard chair; cardboard chair, a chair made out of cardboard and it is well decorated; it is wonderful; you can keep it in bomma kolu and showcase and all. You can do everything except one; what is that? Do not sit over that; already you are 95 kgs. What will happen if I sit; உக்காந்து பாடு; மண்டை உடயும்; mandai udayum.

Similarly the entire world is a cardboard chair; because it is subject time; therefore perishable. Therefore do not lean upon the perishable world; if at all you want to learn; do not lean on anyone; but if at all you want to lean; learn to lean upon God. I have told you before: World dependence to God dependence and discover God within yourselves and then it becomes Self-dependence. Therefore madbhaktaḥ bhavaḥ; gradually learn to depend on God and if anybody asks what is your security; never name any local ones; if anybody asks what is security; only say

तेषां नित्याभियुक्तानां योगक्षेमं वहाम्यहम् || ९- २२ ||

ananyāścintayantō māṃ yē janāḥ paryupāsatē |

tēṣāṃ nityābhīyuktānāṃ yōgākṣēmaṃ vahāmyaham || 9.22 ||

Train your mind all the time by saying: My support is God; the people are around me; therefore I will interact them; I will help them; I will do everything; but for my leaning, security and support, I want only rely upon God. So therefore; mat bhakthaḥ bhava;

And then matparamaḥ bhava; gradually become a thīvra mumukṣu; mōkṣa must be the only goal; it is not one of the goals; it is the only goal; and any other thing that I seek also should be only a means for that end alone; whether I earn money; whether I work somewhere; whatever I do; they are all means for that; mat paramaḥ bhava means become a thīvra mumukṣu. In short; sādhanā catuṣṭaya sampannāḥ bhava.

And then saṅgavarjitaḥ; And as you learn to lean and depend more and more on higher things; then your attachment to other things will gradually drop; as we grow as children; we have used so many toys; and we were so much attached to toy. And one toy is taken by the neighbours child and we scream a balloon or a toy; What about now? We have got higher attachments; so previously it was ordinary biscuit; now gold biscuit; but different biscuit. So when I have got higher attachment, the lower attachment gradually dented. If for the birthday today somebody presents a balloon; you are not going to be enamoured by that. Similarly, your desire for mōkṣa should swallow all the other desires;

And therefore saṅgavarjitaḥ bhava; be detached from all the other perishable things; which is rāga rāhitatvam.

And Kṛṣṇa warns here; nirvairaḥ sarvabhūtēṣu; freedom from rāga does not mean development of dvēṣa. So hatred of the world is not prescribed; hatred of family members is not prescribed; no rāga also; no dvēṣa also; so sarva bhūtēṣu; with regard to every being; human being, animals; plants everything; nirvairaḥ; freedom from enmity or dvēṣa. In short rāga dvēṣa athithatvam is maturity. So real maturity is udāsina bhāvana; it is called uadāsīnyam; neither rāga nor dvēṣa;

And what is freedom from rāga and dvēṣa; how to know that? The presence also should not make a difference; absence also should not make a difference; such a state of mind is called rāga dvēṣa athitvatvam; which is otherwise called vairāgyam. So in short develop vivēka; develop vairāgyam; develop mumukṣatvam; that is real bhakthi.

And if you have got all these things; sa māmēti pāṇḍava; such a person will certainly attain Me because I will provide him with all the necessary conditions to attain mōkṣa.

Developing sādhanā catuṣṭaya sampathi alone is the aim of the sādhanā; the rest of the things have to take place by God's grace only; because to get jñānam, I require Guru; and I never know who is a guru; because Guru is one who has got jñānam; Whether a person has got jñānam or not how do I know? So therefore, a blind man can never know; whether another person is blind or not. Therefore an ajñāni can never find who is a jñāni. Therefore if I develop sādhanā catuṣṭaya sampathi; Bhagavān says I will send you a guru. For that I have got a department; if you want a security man, they will send. Similarly Bhagavān has got a guru department; when a person gets ready he will send a guru; and such a person will ultimately get guru; jñānam and mōkṣa; sa māmēti pāṇḍava; he becomes one with Me; so this is the capsule slōkā; this will be elaborated in the 12th chapter, which will be titled bhakthi yōgāḥ.

Hari Om.

So the eleventh chapter of the Gīta is over which is titled Viśva-rūpa darśana yōgāḥ.

154 Chapter 11, Summary

I will give you a summary of the 11th chapter, Viśva-rūpa darśana yōgāḥ. The significance of this chapter can be fully grasped only if a person has the background of the previous chapters of the Gīta; especially from the 7th chapter up to the 10th chapter, because this chapter is a development based on the foundation of the previous four chapters.

In those four chapters, Lord Kṛṣṇa has talked about Īśvaraḥ svarūpam very elaborately; the definition and the nature of God. And therein Kṛṣṇa has mentioned that the definition of God is Īśvaraḥ jagat kāraṇam; God is the cause of the universe. Naturally the question comes what type of cause is God, because we know that the cause is two-fold, the intelligent-cause and the other is the material-cause out of which an effect is born? Just as a carpenter is the intelligent-cause of the furniture; and the wood is the material-cause of the furniture; and any product requires both the intelligent as well as the material causes. So naturally our question will be: God is which type of cause? And Kṛṣṇa has pointed out; God is both the intelligent as well as the material-cause of the universe. In Sānskrīt we say abinna nimitha upādāna kāraṇam Īśvaraḥ.

Of these two causes, we focus upon one cause, that is the material-cause aspect in these four chapters; and when we focus on these material-cause aspect, we come to know that the material-cause alone modifies or transforms to become various defects. Of course blessed by backed by the intelligent-cause, the material-cause alone manifests as manifold effect; which we clearly see in day-to-day experiences. One gold alone evolves or manifests into varieties of ornaments; one would alone becomes varieties of furniture. Thus we find that cause alone manifests in the form of effect. In fact there is no effect at all separate from the material cause.

So svarṇa vyathiriktha abharaṇani na sandhi; there are no ornaments separate from gold; there are no furniture separate from wood; there are no products separate from the material-cause.

To put in another language; one material-cause alone appears as manifold effect, by assuming different names and forms. Thus behind all the names and forms of the product, there is only one material-cause. So behind bangle name and form; chain name and form; ring name and form; what I am experiencing is the material-cause, the gold alone. That means if I should have the darśanam of gold; I need not separately attempt; when I am seeing the ornaments; I am seeing the causal gold alone. I need not dismiss the ornaments; and separately work for the darśanam of the gold. All these are ornaments only; I am fed with seeing the ornaments; though it will not happen to us; at least imagine as such; and tired of ornaments; I am interested in gold darśanam; and I will close my eyes and turn away from the ornaments and meditate for svarṇa darśanam, if anyone says like that; what an அச்சு பிச்சு; idiot he must be. When you are seeing the ornaments, you are directly in contact with the material-cause alone, with varieties of nāma rūpa.

Therefore kārya darśanam is essentially the material kāraṇa darśanam only. This is a very very important fact which we should remember when we see these four chapters. And Lord Kṛṣṇa applies this principle and points out, Hē Arjuna! I am the material-cause of the creation; not a few ornaments or a few furniture; I am the material-cause of this whole universe, consisting of parā and aparā-prakṛti; I do not know whether you remember; if you remember, it is very good; or it does not matter; para prakṛti yukta Īśvaraḥ ēva this universe. Which means what? The universe is nothing but God evolved with different nāma and rūpa.

Therefore Īśvarasya avastha bēdaḥ ēva prapañca; one gold which is called gold in the kāraṇa avastha; avastha means condition, the very same gold is called ornaments in the kārya avastha. So kāraṇam and kāryam are one and the same material only; one is with potential nāma and rūpa; whereas the kāryam is with the manifest nāma and rūpa.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa wants to say that Īśvaraḥ and the world can never be different; when all the names and forms are resolved; like resolving the ornaments; what obtains is called avyaktha nāma and rūpa; we called Īśvaraḥ and when the very same Īśvaraḥ available with evolved nāma rūpa that is called prapañcaḥ. So Īśvaraḥ ēva prapañcaḥ; prapañcaḥ ha ēva Īśvaraḥ; which means there is no difference between prapañcaḥ darśanam and Īśvaraḥ darśanam. Therefore whenever I am looking at the universe, I am only looking at the Lord with infinite varieties of nāma rūpa. In short, the world is the very embodiment of the Lord.

If I do not have this understanding; I will call it the world. But if I have the understanding, I will call it as the form or the embodiment of Īśvaraḥ. When I look at the world as the embodiment of Īśvaraḥ; it is called Viśva-rūpa darśanam; when I look at the very world, not a new extraordinary object but the very same ordinary universe itself when I look upon as the embodiment of the Lord; as the very body of the Lord; that new perception based on the new understanding; that understanding is called the divya cakṣuḥ; based on this new understanding; when I have got a new attitude towards the ordinary universe; that new attitude is extra-ordinary attitude; the world is the ordinary world; but we are developing an extra ordinary attitude born out of understanding. And what is the new attitude? This which I thought to be world, is nothing but Īśvarasya śarīram; Viśva ēva rūpam śarīram yasya; and therefore Viśva-rūpa darśanam is not an extra-ordinary-object; but an extra-ordinary-attitude towards an ordinary regularly available universe.

And this is not unknown to us; very many ordinary things, when it is associated with some great people or great place, that very same ordinary thing becomes extraordinary. I have told you before, when you get laddu, you see it as an embodiment of sugar; especially if you have got sugar problem; and you are not going to have respect for laddu. Then you even reject and somebody says; this is Tirūpati laddu. Now you have got a new understanding; and therefore a new attitude also; because you happy to be a Bālaji baktha; that also should be there. If you call an African tribal and say Tirupati; he will ask what Patti; he will not have an extra ordinary attitude; because he does not know the value of Bālaji.

Therefore when I take the very same laddu and put it into my eyes; that means what; it is not a physical appreciation; it is a non-physical value; which can never be understand by chemical analysis or physical analysis; the laddu will be the same; but the appreciation, the extra value is not the physical but it is the attitudinal born out of understanding.

This attitude born out of understanding is called divya-cakṣuḥ. Imagine you meet a friend and say that I have got something extremely valuable I would like to show and he takes to some room inside and then he brings some objects; and it is covered in several pieces of cloth. And he opens it up very carefully and then he says; and I got it for 5 million rupees and you see that it is a broken Gītar; a broken Gītar; pop music instrument; and this person says, this is Harrison's guitar.

So Swamiji should be up to date! Always Bālaji Bālaji if I say, you people will not come 😊. Now here itself many people wonder; who is this Harrison who is brought in now; because many of our students are in vēdāntic plane and they do not read newspapers and all!!; And I am the one regularly reading newspapers and all; and I regularly ask the question, who is this blessed Harrison; he is a Beatle it was said; OK that it still worse! 😞 😊; only in school I have learned about it etc. So therefore as long as I do not know what Beatle means, what Harrison means, this is a piece of broken wood which is not worth 5 and half rupees; but this person pays Rs.5 million rupees and buys.

Now tell me what is this extra ordinary value; it is for that person, because behind the physical wood, which does not have any value; he sees that this has the association with one of the Beatles; and there was a time when the whole world, not India perhaps, was going crazy. If people were asked, you want to see God; not present movie stars; you want to see God or the cinema actor, they used to fall for the cinema actor; they used to fall these Beatles; now what is the difference of my perception of this guitar and the other person's perception; that person has got divya cakṣuḥ.

In this context, I should not use that word; but within quotes, for the sake of understanding. When he looks at that ordinary object, through the physical eye, he has got an extraordinary attitude, because he sees the value of the person behind. Similarly some Bradman's bat or Tendulkar's bat; somebody else's chappal/ somebody else's teeth; and the tooth of buddha (I think it is in Sri Lanka); the hair of Prophet etc. But we say that if we touch the hair, it is asoucham; we have to take bath; but that is very carefully preserved.

And therefore we should remember appreciation is two-fold, one is physical and the other is attitudinal; attitudinal appreciation comes out of training and understanding; I should have been the fan of that Beatle for several years; then alone I can appreciate the value of the Gīta; I should know all the exploits of Tendulkar; I should have been a parama bhaktha; knowing all the statistics; how many centuries; how many runs; how many catches behind the wickets; all these statistics are there; If I study all that and if I become a bhaktha; then an ordinary bat associated with him will have an extraordinary value.

Extending this to this universe; this universe is also something ordinary because we have been contacting it all the time; I should have bhakthi for Īśvaraḥ first; which requires lot of training and having developed bhakthi for the Lord; later I should be able to associate this universe as the embodiment associated with Īśvaraḥ. Then appreciation of Īśvaraḥ should be there and understanding that this world is connected with Īśvaraḥ and therefore the world is also not 5 million rupees worth or 5 billions rupees worth it is something immeasurable and it is extraordinarily divine.

It requires tremendous intellectual drill and mental refinement because we are not seeing anything new but we are seeing something old with a new attitude. And only then Viśva-rūpa darśanam can be understood properly and that is why Kṛṣṇa gives four chapters of training and then in the 11th chapter we get the culmination; this is the background we have to keep in mind.

And then coming to the text proper, the first eight verses happens to be the introductory verses, wherein Arjuna asks the question: How can I get Viśva-rūpa darśanam. How can I get Viśva-rūpa darśanam? Is it possible for me to have Viśva-rūpa darśanam at all; or which Lord Kṛṣṇa answers; unfortunately or fortunately, Viśva-rūpa is not one of the forms of the Lord, if it is, then it is easier; He can come like this and smile and show the hand and bless etc. and then disappear. So therefore seeing a particular form as Īśvaraḥ is relatively easier but an attitudinal change by which I learn to see this world itself as Īśvaraḥ requires tremendous change and therefore Lord Kṛṣṇa says it is possible but it requires a special type of mind; and that attitude which I call divya cakṣuḥ; Kṛṣṇa says I will bless you with that attitudinal change. If you want to put in technical language; it is nothing but a mind free from ahaṁkāra and mama kāra. Because to have Viśva-rūpa darśanam, I should see everything as belonging to the Lord; nothing belongs to me; that nothing means me; all my relatives are really not my people, they all belong to Īśvaraḥ; and what about my house; Swamiji; that is mine alone; I have documental evidence. No, your house is also Bhagavān's. What about the body; tana mana dhana sab kuch terā; even the body is not yours; that also belongs to the Lord; only if you see everything as belonging to the Lord; it is Viśva-rūpa darśanam; if you have to see everything as belonging to the Lord; nothing should belong to you; which means I should be free from ahaṁkāra and mama kāra. This ahaṁkāra mama kāra rahitam manaḥ is the divya cakṣuḥ; Kṛṣṇa says I will bless you with,

Then what happens? There is this transformation in Arjuna's mind; and Arjuna is stunned by this; not a new form of the Lord; but the new appreciation of this viśva-rūpa. And when Arjuna is stunned and dumbfound, Sañjaya comes and gives a brief description from verse No.9 to 14; is Sañjaya's description of Viśva-rūpa, which means Sañjaya must have the divya cakṣuḥ. Either Kṛṣṇa must have blessed Sañjaya also or Sañjaya must have already such a mind; in fact, some commentators say the very word sañjaya itself means, the one who has won over; conquered the enemies of ahaṁkāra and mama kāra. That is why it is called Sañjaya; therefore he already has divya cakṣuḥ;

no problem; and therefore Sañjaya gives brief description of Viśva-rūpa darśanam from verse No.9 to 13 and what is Viśva-rūpa darśanam; and the Lord has hundreds of hands, thousands of legs; thousands of heads, stomachs, etc. and how should we understand; do not imagine that Kṛṣṇa came in front and thousands and hands hanging; thousands of legs hanging; I tell you that would be most horrible form; do not imagine; that is all OK for the picture; Viśva-rūpa picture you might have seen; so many heads stuck together; Do not imagine such an extraordinary figure of the Lord appearing before you; thousands of hands and legs means what; all the hands and legs of all the people previously I saw as belonging to You and I; now I see all of them as Bhagavān's only; that is why in the Rudram, towards the end it comes:

ayam me hasthaḥ Bhagavān. When I am looking at my hands, this is also the hand of the Lord only. So if my hands are Lord's hands; what about others; definitely others' also. Thus in this hall itself; sahasraśīrṣā puruṣaḥ sahasrākṣaḥ sahasrapāt. Such a description Sañjaya gives first and then Arjuna gives the description.

And we saw that Arjuna goes through three phases in the mind in his appreciation and the first stage of appreciation is given from verse No.15 to 22 wherein Arjuna is wonderstruck; because the creation is wonderful; but we do not appreciate it because we are all the time preoccupied with aham and mama. As they say, there is no time to stand and stare; especially after the channels have come; you have to see the discovery channel; national geography channel; every fish, every animal; every ant; every bee; the more you study; any scientists belonging to any branch is wonderstruck by the nature or creation; an entomologist who studies the insect is wonderstruck by every insect; which is what; Īśvaraḥ vibūthi; and they are doing research in the cobweb created by the spider; we get angry with that; and we brush aside; but they say that it is the most unique kind of thing which the scientists are not able to create; research is going; books and books are coming, regarding the uniqueness of the threat of that; thus any aspect you take; you are wonderstruck and if you are an Īśvaraḥ bhaktha that wonder belongs to Īśvaraḥ. In Australia some ants are there it seems; they can create an anthill which is temperature controlled; Even when the temperature outside is very high or very low; there is some kind or method of doing that; they do not know that temperature control is there; where did the ants go to study; what engineering did it study; inbuilt instinctive; thus anything you see; I tell you, you will be wonderstruck and what the scientists call wonder of nature; a bhaktha calls a wonder of Īśvaraḥ.

And that is why a vēdāntic person gets interested in all the sciences; whether it is astronomy; or whether it is biology or zoology or botany or thermodynamics or any science; because he sees all the sciences as revealing the glory of Īśvaraḥ as the wonderful universe. And this āścaryam is described beautifully from verse No.15 to 22.

And then comes from 23 to 30th verse. Arjuna sees the mouth of the Lord. So here also do not imagine Kṛṣṇa standing with a big mouth and all; that is also symbolic representation of kāla tatvam; So Vyāsācārya has used the language of symbolism also while describing Viśva-rūpa; and all the soldiers in both the armies they are going to die and the death is symbolically presented as the soldiers entering into the mouth of the Lord; which represents the kāla tatvam; swallowing everything; because kāla is sṛṣṭi kāraṇam; kāla is sthithi kāraṇam; kāla alone is laya kāraṇam; and that kāla is an aspect of Viśva-rūpa only; yamāya dharma rājāya; first nāmaskāra to him; yamāya dharma rājāya mṛthyavē ca anthakāyaca.

So that we are trained to be not to be afraid of maraṇam; when one says maraṇam; we think that it is amaṅgalam word and tell others not to utter it; it is not maṅgalam; maraṇam is also mahā maṅgalam for the next generation! OK; for us it is amaṅgalam; but unless we vacate, if everyone continues to stay what happens to the next generation.

So remember what is the so called amaṅgalam for us is the maṅgalam for the next generation and Arjuna also he could easily appreciate the maraṇam of all the people but the problem was what? Bhīṣma and Drōṇā. All these people are also dying. So if he had been totally free from ahamkāra and mamakāra, it would not have created the problem; but Arjuna is not totally free; because his divya cakṣuḥ is borrowed divya cakṣuḥ; borrowing is problem; it will not last longer; it is an artificial one like ripening any fruit artificially; it will not be tasty; similarly Arjuna has not ripened in the normal method; it is borrowed from the Lord; And therefore there was ahamkāra and mamakāra; Therefore he could easily say everyone born should die; that philosophy is well known; but everybody born should die except a few members around; நாம் இருவர்; நமக்கு இருவரோ ஒருவரோ; we two and ours two or one as the case may be; and therefore fear born out of ahamakāra and mamakāra Arjuna intensely experiences which is described very very pictorially by Vyāsācārya; by pointing out that they are entering the mouth and Bhagavān is biting them; one leg is bitten; means paralysis; patient is kidney failure or heart; or missing a beat; lub lub lub dub. So problem; or teeth are going away; all these things are what: Bhagavān biting and the tragedy is what; Bhagavān seems to enjoy.

bhāsastavōgrāḥ pratapanti viṣṇō || 11.30 ||

And therefore naturally when you have got strong ahaṁkāra mama kāra; you will get angry with the Lord; you will feel Lord is very cruel; he is not dayā sāgaraḥ; it is śuddha untruth; a person may turn even a nāsthika when suffering comes; So Arjuna also goes thru the problem and therefore he asks the question; Kṛṣṇa please tell me who are you; my picture of God is totally different; therefore tell me what exactly you are; and Kṛṣṇa answers that is the portion from verse No. 31 to 34; Arjuna question and Kṛṣṇa's answer; Kṛṣṇa says I am the kāla tatvam; especially the destructive kāla tatvam; in the battle field; if it has been what is the word; that maternity ward; then Bhagavān will say I am the creative kāla tatvam because we see children are always born; kāla tatvam; so in the battle field I am not certainly creative kāla tatvam but destructive kāla tatvam; And therefore Arjuna Viśva-rūpa darśanam involves accepting Bhagavān as sṛṣṭi; stithi and laya kāraṇam; all these three you should be able to accept and assimilate; that is called Viśva-rūpa darśanam.

And then he says nimitha māthram bhava; when you appreciate the totality; and appreciate the orderliness and harmony of the creation as an integral part of the Lord; you will use your freewill also in accordance with the universal harmony which is called dharma. Therefore when the freewill has alignment with dharma, the universal order; the Viśva-rūpa's order; that alignment is called surrender. So imagine there is an orchestra; and there are 20 violins or 30 violins; every violinist should play in keeping with the total sṛuti and tālam. If a person says that I want to show my individuality; if he plays in another sṛuti; then the whole orchestra is destroyed; I should do that; I should not make my individuality prominent or dominant; my individuality should be in alignment; that is called surrender; it is born out of wisdom; it is born out of understanding of the total harmony; which requires tremendous maturity and when maturity is there; the surrender is natural; just like if you know what is the sṛuti; you come and join the Gītā chanting; if you know what is the sṛuti; automatically you will chant in keeping with the sṛuti. Suppose you do not know what is sṛuti at all; toned deaf; sṛuti he does not understand; then that person would be apasṛuti; off-key; but if you know what is sṛuti; you will be incapable of violating the sṛuti; Even if you want to chant; you cannot do that; Similarly if my mind is trained to appreciate the total harmony; it is called dharma appreciation; I cannot go off dharma; I do have a freewill but my freewill is in alignment, This is called nimithamātratvam or śaraṇāgati; Viśva-rūpa darśanam makes śaraṅgati natural. Therefore Arjuna you also surrender; follow the dharma which means you have to kill all these people; it is in keeping with the requirement of dharma.

When this was taught Arjuna becomes little more wiser and then he goes to the next stage of appreciation of dharma; the Order; like appreciation of śṛuti; and naturally the surrender comes.

And that is given as the third stage from verse No.35 to 45 is the surrender which is purely a mental state; but this alignment of the freewill to dharma; how will I express physically; like expressing love or welcome. So it is mental; so I have to express physically by a smile; or by greeting or taking hand. Similarly, how do I express my attitude of surrender. In our tradition that is done in the form of nāmaskāra; So nāmaskāra is a natural event; which happens mentally to a mature mind; and therefore Arjuna also says nāmaḥ purastādatha pṛṣṭhatastē namō'stu tē sarvata ēva sarva.

Why does Arjuna says I do prostrations; your front back etc. because the orderliness is everywhere in the universe; the sruthi is everywhere; If you go to America and there is a Gīta chanting; there also it will be the same śṛuti; so therefore my nāmaskāra to all parts of you means; I see the order, the harmony the rhythm; in fact that alone maintains this universe.

Dharmō viśvasya jagatha prathiṣṭā;
lōkē dharmīṣṭam praja upasarpanti dharmēṇa, pāpaṁ apanudhati;
dharmē sarvaṁ prathiṣṭitham;
tasmāt dharmam paramaṁ vadanthi.

This invisible harmony is called dharma. So thus Arjuna surrenders his will; which is from 35 to 45. Even though Arjuna expresses his bhakthi, he has gone thru all the three stages mentally; Of these three only one remains prominent; āścaryam; bhakthi and bhayam; three are there; āścaryam recedes to the background; bhakthi also recedes to the background; bhayam alone remains. But as long as ahaṁkāra and mama kāra are there; fear is unavoidable; fear of death; fear of old age; fear of separation; all this will be unavoidable; If I do not have ahaṁkāra and mama kāra; all these will appear as the leela of God; we all come together; leela of Īśvaraḥ; we all get separated; leela of Īśvaraḥ; we all grow old; leela of Īśvaraḥ; But when aham mama are there; they are terrible thing; therefore Arjuna is frightened; therefore he says he Kṛṣṇa I only asked for Viśva-rūpa darśanam; but now I am changing my mind. Like returning some objects to the shop; he says I do not want this Viśva-rūpa darśanam; it is wonderful but I would like to return it with Thanks. So thus Arjuna request and Lord Kṛṣṇa also understands that an immature mind cannot have Viśva-rūpa darśanam.

Then what to do? Nothing to fear; you confine to ēkarūpa Īśvaraḥ; so let the Lord be in the temple; or let the Lord be in the pūja room; Lord is inside; world is outside; does not matter; start with ēkarūpa Īśvaraḥ; reduce ahamkāra and mamakāra. In fact our culture is designed for that only; so we build a new house and enter first thing that we do is hang the photo of the Lord. What does it mean? Oh Bhagavān; this is not my house but Yours; please allow me to use; I will give you a place; under the staircase, remember; some useless place; Does not matter; Bhagavān is adjustable; but that attitude is important; it is your house; and then the next higher stage is what; I look upon this house also as a temple belonging to the Lord; this body; dēhō dēvālaya prōktaḥ; therefore see not only God is in the house; therefore house belongs to the Lord; invoke God inside your heart; and learn to see the body also as a property of Īśvaraḥ. Then the attachment will drop.; tana mana dhana sab kuch terā will not be a mere lip service. As Dayānanda Swami says: daily you sing; Bhagavān itself is confused; yesterday he gave me the body; today also he says he is giving the body; he has got only one body; how come daily he gives; then only Bhagavān knows that it is all only lip service; the one who really gives, can give only once. That is over. But the idea is what; when you daily sing; hopefully one day that word will come from the inner most heart and we mean what we see. Until then tan man dan we will sing; at least for the sake of vadai, kadalai and chundal;

So therefore up to ēka rūpa Īśvaraḥ if you are not ready for Viśva-rūpa Īśvaraḥ. That Kṛṣṇa accepts and then again comes back to ēkarūpa which means what? Arjuna's divya cakṣuḥ is gone and therefore the world is no more the body of the Lord; world is? World; laddu is not prasada; laddu becomes laddu. So that is withdrawn; which is given from 31 to 34.

And 46 to 55 is the upasamhāra or the conclusion of this teaching; wherein Lord Kṛṣṇa points out: Hēy Arjuna you had the rare opportunity of Viśva-rūpa darśanam, because of your bhakthi. So thus bhakthi as a sādhanā for evolution is pointed out. What evolution; From ēkarūpa darśanam to anēka rūpa darśanam to arūpa darśanam; for all these three levels bhakthi is an important sādhanā; and what type of bhakthi; that is also very important; bhakthi which Bhagavān is not a means for worldly ends; but Bhagavān is an end in itself; which means a person should have vairāgyam; the only when vairāgyam increases; the bhakthi becomes the ananya bhakthi; avyabhicārini bhakthi it becomes; Therefore Kṛṣṇa said

ज्ञातुं द्रष्टुं च तत्त्वेन प्रवेष्टुं च परन्तप ॥ ११.५४ ॥

bhaktyā tvananyayā śakyam ahamēvaṃvidhō'rjuna |
jñātuṃ draṣṭuṃ ca tattvēna pravēṣṭuṃ ca parantapa || 11.54 ||

And He concludes the whole thing in the last verse which is very beautiful;

मत्कर्मकृन्मत्परमः मद्भक्तः सङ्गवर्जितः ।
निर्वैरः सर्वभूतेषु यः स मामेति पाण्डव ॥ ११.५५ ॥

matkarmakṛṇmatparamō madbhaktaḥ saṅgavarjitaḥ |
nirvairaḥ sarvabhūteṣu yaḥ sa māmēti pāṇḍava || 11.55 ||

So wherein Lord Kṛṣṇa says initially you confine to ekarūpa bhakthi and sakāma-bhakthi; which is OK: Nobody can think Bhagavān is the end initially, the goal initially, because we have got so many other local goals; so many agenda; big list we have; Therefore Bhagavān says initially you can have worldly goals; use Bhagavān as a means to achieve those goals; nothing wrong; it is called sakāma-bhakthi; perfectly OK; and let the Lord be also a personal God; have an iṣṭa dēvathā; it is OK; and then gradually you will get vivēka; then you will know the ephemerality of the worldly goal; once you know the limitation; God will become the end; then ēka rūpa bhakthi also will gradually become anēkarūpa bhakthi; And ultimately you will attain Me.

Thus by the glorification of Bhakthi, Kṛṣṇa concludes and the benefit of this Viśva-rūpa darśanam is very high. We get several benefits of this Viśva-rūpa appreciation; some of them I will point out. This is the benefit of both vibūthi yōga as well as the Viśva-rūpa darśana yōga.

The first advantage of Viśva-rūpa appreciation is dvēṣa parihāraḥ; we do not hate anything in the creation; because everything is part of the Lord only. So I do not divide the world into rāga viṣaya and dvēṣa viṣaya; everything has got its place; including a cockroach; including a mosquito; even poison has got its role to play and therefore dvēṣa becomes lesser and lesser.

Then the next benefit is amānitvam; once I know everything is Lord; any glory in any part of the world belongs to the Lord alone; therefore if I enjoy any faculty, any excellence in me; in music or dance or knowledge or intelligence or beauty; I do not claim it as mind; all of them belongs to the Lord. And therefore freedom from conceit; Self-conceit or humility is the benefit of Viśva-rūpa darśanam.

And then the next benefit is I look upon everything as sacred; there is no secular- sacred division; for a Viśva-rūpa dṛṣṭva; there is nothing called secular; everything is sacred. Therefore when he gets up in the early morning.

समुद्र वसने देवि पर्वतस्तन मण्डले
विष्णुपत्नि नमस्तुभ्यम् पादस्पर्शम् क्षमस्वमे ॥

samudra vasanē dēvi parvatastana maṅḍalē
viṣṇupatni namastubhyam pādasparśam kṣamasvamē ||

The earth is also Bhūmādēvi; I should revere; and then I take water and see āpōvā idagaṁ sarvaṁ viśvābhūttānāpa prāṇāpā paśavā apaḥ; water is Lord. Then I light the flame, the lamp, Agni is Lord. Then namō brahmanē, namastē vayō; Vāyu is Lord; ākāśa also: prāchyai diśē namaḥ; dakṣināyē diśē namaḥ; pradicyē diśē nāmaḥ; udiccyē diśē namaḥ; ūrdvāya nama; adharāya namaḥ; antarikṣāya namaḥ, Bhūmyē namaḥ; கேட்ட மாதிரி இருக்கோ?; heard somewhere?

In Sandhyāvandanam; all the directions are worshipped; that means nature itself is pūjyam; it is sacred or holy; so sarvatra pūjyathva bhāvana and then the next benefit of Viśva-rūpa bhāvana is we have respect for all forms of worship; all forms of God; I may be attracted to one form of Lord. I may have Viṣṇu as my iṣṭa dēvathā. But I know that any form is Lord's form. Therefore I do not look down upon Śiva. I do not compare one form or the other; all forms are OK: therefore all religions also are OK for me; sarva matha sama bhāvaḥ.

And finally, the benefit of Viśva-rūpa darśanam is the expansion of the mind; the narrowness of the mind; the shortsighted of the mind will go away; because I appreciate the totality; that is why in Sandhya vandanam also: Ādityam tarpayāmi; sōmam tarpayāmi; aṅgārakam tarpayāmi; bhudham tarpayāmi; remember the planets; remember the Sun; remember the moon. Therefore the totality the more I see; more my mind expands. Thus citta viśālatha; these are the benefits of Viśva-rūpa darśanam.

TWELFTH CHAPTER: BHAKTI YŌGA

Now we will take up the twelfth chapter of the Gīta; a small chapter consisting of only twenty verses but a very significant chapter which gives a comprehensive picture of entire vēdic-teaching. So twelfth chapter is the essence of the Vēdas; vēda sāra is contained in this portion. And in this chapter the first part deals with the topic of bhakthi-yōgaḥ as a means of mōkṣa.

And by way of discussing this topic, twelfth chapter removes many confusions regarding bhakthi yōga. And this is discussed up to 12th verse of this chapter and then in the 2nd part beginning from the 13th up to 20th bhakthi-yōga phalam, namely mōkṣa is talked about; thus bhakthi-yōga and bhakthi-yōga phalam these are the two topic discussed and before entering into the actual verses, I would like to give you a bird's eye-view of bhakthi-yōga which is discussed in this chapter.

What we come to know by the study of this chapter is that bhakthi-yōga is not a particular sādhanā. It is not a particular distinct sādhanā but it is the name of the entire range of spiritual-sādhanās culminating in mōkṣa. So bhakthi-yōga is not a sādhanā but it is a group of spiritual-sādhanās; and these spiritual-sādhanās are three in number which are discussed in the Vēdas. And Bhagavat Gīta being the essence of the Vēdas, the three sādhanās of the Vēda alone are given in this chapter; and those three sādhanās are karma-yōgaḥ; then upāsana-yōgaḥ; and jñāna-yōgaḥ.

In fact, in the Vēdas and in the Upaniṣads, the word bhakthi is practically not used at all. Thus the vēdic karma plus upāsana plus jñāna-yōga; all these three put together is renamed as bhakthi-yōgaḥ; and why do we name these three sādhanās as bhakthi-yōgaḥ? Because Kṛṣṇa feels all these three levels of sādhanā should be practiced only in the atmosphere of Īśvara bhakthi. Without Īśvara bhakthi; these three sādhanās cannot be called sādhanās at all. So it is in the atmosphere of Īśvara bhakthi that these exercises become yōga.

And therefore each one of them is called bhakthi yōga; therefore if you have to differentiate, we can say bhakthi-yōga level 1; bhakthi-yōga level 2; and bhakthi-yōga level 3. Level one karma-yōga-lakṣaṇa bhakthi-yōga; level two upāsana-yōga-lakṣaṇa bhakthi-yōga; lakṣaṇa means in the form of, and the last one is jñāna-yōga-lakṣaṇa bhakthi-yōgaḥ.

And for the sake of the benefit of all seekers; these three levels of sādhanā itself Kṛṣṇa subdivides into five levels. Because sometimes, certain staircases you will find that there are two steep; some olden staircases, you find that very big; then what do you do?; you make into two. So that everybody can walk up. Similarly, Kṛṣṇa subdivides these three levels themselves into five; and how does Kṛṣṇa divides; karma-yōga itself is subdivided into first level of karma-yōga; and the second level of karma-yōga; karma-yōga level-1; karma-yōga level-2. Similarly, upāsana-yōga itself is subdivided into two levels; upāsana-yōga level-1; and upāsana-yōga level-2; so 2+2 four and jñāna-yōga is not divided into two; it is only one level. Thus we have two plus two plus one; five.

Now the next question is: what is the difference between karma-yōga level-one and karma-yōga level-two. In karma-yōga level one; Kṛṣṇa wants to accommodate all materialistic people, who are not really interested in mōkṣa; who are not really interested in serving the society; utterly selfish-materialistic people also Kṛṣṇa wants to accommodate. And Kṛṣṇa says: Let the materialistic-selfish-people follow or pursue their worldly-desires; they need not give up their worldly-desires; because suppression of desires is a dangerous thing; because when a person suppresses a desires the mind continues fantasising the fulfillment of those desires. And then gradually they mount up like a volcano and then later a person can completely go astray and therefore the Vēdas as well as Kṛṣṇa says that even if you are not interested in Bhagavān does not matter; even if you are not interested in Mōkṣa does not matter; you might be interested in arta and kāma, means what money and entertainment; Kṛṣṇa says continue; And still you can be a karma-yōgi; a spiritual sādhanā; provided you follow one or two conditions.

The first-condition is make sure that you fulfill your worldly-materialistic desires; selfish-desires only by legitimate methods; akramam do not do; that is condition No.1.

and the second and more important condition is when you pursue your worldly-pleasures, desires and you succeed and get them; before you enjoy those phalams; those pleasures; do not claim them as your accomplishments; look upon them as gift from the Lord. Īśvarasya prasādaḥ. Start there; whether you buy a house or car or you buy a new dress; anything you want to get, you get it; but before enjoying them, even the food that you eat; do not name it as your accomplishment; take it as Īśvara-prasāda. And when you buy a new house also; it is your desire to buy the house; and you want to enjoy the benefit of the house; but Kṛṣṇa makes only one request; look upon the house as the temple of God. And imagine that you are living in the temple which is a gift from the Lord; Kṛṣṇa-prasādaḥ. Rāma-prasādaḥ; even children are named Rāma-prasād, etc. means what: Look upon even your children, not as your children, but as a gift from the Lord; thus this level of karma-yōga can be defined as prasāda-buddhya; sakāma-karma anuṣṭānam; You may follow kāmya-karmas; you may not do niṣkāma-karmas; you may not do parōpakārāya-karmas; does not matter, உனக்காக பண்ணினாலும்; even if you do it for yourself; enjoy it as Īśvara-prasāda.

So what is the first-level of karma-yōga; prasāda-bhāvanaya; sakāma-karma anuṣṭānam; sakāma-karma means what; selfish-activities for my own benefit.

Then what will happen? If I continue to accept everything as Īśvara-prasāda, because of the very attitude, the mind becomes purer and purer. And as the mind becomes purer and purer, I begin to question: Can I spend my entire life for my own personal benefit? should I not contribute something to the world? So this kind of questions gradually comes, which is an indication of purity; desire for parā upakāra; in sakāma-karma, I have a desire only for taking; in niṣkāma-karma, I develop a desire for giving also. Life is not mere taking; life is giving also; previously I measure my success in terms of how much I have taken. Now my mind changes; I ask the question how much I have given; success is not proportional to taking; Success is directly proportional to giving; na karmanā na prajāyā dhanēna, tyagē naikē amṛtatva mānaśuḥ. This is the difference between materialistic-approach and spiritual-approach. In materialistic-approach, success is directly proportional to acquisition. In spiritual-approach, success is directly proportional to sharing or tyāga.

And therefore in the second level of karma-yōga; the sakāma-karmas will become lesser and lesser; selfish-attitude becomes lesser and lesser; my awareness and consideration of other people becomes more and more. And therefore naturally parōpakāraḥ-karmāṇi; niṣkāma-karmāṇi or pañca-mahā-yajña rūpa karmāṇi, I find time. Previously selfish-activities were occupying the whole time; I never had time for any contribution. Now I find that I do fulfil my selfish desires, but I should also find time for some contribution or other. And even when I find time for giving; giving need not be all the time money alone; Remember, giving time, giving words, consoling words to others; giving knowledge to others; all these are giving and when I give to others; not with arrogance, the giving is done as Īśvara-arpaṇa-rūpēṇa. Therefore the second level of karma-yōga is Īśvara-arpaṇa-bhāvanaya niṣkāma-karma-anuṣṭānam; parā-upakāra-anuṣṭānam.

So in the first level I am very selfish; in the second level; selfishness has come down. In first level; I have a very narrow mind; in the second level; I am aware of the need of others' also. And these two levels together is called karma-yōga. So prasāda-bhāvanaya sakāma-karma-anuṣṭānam. Then Īśvarārpaṇa-bhāvanaya niṣkāma-karma-anuṣṭānam.

In the first level karma-yōga will give purity; the second level of karma-yōga will give purity at a faster level, because in sakāma karma, purity is in trickles; because in niṣkāma karma purity is more. That is why it is said parōpakāra puṇyāya pāpāya parāpīḍanam; and once a person has gone through these levels of karma-yōga; he is ready to graduate to the third level.

Third level is upāsana-yōga; which means Īśvara dhyānam; meditation upon Īśvara; that too saguṇa-Īśvara-dhyānam. And why do we prescribe this sādhanā as the next stage? Karma-yōga is very important for the purity of mind. For spiritual elevation; karma-yōga is a must. And therefore karma-yōga is extremely useful; but it has got certain disadvantages also; which has to be neutralised.

What is that? When a person is a karma-yōgi; he is busy involved in either sakāma-karma, if he is in the first level; or he is busy in niṣkāma karma. One is busy serving himself; another is busy serving the society; both are busy. And in both levels of karma, whether it is sakāma or niṣkāma; a person is extrovert in nature; is more and more world-oriented; is more and more bahirmukha.

And this bahir-mukhatvam or extrovertedness is an obstacle for jñāna-yōga, because jñāna-yōga involves enquiring into the inner self as we saw yesterday; yō veda nihitam guhāyām parāmēvyōman. Self-enquiry or pañca-kōśa-vivēka etc. requires not an extrovert mind; it requires a mind which is turned towards oneself. pārānjikāni vyatṛṇa svayambhūḥ tasmāt parān paśyati nāntarātman.

Extroverted-people will miss self-knowledge. And therefore upāsana is Īśvara-dhyānam. So in Upāsana I turn my attention inwards and I invoke the Lord in my heart; which means I train my mind towards my own inner nature; which is a very very important training required and without that training a person can never come to Brahma-jñānam.

And therefore comes the third-level of upāsanam and Kṛṣṇa divides this meditation itself into two types: one is ēka-rūpa-Īśvara-dhyānam. And the next is anēka-rūpa-Īśvara-dhyānam; I visualise the Lord with a particular form; as Rāma or Kṛṣṇa; any iṣṭa-dēvathā rūpam. And this iṣṭa-dēvathā-rūpa-dhyānam; or ēka-rūpa-Īśvara-dhyānam, Kṛṣṇa calls abhyāsa-yōgaḥ; This is the third level of sādhanā; and once a person has practiced this sufficiently, Kṛṣṇa asks us to replace this ēka-rūpa-Īśvara with anēka-rūpa, as we have seen in the 11th chapter; Kṛṣṇa is not a person located in one place. If Bhagavān is looked upon as a person located in one place; that Bhagavān also will be limited; subject to janma; subject to maraṇam, etc.

Therefore for initial meditation purposes, we can have ēka-rūpa; but we have to expand our mind. First upāsanam helps in focusing; the next upāsanam helps in expanding the mind. And therefore the first level of upāsanam is ēka-rūpa Īśvara-dhyānam; and the next level is anēka-rūpa or viśva-rūpa-Īśvara-dhyānam. And both of them come under saguṇa-Īśvara-dhyānam only. Saguṇa means what? With attributes or properties; ēka-rūpa-Īśvara also has attributes; Viśva-rūpa-Īśvara also has got innumerable attributes. So thus we have got two levels of karma-yōga; two-levels of upāsana.

And once a person has gone through all these four levels; this person has got jñāna-yōgyathā; he is eligible to enter the fifth and final level which is jñāna-yōgaḥ; which is enquiry into nirguṇa-Īśvara; otherwise known as Brahman; Brahman is none other than Īśvara in his higher-nature. In the seventh chapter, was called parā-prakṛti; parā-prakṛti rūpa-arūpa-Īśvara enquiry which consists of vēdānta-sṛavaṇam, vēdānta mananam and nidhidhyāsanam; sṛavaṇam meaning consistent and systematic study of the Upaniṣadic scriptures which deal with nirguṇa-Īśvara. And not only I study that; the culmination of that study should be that the nirguṇa-Īśvara is non-different from my own higher-nature: aham brahma asmi.

So when I come to nirguṇa level; the difference between Īśvara and the jīva disappears. At saguṇa level, the difference is maintained. When I come to nirguṇa-level; aham brahma asmi;

And having gained this knowledge I go to mananam to remove all the doubts in accepting this knowledge. Thus all the intellectual obstacles in the form of doubts are removed, which is called mananam; which is also part of jñāna-yōga only. And finally comes nidhidhyāsanam, which is the removal of all the emotional obstacles; all the psychological traumas that I have gone through before; various problems we have gone through in our life; they all remain in our inner heart; which do not allow us to enjoy the benefit of knowledge. All the psychological hang ups should be removed, which is called nidhidhyāsanam. Sṛavaṇam plus mananam plus nidhidhyāsanam put together is called jñāna-yōgaḥ; not in Saguṇa form but in His Nirguṇa form. In fact, in 'His' word would not come, because in Nirguṇa, there is no male or female:

ना सन्न सदसन्न महन्न चाणुः
न स्त्रि पुमान् नपुमसक एक बीजम् ॥

nā sanna sadasanna mahanna cāṇuḥ
na stri pumān napumsaka ēka bījam ||

अशब्धम् अस्पर्शम् अरूपम् अव्ययम्
तत रसम् नित्य अगन्धवच्चयत्

aśabdham asparśam, arūpam avyayam
tata rasam nitya agandhavaccayat ||

No form; no colour, no smell, no taste, no touch. This jñāna-yōga is the fifth and final level of sādhanā and all the five levels put together is called bhakthi-yōgaḥ.

Therefore never ask the question do you follow bhakthi-yōga or jñāna-yōga; remember jñāna-yōga is also a level of bhakthi-yōga; upāsana is also a level of bhakthi-yōga; karma-yōga is also a level of bhakthi-yōga. Everyone has to go through all the five levels; because nobody is born with a desire for God from birth. We are all born with so many worldly desires. So, we have to start with sakāma-karma. That is why vēda itself is full of many sakāma-karma. Vēda never says we should work for mōkṣa in the beginning itself. He says you work for puthra; you work for money; puthrakāmēṣṭi-yāga; and for money, yāga; for health, yāga; all these are what? Worldly desires; Start with sakāma-karma and go through all the stages. And gain the knowledge, aham brahma asmi; which is the culmination of bhakthi-yōga. This is the topic of the first twelve verses.

And then in the last 8 verses; Kṛṣṇa talks about the nature of a person; the character of a person who had gone through all these five stages; successfully, and we call such a person; parā bhaktha or para bhakthaḥ; who is in advaitam; who is a jñāni; who has discovered aham brahma asmi; such a jñāni is called parā-bhaktha and Kṛṣṇa clearly says this parā-bhaktha alone is my dearest devotee.

And the other people are dear people or dearer people but the dearest one is only the nirguṇa-bhaktha because there is no distance between Me and him. He has become one with Me; and I have become one with him which Kṛṣṇa said in the seventh chapter; jñāni tu ātmaiva mē matam; Jñāni does not stand even separate from Me. So this parā-bhakthalakṣaṇani; the characteristic of parā-bhaktha is the final topic. With this background we will enter into the chapter proper.

अर्जुन उवाच ---
एवं सततयुक्ता ये भक्तास्त्वां पर्युपासते ।
ये चाप्यक्षरमव्यक्तं तेषां के योगवित्तमाः ॥ १२.१ ॥

Arjuna uvāca
ēvaṃ satatayuktā yē bhaktāstvāṃ paryupāsatē |
yē cāpyakṣaramavyaktaṃ tēṣāṃ kē yōgavittamāḥ || 12.1 ||

अर्जुनः उवाच arjunaḥ uvāca Arjuna said के योगवित्तमाः kē yōgavittamāḥ who are the best yogis? तेषाम् tēṣām among them सततयुक्ताः satatayuktāḥ (who are) the ever-steadfast, भक्ताः bhaktāḥ devotees, ये पर्युपासते yē paryupāsatē who meditate upon, त्वाम् tvām You

एवम् ēvaṁ as described before च अपि ये ca api yē and those who (meditate upon, अक्षरम् अव्यक्तम् avyaktam akṣaram the imperishable unmanifest (Brahman)?

1. Arjuna asked - Who are the best Yōgis among them? - the ever-steadfast devotees who meditate upon You as described before and (or) those who (meditate upon) the imperishable, unmanifest (Brahman)?

So the chapter begins with a question from Arjuna based on the previous teaching. Such a question is called anupraśnaḥ; praśnaḥ means an independent question; anupraśnaḥ means a question based on previous teaching. And in this question Arjuna asks: Is saguṇa-bhaktha superior; or is Nirguṇa bhaktha superior; the one who is associated with saguṇa-Īśvara and the one who is committed to nirguṇa-Īśvara; between these two; which one is superior.

A very important question. First he describes saguṇa-bhaktha in the first line; bhaktāḥ tvām paryupāsātē; there are certain saguṇa bhakthās who regularly meditate upon saguṇa-Īśvaraḥ.

And how do they meditate? Satatayuktāḥ; with constant commitment; sincerely, steadfastly. There are some people who meditate upon saguṇa Īśvara and what type of saguṇa-Īśvara? Because saguṇa-Īśvara of two types; do you remember, ēkarūpa saguṇa Īśvara; or anēka-rūpa saguṇa-Īśvara; which one Arjuna is referring to; ēvaṁ; a saguṇa Īśvara, as described in the previous chapter; so ēvam means ēkādaśa adhyaya ukta prakārēṇa. And in the 11th chapter, which Īśvara was talked about; it is Viśva-rūpa Īśvaraḥ; anēka-rūpa Īśvaraḥ; that is the Lord as the entire cosmos itself; as described in the Puruṣa-suktham; as described in Rudram; Rudra is Sri Rudram, which is talking about Viśva-rūpa-Īśvara; Puruṣa suktham is talking about Viśva-rūpa-Īśvara only; therefore ēvam means ēkādaśa adhyāya ukta prakārēṇa Viśva-rūpa saguṇa-Īśvaram upāsātē; this is one group of people.

And then Arjuna introduces the Nirguṇa bhakthās in the next line; yē cā api; there are some other people

What do they do? Avyaktam akṣaram paryupāsate; paryupāsate; you have to supply from the first line; the verb is not given; we have to supply yē cāpyakṣaramavyaktam paryupāsātē; upon akṣara-Īśvaraḥ; if you remember the 8th chapter; akṣaram brahma paramaṁ svabhāvō'dhyātmamucyātē; parām brahma is called akṣara Īśvara; and parām brahma is free from all attributes. So akṣaram means nirguṇam-brahma.

And because this akṣara-Īśvara is nirguṇam-brahma; avyaktam; that attributeless Īśvara is not perceptible to any sense organ; because if the Lord does not have, eyes cannot see; if there is no sound; no flute and all; music is not there; therefore you cannot hear; you cannot smell tulasi Māla, candanam etc. because body itself is not there; where is māla; therefore no smell; and no touch, you cannot touch that nirguṇa Īśvara. In short not objectifiable through any one of the sense organs; therefore avyaktam means sarva-indriya-agōcaram. And this nirguṇam-avyaktaṁ-brahma some people meditate upon.

If nirguṇam-brahma is not objectifiable; how can they meditate upon? There is only one way of meditation; an unobjectifiable Brahman can be meditated only in one thing; quiz question; kōan bhanēga kōtēsvaran; how can you meditate unobjectifiable Brahman? There is only method; to see the unobjectifiable Brahman as the subject, I, the meditator; So nirguṇam-brahma-upāsana is a meditation upon the meditator. It is ātma-dhyānam alone. Thus there are some people who are meditating upon nirguṇa brahma. So this is the second clue;

And Arjuna's question is what? Who is superior?

Tēṣaṁ, tēṣaṁ; tayōr madhyē; Nirdharaṇē-śaṣṭi; between these two groups of people; kē yogavittamāḥ; saṁguṇa-dhyathā is superior or nirguṇa-dhyathā is superior; dhyathā means what; meditator; and indirectly the question means saṁguṇa-brahma is superior or saṁguṇa-Īśvara is superior or nirguṇa-Īśvara is superior; what a question? Now Kṛṣṇa has to answer this which He is doing in the following verses:

Verse 12.2

श्रीभगवानुवाच
म्यावेश्य मनो ये मां नित्ययुक्ता उपासते ।
श्रद्धया परयोपेतास्ते मे युक्ततमा मताः ॥ १२.२ ॥

Śrī Bhagavān uvāca
mayyāvēśya manō yē māṁ nityayuktā upāsatē |
śraddhayā parāyōpētāḥ tē mē yuktatamā matāḥ || 12.2 ||

श्री भगवान् उवाच śrī Bhagavān uvāca Lord Kṛṣṇa said आवेश्य मनः āvēśya manaḥ fixing the mind मयि mayi upon Me उपेताः परया श्रद्धया upētāḥ parāyā śraddhayā with great faith ते नित्ययुक्ताः tē nityayuktāḥ those ever-steadfast (devotees), ये उपासते yē upāsatē who meditate माम् mām upon Me मताः युक्ततमाः matāḥ yuktatamāḥ are considered to be the best yōgis, मे mē by Me.

2. Lord Kṛṣṇa said --- fixing the mind upon Me with great faith, those ever-steadfast (devotees) who meditate upon Me are considered to be the best yōgis by Me.

So what is the answer? Is saṁguṇa-bhakthi is superior; or nirguṇa-bhakthi is superior? Generally our tendency would be to vote for saṁguṇa bhakthi; because in saṁguṇa-bhakthi alone there is variety; there is beauty; adaram madhuram; vadanam madhuram; nayanam madhuram; all these are there. Who will like Nirguṇa-Īśvara? no sound; no form; no touch; no taste; like bland food; திதிப்பும் இல்லை; காரவும் இல்லை; புளிப்பும் இல்லை; சப்புன்னு இருக்கு; no sweet; no pungent; no chilli; which is chap; like that who will like that nirguṇa-Īśvara. In fact many philosophers say nirguṇa-Īśvara does not exist. They say outright they negate it; and even among those who accept it; they say; Many people is not worth knowing or teaching; it is useless.

Now what is the real answer? The real answer is that the question is wrong. The real answer is that the question is wrong; and for a wrong question, there is no right answer. So how many kilometers is the weight of this clip; let me see; how many centimeters is the weight of this clip? You will look at me; because you cannot answer that question; because centimeter has nothing to do with weight; centigram is OK: centimeter refers to distance.

So therefore whenever you try to compare two things; to find out which is superior; you remember comes only when you have to choose between two; The very question of comparison comes only when you have to choose between two things; you ask the question whether this is better or that is better; So that you can choose the better one; and the choice can come very carefully understand.

Choice can come only between two similar things; there is no question of choice between two dissimilar things. I will explain it; do not worry; When there are two similar; there is a choice; and when I have to choose, the question will come, which one is better. Suppose you want to drink something; somebody has come; as a guest; so they ask the question; what will you drink; do you want coffee; or tea; or milk or so many things are there; among different drinks you can have comparison and you can choose one of them; So the choice is among various drinks; Or you can have choice with regard to the container, people ask; Swamiji whether you want in glass or cup; or davara-tumbler. So among various containers, you can ask which one you would like and I can choose one of them. Suppose somebody asks; Swamiji do you want tumbler or drink? What can you answer; there is no choice between the container and the content. Similarly between two roads; you can have comparison; between two destinations you can have comparison but you can never compare between road and destination; Do you want road or destination? What will you answer; It is not right; Between two types of pants you can have comparison; between two types of shirts you can have comparison; do you want to put pant or shirt? What will you answer?

Therefore remember, comparison is only among similars; and saṅuṇa-bhakthi and nirguṇa-bhakthi can never be compared because one is the means and the other is the end; saṅuṇa-bhakthi is the sādhanām, the means the stepping stone; and only through saṅuṇa bhakthi one has to reach nirguṇa-bhakthi, which is advaitam; saṅuṇa-bhakthi is dvaitam; nirguṇa-bhakthi is advaitam; saguṇa-bhakthi is bhēdaḥ means what? difference; nirguṇa-bhakthi is abhēdaḥ; one is means the other is end. Therefore you do not have a choice between them.

So everyone has to go through saguṇa-bhakthi and everyone has to end in the discovery of nirguṇa-bhakthi; which is abhēdaḥ advaita-jñānam. Without saguṇa bhakthi, nirguṇa bhakthi is impossible and without nirguṇa bhakthi, saguṇa-bhakthi is incomplete; without saguṇa-bhakthi, nirguṇa bhakthi is impossible; and without nirguṇa-bhakthi saguṇa-bhakthi is incomplete. Therefore everyone has to go through saguṇa-bhakthi; come to nirguṇa bhakthi which is the culmination of sādhanā.

But Kṛṣṇa does not want to tell Arjuna that the question is wrong; because the student will feel insulted; humiliated; already the student has got many complexes; Generally whenever they ask the question, they always give an introduction. Swamiji the question may be silly. அதை சொல்லியா தெரியணம்? Has one to say that to understand! OK; just joke; Any question appears silly after you know the answer. But until you know the answer, question is extremely important and relevant; therefore the student has the problem, teacher does not want to add insult to injury.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa does not say you are wrong. And but he gives an intelligent answer. He says saguṇa-bhakthas are superior; nirguṇa-bhakthās attain Me. It is Kṛṣṇa's mischief; it is not only during childhood days; ஏப்பாடி; even in Gīta in the philosophical text also; He continues His mischief. So the idea is there is no question of choice. And therefore He says: Saguṇa-bhaktha is indeed great so that everyone will take to saguṇa-bhakthi in the beginning. Once a person has sufficiently practiced he can be slowly absorbed into, sucked into nirguṇa-bhakthi; which is otherwise jñānam; the details we will see in the next class.

Hari Om

156 Chapter 12, Verses 02-05

ॐ

The twelfth chapter begins with a question from Arjuna in which Arjuna asks whether saguṇa dhyānam is superior or nirguṇa dhyānam is superior. Saguṇa-dhyānam means meditation upon the Lord with various attributes, as described in the dhyāna-slōkā, mēghaśyāmaṁ pītakaśyāvāsam śrīvatsāṅkaṁ kaustubhōdbhāsitāṅgam.

All these descriptions are called guṇa; and saguṇa dhyānam means meditation upon the Lord with various features. Whereas nirguṇa dhyānam upon the Lord who is absolutely free from all features; feature_less Īśvaraḥ; aśabda; asparśa, arupam, arasa, agandam.

This is nirguṇa dhyānam; between these two which one is superior. And between the two sets of people who are greater devotees. And this question came in the first verse, for which Kṛṣṇa gave the answer and I introduced the answer in the last class.

We cannot give an answer to this question because the question itself is wrong; the question of which is superior comes only when you have to choose one of the two, Wherever choice is there; comparison is inevitable and where there is no choice, there is no question of comparison between saṅguṇa-dhyānam and nirguṇa-dhyānam.

According to Kṛṣṇa, there is no question of comparison at all; because there is no choice. What do you mean by there is no choice? What we mean is everyone has to necessarily go through both; everyone has to necessarily go through both, because both sādhanās have to contribute its own benefit to the seeker. It is like different types of dishes what we consume; one dish gives carbohydrates and another gives proteins and therefore we have to consume different, because each one helps the body in its own unique way. Similarly what saṅguṇa-dhyānam can give, nirguṇa-dhyānam cannot give and what nirguṇa-dhyānam gives saṅguṇa-dhyānam cannot and therefore both are compulsory.

And once you say both of them are compulsory; how are we to practice that? That Kṛṣṇa himself will clarify later. They cannot be simultaneously practiced and therefore they have to be practiced in a graded manner. Just like going to primary school, and secondary school and college; if you have to become a graduate; should I go to the primary school or college?; What answer you will give; you will have through primary school you have to qualify yourselves to enter the college and then you have to go through the college to graduate. Therefore both are required; schools as well as colleges. If both are required; if both are required I will go to both simultaneously; morning to school and evening to college. So we had one brahmacāri in our āsrama and he used to attend three levels of Sānskrīt classes at the same time; we had one lower level; where alphabet is taught; we had one medium level where Antoine Bhandarkar was taught and there was a higher level Paṇini sūtrās was taught; he will sit in all the three; you cannot do. They have to be in a graded manner and once you know that they are to be in a graded order, what should be the order. First I will go to college; and then to school you cannot say; it should be in a proper order.

Saṅguṇa dhyānam prepares for the nirguṇa dhyānam; saṅguṇa dhyānam chastens the mind for nirguṇa dhyānam, and therefore everyone has to start with saṅguṇa; grow and then come to nirguṇa and be free. And therefore Arjuna do not ask which is better? Your question is wrong. As I said in the last class, Kṛṣṇa does not want to say you are wrong; because already śiṣya has lot of inferiority complex and Guru does not want to add. And therefore what does he do; nicely he says saguṇa dhyāna kartās are superior, nirguṇa dhyāna kartā will reach me; therefore everyone is satisfied.

Therefore he says in the second verse; mayi āveśya manaḥ yē mām upāsātē; there are some people who practice meditation upon Me; mām upāsātē.

And what type of mām; we have to supply; saguṇam mām; the saguṇa Kṛṣṇa either in the form of ěka-rūpa-Kṛṣṇa, as a personal God or the Viśva-rūpa-Kṛṣṇa, as described in the 11th chapter; remember Viśva-rūpa-Īśvara is also saguṇa-Īśvara only. Thus there are some people who meditate upon Me in saguṇa form; with attributes; how; Mayi āveśya; focusing their mind upon Me; fixing their mind on Me; there are some people who practice saguṇa-Kṛṣṇa-dhyānam.

And they are not; they do not practice in fits and starts; on inspiration they follow one day and thereafter they forget like in New Year resolutions; it is not nityayuktāḥ; ever steadfast; ever committed; consistently; without fail; nityayuktāḥ; steadfastly; some people practice saguṇa-Īśvara-dhyānam.

And they are endowed with parayā śraddhayā upētāḥ; they are endowed with intense faith in Me; because the benefit of saguṇa-dhyānam is not in the material plane, God does not practice any material benefit; the benefit presented is inner growth; expansion of mind; purity of mind; sensitivity of mind; refinement of mind; they are all non-tangible, non-quantifiable result; and therefore we do not see the result physically. Therefore we have to have faith in that result and therefore Kṛṣṇa says: with intense faith that they will transform my inner personality; this mediation will transform my inner personality with the śraddhaḥ; some people practice saguṇa-dhyānam.

And then Kṛṣṇa says, tē mē yuktatamā matāḥ; those people who practice such a saguṇa dhyānam they are indeed superior; they are indeed great people; So saguṇa people have been glorified now.

Now Kṛṣṇa will confuse you in the next verses saying that Nirguṇa people reach Me. So in short, the idea is do not compare.

3 & 4. Having restrained the sense organs, being even-minded towards all, and being interested in the welfare of all beings, some (devotees) meditate upon the imperishable (Brahman) which is indefinable, unmanifest, all-pervading, incomprehensible, immutable, immovable, and eternal. They attain Me alone.

Whereas there are some other people who follow Nirguṇa-Īśvara-dhyānam, otherwise called nirguṇa brahma-dhyānam; as a part of jñāna-yōga-sādhāna and this jñāna-yōga alone I said in my introduction as the fifth and highest stage of bhakthi-yōga.

Therefore in these three verses, Kṛṣṇa is introducing jñāna-yōga-sādhāna which is the practice of Nirguṇa-Īśvara-dhyānam. Nirguṇa-Īśvara-dhyānam is an integral part of jñāna-yōga-sādhāna. And in technical language, this nirguṇa-Īśvara-dhyānam is called nidhidhyāsanam. So thus there are some people who practice nidhidhyāsanam which is meditating upon my highest nature.

So yē tu akṣaram paryupāsate; there some others who meditate upon akṣaram; akṣaram means the absolute-Brahma; akṣaram-brahma-paramam, the nirguṇam-brahma.

And what is the description of nirguṇa-Īśvara; several words Kṛṣṇa uses; all these are the Upaniṣadic words; each word is a significant word; I will rearrange the verse for the sake of communication.

First description we will take up is avyaktam; Nirguṇa-Īśvara; Īśvara in His highest form or highest nature is avyaktaḥ; avyaktaḥ means sarva-indriya-agōcaraḥ; not perceptible to any sense organ. And we have five sense organs and each sense organ is capable of perceiving one one attribute; one sense organ perceives śabda, the sound; another perceives sparśa the sound; another perceives the rūpam, the form and colour; another perceives rasa the taste; and the fifth one perceives gandha the smell. Thus we have five sense organs; objectifying five-fold attributes; śabda sparśa rūpa rasa gandhaḥ. In fact the whole-universe physical-universe is nothing but a blend of śabda sparśa rūpa rasa gandhaḥ.

That is why it is called prapañcaḥ; prapañcaḥ means what? The world consisting of five segments; in the form of śabda sparśa rūpa rasa gandhaḥ; and that is why you close the five sense organs, the whole segmented world disappears. And our Nirguṇa Kṛṣṇa Īśvara does not have all the five attributes. Therefore he is called what? Avyaktam. That means what; the original Kṛṣṇa cannot be seen; original Kṛṣṇa cannot be heard; smelt; tasted or touched.

So what about adharam madhuram, vadhanam madhuram and all; so beautiful lipped Kṛṣṇa. What about that Kṛṣṇa? According to Kṛṣṇa himself; they are all non-original Kṛṣṇa; they are apara prakṛti; they are māya mānuṣa vēṣa. You start with māya vēṣaḥ; but you have to transcend the māya vēṣa. And there are some people who meditate upon avyaktam. OK.

There are many things which cannot be perceived by the sense organs but they can be conceived by the mind; there are so many emotions; love; anger; happiness; etc. they are not perceptible; many mathematical scientific concepts and laws; you do not see; but they are all ideas; Ideas cannot be perceived by the sense organs; but they can be conceived by the mind; that is why they are called concepts; OK: can you say Nirguṇa Kṛṣṇa can be conceived by the mind.

Kṛṣṇa puts another bomb-shell; acinthyam; I cannot be conceived; nor be delivered; if conceived delivery is assured. Therefore I am not one of the concepts of the mind; it is not a mathematical theorem or idea; therefore I am unobjectifiable by your mind also; acinthyam; inconceivable. In Sānskrīt, manō agōcaram; first one is what; indriya agōcaram. Now; manō-agōcaram.

And if the Lord cannot be perceived or conceived how can you talk about that Lord; because words are sound symbols used to communicate the objects which are either perceived by you or conceived by you. So you see this when this was invented for the first time; there is an object perceived and therefore for transactional purposes you want to invent a word. So you invent the word 'clip'; so the word 'clip' came only a sound symbol to communicate an object which is sensorially perceived or mentally conceived. When God is, means the Nirguṇa God is, neither sensorially perceived nor mentally conceived, how you can have a word to talk about that.

And therefore the Lord cannot be described also. Therefore, anirdēśyam; indescribable; So imperceptible; inconceivable; indescribable.

So fundamental doubt will arise whether there is such a thing. Is there any possibility at all of the existence of such a thing? As somebody said; it appears to be a big bloated bladder of bluff. So there are some philosophers who say that Nirguṇa Brahman does not exist at all; it is like the emperor's robe. So we go on the talking and the paramānanda śiṣyās out of respect for the teacher; they nod; they nod their head; it is not possible; that is not possible. That is what it appears; because it is imperceptible; inconceivable and indescribable.

So we may think; in fact, all put together in one word we can say: it is unobjectifiable; because these are different pramāṇams; sense organs are called pratyakṣa pramāṇam, mental concepts are anumāna arthāpatti etc.; words are śabda-pramāṇam, sarva-pramāṇa-agōcaram; unobjectifiable, one technical word we use for this is: apramēyaḥ. Therefore Nirguṇa-Īśvara is apramēyaḥ. That is why in Viṣṇu-sahasraṇāma; one of the nāma is apramēyō ṛṣikēśō padmanābhō amaraprabhuḥ.

They say somebody had confusion it seems: padmanābhō amaraprabhuḥ or padmanābhō mara prabhuḥ? So somebody said both are correct; because in Viśva-rūpa darśanam we have said that everything is Lord; therefore Lord is maram also; so padmanābhō amaraprabhuḥ, the eternal one; padmanābhō maraprabhuḥ; the tree also. Anyway that is a different aside point. What I want to say is: apramēyaḥ.

Now once we say the Lord is unobjectifiable at all; we will conclude that such a God cannot exist and therefore Kṛṣṇa puts another bomb-shell; He says: Do you say that Nirguṇa Īśvara is not there?

I say He is everywhere; sarvatrāgam; Nirguṇam brahma not only exists but "he" within quotes; because for Nirguṇam, we cannot use, he/she/it we cannot use; but we have to use some pronoun, Nirguṇa-Kṛṣṇa is everywhere. That is why when somebody wrote God is nowhere; What did he do; he put a comma, after w in now; here; nowhere becomes now here; And when you look around; Vēdānta will say tat tvam asi; That is secret; later; sarvatrāgam means all pervading.

And if that Lord is all pervading; acalam; you can understand; acalam means what; that which does not move; a saguṇa-Kṛṣṇa; A personal Kṛṣṇa can move from Mathura to Dwaraka; Dwaraka to battlefield; this place to that place; all are possible because Saguṇa-Īśvara is finite; but nirguṇa-Īśvara being formless; whatever does not have form is all pervading; because form always gives the periphery of an object.

I have talked about this before I think; whether this hall is square or rectangular; how will you decide; you look at the periphery. Therefore to have to form is to have a boundary; you can never talk about a form without talking about boundary. Therefore yathra yathra form thathra thathra boundary. If the Lord does not have the attribute of a form; that Lord cannot have a boundary. Therefore ākāśavat-sarvagata; like the space;

the Lord has to be all-pervading. And therefore just as the space cannot move from one place to another; Nirguṇa-Kṛṣṇa also does not come and go.

Then what about our ṣōdaśa upacāra pūja; in which we invite the Lord and not only invite the Lord and feed. At the end we say: gaccha; yatha sthanam pratiṣṭāpayāmi. Therefore the Lord what we worship is subject to arrival and departure; whereas the highest Lord is non-arriving-non-departing Īśvaraḥ. Therefore acalam.

Thus the word sarvatrāgam and acalam indicate dēśa pariscēda rahithaḥ; free from spatial limitation; as we saw in Taittiriya Upaniṣad; Anantham.

And then the next word we will take up is kūṭastham; kūṭastham means nirvikāram; free from all modifications. We have seen six modifications on the part of the physical body; do you remember; asthi, potentially existent; jāyatē, born; vardhatē, grows; vipariṇamatē, metamorphoses; kṣiyatē, declines; vinaśyati, dies. These are the six-fold modifications caused by what; kāla tatvam; the time principle; So anything that exists within time; anything that influenced by time; with grow what; all the six-fold modification. The higher Kṛṣṇa; Nirguṇa-Kṛṣṇa is kūṭasthaḥ; it is free from all the six modifications; nirvikāraḥ. In Sānskrīt, kāla-paricētha-rahithaḥ; uninfluenced by time principle.

And this word is beautiful; the word kūṭasthaḥ has several meanings; one of the meanings is kūṭaḥ means the anvil used by a goldsmith; or an ironsmith; any smith. This anvil is used as a support; it steadily remains; and upon the anvil; this means smith keeps the hot metal and when it is hot; strikes it and shapes the metal; and when he is shaping the metal; that red hot metal undergoes change; whereas the anvil underneath, it supports all the changes; but itself remains changeless. And suppose the anvil itself is shaky, in some house, the palakai they use for pūja, and then you sit, you will be moving. You cannot do any job; therefore, if the metal should get shaped; the bottom one should remain changeless; a changeless substratum is required for all the changes to happen; relentless changes happening at the family level; physical level; body is getting in different shapes, going out of shape, sometimes getting into shape; not only the body undergoes violent changes; the mind also. So many changes and if all these changes are happening; there must be a changeless principle; which remains as the substratum; Not only allowing all the changes to happen; but also witnessing all the changes. The witness of the changes should not be changing.

Suppose I say that the morning class students are different from evening class; and evening class are different from morning class; what do you know; that the students change; but the teacher is avasthatraya sākṣi. If morning class student teacher is different; and evening class teacher is different; I will never be able to say that the morning class students are different; evening class students are different. And therefore the knower of changes should not be subject to change. And therefore the witness consciousness-principle is compared to kūṭaḥ; an anvil; upon which the body-metal and the mind-metal is hammered; hammered by what; the various experiences of life; every letter you received; every phone call you get; they are all hammering on your head; When all these hammerings takes place, your body changes; your mind changes; but there is the changeless one.

And therefore Nirguṇa-Kṛṣṇa is called the changeless substratum which remains like an anvil; kūṭavat tiṣṭathi is kūṭasthaḥ; that which remains changeless like an anthill.

And since this Kṛṣṇa is changeless Nirvikaraḥ; dhruvam; dhruvam means eternal; kāla adīthaḥ; So thus, sarvathrāgam and acalam indicate dēśa athithaḥ; kūṭasthaḥ and dhruvam represent kāla athithaḥ. These four words put together means that Lord Kṛṣṇa is dēśa kāla avadibhyam nirmuktaḥ; nityamuktaḥ. Narayanīyam of Bhattathiri, begins with this only; sāndra-ānanda-āvabōdhātmaka-amanupamitaḥ kāla-dēśā-avadhibhyāṁ nirmuktaḥ.

And the interesting aspect there is that all pervading Lord is in Guruvayūr. How do you understand to resolve the contradiction. How do you resolve the contradiction; by adding "also: the all-pervading Guruvayūrappan is in Guruvayūr also. So kūṭastham acalam dhruvam. Such an Nirguṇa-Brahma some people meditate as a part of jñāna-yōga; as a part of sṛavana manana nidhidhyāsanam.

And naturally, as we hear this description we wonder how can we meditate upon such featureless Brahman. And therefore Kṛṣṇa says: to come to this level of meditation; a person must have prepared qualified himself. So the next question is what are those qualifications? Kṛṣṇa mentions in the next verse.

संनियम्येन्द्रियग्रामम् सर्वत्र समबुद्धयः ।
ते प्राप्नुवन्ति मामेव सर्वभूतहिते रताः ॥ १२.४ ॥

tē prāpnuvanti māmēva sarvabhūtahitē ratāḥ || 12.4 ||

The preparatory qualifications for this Nirguṇa-Īśvara-dhyānam are presented the Upaniṣads very clearly; and normally they are enumerated as the four fold qualifications; sādhanā catuṣṭaya sampathiḥ; which we have seen long long long before in Tatva Bodha. I am not going to the details; I will just enumerate them for my satisfaction; discrimination, dispassion; discipline and desire; Four Ds. OK; Do not say I have heard only 3D. It is a different Ds. Those who have not gone through Tatva Bodha or introduction to Vēdānta should go through them necessarily and those four-fold qualifications alone are presented in a brief manner in this particular verse.

So one qualification that Kṛṣṇa emphasises is indriya-grāmam saṁniyamya; one has to master the extrovert sense organs. One has to master the extrovert sense organs; which are the all the time wandering. And if the sense organs are wandering out, it does not matter, they carry the mind also along with. And that is why when there is a பல்லி palli, a lizard in the middle of the class; class out; because the eyes see the lizard and the mind also goes behind.

And why should we master the extrovert sense organs. What is the reason? I will give you a clue here. Previously Kṛṣṇa has described His higher-nature; Nirguṇa Īśvaraḥ as unobjectifiable one; Unobjectifiable சொன்ன புரியறதே? Means not experienceable as an object.

And if Nirguṇa-Īśvara is not objectifiable and still such an Īśvara exists; that Lord can exist only in one way. There is only one thing in the creation; which is unobjectifiable. Can you guess what it is? There is only thing which exists in an unobjectifiable manner; with your eyes; powerful eyes; you can see everything except one thing; what: the eyes cannot see themselves; a very very peculiar situation. So the unobjectifiable entity is the subject I alone; the unobservable principle is the observer alone. The unexperiensable is the experiencer alone and therefore the higher Kṛṣṇa is non-different from Me; the observing consciousness. So nirguṇa dhyānam is ātma-dhyānam. Meditating upon nirguṇa-Īśvara is meditating upon myself. Myself; not the body; because body is objectifiable; we are talking about the unobjectifiable thing. And therefore nirguṇa dhyānam is equal to ātma dhyānam; or as Dayānanda-Swami beautifully says; meditation upon the meditator; mediator-meditation. Anyway I am not going to the details; when some other occasion comes, we can dwell on that topic.

And since I am not objectifying anything; my sense organs cannot afford to be extrovert; an extrovert sense organs will dwell upon an objectifiable thing; whereas I have to dwell upon what; I the subject; and therefore the sense organs should be the non-extrovert; if you remember the sixth chapter of the Gītā; we have talked about meditation, where Kṛṣṇa said you withdraw all the sense organs and what should you do with the eyes? Do you remember? He said: samprēkṣya-nāsikāgraṁ svaṁ diśaścānavalōkayan; let your eyes be focused on the tip of your nose; not nose-dhyānam; So the focus on the tip of the nose means let it not focus any external object; And therefore indriya nigrahaḥ is one qualification required.

Then the next qualification is indriyagrāma; grāmaḥ not village; grāma means samūham; the group; Village is called grama because it is a group of houses; any group is grāmam; So indriya grāmam means the group of five sense organs,

And next qualification is sarvatra samabuddhayaḥ. So maintaining eqanimity under all circumstances; sama buddhiḥ means an equanimous mind; a balanced mind; a poised mind; which means a mind; which does not have strong rāga-dvēṣa; if there is a strong attachment; the mind will run after that object. If there is a strong hatred also; the mind will run after; for cursing. So whenever there is strong rāga or dvēṣa; mind will not have balance. Such a mind cannot meditate; and therefore may you reduce the intensity of rāga dvēṣa; Rāga means attachment; dvēṣa means aversion; likes and dislikes. This is the second qualification.

Then the third qualification mentioned here is sarvabhūtahite ratāḥ; being committed to the well being of all the creatures all the living beings; universal love; interest in the well-being of the entire universe; that means not a narrow mind; but an expanded mind; that is why our prayers are so beautiful; sarvē bhavantu sukhinaḥ; there the pronoun alone is used; sarvē manuṣyaḥ is not said; sarvē pandava is not said; sarvē Indians not said; sarvē means what all creatures.

शृण्वन्तु विश्वे अमृतस्य पुत्र आये धामानी दिव्यानितस्तु तचम्योरावृणीमहे गातुम् यज्ञाय गातुम् याजनपतये दैवी स्वस्तिरस्तुन स्वस्तिर मानुषेभ्यः उर्थम् जिगातु भेषजम् शं नो अस्तु द्विपदे शं चतुष्पते ओम् शांती ओम् शांती ओम् ॥

śṛṇvantu vīśvē amṛtasya putra āyē dhāmānī divyānitastu tacamyōrāvṛṇīmahē gātum yajñāya gātum yājanapatayē daivī svastirastuna svastira mānuṣēbhya : urtham jigātu bhēṣajam śam nō astu dvipadē śam catuṣpatē om śāntī om śāntī om

All two-legged creatures; all four-legged creatures; six-legged creatures; 8 legged creates; all of them; So therefore I should sensitise the mind to feel the pains of other people; It requires a mind with empathy; a mind which can feel the difficulties of others; and being interested in the well-being.

Now the question is: How can I be interested in the wellbeing of all the creatures; I am not be able to take care of wellbeing of my family; in that itself thousands of complaints; So if you interview the children, husband or wife; you will know. So where is the question sarvabhūtahitē ratatvam? Very simple, you can be sarva-bhūta-hit-e-ratāḥ; very simple thing; daily at least chant one prayer; and chanting of the prayer will produce some amount of puṇyam; and that puṇyam I say; whatever the amount of puṇyam; I am distributing to the whole cosmos. If I am able to chant one prayer for one minute; and say that the puṇyam I am gifting to all the living beings; wherever whatever suffering is there; let there be some benefit. This prayer itself makes my mind sensitive; this is called daya; empathy, compassion. Without such a sensitive mind; one cannot come to Brahma dhyānam. So it requires a highly refined mind; a narrow mind cannot appreciate Brahman. therefore sarvabhūtahite ratāḥ means interested in the well-being of all the living beings.

This is the qualification for what; jñāna-yōgaḥ; or nirguṇa Īśvaraḥ dhyānam; which is supposed to be the highest level of bhakthi; and those people who have these qualification; We will call this jñāna-yōgyatha. So those people who have jñāna-yōgyatha or dhyāna yōgyatha practice this nirguṇa Īśvara dhyānam And what will happen to them? What is the benefit of such a meditation? Tē mām ēva prapnuvanti; such people will attain me alone. Such people means what? such meditators, nirguṇa-Īśvara-dhyāna karthāraḥ; they attain Me alone; that means what; they attain mōkṣa; mām ēva; that ēva you have thrice; tē ēva mām prapnuvanti; they alone will attain mōkṣa; then, tē ēva mām prapnuvanti; they alone attain mōkṣa; no other inferior result; and tē prapnuvanti ēva; they will necessarily attain mōkṣa.

So you compare with the first answer and second answer; First He said saguṇa meditators are superior and here He says Nirguṇa meditators will attain Me. From this what is clear? Everyone requires both.

क्लेशोऽधिकतरस्तेषाम् अव्यक्तासक्तचेतसाम् ।
अव्यक्ता हि गतिर्दुःखं देहवद्भिरवाप्यते ॥ १२.५ ॥

klēśō'dhikatarastēṣām avyaktāsaktacētasām |
avyaktā hi gatirduḥkham dēhavadbhiravāpyatē || 12.5 ||

क्लेशः अधिकतरः klēśaḥ adhikatarāḥ difficulties are more तेषाम् tēṣām for those (devotees) अव्यक्तासक्तचेतसाम् avyaktāsaktacētasām whose minds are committed to (the pursuit of) the unmanifest (Brahman), हि hi for, गतिः अव्यक्ता gatiḥ avyaktā the goal of unmanifest (Brahman), अवाप्यते दुःखम् avāpyatē duḥkham is attained with difficulty देहवद्भिः dēhavadbhiḥ by the people of bodily attachment.

5. Difficulties are more for those people whose minds are committed to (the pursuit of) the unmanifest (Brahman), for the goal of unmanifest (Brahman) is attained with difficulty by the people of bodily attachment.

So in this verse, Kṛṣṇa openly admits that nirguṇa-dhyānam is extremely difficult; which indirectly means jñāna-yōga is extremely difficult; because nirguṇa-dhyānam is part of jñāna-yōga only. Jñāna-yōga consists of three disciplines; sravanam; mananam and nidhidhyāsanam. And nidhidhyāsanam is called nirguṇa dhyānam.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa says: klēśaḥ adhikatarāḥ; difficulties abound; obstacles are innumerable.

for whom; avyaktāsaktacētasām; for those people who are committed to the formless God; avyaktam we have seen before; indriya agōcaram; not perceptible; the invisible formless principle; asaktha means committed; cētasa means mind; for those people who are committed to nirguṇa-Īśvara-dhyānam; difficulties are very intense; They are almost insurmountable; and Kathōpaniṣad even uses the word kṣurasya-dhārā niśitā-duratyayā durgam pathastat-kavayō vadanti. It is like walking on a razor's edge; kṣurasya dhārā. Kṛṣṇa says jñāna-yōga is difficult; what is the reason.

Because avyaktā gatiḥ hi duḥkham; so avyaktā gatiḥ, the destination of the formless one; gatiḥ means the destination of avayatha the formless is indeed duḥkham; duḥkham means difficult to reach.

So nirguṇa dhyānam is extremely difficult to practice for whom? Dēhavadbhiḥ; for the ordinary people; normal people for the majority,

And what is the common obstacle for all the people; for the majority? Kṛṣṇa says the common obstacle is dēha abhimānāḥ. The biggest and commonest obstacle to vēdānta is strong attachment to one own's physical body which makes the mind grossest mind; because we are identified with our grossest personality. To remember yesterday 's class; grossest annamaya kōśa abhimānāḥ; he does not have even time to think of improving the mind, because where is the time of think of improving the mind, when I am all the time busy improving the body.

And therefore I am obsessed with the body; I am obsessed with the protection of the body; therefore I am obsessed with the procurement for food, clothing and shelter and I am obsessed with the procurement of these three after retirement; that also has been seen; there will be no income; and the inflation; diseases comes; who will pay for the medical bill; are the children reliable; seeing them; it is not; they may be reliable; but what type of daughter in law will come I do not know;

Therefore all the time worried about my physical security; and such a mind cannot think of anything beyond the physical body; and once I am attached to the physical body; through the physical body, I will be attached to the people around; directly proportional to the physical attachment is: attachment to various relations because every relation is through the body.

And therefore I have a very strong individuality; limiting me; localising me; and therefore such a person cannot imagine the unlocalised formless; it cannot transform itself; transform is transcending the form is transformation. And therefore Kṛṣṇa says: stronger the bodily attachment; more difficult is jñāna-yōgaḥ; the details in the next class.

Hari Om

I had pointed out that in the 12th chapter of the Gīta, Lord Kṛṣṇa is presenting Bhakthi-yōga in five levels. And the fifth and the final level of bhakthi yōga is nothing but jñāna-yōga itself. So we should remember jñāna-yōga is the highest and the final level of bhakthi-yōga. And here the Lord that is worshipped by me through this level of bhakthi is not the saguṇa-Īśvaraḥ; but Īśvaraḥ in his original nature; which is nirguṇam Brahma. So in jñāna-yōga; I am worshipping Nirguṇa Īśvaraḥ. And the worship of nirguṇa-Īśvaraḥ is also a unique worship. It is not a physical worship of āsanaṁ-samarpayāmi; argyam samarpayāmi, pādyam-samarpayāmi, etc. because for nirguṇam-Brahma where is the question of argyam, pādyam, etc. Argyam means water for washing the hands; Pādyam means water for washing the feet; ācamaṇīyam water for washing the mouth. And nirguṇa-Īśvaraḥ does not have hands, does not have feet; does not have the mouth; where is the question of argya, pādya ācamaṇīyādi.

And therefore worship is in the form of the very steady about nirguṇam Brahma; the very enquiry is a form of worship; the enquiry consisting of śravaṇa, mananam and nidhidhyāsanam; systematic study, gaining the knowledge; converting it into conviction, and assimilating this wisdom; that alone is the pūja and what I am offering is, offering my ignorance into the fire of knowledge; and therefore jñāna-yōga itself is the form of worship I have to practice.

And this jñāna-yōga form of worship which is the fifth and final stage of bhakthi-yōga is presented by the Lord in three verses; verse No.3, 4 and 5. It is jñāna-yōga form of bhakthi yōga; And the word that Lord Kṛṣṇa is using here is akṣarōpasana. For jñāna-yōga the technical word is akṣarōpasana; akṣaram means nirguṇam Brahma; and upāsanaṁ means śravaṇa manana nidhidhyāsanam. Akṣarōpasanaṁ is nirguṇa-Brahma-viṣaya śravaṇa-manana nidhidhyāsanāni. And the jñāna-yōgis are called akṣara upāsakās.

And having talked about the akṣara upāsana or nirguṇa Brahma vicāra, Lord Kṛṣṇa openly admits and confesses that jñāna-yōga is extremely difficult:

क्लेशोऽधिकतरस्तेषाम् अव्यक्तासक्तचेतसाम् ।
अव्यक्ता हि गतिर्दुःखं देहवद्भिरवाप्यते ॥ १२.५ ॥

klēśō'dhikatarastēṣām avyaktāsaktacētasām |
avyaktā hi gatirduḥkhaṁ dēhavadbhiravāpyatē || 12.5 ||

And I said in the last class, the Upaniṣad itself compares jñāna-yōga to walking on a razor's edge. Kṣurasya dhārā niśitā duratyayā durgam pathastatkavayō vadanti. And why jñāna-yōga is difficult is the reason that the Lord I want here to worship is not available for objectification. And the Lord is not available for mental conception. It is imperceptible, unconceivable. And how can I worship or even study. Because my intellect is used to objectification and therefore an objectifying instrument will find it difficult to conceive of an unobjectifiable Brahman. And it can be ultimately received only in one form; and what is that form; that Brahman the nirguṇa-vastu is not objectifiable; not because it is non-existent; but because it is in the form of myself; Sōham. That is called sōham dhyānam; saḥ means what. That nirguṇam Brahman; aham means I am; sōham; very carefully you should write; if you are writing in Tamil; you may later read as சொகம். Śōkam; it is not śōkam; do not understand it is śōkam; but sōham; but as aham saḥ; and that alone got shortened and known as hamsa mantra hamsa gayathri is the shortened version of aham saḥ. Anyway, that is a different thing.

So the first problem is what; it is unobjectifiable. And the second problem we face is it requires lot of qualifications like vivēka; vairāgyam; śamāthi śatka sampathi, mumukṣatvam, etc. and therefore also it appears to be difficult; and therefore Kṛṣṇa says klēśaḥ adhikataḥ. Up to this we saw in the last class.

Now the question is: If jñāna-yōga is extremely difficult; what am I supposed to do; because I am a spiritual-seeker; and I am interested in mōkṣa; but I am not able to follow jñāna-yōga; what should I do? Here alone we should be extremely careful; here alone people get into problems; majority of people give an answer which is totally non-vēdic. What is the answer generally given? If jñāna-yōga is difficult; leave it. Then what do you do; try alternative paths; there is karma-yōga; there is bhakthi yōga; there is rāja-yōga; there is nāda-yōga; music season is now; there is nāda-yōga; there is kuṇḍālīni-yōga; So many yōgas are there; Therefore the general answer given is since jñāna-yōga is difficult for majority; it is better to follow a simpler yōga. And generally they conclude bhakthi-yōga is simpler yōga; because you have to shed tears; in which we are experts!

So this is missing the sampradāya. If a person gives such an answer; it means one has deviated from the sampradāya; Sampradāya will never give such an answer. Sampradāya means what; traditional teaching. What is wrong with this answer? You should understand that we have already established through the vēdās and the upaniṣads that for mōkṣa; several mārgās are not there; tamēvam vidhvān amṛta iha bhavati; nānya panthā ayanāya vidyatē.

Vēdās clearly says only jñānam will lead a person to mōkṣa; other than jñānam, alternative mārgās are not there. Because if ignorance is the problem, knowledge is the only solution; If darkness it the problem; bringing light is the only solution. Imagine the room is dark and you want to remove darkness from the room. How many margas are there to remove darkness; one person says I do not have light at all and please bring the broomstick and I will sweep away darkness. Another person says I will do śirasāsanam in the room; Another person says I will chant viṣṇu-sahasṛanama. Remember, viṣṇu-sahasṛanama is good but it cannot remove darkness; Yōgāsana is very good; but it cannot remove darkness; sweeping the floor is wonderful; but it cannot remove darkness.

अविरोधितया कर्म नाविद्यां विनिवर्तयेत् ।
विद्याविद्यां निहन्त्येव तेजस्तिमिरसङ्घवत् ॥ ३ ॥

avirōdhitayā karma nāvidyāṁ vinivartayēt |
vidyāvīdyāṁ nihantyeva tējastimirasāṅghavat || 3 ||

Śankarācārya tells very clearly in his Ātma-Bōdha; that darkness can go only by light; ignorance can go only by knowledge. Saṁsāra is because of ignorance; therefore mōkṣa can be only through knowledge. And if I firmly assert that knowledge is the only means, you should not conclude I am a fanatic; because when I have to ascertain a fact, you cannot call me a fanatic. That means what if I should not be a fanatic, I should admit alternative methods for removing darkness. Even if call me a fanatic, I would like to be a fanatic, as Dayānanda Swami says; I say light alone removes darkness; if you call me a fanatic; better I will be a fanatic; rather than a lunatic. So you call me by whatever name; I have to tell ignorance goes by knowledge alone. And the vēdās repeatedly ascertain jñānāt ēva thu kaivalyam. And therefore to say that jñānam is difficult and therefore I will take alternative method, is born out of confusion regarding spirituality.

And again we should remember darkness or ignorance goes only by knowledge; and knowledge comes only by enquiry or study. Any knowledge will come only by studying the relevant literature. If I want physics knowledge, I have no other method other than studying the physics literature; How many methods are there; I have no choice. If there are alternative methods of getting knowledge; Like meditation; you go on saying what is physics; what is physics; a + b 2 is equal to what. You want to know; therefore you mediate. a + b wholesquare, a + b wholesquare. What do you get? You cannot get the knowledge by simply doing pādapūja to mathematics teacher; by chanting some mantras; by going to some temples; knowledge requires the relevant study. Any knowledge requires consistent and systematic study. That should be extended this knowledge also. That also requires Athāthō Brahma Jijñāsa. Vyāsācārya begins with this Sūtra; Jijñāsa means systematic study of the relevant literature. I want to know physics and I read star dust; Not only you should study; I should study the appropriate literature.

And this systematic study is called jñāna-yōgaḥ. Therefore jñāna-yōga alone gives jñānam; and jñānam alone removes ignorance and removal of ignorance alone gives mōkṣa. This foundation we should very carefully have. This is the traditional teaching. To study any commentary of Śankarācārya on any book, these fundamentals he will make clear and if this is not clear; we will do lot of spiritual-sādhanās without knowing what exactly I am in for.

And if there is alternative method of getting knowledge; like touching the head; sparśa dīkṣa; dṛṣṭi-dīkṣa; or touching on the back; if by doing such any such thing, knowledge can be given, Kṛṣṇa would have used that shortcut in the battle ground. Isn't it? Because battle ground is the most inconvenient place for teaching. Therefore Kṛṣṇa must have handed over the knowledge by any other simpler method. The very fact that Kṛṣṇa himself did not adopt indicates there are no alternative methods. Go through systematic study; gain knowledge and be free. This is jñāna-yōga. So therefore never say jñāna-yōga is difficult and therefore I will take to alternative method. Not possible. Then what should I do. Because Kṛṣṇa himself says jñāna-yōga is difficult; and you say I have necessarily go through jñāna-yōga; what should I do; the answer is very simple. If jñāna-yōga is difficult; make jñāna-yōga easy;

If jñāna-yōga is difficult; make jñāna-yōga easy. So what is the next question? How to make jñāna-yōga easy. Very simple. You prepare yourselves for jñāna-yōga; you qualify yourselves for jñāna-yōga; by getting jñāna-yōgyatha prāp̥thiḥ. And once I am qualified; jñāna-yōga is Kṛṣṇa tells that:

राजविद्या राजगुह्यं पवित्रमिदमुत्तमम् ।
प्रत्यक्षावगमं धर्म्यं सुसुखं कर्तुमव्ययम् ॥ ९.२ ॥

[rājavidyā rājaguhyaṁ pavitramidamuttamam |
pratyakṣāvagamam dharmyaṁ susukhaṁ kartumavyayam || 9.2 ||](#)

Lord himself says jñāna-yōga is the easiest; provided you have prepared yourselves. In fact this is not with regard to jñāna-yōga only; anything is difficult only if you are not prepared and anything is easy, if you have prepared and practised. Have you gone to a Kerala Teashop and you see him how he mixes the tea. You will find the davara and glass, it will just expand and contract; and you will the tea also expands and contracts; And it is not even vertical; it is almost horizontal; All the law of gravitation seems to have failed in his case. It is wonderful sight to see; you better see that, if you have not seen; And he does not even look at the tea. He is talking politics to the person there and then tuk one sound and he keeps the glass with all the froth; it will be there in front. And because he is doing this effortless, you try. At the end only davara only; there will be no tea. So காப்பி ஆத்தறதும் கஷ்டம்தான்; even cooling the coffee is also difficult.

Therefore jñāna-yōga is easy or difficult; we never answer; we ask the question for whom? For the unprepared it is difficult; for the prepared it is easy. And therefore prepare; come to jñāna-yōga; attain jñānam and be free. This is the traditional answer.

Then what is the next question. How to prepare myself for jñāna-yōga; And that preparation alone Lord Kṛṣṇa himself presents in the following ślōkās; Jñāna-yōga is the fifth and final step; If you find the fifth step very difficult; go to the fourth; if you find fourth is difficult to reach, go to the third; if third is difficult, go to the second; if second is difficult, go to the first; if first is difficult; I do not want to go to hell and all. If the first is difficult, better luck, next birth. So we have a beautiful flight of stairs. Saturday class also a staircase of five steps; Sunday class also a staircase of five steps.

Now Kṛṣṇa wants to come down from the fifth level to the fourth level, which is given in the next three verses. We will read. Verse No.6.

Verse 12.6

ये तु सर्वाणि कर्माणि मयि संन्यस्य मत्पराः । अनन्येनैव योगेन मां ध्यायन्त उपासते ॥ १२.६ ॥

yē tu sarvāṇi karmāṇi mayi sannasya matparaḥ |
ananyēnaiva yōgēna māṃ dhyāyanta upāsatē || 12.6 ||

Verse 12.7

तेषामहं समुद्धर्ता मृत्युसंसारसागरात् ।
भवामि निचिरात्पार्थ मय्यावेशितचेतसाम् ॥ १२.७ ॥

Tēṣāmaham samuddhartā mṛtyusaṃsārasāgarāt |
bhavāmi na cirāt pārtha mayyāvēśitacētasām || 12.7 ||

6 & 7. Keeping Me as the primary goal and dedicating all actions unto Me, some devotees worship, meditating upon Me with undivided attention. For them, whose minds are set on me, I shall soon become the saviour from the ocean of saṃsāra which is beset with death, Oh Arjuna!

So in verse No. 6, 7 and 8, Lord Kṛṣṇa is coming one step lower; from the 5th step to the 4th step. And what is that? If Nirguṇa-Īśvaraḥ-jñānam is difficult for you; come down to saguṇa-Īśvaraḥ-upāśana. Come down to saguṇa-Īśvaraḥ-upāśana. Meditation upon Īśvaraḥ with attributes. And there also I divided saguṇa-Īśvaraḥ into two types, I do not know whether you remember; one saguṇa-Īśvaraḥ is the Lord as the entire universe called the Viśva-rūpa-Īśvaraḥ; the Virāt-Īśvaraḥ described in the eleventh chapter, which we get in the Viśṇu-sahasṛanāma dhyāna-slōkā.

भूः पादौ यस्य नाभिर्वियदसुरनिलश्चन्द्र सूर्यो च नेत्रे कर्णावाशाः शिरो द्यौर्मुखमपि दहनो यस्य वास्तेयमब्धिः । अन्तःस्थं यस्य विश्वं सुरनरखगगोभोगिगन्धर्वदैत्यैः चित्रं रम्यते तं त्रिभुवन वपुषं विष्णुमीशं नमामि ॥ २ ॥

bhūḥ pādau yasya nābhīrviyadasuranilaścandra sūryau ca nētrē karṇāvāśāḥ śirō dyaurmukhamapi dahanō yasya vāstēyamabdhiḥ | antaḥsthaṁ yasya viśvaṁ suranarakhagagōbhōgigandharvadaityaiḥ citraṁ raṁramyatē taṁ tribhuvana vapuṣaṁ viṣṇumiśaṁ namāmi || 2 ||

The Lord whose body consists of all the three lōkās; Viṣṇum īsam namāmi; which is the Viśva-rūpa-Īśvaraḥ; May you practice Viśva-rūpa-dhyānam. And not only you practice the Viśva-rūpa-dhyānam; even when you are in the worldly transactions; dedicate all your actions to the Viśva-rūpa-Īśvaraḥ. Jagata-īśadi, yukta-sēvanam, aṣṭamūrthi dṛk, dēva pūjanam.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa tells her; yē tu; there are some other seekers, who are in the fourth rung of the ladder; and what do they do; sarvāṇi karmāṇi mayi sannyasya. So they dedicate all the actions at my feet; and where are the feet of the Lord; sarvatra pāṇi pādama tat; sarvatō śīśirō mukhaṁ. Lord's feet are everywhere. So when I am doing an action; this action goes to the world and it is acted upon by the laws of the universe and all these are done by whom; the Lord whose hands are nothing but the laws of karma. Therefore when I say, the laws of karma shape the result; for me the devotee; the laws of karma are the hands of the Lord. Every law is the hands of the lord; so Lord is shaping the result through his hands in the form of the law of karma. And therefore I dedicate to the laws of karma; to the hands of the lord;

Sarvāṇi karmāṇi mayi sannyasya; here the word sanyas is not renouncing. Normally the word sanyāsa means renunciation. In this context, sanyāsa means dedicating, offering.

And now the question is how can I offer the karma to the Lord. Imagine I am going to sweep or I going to write a letter; or going to do a project in the computer. How am I going to dedicate? So what do you mean by dedication? Dedication is nothing but a particular attitude; and what is the attitude; until I complete my action, I have got a control over the action; karmaṇyēvādhikāraṣṭē; and once I have completed the action; the action has become part of this universe. And universe is none other than God, because Viśva-rūpa Īśvaraḥ; and this action will be reshaped in this universe by the Lord, and according to the law of karma, an appropriate and just result is going to come; and I am mentally prepared to accept any consequence according to the law, not fancies of the lord; but the result is going to be perfectly according to the laws of karma. That means I am going to get what I legitimately deserve. And it is given to me by whom; the lord himself; because the world is not a world for me; world is for me Viśva-rūpa Īśvaraḥ. And therefore I mentally think; my action is going to the Lord; and Lord is giving to give me the karma-phalam and whatever be the consequence. I will accept without murmuring; without grumbling; without cursing; without hesitating; I will receive. This inner receptivity is called dedication. This inner receptivity with regard to what; the consequences of any action I do. And that is called here Īśvaraḥ arpaṇa bhāvana; so mayi sannyasya.

And then matparāḥ; and when you are practising this Īśvaraḥ arpaṇam you must always remember in the mind, that my aim is to qualify myself for the fifth step. I have come to the fourth step; only for qualifying myself for the fifth step; and therefore I should remember this fact; matparāḥ; All the time committed to the goal of nirguṇa Īśvaraḥ, All the time committed to the goal of nirguṇa-Īśvara-jñānam; which is the ultimate reality;

And ananyēna ēva yōgēna; and taking to a spiritual life, in which he never gets distracted from the goal; because initially we might be very clear about the goal; but as we get into the worldly activities; the responsibilities increase; the family members increase; the primary family; the secondary family; relations' relations and we are involved in so many activities; the chances are we forget for what purpose we have come. So this forgetfulness of the goal is possible; distraction is possible and therefore Kṛṣṇa wants this Viśva-rūpa upāsaka constantly reminds my aim is qualifying myself for this knowledge. And that is called ananya yōgaḥ; unswerving commitment to the spiritual path. I have given you the example in the 8th chapter; When we go to some place in a train; maybe Delhi and Calcutta; in between there are so many intermediary station; we may get down; we may buy newspapers; we may buy eatables; we may do all transactions; but in and through all the transactions you are aware that this is not the destination but this is an intermediary stop; the vadai may be very tasty; but if you get in the vadai; the train may go; enjoy the vadai; without forgetting that you are in the midst of a bigger journey. And that is called ananya yōgaḥ;

And with that mām dhyāntaḥ upāsatē; so they worship me through this meditation; so Viśva-rūpa dhyānēna tē mām puḃjanthi. And that is what all the prayers:

यत् यत् कर्म करोमि तत् तत् अखिलम् शंभो तवाराधनम्

yat yat karma karōmi tat tat akhilaṃ śambhō tavārādhanam |

कायेन वाचा मनसेन्द्रियैर्वा, बुद्ध्यात्मना वा, प्रकृतेर् स्वभावात्, करोमि यत् यत् सकलम् परस्मै, नारायणायेति समर्पयामि kāyēna vācā manasēndriyaiṛvā, buddhyātmanā vā, prakṛtēr svabhāvāt, karōmi yat yat sakalam parasmai, nārāyaṇāyēti samarpayāmi.

All these are inbuilt in our culture, but the problem is we learn these slōkās mechanically; and kada pada chant and run to office; Or in front of the TV; one of the place; So these are in our culture.

Then what will happen to them. That is said in the next verse.

Verse 12.7

तेषामहं समुद्धर्ता मृत्युसंसारसागरात् ।
भवामि निचिरात्पार्थ मय्यावेशितचेतसाम् ॥ १२.७ ॥

tēṣāmahaṃ samuddhartā mṛtyusaṃsārasāgarāt |
bhavāmi na cirāt pārtha mayyāvēśitacētasām || 12.7 ||

So Kṛṣṇa says Hey Arjuna, these Viśva-rūpa upāsakās are special to me; because their main goal is discovering my true nature and since they are committed to My pursuit, I will give them special attention.

अनन्याश्चिन्तयन्तो मां ये जनाः पर्युपासते ।
तेषां नित्याभियुक्तानां योगक्षेमं वहाम्यहम् ॥ ९.२२ ॥

ananyāścintayantō māṃ yē janāḥ paryupāsatē |
tēṣāṃ nityābhīyuktānāṃ yōgakṣēmaṃ vahāmyaham || 9.22 ||

and therefore they are special people; mayi āvēśitacētasām; so they look upon me not as a means for materialistic ends; they look upon Me as an end in itself. Īśvarē nathu sādhanā buddhi; paranthu, Īśvarē sadhya buddhiḥ; two types of devotion; in sakāma-bhakthi God is means, materialistic things are the end. In niṣkāma bhakthi God is the means, God is the end also; and those people were called in the seventh chapter, jijñāsu bhakthā; ananya bhakthā; and they are called here mayi āvēśitacētasām.

And what will I do them tēṣāṃ ahaṃ samudhdartā; I will rescue them; I will save them; I will function as their saviour. We also have got saviour; so we need not some other place; we have got our own saviour; so samudhdartā; I will be their saviour.

Saviour from what; mṛthyā saṃsāra sāgarath; from the ocean of saṃsāra, which has got several problems.

And what is the most or the worst problem of saṃsāra, mṛthuḥ; mṛthuḥ means maraṇam; so maraṇam is the most terrible thing; because everything near and dear to me I have to do; and that is why any fear is called mortal fear; mortality is the greatest fear. And therefore mṛthyu saṁsāra means a saṁsāra which has the problem of mortality. And from that I will rescue them.

And how long it will take; Kṛṣṇa does not want to commit; because it all depends upon the level of the student and therefore he says: na chirāt; before long I will rescue those people who are Viśva-rūpa upāsakās; who are in the fourth rung of bhakthi-yōga.

And how will the Lord rescue them; will the Lord give mōkṣa straight away from the fourth rung of the ladder. Remember that is not possible; I have told you that mōkṣa requires jñānam; and jñānam requires jñāna-yōgyatha; and therefore when Bhagavān says I will rescue them; what Bhagavān means is I will make them fit for the fifth rung of ladder; I will necessary conditions to go through jñāna-yōga. If they require the qualifications, I will supply. And if they require Guru; no problem; I have got plenty of Gurus; I will send them; and if no Guru is available; what, I myself will become the Guru; Hey Arjuna, as I have become Guru to you; and therefore nacirād hē pārtha ahaṁ samudhdartā bhavāmi. Therefore forget jñāna-yōga for the time being; commit yourselves to Viśva-rūpa-upāsana. So Kṛṣṇa summaries that in the next verse. No.8.

मय्येव मन आधत्स्व मयि बुद्धिं निवेशय ।
निवसिष्यसि मय्येव अत ऊर्ध्वं न संशयः ॥ १२.८ ॥

mayyēva mana ādhatsva mayi buddhiṁ nivēśaya |
nivasisyasi mayyēva ata ūrdhvaṁ na saṁśayaḥ || 12.8 ||

8. Fix the mind on Me alone. Fix the intellect on Me alone. There, after you will dwell in Me alone. There is no doubt.

So Kṛṣṇa concludes that second or the fourth rung of the ladder discussion; Therefore Arjuna forget jñāna-yōga for the time being; concentrate on saguṇa Viśva-rūpa upāsana. Therefore mayi means what Viśva-rūpa Īśvarē; in Me the Viśva-rūpa Īśvaraḥ; you need not think of the nirguṇa Me; but think of Viśva-rūpa Me. Ādhatsva manaḥ; fix your emotional mind in Me; that means all your emotional needs. May you derive from the Lord himself; because Lord being the totality; whatever be your emotional needs; it is an inexhaustible ups, uninterrupted power supply Bhagavān can give; if you ask any local people, they may give; they may not; for sometime they will say I love you; then they will say I allow you; all unpredictable; they may give me security; they may not. So therefore Kṛṣṇa says; do not seek anything from the world or people; You use the world for only giving; whether it is security or love or care or health; you use the world and people for the rehearsal of giving; and whatever be your requirement; take from Me the Lord.

And the advantage is if it is any person, that person has to be around me; and older I become the more I want the children to be around; and they are in some other country; and they cannot come whenever you want; can anyone come from America as you wish; So I feel more and more insecure; and even if when they are around; I do not want them to go to the office; I want them near the bed all the time; How is it possible; everybody has got his own, her own duties; if it is Viśva-rūpa-Īśvaraḥ; he is all the time with me; I never miss the Lord; and therefore Kṛṣṇa says emotionally learn to depend on Me, the Viśva-rūpa Īśvaraḥ.

And not only that; mayi buddhim nivēśaya; and your intellect also must be convinced of the Viśva-rūpa nature of God; blindly saying Lord Viśva-rūpa, Lord Viśva-rūpa is not enough; after all we are rational being; we are thinking being; and therefore intellect will always question. How can I look upon the whole universe as Īśvaraḥ? So when intellect raises that question; you should have a convincing answer; and that is why we say scriptural study is important; without scriptures study when I have got devotion to the Lord; it is always a shaky devotion; it can always be threatened. But when the devotion is based on understanding; out of conviction it can never be shaken. And how to get that conviction; go back to the teaching; Bhagavān has given in the 7th chapter, in the 9th chapter, in the 10th and 11th.

And what was the teaching given; there the Lord was defined as jagat kāraṇam; both the nimitha and upādāna kāraṇam; I do not want to get into that; if I do that I will be going back to the seventh chapter; therefore I am resisting temptation to get lost. So Bhagavān is kāraṇam; and the whole universe is kāryam; an effect; and we know that a product is non-different from the cause. So if Īśvaraḥ is kāraṇam; and jagat is kāryam; kārya-rūpam jagat, kāraṇa-rūpathvat Īśvaraḥ, bhinnam bhavithum na arhathi. No effect can be separate from the cause. So when I am handling the ornaments, I am handling the cause, the gold alone. When I am handling the furniture, I am handling the cause the wood alone. When I am handling the pots, I am handling the cause, clay alone. When I am handling the world, I am handling the cause, Īśvaraḥ alone; Therefore ākāśa is Īśvaraḥ; vāyu is Īśvaraḥ; Agni is Īśvaraḥ; sarvaṁ-Īśvaraḥ mayam jagat. This is called conviction born out of the scriptural study. And therefore Kṛṣṇa says mayi buddhim nivēśya; may your intellect also be convinced of what you are doing.

And if you are not convinced; continue the study; and still you are not convinced; continue the study; still you are not convinced; continue the study; how long; until you are convinced. And if you are not able to be convinced in this janma; continue in the next janma. Swamiji you yourselves will come to teach? You cannot ask; in fact, you require a better teacher! The very fact that you are still not convinced means that I am inefficient teacher. So therefore better look for a better teacher; OK; It is all joke; I know that you are all understanding; mayi buddhim nivēśaya.

And if you do that; nivasiṣyasi mayyēva; the glory of Viśva-rūpa bhakthi is I am never away from the Lord; there is no question of separation; and viraha gītham; and again joining back; worrying that the Lord will run away from me and He will go to another devotee. That is what I cannot stand; even if He leaves me it is OK; but how can He go to someone else. கதறி மனம் உருகி நான் அழைக்கவோ; இதர மாதருடன் நீ ரமிக்கவோ: இது தகுமோ; இது மூறயொ? இது தர்மம் தானோ? katarī maṇam uruki nāṅ aḷaikkavo; itara mātaruṭaṅ nī ramikkavo: itu takumo; itu mūrayo? itu tarmam tāṅo?

What is all these; you limit the Lord; when the Lord is Viśva-rūpa, Lord is simultaneously with everyone; and therefore nivasiṣyasi mayi ēva; you will remain in Me alone all the time; Just as the wave is never away from the ocean.

Adhaḥ urdhvam; after this practice; which practice, Viśva-rūpa upāsana practice, you will never miss me.

Na saṃśayaḥ; there is no doubt at al. Therefore Arjuna come to the fourth rung of the ladder; then go to the fifth and be free.

But suppose you see, Viśva-rūpa upāsana is also difficult; because it requires an expanded mind; I have to expand my mind to accommodate the whole universe as Īśvaraḥ; which means I should never have rāga or dvēṣā; I should be willing to accept every part of creation as divine. Therefore I should not complain against anything; it is extremely difficult; we will say that I am ready to look upon everyone as God, except a few people, a list of which is there Swamiji; everyone has a list; except them everyone is God; if everybody has a except-list; God will not have anything left.

Therefore Viśva-rūpa upāsana itself may be difficult; then what to do; Kṛṣṇa says; no worry; you come to the third rung of the ladder; how; verse No.9

Verse 12.9

अथ चित्तं समाधातुं न शक्नोषि मयि स्थिरम् ।
अभ्यासयोगेन ततः मामिच्छाप्तुं धनञ्जय ॥ १२.९ ॥

atha cittam samādhātuṃ na śaknōṣi mayi sthiram |
abhyāsayōgēna tatō māmicchā"ptuṃ dhanañjaya || 12.9 ||

9. If you are not able to fix the mind firmly on Me, then seek to attain Me by means of abhyasa yōga, Oh Arjuna!

Atha, on the other hand, if you find yourselves unfit for the fourth rung of the ladder also; that means mayi cittam samādhātum na śaknōṣi; mayi means what; in Me, the Viśva-rūpa Īśvaraḥ; cittam samādhātum, upāsanam kartum; to practice the meditation; sthiram; steadily; consistently; unswervingly; na śaknōṣi; if you are not able to do that. If Viśva-rūpa Īśvaraḥ is not appealing to you, then Kṛṣṇa says do not bother; come down to the third rung of the ladder; which is ēka rūpa Īśvaraḥ upāsana. Instead of taking the totality; come to any particular personal form of God; which is called iṣṭa dēvathā upāsana; and we have got so many personal forms for the Lord. which is unique to Hinduism; In no other religion, they have such a variety of form; we have got the biggest departmental store of Gods; and we have got Rāma, we have got Kṛṣṇa, we have got Devi; we have got Vināyakā; we have Venkatalapathy; we have got Ayyappa; and they do not mind; if you add a few more; annai velankanni; keep that all also; After all are stepping stone; none of them is the ultimate; therefore for a stepping stone; any form is perfectly OK; and even in one form itself Kṛṣṇa itself we have got Gopi Kṛṣṇa; Radha Kṛṣṇa, Fruit Kṛṣṇa, Kutti Kṛṣṇa; All varieties are there; choose any particular form and even among varieties of relationships, any particular relationship you want, you can strike; vātsalya bhakthi; you want to show affection to the Lord as a baby; Like Yaśodhā etc. and you want to have a love; as a friend; as Arjuna, Uddava etc. like father, any particular relationship you want; you can take to that.

And how to develop iṣṭa-dēvathā bhakthi; iṣṭa-dēvathā bhakti is developed only through the purāṇa śravaṇa; because in the purāṇam, the personal God comes alive. And the personal Gods are involved in varieties of activities. They call it Īśvaraḥ leela; and as you dwell upon the activities; even a fictitious character becomes more and more real. This is psychology; any fictitious character you go on dwelling; it becomes more real. And therefore if you want to make Śiva alone, read Śiva-purāṇam. If you want to make dēvi alive; read Dēvi-bhāgavatham; You need not read all the paurāṇikās or only doing that; and therefore develop iṣṭa-dēvathā-bhakthi and practice iṣṭa-dēvathā upāsanam, which is ēka-rūpa-saṅga-Īśvaraḥ; and Kṛṣṇa calls it abhyāsa-yōgaḥ. Details in the next class.

By way of answering Arjuna's question, Lord Kṛṣṇa is presenting the important teaching of bhakthi-yōga and as I said in the last few classes, bhakthi-yōga is not a particular sādhanā, but it is the name of the entire range of sādhanās everyone has to necessarily go through. And these range of sādhanās Lord Kṛṣṇa is presenting in five levels, and by going through all these five levels of bhakthi-yōga; a person gets liberation or mōkṣa. And Kṛṣṇa is presenting all the five levels of bhakthi-yōga in this chapter and therefore this is a very important chapter and this portion is also very important.

And while dealing with the five steps of bhakthi-yōga, Lord Kṛṣṇa starts with the highest step in the beginning and gradually He is coming down to the lower steps. So instead of going from first, second, third stages, He starts with the fifth and final step and if a person is not ready for the fifth, let him come down to the fourth; if that is also not possible, the third, or second and the first step. And the fifth and final step which is the proximate step to liberation was presented as jñāna-yōga sādhanā, consisting of vēdānta sṛavaṇa manana nidhidhyāsanam; which is otherwise called here as akṣara upāsana. Akṣara-upāsana is the technical word in the 12th chapter, which means jñāna-yōga, which means nirguṇa brahma sṛavaṇa manana nidhidhyāsanam; which was dealt with in verses 3, 4 and 5 and therefore we come to know that jñāna-yōga is the name of the bhakthi-yōga itself at the highest level. And this alone Śankarācārya also mentions in the Vivekachūdamaṇi;

स्वस्वरूपानुसन्धानं भक्तिरित्यभिधीयते || ३१ ||

mōkṣakāraṇasāmagryām bhaktirēva garīyasī |
svasvarūpānusandhānaṁ bhaktirityabhidhīyatē ||31||

Bhakthi is the final stage of liberation; and in the final stage; bhakthi is defined as self-enquiry; Brahman enquiry; nirguṇa-Īśvaraḥ-vichāraḥ.

And Kṛṣṇa himself admitted that this jñāna-yōga form of bhakthi-yōga is not easy for the majority and they need not feel bad about it; let them try the fourth step.

And the fourth level of bhakthi-yōga was discussed in verse No.6, 7 and 8th. And this fourth level of bhakthi-yōga consists of saguṇa-Īśvaraḥ-upāsana because nirguṇa-Īśvaraḥ-jñānam is not easy for an unprepared mind. And therefore let that person come down to saguṇa-Īśvaraḥ-upāsana and that saguṇa-Īśvaraḥ also is presented as Viśva-rūpa-Īśvaraḥ; Lord as the very universe itself; is aṣṭamūrthi-Īśvaraḥ.

[bhūrambhāmsyanalō:'nilō:'mbara maharnāthō himāmśuḥ pumān
ityābhāti carācarātmakamidaṁ yasyaiva mūrtyaṣṭakam || 9 ||](#)

Aṣṭamūrthi Īśvaraḥ is Viśva-rūpa-Īśvaraḥ; eight faced Īśvaraḥ; Viśva-rūpa-Īśvaraḥ has got eight factors. What are the eight factors; the five elements are the pañca mūrthi; bhū amba anala anilaḥ; ambaram; the pañca bhūthas are the five mūrthies of the Lord.

Then aharnātaḥ himāmśuḥ; aharnātaḥ means the Sūrya, which stands for all the stars and himāmśuḥ means the moon which stands for all the planets and satellites. We have five elements as pañca-mūrties; all the stars the sixth mūrties; All the planets and satellites the 7th mūrthi. What is the 8th mūrthi? What is mūrthi? Mūrthies a facet; the 8th is Pumān; Pumān is all the jīvarāsīs. All the living beings put together is aṣṭamūrthi Īśvaraḥ; otherwise called Virāt-Īśvaraḥ; otherwise called Viśva-rūpa-Īśvaraḥ described in the 11th chapter of the Gīta. And Kṛṣṇa says may you learn to meditate upon this Viśva-rūpa Īśvaraḥ; suppose a person says; Oh Lord my mind is not expanded enough, to visualise the Viśva-rūpa, it is not subtle enough to conceive of that Viśva-rūpa; Kṛṣṇa says does not matter, you need not feel inferior.

I will come down one more step. And what is the step? And what is the third step of bhakthi yōga? Instead of a ēkarūpa Īśvaraḥ upāsanam; instead of Viśva-rūpa Īśvaraḥ; you reduce the Lord to ēkarūpa; choose a personal God; and we have got in our culture the biggest choice; the most varied choice is available only in our Hindu departmental store. In other religions we do not have much choice. So we have got முப்பத்தி முக்கோடி தேவதாஸ்; muppathi mukkōdi dēvathās. Of them, you choose any blessed dēvathā and even if you are not interested in human form; you take animal form; we have got kāmadhēnu; if you do not like animal form; you take tree form; we have got aśvattha vaṭavrikṣa tarur māndāra canda drumō; choose any tree you like; tulasi or any tree; if you do not like any particular tree; you want a mixture; some people like always mixture; then we have got mixture Gods also; Narasiṁḥ; Hayagrivaḥ; Hayagrivaḥ means human-body horse-head; Narasimha human-body lion-head; we have got all varieties; choose any one. And for each iṣṭa dēvathās; we have got purāṇās also to give elaborate description of the dēvathā, and the avathāra rahasyam; their activities and their exploits; We have 36 pūraṇās; 18 purāṇams and 18 upa purāṇams. They will give the description of ēka-rūpa-Īśvaraḥ, which includes their body; how many hands they have; how many heads they have; and how many weapons they wield; what type of dress they wear; all these are there. Choose an iṣṭa-dēvathā, and then practice iṣṭa dēvathā upāsana; otherwise called ēka-rūpa-upāsana; which Kṛṣṇa called abhyāsa yōga.

So the fifth step is arūpa-Īśvaraḥ; fourth step is anēka-rūpa-Īśvaraḥ; the third step is ēka rūpa Īśvaraḥ; and the meditation is called abhyāsa yōgaḥ. Therefore Kṛṣṇa discusses the third step in the 9th verse, which I introduced in the last class.

There in the 9th verse Kṛṣṇa says: Athah; Hey Arjuna; on the other hand; if you are not able to meditate upon Viśva-rūpa Īśvaraḥ; mayi, mayi means Viśva-rūpa Īśvarē; upon Me the Viśva-rūpa Lord; cittam samādhātum; to fix the mind; to practice the meditation, sthiram. Firmly, undistractedly; unswervingly; if you are not able to fix the mind; Na śaknōṣi.

And generally Viśva-rūpa upāsana will become extremely difficult; when a person has got strong rāgaḥ dvēsaḥ. Stronger the rāgaḥ dvēsaḥ; more crystallised the individuality will be. And therefore all the time, the mind will be either thinking of the object of hatred, or the mind will be thinking of the object of attachment, and therefore the mind is confined to a few objects of rāgaḥ or dvēśāḥ. And that mind cannot enjoy the ocean; enjoy the sky; enjoy the stars; enjoy the trees; enjoy the mountains; because the mind is narrow. Kṛṣṇa says does not matter; I will give you a narrow God.

So na śaknōṣi chet; what should you do; abhyāsa yōgēna. May you take to abhyāsa yōgaḥ which means iṣṭa-dēvathā-upāsana.

And if you cannot love a personal God; we have got mantra, yantra, tantra; so we have got sree cakra; it is not a person but a symbol which you can visualise; we have got surya dēvathā, which is not a person, but a symbol, which is called pratīka-upāsana. Either a prathima-upāsana or pratīka-upāsana; prathimā means God as a person with limbs like you and mine; that is called anthropomorphism; anthropomorphism means visualising God as a human being; like you and I. And God is also hungry; God is also thirsty and therefore annam samarpayāmi; pādyam samarpayāmi; and you attach rāgaḥ dvēsaḥ to God. I think God is angry with me; because we have got that; and put that in God also; and also we have justification; yesterday while showing dīparādhana, I did not show there; rest of the photos I had shown; and this photo was missed. Therefore this God must be angry; and therefore whatever weakness we have that also we comfortably attribute to the Lord; உனக்கு கோபமா? Are you angry; It is also OK; this is called anthropomorphic approach to Lord; which is also acceptable; and what is it called; this is abhyāsa yōga.

And by this abhyāsayōgēna mām āptum iccha; May you strive to reach Me; by iṣṭa-dēvathā-upāsana may you strive to reach Me; may you strive to attain liberation; reaching Me means attainment of mōkṣa.

Can a person attain liberation through iṣṭa-dēvathā-upāsana? So what will be the answer? Can a person attain liberation through iṣṭa-dēvathā-upāsana; if they ask; the answer both Yes and No; How do you say yē s and how do you say No? No means by iṣṭa dēvathā upāsana, one cannot directly attain liberation? By iṣṭa dēvathā upāsana, one cannot directly attain mōkṣa, and therefore the answer is No. And at the same time, Yes is also the answer; which means, by iṣṭa-dēvathā-upāsana, one can indirectly attain mōkṣa.

What do you mean by indirectly attaining mōkṣa? Iṣṭa dēvathā upāsana will gradually help him to come to Viśva-rūpa upāsana, so that the very iṣṭa dēvathā will gradually lift the devotee and bring him to Viśva-rūpa Īśvaraḥ; Andāndamulu pindādamulu brahmāndamulu sarvam antha Rāma mayam; Thyagarāja was worshipping Rāma in his idol also and he was so much attached to that idol. You know the story; so when he lost, he was extremely upset; he cries for losing his Rāma and later again he gets back and he is extremely happy; thus for Thyagarāja Rāma represented an idol also; and the very same Thyagarāja sang; Andāndamulu pindādamulu brahmāndamulu sarvam antha. That means what? ēka rūpa you start; anēka-rūpa you come to.

And you need not bother how to come; the iṣṭa-dēvathā itself will lift you to Viśva-rūpa-upāsana; and once we come up to Viśva-rūpa-upāsana; the Viśva-rūpa-upāsana will naturally uplift you to nirguṇa-upāsana, which is vēdantā-vicāra.

Therefore iṣṭa-dēvathā-upāsana via Viśva-rūpa-upāsana and nirguṇa-jñānam will take a person to liberation. Therefore iṣṭa dēvathā upāsana is paraṁpara kāraṇam for mōkṣa. It is not sākṣāt kāraṇam; it is not direct means; but it is called paraṁpara-kāraṇam; means Viśva-rūpa-upāsana; via nirguṇa-jñānam; வழி via; it will take you to the destination. Therefore Arjuna, you come to iṣṭa-dēvathā-upāsana.

Suppose a person says Hey Kṛṣṇa, I am not fit for ēka rūpa upāsana also; because upāsana is a mental activity. Upāsana is visualising the Lord within myself; purely with the help of the mind.

Upāsana is defined as manasam karma; which means the physical body has to be passive. This is the technical definition; many people define pūja as upāsana. Remember physical pūja cannot be called upāsana; because upāsana by definition is manasam karma. I should be seated in a place; I should not use any of my jñānēndriyās or karmēndriyās, I have to withdraw all my sense organs and it should be a purely mental activity; which means a person should not be an extrovert person. Upāsana is possible only when a person is ready to withdraw the mind away from the external world, make it anthar-mukham; turn inwards and within my heart, I should be able to visualise my iṣṭa dēvathā.

And therefore, if a person is extrovert; if a person is rajō-guṇa pradhāna; that person will find it difficult, even to sit in a place for five minutes; meditation is next stage. Even to sit in a place for five minutes, a rājasic person will find extremely difficult; because he is an embodiment of dynamism and therefore he wants to be active. And therefore Kṛṣṇa, I am not ready for meditation; and if I do meditation, it will end up as 'mad'-itation. For a restless person, sitting quiet is extremely difficult; that is why many people after retirement get into lot of problems. Not only problem for themselves; the primary sufferer is the wife and family. Generally she recommends take up another job; if you leave me it is OK; because it is extremely difficult.

And if Arjuna you feel you are so extrovert; then you need not sit in mediation; it is not compulsory; I will come down to the second step; in which I will ask you to be highly active. From Upāsana I will ask you to come down to karma; a life of activity; a life of dynamism.

And what is that? That is going to be given in the 10th verse; so 9th verse gives the third step; 10th verse gives the 2nd step; so five, four, three, two we have reached.

Verse 12.10

अभ्यासेऽप्यसमर्थोऽसि मत्कर्मपरमो भव ।
मदर्थमापि कर्माणि कुर्वन्सिद्धिमवाप्स्यसि ॥ १२.१० ॥ abhyāsē'pyasamarthō'si matkarmaparamō bhava |

madarthamapi karmāṇi kurvan siddhimavāpsyasi || 12.10 ||

असि asi if you are असमर्थः asamarthaḥ incapable, अभ्यासे अपि abhyāsē api of abhyasayōga also, भव मत्कर्मपरमः bhava matkarmaparamaḥ be devoted to My works, अपि कुर्वन् कर्माणि api kurvan karmāṇi even by doing works मदर्थम् madartham for my sake अवाप्स्यसि avāpsyasi you will attain सिद्धिम् siddhim liberation.

10. If you are incapable of abhyāsa yōga also, be devoted to My works. Even by doing works for my sake, you will attain liberation.

So Hey Arjuna, abhyāsē-api-asamarthaḥ; if you are unfit for abhyāsa-yōga also; abhyāsa-yōga means iṣṭa-dēvathā-upāsana, ēka-rūpa-upāsana. In short, you are too extrovert a person; that does not matter.

What do you do; mat-karma-paramaḥ bhava; May you be committed to a life of activity and the activities also are divided into two in our śāstra; one is niṣkāma-karmāṇi or parōpakāra karmāṇi; activities dedicated to the service of the society. Taking the very society as Īśvaraḥ;

jagata īśadhi-uktā-sēvanam; aṣṭa-mūrt-brut dēva-pūjanam;

Take to pañca m ā ha yajña; and through these fivefold yajñās; dedicate your life to contribute to the society.

परोपकाराय फलन्ति वृक्षः परोपकाराय दुहन्ति गावः । परोपकाराय वहन्ति नद्यः परोपकाराय इदं शरीरम्॥

paropakārāya phalanti vṛkṣaḥ paropakārāya duhanti gāvaḥ |
paropakārāya vahanti nadhyaḥ paropakārāya idaṁ śarīram||

புரியறதோ? Paropakārāya vahanti nadhyaḥ; all the rivers flow down the plains from the Himalayas to what purpose, to serve the humanity; paropakārāya phalanti vṛkṣaḥ; trees produce fruits not for their consumption and they give it to others, Even if you throw stones; they give fruit in return; and paropakārāya duhanti gāvaḥ; the cows give milk not for their own purpose; in fact the calf gets only limited milk; all are used for our coffee. So we find in the nature; every one gives more and takes less. Any living being, if you take a balance sheet, at the end of the life, you find they have given more and taken less. May you also be like a vṛkṣaḥ.

छायाम् अन्यस्य कुर्वन्ति तिष्ठन्ति स्वयम् आदपे । फलान्यपि परार्थाय वृक्षाहः सद्पुरुषः इवः ॥

chāyām anyasya kurvanti tiṣṭhanti svayam ādapē |
phalānyapi parārthāya vṛkṣāhaḥ sadpuruṣaḥ ivaḥ ||

What do the trees do; chāyām anyasya kurvanti; they give shade to others; chāyām means not tea; chāyā, they give shade to others; but they themselves stand in the hot sun;

tiṣṭhanti svayam ādapē; phalānyapi parārthāya; vṛkṣāhaḥ sadpuruṣaḥ ivaḥ. Every tree is like a mahātma; and what is the proof? Everybody says மரம் வளர்போம்; maram valarpōm. Let your entire life be a life of tyāga; a life of dedication; a life like the other bhakthi; which destroys itself and in the process it gives fragrance to the surroundings. So thus may your life be one of contribution; and when you contribute to the society; if you do not have proper attitude, it may lead to arrogance; I have done this much; I have done this much, And therefore when you contribute to the society; look upon the society as Īśvaraḥ; yad yad karma karōmi tattad akhilam Śambō tavāradhanam; they say Nara sēva; Nārāyana sēva; mānava sēva is mādharma sēva; all these indicate what; I consider it as an opportunity to worship Viśva-rūpa Īśvaraḥ. So be selflessly active; be desirelessly active; this is the second step.

Therefore Kṛṣṇa says matkarmaparamaḥ bhava; matkarma means what; Īśvarāpaṇa-karma; niṣkāma-karma; citta-śuddhi pradhāna-karma; karmās which will give you spiritual purity; which will make you qualified for iṣṭa-dēvathā-upāsanam.

And madartham api karmāṇi kurvan; and when you lead a life of service, contribution, paropakāra; what will happen; siddim apavyasi; you will certainly attain liberation. So by niṣkāma karma; otherwise called niṣkāma karma pradhāna karma-yōgaḥ a. If you look at the life of every freedom fighter; read their biography; they had sacrificed everything; their health, wealth, family and what they wanted was freedom; and many of them did not even live to see the freedom; and they only sacrificed and we enjoy the freedom and make the country a குட்டி செவர்; worst place. They sacrificed and we get the benefit. Therefore siddhim avāpyasi; you will certainly attain liberation.

How will you attain liberation; Careful; this service will not directly lead to liberation; I am never tired of repeating it; because these are all confusing slōkās, if one is not careful, This niṣkāma karma will make the mind ready for ēkarūpa upāsana which will make the mind ready for anēka-rūpa-upāsana; which will make the mind ready for ahaṁ-brahmāsmi jñānam; which will make you free. And therefore Arjuna, take to a life of niṣkāma-karma; selfless activity; This is the second step.

Now a person may argue; Lord, I cannot commit myself to niṣkāma karma; is very nice to hear; but I cannot practice niṣkāma karma because I have got plenty of tamas. I have got countless desires in the world; many of them are desires for myself; I would like to have a global tour; I would like to have a house; I would like to have a car; I have got many desires for my own personal happiness. And not only for my own sake; I have got desires with regard to my family members; I want my children to get 99.99% in twelfth examination; niṣkāma karma or citta śuddhi; which we can see later! Now I want admission for the child. Swāmiji, you can talk about niṣkāma karma, உங்களுக்கு என்ன; குழந்தையா பழாய் போறது; வைபா பழாய் போறது; you do not have anyone; wife or children; and you can say and go; but for me I have to educate my children; get admission in the engineering children; and the grand child has got some problem; because not one generation; three generation; and therefore that problem should go; and there is some house in litigation; and that should be solved; so when I have got so many desires connected to me, my family members, I have to fulfil my duties; therefore how can I give up my kāma. After completing all my duties; I will come to you; you set up an āśrama before that. That means your problem will be solved and my problem will start; I should keep an āśramam ready and after all duties are over and when you are good for nothing, because no hand and legs and eyes; then you plan to come to the āśramam !!; So therefore after I complete my duties; I will think of niṣkāma-karma. Let me pray for my child, my grandchild, my wife; and my neighbour; because he should also should be fine; Only then I will have a peaceful life; if they are quarreling I cannot step; how many kāmās I have got; that is why in English also it is called coma!!; coma, coma, no full stop. Coma is that which has no full stop. So what am I supposed to do, Oh Lord.

Kṛṣṇa says: OK you have world desires; you fulfil your personal desires; nothing wrong; if you are interested in the education of your children; in the marriage of your children, the health of the grandchildren, there is nothing wrong; after all, you want to fulfil your duty, as a family person. It is not wrong, you need not feel; bad about it; so may you have kāmās, and therefore you can do sakāma karmas also. And vēda itself prescribes many kāmya karmās for children's education; children's health; children's marriage; for all of them; vēda itself prescribes karma;

Pasukāmaschinvītha; samjānam va ētat paśūnām |
paśūnām ēva samiānane... nutu. Paśuman bhavati.
Vṛṣṭi kāma chinvītha; amāyā vi chinvīthā |

Any desire you have; fulfil that; because when the unfulfilled desires are within and I try to come to vēdantā, close my eyes. Only that will hover around in my mind; and such a person Kṛṣṇa calls mithyācārasya uchyāte;

कर्मन्द्रियाणि संयम्य य आस्ते मनसा स्मरन् |
इन्द्रियार्थान् विमूढात्मा मिथ्याचारः स उच्यते || ३-६ ||

karmēndriyāṇi saṁyamya ya āstē manasā smaran |
indriyārthān vimūḍhātmā mithyācāraḥ sa ucyatē || 3.6 ||

Any unfulfilled desire is in the mind, it will create a bug; therefore fulfil them; whatever you want to eat; All legitimately do.

So what is the last step; Kṛṣṇa says may you be committed to sakāma karma; Let your karma-yōga sakāma karma pradhāna karma-yōga does not matter; and how should you practice that karma-yōga. That I will tell you; it is the lower most step; which is given in the 11th verse. We will read;

Verse 12.11

अथैतदप्यशक्तोऽसि कर्तुं मद्योगमाश्रितः ।
सर्वकर्मफलत्यागं ततः कुरु यतात्मवान् ॥ १२.११ ॥

athaitadapyaśaktō'si kartuṁ madyōgamāśritaḥ |
sarvakarmaphalatyaḡam tataḥ kuru yatātmavān || 12.11 ||

अथ असि अशक्तः atha asi aśaktaḥ if you are not able to, अर्तुम् एतद् अपि kartum ētad api do this also ततः tataḥ then आश्रितः āśritaḥ taking to मध्योगम् madhyōgam My worship कुरु सर्वकर्मफलत्यागम् kuru sarvakarmaphalatyaḡam renounce the results of all actions यतात्मवान् yatātmavān with self-restraint.

11. If you are not able to do this also, then, taking to My worship, renounce the results of all actions with self- restraint.

So the second step presented was niṣkāma-karma pradhāna karma-yōga; a karma-yōga in which life is dedicated to niṣkāma-karma; parōpakāra-karma and if you are not able to serve anyone, does not matter; you serve yourselves. So Kṛṣṇa says; atha ētat api karthum askthaha asi; if you are not able to commit yourselves to serving others; serving the society; by taking to madhyōgam means Īśvaraḥparṇa buddhi; as Īśvarārparṇam; by taking to that attitude; if you are not able to do that; then may you take to sakāma karma.

And Śankarācārya says: somewhere, he goes one more extreme, in extremely rare cases, even niṣiddha karma also. Śankarācārya says: OK; that is why in some places animal sacrifices were also permitted because OK; at least even if you are interested in that; does not matter; but let it be as an offering to the Lord; and slowly get out.

And that is why there are certain tāmasic rituals prescribed in the śāstra; in which madhya pānam, taking to liquor etc. also was permitted; the idea was even though it is banned; if a person is helpless, let him convert into pūja and gradually come out of it. But I should be very careful. You will say OK; I should not have told; so niṣiddha karmaṇi api, as an exceptional case, Śankarācārya adds. But it is better to give them up; but legitimate worldly desires you fulfill. There is nothing wrong; it is not pāpam.

And what should you do? When you are doing sakāma-karma; what should be your attitude? When a person does sakāma-karma; sakāma-karma means a selfish activity; he certainly expects a worldly result out of it; he is not doing it as a service; he is not doing it for citta śuddhi; he is certainly doing it for worldly benefit only; and personal benefit only; you do; but what should you do? you dedicate that sakāma-karma also as Īśvara-arpaṇam; and when the phalam comes you can certainly take the phalam to yourselves; you need not give to the Society; be selfish; you enjoy the result; selfishness is also permitted; you need not give to others; you need not share with others; you enjoy.

But Kṛṣṇa gives a warning; when you are enjoying the benefit of your selfish action; do not call it karma-phalam; do not call the accomplishment of yours; you take it as Īśvaraḥ prasādaḥ. Change the name; even if a child is born; there are many children who have got the name, Kṛṣṇa prasād; Rāma prasād; Dēvi prasād; or mere Prasād; children are also called prasād, because we look upon our children as gift from the Lord.

And once you take everything as Īśvaraḥ-prasāda, even the selfish-action will have the capacity to purify the mind. A regular selfish-action cannot purify the mind, because selfishness is impurity; but here even a selfish-action can purify if you take the result as Bhagavān's gift. When you build a house not for donating to anyone but for your own living; it is a clean kāmya-karma; this house has been built for my sake; Kṛṣṇa says: does not matter; you want a house, own the house, use the house; but what would I suggest is; when you do the griha pravēśa; look upon the house, not as yours, you live there; but you look upon the house, as the Lord's house. Therefore when you step in, you take along with you the picture of the Lord; your iṣṭa dēvathā; and then you install the Lord anywhere; at least under the staircase; and you dedicate the house to the Lord. Then do not afraid; if it is Lord's should I get out; do not ask; you dedicate the house to the Lord; and request the Lord; Oh Lord permit me also to be a co-tenant or tenant of your temple. Then griham becomes an ālayam; and I am living in the temple of the Lord. And in this there are so many advantages; your personal desire has been fulfilled; எனக்குண்டு ஒரு வீடு. Everybody asks; therefore you have a house. So your personal desire is fulfilled; at the same time; that kāmya karma gets the capacity to purify your mind. In fact, that house will be a pure house free from all forms of inauspiciousness; even though it has not been built according to what? Vāstu śāstram condition. If you are able to observe OK: wonderful; but if you are not able to; plot is like that what to do; therefore it becomes Lord's house; it becomes Lord's responsibility to drive away all the evil forces and therefore you are living under the care of the Lord. So this life style is called sakāma karma pradhāna karma-yōgaḥ.

And such a person has no time to serve the society, because all the time he has to bother about either children or grandchildren; where is the time, to do any service to anyone; does not matter.

Therefore Kṛṣṇa says sarva-karma-phala-tyāgam; dedicate the result of all the karmas, which includes kāmya karmas and which includes the inevitable niṣiddha karma; like when you are cleaning the house, by using insecticide; mosquito mats, etc. Certainly hiṁsa is involved; you are doing hiṁsa; for keeping the house, you use all kinds of things for cockroach.

And isn't it papām? these are in all inevitable papām; they are called; they are called soona; soona means inevitable pāpāms, to be done by a gṛhastha and even if such pāpāms are there; niṣiddha karmas are there; even those niṣiddha karmas will not affect you. At the time of cooking; so many insects may be killed; especially in the olden days; there was no electricity; not only paruppu; uzhundu; poochi will also be included. What to do? so offer naivēdyam to the Lord and Kṛṣṇa Kṛṣṇa svāḥ. So therefore even inevitable niṣiddha karmas will not affect you; it will purify you;

Tata kuru; yatatmavān; with your effort; with commitment; with sincerity. So this is called what; sakāma-karma-pradhāna karma-yōga.

And what will happen if I do that; if I practice this karma-yōga for a length of time; I will graduate to the second step, in which my life will become niṣkāma karma pradhana karma-yōga; which means by personal desires will come down; which will be replaced by spiritual desire; which will be replaced by mumukṣutvam; all the glammers of the world will not appeal to you; In short you will transcend finite desires; not suppressing; you will transcend petty desires. It will appear big for others.

Dayānanda Swamy gives a beautiful example; as children, you are interested in balloon; and you played and when the balloon burst, you were upset also; balloon was very important. But during the 25th year; somebody brings birthday gift; What balloon? You are not going to be enamoured by that; biscuit; previously local biscuit; after sometime gold biscuit; this is called growing out of petty things; Even the heaven may look like a balloon; that is called maturity. Heaven should become a balloon. And once kāmas come down; Thereafter the life will be what? Niṣkāma-karma-pradāna karma-yōga; whatever karma I do will be meant for citta-śuddhi and once I go through niṣkāma-karma pradāna karma-yōga, I will be elevated to ēka-rūpa-upāsana and then elevated to anēkarūpa and then elevated to jñāna-yōga.

And this is the five stages; the first and the lowest stage has been given in the 11th verse. And suppose a person says Oh Lord I cannot practice this also; if a person says that I cannot do this also; என்ன சொல்லியிருக்கேன்; I would not say: Go to hell; the only advice is better luck, next birth; this is the lowest the śāstra can give; fulfil your desires, be materialistic; be materialistic person; does not matter, but whatever materials you have, take as God's. So with this all the five stages have been talked about and all the five stages put together is called Bhakthi-yōgaḥ.

And a person has to take the appropriate step according to his spiritual evolution; if a person is born advanced person; he can take straight away go to the fourth or fifth step; They are called spiritual prodigies. There are straight away ready for jñāna-yōga; How come they are straight away ready; because they have gone through the first four stages in the previous janma. The law is not violated; we do not know their previous janma; there they have done and therefore brought forward so the straight away go to the fifth; otherwise we will start from 1,2,3,4 and 5 and this is going to be wound up in the next verse; which we will see in the next class.

Hari Om̐

ॐ

In the 12th chapter from verse No.3 up to verse No.11, Lord Kṛṣṇa talked about five stages of bhakthi-yōga. And as I said, you should remember that bhakthi-yōga is a separate and exclusive sādhanā; but it is the common name for all the five stages of sādhanā and this includes the practice of karma; this includes upāsana or meditation and finally bhakthi includes vēdānta-vicāra, which is enquiry into the real nature of God. And all these five steps Kṛṣṇa talked about, beginning from the fifth step and ending with the first step. And the first step which was given in the 11th verse talks about the sakāma-karma itself; utilised as a way of sādhanā. And in this lowest stage of bhakthi yōga, Lord Kṛṣṇa did not even expect us to be even a spiritual-person. Lord Kṛṣṇa says that you can be a materialist-person; you can use religion for finite worldly-benefit; only you have to observe two important points.

The first is make sure that when you fulfil your worldly desires; you do not adopt immortal or unrighteous methods; that cannot become part of bhakthi-yōga; therefore condition No.1 is, it should be a dhārmic-method of fulfilling your worldly-desires.

And the second-condition that Kṛṣṇa prescribes is: when you do something to fulfil your worldly desire; and when you are accomplishing that desire; and when you are about to enjoy the benefit of your effort; do not go all out and get lost in the enjoyment, just one minute before close your eyes and thank the Lord and take the enjoyment as a gift of Lord. You do not call it karma-phalam; change the name and consequentially change your attitude also and take it as Īśvaraḥ prasāda.

And once a person practices this stage of bhakthi-yōga which is the beginning, which itself will start the purification of the mind; because I am enjoying even worldly sensory pleasures, as gift from the Lord; Īśvaraḥ-sambanda is involved. The very Īśvaraḥ sambanda, association with the Lord, is capable of purifying the mind and if a person follows this stage for sufficiently long time, the mind will become more and more mature and the maturity of the mind is indicated by the refinement of the desire.

So initially it is the grossest form of desire; but gradually the desire itself will get refined; instead of grossest physical pleasures, it is subtle and more sensitive. And then gradually the desire, it is desire to serve others, which is also a desire; but it is a sātvic-desire; I want to contribute something to the world; which is a desire but it is a sātvic-desire. And the most sātvic-desire is the desire for the knowledge of the truth itself. So mōkṣa iccha becomes the most refined desire. Thus the refinement of desire takes place, because of the first level.

And once I just graduate to the 2nd level; my sakāma karmas are converted into niṣkāma karmas. My desire is instead of selfish desire, they become selfless desires; my action should not only benefit me, but it should benefit more number of people. The awareness of the society, the awareness of the environment; the awareness of the fellow human beings; awareness of even animals and plants; there is an expanded mind. And that will lead to pañca mahā yajña rūpa karmas; all my karmās will be for the well-being of others;

I am a beneficiary alright; but it benefit others also. This is the second stage of karma-yōgam which is called niṣkāma-karma-pradhāna karma-yōga.

Then gradually my mind becomes purer and quieter and I am able to get interested in the next level of, What is the next level; Iṣṭa dēvathā upāsana rūpa bhakthi yōgaḥ; my mind is refined; refined sufficiently to withdraw from extrovertedness; extrovertedness itself is an obstacle for spiritual pursuits; and once the mind becomes less and less extrovert; or more and more introvert; turn towards oneself; I am ready for ēka-rūpa-Īśvara-upāsana, which will take me to Viśva-rūpa-Īśvara-upāsana; I do not want to again get into the rut; you remember that; and from Viśva-rūpa-Īśvara-upāsana; I finally come to Nirguṇa-Īśvara jñānam.

And nirguṇa-Īśvara-jñānam which is otherwise called advaita-jñānam is the highest level of bhakthi-yōgaḥ. And if I successfully pass through all the five levels of bhakthi yōga; I have become a brahma-jñāni; I have become a sthira-prajñāḥ; I have become an advaita-bhakthaḥ.

So these are the five stages of bhakthi-yōga; Now Kṛṣṇa wants to conclude this discussion of sādhanā in the next verse, i.e. the 12th verse. We will read.

Verse 12.12

श्रेयो हि ज्ञानमभ्यासाद् ज्ञानाद्ध्यानं विशिष्यते ।
ध्यानात्कर्मफलत्यागः त्यागाच्छान्तिरनन्तरम् ॥ १२.१२ ॥

śrēyō hi jñānamabhyāsājñānāddhyānam viśiṣyatē |
dhyānāt karmaphalatyaḡastyāḡacchāntiranantaram || 12.12 ||

12. Knowledge is indeed superior to Meditation (without knowledge) Meditation (with knowledge) is superior to mere knowledge. Renunciation of the results of actions (is superior) to meditation. There is peace after renunciation.

So in this verse, Lord Kṛṣṇa talks about four types of sādhanās. And having talked about four types of sādhanās, Lord Kṛṣṇa grades them; from the lowest to the highest; four levels of sādhanā.

And what are the four sādhanās? No.1 abhyāsaḥ; No.2 jñānam; No.3, dhyānam; and No.4, karma-phala-tyāgaḥ. These are the four sādhanās enumerated; abhyāsaḥ; jñānam, dhyānam and karma-phala-tyāgaḥ.

And what is the meaning of each one of them? Abhyāsaḥ means meditation upon God. So Īśvara cinthanam or meditation upon God is called abhyāsaḥ; and what type of meditation? A meditation which is not backed by knowledge, that is a mechanical meditation without understanding what God is: So I have read some books and I have heard something and I have seen some pictures of God; and I do not know what God is? I do not even know whether God exists or not; because there are atheist people who do not believe in God and I do not have a clear answer to them also; but out of blind belief, without understanding what God stands for; I practice meditation upon God in one form or the other. May be Rāma-form or Kṛṣṇa-form or a cross or a crescent; some symbol or the other I take and I practice. This mechanical meditation or knowledgeless meditation is here called abhyāsaḥ.

Then the second thing is jñānam; jñānam is by the thorough study of scriptures. Suppose a person clearly knows what God is. It is possible by systematic study of scriptures to get a very very clear understanding of Īśvara; and this knowledge is called jñānam. And here by the word 'jñānam' what Kṛṣṇa means is a knowledge without the practice of meditation. This person has the knowledge of God but he does not practice mediation upon the God to internalise the knowledge.

And therefore what is the second thing? Knowledge without mediation. What is the first thing? Meditation without knowledge; so knowledgeless meditation is abhyāsa; and meditation less knowledge is 'jñānam'. புரிஞ்சுதோ; ஜ்ஞாநம் வந்துதோ; Did jñānam has come? This is the second thing.

A third thing is a combination of both. A person studies the scriptures thoroughly; he understands what God is; what God stands for and not only that he has got clear knowledge but after gaining upon knowledge, he dwells upon the Lord as understood from the scriptures. Therefore what is the third stage? Dhyānam; dhyānam means a mixture of both knowledge and meditation. So you can call it knowledge with meditation; or meditation with knowledge; the mixture is called dhyānam.

So abhyāsaḥ is knowledgeless meditation; jñānam is meditationless knowledge; dhyānam is meditation-cum-knowledge; pair or mixture. And the fourth sādhanā is karma phala tyāgaḥ; which Kṛṣṇa has already talked about in the eleventh verse. And what is karma phala tyāgaḥ; dedicating all the karma-phalams to the Lord, and then again taking back from the Lord; you do not gift to the Lord; because you want it; taking it back from the Lord; as Īśvara-prasāda, the gift. It is called karma phala tyāgaḥ. So abhyāsaḥ, jñānam, dhyānam, karma-phala-tyāgaḥ; this is the present list;

And this karma-phala-tyāgaḥ-sādhāna is there in the previous list also; previous list of five sādhanās; OK in that five sādhanā list; karma-phala-tyāgaḥ is given as the lowest one. We started from third and then He gave jñāna-yōga; and Viśva-rūpa-upāsana is the next lowest-sādhāna; ēka-rūpa-upāsana is the next lower one; then niṣkāma-karma-pradhāna-yōga; next lower one; the lowest one is what? Karma phala tyāgaḥ.

So in the previous list karma-phala-tyāgaḥ is given as the lowest; and Kṛṣṇa plays mischief in this slōkā and He gives this list here and he places karma-phala-tyāgaḥ as the highest one. That is why this is the most confusing slōkā of the 12th chapter; In fact we can eliminate this slōkā; because it is problematic; because Kṛṣṇa openly contradicts what he has done in the previous slōkās.

So in the previous portion, a list of five sādhanās are given and in the list karma phala tyāgaḥ is the lowest; and now He gives a list of four sādhanā, and in this karma phala tyāgaḥ is the highest; so we may not notice. But Śankarācārya who is supposed to help us in understanding the śāstra; he comes to our rescue and he says: of course it is an open contradiction; but you should understand what is Lord Kṛṣṇa's intention.

Certainly as given in the previous list; karma-phala-tyāgaḥ is only the lowest stage of sādhanā. That is the fact; because from that only, a person has to go to jñānam; and then later go to dhyānam; and therefore they are higher steps; karma-phala-tyāgaḥ is the lowest step only.

But unfortunately, majority of people are ready for the lowest step only; because we all have got various worldly desires; and therefore we cannot think of niṣkāma-karmas now; we have got so many sakāma-karmās; children's admission waiting; and they have to get married; and for that I have to go to that temple; Thirumanancheri. So you just do a kalyāṇa-uttaram and the daughter will get married; and go to Guruvayoor and put a cradle, you get a child, when we have got so many such desires; how can we talk of niṣkāma-karmas.

Therefore we are ready, or majority is ready for the lowest stage only and if Kṛṣṇa presents that as the lowest, we may feel an inferiority complex and therefore to encourage the people Kṛṣṇa is just transporting this lowest sādhanā to the highest stage. Is like saying that small is beautiful; you know you work for the big one and you are not able to get the big one; and you get the small one. And how do you reconcile yourselves; Small is beautiful; by exactly like that; karma-phala-tyāgaḥ. Kṛṣṇa glorifies.

It is called athiśayōkthi; exaggeration of a sādhanā; so that the people will not feel bad to practice that.

And therefore this whole slōkā is called arta-vāda slōkāḥ; arta-vāda slōkā means exaggerating the value of a sādhanā to encourage the people to practice that.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa grades these four sādhanās here. Of these four, what are these four now? Abhyāsa; that is knowledgeless meditation; jñānam, meditationless knowledge; then dhyānam; meditation-cum-knowledge and karma-phala tyāgaḥ and what is the grade that Kṛṣṇa gives here; here He says the lowest one is abhyāsaḥ; mechanical meditation; mechanical-pūja; mechanical-sādhanā is the lowest one in this list.

Of course mechanical-sādhanā is better than no sādhanā; very careful; mechanical sādhanā is better than no sādhanā. But in the list, mechanical-sādhanā like meditation; sandhyāvandanam, which we have learnt in the seventh or eighth year or tenth year; Now it is practiced; of course nobody practiced; even if they practice now, they do not even know what is the meaning of Gāyathri; it is not known; but they practice it out of fear; because father has said that 'or else Bhagavān will punish'; Therefore many people practice; Kṛṣṇa says mechanical meditation is the worst; or the lowest.

Then what is the next higher thing? Abhyāsath jñānam srēyaḥ; better than mechanical meditation of God is the knowledge of God, which is jñānam; and what is the definition of jñānam? Meditation-less knowledge. So meditation-less knowledge is certainly better than knowledge-less meditation. OK. I hope I am not confusing you. It is Kṛṣṇa's job; therefore I cannot escape.

Therefore what is the next better one? Jñānāt dhyānam viśiṣyatē; better than meditation less knowledge is what? Dhyānam. What is the meaning of dhyānam? I have given you in the meaning; it is meditation practiced after gaining knowledge; when I meditate upon God; I have a clear idea of what God is; this informed meditation enlightened meditation is superior to the previous ones; jñānāt dhyānam viśiṣyatē.

Up to this Kṛṣṇa travels smoothly and now suddenly Kṛṣṇa says; dhyānāt karma-phala-tyāgaḥ; better than all these three sādhanās is what? Karma phala tyāgaḥ; which means karma-phala-tyāgaḥ is the highest sādhanā; superior to all the other three.

So here alone Kṛṣṇa is doing this mischief; the previous list karma-phala-tyāgaḥ is the lowest; Here karma-phala-tyāgaḥ is elevated to the highest sādhanā; but we should remember this elevation is not fact-based elevation; this elevation is a compromise that Kṛṣṇa does for the sake of encouraging the people practice sakāma-karma-pradhāna karma-yōga.

Therefore dhyānāt karma-phala tyāgaḥ. And then what will it lead to? Kṛṣṇa says; tyāgāth, if you practice this karma-phala-tyāgaḥ and what is karma-phala-tyāgaḥ you remember, before enjoying any karma-phalam, you dedicate it to the Lord and enjoy it as Lord's gift. This is very very intrinsic in our culture; even the illiterate villagers who do not know anything about śāstra, even they practice it; even when they buy a new dress, it is kept in front of the Lord, they put candanam manjal or something and thereafter only they wear; the dress is not given to the lord; Lord also knows and we also know; we keep in front; and immediately take; and we prepare pongal also (tomorrow is Pongal) and all those things we keep in front of the Lord; and why do we keep? Because Lord is not going to take it; if Lord is going to ask for a share; then we would not give all of them, And now we are freely offering everything because we know God does not want anything; it is only an acknowledgement. In fact the word Nivēdanam is informing the Lord; and what am I informing; Oh Lord; whatever I am going to enjoy has been made possible only because of your grace; even though I have put forth effort, my capacity to work is also a gift from You and therefore I am grateful to you. With this awareness when I take, that is called karma phala tyāgaḥ. And if you practice this, what is the greatest advantage? Whatever you get as karma-phalam; you can accept without mental agitation. There is no resistance in accepting anything and that is why it is called prasādaḥ.

In fact, in Sānskrīt, do you know what is the meaning of the word prasādaḥ; normally when I say prasāda, what thought comes to your mind; vadai, chundal, kadalai, laddu. Remember the meaning of the word prasādaḥ is tranquility of mind; equanimity of mind; it is derived from the root; pra + sad, sad is the root; pra is the prefix; prasādaḥ means mana śānthī. So when I take every experience in my life; every object that comes to me; every person that comes to me as children; children are born; husband comes; wife comes; everything is prasāda; the greatest risk is what; marriage; and remember in our culture, you cannot exchange; no change; what type of children are born to me, I do not know; by calling them prasāda, what I mean is I have no resistance; the moment the mental resistance stop; the mind becomes prasādaḥ.

And that is why tyāgāth? By giving up resistance, because of the awareness that whatever God gives me is welcome; āgatē svāgataṁ kuryāt.

And then what is the consequence; śānthī; samatvaṁ yōga ucyatē; siddhya-siddhyōḥ samō bhūtvā samatvaṁ yōga ucyatē.

So tyāgāt śāntiḥ anantaram; anantaram means what immediately śānthī comes; so with this Kṛṣṇa concludes the bhakthi-yōga sādhanāni; and with this verse, the first part of 12th chapter is over.

And now we are entering the 2nd part of the 12th chapter, which is from verse No.13 up to the end. We will enter into that:

Verse 12.13

अद्वेषा सर्वभूतानां मैत्रः करुण एव च । निर्ममो निरहङ्कारः समदुःखसुखःक्षमी ॥ १२.१३ ॥

advēṣṭā sarvabhūtānāṃ maitraḥ karuṇa ēva ca |
nirmamō nirahaṅkāraḥ samaduḥkhasukhaḥ kṣamī || 12.13 ||

अद्वेषा advēṣṭā My (devotee) is non-hater, सर्वभूतानाम् sarva-bhūtānām of all beings, मैत्रः maitraḥ is friendly, करुण एव karuṇa ēva compassionate निर्ममः nirmamaḥ free from 'mine' notion, निरहङ्कारः nirahaṅkāraḥ free from 'I' notion, समदुःखसुखः samaduḥkhasukhaḥ same in comfort as well as discomfort, च क्षमी ca kṣamī and forbearing

13. (My devotee) is a non-hater of all beings, is friendly, compassionate, free from 'mine'-notion, free from 'I' -notion, same in comfort as well as discomfort, and forbearance.

So sukhaḥ and kṣamī; when the two dots followed by the letter kṣa the rule of pronunciation should be that the two dots should be completely pronounced; that means what sukhaḥ and kṣamī; we should chant sukhaḥ and kṣamī; not sukha kṣamī; rule of chanting; Pāṇini has written a special sūtra for this; charparē visarjanīyaḥ. Therefore Pāṇini has taken so much trouble. So we should take little trouble to follow that.

Now what is the second portion of the 12th chapter? Now let us imagine a person goes through all the five stages of bhakthi-yōgaḥ; sakāma-karma-pradhāna karma-yōga; niṣkāma-karma-pradhāna karma-yōga; Iṣṭa-dēvathā-upāsana; Viśva-rūpa-upāsana and nirguṇa-Īśvara-jñānam. All these five steps a person goes through successfully.

How much time it will take? We do not know; it may be possible in one life; or it may be carried forward to next life; it may take even several lives; it does not matter; let us imagine a person goes through all the five stages; he becomes what? A jñāni; otherwise called a parā-bhakthāḥ; a bhaktha who has successful gone through all the five. Therefore parā-bhakthaḥ means the highest bhaktha and this parā-bhaktha should necessarily have jñānam; because the fifth stage involves nirguṇa-Īśvara enquiry.

And therefore as we are seeing in the Taittiriya upaniṣad; He will first know ēka-rūpa-Īśvara; Lord with one form; later he will understand God as Viśva-rūpa-Īśvaraḥ; as the very universe itself; and finally he will recognise God has neither one form nor many forms; God is the formless truth behind the formed universe. God is the formless truth behind the formed universe.

And the beauty is once I know God as the formless truth; the peculiar fact that I discover is that the formless truth God is no more an object of knowledge; is no more an object of knowledge; that Lord is the very I, the subject, the observer; Therefore the knowledge is in the form of Aham Brahma asmi; or Saha aham asmi; sōham.

In fact in Sandhyāvandana itself this has been incorporated so that we will remember the goal; asavādityō-brahma; he pours some water, touches the water, and then asavādityō brahma; brahmaiva aham asmi. So this he practices right from the seventh or eighth year; but what type of practice it is? Knowledgeless practice; we will chant kada. Later alone it becomes a meaningful statement; that Lord is non-different from me; therefore the highest bhaktha should necessarily be an advaita-jñāni. And what is the advaitam? Lord and me; paramātma and jīvātma are not two entities; paramātma and jīvātma are two words for one and the same truth. Just as wave and ocean are not two entities; but they are two different names for one and the same; one and the same water. There is no substance called wave; there is no substance called ocean; there is only one substance called water. Similarly, jīvātma and paramātma are nāma dvayam; but nāmi, the vastu is only one and therefore the highest bhaktha is advaita-jñāni; abhēda-jñāni.

And this highest bhaktha or abhēda jñāni have been already mentioned in the second-chapter of the Gītā as sthira prajñāḥ; sthira-prajñāḥ, the one who has got conviction regarding the advaita-jñānam.

And now in the following verses, what Kṛṣṇa wants to talk about is: How does such a bhaktha; that is the highest bhaktha or how does such an advaita jñāni conduct himself in the world?; how does he faces different situations in life? Does he face problems at all; and if he faces problems, how does he respond to the situation? In Sānskrīt, parā bhaktha-lakṣaṇāni; lakṣaṇā means the characteristics, the behaviour, the conduct of this advaita-jñāni. Kṛṣṇa wants to talk about such a bhaktha's-lakṣaṇām.

And what is the purpose of talking about his conduct? It is two-fold benefit; the first benefit is once I know the benefit of this knowledge; I will be tempted to follow the sādhanā; It is a clean marketing method; So what is marketing strategy? They talk about the product and if you have this product; what are the advantages; and what is the cost of the product; they will not say that; or it will be there in the bottom in small letters; they will write thousand rupees and then below they write, and thereafter for 20 years monthly instalment of Rs.500. That too in small letters; life-long. Like that person who was regularly paying in instalments for the cradle; and the last instalment is over and the banker asked; You have got the cradle for the baby; how is the baby; he said I am the baby because instalments was for so many years. Like that the whole thing is in instalment but the thing is what somehow or the other by our TV; by our what you call air conditioner, fridge, etc.

So that is marketing strategy has been started Lord Kṛṣṇa himself in the Bhagavad-Gīta; so He talks about the glory, the benefits of becoming an advaita-jñāni; so first benefit, you have incentive; using the carat method; incentive. You buy the soap power and you get a plastic spoon; and they would include that price in the soap powder. But we buy it; anything free if it is there; we have to buy; that is our weakness.

Then the second benefit is; whatever be the natural traits of the jñāni; they should become a sādhanā for me; to be deliberately practiced. Whatever is a natural trait of a realised person; they should be taken by me as a sādhanā to be deliberately practised. So yāni ajñāninaḥ-sādhanāni; or yāni jñāninaḥ lakṣaṇāni; thāni ajñāninaḥ-sādhanāni bhavanthi. So whatever be his natural trait, they should be taken as a list of sādhanā, which I should deliberately and gradually practice. Therefore we can take this as a list of virtues to be cultivated. And from this we come to know another important thing also. And that is when a person practices spiritual sādhanā and attains liberation, he is going to survive in this world.

So mōkṣa is not a benefit which is promised after death. If mōkṣa is a posthumous benefit that you are going to get after death; you will not vote for mōkṣa right now; because you want to survive. So if I say jñāna will give you mōkṣa and mōkṣa is giving to Vaikunṭha or Kailāsa; what will you say; I do not need jñānam now; I do not want to vaikunṭha or Kailāsa now; I have got lot of duties to be completed and after everything is over; when I am about to die, give me the knowledge; so that I am ready for travelling.

So Kṛṣṇa makes it very clear; mōkṣa is a state of mind; that you will enjoy while you are living in this world. Therefore you can test vēdānta; if I promise after death; what is the proof whether I am telling what I am telling is correct or not; because nobody can come and question me after death: you promised mōkṣa but I did not get it. Therefore it is not something which we can verify here and now. And therefore our mōkṣa is called jīvan mukthi. Therefore the description that we get is jīvan-mukthiḥ; jīvan-muktha-lakṣaṇāni; stira-prajñāna-lakṣaṇāni; parā-bhaktha-lakṣaṇāni; is the topic now.

And this is from this verse; thirteen verse and up to the end; that is the 19th verse and 20th verse is the conclusion.

Now we will see the trait of a jñāni. And this is also useful in another way. Suppose you have a doubt; whether I come under jñāni list or ajñāni list; because afterall I have been studying, attending the classes for so long a time; so how do I know or whether I am jīvan muktha or not; Swamiji will you get a certificate; To whomsoever it may concern; the bearer of the certificate is a jīvan-mukthi; who deserves a garland and a pāda pūja also. So how am I to know; very easy; and you can check up; And if the traits are there; you can say we are jñānis; otherwise it means; we have still work and still internalize.

And what is the first virtue of a jīvan muktha? First virtue itself you will be bowled; first ball bowled duck; advēṣṭā sarvabhūtānām; the trait of a jñāni a realised person is, he or she, does not hate any being in the universe; freedom from hatred is the first and the most powerful trait; So we should ask do I hate anyone; Not anyone ...? We have got a very big list; starting from neighbour onwards; there is a very very big list; bigger the list; farther from mōkṣa I am.

Therefore I want to know how far away I am from mōkṣa; take a sheet and write the list; longer the list; the more the distance is; and when the list becomes; smaller and smaller I am getting closer to closer to mōkṣa; and the most interesting thing is.

Whenever the śāstra says: you should not hate anyone; our first immediate approach is we try to justify our hatred. So we give a big description of the person; and what all negative traits he has got; what all akramas he is doing; Swamiji that is why I am hating; they expect Swamiji to OK; that person deserves hatred.

So according to śāstra; there is no such thing called justified or justifiable hatred. Any form of hatred is unjustifiable. And why do we say so? Why we say so? Because according to śāstra; every person is intrinsically a good divine and pure person. There is no impure person in the world; there is no evil character in the world; every single jeevathma is essentially none other than śuddha paramātma; nitya śuddha buddha muktha svabhāva; that śuddam braham you are is the teaching of śāstra; therefore nobody deserves hatred. No person deserves hatred; because every person is a saint; the worst sinner is also a saint.

Then where is the problem? A person's character or actions may be corrupt or wrong action; a person is saintly and pure and the actions which are not the intrinsic nature of the person; the action that a person does or a behaviour of a person may be corrupt or wrong or unrighteous or immoral.

So our next question is can I hate the action of the person? First I cannot hate the person. Now the next question can I hate the behaviour or negative trait or wrong actions of a person? Śāstra says a wrong action of a person also does not deserve hatred; A wrong behaviour of a person also does not deserve hatred; Why? By hating the behaviour you are not going to change the behavior. Hatred is never a remedy for the misbehaviour of a person. If by hating a person you can change the character of a person; then what we can do; hate; and I am going you for a half an hour; like radiation treatment; I hate you and I hate you; and after half-hour radium treatment called hatred; 5 sittings, 6 sittings, this person has become alright. Does it happen? No person can be; no action or character can be changed by hatred. And therefore person does not deserve hatred; behaviour also does not deserve hatred; Person does not deserve hatred; because every person is innately good; behaviour does not deserve hatred because behavior cannot be changed by hating a person. So therefore hatred is utterly useless tendency.

And not only that, according to śāstra; not only hatred is totally purposeless, the hatred will damage the mind in which the hatred rests; not only it will not change the person; who is the victim of the hatred; but it will destroy the person in whom the hatred rests. So if i am going to hate someone; that someone is not going to change at all. On the other hand, hatred like an acid; it is going to corrode and destroy my mind. Therefore already I am affected by the other person's misbehaviour and now I am adding to the damage. What is that? I develop hatred and increase the damage. What am I supposed to do; avoid or decrease or remedy; instead of taking a remedy, I am only making the situation worse. And therefore what does śāstra say; every person deserves love.

And if there is misbehaviour on the part of a person; the misbehaviour requires an appropriate action; an appropriate response. Hatred is not going to solve the problem. Now the next question is; what is the appropriate response? Certainly, hatred is not the appropriate response; because hatred does not change the person. On the other hand, it hurts more; then what should be the appropriate response. Śāstra says you use any method; sāmā; educating the person; and transforming the thinking process. So sāmā, dāna bhēda; and if all of them fail; ultimately even danḍa you can use if you want, But even when I use danḍa; the attitude should not be hatred; but even danḍa must be with love alone; even danḍa must be with love alone; that I am not able to change the person by non-violence methods and I am forced to used violent or danḍa; but still I am doing only for improving the person not for the sake of retaliation or hurt.

And then the question is: Is it possible to give danḍa; loving a person? Can you punish a person with love? Is it possible? We think punishment and hatred goes together. According to śāstra again; even punishment is possible with love; the best example is what? What is the best example we have: a mother beating the child. Nowadays even that cannot be done. You are not supposed to beat the child in some countries; it comes under child abuse and children are given a phone No. and the children can phone and the parents can be arrested. I do not this rights business; human rights; husband right (no body is talking) OK; women rights; OK, I think they will start slowly; wife rights. Children are informed of their rights; therefore the children blackmail the children; So before all these things come; so parents did some time beat or at least scold the time, but even when mother uses violence; the mother can never hate the child. And therefore it is possible to take appropriate step without hatred; and therefore misbehaviour require the appropriate action; and the person requires love. None of them neither the person nor misbehaviour requires hatred. Therefore even Kṛṣṇa may choose to destroy Kaṁsa; and He may ask Arjuna to destroy Duryōdhana. Therefore whatever appropriate action is to be taken we should take; but the advice is, it should not be motivated by hatred; but it must be motivated by love and to change or correct the person. Therefore advēṣṭā sarvabhūtānāṁ; that emmm must be very long indicating nobody should come in the list of hatred. This is the first-qualification.

Now we can check up ourselves. You should not ask: Swamiji can I have a few exceptions in the hatred; like my mother in law; because you have an idiom, "we love to hate"; I love to hate him; can have at least a small list; no list is allowed. So freedom from hatred; is the first trait of a jñāni.

More in the next class.

Hari Om

160 Chapter 12, Verses 13-14

ॐ

In the first twelve verses of the 12th chapter, Lord Kṛṣṇa has talked about the entire range of sādhanās to be followed by every seeker, which range of sādhanās is called bhakti yōgaḥ. And as I repeatedly said, bhakthi-yōga includes the first two levels of karma-yōga; bhakthi-yōga includes the next two levels of upāsana; and bhakthi-yōga includes the last and final level of jñāna-yōga also. And by jñāna-yōga we mean vēdānta śravaṇa manana nidhidhyāsanam, and without this jñāna-yōga, the bhakthi-yōga series of sādhanā remains incomplete. Bhakthi yōga has to be capped or culminated only through vēdānta śravaṇa manana nidhidhyāsanā, which Kṛṣṇa called akṣarōpasana.

And if a person follows all these five stages of bhakti yōga, certainly he would have gone through jñāna-yōga also, it being the final stage; and therefore he should have become a jñāni. And by vēdānta śravaṇa manana nidhidhyāsanā, the jñānam that he receives is that the Lord has never been away from me and the Lord can never be away from me, the distance between me and Lord has been felt by me only because of delusion. So the distance between me and the Lord is caused only by delusion; it is a notional distance and that notional distance is removed by this knowledge. And therefore I am not away from the Lord; Lord is not away from me, saha aham asmi; and aham saha asmi. And a person who has gained this knowledge is called parama hamsaḥ; parama hamsaḥ; aham saḥ; and saḥ aham; the one who has clearly grasped is called parama hamsaḥ.

And that is why the mantra is also called parama hamsaḥ mantra; sōham hamsaḥ; aham saḥ sōham and therefore this culmination of bhakthi we called in the last class; advaita bhakthi or jñāna-niṣṭa.

And now from the 13th verse onwards up to the 19th verse of this chapter, Kṛṣṇa wants to talk about the nature of a parama hamsaḥ or the nature of this bhaktha; jñāni bhakthaḥ. Kṛṣṇa has hinted this jñāni bhakthaḥ in the 7th chapter of the Gīta when He said:

चतुर्विधा भजन्ते मां जनाः सुकृतिनोऽर्जुन |
आर्तो जिज्ञासुरर्थार्थी ज्ञानी च भरतर्षभ ||७-१६||

caturvidhā bhajantē mām janāḥ sukr̥tinō:'rjuna |
ārtō jijñāsurar̥thār̥thī jñānī ca bharatar̥ṣabha ||7-16||

तेषां ज्ञानी नित्ययुक्त एकभक्तिर्विशिष्यते |
प्रियो हि ज्ञानिनोऽत्यर्थमहं स च मम प्रियः ||७- १७||

tēṣāṃ jñānī nityayukta ēkabhaktirviśiṣyatē |
priyō hi jñāninō:'tyarthamaham sa ca mama priyaḥ ||7-17||

In fact these two verses of the seventh chapter, alone have been elaborated in these verses from 13 to 19. That means jñāni is the greatest bhaktha; because between jñāni and me, there is no distance at all. Swami Chinmayānanda beautifully says: When love or bhakthi increases, the distance decreases; and that is why we also say when we love someone very intensely; we have an expression he or she is very close to me. Do not we say that? That person is very close to me and another word is very intimate. So the greater the love, lesser the distance; or greater the intimacy.

So extrapolating this, the greatest love must be that in which the distance must be zero. So infinite love is equal to zero distance. And that is why we try to reduce the distance. So to express intense love; what do you do; embrace; and what is the attempt to embrace? By embracing I want to remove the distance me and the person that I love. Extending the same principle, in advaita alone; the distance between jivātma and paramātma is zero and therefore in advaita alone; the love or devotion to the Lord is infinite. Who says: Bhagavān says: jñāni tu ātmaiva mē matam; Arjuna, jñāni is not close to me; jñāni is Me and I am jñāni.

And it is this highest bhakthi which is the explained in these verses; how he behaves in the world; how he faces the people; because even the greatest jñāni has to exhaust his prārabdha karma. And a jñāni's prārabdha is also a mixture of puṇyam and pāpam. And now jñāni may be a noble person; but previously even he has done akramas as an ajñāni and therefore even he is bound to have puṇya and pāpa. In his prārabdha bundle, and therefore jñāni will have to face favourable and unfavourable situations; favourable and unfavourable people; and when he faces such situations; how does he take; how does he respond. This is what I said; parā-bhaktha lakṣaṇāni.

And we saw the first lakṣaṇam; and what is the first lakṣaṇam? Sarva-bhūtānām advēṣṭā; the one who never justifies hatred; which is the biggest weakness; one who never justifies hatred; because there is no justified or justifiable hatred. We may disagree with a person's behaviour; we may disagree with a person's action; and we may strongly condemn and criticise that behaviour or action; and we may take appropriate measures to involve even danḍa; danḍa means punishment. They are all allowed; but hatred is never allowed as a method of expressing your disapproval; hatred can never be the method of the expression of your disapproval; we can disapprove and disagree and strongly criticise but criticism cannot have even a tinch of hatred. And if I am a victim of somebody's misconduct, to save my skin and my mind; I may even go away from that person; but even when I physically move away; mentally, nobody I reject. And that means I should be able to include everyone in my prayers; and I should be able to pray for the well-being of all. This capacity to include everyone in your prayers. This inner non-rejection of a person; even though physically you may have to distance; but psychologically I do not reject anyone. If there is some weakness in that person; I silently pray Oh Lord; Give him நல்ல புத்தி; nalla buddhi; let me him change; I am not able to change. Therefore Oh Lord; change his behaviour; but there is no hatred. And this should be natural to me; and if I have got that; I have assimilated the vēdāntic-teaching.

This is test No.1. Test for whom; not others; very careful; never use this portion to judge the other person; this fellow; not a jñāni ticked off; that fellow; far away from jñānam, leave him at a distance. Never use this portion to judge other people, we are no one to judge others, these are all indications; parameters to judge myself. And self-judgment also must be appropriately used; because self-judgment can work positively as well as negatively. If I do not know how to intelligently use; self-judgment can cause frustration; inferiority complex; I am not growing at all; the other person is spiritually growing very fast.

And thus it can lead to self-condemnation and guilt; if self-judgment leads to self-condemnation and guilt; better drop your judgment. Self-judgment must be used only as an inspiration for more effort; without comparing with others; I find out where I stand and I put forth the appropriate effort, it must be an accelerating force; not a retarding force. And therefore we should be extremely careful, if we are using self-judgment. Therefore advēṣṭā sarvabhūtānām is character No.1.

Then the next one is maitraḥ; a jñāni is a friend to all; he is a friend of everyone; not close to someone and away from another; he is a universal friend;

भोक्तारं यज्ञतपसां सर्वलोकमहेश्वरम् |
सुहृदं सर्वभूतानां ज्ञात्वा मां शान्तिमृच्छति || ५-२९ ||

bhōktāraṁ yajñatapasāṁ sarvalōkamahēśvaram |
suhṛdaṁ sarvabhūtānāṁ jñātvā māṁ śāntimṛcchati || 5.29 ||

5th chapter, sarvabhūtānāṁ suhṛdaṁ. Now the question is what do you mean by friend? What is the definition of a friend? Bhṛhari in his Neethi śatakam, gives the definition of a friend:

पापात् निवरयति योजयते हिताया
गुह्यम् निगूहति गुणान् प्रकटीकरोति ।
अपत्यातम् नचहाति ददाति काले
सन्मित्र लक्षण इदम् प्रवदन्ति सन्तः ॥

pāpāt nivarayati yōjayatē hitāyā
guhyaṁ nigūhati guṇān prakāṭhīkarōti |
apatgatam nacaḥāti dadāti kālē
sanmitra lakṣaṇa idam pravadanti santaḥ ||

So this is the indication of a friend; what all he does; pāpāt nivarayati; so my friend will guide me and direct me, if I going in a wrong track. So my friend should be interested in guiding me; because my intimate weaknesses I will never know; that is why they tell; a lamp is the agal vilakku will throw light everywhere; but right underneath, it is dark. Therefore our own intimate weakness we will never know; like our eyes can see everything; but the eyes can never see the colour of the eyes. So somebody has to see; and therefore, I may not know what are my problems; therefore I should have a friend who tells me what my problems are; and the one who does that; is a mitraḥ; mitram; therefore pāpāt nivārayati; turns away from wrong actions; yōjayatē hitāyā; and puts me in the righteous path.

then guhyam nigūhati; I share some of my intimate secrets also with friend, because we all require a confidant; very close person with whom I can share everything; so with these surety that the friend will not tell it out; a Swiss bank; you know; Swiss bank account; they would not reveal; Similarly we all require a psychological Swiss bank for our mental health; ஆருகிட்டேயாவது சொல்லி அழ ஒருவன் வேண்டும்; we need someone to blurt our woes and cry; so the friend does that and he reveals my private life; guhyam nigūhati; what is to be kept confidential; he keeps confidential.

Then guṇān prakāṭhīkarōti; all my wonderful character; so guṇās, my virtues he shares with others; normally we do the other way round; guṇān nigūhati; guhyam prakāṭhīkarōti; and the enjoyment which we derive from that is something great! juicy news! And there is a pleasure and the people also sit around and induce you to come out; and there are certain magazines which are meant only for this purpose; that is the right purpose; guṇān prakāṣhīkarōti; guhyam nigūhati. Then apatgatam nacaḥāti dadāti kālē; so when the friend is in adversity in crisis; the general tendency of the people is leave; if the friend is in poverty; I would not like to be with him; if he asks for loan what to do. Therefore

वयसिगते कः कामविकारः

शुष्के नीरे कः कासारः |

क्षीणेवित्ते कः परिवारः

ज्ञाते तत्त्वे कः संसारः ||१०||

vayasigatē kaḥ kāmavikāraḥ

śuṣkē nīrē kaḥ kāsāraḥ |

kṣīṇēvittē kaḥ parivāraḥ

jñātē tattvē kaḥ saṁsāraḥ ||10||

when I lose my money; all the family people slowly get away; because they are worried; you may ask for loan; a friend is one who is a friend in need; a friend in need is a friend indeed; it is a beautiful saying; and that is translated by Bhṛthari; apatgatam nacaḥāti; in crisis he does not leave you; dadāti kālē; by giving the help in terms of money or consolation or moral support or even prayer and time; he is willing to give when the other person needs; whoever does all these things; sanmitra lakṣaṇa idam pravadanti santaḥ.

So Bhṛthari; a great saint; So he wrote Nīthi Ṣatakam; beautiful hundred verses on values; very rare and beautiful work; and hundred verses on vairāgyam; vairāgyam ṣatakam. Very powerful; you read it, you run away; thus straight away punches your nose; anyway; so he is mitraḥ.

And then the next virtue is: karuṇaḥ; karuṇaḥ means compassionate; helpful; when the other person is in distress; he has compassion. And what do you mean compassion? Enjoying a sensitive mind; which is capable of placing itself in the position of the other person, and going through the emotions that the other person will go through. In fact we do that when we watch a movie; so gradually we identify with the heroine; or hero; and when one of them dies; while the hero or heroine cries, we also start crying; and this spouse who is sitting nearby tells; I am here; I have not died, do not cry; but temporarily tadātmya bhāva; so enjoying a sensitive mind to identify with another person and going through the emotions of the other person; it is called mind having empathy. That is going through the feeling; when the other person is happy; I also feel happy; when the other person feels angry; I also feel; So having the same feeling of others, is empathy and naturally the other person goes through pain, it is no more the pain of the other person; it becomes my pain; so

आत्मौपम्येन सर्वत्र समं पश्यति योऽर्जुन ।

शुखं वा यदि वा दुःखं स योगी परमो मतः ॥ ६.३२ ॥

ātmaupamyēna sarvatra samam paśyati yō'rjuna | sukham vā yadi vā duḥkham sa yōgī paramō mataḥ || 6.32 ||

And the others' pain become my pain and I have pain I want to immediately find out a remedy. Similarly, I cannot withstand another's pain; therefore I go out help spontaneously; just as I help myself spontaneously. Similarly spontaneously I go to the other persons' help. And the help need not be always in terms of money; if I cannot do anything; I have told you one method; which everybody can use; chant a prayer for one minute and say whatever puṇyam is generated by that prayer; I am willing to donate; no money expenditure; one prayer; sarvē bhavanthu sukhinaḥ; sarvē bhavantu nirāmaya; not in express mode in kada buda speed; sincerely I chant and I tell the Lord whatever puṇyam is generated by this prayer; I am donating to God's relief fund; like PM relief fund; I donate to God's relief fund; that is also karuna; it requires spending quality time; the one who can use spontaneously; I think that there is a beautiful saying in Kural; of உடுக்கை இழந்தவன் கைபோல ஆங்கே இடுக்கண் களைவதாம் நட்பு. uṭukkai ilantavan kaipōla ānkē iṭukkaṇ kaḷaivatām naṭpu. (788); whatever it is; I am not very good in Tamil; but it is wonderful example. Suppose the dress falls down in the crowd; then immediately hand, you need not deliberately command, spontaneously the hand goes and pulls it up; in the same way; that person has spontaneously help others in trouble; is called karuṇaḥ; kāruṇya vāram nidhim, mīnākṣi praṇathōsmi; these are all godly qualities. And since the jñāni has become one with the Lord; he enjoys all the godly virtues and that is karuna.

Then the next one is nirmamaḥ; the one who is without ownership with regard to anything; who does not have any mamakāra means what: mine notion. The one who does not have any ownership. Do not ask about ownership flats; what it means? It means what when you have ownership, you are flat!; OK; now anyway British English is going away; once upon a time we had British English because they were ruling us; Now slowly American English is picking up; no more flats; now they are all changed to apartments; no more lifts; but elevators; so therefore ownership flats are all gone.

So how you give up your ownership; there are two methods; one is the religious method; another is vēdāntic method; vēdāntic method you should have clear understanding; religious method is you relatively easier; vēdāntic method is what: when I do know I am the ātma; I come to know that ātma is asaṅgaḥ; ātma is like space; not related to or connected to anything. Therefore ātma is nitya sambandha rahita; free from all relations and associations, and since I am the asaṅga ātma; how can I be connected to anything; how can I claim anything as mine. And therefore nirmamatvam is owning up the asaṅga ātma svarūpam.

न माता; न पिता, न बन्धु, न शास्ता न शास्त्रं, न शिष्यो न शिक्षा, न च त्वं न चाहं न वायं प्रपञ्चः । na mātā; na pitā, na bandhu, na śāstā na śāstram, na śiṣyō na śikṣā, na ca tvam na cāham

na vāyam prapañcaḥ |

So I am not related to anyone. So this is therefore I have no possessions; this is vēdāntic.

And the relatively simpler method is by understanding that everything that I possess is a temporary gift from the Lord, so that I will use it properly and grow spiritually; everything that I possess has been given only for temporary use. And after using that I have to leave it back; therefore whether they are people, children, mother, father, everything and every person is a gift. Therefore I remember Oh Lord I am grateful to you for giving me everything; and I will use them for my growth and when the appropriate time comes and when you choose to take them back, I will not make any complaint against you; I will only add a note; what note is called; all American methods; Thank you note; so you have to send it back with a thank you note; Oh Lord; Thank you for giving me my mother, father, the grandmother, grandfather, the spouse, children, anything ultimately including the body; therefore remembering that everything belongs to the Lord: tan man dan sub kuch tērā.

It is not a mere prayer but I mean that from my innermost heart; and that is called nirmamatvam. We need not physically give up anything; we can use everything; with the awareness that they are meant for my use; they are not meant for my ownership; it has nothing to do with the physical possession.

And then the next virtue the jñāni enjoys is: nirahaṅkāraḥ; when I have got ownership and identification with the external world it is called mamakāraḥ; and when I have got ownership and identification with my own śarīra trayam; stula; sūkṣma; kāraṇa śarīram; that ownership is called ahamkāraḥ. So śarīrathraya abhimāna ahamkāraḥ; śarīrābhinna viṣaya abhimānaḥ mamakāraḥ.

Can you understand the difference? Identification with the body-mind-complex is ahamkāra; identification with everything external is mamakāra; and how do you give up the mamakāra? There also the same method; even this body is a gift from the Lord.

I told you Bhṛthari wrote Nīthi ṣatakam and Vairāgya ṣatakam; in his Vairāgya ṣatakam; in the end he writes a beautiful verse. This is the thank you note; given by an enlightened person at the person of death; when everybody tries to cry and grieve, Bhṛthari tells a wise person what will be his attitude. So that beautiful verse he says; this person address all the five elements; ākāśa; vāyu; Agni; āpaḥ; pṛthvi. And addressing all of them, he says: Oh Elements; you have all given a portion of yours for building up this body; body has got ākāśa; a portion, and it has got vāyu, in the form of breath; it has got Agni in the form of temperature; 98.4; and it has got jalam inside; water is there; we drink; and it has got earth; all the weight is the earth. Therefore this physical body called pañcaboudika śārīram; is a gift from the five elements given for me; so that I will use this body for attaining mōkṣa. And Bhṛthari addresses the five elements and tells that I have intelligently made use of this body; now I am returning the body to you.

मातर्मैदिनि तात मारुत सखे तेजः सुबन्धो जल

jñānapāstasamastamōfamahimā liyē parabrahmaṇi || 100 ||](#)

I am merging into Brahman; I am handing over this body to you. This attitude is called nirahaṅkāraḥ; so nirmamaḥ; nirahaṅkāraḥ.

Then sama-duḥkha-sukha; so the one who is equanimous; one who is well poised; the one who has got the mental shock absorber; when he travels through the road which is full of potholes; you will understand wellbeing in Chennai roads; so violent and so many holes are there; and you cannot cover all the potholes; what best you can do; have a shock absorber in your vehicle; by using the shock absorber the jolt will not come down to zero level; but it is reduced to a great extent; So that you can travel reasonably comfortably. And similarly our life also has got roads; the puṇyam part of the road is plain and beautiful; but now and then the potholes called pāpam comes; and if you have to handle that; you require the shock absorber; the local Gabriel shock absorber would not function there; there is only one absorber; that is called jñānam. So by enjoying the jñānam; sukha duḥkha mityatva darśanēna, guruṇāpi duḥkhēna vicālyatē. Not that the jolt comes down to zero; but it is reasonably poised; without having any trauma in the mind; and how to do that.

Everywhere there is vēdāntic as well as religious method; vēdāntic method is too high; and what is that method? Aham satyam; everything else is mithya; dream; Therefore sukham is dream; duḥkham is dream; sarva mityatva darśanēna, enjoying a poised mind, is vēdāntic method but it requires lot of assimilation.

And there is a simpler religious method also and what is that method; Understanding that everything in the creation is given by the Lord; and therefore everything in the creation is purposeful. Everything in the creation has got its own purpose; something I have known the purpose; in the case of certain other things; they appear purposeless; not because they are purposeless; but because I have not understood its purpose; and therefore this conviction in the fact that Bhagavān never creates anything purposelessly. This conviction; this śraddhaḥ must be very strong; the more you study the creation, the more you will understand that. Any science you take, the appreciation that we get is everything in the creation is purposeful. Taittiriya upaniṣad we will be seeing later; tasmāt sukr̥ṭa mucayata iti. The creation is called sukr̥ṭam; which means there is nothing purposeless. And if this understood, we have to apply this to sukham duḥkham pair also; which is also an integral part of this creation; The sukha-duḥkham pair also is an integral part of the creation; that is what we come to know from the purāṇic study; whether it is Rāma or whether it is Kṛṣṇa or whether it is Dharmaputṛa; whether it is Nala Mahārāja; everyone goes through ups and down; And my conviction is that the sukha-duḥkham also have got their own purpose and the purpose is my own inner polishing or refinement.

So therefore the conversion of my personality; refinement of my personality requires several process and duḥkham also is one of the processes. Like converting a raw material into final product, it has to go through so many procedures; heating is involved; hammering is involved. So many things are involved, Similarly, I require all of them for my inner growth; Once I have this strong conviction; sukham va duḥkham va. I will be able to accept without resistance or reaction and that is called mental balance. Therefore sama duḥkha sukhaḥ.

Then the next virtue is; each one we have to test ourselves on and off; how are we fairing in that quality. Then the next one is kṣami; kṣami means the one who has got kṣama. In fact the best definition of kṣama is that virtue which we do not have; That which do not have is kṣama; is the most difficult virtue; because the faster the pace of our life; more tougher is the kṣama; kṣama also is a very very important word; otherwise called thithikṣa; we have seen this very often; we can define in several ways. When I face a situation; which I consider as unfavourable to me; my tendency is to change the situation to make it favourable to me; the situation need not be merely the set up; even the behaviour of a family member. So this family member has got certain way of behaving certain way of doing things; that is also a situation; and when I find that a situation or behaviour is not favourable; my tendency, spontaneous or natural tendency is changing the situation; converting the situation to make it favourable. And this conversion can be done in two ways. One is the employment of violent methods; either verbal violence immediate flaring up; impulsive flaring up; verbal or even physical violence; this is one method applied to change a set up or situation. Your own child does not listen to you. And then another is: a non-violent method of changing the situation; of these two; which one naturally comes to us. The impulsive and immediate method is the flare-up violent method.

And kṣamāvān is a person who always postpones this method; even though my impulsive reaction is to adopt this violent and seemingly quicker method of changing the situation; this kṣamāvān is a person who postpones this method and tries his best to adopt non-violent methods and the violent method is used only as இன்று போயி நாளை வா; inṅru pōyi nālai vā method it is called. Even at the last moment, a chance is given; the greater the postponement, more kṣama you will have.

And if I should this kṣama, I should have the understanding that violent method is natural; and it is effective and it gives immediate benefit alright; that is why we adopt that; because it is natural; flaring up is most natural; and definitely it is effective because the other person changes more out of fear rather than conviction; it is method of fear and the other is it is quick also; but this person has to understand even though it is easier; even though it is effective and quick the side effects are worse than the benefits. It is like a powerful drug whose side effects are often worse than the disease itself; the more I understand this very clearly; the more I am convinced of this fact; the more I will avoid this quicker method; for which I should understand the psychology, the functioning of the mind. That whenever I use a violent method; the other person is greatly disturbed; And if I use violent method; the victim of violence also becomes violent. And therefore not only I am violent; I am creating another violent person. And that person may not retaliate; because it is a child; the child cannot retaliate; when the child grows up; and becomes a father; he becomes violent with regard to his children; and that child becomes violent; thus we are producing violent people all over; every time I become violent; it is like a nuclear chain reaction. If I understand this very clearly; I will try to avoid that method. Not that it should not be there; śāstra accepts danḍa alright; but it is only the last resort; and one who postpones that method is called kṣami.

14. That devotee of Mine whose mind and intellect are fixed upon Me (and) who is ever contented, tranquil, self-restrained (and) with clear knowledge is dear to Me.

So santuṣṭaḥ; the one who has discovered fullness; one who does not lack anything in life; psychologically or intellectually, knowledge or emotion wise; the one who does not lack anything; and this inner pūrṇathvam is called santhōṣaḥ; and the person who has got is santuṣṭaḥ; If you remember, the sthithaprajñā portion.

ātmanyēva"tmanā tuṣṭaḥ sthithaprajñāstadōcyatē || 2.55 ||

So the one who is contented and why he is contented; because he has got the knowledge aham pūrṇaḥ; pūrṇatva jñānēna.

Then people ask if I already contented; then how I will work in the world? If there is contentment; then everybody sit quiet; then nobody will work for the progress of the society; nobody will love to contribute; our answer is: In fact contented people alone can contribute; if I have discontentment, I will work alright; I will earn alright; but I can never contribute because whatever I get; I will use for myself because any amount I take, I am not satisfied. And therefore discontentment will not help in contribution; contented people alone can contribute to the society; because whatever he gets; happily he can share with others.

And therefore the entire life of a jñāni is dedicated to what: contributing the others; the time is for others; energy is for others; knowledge is for others; And therefore a jñāni alone can really contribute.

Therefore santuṣṭaḥ; and when he is santuṣṭaḥ; because we also find santhōṣaḥ now and then; but the problem is contentment comes; the son has passed the 12th exam; crucial exam. So therefore I am so happy and contented; but next moment, which college; which American university; comes to the next; there is contentment, this transient contentment we are not talking: satataṁ santuṣṭaḥ; eternal contentment; the one who has: this jñāni and yōgi.

So the one who is a great yōgi; once I say, you will say śirasāsanam only; yōga many people think, either it is various āsanās or the next thing they think is miracles. So here yōgaḥ means mōkṣaḥ or jñānam. So yōgi means the one who has got jñānam. How can the word yōga mean jñānam? The word yōga is derived from the root yuj; which means to combine; to unite; to bring together. Jñānam is called yōgaḥ because through knowledge alone, the distance between jīvātma and paramātma is removed. Because as I said before in the beginning of the class, the distance between jīvātma and paramātma is caused only by ignorance. Because in fact there is no distance between jīvātma and paramātma. Why there is no distance? Why there is no distance; Bhagavān is in Vaikunṭa, it is a great distance; if Bhagavān is defined as all pervading; what will be distance between all-pervading Lord and me. Suppose I say that the all-pervading Lord is in Vaikunṭa only; what a contradiction? In fact Vaikunṭa means hṛdayaṁ; always remember, Vaikunṭa of purāṇa is the symbolic representation of our own hṛdayaṁ only; If Lord is all-pervading, there cannot be distance and if I still feel the distance; it is a notional distance caused by delusion. Like a child sleeping on the lap of the mother; and getting a dream in which it misses the mother; and the child cries thinking that it has lost the mother and then the mother wakes up the child and the child discovers that I have never lost the mother. In fact I have been dreaming on the lap.

Therefore distance is caused by ignorance. That distance is removed by knowledge; therefore knowledge alone unites jīvātma and paramātma and therefore it is called a uniting process; yōgaḥ means the means of union. Jīvātma paramātmāna yujyatē; anēna iti yōgaḥ. That with the help of which jīvātma gets united with paramātma; therefore he is yōgi; means jñāni.

And what about miracles powers? Miraculous powers; So this another confusion; people think that a jñāni should have miraculous powers; or else he is no jñāni; I have told you before; there is no rule at all that jñāni should have miraculous powers; jñāni should have what? Jñānam. So the very word jñāni indicates jñānam asya asti ithi jñāni; the wise man one who has wisdom.

So I have told you: four types of people: do you remember: the one who has neither miraculous powers nor knowledge; majority; no siddhi or jñānam; type No.4, we have to start from bottom;

Type No.3, one who has siddhi but no knowledge; so jñāna rahita siddhi; is the third variety;

And the second variety is: can you guess? Siddhi rahita jñānam; self-knowledge without any miraculous powers; is the second;

First one: the one who has both jñānam and the siddhi.

Of these four types, who are the liberated ones? one two three four; who are the liberated; the first one is liberated because he has got jñānam; siddhi is there of course is bonus; the second one is also liberated; because he or she has jñānam; without even an iota of siddhi; and the third one has got all siddhis without jñānam; In fact we get this category in Chandōgya upaniṣad seventh chapter; Nārada tells I have got all siddhis; I can read the mind of others; I can know what is under the ground without digging; digging we also do; I can know what is underground without digging; I can read the future; even though all the siddhis are there;

शोचामि तं मा भगवाञ्छोकस्य पारं तारयत्विति
तं होवाच यद्वै किञ्चित्दध्यगीष्ठा नामैवैतत् ॥ ७.१.३ ॥

[śōcāmi taṁ mā bhagavāñchōkasya pāraṁ tārayatviti
taṁ hōvāca yadvai kiñcītatadhyagiṣṭhā nāmaivaitat || 7.1.3 ||](#)

So a person even if be the greatest siddha, if knowledge is not there; he is a siddha-saṁsāri; miraculous-saṁsāri; and the fourth one is also saṁsāri; therefore remember; jñānam is primary; never focus on siddhi; siddhi is an obstacle to mōkṣa. And therefore yōgi means jñāni with or without siddhis.

The next word is yathātma; which we will see in the next class.

Hari Om

161 Chapter 12, Verses 14-15

ॐ

In the second part of the 12th chapter of the Gīta beginning from the 13th verse Lord Kṛṣṇa talks about the characteristic of the highest-bhaktha; the highest-bhaktha being one who has gone through all the five levels of bhakthi-yōga; and the final level of bhakthi-yōga being nothing but jñāna-yōgaḥ; And therefore the one who has successfully gone through all the five levels of bhakthi-yōga will necessarily be a jñāni; who was called a sthira-praṅṅāḥ in the second-chapter. And if you want to call him the greatest bhaktha, we can call him parā-bhaktha and sthira-prajñāḥ are synonymous.

And what are the characteristics of such a sthita-prajñāḥ? That is the topic we are seeing now; we have covered the 13th verse and now we are seeing the 14th verse in which Kṛṣṇa said satataṁ santuṣṭaḥ; and this bhaktha who is a jñāni has understood that I am not different from the pūrṇa-Īśvaraḥ. If the Lord is pūrṇaḥ, the infinite one, that pūrṇa Īśvara cannot be away from me; because the pūrṇa Īśvara is away, minus me, the Īśvara will become apūrṇaḥ; because the infinite should include everything. And therefore the ultimate knowledge is pūrṇa-Īśvaraḥ is not away from me; pūrṇa Īśvaraḥ is not different from me. In short I am pūrṇa-Īśvaraḥ. Pūrṇaḥ means what; pūrṇa means satyam anandam ānantham. And when I discover the fact that I am pūrṇaḥ, I do not lack in life; I do not miss anything in life; I never suffer from the problem of self-inadequacy. I can sing the well-known Tamil Song, குறை ஒன்றும் இல்லை; kurai ondrum illai. It is not a mere verbal expression; but I can tell from my own inner heart; I do not lack anything in life; I do not miss anything in life.

And as long as I lack something or miss something; I cannot keep quiet, I will become restless. And therefore there is a constant struggle to make myself complete. And this struggle will continue eternally, until I discover that I do not lack anything; and in the case of the jñāni, he has discovered the fact I do not miss anything. And therefore ātmani ēva ātmana tuṣṭaḥ. It was said in the 2nd chapter, the same idea is conveyed here, santuṣṭaḥ; it is not English samtūṣṭaḥ. It is Sānskrīt samyak tuṣṭaḥ. I do not miss anything in life.

If God suddenly appears in life in front of me and ask what do you miss in life; so that I can give that and you can die peacefully/ In our head hundreds of things come; there are so many things; I do not have a son; I do not have a daughter; I do not have a grandchild; I do not have this; And then comes I do not have a good body; then I do not have a good hair; I do not have a good nose; I do not have hair at all; later; so many things are there; physical lack, emotional lack; intellectual lack.

Lack is three fold, śarīrika-apūrṇatvam; not being satisfied physically; in terms of height or weight or complexion or the length of the nose that is why plastic surgeons are thriving; so plastic surgeons thrive because of this lack alone.

Then there is emotional lack; my son does not talk to me every day from Washington DC; so daily they want to phone; what to talk? So therefore, that is emotional talk, nobody talks to me; nobody asks me how are you; I have got cold for the last three days; and I want people to enquire.

And then comes intellectual lack.

There are many basic questions for which I do not have question; the fundamental question being why at all Bhagavān created this world? He could have kept quiet; Could he not kept quiet uttering sivanē; why did He create the world? If He is omniscient and omnipotent; why could He could have created the world in a better way at least without the mosquitoes? I do not whether there are too many mosquitoes here. So thus santuṣṭaḥ means physically, emotionally, intellectually, I do not lack anything; and when not during morning, night, Sunday or Monday; satataṁ santuṣṭaḥ; I am ever free from all lack or want; and that does not mean this person should not be active in the world. Such a contended jñāni can also be active but the activity is not born out of incompleteness. When the activity is born out of incompleteness; it is called a struggle; life becomes a drag; life becomes a burden; life becomes a struggle; What is the definition of struggle? Any activity you do; which is backed by a sense of incompleteness. Whereas in the case of a jñāni; not that he sits in a cave; he is also active like other people; as Kṛṣṇa said in third chapter,

सक्ताः कर्मण्यविद्वांसो यथा कुर्वन्ति भारत |
कुर्याद्विद्वांस्तथासक्तश्चिकीर्षुर्लोकसंग्रहम् || ३-२५ ||

[saktāḥ karmaṇyavidvāṁsō yathā kurvanti bhārata |
kuryādvidvāṁstathā'saktaścikīrṣurlōkasaṅgraham || 3.25 ||](#)

He is involved in activities; perhaps he is more busy than a saṁsāri; but the difference is the activities do not come from a wanting mind; an incomplete mind. Therefore the activities are not at all a struggle; activities are called the leela; jñāni's activities are called leela; ajñāni's activities are called struggle. And therefore satataṁ santuṣṭaḥ.

And yōgi; Yōgi I told you in the last class is a jñāni, the one who has accomplished the knowledge which is the ultimate yōga; literally the word yōga means that which combines two things; the jīvātma, the seeker, and paramātma, the sought, these two are brought together by whatever means that means is called yōgaḥ. That is why karma-yōga is called yōgaḥ; because that also helps upāsana yōga is called yōgaḥ; that also helps; but the yōga which really brings jīvātma and paramātma together is the knowledge that we need not bring them together; the knowledge that we need not bring them together; because we have never been away.

Therefore jñānam is the yōga in its primary sense; karma and upāsanas are called yōga; in the secondary sense; yōgartha tatva yōga yōgaḥ iti lakṣaṇaya uchyatē. He is yōgi. Up to this we saw in the last class.

Now the next word: yatātma; ātma in this context means body, mind sense organs complex; stūla, sūkṣma, śarīra-dvayam; Otherwise the technical word used is kārya kāraṇa saṅgathaḥ; consisting of the body; the sense organs and the antaḥkaraṇam, the mind. All these three put together is called ātma in this context; Not the satcidānanda-ātma; body mind complex is called ātma here; and yataḥ means regulated; well managed; well-kept under control; mastered. Therefore yatātma means that person who has learned to manage or handle his own mind body sense complex. That means he knows how to use them as his own instruments; he is not enslaved by the jñānēndriyas or karmēndriyas; he is the master. To use the Tatva Bōdha language; śamādhi ṣatka sampathi; self-discipline is indicated by yatātmatvam.

And for this self-discipline alone, we have got a special science called the aṣṭāṅga -yōga of Pathanjali; it is a beautifully well-defined system; which takes care of our character through yama and niyama. I have talked about this in my introduction to the sixth chapter; yama, niyama takes care of my character integration; āsana takes care of my physical integration; prāṇāyāma takes care of my energy integration; prathyahāra takes care of my sense organs integration; dhāraṇa dhyāna samādhi takes care of my mental integration. Thus discipline and integration; at all the levels is accomplished by aṣṭāṅga -yōga; and through that; this person has become yatātma; an integrated person.

And in fact, this self-integration is required before coming to vēdānta itself. And that is why it is one of the sādhana-catuṣṭaya-sampathi; I do not know whether you remember this word; sādhana-catuṣṭaya-sampathi; that means become coming to vēdānta; one requires integration; during the study of vēdānta one requires integration for reception; if you have to listen to one hour, without distraction; it is a very very great accomplishment. I do not whether you are capable or not, only you know; my thing is only assumption that one hour you are listening without distraction. So sṛāvanam requires integration; and ultimately after completing the sṛāvanam; the assimilation or nidhidhyāsanam; also requires integration. And therefore self-discipline is required lifelong. And a man or women without self-discipline cannot accomplish anything. Even reading a simple article in a magazine; will be difficult because 5 lines I read; then I require a cup of coffee. So much concentration I have done; then go round; then I read another 10 lines and watch a channel; and then I read another 10 lines; it is like that; the attention span is very very limited; therefore this person is yatātma, before as well as later.

And because of this self-disciple only, dṛḍhaniścayaḥ; he has been able to attain self-knowledge; dṛḍhaniścayaḥ means sthira prajñāḥ; dṛḍa means sthira, niścayaḥ means prajñā; dṛḍa-niścayaḥ means sthira prajñāḥ; dṛḍa-niścayaḥ yasya saḥ; bahuvr̥hi; that means the one who has got knowledge with conviction. And that is why we have got two processes of vēdāntic study; the first process is you listen to the entire vēdāntic-teaching systematically for some time without raising any question; like the cow eating the grass wandering all over; which is called sṛāvanam. Even if you get some doubts in the middle; you do not ask those doubts, you keep them aside; And generally you find as even you listen more and more; the doubts gets cleared; Generally people ask: Swamiji do you have any telepathy; because I came today with a doubt, you exactly dealt with that; I tell you, I do not have any pathy. This is how it is. This is how it works; therefore for a length of time; you do sṛāvanam, giving the benefit of the doubt to the teacher and the teaching; whatever doubts you get, you keep it aside.

And once you complete the comprehensive listening generally much doubts do not remain. But if they are there; you start the second process called mananam; when you eliminate your doubt; and only when the doubts are removed; which are problems at the intellectual level; because fortunately or unfortunately, we have an intellect. And the job of the intellect is always to raise questions.

And Swami Chinmayānanda nicely says; longer the beard, greater the doubt; so out of respect for the guru you may nod your head; but if the intellect is not convinced; it will not swallow. Therefore until I am convinced, I have to raise questions and answer and when I do śṛavanam and mananam; I will get conviction, which is called dṛḍha niścayaḥ. From this it is very clear that the greatest bhaktha must have clear vēdāntic knowledge. How do you know? Kṛṣṇa himself tells it very clearly; without vēdāntic knowledge, you will be a bhaktha; but there will always be a distance between the Lord and the bhaktha; Therefore bhakthi can reach its culmination only when the vēdāntic study is done and assimilated; therefore dṛḍha niścayaḥ.

And then the next characteristic of this parā-bhaktha is mayyarpita-manōbuddhi. I have told before; our appreciation of the Lord takes place at three levels; initially God is ēka rūpa Īśvaraḥ as a person who is the creator of the world; and therefore I place him in Vaikunṭa; Kailāsa, heaven or some place; called Iṣṭa-dēvathā-Īśvaraḥ. Then there is further elevation; I learned to look upon God as not only the creator; but Lord is one who is the very cause which has manifested in the form of universe and therefore viśva-rūpa Īśvaraḥ is the next level; and the final is the arūpa-Īśvaraḥ; I had said. That is the Lord does not become the world; the Lord appears as the world.

And the most important point that you should note here is the higher levels of bhakthi do not displace or destroy the lower levels of bhakthi; if the higher levels of bhakthi displaces or destroys the lower levels, that means he has not understood Vēdānta properly. So therefore a jñāni who appreciates the formless God, he can still continue to have devotion to the formed Lord also; And that is why you can have a Śankarācārya; who talks about Nirguṇam Brahma in his upaniṣad and brahmasūtra bhāṣyam: yat taddrēśyamgrāhyamagōtramavarṇamacakṣuḥ;.. aśabdham, asparśam, arūpam avyayam; he can brilliantly deal with the formless; and then he can also write splendid poetical slōkās on Lord Śiva; on Dēvi; on Sarasvati or on Subramaṇya; that means what advaitam cannot destroy dvaita-bhakthi. And in fact one ācārya says; in fact an advaitin can enjoy dvaita-bhakthi more than others.

बोदे अद्वैते मनिषयाः "।
बोद्धात् उर्द्धम् तु तत् ज्ञेयम्;
अद्वैतात् अपि सुन्दरम् ॥

dvaitam mōhaya bōdhat prāk;
bōdē advaitē maniṣayāḥ ||
bōddāt urdvam tu tat jñēyam;
advaitāt apī sundaram ||

An advaitain never loses his Iṣṭa-dēvathā-bhakthi and therefore he has got now two channels; or even three channels; ēka-rūpa-channel; anēka-rūpa-channel; arūpa-channel. So when he is in a temple or in front of the deity; ēka-rūpa-channel he enjoys; and when he travels around in Badrinath, Kēdarnath, Himalayas, Ganges, wonderful flowers all of them, that also he enjoys; because nature for him is viśvarūpa Īśvaraḥ; and then he close his eyes and enjoy aham brahmāsmi; the arūpa.

So when he has got emotional needs; then personal God is ideal; when there is emotional need; personal relationship is always ideal; because when we have emotional problems; you always would like to pour out in front of someone. That is what they say; in the olden days; when there was a joint-family system; the children more psychologically healthy; because whenever they had some problem; there was someone or the other and in psychological language, they say, an empty lap was always there. You know what is an empty lap; somebody lap was there always; so that we can go; lie over the lap and cry; and does not matter; or grandmother says; grandfather says; chittappa says; periyappa says; somebody or the other. Now the family is shrinking; therefore empty laps are becoming empty. Because it is a nuclear family; that is why there are explosions. Nuclear means what happens? Explosion; Therefore father is busy; mother is also working busy. So when the child goes to the school, I had a quarrel with a friend; and he beat me, the mother is tired and therefore she also gives one and asks why did you quarrel with that child. As such he had got beating; now two more from the mother also. Therefore the other person need not do anything; we require only an intelligent listener to our problem and who will nod the head at the appropriate time; otherwise you do not know whether it is out of sleep or out of understanding; so personal relationship; psychologically is supposed to be very important and Iṣṭa dēvathā becomes as a backup relationship; you can have relationship at home; but if all of them fail; you can always cry in front of Rāma; Tyagarāja did; Mīra did; and all bhakthas did; and advaitins can also do that.

Śankarācārya does that in Śivānanda-lahari; he is pouring out as an individual person; and that is called the surrender of the mind at the feet of the Lord; Iṣṭa-dēvathā-bhakthi; but there are times when our emotional personality lies low; but it is the intellectual personality that is dominant and therefore it begins to ask rational questions about God. Then personal God often does not satisfy or we have questions why God created world with lot of deficiencies. So many ticklish problems are there; so when intellect is dominant; then we have to know the real nature of God. God as the absolute reality; which does not have any form; but which is the substratum of all the forms.

Therefore when the intellect is dominant; we have got nirguṇam-brahma. And when the mind; emotional personality is dominant; we have got saguṇa-Īśvara. Thus keep shifting between saguṇa and nirguṇa; Śankarācārya says that

[nakātmakam saguṇam nirguṇam advitīyam |
vāraṇasi purapathim bhaja viśvanātham ||](#)

Almost in all slōkās Śankarācārya will talk about saguṇa-nirguṇa advitīyam. Therefore use both of them and emotional level Iṣṭa-dēvathā will be useful at intellectual level; God as Brahman.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa says mayyarpita-manōbuddhiḥ; the one whose emotional personality and the one whose rational-intellect, questioning-intellect; both of them are at the feet of the Lord. And Iṣṭa dēvathā bhakthi; devotion towards personal God is always developed through purāṇās alone; for that only they have this sṛavanam, kīrthanam viṣṇō; smaraṇam pāda sēvanam; arcanam vandanam dāsyam; sakyam ātma nivēdanam. Gods are presented and the avathāra and their leela and the more you read, that particular aspect of the Lord becomes more and more solid, concrete for you. As I had often Tyāgaraja, the idol is not a piece of inert matter; and that is why he was shattered when he lost that; we can argue rationally. After all we can make another one and give donation. It not so; and how can one develop; only through that Bhagavad-Gīta sṛavanam it is called.

And therefore mayyarpita-manōbuddhiḥ yaḥ mat-bhakthaḥ and such a devotee who has the appreciation of ēka-rūpa and anēka-rūpa and arūpa-Īśvaraḥ, that person is dearest to me. In fact, dearest is not the word, he is Mē; jñāni tu; always the remember the seventh chapter; jñāni tu ātmaiva mē matam; நான் தான் அவன்; அவன் தான் நான். nāṇ tāṇ avan; avan tāṇ nāṇ.

सः saḥ He यस्मात् yasmāt by whom, लोकः न उद्विजते lōkaḥ na udvijatē the world is not disturbed, यः च yaḥ ca who न उद्विजते na udvijate is not disturbed, लोकात् lōkāṭ by the world, च यः ca yaḥ and who, मुक्तः muktaḥ is free from, हर्षामर्षभयोद्वेगैः

harṣāmarṣabhayōdvēgaiḥ elation, envy, fear and anxiety, प्रियः मे priyaḥ me is dear to Me.

15. He by whom the world is not disturbed, who is not disturbed by the world, and who is free from elation, envy, fear, and anxiety is dear to Me.

There are two types of people. One type of person is, he who has got a rock like heart; stone like heart; and because his heart is like a rock; whatever experience he gets; he is not affected at all; because his heart is like a stone. Nothing affects him. In fact it is wonderful to have such a firm rock like heart; In fact we pray to the Lord; to get such a heart.

So during upanayanam; the brahmacāri is asked to stand on a rock; அம்மி மிதிக்கல் ammi mitikkal; then standing on the rock, he prays; atiṣṭēmam asmānam asmēvatvam stīrō bhavaḥ. So the ācārya blesses the student; your heart must be strong enough to withstand the ups and downs; the vicissitudes of life; because you are becoming a responsible citizen; you are going to be a student; then you are come out; you are going to varieties of people; therefore you should have really well immunised heart.

And similarly the girl has to do the same thing at the time of her wedding; there also the same prayer is addressed; only thing the gender is changed; atiṣṭēmam asmānam asmēvatvam sthīrā bhavaḥ. There stīrō; here sthīrā; because the girl is also entering the new family; and there is the mother-in-law. OK; I am not against mother-in-law and there is the sister-in-law or there is brother-in-law; father-in-law; unknown place and unknown people and unless you have rock like heart; the marriage won't last for long.

So it is very good to have a rock like heart; and those people enjoy such a heart; and they have the advantage not hurt by any situation. But the problem is they are not hurt by others; but since they have a rock like heart; they keep on hurting every other person; because rock. So therefore such people they are not hurt; but they keep hurting every other sensitive person; they are inconsiderate; they are not very careful of their language; because they are not affected; and therefore they think that others are also buffalo skinned like them. This is one type of people who are not hurt but who keeps hurting others.

Now we have got a second variety of people; they have got a very very very tender rose like heart; therefore they are extremely sensitive people; and therefore they are very considerate; therefore they can sense others' emotions; others' pain; they have got empathy And therefore, they are always careful with regard to handling others; they never hurt other people; the sensitive people do not hurt others; because they are sensitive; they can sense the difficulties of others. But what is the problem? Since I am too sensitive; and since I am like a rose flower; I get very very easily hurt by others; any word; any casual thing happens; this person does not sleep for days;

And that person is not meaning anything; he only asked when did you come; or why did you come; and this fellow gives primary commentary; secondary commentary; Perhaps he does not want me to come to the house; that is why he is asking like this; that he is so sensitive and most of the time he is hurt. Like in science we have got sensitive balance; science students will know; which is kept within a glass case because the pointer of the balance is easily disturbed even a fine dirt or a light breeze; that is why they have kept in glass case; and even a part of hair falls on one of the balance, the pointer will not come to the center or rest. Therefore the definition of sensitive balance is that whose pointer never comes to rest.

Similarly a sensitive mind; it has to be kept in glass case; that means no transaction should take place; but how is possible; I am in the wide and wild world. And everybody talks in his own language; being sensitive, I do not hurt others; but I am hurt most of the time. Then what to do? How to handle the situation? Either way I am in trouble; if I am gross; I hurt others; if I am sensitive; I am all the time hurt, Then who is jñāni? Jñāni Kṛṣṇa tells: he is like a flower when he handles others; and he is like a rock, when he receives experiences from the world. So as a kartā, he is like a flower; as a bhōktā, he is like. Kartā means what; I contribute to the world; so when I work in the world; I am sensitive; but at the same time, the sensitivity must be supported by wisdom and maturity. Because the more sensitive you become; the more gross you will see others. Like the musician; you know; a very very advanced musician; he will be adjusting the sṛuti of the tāmra, for 45 minutes; kacheri is only 1 hour. But he takes 45 minutes; for us all sṛuti looks the same; he just adjusts and one string he moves little; again he hears, one string down; he is so sensitive that the minutest apasṛuti he can sense.

And therefore the greater the sensitivity, the more you are aware of insensitivity around; and therefore I should learn to accommodate the immaturity of others; if I have chosen to become sensitive. Like if I have a sensitive body; I have to protect it very well; I should not drink any water; Indian people health is so rough that you drink any water; nothing will happen; but these people live abroad; so crystal clear water and they come to India. Next day, they never come out of bathroom; why; if you are so sensitive; you should also have the protection; Therefore sensitivity should be supported by maturity; maturity means understanding that different people have different levels of maturity and sensitivity.

So therefore, yasmāt lōkaḥ na udvijate. So jñāni is one who does not disturb the world. So he is so sensitive to the conditions of the people that he does not hurt others deliberately; unknowingly people may get hurt; that is a different thing; So he is so sensitive others' feeling; a considerate person; in simple language; ahimsaka; he does not do any himsa to others. So lōkaḥ means the people of the world; na udvijate; are not disturbed; yasmāt means because of this jñāni; the world is not disturbed because of the jñāni, because he is always sensitive and aware of his surroundings.

And at the same time, he is so tender like flower; when it comes to receiving the experiences; people talking nonsense insulting, criticising; when such situation comes, he makes his heart; hard like the Rock of Gibraltar; they say; any amount of waves lashing is not hurt; lōkaḥ; because of the various experiences that he receives; na udvijatē; he does not get disturbed; that is why there is a beautiful slōkā on the glory of a jñāni.

वज्रात् अपि कटोराणी, मृदूनि कुसुमदपि ।
लोकोथराणाम् चेतांसि, कोणु विज्ञातुम् अर्हसि ॥

vajrāt api katorāṇī, mṛdūni kusumadapi |
lōkōtharāṇām cētāṁsi, kōṇu vijñātum arhasi ||

Jñāni's heart is harder than even a diamond; When it comes to receiving experiences, he is so firm; he is not disturbed; and at the same time, mṛdūni kusumādapi; he is more tender than even a flower when he is handling; But the problem is: many people in the world are the other way round; when they handle others' they are katōrāṇī; when they receive experiences, mṛdūni; that is greater problem; so yasmānō he does not hurt; in simple English, he does not; he is not hurt. This is the glory of jñāni.

And since he does not hurt; he does not have guilt also in life; only when we hurt others, we develop guilt; therefore jñāni is free from both hurt and the guilt which are too powerful mind disturbing emotions; hurt and guilt; jñāni is free from both.

Then harṣā-amarṣa-bhaya-udvēgaiḥ muktaḥ; muktaḥ means free; liberated; released. So jñāni is muktaḥ; so that word is common; jīvan-muktaḥ; generally doubt whenever we say a jñāni is a liberated person free person, the question comes free from what? Does it mean free from family that he becomes a sanyāsi; that he is free from regular dress; that he has got kāṣaya-vasthram; what do mean by free? Free means free from what the question comes. Kṛṣṇa gives the definition; we are not talking of freedom from external things; that is not the primary thing; internal freedom alone we are talking; vēdānta is bothered about your inner freedom; inner freedom from what; four items are enumerated here; harṣa, amarṣa, bhaya, udvēgaḥ. These are the four terrible things which can make the mind a bāram, a burden for me; and what are those?

the first one is harṣaḥ; harṣaḥ means excitement; over excitement; elation; What is difference between excitement and over excitement? Over excitement is that type of happiness; in which I lose my discriminative power. Any emotion which clouds the discriminative power is inimical to us; because ultimately the greatest wealth Bhagavān has given to us is vivēka śakthi; discriminative power. Come what I should never allow emotions to rob my discriminative power. So even excitement or happiness, if it goes beyond limits and I lose myself and I lose my discriminative power; then it is a danger. What is the danger? When I lose my discriminative power; I forget the fact that the greatest excitement is also temporary; that is the fact; and if I forget the fact that it is temporary; I am not required to lose it; I expect that to be permanently with me; which is a wrong expectation. And wrong expectation is born out of what? Indiscrimination; And wrong expectation will always create shock in life because I expect things to be permanent; and that goes away; I am shattered.

And therefore harṣaḥ is also not good; even physically, even from the standpoint of health angle, elation or excitement is not good; you would have heard of people who died of heart attack by hearing good news; so one person contested election regularly and got defeated; and after several times defeat; 27th time or 28th time; he was enjoying that; and then one time, that I am not going to win; some mistake perhaps, he won; and he was so happy; that he died of heart attack; and in cricket watchers also sometimes, die out of over excitement caused by not defeat; caused by victory; therefore, over excitement is not even good for heart; and therefore what to talk of spirituality; therefore harṣaḥ.

Then the next problem is amarṣa; amarṣa means intolerance; restlessness; impatient; etc. And that is another problem that we face; the more dynamic and perfect a person is; the more disturbed that person is; because he is used to getting things done in a day and half a day; he is dynamic; immediately he goes there; makes a phone call; does this. So he has such a way of doing things; that anybody is little slow; he cannot stand; so you will find dynamic people are generally irritable; and perfectionist also; perfectionism is very good; but we should remember, perfectionism is very rare.

Therefore when I become a perfectionist, I want the pen to be in its place, and also how it should be; downside up or upside down; and then generally they get the children who are just the opposite; you have to keep it properly. Perfectionism is very good; but if I do not have patience and accommodation; it can be really a problem because, generally I am irritable; and if anybody is slow in doing things; at home the wife, he asks for a cup of coffee; and she says; coming; moment he says coffee; she should be in front with the coffee with the right temperature. Otherwise things will fly; many people they are very good; achievers; but very very irritable. So therefore amarṣa; perfectionism should go with tolerance; patience; because everybody has to grow in his own or her own pace; you cannot make everyone perfect overnight; that does not we should be lose everything; he need not be extreme.

Therefore amarṣa means irritability; and that you can generally see in traffic signals; in fact many people do not believe in signals and they think that it is a road decoration; but there are some people who still follow; but what do they do? As even the time goes inch inch; they come almost in the middle of the road; and if there are people behind, the moment green signal comes; honk honk; honk; you can see even today you watch; the moment red turns green; there will be one driver who will immediately horn as though we are enjoying the stay there; we are going to start; when there are so many cars; each car has to start; cumulatively it will take half a minute; half a minute; the IT people you know; in half a minute, he can achieve so much, so he is intolerant; Therefore inner leisure is called freedom from amarṣaḥ; and constantly looking at the watch also. That is I why stop the class at 7 o clock; OK; very time conscious; one minute excess, they are intolerant; I do not want to disturb those people and anyway, I will take 1-2 minutes and stop; I am aware of the time.

BBBBB

So the next one is: bhayam; so bhayam is fear; insecurity; this is one. Someone is horning or what? So bhayam means insecurity; fear which is innate in everyone; right from the womb we have got the sense of insecurity; that is why the child clings to the mother all the time; and if the mother is not there. I do not know whether you have watched the interesting thing, that child will keep the bit of mother's sari and walks around; that sari represents mother.

And this continues even now, because unfortunately, from physical plane, we are vulnerable. It is a truth; that physically we are never hundred percent secure; our physical body is fragile; that any situation can affect our body; little bit weather changes cough starts; or this or that; and above all; kālaḥ is there. Therefore we should remember physically we are ever insecure; that is a fact; even if there is a great medical advancement; they can never make the physical body immortal; there were ayurvēdic vaidyās who talked about kāya-kalpam; kāya-kalpam is system by which you make your body immortal; and the authors of those works have died! Very clear.

Hari Om

162 Chapter 12, Verses 15-16

After talking about the five stages bhakthi yōga, now Lord Kṛṣṇa is talking about a person who has successfully gone through all the stages of bhakthi-yōga; and therefore he is the highest bhaktha whom we call parā-bhakthaḥ, or advaita-bhaktha or abhēda-bhakthaḥ or jñāni bhakthaḥ. A bhaktha in the highest level is necessarily a jñāni; and the jñānam or knowledge that he enjoys is that the Lord in his original nature is not away from me; and in fact, is not different from me in my original nature. And because of this wisdom; and this advaita-bhakthi; this person enjoys a particular benefit or phalam; which the scriptures call jīvan-mukthiḥ or mōkṣaḥ.

And first thing we have to note here is that this benefit is something promised after death. If it is promised after death, we will never whether we will get or not; there is no way of verification at all; but here the benefit promised are here and now; and all benefits enjoyed by this jīvan muktha are the benefit at the mental level. We are not talking about certain mystical benefits, or certain types of miraculous powers etc. In fact Kṛṣṇa does not mention about siddhi or miraculous powers. Jīvan mukthi is enjoying a mind which is free from all the regular emotional disturbances.

And what are the regular emotional disturbances which everyone goes through; which we put together called saṁsāra? They are nothing but saṁsāra; basic self-inadequacy. Not being happy with the present as I am; leading to krōdhaḥ; leading to lōbhaḥ; leading to mōhaḥ; leading to madaḥ, mātsaryaḥ. These are all the permanent disturbances which afflict us all during the waking hours. And therefore Kṛṣṇa defines mōkṣa as freedom from these fundamental mental problems; fundamental problems. And that what is enumerating in the fifteenth verse which we were seeing in the last class.

Kṛṣṇa mentioned four of the fundamental and chronic mental disturbances that we suffer from: they are harṣā, amarṣa, bhaya and udvēgaiḥ.

This constant fluctuating emotion; at one time, I am very hyped; I am extremely elated harṣāḥ and at another time, I am at the bottom of the world; amarṣaḥ; like a cricket match. So one wicket they take on the top and the other person hits a sixer on the bottom and again hopes are raised and again it comes down; this up-swinging mood all the time; and if they win, the series is going to be dropped; if we win, I am really happy that so many students came to the class. And I won't be surprised if a late comer is asked; what is the latest score. So therefore this swinging up and down constantly, and if this happens to according to my will and plan, it is an enjoyable game. But all these are happening, not with my control; I have to helplessly go through such situation, is called saṁsāra.

Therefore harṣā we talked about, next one is amarṣaḥ; which I talked about; amarṣa is intolerance; intolerance at several levels and at the level of game. Intolerance is I cannot accept the success of the opposite party. If I cannot decently fail; decently succeeding is easy; but decency in failure is the most difficult thing; and that is called amarṣa; envy, I cannot accept the utkarṣa or better situation of other people, especially if that person is my rival; if Pakistan and Australia plays cricket, I want Australia to win; You know why; it should be like that; parā-utkarṣam dṛṣṭva, jāyamānaḥ santhāpaḥ amarṣa. When another person is thriving and I am not able to reach his level in that field, I cannot stand it. The very topic disturbs my mind; in fact I look for something to criticise; if somebody comes and tells that he is so great; then I add; do you know his private life: So I always find something to put that person down. So this tendency; this jealousy; this envy is also called amarṣaḥ; and there is no remedy for jealousy; perhaps for all other, what you call weakness we might have a remedy, for jealousy, it is very very difficult to find a remedy; and that is why in all fields, even in spiritual field it can happen; I have got hundred devotees but the other one has got hundred and ten; problem.

So jealousy is a problem at all levels; to be free from that and to admire another person's superiority, and that too in my field; a doctor can admire the superiority of a cricketer; no problem; superiority of a musician; no problem; but in the same field; when somebody is superior, it is very very difficult to accept; that is why they tell; that doctors' do not listen; doctors do not misunderstand; doctor joke they say; a patient came; said I have got this problem; I went to that particular doctor first; so this person considers the other doctor an enemy; he is a foolish doctor; what advice did he give you? He asked me to come to you; what? What foolish advice he gave you? He asked me to come to you; like that a musician cannot appreciate another musician. A Swami sometimes cannot accept another Swami; it is a very big problem. You know what is mōkṣa; freedom from this; what a wonderful state of mind; you have got a good word about everyone; somebody asked what about that Swami; everybody has got some wonderful character; he is doing that wonderful job; one Swami may be serving the society another Swami may be teaching; another Swami may be using miracles for good purposes also. So therefore, the capacity to admire and have a good word for everyone is a wonderful character; which a jñāni enjoys.

निज हृदि विकसन्तम् सन्ति सन्तः नियन्तः ॥

[para guṇa paramāṇūn parvatikṛtya nityam
nija hṛdi vikasantam santi santah niyanthah ||](#)

Bhṛthari says: With a magnifying glass, a noble person looks at with a minutest good quality of others and their minus point, he sees with a concave lens. We also have both these lenses; but the problem is where we use what; that is the problem; whenever good virtues are there; concave lens we use; and minus minutest drawback, magnified. That is called saṁsāra; and therefore harṣād mukthaḥ; amarṣād mukthaḥ; free from envy.

And next one is bhayād mukthaḥ; so that word mukthaḥ must be added to each one. So the next problem is what; bhayam; fundamental insecurity; innate fear; which starts from our babyhood itself; and which continues until the last moment; constant nagging fear; and Bhṛthari in one of his ṣatakams (Vairāgya ṣatakam) talks about fear and says: The fear is because we hold on to wrong things and most of the things we hold on to causes one form of fear or the other. And he gives a list of things which we generally hold on to; and how they all cause fear:

भोगे रोगभयं कुले च्युतिभयं वित्ते नृपालाद्भयं
माने दैन्यभयं बले रिपुभयं रूपे जराया भयम् ।
शास्त्रे वादिभयं गुणे खलभयं काये कृतान्ताद्भयं
सर्वं वस्तु भयान्वितं भुवि नृणां वैराग्यामेवाभयम् ॥ ३१ ॥

bhōgē rōgabhayam kulē cyutibhayam vittē nrpālādbhayam mānē dainyabhayam balē ripubhayam rūpē jarāyā bhayam | śāstrē vādibhayam guṇē khalabhayam kāyē kṛtāntādbhayam sarvaṁ vastu bhayānvitam bhuvī nrṇām vairāgyāmēvābhayam || 31 ||

You can understand most of the words; bhōgē-rōgabhayam. If you have a gala time, enjoying all sense pleasures; then it leads to what; this will create pressure, that will create sugar; that will cause decay to the teeth; that will cause this; this will cause that; etc. In fact all the items you like are generally not good for health. And only thing good for health, they will say: pavakkai bitter or puzhanikkai, which does not have any taste; all those things they will say wonderful; and whatever we like they say not good for health. So bhōgē rōgabhayam; it is nice to sit in front of TV and watch movie after movie all the time; but even though one may enjoy that; it creates varieties of problem; bhayam.

Kulē cyutibhayam; So if I am very very proud of my family lineage; kula gōthra etc. that my father is ganapādi; my grandfather is a jata vallabha; my great grandfather is an agniḥōtri; you belong to such a great family. So I am so much proud of the family; that there is a constant fear that the children must protect the prestige of the family; what will they do; I am afraid; when we were growing up, we were under the control of the parents; but now they are all free without control அழிசிக்விட்ட மாடுமாதிரிதான். Now we do not know what they will do tomorrow in the name of freedom; in the name of culture; whom they are going to marry; who is going to come; how they are going to leave the life; whether they will keep the sacred thread at all; all those things I am worried; and if they get married; what type of family I will get related to; I want to be proud of my sambhandis also. And in the Indian society all these matters, to maintain the prestige; often the choice of the bride or bridegroom is more for the maintenance of the prestige; than other things,

What will the society think? Dayānanda Swami says: our biggest problem is what will the others say: and therefore constant fear is there. And if the children do something; I want to cover it up and unfortunately, this news will spread farther than faster than, fastest Concorde airplane. Whatever you do good, that will not go; but these things somehow will spread; then I do not want to attend public functions; I cannot show my face outside. should I survive at all; all these things; kulē cyutibhayaṁ; cyuti means what; falling from grace or prestige. Vittē nrpālādbhayaṁ; when I have plenty of money, tax bhayaṁ; nrpāla means king or government. And therefore I have to find out various methods of getting out of that problem. And therefore I do this; and I do that. And I put in some financial company; who promises 35% and then I do not get even 0%; all gone; money gone; vittē nrpālādbhayaṁ.

Mānē dainyabhayaṁ. If I become famous, it is really an enjoyable thing; getting fame is enjoyable; but the thing is the more honored I am; the more I am worried about my dishonour; as an ordinary person I can come and sit in any crowd. Anywhere no problem, but once I have become a VIP of some status; I cannot go anywhere I like; I should be properly welcomed; properly honored; taken to the stage; offered a seat etc. Will they give a proper asana for me? If that is not there; what will happen to my honour; therefore more famous I become, more I have fear about dishonour; and that is why people also can blackmail; I will stories about you. So therefore do this; otherwise I will do this blackmail also. Therefore, mānē dainyabhayaṁ; dainya means apamānam. As Arjuna says: sambhāvitasya cākīrtirmaraṇādatiricyatē. A person who has been honored, losing that honour is worse than even death; Therefore mānam is good or bad; mānam is good; but apamānam; bhayaṁ it brings in.

So mānē dainyabhayaṁ balē ripubhayaṁ; if I am a king with a big army; I am all the time afraid of the neighboring kingdom; which may attack. Therefore constantly there is a fear of a rival king; even if we have bhalam as power and position in life; then also we have got fear of rivals. If there is a possibility of elevation in my power and position, there is always somebody who does not like that. In every company there will be there; they will tell some stories to the boss; you have to give me the promotion.

And then what happens? The rival, the competitor, whether he gets promotion or not; he does not want me to promoted; then I lost. Therefore fear of competition and rivalry is natural if you go to any field of power and position. That is why they call it power politics; where power comes; politics comes, rivalry comes. Therefore that bhayaṁ is natural. So m̄nē dainyabhayaṁ; bhale ripu bhayam; ripuḥ means rivals; competitor, enemy.

Then rūpē jarāyā bhayam; so if I love my body; and its beauty (doubtful whether it is); I love my body, its figure, its height, its weight, its complexion and also the black hair; So all I have fallen in love; because nowadays your look matters. There are beauty parlours previously females, now for males also. So hundreds and thousands of rupees are spent; just to give facials; etc. Swamiji, how do you know, do not ask! Therefore all those things; how to cover up wrinkles; somebody defined powder as that which will not allow the other people read between lines! Reading between lines; means your age. So therefore your age should not be shown and so many things are coming; it is a very big industry.

And for all those people who are attached to the body; the greatest enemy is jarā; jarā means what: old age. How long you can cheat; it is impossible. Therefore vyagrīva tiṣṭati jarā paritharjayanti; the old age is waiting to deform the body; so rūpē jarāyā bhayam.

Then what about śāstra; various sciences fields of various sciences either in our scriptural field or even in scientific field; śāstrē vādibhayaṁ; when I am committed to various sciences and the theories; I am afraid of the other people in the field, who have got rivals theory; therefore vādibhayaṁ; so I am afraid of vādis; challengers; Any theory I hold there is a challenger; you read the newspaper, somebody comes and tells; coconut oil is bad; and another does research and says; generally must be Kerala, I think, coconut oil is good; coffee is bad; Somebody comes and tell coffee is good; another person says liquor is bad; somebody says little bit is good for heart. So any theory you have, there is somebody to challenge that theory. Therefore śāstrē vādibhayaṁ; fear of challengers;

Guṇē khalabhayaṁ; if I am a dhārmic person; trying to follow some values some religion some spirituality; unfortunately maturity of people, others; they are not interested in that; and therefore they begin to put me down; they laugh at me; they fear; our children face this problem; they want to be traditional; vibūthi kumkum, etc. but there are other friends who do not admire that. What is this you are a saint or something what? Tell children tell like that; and then our child; therefore just before going to school, he removes that; because the other people tease; peer pressure. The more you try to follow this path; there are other people to distract; the other people to criticise; the other people to put you down; and if I have go forward in spite of this obstacle, it is an uphill task. Therefore guṇē khalabhayaṁ; For a dharmic person; the adharmic people are always there to do parihāsa; so guṇē khalabhayaṁ.

And kāyē kṛtāntādbhayaṁ. If I am attached to the physical body; previously we talked about attached to the shape and beauty of the body; then the fear is of old age but if I am attached to the body itself. Then the fear is from whom; kāyē kṛtāntādbhayaṁ. Kṛtāntā means what? Yamadharmā rājaḥ who comes without advance notice; should he not come with a letter; he does not give any notice; therefore I do not know when he will come.

Therefore Bhṛthari says that anything you hold on to in the perishable creation; you had it; and therefore what is the only source of fearlessness; vairāgyāmēvābhayaṁ; vairāgyam, learn to depend on yourselves. Self-dependence; standing on your own foot; strengthening your own personality; so that you need not throw the world away; but you handle them as long as they are available; enjoy them as long as they are available; but you do not lean upon them. Use everything but who does not lean on anything; therefore there is no fear at all.

I have given you the example; the 2nd chapter; two people using a stick; one person goes for an early morning walk; he also uses a stick; he does not call it a stick; a baton; early morning usage. I do not know whether you have seen that; stylishly like an Inspector carries; stylish walks; he holds that but he does not lean upon that. Therefore even if the stick falls down; nothing happens to him; he can take and walk; but imagine there is another person who holds the stick and heavily leans upon the stick. When the stick falls; this person also falls. So one holds; another leans. Similarly, psychologically, you lean on anything; fear is inevitable; you hold on any number of things; no problem at all. So only ask the question am I holding; am I leaning; if I am leaning; bhayaṁ is evitable; jñāni does not lean. So harṣa; amarṣa, bhaya; bhaya means fear.

And the next one is udvēgaḥ; udvēgaḥ means mental disturbance; sorrow, anxiety; caused by either amarṣa; or bhayaṁ etc. all these negative emotions cause sorrow; mental disturbance; one who is free from the mental disturbances caused by all these things. Such a person is parā-bhaktaḥ; advaita-bhaktaḥ.

And how did this jñāni achieve that. Kṛṣṇa does not mention that here; but it is a very very gradual process; as I have said the seventh chapter, the travel is gradually from world dependence to God dependence to self-dependence. First learn to switch the dependence from the world to God; which is a better and safer dependence, because all the other things are subject to end; but not God.

And thereafter I discover that Lord in myself; and once I discover the Lord in myself; God dependence will become equal to self-dependence. And self-dependence is independence. So therefore muktaḥ; that person is dearest to me.

Verse 12.16

अनपेक्षः शुचिर्दक्षः उदासीनो गतव्यथः ।
सर्वारम्भपरित्यागी यो मद्भक्तः स मे प्रियः ॥ १२.१६ ॥

anapēkṣaḥ śucirdakṣa udāsīnō gatavyathaḥ |
sarvārambhaparityāgī yō madbhaktaḥ sa mē priyaḥ || 12.16 ||

सः मद्भक्तः saḥ madbhaktaḥ that devotee of Mine यः अनपेक्षः yaḥ anapēkṣaḥ who is independent, शुचिः śuciḥ pure दक्षः dakṣaḥ efficient उदासीनः udāsīnaḥ impartial गतव्यथः gatavyathaḥ undisturbed, free from sorrow, सर्वारम्भपरित्यागी sarvārambha-parityāgī free from all selfish activities प्रियः मे priyaḥ me is dear to Me.

16. That devotee of Mine who is independent, pure, resourceful, efficient, impartial, undisturbed, and a renouncer of all actions is dear to Me.

The one who is not emotionally dependent on any external factors to be happy; and since he is not dependent on external factors; absolutely there are no expectations also. Dependence expresses in the form of expectation. If you do not depend upon something, for example, cigarette; naturally, I do not have any expectation of a cigarette at a particular time, before food, after food, in the night time. So for some people, whenever they have tension; OK; if they smoke, the tension goes, they believe; I do not know.

When I depend on something, naturally I have expectation. And freedom from dependence; freedom from expectations. And freedom from expectations means freedom from disappointments also. Therefore ultimately freedom from frustrations in life is possible only when I do not have any form of expectations. I want the children to be like that. Expectation need not be on things only. Even if I expect a person to behave in a particular way; that is a form of expectation; the children should get 99.99% in every subject. First rank all the time; is it possible? You are not sure; so even if your expectation is fulfilled in one field, your expectation is not fulfilled in another field.

Or if at all you want to have expectations; Śāstra says have expectations; a comprise; first version is what? Do not have at all; then what is your expectation? Āgathē svagatham kuryāt; whatever comes, svagatham; If at all you want to have expectation; Śāstra says let those expectations be non-binding expectations; by which what we mean is: If it is fulfilled; wonderful; if it is not fulfilled also; I am willing to take that. Oh Lord; this is my preference; if this happens I will be very happy; if it does not happen also; I am willing to accept.

Therefore developing the mental strength to hope for the best; and be prepared for the worst also. As they talk about stoic philosopher; if the expectation does not happen; First he asks: What: terrible news; he hears; some tragedy; Wha....t.; because he expected something to happen; it did not happen; child's CA examination.... and the CA is one thing. So this person failed in CA for 28th time and he came out and there was this board on the road outside: Jesus Never Fails: and this man wrote underneath; Let him try CA. So frustrated he was; he got angry with Jesus also. So natural what?; So śāstra says what? But after a few minutes, we should be able to ask: So what? I will try again; I will change; there is always one way or another; this resilience of the mind is what is required. Not that we should be totally free from disappointment; disappointments are naturally; but the capacity to come out of it is inner strength.

And therefore anapēkṣaḥ means one who is free from all expectations; or one who is free from binding expectations; so anapēkṣaḥ.

Then the next word is suchiḥ; suchiḥ means the one who is clean; externally and internally. So jñāni does not mean that he should be careless about things. So the one who is clean externally and internally; externally means the place he stays, the dress he wears, etc. and more than external cleanliness is: internal cleanliness; that means thoughts are in keeping with dharma; dhārmica vṛthayaḥ; is śuciḥ.

Then the next word: udāsīnaḥ; udāsīnaḥ literally means indifference; but this word has got a negative connotation. So we should not take in that sense; here udāsīnaḥ or indifferent means, the one who is not partial; an impartial person; the one who is not a pakṣapāthi; the one who does not belong to any groupism. The society is full of groupism; politics; there are 10 people; then 3 people will join and form a group; and often the topic is what:

If it is Gīta it would have been good; but this group talks about the other group; and the other group talks about this group, and this politics is so natural; so udāsīnaḥ means one who does not belong to any group at all. Apakṣapāthi is udāsīnaḥ; the one who does not belong to anyone; and the one belongs to everyone; udāsīnaḥ; neutral; impartial.

Then gatavyathaḥ; the one who is free from sorrow; whatever be the type of experience that he faces; he knows that we do not have control over our experiences. Even the greatest jñāni does not have control over his experiences because experiences are determined by dēśa, kāla and prārabdha. So in winter, it will be cold; in summer, it will be hot; during rainy seasons, rains will be there. These are all depending upon dēśa and kāla; nobody can control; and there is the third factor called prārabdha.

Even jñāni's life is governed by prārabdha and therefore prārabdha brings favourable as well as unfavourable situations. Jñānam does not make all the situations favourable. So let us not have such an expectation: "After jñānam all situations will be converted into favourable situations". It is not. Vēdānta cannot change the world and situations; Vēdānta will help me in developing a healthy attitude towards all situations. So the change will not be external but the change will be in my attitude towards the situations.

And what is the attitude? As I told you during the New Year talk, any experience that Bhagavan gives me; it is meant for my spiritual progress. This is one universal law. We have got one ultimate goal in life; and that is spiritual growth; and we all require different experiences for spiritual growth. Just as different seeds require different types of weather conditions for its growth; one seed requires lot of rain; another requires dry weather. It varies.

Similarly we all require different types of experience for our spiritual growth; sometimes health; sometimes sickness; sometimes addition in the family; sometimes in the deletion; somebody dies. Every experience is specially chosen for me; by the sarvajñāna sarvaśakthiman Īśvaraḥ. And an Īśvaraḥ who never knows injustice. Therefore Lord can never be unjust; it is only for me, certain things appear unjust because I have got only a limited vision. I am not omniscient; I am not sure of even the spelling of omniscient சொல்லியிருக்கேனே இல்லையோ?; Therefore how can I say a particular experience is good or bad for me. It is only superficial judgment. Therefore let me not pass judgment upon what Bhagavān sends to me. Therefore my philosophy is: "whatever experience Bhagavān gives me, I have to learn something from that".

And therefore my question is why people are behaving like that is not question. Why death happens is not questioned; why robbery happens is not the question; why people leave me is not the question. My question is: from such an experience what spiritual lesson have I to learn? I may ask hundreds of other questions. Better not ask; even if you ask other questions; the final most important fundamental question is even if it is the most tragic experience; what valid spiritual lesson am I supposed to learn from this. And when I ask this question; I will find that from tragic experiences only, the really we learn more.

In fact, Arjuna himself learnt the lesson, that he requires Bhagavad-Gīta. When did he learn; when he faced the tragic situation of killing his own kith and kin; wonderful Bhagavat Gīta śāstram. And that is why even sorrow becomes a spiritual sādhana. The first chapter is titled Arjuna viśāda yōgaḥ; we have heard karma-yōga and bhakthi yōga; first chapter is called viśāda yōga; That means what even sorrow is a spiritual sādhanā, if I am willing to learn a spiritual lesson from even the most sorrowful experience; and therefore from jñāni's angle, no experience is unwelcome; he welcomes all experiences.

Therefore gatavyathaḥ he is free from negative reactions called "Why me?"; Why me reactions; all the other people are having gala time; you think that; go and interview them. If your story is Rāmayaṇam; their story is Mahabhāratham; but we always feel that everybody is having a good time. And Bhagavān is specially selecting the experiences for me. So there is no why me; so gatavyathaḥ.

Then sarvārambha-parityāgī; the one who has given up all the āramba; āramba means binding actions; karma; bandaka-karmāni.

What are the binding actions? Any action that you do thinking that once the action becomes successful, my life will become complete; once that karma produces successful result; my life would become pūrṇam. With this attitude; for the sake of pūrṇatvam; when you do any karma, it is a binding karma. Why? No karma or karma-phalam can really give pūrṇatvam. All these we have discussed several times before; because action is finite; result is finite; I am already finite; finite plus finite is equal to: apūrṇam plus apūrṇatvam புரணம் வருமோ? Will it become pūrṇam? Finite by an addition cannot become infinite. And therefore if I am going to expect pūrṇatvam; that expectation is not going to be fulfilled; I will get the karma-phalam and further desire something more something more something more:

कृतिमहोदधौ पतनकारणम् ।
फलमशाश्वतं गतिनिरोधकम् ॥ २ ॥

kṛtimahōdadhau patanakāraṇam |
phalamaśāśvataṁ gatinirōdhakam || 2 ||

I will become a workholic; thinking that after this it will be over; after this it will be over. You will find you will never be able to get out of that. And therefore the life becomes a struggle. Any action for fulfilment is a struggle or bondage; and jñāni has understood this fact. And therefore he never does anything for fulfilment and all actions comes out of this fulfilment.

So I am pūrṇaḥ; and I am taking up a new venture; and as even I am taking up a venture; I am pūrṇaḥ; the venture may succeed; I am pūrṇaḥ; the venture may fail; I am pūrṇaḥ. So pūrṇatvam becomes a way of life; it is no more a destination of life; pūrṇatvam as destination makes the life miserable; pūrṇatvam as a way of life makes life a leela; thus jñāni enjoys doing things; sarvārambhaparityāgī; yō madbhaktaḥ; and such a devotee of mine is mē priyaḥ; he is dearest to me.

More in the next class.

ॐ

In the second part of the 12th chapter of the Gīta, beginning from the 13th verse, Lord Kṛṣṇa talks about the characteristics of the highest bhaktha the highest bhakth being one who has gone through all the five levels of bhakthi yōga; and the final level of bhakthi yōga being nothing but jñāna-yōgaḥ. And therefore the one who has successfully gone through all the five levels of bhakthi-yōga will necessarily be a jñāni, who was called a sthira prajñā in the 2nd chapter. And we were seeing the 16th verse:

Verse 12.16

अनपेक्षः शुचिर्दक्ष उदासीनो गतव्यथः |
सर्वारम्भपरित्यागी यो मद्भक्तः स मे प्रियः || १२-१६ ||

anapēkṣaḥ śucirdakṣa udāsīnō gatavyathaḥ|
sarvārambhaparityāgī yō madbhaktaḥ sa mē priyaḥ||12.16||

anapēkṣaḥ; he is not emotionally dependent on any external factors; the one who is emotionally self-sufficient; the one who can freely give love to other people; but the one who does not seek love from others; if they love him wonderful; if it is otherwise, their problem; as far as he is concerned, his source of love is himself only; he has got an UPS system of love; and uninterrupted love supply: ULS.

Similarly he is śuciḥ; śuciḥ means a master of his own mind; that he does not allow any thought which will disturb his mental health.

Then dakṣaḥ; I do not know whether I dealt with the word dakṣaḥ in the last class: I think I left off; the word dakṣaḥ means one who is efficient in all situations. The one who does take appropriate action at every situation.

Generally a saṁsāri gets into two extremes; one extreme is taking impulsive reaction when there are situations. When there is some problem; or somebody misbehaves; this person is totally carried away and therefore without using any discriminative power; impulsively he takes action and often the steps that he takes, happen to be unjust or inappropriate action. It will be inappropriate because in impulsive actions, discriminative power is not used; and this impulsive response we call reaction. Being carried away by the situation; this is one extreme.

The other extreme is whatever be the situation; this person puts up with the all the problem that he faces; he allows other people to exploit him; in the name of goodness and compassion.

Vēdānta never says: you should allow yourselves to be exploited by others. Vēdānta never says you should be a victim of injustice in the name of compassion and forgiveness. And this putting up with all nonsense; that is the other extreme; inaction; passivity.

So one is: I become a door mat and the other is, I punch everybody's nose. These are the two extremes; one I can call; the other one I call inaction; Vēdānta says: reaction is also wrong; inaction is also wrong; what is required is appropriate action. You need not put up with nonsense; but that does not mean that you should impulsively take action; think very well; give enough time; if somebody has committed some wrong action; allow him to defend himself in a court. We have no right to punish another person without asking for an explanation; even the worst criminal is allowed to defend himself in a court, Because everybody is innocent unless otherwise proved. Therefore just because I have got power over someone; I cannot depend on one sided report and based on one-sided report; I cannot punish another person, I have to enquire; I have to ask and if punishment has to be given, as Lord Kṛṣṇa tells Arjuna; hey Arjuna, Duryōdhana requires punishment; you have to give.

Ahiṃsa should not be abused; abuse of ahiṃsa is also wrong. If Duryōdhana requires punishment, you should give after proper enquiry; and if Duryōdhana can be corrected through non-violent methods, give a chance to a non-violent remedy first; and only when non-violent remedies fail; you have a right to make use of violent remedy and if violent remedy has to be used; you have to use it.

And this capacity to think well and without any impulsiveness; taking appropriate action is called dakṣatvam. Śankarācārya translates it as pratyutpanna madhi. Taking appropriate steps in any situation and every situation; without being carried away by rāga and dvēṣa. So this appropriate response with the help of a mind; which is unclouded by rāga dvēṣa; is called dakṣatvam. Appropriate response with the help of a mind which is unclouded by rāga dvēṣa is dakṣatvam.

And the later words I explained, udāsīnaḥ; the one who is always impartial; gathavyathaḥ; the one who is not concerned about future; and sarvārambhaparityāgī; the one who has given up all binding actions is called a parā bhaktha. And such a bhaktha is dear to me. Up to this we saw in the last class.

Verse 12.17

यो न हृष्यति न द्वेष्टि न शोचति न काङ्क्षति ।
शुभाशुभपरित्यागी भक्तिमान्यः स मे प्रियः ॥ १२.१७ ॥

yō na hr̥ṣyati na dvēṣṭi na śōcati na kāṅkṣati |
śubhāśubhaparityāgī bhaktimān yaḥ sa mē priyaḥ || 12.17 ||

सः भक्तिमान् saḥ bhaktimān that devotee यः न हृष्यति yaḥ na hr̥ṣyati who neither rejoices
न शोचति na śōcati nor grieves न काङ्क्षति na kāṅkṣati neither desires, न द्वेष्टि na dvēṣṭi nor hates यः शुभाशुभपरित्यागी yaḥ śubhāśubhaparityāgī and gives up good and evil प्रियः मे priyaḥ me is dear to Me.

17. The devotee who neither rejoices nor grieves, neither desires nor hates, and gives up good and evil is dear to Me.

The one who is free from extreme emotional reactions to situations; yaḥ na hr̥ṣyati and yaḥ na śōcati; those two words should be read together; hr̥ṣyati and śōcati. And similarly the word dvēṣṭi and kāṅkṣati should go together; na hr̥ṣyati; na śōcati means the one who is not overpowered by elation and depression. So when favourable situations come; certainly we will be happy; nothing wrong; we are excited; very nice. Similarly unfavourable situations come, we are certainly disturbed. So these two conditions are natural; but what Kṛṣṇa says that these emotional responses should not be too intense to cloud your discriminative power; because one thing that we have to remember is under all circumstances our intellect must be intact. The greatest wealth of a human being is discriminative power; vivēka śakthiḥ. That is why Śankarācārya calls it; Vivēkacudāmani. It is this discriminative power, which differentiates human-beings from all others. And therefore what Vēdānta says is emotional upheavals are natural; but these upheavals should not go beyond a limit to cloud your discriminative power. Like when Daśarathā said that Rāma should go to forest; Lakṣmaṇa naturally got wild and angry, because Rāma's pattābhiṣēkam was fixed; and Kaikēyi asked for some old boons; and Daśarathā became a temporarily a hen-pecked husband and he said OK; I will send Rāma to the forest; and all the people were unhappy; Lakṣmaṇa also was unhappy and angry and you have to see Lakṣmaṇa's outburst at that time. He violently explodes and uses all kinds of language against his own father Daśarathā; and he says that at this moment, I will cut off Daśarathā's-head. This is where emotional upheavals make his intellect clouded and Rāma has to take lot of effort to cool down Lakṣmaṇa.

Thus we also are bound to be angry at the moment; but the anger should not cloud my discriminative power. Or at least I should have sufficient discriminative power to know that my discriminative power is getting clouded. So that I can tell now I am extremely angry; I feel like exploding; and using language against people who are to be respected.
Therefore I should have that much balance to postpone my response. So I am angry; I will not take any step now; I will postpone my response. That much balance; in psychological language, we call it inner space; inner space means to have that much mental balance to know that my mind is going out of balance. So that I may take rest. So that when a person is driving the car and he is having some giddiness: they say that if you feel giddy; keep the car on one side; park for some time; but he must have sufficient self-control to keep the car on one side. If it has gone beyond his control; he gets into accidents. So he does not have that much control to continue driving; but he has got sufficient control; to keep the car on one side.

Similarly when I am driving in my life, often we get emotional upheavals but I should have sufficient balance; but now my mind is not sufficiently alright; let me be careful in my talking. If I feel like blasting someone and phoning someone. Do not phone up now; if you feel like sending a violent email; postpone it; that much balance if you have; you are master of your mind. Nobody says you should be free from emotional disturbance. Kṛṣṇa only says be aware of it when it comes and learn to be careful. And that is called not being carried away by harṣa and sōkhā; so yo na hr̥ṣyati na śocati; and Similarly na dvēṣṭi na kāṅkṣiti; na dvēṣṭi means freedom from dvēṣa; na kāṅkṣiti means freedom from rāgaḥ. So na dvēṣṭi; na kāṅkṣiti means freedom from binding rāga dvēṣa; freedom from binding expectations.

Here also we should be careful. Nobody can be totally free from expectations; everybody has expectations; So what I would have through my business; and how my children should grow up; and what my health should be in my old age; we all have expectations; it is natural. Kṛṣṇa himself tells in the 4th chapter; Indriyāsya īndriyārthē, rāga dvēṣau vyavasthithau. Rāga-dvēṣa is natural; you can easily find out, if you go to a buffet lunch or dinner. Varieties of dishes are there; and everybody is given a plate, each one rushes to his own rāga dvēṣa; one straight away goes to gulabjamun; another goes to rōti; another goes to idli; another goes to bun; another goes to something. In fact, if you take Gods also; even they have got for each dēvathā they will dēvathā; pāyasam favourities; this dēvathā vadai favorite. So even Gods have favorite dishes; pāyasāna priyā tvakstha paśu lōka bhayankari; one of the Lalitha Sahasranama is pāyasāna priyā. That means what? Lalitha also has got rāgaḥ. So then where are we; what is in having rāga and dvēṣa.

And therefore Vēdānta says: have expectations; but be prepared for their fulfilment as well as their non-fulfilment; because only you can plan for the future; you can contribute to your future; but you cannot control your future. And since future is not under your control; you should be prepared for the non-fulfilment of the expectation. That is why we have a well-known saying: Hope for the best and be prepared for the worst. This farsightedness; this mental preparedness; this shock absorber; having that is here referred to as: na dvēṣṭi na kāṅkṣati. So he is free from binding rāga-dvēṣa.

Then śubhāśubhaparitāgī; the one who has given up puṇyam and pāpam; śubham means puṇyam and aśubham means pāpam because from vēdāntic angle; puṇyam and pāpam both are bondage only; no doubt puṇyam will give svargalōkam phalam; higher lōkās and enjoyment. But even that is considered to be bondage; tē tam bhuktvā svargalōkaṁ viśālam, kṣīṇē puṇyē martya lōkham viśanti. Since puṇyam is finite in nature; after sometime it will get exhausted; leaving us high and dry; so we say puṇyam is a golden shackle; pāpam is an iron shackle; both are shackles.

Like in Saudi Arabia; I have heard, I do not how far it is true; they have capital punishment; for some member of the royal family; sometimes they have capital punishment; only difference is their head will be cut with a gold sword; because member of royal family. Tell me what is the difference whether the head goes off by iron sword or gold sword. So therefore puṇyam is a smiling villain; pāpam is a frowning villain; both are villains only. But that does not mean he does not do puṇya karmās; these people will do puṇya karmās but these puṇya karmās are not done for the sake of puṇyam; puṇya karmās are done for citta śuddhi or jñāna-niṣṭa ḥ. You can do the same karma; noble karma can be done for puṇyam; Noble karma can be done for jñānam and niṣṭaḥ. So these people never do karma for either puṇyam or pāpam. So śubhāśubhaparitāyāgī bhaktimān yaḥ sa mē priyaḥ. Such a bhaktimān; he is dear to me.

समः शत्रौ च मित्रे च तथा मानापमानयोः ।
शीतोष्णसुखदुःखेषु समः सङ्गविवर्जितः ॥ १२.१८ ॥

samaḥ śatrau ca mitrē ca tathā mānāpamānayōḥ |
śītōṣṇasukhaduḥkhēṣu samaḥ saṅgavivarjitaḥ || 12.18 ||

समः samaḥ (He is) the same मित्रे mitrē ca च towards friend, च शत्रौ ca śatrau and foe, तथा मानापमानयोः tathā mānāpamānayōḥ as well as in honour and dishonor समः samaḥ (he is) the same शीतोष्णसुखदुःखेषु śītōṣṇasukhaduḥkhēṣu in cold and heat as well as comfort and discomfort, सङ्गविवर्जितः saṅgavivarjitaḥ and is free from attachment.

18. He is the same towards friends and foes, as well as in honour and dishonour. He is the same in cold and heat as well as comfort and discomfort and is free from attachment.

Śatrau mitrē ca samaḥ. So the one who has same attitude towards a friend and a foe. Of course a jñāni does not look upon anyone as his enemy; a jñāni does not have an enemy. That is why Dharmaputra was called ajāthaśatruḥ; na jāthaḥ śatruḥ yasya saḥ; ajāthaśatruḥ. So jñāni does not look upon anyone as inimical but the other people may consider jñāni as friend or enemy. Kṛṣṇa may not look upon Duryōdhana as a śatru; but Duryōdhana looks upon Duryōdhana as śatru. Thus there are two sets of people; some look upon the jñāni as their friend; and some look upon jñāni as their enemy. And the friendly people may do favourable things to jñāni; and this inimical people may harm the jñāni. And whatever be their responses or action; samaḥ; jñāni is samaḥ.

And what do you mean samatvam? Jñāni does not develop rāga or dvēṣa towards them; He does not hate a person who is inimical to him. And he does not get attached to a person just because the other person is friendly. And therefore samatvam nāma rāga dvēṣa-varjithatvam.

Then does that mean that the jñāni will put up with the nonsensical action of the enemy. Very careful; even though jñāni does not have dvēṣa towards an inimical person, it does not mean that the jñāni should put up with his wrong actions. So jñāni will strongly criticise an action which is to be condemned; a disapprovable action, he will disapprove and if an appropriate step should be taken, he will take, but even the worst step is taken; without even an iota of dvēṣa in his mind. The aim is not the other person should suffer; the aim is not in suffering; but the aim is that the other person has to be corrected. In fact, he feels bad that he has to correct him through violent methods. Remember the example of a mother punishing a child, Mother is never going to happily punish; even when she punishes, in the heart, love alone is there. And therefore remember compassion does not mean putting up with wrong actions; let not compassion be misunderstood as putting up with nonsense; with compassion we can take appropriate steps and the jñāni will take appropriate steps with compassion.

And tathā mānāpamānayōḥ. And that is why when the Lord kills the asuras; they generally use the word mōkṣaḥ; instead of vadham; pūthana mōkṣaḥ. What is the idea conveyed? Mōkṣaḥ means through punishment, the Lord is removing the impurity of those people; mōkṣaḥ does not mean vēdāntic mōkṣaḥ; just because Lord kills pūthana, pūthana will not get mōkṣa. Remember, pūthana will get mōkṣa only through ātma jñānam; there mōkṣaḥ means freedom from that pāpam; because Bhagavān does that with compassion and love. Not with a tinch or retaliation or hatred or anger.

So samaḥ śatrau ca mitrē ca tathā mānāpamānayōḥ. Similarly one who is equanimous with respect to mānam, honor and dishonor. This is another problem: wherever honour comes; there is a possibility of dishonour also. And when you are an ordinary person, dishonour will not felt very much; but when the honour goes higher and higher; the dishonour also becomes more intend. And whether you like or not; honour and dishonour are not under our control. So any person can spread stories; and any person can cavil; and I cannot shut the mouth of other people.

So Rāma faced apamāna; Seetha faced apamāna; Kṛṣṇa faced apamāna. Even Gods have faced; therefore we can never totally avoid that; and therefore we have to be mentally prepared; that is also a jathaka viśēṣam. In jathakam-horoscope they say: that this person has to suffer apamānam. So better go through that; there is no other way; often such situations happen in our life. And the one who swallows both of them; so honour and dishonour, the one who is equanimous.

Then śītōṣṇa-sukha-duḥkhēṣu; śītam means cold; uṣṇam means heat; sukham means favourable conditions; duḥkham means unfavourable conditions. In short all the pairs of opposites; in fact life is nothing but a series of pairs of opposites known as dvandvās; if there is birth, there is death; if there is growth; there is decay; if there is health; there is ill-health; if there is gain; there is loss; if there is union; there is separation. In fact life is a series of dvandvās; nobody can escape. Therefore we can only prepare our mind to accept both of them equanimously.

And therefore the one who is samaḥ; the one who has got jñānam shock absorber. And until jñānam comes, the only shock absorber; bhakthiḥ; iṣṭa dēvathā bhakthi; only our devotion to god in one form or the other. That alone has to strengthen us until jñānam comes. So these are two shock absorbers; for the human being; And here this person has got jñānam shock absorber.

And therefore only samaḥ saṅgavivarjitaḥ; since he knows that the pairs of opposite will come and go; when a favourable situation comes, he does enjoy that; but he remembers that this favourable situation need not last longer. So when everything is fine, do not expect that to be permanent in nature. That does not mean that you should think of loss and cry; like that person who drinks; coco cola or pepsi; he has got the straw. Therefore he drinks; now as the mouth is drinking and tasting; the eyes are seeing the level of the drink. So therefore instead of enjoying the taste, going down, going down. What to do? if you think. So how to avoid that? You should not drink; just keep and looking at it. So then you cannot enjoy; if enjoy the drink, it will be over; when it is over; allow that also.

Similarly, as things come, take it as Bhagavān's gift; enjoy your relationship, the children, people your wealth, your health; and these are all Bhagavān's gift; but always remember, Bhagavān gives it; Bhagavān takes it and when Bhagavān chooses to take, remember, 'Returned with thanks'. Do not curse Bhagavān; So saṅga vivarjitaḥ. This state of mind is called asaṅgatvam; enjoyment without attachment.

तुल्यनिन्दास्तुतिर्मौनी संतुष्टो येन केनचित् ।
अनिकेतः स्थिरमतिर्भक्तिमान्मे प्रियो नरः ॥ १२.१९ ॥

tulyanindāstutirmaunī santuṣṭō yēna kēnacit |
anikētaḥ sthīrāmātibhaktimān mē priyō naraḥ || 12.19 ||

भक्तिमान् bhaktimān That devotee तुल्यनिन्दास्तुतिः tulyanindāstutiḥ who is the same towards censure and praise नरः मौनी naraḥ maunī who is person of limited speech

सन्तुष्टः santuṣṭaḥ who is contented, येन केनचित् yē na kēnacit with any thing अनिकेतः anikētaḥ who is homeless स्थिरमतिः sthirāmatih and who has firm knowledge of the self प्रियः मे priyaḥ mē is dear to me.

19. That devotee, who is the same towards censure and praise, who is a person of limited speech; who is contented with anything, who is homeless and who has firm knowledge of the Self is dear to Me.

So tulyanindāstuti; nindā means criticism; censure; stutiḥ means glorification. Previously māna and apamāna were talked about; they are at the level of action. Here nindā and stutiḥ are at the level of words. So māna apamāna is kāyikam; nindā stutiḥ is vācīkam; iti bhēdaḥ. What is kāyika-māna and apamāna; somebody garlands; that is māna; and in another function somebody brings the garland and you stretch your head and they say it is not for you and honour the neighboring person. What a kaṣṭam you see. Therefore māna comes; apamāna also comes; So that is at the action level; this is at the vāk level; this also you cannot avoid because whatever you do; there would be somebody to criticise. Any blessed thing you do; there will be somebody to criticise because criticism does not involve any expenditure. We have a got a free mouth and it is a free country; no tax for speaking; and we have nothing else to do; and people are around; therefore you go on commenting; gossiping. So in this gossip circle, everybody will come; and you also cannot escape.

In the class also; you might quietly come; there might be somebody commenting your dress; how you come; how you walk; how you nod; or how you sleep. Some people you know, it happens; so what I am saying is you cannot escape from others' comments. And therefore if there are people who are willing to advise you with good intentions, they will directly tell you. And whatever I can learn from others, I learn; and I do actions according to my common sense and I completely ignore others' comments. Somebody was preparing his ground for bringing up some crop; he has already consulted experts and he has decided what to do; everybody comes and asks what are you going to do; he says that I am going to raise tomatoes or something; you are going to raise that; he never asked for opinion; they come and pass them and he is not allowed to work at all. So what he did; he put a suggestion box; so that he can work; and the suggestion box had only one peculiarity; the box did not have any bottom and down-below there is a waste paper basket; direct to the waste paper basket.

So anything you do; you will have so many suggestions; I know how many suggestions I get for my cough problem; if I take all medicines, I would have died long before; allopathy, homeopathy, all things are suggested. And everybody says: my medicine will immediately cure and it is harmless; and suppose I say I am already taking some medicine. Then they say this also you add; now the problem is: if I take different medicine and it gets cured; how do I know which medicine cured. So every time I get the problem,

I have to take all the 10 medicines; I tell you, suggestions and comments are the cheapest thing in the world. And therefore what do you do? Be deaf all kinds of comments; world will be like that; if there are wise people; they will never make comments in front of others; they will call you and give you proper advice; And therefore this jñāni tulya nindāstuti; Let people glorify; he will not be carried away; let people criticize; he will not worry. In fact one jñāni nicely says:

मन् निन्दया यदि जना परतोषमेति
नन् वा प्रयास जनितोय मनुग्रहोमे ।
तेयार्थिनो हि पुरुषः परतुष्टि हेतोः क्लेशार्जितानपि धनानि परित्यजन्ति ॥ man nindayā yadi janā paratoṣamēti nan vā prayāsa janitōya manugrahomē | tēyārthinō hi puruṣaḥ paratuṣṭi hētoḥ

kleśārjitānapi dhanāni parityajanti ||

If there are some people passing comments on me and enjoying, I am very happy; because indirectly I am becoming a cause for others enjoyment; there are people who are spending lot of money to please other people in the society. Now here I am without spending any money I am giving happiness to others; How? By being a victim of their criticism; therefore by commenting upon me, if they get happiness; I am happy only; I should not be upset by their comments.

Then santuṣṭō yēna kēnacit; his mind is such that it can be very very easily pleased; the uniqueness of jñāni's mind is, it is a easily pleaseable mind; whereas the more the sophisticated the mind is; pleasing those people become extremely difficult, because they are so fastidious and so particular about everything. So if they say coffee; they are particular about how much milk; how much decoction; how much sugar; how hot it should be, etc. etc. whatever it is; and then in what kind of cup it should be given; if slightly it is different; they throw away the coffee. The more sophisticated it is; we have bought finer rāga-dvēṣa; finer our rāga-dvēṣa; the most difficult it is to please.

And the most of the perfectionist people; perfectionist means what? They are very particular about everything; perfectionism is wonderful; how everything should be there. To have that is wonderful; but the problem is if I am going to be disturbed by the slightest variation; my life becomes miserable. You can see perfectionists are generally irritated; they are never happy whatever you do. Keep a kerchief; you have kept like this and not like that. Anything you do; he is not happy; jñāni is perfectionist; he does everything properly at the same time, he is accommodative enough to put up with all the imperfections.

And therefore yēna kēnacit; the one who is happy with anything that comes; and especially he is a sanyāsi; he cannot choose anything.

In fact Śankarācārya takes all these verses as the description of a sanyāsi only; and once a person is a sanyāsi; then he asks for bhikṣā; he cannot say: bhavathi dosai dēhi; bhavathi poorim dēhi; You cannot ask; bhavathi bhikṣām dēhi; you have eat what you get; santuṣṭō yēna kēnacit. One day bhikṣā not available; that also is OK; gr̥hastha life is slightly better off. So therefore learn to be happy with anything.

anikētaḥ; this is the word which indicates that he is a sanyāsi; anikētaḥ means the one who does not have a house of his own; do not ask rented house; the one who is not a householder; nikētaḥ means house; and anikētaḥ means the one who is a sanyāsi. And then where does he live?

सुर मंदिर तरु मूल निवासः

sura maṁdira taru mūla nivāsaḥ
śayyā bhūtala majinaṁ vāsaḥ |
sarva parigraha bhōga tyāgaḥ
kasya sukhaṁ na karōti virāgaḥ ||18||

wherever, whoever gives a place, he stays; that place may be a palatial house or it can be an ordinary hut; whatever is available, he lives there. Therefore anikētaḥ.

And all these are possible; how does he enjoy such a mind; his mental strength he has derived from one source. What is that source? sthiraṁ. It is self-knowledge that has given him this mental strength.

Remember; knowledge is power. In fact, knowledge alone is power. If at all humanity is so powerful; it is only because of our knowledge. And among various types of knowledge also; self-knowledge is the most powerful thing; ātmana vindatē vīryam, vidyayā vindatē amṛtam. The greatest strength you derive from self-knowledge. So only such a jñāni can say: நான் என் செய்யும்; கோள் என் செய்யும்; வினை தான் என் செய்யும். nāḥ eṇ ceyyum; kōḥ eṇ ceyyum; viṇai tāṇ eṇ ceyyum, when I have got knowledge. So sthiraṁ means the one who has got doubtless knowledge. Must be vijñānam; sthira means firm; here firm means doubtless. Doubtless knowledge of what; aham brahma asmi; And such a jñāni is dear to Me.

So with this verse, Kṛṣṇa concludes the description of a wise person's conduct or characteristic. Now in the 20th verse, Kṛṣṇa winds up this discourse.

ये तु धर्म्यमृतमिदं यथोक्तं पर्युपासते ।
श्रद्धधाना मत्परमाः भक्तास्तेऽतीव मे प्रियाः ॥ १२.२० ॥

yē tu dharmyāmṛtamidaṁ yathōktaṁ paryupāsatē |
śraddadhānā matparamā bhaktāstē'tīva mē priyāḥ || 12.20 ||

ते भक्ताः tē bhaktāḥ Those devotees, मत्परमाः matparamāḥ who keep Me as the primary (goal) तु ये tu yē and who श्रद्ध धानाः पर्युपासते śraddha dhānāḥ paryupāsatē – faithfully pursue, इदं धर्म्यमृतम् idam dharmyamṛtam this righteous and immortal (teaching) यथोक्तम् yathōktaṁ as mentioned above अतीव प्रियाः atīva priyāḥ are very dear मे mē to Me.

20. Those devotees who keep Me as the primary goal and who faithfully pursue this Righteous and immortal teaching as mentioned above are very dear to Me.

So when he hear the description of such a jñāni, naturally we will all love to enjoy such a state of mind. It is so alluring; it is so tempting; that I am free from all hooks nobody can threaten me. Naturally the question will come; how can I attain such a state of mind. Is there any short cut, or any treatment; electric shock or nervous adjustments? There is no short cut to enjoy such a state of mind; one has to go through the bhakthi-yōga consisting of the five levels. There is no other way; there is no short cut; one has to necessarily go through the five staged bhakthi yōga.

So therefore Kṛṣṇa says; idam yathōktaṁ paryupāsatē; suppose a seeker goes through the above mentioned bhakthi-yōga. And what are the five levels of bhakthi yōga? Do you remember? Sakāma-karma-pradhāna karma-yōga; niṣkāma-karma pradhāna-karma-yōga; ēka-rūpa-Īśvara upāsana; anēkarūpa-Īśvara-upāsana; nirguṇa-Īśvara-jñānam. So these are the five stage; the first two stages are called karma-yōga; the then next two stages are called upāsana yōga; the last one stage is called jñāna-yōga. In short, karma-yōga plus upāsana yōga plus jñāna-yōga. All these levels put together is called bhakthi yōga.

So this yathōktaṁ bhakthi-yōgam yē upāsatē. Suppose people practice; and what type of bhakthi-yōga it is; dharmyāmṛtam; which is called amṛtam because it leads to immortality; amṛtatva hētubhūtham bhakthi yōgam ithyarthāḥ; amṛtam means which leads to immortality; and not only that dharmyam; dharmyam means which is a teaching in keeping with the vēdās.

Because remember, in our tradition, vēdas are considered to be the primary scriptures, the primary source of knowledge; and therefore everyone has to necessarily follow the vēdic tradition; anybody goes out of vēdic tradition; he will be called nāsthikāḥ; and in India; the vēdic-teaching is so ingrained; that even the greatest person will be rejected the moment he rejects vēda; the best example is Buddhism; Buddha is considered to be a very great mahātma; So wonderful; So what you call rational; So compassionate; even though he glorified all over the world; in India it could not survive; it had to go out. You know one reason; because Buddha rejected the vēdas. So rejecting the vēda it is impossible to survive in our culture; because that is our foundation. Therefore every ācārya makes sure that he is following the vēdic tradition.

And Kṛṣṇa himself wants to claim that hey Arjuna I am also not giving My philosophy. Buddha may be an avathāra; may be considered an avathāra; but even an avathāra is rejected, if that avathāra rejects the vēdas. So Kṛṣṇa also will be rejected if he goes against the vēda. Therefore Kṛṣṇa says: hey Arjuna my teaching is dharmyam; dharmyam means vēda aviruddham. It is non-contradictory to the revelation given in the vēdas. And that is why Bhagavat Gīta is called a smṛti; smṛti means any literature which goes along with the vēdic-teaching. So sṛuthi anusāri śāstram is called smṛti. Bhagavad-Gīta is called a smṛti grantha.

And suppose a person follows entire bhakthi yōga; And that too how; śraddhaḥ dhānā. So with faith in its efficacy; that will bless me with and mat paramāḥ and keeping me as the ultimate goal; not materialistic goal; but with spiritual goal; one who keeps, matparamā means mumukṣu; being a spiritual-seeker; if a person follows; tē bhaktā atīva mē priyāḥ; jñāni bhakthās; they will become greatest bhaktha and they all will be nearest to me.

Thus ends the twelfth chapter named Bhakti-yōga in Srimad-bhagavad Gīta which is the essence of the Upaniṣads, which deals with Brahman-knowledge as well as the preparatory disciplines, and which is in the form of a dialogue between Lord Kṛṣṇa and Arjuna.

164 Chapter 12, Summary

ॐ

Today I will give you a summary of the 12th chapter. The 12th chapter happens to be the culmination of middle section of the Bhagavad-Gīta; which is known as madhyamaṣatkam. I had told you before that the first six chapters of the Gīta are called prathamā-ṣatkam; then the next, beginning from the 7th to 12th is known as madhyama-ṣatkam and the last six chapters are known as carama-ṣatkam. And 12th chapter is the final chapter of the madhyama-ṣatkam.

And in the previous five chapters beginning from the 7th up to the 11th, Lord Kṛṣṇa has elaborately dealt with the topic of Īśvara-svarūpam. While the first six chapters dealt with the jīva-svarūpam; from 7th to 11th chapters Kṛṣṇa dealt with Īśvara-svarūpam, the nature of God.

And naturally this topic of Īśvara-svarūpam should culminate in bhakthi towards such an Īśvara. Bhakthi is love or devotion and love or devotion is possible only towards something or someone who is known. You can never have a positive or negative emotion towards an unknown person; when you meet an unknown person; your attitude is what? a neutral attitude only; only when you move with the person; and come to know more and more about that person you develop either liking towards the person or dislike.

And that is how locally also we hear of people moving together and falling in love; all because of what? More the contact is, the more a person comes to know and that knowledge is the basis for the attitude. You can never develop an attitude towards an unknown thing. If this is the general law, your attitude towards God also will depend upon your knowledge of God. I can never love an unknown God.

And therefore if I expect you to develop love or devotion, I should never command you to love, because you can never develop love towards unknown, I have to give you knowledge and knowledge alone contribute to a healthy attitude. If I want you to develop love towards the country; I have to talk about the glory of the country.

You may ask is there any glory at all; that is a different thing; I can never hold an attitude. An attitude is not command-based; an attitude is not will-based; an attitude is generated based on your understanding; and Kṛṣṇa knows this principle. Five chapters Kṛṣṇa or Vyāsācārya devoted in giving you the knowledge of God; and now that we know what that God will be; the consequence will be what? A healthy attitude towards the Lord; and that attitude is called bhakthiḥ; Īśvara-jñānam vina; Īśvara-bhakthiḥ na sambhavathi. Ajñātha-viṣayē; bhāvana naiva sambhavathi.

And therefore 12th chapter is natural consequence and culmination of the previous five chapters and this chapter even though a short one consisting of only twenty verses; it is a very very important chapter because in this chapter Kṛṣṇa has condensed the essence of the entire vēdic-teaching.

Not even the entire vēdāntic teaching; it is an entire vēdic-teaching; both vēda pūrva bhāga as well as vēda anta bhāga; both are condensed in 20 pithy verses. And therefore only this chapter is considered important and of course people think this is important because it is small also. So easy to do pārāyaṇam and easy to byheart also; that is practical reason. But the real reason; this is vēda sāraḥ.

And that is why at the end to the 12th chapter, Kṛṣṇa uses the word, yē tu dharmya amṛtam idam; the word dharmyam indicates that this chapter is the essence of vaidica dharmah; vēda-sāraḥ.

And this chapter has got mainly two topics; the first topic being bhakthi-yōgaḥ; and the second topic is bhakthi-yōga phalam; what is the benefit of result of bhakthi yōga. These are the two main topics.

But before entering into this topic, Lord Kṛṣṇa incidentally answers a question raised by Arjuna and therefore the chapter begins with a question from Arjuna, which is based on the previous chapter. In the previous chapter, viz., 11th chapter, Lord Kṛṣṇa has talked about saḡuṇa Īśvaraḥ, otherwise known as viśva rūpa Īśvaraḥ. The Lord as the very universe is called viśva-rūpa-Īśvaraḥ; Viśva-rūpa Īśvara comes under saḡuṇa-Īśvara; because the world is full of guṇas or attributes or properties and therefore viśva rūpa is saḡuṇa-Īśvara.

And Arjuna has heard a lot about nirguṇa Īśvara also; and therefore Arjuna gets a doubt regard the relative superiority of saḡuṇa and nirguṇa Īśvara. And consequently another doubt is whether saḡuṇa bhaktha is superior or nirguṇa-bhaktha is superior. Saḡuṇa upāsaka is superior; nirguṇa dyāthā is superior; Arjuna gets a doubt. And generally we are attracted to saḡuṇa-Īśvara also; because nirguṇa, we are not even able to conceive of. Therefore this chapter begins with Arjuna's question;

एवं सततयुक्ता ये भक्तास्त्वां पर्युपासते |
ये चाप्यक्षरमव्यक्तं तेषां के योगवित्तमाः || १२- १ ||

ēvaṃ satatayuktā yē bhaktāstvām paryupāsatē |
yē cāpyakṣaramavyaktaṃ tēṣām kē yōgavittamāḥ || 12.1 ||

saḡuṇa dyānam is better or nirguṇa dhyānam is better. And what was Kṛṣṇa's answer? Kṛṣṇa gives a peculiar and fictitious answer. But we should understand the implication of Kṛṣṇa's answer; the implication is we should never ask; which one is better; because this question is relevant only when you want to choose one of them; the question is relevant only when you want to choose. And as far as Kṛṣṇa is concerned, there is no question of choosing one of them; because every seeker requires saḡuṇa dhyānam also and every seeker ultimately has to come to nirguṇa also. Without saguṇa dhyānam; one can never come to nirguṇa dhyānam; because saguṇa dhyānam is the stepping stone to arrive at nirguṇa dhyānam. So without saguṇa dhyānam; one cannot come to nirguṇa dhyānam. And without nirguṇa dhyānam; I hope you remember, without nirguṇa dhyānam, saguṇa dhyānam is incomplete sādhana.

So therefore everybody has to go through saguṇa first and everybody has to come to nirguṇa. One can postpone coming to nirguṇa; but one cannot avoid that. If a person feels that he is not ready he can postpone it; and postponement can be one year, ten years, or even ten janmās; we do not care. But one has to come to nirguṇa; because nirguṇa-Īśvara is the ultimate reality; which is based on the well-known Kēnōpaniṣad saying; tadēva brahma tvam viddhi nēdam yadidamupāsātē. Saguṇa Īśvara that you meditate upon is never the ultimate reality. You should remember the ultimate reality is a saguṇa object of meditation. And therefore Kṛṣṇa's answer is what; everybody has to go through both of them; both of them means what; saguṇa and nirguṇa.

After answering Arjuna's question, Kṛṣṇa enters the two topics; which is bhakthi-yōga sādhanā; and bhakthi-yōga sādhanā phalam. And what is bhakthi-yōga sādhanā; I have told you several times; and I will repeat again; it is very important; Bhakthi yōga is not the name of a particular sādhanā but it is the name of a range of sādhanā, everyone has to go through; it is a series; it is a package. Now you have to use this words; package.

And this package consists of how many levels; so the levels can be any number, depending upon the context; sometimes it is presented two levels; sometime presented as three levels but here Kṛṣṇa presents bhakthi-yōga as a series consisting of five levels or five stages. And which is important; everyone is important; remember a flight of stairs; a staircase which rung or which step is important you cannot ask; every step is important to go to the next step; and what are the five levels?

The first level is sakāma karma pradhāna karma-yōgaḥ; we can call it karma-yōga level No.1; or karma-yōga 1; this is the beginning stage; which everyone can easily start; in this level a person is allowed to do any karma; to fulfill his personal desires; because very one is born with countless number of desires; which are carried from previous janma; whatever things you bring or not; you bring these; kāmānya kāmayatē manyamānāḥ saḥ kāmabhir jāyatē tatra tatra.

Because in this janma there are so many desires which are not fulfilled; one person used to tell; Swamiji I have one desire; very very strong desire; you know what; he likes a particular brand of car called Land cruiser; 60-70 lakhs or so; so Swamiji I need your special āśirvādam for that; mōkṣa I want. But; Now if it is a simpler one, it is OK: but it is 70 lakhs; so a person may die meditating on land cruiser; and he will cruise or go to the next janmā and born as land cruiser.

So therefore he has to continue; therefore we carry forward not only the puṇyam papāma we carry forward our desires also; our unfulfilled desires; and therefore we cannot help it; therefore kāmya karmas are bound to be there; and therefore sāstra says; let your initial stage of life be yōga kṣēma pradhāna life; Yōga kṣēma; 9th chapter I said; yōga means what? Acquisition; கொண்டுவா; கொண்டுவா; accumulating. Not only I acquire for me but for handing over to the next generation; Something to leave in the Will; therefore I have to acquire for them also; if there are girls; one type of acquisition; boys one type of acquisition; all of them. It is called yōga. And once I acquire the next desire is what? Maintenance and holding on to it; and that is called kṣēma; our initial stage of life is yōga kṣēma pradhāna. In fact we have no time for anything. Until we marry, it is only yōga kṣēma of myself, and once we are married, our brain is riddled not only my yōga kṣēma, but also it is yōga kṣēma of me and my family, Many of the parents come and do namaskāra nowadays; Swamiji public exams; where you have public exam; not for me but for my children; they do not have any boon to ask me but they all have tens and hundreds for their children; entrance or IIT; examination-Āśīrvāda season. And tomorrow is exam; another extra namaskār. So what yōga kṣēma a parent is interested in; the children's yōga kṣēma; husband's yōga kṣēma pradhāna life. Kṛṣṇa says you do pray for that. How to convert into karma-yōga? You work for your yōga kṣēma; but whatever happens accepts the consequence as God's will.

Then comes the next stage; a person becomes more and more mature; and he understands that yōga kṣēma is an endless business and therefore he learns to transfer some of the yōga kṣēma to

अनन्याश्चिन्तयन्तो मां ये जनाः पर्युपासते |
तेषां नित्याभियुक्तानां योगक्षेमं वहाम्यहम् ||९- २२||

ananyāścintayantō mām yē janāḥ paryupāsātē |
tēṣāṃ nityābhiyuktānāṃ yōgakṣēmaṃ vahāmyaham ||9.22 ||

It is an important skill that we have to develop; we have to learn to transfer a part of our yōga kṣēma concern to the Lord. Then only we will have time; that too quality time and relaxed mind for another set of activity which is meant for citta śuddhi.

Therefore the second stage of karma-yōga is involvement in those activities which are meant for citta śuddhi. We call citta śuddhi pradhāna karma; or niṣkāma karma pradhāna karma-yōga. So we do have time to pray to the Lord; and also for the child's examination. Also we add give me citta śuddhi. If the mind is too much concerned. We cannot think of citta śuddhi; we will not even know that such a thing exists. We cannot think of any other goal of life at all; because our mind is occupied with the settlement of the children; and settlement of the children will get postponed later to the grandchildren; that is later; so the second stage is niškāma karma pradhāna karma-yōga; otherwise called citta śuddhi pradhāna karma-yōga. So in this, I do not ask for yōga; I do not ask for kṣēma; Oh! Lord whatever you give; I would learn to live with that. And whatever stays with me, I will learn to live with that. Very difficult stage; but we have to come to that.

Then once we have crossed these two stages; together called karma-yōga; we are ready for the third stage; which is called īṣṭa-dēvathā-upāśana. And each one is called what? Bhakthi yōga; remember; first is called bhakthi-yōga; because devotion is required for the first stage; For the sake of yōga-kṣēma; and second stage also I require bhakthi.

And in third stage; I practice īṣṭa-dēvathā-upāśanam, and this is presented as the third stage; because in the first stage, when my mind is full of yōga-kṣēma concern, I cannot sit in mediation; And even if sit in mediation, I will be either thinking of yōga or kṣēma only; meditation simply does not happen. In fact, you continue your worry in sitting posture; normally you worry in other postures. Now in Padmāsana you worry; that will be only difference. Therefore only we are able to transfer our yōga kṣēma concern to the Lord. Mind finds some inner leisure; and only such a mind can spend some time forgetting the family; forgetting the future; forgetting the money, forgetting all those things; சரண கமலாலயத்தில் அரை நிமிஷம்; caraṇa kamalālayattil arai nimiṣam; if possible. So this is called īṣṭa-dēvathā-upāśanam; which will equip me to turn my mind inwards. The extrovert mind will learn to withdraw and that withdrawal is the third stage of sādhanā; īṣṭa-dēvathā-upāśanam;

And in the 12th chapter, it is called abhyāsa-yōga and which īṣṭa-dēvathā is good; you need not ask; any dēvathā is good enough; any particular form of the God is OK.

And once a person has gone through this stage; then he is ready for the fourth stage; I said before in the īṣṭa-dēvathā-upāśanam; there are advantages; but there are limitations also problem you may think that there are so many Gods and you may begin to compare; Śiva is greater or viṣṇu is greater; idea of division etc. will be there; and also the Lord or the deity that I visualise is bound by time and space that is also another limitation and therefore to break these limitations; I have to learn to look at the īṣṭa-dēvathā as the very Viśva-rūpa-Īśvara.

And once I look upon God as the total universe; you do not have many gods at all; you have got only one God with many nāma; what is the difference between Viśva-rūpa Śiva; Viśva-rūpa Viṣṇu; there cannot be any difference because Viśva-rūpa Viṣṇu includes all names and forms; Viśva-rūpa Śiva includes all names and forms; and therefore there is no division; there is no question of comparison also; And also I understand that the Lord is not bound by forms; and therefore this helps in the expansion of the mind. So it gives citta viśalatha; this is the fourth stage called Viśva-rūpa dhyānam; or anēka-rūpa dhyānam.

And once a person has gone through these four stages; he is ready for the fifth stage and only when a person goes through these four stages; he becomes sādhanā catuṣṭaya sampannāḥ.

So in Tatva Bōdha we said; vēdānta begins; self-knowledge begins; only after acquiring sādhanā catuṣṭaya saṁpathi and this sādhanā catuṣṭaya saṁpathi is possible only by going through these four stages of bhakthi yōga. Bhakthi I have explained in the Tatva Bōdha; you have to go through that; in simple language you can say that it is mental preparedness for self-knowledge.

And then for this self-knowledge a person has to go through the fifth level of bhakthi yōga; and the fifth and the final level of bhakthi-yōga is called jñāna-yōgaḥ. Fifth and final of bhakthi-yōga is jñāna-yōga itself; This alone Śankarācārya tells in his Vivēkacūdāmaṇi; svasvarūpanu sandhānam bhakthirithabhi diyathē. The final level of bhakthi is self-enquiry; sva svarūpa anusandanam.

And this jñāna-yōga consists of vēdānta sṛavaṇa manana nidhidhyasanāni. So consistent and systematic study of vēdāntic scriptures for a length of time under the guidance of a competent ācārya; forgotten! Do not worry; no imposition. So sṛavaṇam is consistent and systematic study of vēdāntic scriptures; not purāṇās; vēdāntic scriptures which deal with nirguṇa-Īśvaraḥ. The first four stages you could manage with saguṇa-Īśvara; In the fifth level you have to come to nirguṇa-Īśvaraḥ; which is discussed only in the vēdānta. Therefore consistent and systematic study of vēdāntic scriptures for a length of time under the guidance of a competent ācārya.

And Swamiji how do you know this; Kṛṣṇa does not say; you are adding whatever you like; Kṛṣṇa himself has said this in the 4th chapter, I have only pulled out from the 4th chapter, and I am putting here.

तद्विद्धि प्रणिपातेन परिप्रश्नेन सेवया |
उपदेक्ष्यन्ति ते ज्ञानं ज्ञानिनस्तत्त्वदर्शिनः || ४- ३४ ||

[tadviddhi praṇipātēna paripraśnēna sēvayā |
upadēkṣyanti tē jñānam jñāninastattvadarśinaḥ || 4.34 ||](#)

Arjuna you have to necessarily go to a guru; and open yourselves and ask for this teaching and consistently follow the sṛavaṇam.

But what about those people who never had guru? உடனே mind அங்கேபோகும்; immediately the mind rushes there. Here we are talking about the general rules; but for every general rule there are exceptions also; because there are spiritual geniuses. In the case of spiritual genius a guru is not required; therefore in their case, they gain knowledge in an exceptional way; just as there was Rāmānujan, a mathematic genius; he could mathematics without the help of a teacher; the teacher himself could not understand the things; just because Rāmānujan did not require if you abolish mathematics schools and teachers; that becomes ridiculous. When we are talking about general rule; never quote an exception; and every one requires a guru; and suppose you say: Swamiji I am a spiritual genius; and therefore I do not require a guru; then I will tell you that you do not require.

But our problem is what? In spite of a guru we do not understand; without guru what you will understand. Therefore sṛavaṇam from guru is required.

Then comes the mananam; which is the removal of all the doubts. Until my intellect is convinced that the nirguṇa Īśvara is not different from me; the real me; tat brahma aham asmi; aham brahmāsmi. Our intellect will not easily accept it. Until we accept, we have to find out what is the intellectual obstacle for accepting this; and whatever be the obstacle in the form of doubt, we have to remove. It is a long process, we have to go through; which is called mananam. And once a person has gone through sṛavaṇam and mananam, he has to go through nidhidhyāsanam; by which we mean the assimilation of this teaching; by which we mean repeatedly reminding my higher-nature to myself. So the nature I now know is that the lower nature; that I am so and so; born on such and such a time; qualification; so many years old; whatever, what you call, whatever bio-data I give now; they all belong to the incidental ahaṁkāra ḥ. I have to remind myself of my higher ātma nature; this self-reminder is called Nidhidhyāsanam.

Thus by following sṛavaṇam; mananam and nidhidhyāsanam; I assimilate this teaching. And once the teaching is assimilated; this intellectual knowledge will bring about an emotional transformation. Because most of our problems are at emotional level; rāga; dvēṣa; kāma; krōdha; bhayam; all these are emotional problems. Saṁsāra is experienced at emotional levels; and therefore this knowledge has to transform my emotional personality. Until then, I continue nidhidhyāsanam. And these three sādhanās put together sṛavaṇam manana nidhidhyāsana is called the fifth level of jñāna-yōga.

And once a person has gone through all the five levels of bhakthi yōga; he becomes a jñāni; a sthira prajñāḥ; to use the second-chapter expression. Thus Kṛṣṇa talks about all the five levels; the first four levels belong the vēda pūrva bhāghā and the fifth and final level belongs to vēda antha bhāghā. And this is given from verse No.3 to 12, Verse No.3 to verse No.12 is the five staged bhakthi yōga.

And incidentally you should remember that five levels are not clear cut divisions; Not that you follow one; and complete it and you go to the second one and once you come to the second one, the first one is gone; and once you go to the third level; the second level is gone; this is not a clear-cut division; everybody would be following all the sādhanās but one will be predominant; therefore it is not a clear cut division; that we should remember.

And now comes the second part of the 12th chapter, which is from 13th to verse No.19. And that topic is bhakthi-yōga phalam; the benefit of bhakthi yōga; You should remember, when a person has gone through all the stages of bhakthi yōga; he has attained the knowledge aham brahma asmi. Therefore this direct benefit of bhakthi-yōga is ātma jñānam aham brahma asmi which means aham pūrṇaḥ asmi.

And what will any knowledge lead to? What is the benefit of any type of knowledge? The benefit of any knowledge is removal of ignorance. Jñānasya phalam, ajñāna nivṛtiḥ; the benefit of knowledge is freedom from ignorance; and get physics knowledge; I will get freedom from what ignorance; chemistry ignorance?; No; physics knowledge removes physic ignorance; English knowledge removes English ignorance; self-knowledge will remove self-ignorance.

Therefore directly the benefit is experienced at the intellectual level only; because I have got self-knowledge, I am free from self-ignorance; therefore the direct benefit is only at the intellectual level; the emotional benefits are only indirect benefits; they are only corollary.

And therefore you should know how removal of self-ignorance gives me emotional benefit. What is the connection between intellectual knowledge and emotional benefit? The connection is not very direct; therefore we have to understand how; So what I am doing is an intellectual exercise; but the benefit presented is what: emotional benefit. How we should know?

So this the fundamental of vēdānta; this I have not discussed during the course of 12th chapter; and being important, I thought that I should mention it. The vēdānta reveals that pūrṇatvam is our real nature; pūrṇatvam means; self-sufficiency; self-adequacy; is my real nature. But unfortunately, whatever be the reason, we do not know the fact that aham pūrṇaḥ asmi; we do not know; because we are born with ignorance of everything and therefore ignorance of our real nature also. We are born with mathematics ignorance; all ignorance we are born with; that is our capital; what capital; ignorance;

And as we learn one by one; the ignorance goes away; when I learn English, English ignorance goes.

Just as other ignorance, if I can use plural; other types of ignorance are there; self-ignorance is also there; therefore I do not know aham pūrṇaḥ asmi; If I had known anybody asks who are you; I would have aham satyam jñānam anantham brahma. We never say; nobody introduces that way. That means we are ignorant and vēdānta points out when I do not know I am pūrṇaḥ; naturally I am going to mistake myself as I am apūrṇaḥ. Ignorance of pūrṇatvam leads to the mistake of apūrṇatvam; when the fact is not known so many other things are imagined. To put in technical language, ajnānam leads to adhyāsa; ignorance leads to erroneous conclusions. And the erroneous conclusion is what; aham apūrṇaḥ. Apūrṇaḥ means what; I am an incomplete person.

And this erroneous conclusion is at what level? It is at the intellectual level; ignorance belongs to intellect; error also belongs to intellect. Up to this is intellectual problem.

Then what happens? When I feel incomplete, naturally I have a desire to complete myself and therefore I gone on struggling in life to make myself apūrṇaḥ by various methods, As a child, I think a balloon or toy will make me complete one; bālastavat krīḍā sakthā. And once this person is an adult he think life would be incomplete if there is no wife or husband; He is going by the motorbike and nobody to sit behind; somebody has to sit behind and put the hand on the round tummy; joke; OK; so I am complete now. So therefore this problem was for Brahmāji himself it seems; Brihadārṇya says: tasmāt ramatē; tad dvitēyam aicatē; Brahmāji also wanted a Mrs. therefore I gone on thinking this will complete me; this will complete me; this will complete; and the whole life is searching for something which will make life complete.

This is called kāmaḥ; kāmaḥ is a problem at the emotional level. This apūrṇatvam kāmaḥ is the shifting of the problem from the intellectual to emotional; and when I am not able to fulfil my kāma; and somebody obstructs the fulfilment; then there is krōdhaḥ; because of you only I could not do that; Krōda is an emotional problem and when the kāma is fulfilled; then also I do not solve the problem because finite plus finite is equal to finite. Therefore fulfilment of desire leads to more kāmaḥ; which is lōbhaḥ; unfulfilled desire leads to krōdhaḥ; fulfilled kāmaḥ leads to lōbhaḥ; that is kāmaḥ, krōdhaḥ, lōbhaḥ, mōhaḥ, madaḥ, mātsaryaḥ. In fact all your emotional problems begin with this kāma. And this kāma is because of what; the erroneous conclusion that I am apūrṇaḥ.

Therefore the root of the problem is at intellectual level; problem is emotion; but the root is intellectual; and therefore you have to study the scriptures and solve the problem at intellectual level; then it will gradually transform your emotional personality; since I am pūrṇaḥ; I know; I am full and complete; whether things are around or not;

prajahāti yadā kāmān sarvān pārtha manōgatān |

ātmanyēva"tmanā tuṣṭaḥ sthitaprajñastadōcyatē || 2.55 ||

Expectations are not there; frustrations are not there; complaints are not there; and therefore all the benefits mentioned in this portion are the emotional benefits; but the cause is what: at the intellectual knowledge. And therefore Kṛṣṇa enumerates them from verse No.13 to 19. I am not going to each slōkā; but will present in a nutshell;

All our transactions are from three different levels;

- I as a kartā in the world; as the doer of varieties of action; that is one role I play;
- and the second role I play is as a bhoktā; receiving varieties of experiences;
- and the third is I as a pramādha; how I look at the world; my perspective as an observer.

And Kṛṣṇa says at all these three levels; there will be total transformation.

As a kartā; what is the transformation? My actions are no more born out of a sense of incompleteness. It is not because I am apūrṇaḥ; I am doing the action; knowledge I am pūrṇaḥ; Therefore all my actions are not meant for fulfilment; but they are done with fulfilment; and therefore there is no more any motive; karma-phalam if it comes; aham pūrṇaḥ; karma-phalam not comes; aham pūrṇaḥ; Therefore there is a very great relief; there is no concern; there is no tension. So therefore I act from pūrṇatvam; not from apūrṇatvam; one change.

And when I am full and complete; a mind which has fullness will always express only love. Fullness expresses in the form of love and compassion. Therefore all the actions are born out of love and compassion for others. This is the second transformation.

And the third transformation is since the action come from love, compassion without expectation and concern; to quality of the actions are excellent; because the mind is undisturbed; the performance is always better. And therefore every action is appropriate and sound action; dakṣaḥ;

Thus as a kartā; his motive is not fulfilment; comes with fulfilment; love, compassion.

Similarly as a bhoktā, Kṛṣṇa says: Since he operates from strength that aham pūrṇaḥ asmi, he is not vulnerable disturbance; like anger; impulsive reactions etc. cannot come;

He has got a shock absorber. And therefore patience, freedom from impulsive reaction; not vulnerable to emotional disturbances. In fact, he is an emotionally immunized person; he is from bhōktā level. So emotional resistance is the second benefit.

And the third and final is as a pramātha; as an observer his perspective of the creation is samatvam; samatvam; whatever be the type of experience; māna apamāna, sukha, duḥkha; śīta uṣṇa etc. his mind enjoys samatvam or equanimity which means he is not subject to rāga and dvēṣa.

So these are the transformations which will take place as a result of this knowledge; and Kṛṣṇa concludes by pointing that to get this particular benefit, there is no shortcut at all, everyone has to go through all the five stages if a person has to attain this benefit.

ये तु धर्म्यामृतमिदं यथोक्तं पर्युपासते |

yē tu dharmyāmṛtamidaṁ yathōktaṁ paryupāsatē|
śraddadhānā matparamā bhaktāstē'tīva mē priyāḥ||12.20||

One has to go all the five stages to attain this phalam called jīvan-mukthi.

THIRTEENTH CHAPTER

क्षेत्र-क्षेत्रज्ञ-विभाग-योगः

kṣetrakṣetrañāvivibhagayōga

THE YŌGA OF THE DISCRIMINATION OF THE KSHETRA AND THE KSHETRAJÑĀ

In the last class I pointed out that the 12th chapter makes the end of the madhyama-ṣatkam of the Bhagavat Gīta. The Bhagavat Gīta is divided into three ṣatkams; ṣatkam meaning a group of six chapters and the first ṣatkam consisting of the first six chapters is prathama ṣatkam; then from the 7th to the 12 is the madhyama-ṣatkam and from the 13th up to the 18th is carama ṣatkam or anthima-ṣatkam.

And I had also pointed out that in each ṣatkam certain topics are highlighted; predominantly certain topics are highlighted in each ṣatkam. And we saw in the prathamā-ṣatkam was highlighted the first topic being Jīva-svarūpam, the nature of the individual. In technical language we call it Tvam padārthaḥ. In the Mahāvākyam Tad Tvam Asi, the tvam part, called Jīva-svarūpam, the nature of the individual, was highlighted.

The second topic that is highlighted is the karma-yōga as a sādhanā. Jīva-svarūpam or Tvam padārthaḥ; and karma-yōga sādhanā was the second topic;

And the third topic highlighted in the prathamā-ṣatkam is the importance of the individual effort, otherwise called prayathnaḥ.

So Kṛṣṇa wants to point out that everything is not predetermined, everything is not totally the will of the God alone, you also do have freewill. And therefore, never embrace fatalism; fatalistic approach is non-vēdic approach. We do not say that fate or destiny is not there; what we say by fatalism is when you think that fate alone determines everything, fate is the total contributor to our life, it is called fatalism; whereas the vēdic approach is fate is one of the contributors to our future. Through your horoscope or through Nādi jyōtsyam, இப்போ அது popular அயிரிக்கு; through various methods, you may know your destiny, your karma, but you should remember that karma or fate is only one of the contributors of your future. In addition to fate, there is another important factor also, which contributes to your future; and that important factor is your freewill or your puruṣārtha, otherwise called prayathnaḥ. And therefore Lord Kṛṣṇa said that you have to contribute your might.

उद्धरेदात्मानात्मानं नात्मानमवसादयेत् ।
आत्मैव ह्यात्मनो बन्धुः आत्मैव रिपुरात्मनः ॥ ६.५ ॥

Uddharēd ātmana'tmānaṁ na'tmānavasādayēt ।
ātmaiva hyātmanō bandhurātmaiva ripurātmanaḥ ॥6.5 ॥

You have to work your upliftment and in fact only when you work for your upliftment, God will come to your rescue. That is why we have the well-known Tamil proverb. தான் பாதி; தைவம் பாதி; tāṅ pāti; taivam pāti. Thus Jīva-svarūpam, karma-yōga and prayathnaḥ; these are the three topics in the prathama ṣatkam.

Then in the madhyama-ṣatkam from the 7th to 12th chapters, Kṛṣṇa shifted the focus to another three important topics, and they are:

1. Īśvara-Svarūpam, otherwise technically called Tad padārthaḥ. In the Mahāvākyam Tat Tvam Asi, Tat refers to Īśvara-svarūpam; Tvam refers to the Jīva-svarūpam. Īśvara-svarūpam is one topic.

2nd topic highlighted is Īśvara-upāsana-yōga. Meditation upon Īśvara called Īśvara-dhyānam or upāsanaṁ, and this Īśvara-dhyānam can be in the form of Iṣṭa-dēvathā-upāsana, which was called abhyāsa-yōga by Lord Kṛṣṇa or it can be in the form of Viśva-rūpa upāsanaṁ. Meditation upon the Lord, looking upon him as the very universe itself. In fact, the entire 11th chapter is training for Viśva-rūpa-upāsanaṁ.

अनेकवक्त्रनयनम् अनेकाद्भूतदर्शनम् ।
अनेकदिव्याभरणं दिव्यानेकोद्यतायुधम् ॥ ११.१० ॥

anēkavaktranayanamanēkādbhutadarśanam ।
anēkadivyābharaṇaṁ divyānēkōdyatāyudham ॥ 11.10 ॥

This is called upāsanaṁ or upāsana-yōgaḥ. Īśvara-svarūpam, upāsana-yōga as sādhanā.

And the third topic that Kṛṣṇa highlighted in the madhyama ṣatkam is the importance of Īśvara-anugraḥ or Īśvara-kripa, because even though prayathna or effort is very important, the human effort will fructify only when there is Īśvara-kripa or anugraha also. And of course, Īśvara-anugraḥ is always there flowing, but we have to learn to tap the Īśvara-anugraḥ which is there just as a waterfall has got electricity in potential form, but the electricity will be useful to us only when we learn to tap the electricity by the appropriate project.

Similarly, solar energy is there all the time, but we have to tap that energy. Similarly, Īśvara-anugraḥ also we have to learn to tap and every prayer is like hydro-electric project, it is Īśvara-anugraḥ project. In fact, we start the Bhagavat Gīta with a prayer, it is only to tap anugraḥ. And therefore, never underestimate the role of anugraḥ. Generally people think advaitins who are committed to dhyāna yōga; they do not have bhakthi at all, they think, they are all intellectuals, they are rational people, they think. But remember even the greatest advaitin, values the role of Īśvara anugraḥ and therefore Īśvara-kripa or anugraḥ is the third topic in the madhyama-ṣatkam. Īśvara-svarūpam, Īśvara-dhyānam, and Īśvara-anugraḥ.

Thus six topics have been highlighted. Now we have to enter the carama-ṣatkam or the anthima-ṣatkam and in this ṣatkam also we have three topics highlighted. And what are those topics?

No.1. Jīva-Īśvara-svarūpa-aikyam. The essential oneness of Jīva-svarūpam and Īśvara-svarūpam which is technically called Asi padārthaḥ. Tat Tvam Asi. If you rearrange, Tvam Tat Asi. Tvam is Jīva svarūpam, Tat is Īśvara-Svarūpam and Asi is Jīva-Īśvara-svarūpa-aikyam.

And by using the word essential-oneness, we indirectly convey that there is a superficial difference between Jīva and Īśvara. And that is why we are using the word essential-oneness and to understand this essential-oneness, we generally take the example of a wave and the ocean. Wave and ocean are superficially different, that is why is called a wave, and ocean is called an ocean. Definitely there is a difference. Ocean is vast, wave is small. Ocean is cause, wave is effect; ocean is relatively eternal, wave is ephemeral. Thus between wave and ocean, differences do exist, but all these differences are only superficial differences. If you find out the essential nature of wave, it is nothing but what? Water. If you take the wave, it is nothing but water: H₂O, H₂O Satcidānanda.

Similarly if you analyse the essential nature of ocean, it is nothing but water only. In fact there is no wave other than water, there is no wave other than water, there is only one water behind the wave and one water behind the ocean and if you shift your attention to the water aspect, if you shift your focus to the water, then you can say wave and ocean are essentially one and the same.

Similarly Vēdānta says, Jīvātma is essentially ātma. That is why it is called Jīvātma. Jīvātma is essentially the ātma, the caitanyam. Paramātma is essentially the ātma, the caitanyam. Even though superficially they are different, essentially both are one and the same; ātma the caitanyam only. This understanding by proper enquiry is called Jīvātma paramātma svarūpa aikyam; otherwise called Asi padārthaḥ. This is topic No.1 of the carama ṣatkam.

Then the second topic that we find is jñāna-yōga as meant as sādhanā which is meant to discover this essential oneness, known as Aham Brahmā Asi. Imagine the wave is a living being and the wave says that I am nothing but water. And the moment the wave understands I am water, the wave can say I do not have birth, because water does not have birth, I do not have death, and I am all-pervading throughout the ocean.

And this discovery is Aham Brahmā Asmi, which is gathered through Jñāna-Yōga ḥ. Jñāna yōgaḥ is understanding this Mahāvākyam, in English we called it the great equation. So the concept of equation is very beautiful. When do we have an equation? In mathematics or in physics or chemistry, when do we have an equation? When two things are totally different you cannot write an equation. $8 = 9$; nobody would write. Why? Because they are not the same. When two things are evidently equal, when two things are explicitly equal, then also you do not write an equation. $8 = 8$, or $9 = 9$, you do not write. When two things are equal, we do not an equation. When two things are different, we do not write an equation. When do we write an equation? When two things are seemingly different, but essentially one and the same, then we require an equation. Suppose, I write, four plus three is equal to 9-2. Think. We have forgotten our skill, using the calculator. Why do we write? Because when you look at the two sides of the equation, what I see is different. Here the numbers are 4 and 3, there are numbers are 9 and 2. Even the diagrams are different. The way you different. The numbers are different. And what about the arithmetic sign? Here we have got 4 + is there, there we have got 9 -; Therefore the numbers are different, the signs are different, therefore eyes report that they are different. And since superficially difference is experienced, I have to teach a child; the differences are superficial but essentially 4 +3 is equal to 7, 9 -2 is equal to 7, and therefore, both are 7 svarūpam. So svarūpa dṛṣṭya, they are identical.

Similarly, when you look at the Jīva, and when you look at the Īśvara, they are very very different. One is omniscient, another does not even know the spelling of omniscient. Sarvajñāḥ, alpajñāḥ. Sarvaśaktimān, Alpaśaktimān. Sarvajñāḥ means omniscient. Alpajñāḥ means with limited knowledge. Sarvaśaktimān means omnipotent and Alpaśaktimān means with limited power. Sarvagathaḥ means omnipresent and Alphagathaḥ means limited pervasion.

So Jīva and Īśvara seems to be totally different; even different is not the word, diagonally opposite. One is creator, the other is created; one is master, another is servant. But the upaniṣads say that the difference is only superficial like 4 + 3 and 9 - 2. If you make an enquiry and arrive at the essence of Jīvātma, and also arrive at the essence of paramātma or Īśvara, which is called Tvam pada śōdanam, and Tat pada śōdanam; śōdanam means vichāraḥ. You do Jīva svarūpa vicāra and Īśvara svarūpa vicāra on the lines taught by the teacher. Just as the mathematics teacher drives home the equation to the student.

Similarly, Mahāvākya upadēśa karta guru has to help the student enquire into the Jīva svarūpa vicāra and Īśvara svarūpa vicāra. Then the thrilling discovery is what, Aham Brahmā asmi. Brahmā (carefully write, or else you will write it as brahmaḥ - which means confusion). I am confusion asmi. For that discovery, vēdāntic study is not required. It is a known fact. Aham Brahmā asmi. And this is called Jīvatāma-paramātma aikyam. Otherwise called Asi padārthaḥ. And this enquiry you make to arrive at the oneness is called jñāna-yōgaḥ; otherwise called vēdānta sṛavaṇa manana nidhidhyāsana.

That is going to be highlighted in the 13th chapter, 14th chapter, 15th chapter; then the third topic, aikyam No.1, jñāna-yōga, No.2, the next topic is the importance of values. Developing satguṇās; noble virtues, are extremely important, to enjoy a mind which will be capable of absorbing the teaching. Only a dhārmic mind can absorb Vēdānta. In Kathōpaniṣad, it is said:

नाविरतो दुश्चरितान्नाशान्तो नासमाहितः ।
नाशान्तमानसो वाऽपि प्रज्ञानेनैनमाप्नुयात् ॥ Part I. Canto.II. Mantra.२४ ॥

nāviratō duścaritānnāśāntō nāsamāhitaḥ |
nāśāntamānasō vā:'pi prajñānēnainamāpnuyāt || Part I. Canto.II. Mantra.24 ||

If the mind is not a dhārmic mind, if it does not have healthy values, the mind is not a prepared mind, and without a prepared mind, if vēdāntic knowledge is given, it is like sowing the seeds on sand. On dry barren sandy ground, even if you sow the best of seeds, nothing will happen.

Therefore an intelligent person should prepare the ground before sowing the seed; Similarly, before sowing the Mahāvākya seed, make sure that you have the virtues.

Then the question is what are the virtues? Kṛṣṇa will himself enumerate them. In 13th chapter we get, 14 we get some of them, 15 we get, and in 16 and 17th fully we get virtues, we can call them satguṇāh. Satguṇāh. In Dharma śāstra, they are ātma guṇah. And if you want to present the values in Vēdāntic language, we can call them sādhanā catuṣṭaya sampathī. So values is the third topic. Aikyam, jñāna-yōga and guṇās, these are the three topics highlighted in the carama ṣatkam.

With this background, we will enter the carama ṣatkam, viz., the 13th chapter of the Gīta.

In the 13th chapter, in some books, we find a verse, in the form of Arjuna's question. In some books, 13th chapter begins with Arjuna uvāca, whereas in some other books, we get Bhagavān uvāca. Perhaps that slōkās was not there before, later perhaps somebody added, we are not going to go into details, but the question is useful and therefore I have incorporated that verse in our books; and therefore they start with Arjuna's question.

And if you include that 13th chapter would have 35 verses; otherwise they would only have 34 verses.

Verse 13.1

अर्जुन उवाच ।
प्रकृतिं पुरुषं चैव क्षेत्रं क्षेत्रज्ञमेव च ।
एतद्वेदितुमिच्छामि ज्ञानं ज्ञेयं च केशव ॥ १३.१ ॥

Arjuna uvāca |
prakṛtiṁ puruṣaṁ caiva kṣētraṁ kṣetrajñameva ca |
etadvēditumicchāmi jñānaṁ jñeyaṁ ca keśava || 13.1 ||

अर्जुन उवाच Arjuna uvāca Arjuna asked केशव keśava Oh ! Kēśava इच्छामि वेदितुम् icchāmi vēditum I desire to know, एतद् ētad the following प्रकृतिम् prakṛtiṁ prakṛti पुरुषं एव च puruṣaṁ ēva ca puruṣa also, क्षेत्रम् kṣētraṁ kṣētraṁ क्षेत्रज्ञम् kṣetrajñam kṣetrajñā also एव च ēva ca as the knower of ज्ञानम् jñānam jñānam, knowledge च ज्ञेयम् ca jñeyaṁ and jñeyaṁ (what ought to be known).

1. Arjuna asked: - Oh Lord! I desire to know the following- prakṛti, puruṣa, kṣētraṁ, kṣetrajña, jñānam, and jñeyaṁ.

Arjuna asks this question and in this question and Arjuna gives six technical words, generally used in the vēdānta. Technical words used in any science is called Paribhāṣa śabdaḥ. In English we call it jargons. And medical jargon, jargon is a technical word used in that particular science. Like in economics, they say inflation. Whereas when you talk of inflating your cycle tyre, it has a different meaning. So we have got technical words; they are called Paribhāṣa śabdaḥ; Arjuna introduces, six Paribhāṣa śabdāḥ, technical words, used in vēdānta and he asks for clarification. I have heard them and I would like to know what exactly those concepts are. So what are those six words? No.1 prakṛti; No.2. Puruṣaḥ; No.3 Kṣētraṁ; No.4 kṣetrajña; No.5 Jñānam; and No.6 Jñeyaṁ. These are the 6 words, generally they go in pairs; prakṛti and Puruṣaḥ, one pair; kṣētraṁ and kṣetrajña, another; then jñānam and jñeyaṁ. Ethat, the group of the technical words, vēdithum iccāmi. I would like to know, Hey Kēśava. Kēśava, Oh Lord Kṛṣṇa.

And here even though Arjuna has used six words, some of the words are almost synonymous. Still Arjuna perhaps is not clearly and distinctly enumerated. For our convenience, we can take them together. The word prakṛti, and the word kṣētraṁ are almost synonymous, both of them mean the material universe, which is the object of our experience. So the experienced-objective material universe is known as prakṛti and kṣētraṁ. Even though there are subtle differences, at this moment, we can take them as almost identical. And when I say material universe, it includes the invisible energies also, because even scientifically energy is another form of matter only. Matter can be converted into energy and energy can be converted into matter; that is why we have $e = mc^2$ equation. Therefore, when I say this matter, it means the whole creation in visible and invisible form.

And according to Vēdānta, it includes our mind also, because according to śāstra, mind is also a product of the subtle five elements. Therefore mind is also a form of matter only and that is why the mind is influenced by matter. When there is a change in biochemistry, when there is a change in hormones, it changes your mind and emotions; from that it is very clear that mind is also another form of subtle matter. Therefore, prakṛti or kṣētram includes the world, the mind and also the body, all of them are called prakṛti or kṣētram. Kṛṣṇa will himself will elaborate that later. Here for our convenience we can remember, matter.

Then next we can take Puruṣaḥ and Kṣētrajñam and Jñeyam. All these are almost synonymous only, there is only a subtle superficial differences; essentially all these three being caitanyam or consciousness principle. Thus prakṛti and Kṣētram means acētana tatvam; Puruṣaḥ, Kṣētrajñā and jñeyam means cētana tatvam. Matter and spirit. Inert and sentient. Thus five words we have reduced into two.

Then what is left out. There is only one word, i.e. jñānam. And the word jñānam has a popular meaning, it has several meanings. Popular meaning of the jñānam is knowledge but in the thirteenth chapter, the word jñānam is used in the meaning of virtues, or values: Satguṇās; Kṛṣṇa will enlist 20 virtues later; amānitvam, adambitvam, ahimsa, śantiḥ and Kṛṣṇa says all these virtues put together are called ethat jñānam iti prōktham, ajñānam ethōnyatha. Jñānam means virtues or values.

These are going to be the six topics or three topics, which Arjuna wants to know, which Kṛṣṇa will elaborate later. This is the background of the question. Even Kṛṣṇa is answering a question paper. Examination season. It is not only for our children, Lord Kṛṣṇa also has got: Write short notes on: I do not whether it is there now or not; we had it. Write short notes on. Only difference is we will have so many and choice will be given on any three; but poor Kṛṣṇa does not have any choice, he has to write notes on all the six! And Kṛṣṇa being a great student or master, he answers all of them beautifully! Now we will see Kṛṣṇa's answer.

श्री भगवान् ऊवच ।
इदं शरीरं कौन्तेय क्षेत्रमित्यभिधीयते ॥
एतद्यो वेत्ति तं प्राहुः क्षेत्रज्ञ इति तद्धिदः ॥ १३.२ ॥

Śrī Bhagavān uvāca

idaṃ śarīraṃ kauntēya kṣētramityabhidhīyatē|

tadyō vētti taṃ prāhuḥ kṣētrajña itī tadvidaḥ|| 13.2 ||

श्री भगवानुवाच Śrī Bhagavān uvāca Lord Kṛṣṇa said - कौन्तेय kauntēya Oh Arjuna! इदं शरीरम् idaṃ śarīraṃ This body अभिधीयते abhidhīyatē is known इति क्षेत्रम् iti kṣētram as kṣētram यः वेत्ति yaḥ vētti (there is a conscious principle) which knows एतत् ētat this (body) तद्विदः प्राहुः tadvidaḥ prāhuḥ Wise men declare तम् tam that (knower principle) इति क्षेत्रज्ञः iti kṣētrajñaḥ to be kṣētrajñā

2. Lord Kṛṣṇa said – Oh Arjuna! This body is known as kṣētram. (There is a conscious principle) which knows this (body). Wise men declare that (knower principle) to be kṣētrajñā.

When we write answers to the questions, generally, we write the answers for those questions which we know thoroughly; and wherever we want to bluff, wherever we are not sure, we will keep it for the end. What we definitely know, we write first. Similarly Kṛṣṇa also perhaps, not that Kṛṣṇa wants to bluff or something, he also rearranges the questions, perhaps for our convenience; even though Arjuna's order, Prakṛti, Puruṣaḥ, Kṣētram, Kṣētrajña, Kṛṣṇa starts with the third item, Kṣētram. Of these six items, first one Kṛṣṇa takes up is kṣētram.

What is kṣētram? Kṛṣṇa says; He Kauntēya, Kuntiputraḥ! Arjuna; this body that you are experiencing intimately, this śarīraṃ, this body is called kṣētram. So this body is called kṣētram. And why is this body known by the word kṣētram? Śankarācārya gives several meanings for the word kṣētram. Out of that we will see two meanings, which are relevant and beautiful.

First meaning is that which is subject to decay and destruction. So kṣiyathē iti kṣētram. kṣathathvāt, kṣamānatvāt kṣētram, kṣi means that which disintegrates, that which decays and ultimately dies. In fact, the very word śarīraṃ also means the same only. śīryamāṇa svabhāvatvāt śarīraṃ. Śīryathē means that which is decaying every moment. The cells, one set of cells are replaced by another and after 40 or 50, the replacement becomes slow or stops and ultimately it dies. All the words used for the physical body indicates that it is decay and destruction. And even the word dēhaḥ, is because that which is burned by, afflicted by, tormented by three-fold sorrows; trivitha tāpaiḥ dahyathē iti dēḥ. Dēḥ, means to burn. Not in the physical sense, in the figurative sense.

What are the three-fold tāpās? One tāpā is rising from inside in the form of varieties of diseases etc. that is it is internal.

And the other type of t̄apā, are coming from the outside or the environment, like dust pollution, noise pollution, carbon monoxide pollution, so many varieties of pollution they talk about, any t̄apam coming from the surrounding is one type of suffering; known as adhi bouthika t̄apam.

What comes from inside is adhyātmica t̄apam; like BP, sugar, etc. And the third one is that which is not caused by external or internal, that which is caused by the nature, or the karma.

Adhi daivika t̄apam caused by supernatural forces like thunder, lightning, or floods, all these things are the third ones.

Through these three fold t̄apas, the body is constantly tormented and therefore trivitha t̄apaiḥ dahyathē iti dēḥ. Śiryathē iti śarīram, dahyathē iti dēḥ, kṣiyathē iti; kṣiyathē iti kṣētram. And while living the three fold t̄apas or burning, and after death also, the body is burned, by another type of fire; what is that? Cremation fire. Therefore while living also it is burned (tavikkarom), after death also it is burned, therefore it is called kṣētram. This is meaning No.1 given by Śankarācārya.

The second meaning given for kṣētram is any agricultural land or field is called kṣētram. A wet land which is used for raising crops or plants is called kṣētram. And our physical body is comparable to a field. And why is the body compared to a field? Śankarācārya says when we have got seeds in our hands, we can convert the seed into the plant. But that conversion requires a land. Only through the land, by sowing the seed, it can be converted into plants. If you are keeping the seed in your bureau and after a few days, it cannot grow into a plant and therefore we require what? An intermediary medium, through which alone the seed is converted into plant which can bear fruits.

Similarly we have done lot of Puṇya-pāpa karmas in the past janma and all those karmas are like seeds and every karma can fructify into sukham and duḥkham. Just as seed can fructify into plant; karma can fructify into phalam; puṇyam-karma into sukha-phalam pāpa-karma into duḥkha-phalam but that conversion requires a medium. Just as seed requires the medium of the field to become a plant and fructify, our karma also requires a medium; what is the medium, the physical body is the medium only through the body we can reap puṇya phalam, we can reap pāpa-phalam. As long as you do not have a body, puṇyam will be there; but will never become sukham; pāpam will be there, it will never become duḥkham. The conversion requires an intermediary. Therefore Śankarācārya says Kṣētravat kṣētram. Only one word Śankarācārya says. He is very very concise, precise, and brief. He will not talk like me for half an hour. He writes only one word kṣētravat kṣētram. And therefore the physical body is kṣētram.

Even though Kṛṣṇa has defined the physical body as kṣētraṁ, we have to include two more things, which Kṛṣṇa would do later, but in this context we can add. The mind is also called kṣētraṁ. And not only the body and mind, even the external world is called kṣētraṁ. So three things; body, mind and the world. In short whatever you experience is kṣētraṁ. Whatever you experience is kṣētraṁ. The world is experienced by me; the body is experienced by me. Do you have any doubts? When the mosquito bites, you will know whether you experience the body or not. Even if you deliberately know, the hand will know. The body and pain and pleasures are experienced; the world is experienced.

In the same way, the mind is experienced by me intimately. I know the arrival of every emotion and I know the departure. I know the emotional problems. That's why counselors are having a gala time. If I do not know my emotional problem, how I will go to a psychiatrist.

So therefore, all the three, what is common to all the three? All of them are objects of experience and all of them are matter, made up of matter; world is made up of matter; body is of course made up of matter; mind also is made up of matter. All the three are objects. All the three are matter. And then all the three are subject to constant change also. The world changes all the time. There is nothing that is changeless. Some of them may change faster. Some of them may change slowly, but the change is the law of nature. And not only the world, the body changes, asti, jāyathē, vardathē, vipariṇamathē, kṣiyathē, iti śad vikarāvāt ētat śarīram. Therefore the world is savikāram, body is savikāram. What about the mind? It changes or not? My God! That is the fastest changing thing. Thank God the mind changes also. I keep on talking and your mind remains still. What use? Nothing happens in the mind. What a terrible lot will be mine? So I am expecting my words to enter your mind, through your ears, and I expect your mind, your thoughts to change. Every word should create a thought in your mind. Whether you understand or not, accept or not, mind has to undergo transformation. Thus kṣētraṁ is object; kṣētraṁ is matter. Kṣētraṁ is subject to change.

Even though kṣētraṁ consists of body and world, Kṛṣṇa here focuses upon the body only, because we have got maximum attachment to the body matter. World is also matter; body is also another lump of matter, (மண்ணாங்கட்டி mannankatti - mud pack). Only like porcelain, it is a refined mud. Even though the world is also mud, body is also mud, unfortunately, our identification with this body is so deep and therefore Kṛṣṇa wants to specifically remind that the body is also an object of experience. Iti kṣētraṁ. So topic No.1 temporarily over. Kṛṣṇa will elaborate later.

Then what is the second topic? ētat yaḥ vētti, tam kṣētrajñā iti prāhuḥ. Whatever illumines or experiences the kṣētraṁ. If the kṣētraṁ is an experienced object, every experienced object presupposes an experiencer, sentient subject. If my eyes are perceiving all of you, the very perception of every one of you pre-supposes the existence of the perceiver I. Even though the eyes themselves are not perceived by me; I do not see my eyes, even though the eyes themselves are not perceived; there is no doubt regarding the perceiver eyes, because without the perceiver eyes, there cannot be perceived forms and colours. Like every photograph that you see presupposes what? A photographer or minimum a camera. Earlier I used to talk about photographer, now they talk about an auto-camera. There is a camera. Every photo presupposes a camera, even though the camera is not in the picture. Similarly the entire kṣētram consisting of the world, body and mind is an object of experience, it presupposes what a sentient, experiencer, illuminator, conscious principle. And that conscious-principle which is called the subject, which is called the illuminator, which is called the enlivening principle, Kṛṣṇa calls Kṣētrajñā.

And who says that: tadvidah; the great jñānis who know about them, they say that it is called Kṣētrajñā. Therefore, in short Kṣētrajñā means conscious principle. Kṣētram means matter-principle; Kṣētrajñā means conscious-principle or Consciousness.

Now taking a little bit aside, what exactly is the nature of this consciousness is a fundamental question, because it is a mysterious thing which everybody tries to understand, all this sciences are even now struggling to understand what is the phenomenon of consciousness. According to vēdānta, consciousness has the following features:

Do you remember: ஞபகம் வரதா? கட கடந்து போலாமா?

1. Consciousness is not a part of the body, it is not a product of the body, is not a property of the body. Consciousness is an independent entity, according to vēdānta. So consciousness is not a part, product or property of the body.
2. Consciousness is an independent entity which pervades the body; which body? Inert body, and makes it sentient, cētanam. This is the second feature. Dēha vilakṣaṇam. It is different and pervades the body. Dēha vyāpiḥ.
3. The third feature is this consciousness which is independent principle is not limited by the boundaries of the body, which means it extends beyond the periphery of the body. Vyāpi sarvagatha; this is the third feature.
4. Then the fourth feature is: This consciousness will continue to exist, even when the body perishes. It is eternal. Previously we said all-pervading. Now we say it is eternal.

5. Final point is the surviving consciousness after the destruction of the body is not recognisable because there is no body through which it can manifest or express. For want of a manifesting medium, the surviving consciousness is not recognisable.

166 Chapter 13, Verses 03-04

ॐ

In the beginning of thirteenth chapter, Arjuna introduced 6 technical words, Paribhāṣa śabdaḥ used in the scriptures and Arjuna asked for clarifications of these terms and from the 2nd verse, Lord Kṛṣṇa begins to answer Arjuna's question. The six terms that Arjuna wanted to know are kṣētram, Kṣētrajña, Prakṛti, Puruṣaḥ, and Jñānam and Jñeyam. Of these six words, Lord Kṛṣṇa takes up the first pair of words, viz., kṣētram and Kṣētrajña and since these two terms are closely connected, Kṛṣṇa deals with both of them simultaneously.

And this is done from the 2nd verse up to 7. Verse No.2 to 7 is dealing with kṣētram and Kṣētrajña. And the word kṣētram, literally and from the standpoint of vēdānta means the entire objective universe which is experienced by us; which consists of the external world which is an object of experience, which includes the body, which is also an object of my experience, and finally, it includes the mind also, which is an object of experience. Thus the world, plus the body, plus the mind, the whole thing is kṣētram.

The only difference is among these three, the world is a little bit away from us, as it were, and the body and mind are intimately associated with me, the observer and therefore, the body and mind appear to me to my integral part. I have given you the example before: When somebody asks, what are the things in front of me, I enumerate various things, all of you, the mike, the book, the clip, the watch, the desk, this cloth on the desk, I will enumerate everything and I forgot to include one thing which is very much different from me, which is in front of me, which is very much an object and which is generally not enumerated, viz., what is that? My spectacle. The spectacles is very much part of this world, I have got it from the shop, but once I put on this spectacles and once it becomes an instrument of observation, the instrument is generally included in the subject itself.

From this we come to know, an important law, "An object which serves as an instrument, is generally taken as the subject itself". An object, which serves as an instrument, is integrally connected with the subject and therefore generally we include these spectacles in the observer itself. But the fact is it is also an object only.

In the same way, Vēdānta says, the body is also another instrument for my observation of the world, the mind is also another instrument for the observation of the world, but both of them also are an object different from me, because instrument is different from the one who is behind the instrument. And that is why when I am using the body and mind, during the waking and dream states, I experience the external world, when in deep sleep state, I am no more operating through the body mind complex, I do not experience the world. So body is one spectacle as it were, one glass of the spectacle, mind is another one; when both of them are used, I experience the world; when both of them are kept aside, when do you keep aside? ~ during sleep state ~ I do not function through them, there is no world of experience. And therefore Vēdānta says: body is also an object, mind is also an object, but both of them serve as an instrument and therefore they appear to be an integral part of the subject. And since body is also an object, mind is also an object; both of them should be included in kṣētraṁ , the objective universe.

Thus kṣētraṁ consists of three portions, the world, the body and the mind. And of these three, Kṛṣṇa enumerates the body alone in this verse, because our identification with the body is stronger and therefore Kṛṣṇa highlights the body part in this verse. Later, Kṛṣṇa himself will elaborate the kṣētraṁ in which he will include the mind as well as the external world.

And therefore brief kṣētraṁ in this verse elaborate kṣētraṁ in the later verse No.6 and 7. That is Mahabhūtān Ahaṁkāra, and icchā dvēṣaḥ sukhaṁ duḥkhaṁ, their Kṛṣṇa elaborates the kṣētraṁ, here briefly enumerates only one item, what is that? The body is kṣētraṁ, and He also pointed out Kṣētrajña is something which is different from the body, which pervades the body and which makes the material body a live, living being. And that invisible principle, like the invisible electricity, which makes the fan go around, which makes the bulb bright, which makes the mike magnify my sound, that invisible principle behind the visible mike, behind the visible fan, behind the visible radio, behind the visible electricity instrument, that is the electricity principle; in the same way, behind the physical material body, the invisible principle is the chaitanya tatvam. And that invisible chaitanya tatvam is called Kṣētrajña; jñaḥ means the awaring principle, the experiencing principle, the observing principle, the sentient principle.

And therefore, the first job in Vēdānta is understanding that the individual is a mixture of two things, the body and consciousness. Just as recognising the fan is a mixture of two principles, one is the visible fan part, and the invisible electricity part. Mere electricity will you give you brief; if you have doubt, open the fan and see; mere fan cannot give you breeze, what gives you breeze is neither the fan nor the electricity but a mixture of both.

Similarly the functioning individual, the live individual, neither the mere body, nor the mere consciousness. Consciousness by itself cannot transact; body by itself cannot transact, the transacting entity is a mixture of body and Consciousness. And here Kṛṣṇa calls them Kṣētrajña and kṣētraṁ. In the 2nd chapter of the Bhagavad-Gīta, they were called dēha and dēhi. Do you remember?

देहिनोऽस्मिन्यथा देहे कौमारं यौवनं जरा ।
तथा देहान्तरप्राप्तिर्धीरस्तत्र न मुह्यति ॥ २- १३ ॥

dēhinō'smin yathā dēhē kaumāraṁ yauvanaṁ jarā |
tathā dēhāntaraprāptirdhīrastatra na muhyati || 2.13 ||

न जायते म्रियते वा कदाचिन्, नायं भूत्वा भविता वा न भूयः ।
अजो नित्यः शाश्वतोऽयं पुराणो, न हन्यते हन्यमाने शरीरे ॥२-२०॥

na jāyatē mriyatē vā kadācit
nāyaṁ bhūtvā bhavitā vā na bhūyaḥ |
ajō nityaḥ śāśvatō'yaṁ purāṇō
na hanyatē hanyamānē śarīrē || 2.20 ||

You have to remember all those verses, second-chapter verse No.12 to 25. Go through the whole section. And this dēha and dēhi mixture is otherwise called ātma and anātma. And not only that by using the word 'ātma', the scriptures convey an important idea.

Generally we tend to identify with the body only. I am the body is our general approach, because the date of birth of the body, I take as my date of birth, the growth of the body I take as my growth. Therefore generally the word I is used for the body and after the study of Vēdānta, what we generally say is that "Now I know that I am the body and behind me there is an eternal consciousness". We will not be telling that earlier.

Before Vēdāntic study, I am the body alone is the understanding, after Vēdāntic study, I add one more statement, I am the body and in me there is an ātma. Kṛṣṇa says that is not the right approach. You should not say that I am the body and in me there is ātma. You have to train your mind. That is called nidhidhyāsanam. Spend weeks, months and years. And what should be the new training "I am the consciousness because I am conscious-principle and body is an incidental medium through which I am transacting with the world".

Therefore instead of saying I am the body with an ātma, I should learn to say I am the ātma with an incidental body. And since the body is only an incidental medium, I am willing to accept the fact that this medium is bound to go back to the kṣētraṁ, the external world. It has come from the world, I am using it temporarily, and I have to give it back to the world and even when I give the kṣētram back to the world, I the Kṣētrajña the invisible consciousness will continue to survive.

This shift of the identification from kṣētram to Kṣētrajña is called aparōkṣa-jñānam or aparōkṣikaraṇam. As long as I say that I have an ātma, it is called parōkṣa-jñānam, the moment I say I am the ātma, it is called aparōkṣa-jñānam. 'Have' to 'Am', is parōkṣa-jñānam to aparōkṣa-jñānam. This is the essence of the 2nd verse.

क्षेत्रज्ञं चापि मां विद्धि सर्वक्षेत्रेषु भारत ॥
क्षेत्रक्षेत्रज्ञयोर्ज्ञानं यत्तज्ज्ञानं मतं मम ॥ १३.३ ॥

Kṣētrajñam cāpi māṃ viddhi sarvakṣētrēṣu bhārata |
kṣētrakṣētrajñayōrjñānaṃ yattajjñānaṃ mataṃ mama || 13.3 ||

भारत bhārata Oh ! Arjuna, the descendant of Bharata अपि च api ca moreover विद्धि viddhi know क्षेत्रज्ञम् kṣētrajñam kṣētrajñam,(the knower of the field, body), माम् māṃ to be Myself सर्वक्षेत्रेषु sarvakṣētrēṣu obtaining in all bodies तद् ज्ञानम् tad jñānam that knowledge यद् क्षेत्रक्षेत्रज्ञयोः yad kṣētrakṣētrajñayōḥ which deals with kṣētram and kṣētrajñā, ज्ञानम् jñānam is (true) knowledge मम मतम् mama matam this is my teaching.

3. And know Me as the kṣētrajña in all the kṣētras, O Bharata. The knowledge of kṣētra and kṣētrajña is deemed by Me as true Knowledge.

Now Kṛṣṇa goes to the next step of knowledge. Each step is a solid. We have to take years to assimilate. We will take only a minute to hear, but it will take years to assimilate. What are the steps we have seen till now?

First I said I am the body, that is where we begin. Now what is the second step? I am the body backed by another principle called consciousness; this is the second step. What is the third step? In fact I am not the body with consciousness, but I am the consciousness with an incidental (whenever you say body, keep practising saying it as 'incidental body'.) incidental body/borrowed body. So that we will not have ownership; Bhagavān has allowed me to use it, he can take up; the modern law of trouble with vacating the tenant who stays for 15 or 20 years is not there; Do not apply that principle with God, he will forcibly vacate you from the tenement. Normally, he will say; he will also bring gūndās, called yama dhūtas. He will forcibly take. So therefore the third step of knowledge, I am the consciousness with an incidental body.

Now we are going to the fourth step. Very important step. What is that?

I have now known and hopefully assimilated that I am the consciousness behind this body. So body is the container, I am the content, the tenant, the invisible consciousness. If I look upon myself as consciousness within my body, what should be you? If I am consciousness within my body, what about you? You are the consciousness in your body. So Rāma is the consciousness in Rāma-śārīram; Kṛṣṇa is the dēhi in Kṛṣṇa-śārīram. The Dēhi in Kṛṣṇa-Śārīram, any other person, Lakṣmi is the consciousness in the Lakṣmi-śārīram; mosquito is the consciousness within mosquito-śārīram; Indra is the consciousness in the Indra-śārīram; in fact, each one of us, is, nothing but, the consciousness in the respective body.

Now the question is: How many consciousnesses are there? This is the question: How many consciousnesses are there? Generally our conclusion will be what, each one is the consciousness the body; therefore, within my body there is one consciousness; and within your body there is another consciousness. Therefore as many bodies are there, so many consciousnesses also must be there. This will be our general conclusion.

It is not only our conclusion, this is the conclusion of certain philosophers like Sāṅkya; Sāṅkya philosopher says, each body has one one ātma. And therefore how many ātma are there? As many bodies are there, so many ātmās are there, the Sāṅkya philosopher contents.

Here, what Lord Kṛṣṇa says you have to note the difference. What is the difference? The container bodies are many, but the Consciousness within is the same in everyone. The bodies are many, but the dēhi, the Kṣētrajña the ātma the consciousness is the same in every one. And not only is the consciousness in every body, we should also know that the consciousness is there in between the two bodies also. The only thing is consciousness is recognisable in the body because life is manifest. In between consciousness is existent, but not recognisable, why? The bodies are not there in between to manifest or recognise the consciousness. Like electricity is recognisable in fan No.1, recognisable means what? Not physically visible, I can appreciate the presence of electricity in fan No.1, and also in fan No.2, in between through the electric cable, electricity is flowing, but I do not have any instrument to recognise the electricity.

Or to give you another example, you can recognise the light in my first finger, two fingers are there, you can recognise the light in the second finger; though finger No.1 is visible and though finger No 2 is visible, you recognise the light reflected in finger No.1 and also in finger No.2; between the two fingers, light is there, or not? Light is there or not? Light is there or not? Here also doubt comes. It appears as though the light (I am not talking about the bulb), is as though not there, but remember, the light principle prakāśaka is in-between also but not recognised because there is no object to reflect. Suppose I finger keep a finger between the two fingers, along with the reflecting medium, the finger, you will recognise the light. Above my head also light is there, the moment I keep my hand, you can recognise. When I take away the light, the light above my head, you do not recognise; you recognise the light on the screen alone.

Now Vēdānta says that consciousness pervades everywhere, Wherever bodies are there; consciousness is manifest as life principle, where bodies are not there, consciousness is not manifest. And therefore, there is only one all-pervading consciousness which is manifest in some places, and which is unmanifest in some other places; manifest or unmanifest, the consciousness is sarvagathaḥ.

This is the challenge of science also. What is consciousness? And where is consciousness? Vēdānta gives the answer; consciousness is different from matter and pervades all over; matter is only a medium for the expression of consciousness. When matter goes away, consciousness does not die, but its expression dies. OK.

Then the next step, we have to go, to understand this verse is. Even though this consciousness is all pervading, this Consciousness is known by two different names, based on the angle from which you look at the consciousness. Just like one member of the family is known by different names based on the angle from which the person is seeing. Your own child will call you parent; whereas your own parents will not call you parent; they will call you child. So thus person remaining the same, one person looks at this person as husband, another as brother, another as son, another as father. Similarly, consciousness has two names, based on the angle from which it is looked at.

When the consciousness is looked from the stand point of a single individual body, it is called jīvātma. Ātma, the consciousness, looked from the stand point of the individual body, making enlivening my body, my mind, experiencing my surroundings, is consciousness is called jīvātma.

Whereas the very same consciousness looked from the standpoint of all the bodies, otherwise called the samaṣṭi, the total, the very same ātma is called paramātma; or paramātma. So from my microcosmic angle, the consciousness is called jīvātma, vyaṣṭi dṛṣṭya jīvātma, from macrocosmic angle, samaṣṭi dhṛṣṭya it is paramātma.

And suppose you negate my microcosm and macrocosm. Negate vyaṣṭi and samaṣṭi. It is neither jīvātma nor paramātma. Then what is it? Ātma. Therefore consciousness is ātma, the adjective 'jīvā' is looking at consciousness from individual angle, the adjective 'parama' is given looking at it from the total angle. When the Prime Minister or the President of the angle is looked at the stand point of his family, he is called householder, but when the very same person, occupies the Presidential office, or Prime minister's office, the very same person is called the Prime Minister or President. What is the difference in his weight? As a householder what is his weight. 75 kgs. And as the PM what is his weight. 75000 tons? Because he is PM!!, the person is the same, to name from the standpoint of the observation. Therefore, jīvātma is ātma, paramātma is ātma; both are essentially one and the same. This recognition is called jīvātma-paramātma-aikyam.

So what is my knowledge now? I am the ātma. When I, the consciousness, am functioning through an individual body, I am called a jīvaḥ and the very same I, the consciousness, manifesting through the whole creation, I am called the paramātma and when I forget the body, and forget the world also; when I forget the body and the world also, I am what? Neither jīvātma nor paramātma, but ātma. So this is called jīvātma-paramātma-aikya-jñānam.

And the example we generally give in the śāstra is like seeing, the essential oneness of the wave and the ocean. When water is looked at from the standpoint of a small name and form, it is called a wave; when the very same water is looked at from the standpoint of total name and form, it is called ocean, but remove the wave name and form, remove the ocean name and form, what is the essence? Wave is water; ocean is water; there is only water. This is called jīvātma-paramātma aikya-jñānam or ātma-ekatva-jñānam.

And in this third verse, Kṛṣṇa is revealing this fact and therefore this verse is called Mahāvākya slōkaḥ. A very very very very important verse. Śankarācārya a very elaborate commentary running to pages, and the sub-commentators write still more elaborate commentary, if you take the commentaries and sub-commentaries, this one verse itself, you can make a voluminous book. What is the definition of Mahāvākya? Any statement, which reveals the essential oneness of jīvātma and paramātma. So jīvātma paramātma aikya bōdhaka vākya. Mahāvākya.

Now look at the verse. Kṛṣṇa says: Arjuna carefully understand and assimilate. What should you understand? Kṣētrajñāṁ māṁ viddhi. Kṣētrajña, means jīvātma, that is the consciousness obtaining in one body, and Mām viddhi, who says, Kṛṣṇa says māṁ, means Me, here the word Me means the Paramātma. Therefore, jīvātmānam, paramātvatvēna viddhi. May you know Kṣētrajña jīvātma as Kṛṣṇa-Paramātma. You know the Kṣētrajña-jīvātma as Kṛṣṇa-paramātma. The Kṣētrajña-jīvātma body is different; Kṛṣṇa-Paramātma's body is different, containers are different; but the content consciousness is one and the same. The bulbs are different; one is the bedroom bulb, 0 watt, another is the search light or whatever it is; bulbs are different, electricity behind is only one. Do not ask me, ātma is electricity? It is comparable to electricity; it is not exactly electricity. Therefore Kṛṣṇa says kṣētrajñāṁ māṁ viddhi, know Me to be paramātma.

And where is the paramātma? Sarvakṣētrēṣu bhāratha; which is the consciousness obtaining in all the other bodies. And if I look at myself and yourself as consciousness, I can say I am you and you are me. From body's standpoint, I cannot say. My body is different, your body is different; from mind standpoint I can never say; my mind is different; my own emotions, your mind has your emotions, from intellect standpoint also I cannot say, my knowledge and ignorance are different; your ignorance and knowledge are different; but when I come to the experiencer-consciousness, I can say I am you and you are me. Saḥ aham asmi and Aham saḥ asmi. That is the well-known sōham-mantra. Sōham Aham Saḥ. That is why it got the name, hamsa mantra. Hamsaḥ means Aham Saḥ, I am that paramātma. I am Brahamāsmi is the revelation.

And then Kṛṣṇa says: this knowledge is a very very useful knowledge and therefore this is the real knowledge to be acquired by all people. All other types of knowledge can be acquired but they are really worthless; because they do not improve the quality of life; Previously miserable BA. Now previous miserable MA. Now miserable Ph.d. The degrees go on changing. The misery continues to be same. Whereas this alone is 'the real knowledge', which changes the very quality of your life.

Therefore Kṛṣṇa says kṣētra kṣētrajña yōh jñānam, this knowledge, regarding the kṣētra and kṣētrajña, tat jñānam, that alone is the real knowledge. In Muṇḍaka upaniṣad this knowledge is called parā vidya and all other types of knowledge are called aparā vidya. And Śankarācārya tells elsewhere aparāvidyā hi avidyā. Aparā-vidya all other forms of knowledge, are as good as ignorance only. தெரிஞதும் தெரியாததும் ஒன்றே; Therinjathum, theriyathathum onne.

Now the question will be, how do you see that this knowledge will make or bring about a quality change in the life? How does it change my life?

Again go back to the example. Imagine there are two waves, both of them are like waves, imagine they are living being waves, they can know, they can talk, and one wave, knows I am a wave. Whereas the other wave knows I am water. What difference this knowledge brings about in the second wave? You imagine. As long as the first wave considers that I am a wave, its thinking will be what? I am just born out of the ocean, and I am growing, because the wave becomes bigger and bigger, dēhinōsmin, kaumāram, yauvanam, jarā, etc. ripple, wave, bigger wave.

And as even the wave is growing, it is also aware of the fact that I am going to towards the shore and once I go as a wave, will be destroyed. Therefore, I am a mortal finite entity is the thought that the wave will have. As long as it thinks itself as a wave. As long as there is a conclusion that I am mortal, the insecurity feeling is unavoidable. The wave, as long as it thinks it is a wave, it can never get out of insecurity and all its actions are driven by the sense of insecurity. In the same way, as long as I am going to think I am the body, I am a mortal individual, every moment of my life is driven by the sense of insecurity. In fact, the very admission to the school and my education is based on the career opportunity and all the counseling are based on what? In which you can earn more? If possible with minimum work or no work. I never bother about which subject I like. I do not want to take a course that I will enjoy. Enjoyment is not the consideration, my inclination is not the consideration; all my activities from LKG is based on the consideration which will give me a good job, with a five-year or six-figure salary. Even after I enter into a job, I have served; wonderful rapo has been created, if there is another job which will give me more money, headhunters; I heard; it was not in our times. There are people who are ready to pull you out for better salary. And therefore loyalty or relationship all I do not care, only consideration, which will give me better retirement benefits `even before joining the job ~ what do you mean by that? - I want security.

And often we get children, only as an investment; that in future, if I pay through my nose, the children will hopefully take care of me in the old age. And when that becomes doubtful, I have to go to old age home. Everything you see; all we are running after money, remember, money is seen is an equivalent of security. Money and security are synonymous for an ignorant person. Ignorant means Vēdāntically ignorant person. Vēdānta calls a person a saṁsāri, saṁsāri is defined as one, who sees money as security. And I will see the money as security because, now I am insecure. Now I am insecure, because I am the body.

Whereas imagine the other wave, the enlightened wave, the jīvanmuktha wave. It is not bothered because this wave is nothing but a name and a form; name and form is subject to destruction; nobody can hold on to that; I am not attached to the incidental nāma rūpa, I know I am water, I will be water, I was water, and I the water am not destroyed. Even during summer, when it is evaporated, when I become invisible to people, then I exist in what form? In the form of steam; in the form of water vapour, I exist. And therefore, the difference between knowledge and ignorance is: the difference between security and insecurity.

And according to Vēdānta, this knowledge alone will give security; other than this knowledge whatever you do, there will be the lingering sense of insecurity. All the others will give a false sense of security, a fake sense of security; therefore do you want security; gain this knowledge. If you think that there are sources of security, Vēdānta does not want to contradict you; Vēdānta tells try: Just go and have a merry go round, either through money or status, or position or possession or relationship. Try all of them, and then when you know and you are convinced that none of them will give you real security; then you come to vēdānta.

In fact, when you come to vēdānta, after such a maturity, then your listening also will be intense. Or else, vēdānta will be a hobby. In the home it is a noisy, because of TV and I can sleep peacefully in the vēdānta class. I just joked and do not take seriously.!! Vēdānta gives you to a challenge. Try to find security anywhere else. And still now the challenge is Open and Kṛṣṇa says this is the knowledge, which removes the sense of insecurity.

And just one more aside point. OK. You say that nothing else will give you security, Then do you mean say that Vēdāntic knowledge will give me security? It is just a next step. Not very important in this context. But I could not by-pass. Vēdānta says, in fact Vēdānta also does not give you security. In fact Vēdānta also does not give you security.

Vēdānta reveals the fact that you do not require any security from outside. In your real nature, you are ever secure. Therefore, Vēdānta does not give security, vēdānta removes the sense of insecurity. Vēdānta removes the sense of insecurity, and that is why those jñānis and many of them are sanyāsis and they do not have anything to hold on to, they do not have their own family, they do not have bank account, they do not have any other possession, they do not have a kitchen for food, they do not know from where the next meal will come; they must be the most insecure people, but you look at those jñānis, they are more secure than all the others with possessions. In fact greater the possession, you require more security guards. Therefore Kṛṣṇa says: kṣētra kṣētrajña yōh jñānam, this knowledge between the kṣētra and the knowledge of the kṣētra and Kṣētrajña is the real knowledge. And this is called ātma jñānam.

तत्क्षेत्रं यच्च यादृक् च यद्विकारि यतश्च यत् । स च यो यत्प्रभावश्च तत्समासेन मे शृणु ॥ १३.४ ॥

tat kṣētram yacca yādr̥ka yadvikāri yataśca yat |
sa ca yō yatprabhāvaśca tatsamāsēna mē śṛṇu || 13.4 ||

यत् च तत् क्षेत्रम् yat ca tat kṣētram what is that kshetram? यादृक् yādr̥ka ca च what are its properties or nature? यद्विकारि yadvikāri what effect or modification is it? यत् च यतः yat ca yataḥ which effect (comes out) of which cause? यः च सः yaḥ ca saḥ What is that (kṣētrajña)? च यत्प्रभावः ca yatprabhāvaḥ and of what glory or power is it? शृणु तत् śṛṇu tat hear that मे me from Me, समासेन samāsēna briefly.

4. What is that kṣētram? Of what nature is it? Of what effects is it? Which effect (comes out) of which cause? What is that (kṣētrajña)? And of what glory is it? – Hear that from Me briefly..

Kṛṣṇa says that in the previous two verses that is the 2nd and 3rd, Arjuna I have briefly defined kṣētram and Kṣētrajña, and it is too brief and therefore I will elaborate these two topics a little bit. And therefore Kṛṣṇa gives an introduction for that in the 4th verse. Hey Arjuna, listen to the following thing: yat tat, kṣētram . What exactly is the kṣētra, which we have seen as what? The objective physical body.

Now he says I will give you a comprehensive list of what includes the kṣētram? What all are included in kṣētram? Tat kṣētram yacca yādrk ca, what is the nature of kṣētram, the objective universe, kṣētram, you can roughly translate, the objective universe, as different from the subjective experiencer. So what is kṣētram? First topic.

Second topic what is the nature of that kṣētram.

Then the next topic: yadvikāri, yadvikāri means what are the causes out of which various effects are born. So the details regarding the causes, Kāraṇam.

Yataśca yat; what are the effects born out of various causes? Yadvikāri refers to kāraṇam, yataśca yat refers to kāryam. One refers to the cause and the other to the effect. The idea is the whole objective universe consists of cause-effect chain only.

If you take any individual, I am the effect and my parents are the cause. And the parent themselves are the effect, and their parents are the cause. Thus anything you take, it is an effect of something, and it is the cause of something else. Therefore what are the causes, and what are the effects? What is kṣētram? What is his nature? What are the causes included in the kṣētram and what are the effects included in the kṣētram; all these are details of the kṣētram.

And not only that, some more details of the kṣētrajña also Kṛṣṇa wants to give. Therefore he says; sa cha yaha. What exactly the kṣētrajña? Some more features of kṣētrajña. What is kṣētrajña, the consciousness principle? Previously Kṛṣṇa has only briefly defined consciousness is what? The experiencer of the universe. This is a very brief definition. Kṛṣṇa wants to deal with more details regarding consciousness Therefore, what is consciousness or awareness.

And yatprabhāvaśca; and what are the glories, the features, the great features of the kṣētrajña? So that we will be seeing later, that consciousness is indivisible, consciousness is beyond time; consciousness is beyond space, consciousness is not subject to change; all these are different and important features. In fact, one scientist beautifully says: Consciousness is that, which is not subject to the laws of the creation. All the physical and chemicals laws of the creation cannot influence the consciousness principle. And he says it cannot be located because it does not have a location, which means that it is beyond time and space. Those features, I will give you later, Kṛṣṇa introduces thus. tatsamāsēna mē śrṇu. May you listen to that, which we will see in the next class.

Hari Om

167 Chapter 13, Verses 05-08

ॐ

In the beginning of the 13th chapter, Arjuna asked for clarification of six technical words used in the scriptures, Prakṛti, Puruṣaḥ, kṣētram, kṣētrajña, Jñānam and Jñēyam. Of these terms, Lord Kṛṣṇa has taken up two terminologies; kṣētram and Kṣētrajña; which starts from verse No.2 onwards and continues up to verse No.7. First he defined the two words, kṣētram and Kṣētrajña. Kṣētram means the physical body which represents any experienced object in the creation. Kṛṣṇa defined kṣētram as the body and the body represents any experienced object in the creation and then he defined kṣētrajña as the experiencer subject. In short, I am kṣētrajña and whatever I experience is kṣētram.

And having defined kṣētram and kṣētrajña, now Kṛṣṇa wants to give a simple elaboration of these two words; for which he gave the introduction in the 4th verse. In the 2nd and 3rd verse, he gave the definition of kṣētra and kṣētrajña and he now wants to give a little elaboration of these two words for which Kṛṣṇa gives an introduction in the 4th verse, which I introduced in the last class.

Tatkṣētram yacca yādṛk ca yadvikāri yataśca yat. Arjuna may you know what is objective universe, may you know what is the nature of the objective universe; may you know what are the products belonging to the objective universe, and may you also know the various causes which produce these effects.

And therefore what is kṣētram, what is the nature of the kṣētram, what is that part of the kṣētram which is called effect and what is that part of the kṣētram which is called the cause, and from this we get a corollary that all the causes come under kṣētram and all the effects also come under kṣētram .

So that means all the causes and effect, the entire, kārya kāraṇa prapañca comes under kṣētram, from which we get a very important corollary, which Kṛṣṇa does not mention but we have to note aside, what is that, if cause and effect come under kṣētram; kṣētrajña, the consciousness-principle should be other than cause and effect. That kṣētrajña is kārya-kāraṇa-vilakṣaṇam is an indirect hint that Kṛṣṇa is giving here. Therefore yat vikāri what are the effects? Yataśca yat what are the causes from which these effects come. All these different features of kṣētram, I am going to mention now and in the 2nd line Kṛṣṇa says: Hey Arjuna, not only I am going to briefly elaborate, I do not know what is brief elaboration, what is kṣētram and I am also going to elaborate on kṣētrajña.

So He tells in the 2nd line, saḥ ca yaḥ saḥ; saḥ here means kṣētrajña. I will also tell you what is kṣētrajña, because previously I have given only definition; hereafter I am going to give an explanation of the definition. Not only I will elaborate on kṣētrajña, yat-prabhāvaśca and I will also talk about the prabhāva of kṣētrajña. Prabhāva means glory. Vibhūtiḥ, Mahimā is called prabhāvaḥ, the glories of kṣētrajña also I am going to elaborate in the following verses, Arjuna may you learn it very carefully.

And why should Arjuna learn very carefully. Reason has been given in the 2nd verse. In the 2nd verse, kṣētrakṣētrajñayōr jñānam yattajjñānam matām mama. The knowledge of these two alone, is the real knowledge. That is the liberating knowledge; all other disciples of knowledge are not really worthwhile, this knowledge alone is worthwhile, and therefore may you listen to very carefully. Tatsamāsēna. Samāsēna; briefly I am going to mention. śṛṇu. Listen carefully.

Having given the introduction, now Kṛṣṇa wants to enter the elaboration and before that, one more verse Kṛṣṇa uses to glorify the topic. Verse No.5.

Verse 13.5

ऋषिभिर्बहुधा गीतं छन्दोभिर्विविधैः पृथक् ।
ब्रह्मसूत्रपदैश्चैव हेतुमद्भिर्विनिश्चितैः ॥१३.५॥

[ṛṣibhirbahudhā gītam chandōbhirvividhaiḥ pṛthak |
brahmasūtrapadaiścaiva hētumadbhirviniścitaiḥ || 13.5 ||](#)

गीतम् gītam (this has been taught) ऋषिभिः ṛṣibhiḥ by the sages बहुधा bahudhā variously पृथक् pṛthak (this has been revealed) distinctively विविधैः छन्दोभिः vividhaiḥ chandōbhiḥ through various Vēdic hymns हेतुमद्भिः hētumadbhiḥ (This has been taught) through logical च एव विनिश्चितैः ca ēva viniścitaiḥ and well-ascertained ब्रह्मसूत्रपदैः brahmasūtrapadaiḥ upaniṣadic statements which reveal Brahman.

5. (This) has been taught by the sages variously. (This has been revealed) distinctly through various Vēdic hymns. (This has been taught) through logical and well- ascertained Upaniṣadic statements which reveal Brahman.

This topic of kṣētra and kṣētrajña is so important is that all the scriptural texts have talked about this because kṣētra includes the entire material universe; kṣētrajña is consciousness; the whole creation is a mixture of spirit and matter only. Therefore, if you have really understood what is matter, the inert principle, and if you have really understood what is the spirit, the conscious principle, you have understood the whole creation.

In fact, all the scientists claim that they are working for the theory of everything. They call it TOE, and what is TOE, theory of everything, they want to come to one theory which will explain every phenomenon in the creation. Still this theory is eluding the scientists. Vēdānta has given the theory of everything. What is that? Everything is nothing but consciousness plus matter. Therefore, scriptures deal only with these two topics.

Therefore Kṛṣṇa says ṛṣibhiḥ gītām, all the ṛṣis have through their scriptural work have sung about or talked about only this topic, kṣētra-kṣētrajña vivēka Jñānam. So through their literature, like purāṇa, sūtra, etc. they talk about this only.

And not only they talk about, vividhaiḥ chandōbhiḥ, all the Vēdic mantrās, chandaḥ, mantrāḥ, through the various Vēdic mantrās also only this subject matter has been dealt with. Therefore chandōbhiḥ vividhaiḥ pṛthak idam, we have to supply the verb idam; these two have been talked about in the vēdās also.

Suppose they talk about various lōkās, it will come under what topic. Kṣētram only. And all the material sciences like astronomy and atomic science again deal with kṣētram only. If you are talking about anatomy, physiology, etc. and various sub-divisions of those sciences, again kṣētram only. If you deal with psychology, it is again kṣētram only. Therefore you have to talk about only one of these two.

Therefore all the vēdās have talked about it only; how? Distinctly pṛthak, that pṛthak is important because science has not been able to understand the relationship between matter and consciousness. So whether consciousness is distinct from matter; is it identical with matter; is it part of the matter; is it a temporary phenomenon, epiphenomena; epi means temporary, of matter, still consciousness-matter-relationship is a mystery for all branches of science. In fact, the mystery is so deep, that the even do not know in which branch of science it would come. Whether it should become part of psychology or neurology or this or that, they do not know; whereas Vēdānta has distinguished matter and consciousness and they have distinctly talked about this; pṛthak means what? Distinctly.

What is this distinction? Consciousness satyam; matter mithya and I am (this is important) consciousness satyam; consciousness is the reality; matter is mithya, the unreal principle, and who am I, I am the consciousness principle, this has been talked about in the vēdās.

Not only has this been dealt with in the vēdās, brahma sūtra padais chaiva. Brahma sūtra is a literature written by Vyāsācārya in which all the upaniṣads have been logically analysed. Brahma sūtra is logical analysis of the philosophical portion of the vēdās; whereas we have a set of purva mīmāmsa sūtra, which is a logical analysis of the ritualistic portion of the vēdās, whereas brahma sūtra is the logical analysis of the philosophical portion or the Upaniṣadic portion of the vēdās. The upaniṣadic portion of the vēda is called the vēda antha portion.

Therefore, Brahma sūtra has another name, Vēdāṅga sūtrāni, and since this is done by Vyāsācārya, it is called Vyāsa sūtrani; they are called sūtram because they are in the form of brief capsule statements called aphorisms. So Sūtram means aphorisms. Aphorisms means brief packed statements. Athathō brahma jijñāsa is one sūtram. Janmādyasya yadah is another sūtra. Śāstra yōnitvat tattū samanvayōt īkṣathē naśabdam. All brief statements. But it has got packed ideas. And through these sūtras, Vyāsācārya logically analyses the upaniṣadic teachings, whether consciousness is part of matter; different from matter; or product of matter; because different systems of philosophy presents different things.

Nyāya Śāstra says that consciousness is a property of matter.

Sāṅkya philosophers say that consciousness is a distinct entity from matter. Thus there are several views, Vyāsācārya analyses all of them and establishes the vēdāntic conclusion.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa says that this is not an ordinary topic this is a very very significant topic. Therefore brahmasutrapadaīḥ, through the words of Brahma sūtra.

And what type of brahma sūtra they are? Hētumadbhiḥ, which are full of reasoning; logical analysis of various views.

And viniścitaīḥ and which is conclusive well ascertained logically established. There are 555 sūtras. In the Brahma sūtra, divided into four chapters, sixteen sections, one hundred and ninety two topics. And Śankarācārya has written a pioneering commentary on it; and we have got commentaries, sub commentaries, subsubsub commentaries,.... commentaries. Somebody gave me a 4 volume work on Brahma sūtra. I think I have told you. Each one like a pillow. And having 9 commentaries on brahma sūtra; and then I was wondering whether to keep it or not, already place problem, and at the end of the fourth book, I saw what is written. It is written thus ends the fourth sūtra; enna? So this is our tradition. You can study and study and study, you will never complete it;

अनन्तशास्त्र बहुवेदितव्यम्
अल्पस्य काला भवश्च विघ्नाः ।
यत् सारभूतम् तत् उपसितव्यम् हम्सो यता क्षीरमिवांभु मिस्रात् ॥ anantaśāstra bahuvēditavyam alpasya kālā bhahavasca vighnāḥ | yat sārabhūtam tat upasitavyam

hamsō yatā kṣīramivāmbhu misrāt ||

We can never complete the scriptural study. Therefore generally try to study four sūtras; that itself is a great task.

Anyway that is all aside. Here brahma-sūtra-padaīścaiva hētu-madbhir-viniścitaīḥ. We have only one topic, kṣētra-kṣētrajña vivēka. And therefore, Arjuna carefully listen. Do not sleep, He says:

Verse 13.6 and verse 13.7

महाभूतानि mahābhūtāni the five subtle-elements अहङ्कारः ahaṅkāraḥ ahankāra बुद्धिः buddhiḥ mahat अव्यक्तम् एव च avyaktam ēva ca prakṛti च दश इन्द्रियाणि daśa indriyāṇi the ten sense organs, एकं च ekam ca the mind, च पञ्च इन्द्रियगोचराः ca pañca indriyagōcarāḥ the five gross elements), इच्छा icchā desire द्वेषः dvēṣaḥ hatred सुखम् sukhaṁ pleasure दुःखम् duḥkhaṁ pain सङ्घातः saṅghātaḥ the body-mind complex चेतना cētanā sentiency धृतिः dhṛtiḥ fortitude एतत् ētat all this उदाहृतम् udāhṛtam enumerated above समासेन samāsēna briefly क्षेत्रम् kṣētram is kṣētram, सविकारम् savikāram together with its modifications

6 &7. The five subtle-elements, ahankara, mahat, Prakṛti. The ten sense organs, the mind, and the five gross elements, desire, hatred, pleasure, pain, the body-mind complex, sentiency, fortitude --- all this, enumerated above briefly, is kṣētram, together with its modifications.

So Kṛṣṇa elaborates on the topic of kṣētram, namely the namely objective universe. And in our tradition, all the philosophers have analysed the objective universe and categorised them into various divisions. In Sānskrīt they are called tatvāni. Tatvā means category. Just as any study is done by dividing a particular science into various subject-matter, physic is subdivided into heat, electricity, magnetism, etc.; Chemistry is divided into organic chemistry, inorganic chemistry, etc. physical chemistry, etc. If you take mathematics, algebra, calculus, etc. categorisation is one of the methods for intellect to understand things clearly.

And therefore all the philosophers, we have got mainly 12 branches of philosophy in our tradition; all of them try to categorise the universe into various tatvāms; Vaiṣeṣika philosophy, has divided the whole creation into seven tatvās. Nyāya philosophy has divided into 16 tatvās. Sāṅkya philosophy has divided the whole objective universe into twenty-four tatvās.

And here Vyāsācārya temporarily borrows from Sāṅkya philosophy and he categories the universe into 24 tatvāms. And what are those 24 tatvāms? In Tatvā Bodha also, when we talked about the creation, atha caturviṁśatitattvōtpattiprakāraṁ vakṣyāmaḥ. It is there; their categorisation. There is no rule that the category should in this way only; it can be categorised according to our convenience.

Suppose I want to categorise the whole class into groups. I can divide into two groups, male and females; or I can divide based one the between one and 10, 10-20, 20-30 according to qualification, graduates, postgraduates, non-graduates; according to mother tongue I can categorise. Here we are borrowing the categorisation of Sāṅkya philosophy and they talk about the evolution of the universe in four stages; gradually increasing the number of tatvāms.

The first basic matter-principle they call Prakṛti. During praḷaya, before the evolution of the universe, before the emergence of the universe, it was in potential form, that potential form of the universe they call Prakṛtiḥ. In Vēdānta also we use this term, in Sāṅkya also they use. Then Prakṛti is beginningless principle in Sāṅkya, and Kṛṣṇa also borrows the same idea; Prakṛti does not have origination. Prakṛti is basic matter. If you want to understand in scientific language, the condition just before the big bang. The condition before Big Bang. Then they say, the Prakṛti evolves partially and the first stage of evolution they call mahat tatvām.

Prakṛti, then mahat; so Mahat is also total matter in the first stage of evolution.

Then from Mahat, the then stage of evolution, they call ahamkāraḥ. Ahamkāra, is the name of total matter; we are not talking about the individual ego. Individuals are not at all born; even before the birth of the individual, the total matter has evolved into Mahat and the next one is the Ahaṁkāra, let us call it cosmic ego. Prakṛti to Mahat; this is stage No.1, mahat to ahaṁkāra is stage 2.

In stage 3, from ahamkāraḥ, 15 tatvāms originate or emerge; and what are the 15 tatvās?

No.1 the cosmic mind; Manaḥ; not the individual mind of yours or mine; we are talking about the cosmic mind, Manaḥ,

No.2 then daśa indriyāṇi; so the ten sense organ principle or powers of perception, daśa indriyāṇi; one plus 10; eleven,

And then pañca sūkṣma bhūtāni, 5 subtle-elements, 1+5+5+5 or 1+10+5; jñānēdriyāṇi pañca, karmēndriyāṇi-pañca; sūkṣma-bhūtāni-pañca; 3 x 5 =15 + and then mind. So in the third stage 16 principles come; Prakṛti, mahat and ahaṁkāra, 16.

And then in the fourth stage from the subtle-elements; from the subtle-elements, the five gross elements come, pañca stūla bhūtāni, Prakṛti, mahat, ahaṁkāra = 3; then 16 principles, 16+3; nineteen; (need calculator!) and then at the 4th and final level, pañca-stūla-bhūtāni, 19 +5 =24. And all these twenty-four tatvams put together is kṣētraṁ, the inert material objective universe. And consciousness is not the nature of any one of them. All of them are matter and therefore Kṛṣṇa enumerates. Now look at the slōkā.

In the first line, you see the avyaktham, which represents prakṛti, the topmost one.

Then buddhiḥ means the mahat tatvām, the second stage; buddhiḥ careful note, not the individual intellect, but buddhiḥ is the cosmic intellect, the mahat tatvām, the second stage;

Then ahaṁkāra, is the cosmic ego the third stage; avyaktham, buddhiḥ, ahamkāraḥ, (three)

And then from ahaṁkāra 16 items; what are they? Mahābhūtāni. Mahābhūtāni means the 5 subtle-elements : ākāśa, vāyu, Agni, āpaḥ, pṛthvi; space, air, fire, water and earth; in their subtle form; subtle form means invisible form. In Tatvā Bōdha we have dealt with this.

And then indriyāṇi means the ten sense organs; daśa-indriyāṇi. Kṛṣṇa himself says: daśa-indriyāṇi, mahābhūtāni, how much 15, ēkam means the mind, manaḥ tatvām, the cosmic mind; so mahābhūtāni, daśa-indriyāṇi, ēkam, these are the 16 tatvās at the third stage.

And then comes the fourth stage; pañca cēndriyagōcarāḥ, indriya gōcarāḥ means the stūla-bhutani; the five gross elements; thus 1+1+1+16+5; this is the addition; If you add it will be 24 tatvams; all of them come under kṣētram.

And not only that. These 24 tatvams do not remain changeless; they constantly undergo change and as a result of their change and interaction, various properties are generated. And they are called the various guṇās or vikāras of the kṣētram; and what are the generated properties? Kṛṣṇa enumerates them in the next slōkā. This is the explanation of the yadvikāri yataśca yat. In the fourth verse, Kṛṣṇa had promised yadvikāri yataśca yat; what are the various products of the kṣētram I will tell; now he gives the product and what are they:

Verse 13.7

इच्छा द्वेषः सुखं दुःखं सङ्घातश्चेतना धृतिः ।
एतत्क्षेत्रं समासेन सविकारमुदाहृतम् ॥ १३.७ ॥

icchā dvēṣaḥ sukham duḥkham saṅghātaścētanā dhṛtiḥ |
ētat kṣētram samāsēna savikāramudāhṛtam || 13.7 ||

Now we have got a material universe of 24 tatvams, and in that material universe, our physical body is also one, because it is the modification of the five gross elements, we have seen in tatvā-bōdha and we have our mind also which is also a modification of the five subtle-elements.

Thus body is matter; mind is also matter; but mind is a peculiar form of matter. And what is the peculiarity of the mind? Even though mind is an inert matter; it has got a unique nature to manifest or reflect the consciousness and appear as though sentient.

Just like when electricity passes through water, nothing happens. When electricity passes through water nothing happens but when the electricity passes through a filament in a bulb, tungsten filament, or whatever be the special filament, that is made up of such a material, that it is able to become bright and aglow. Why water does not glow when electricity is passed; because that is the nature of water. Why the tungsten filament glows? Because that is the nature of the element, even though both of them are also material in nature; they have got different capacity. So we have got wood, which does not allow electricity to pass through; why; because that is its nature; why metal allows; because that is its nature; similarly, like the tungsten filament, the body is like the bulb, and is like a tungsten filament, it has got a unique nature. Even though mind is made up of matter, what is the unique nature, it is able to absorb the consciousness principle, called kṣētrajña, and the reflected consciousness makes the mind seemingly sentient. This borrowed sentiency is called cētanāḥ.

Now look at the slōkā. Saṅghātaḥ cētana; cētanā. Saṅghātaḥ means what, the body mind complex is called saṅghātaḥ, and cētanā means borrowed sentiency. And if you want another example, imagine you have a mirror in hand and up above the Sun is there during the day time, the mirror is able to reflect the sunlight; and the non-luminous mirror; mirror does not have a light of its own, but with borrowed sun-light, mirror itself becomes itself a luminous and a bright object and what is the uniqueness of its luminosity? It is not intrinsic luminosity; but it is borrowed; whereas the light of the sun is intrinsic but the light of the mirror is borrowed. Like the kṣētrajña is like the Sun; mind is like the mirror and borrowed consciousness is like the reflected Sun. And in Vēdānta it is called cidabhāsa; or cit prathibhīm̐ba or prathibhīm̐ba caitanyam.

And this reflection also can exist where? Wherever the reflecting medium is present; And reflecting medium is kṣētraṁ, and therefore the reflection also must be part of kṣētraṁ only. Very careful, original consciousness is not part of kṣētraṁ; but the reflected consciousness becomes part of the kṣētraṁ; means the material universe.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa says saṅghātaḥ, the body-mind-complex, cētana, the borrowed consciousness, therefore the mind has become a live mind, and therefore the mind is able to experience the world and moment the mind becomes a live mind, capable of experiencing the world, the job of the mind is to categorise.

Ichchā dvēṣaḥ. It has started. Ichchā means rāga, I develop attachment towards a segment of the universe. It is the job of what? The mind; what type of mind, the live mind. How has the mind become live? With borrowed consciousness; and therefore icchā, rāgaḥ has come.

And not only rāgaḥ, the other side of the coin is what; dvēṣaḥ, I would not like to see him at all with the eyes. Therefore, I do not like these people; I like those people; we divide the world. In fact, the objective-Lord-created-world is replaced by the subjective-private-world. Bhagavan has created only a neutral world, but I cover the world with my coloration; and I always see a colored world, world like a person wearing a colour glasses and he says that everything is dark. Similarly, rāgaḥ and dvēṣaḥ are the colored glasses born by the mind; and it always lives in its own private world.

And once the world is divided into desirable and undesirable; then what is the next consequence? Sukham, duḥkham; the desirable world produces sukhaṁ duḥkhaṁ. The undesirable world also produces sukhaṁ duḥkhaṁ.

In fact every object in the public world does not produce sukhaṁ duḥkhaṁ; but every object in my private world; every colored object is capable of producing sukhaṁ duḥkhaṁ. How? A desirable object produces happiness when it comes towards me.

Every desirable object produces joy, by its arrival. And fill up the blanks, every desirable object produces sorrow by its departure. எது வறபோது ஸுகத்தை உண்டாகறதோ; அது போகறபோது துக்கதைதான் உண்டாக்கும். So what brings joy while it arrives, will surely give me sorrow while it leaves; So every desirable object is sukha kāraṇam, duḥkha kāraṇam ca. Similarly, every undesirable object is sukha hētu and duḥkha hētu. You can fill up. What is that; every undesirable object is sukha hētu; when it goes away பொநாண்டாப்பா; Some people give happiness wherever they go; some people give happiness whenever they go. OK. Which category you belong to you can decide. Therefore, an undesirable object gives happiness by its departure; and gives sorrow by its arrival.

And this capacity of the world is not intrinsic. The world has no capacity to give joy or sorrow. But when I classify the world as favourable and unfavourable; world gains the capacity. That is why in Vēdānta we have got two words. Suppose this clip is there. In Vēdānta it is called padārthaḥ. Padārthaḥ is a neutral name for this. It is an object. The moment I develop rāgaḥ or dvēṣaḥ towards it; then the clip is capable of hurting me. The moment I label the clip as good or bad, it gains the unique capacity blessed by me; it gets the unique capacity to hurt me or to please me. And the moment the object gets this capacity, Vēdānta calls this as a Viṣayaḥ. Viṣayaḥ means an object capable of binding me. Before that, it was a padārthaḥ, now it has become Viṣayaḥ.

Thus the whole world is a padārthaḥ, but I convert the padārthaḥ world into a Viṣayaḥ; Viṣayaḥ is derived from the root, vi + ṣi; si root 5th conjugation parasmai pada, sinōthi sinutha, sinvanthi, iti rupāni, vi is the prefix, vi sinōthi iti Viṣayaḥ. That which binds you is called Viṣayaḥ. What do we do? we convert the whole world of kṣētram into a Viṣayaḥ by developing rāgaḥ and dvēṣaḥ and making the world capable of giving sukham and duḥkham.

Thus icchā is kṣētram; dvēṣaḥ is kṣētram, sukham is kṣētram; duḥkham is kṣētram; saṅghātaḥ, the body mind complex is kṣētram; the cētanā, the reflected consciousness is also kṣētram.

Then dhṛtiḥ; dhṛtiḥ means will power. Because once we have classified the world as the cause of sorrow and happiness, then you use your will power to acquire the so-called object of joy, which is called pravṛthi; I want this, that, etc. you have got an increasing list. And you use your will power to run after those objects. And similarly, you have got of list of objects to be removed, which is called nivṛtti, one is run towards, another is running away. So pravṛtti-nivṛtti-hētu-bhūta-dhṛtiḥ or will power.

In fact the whole life is what? Making decision, what else has to come; what else to go and this list constantly changes and lifelong it is only a struggle to take care of this list.

And therefore dhṛtiḥ; all these come under kṣētra vikāra; 24 tatvams are kṣētraṁ and these are the kṣētraṁ-vikāra, properties born out of them.

So Kṛṣṇa says: ētat kṣētram samāsēna; ētat means the 24 tatvams mentioned in the sixth verse, is the kṣētraṁ briefly, savikāram, along with its modifications and what are the modifications, icchā, dvēṣaḥ, sukham, duḥkham etc. described in the scriptures.

That which is opposed to this is ajñānam

With the previous verse, that is the seventh, Kṛṣṇa concludes his analysis of kṣētraṁ and kṣētrajña, which He started from verse No.2. But when we study this portion, we see that there is an incompleteness in Kṛṣṇa's teaching. If you go back to verse No.4, in verse No.4, Kṛṣṇa has promised: Hey Arjuna I will talk about kṣētraṁ and kṣētrajña, a little bit elaborately. That is His promise in the 4th verse, 1st line, the discussion on kṣētraḥ. In the 2nd line He promised discussion on kṣētrajña. But in verse 6 and 7, Kṛṣṇa has elaborated kṣētraṁ , but He seems to have forgotten to elaborate kṣētrajña. All these you will note only when you go back and forth; Kṛṣṇa has not kept up his promise.

If Kṛṣṇa himself forgets, there is nothing wrong in my forgetting. So Śankarācārya comes and he gives an explanation that Kṛṣṇa is not an ordinary teacher and that He would not make a promise and not teach; Śankarācārya gives an explanation, kṣētrajña is identical with jñēya and Puruṣaḥ, I have said before; I do not know whether you remember; I said kṣētrajña, Jñēyam and Puruṣaḥ all the three are identical, all the three represent this spirit consciousness principle. Even they are identical, Arjuna does not know this fact, and therefore he separately asked for the explanation of each one. Like some people saying, Swamiji, I would like to learn Vēdānta and Upaniṣads.

If anybody says I want to learn Vēdānta and Upaniṣads, it is like people saying; അജ്ഞാനമെന്നതു ഞാൻ അറിയും, മഞ്ഞളപ്പൊലേ വെളുത്തിരിക്കും. ajñānamennatu ñān-arīyurm; maññāḷupōle veḷuttirikkuṁ. I know what is the ajñānam, so the black dye used for the eye; it is white like turmeric powder. He does not know all these three. Similarly not knowing separately asks for all these three, but Kṛṣṇa feels even though he leaves out kṣētrajña now, he is going to elaborate that through the discussion on Jñēyaṁ later, as well as Puruṣaḥ later. Therefore Jñēya and Puruṣaḥ description. Therefore Śankarācārya says Kṛṣṇa has not forgotten; He must get the full marks in the exam.

Having completed the topic of kṣētra an kṣētrajña, now Kṛṣṇa comes to the third topic and the third topic Kṛṣṇa takes up is Jñānam. From verse No.8 to 12. When I giving the verse Nos. you should be very careful, this is based on our book, the first verse is Arjuna's question. If Arjuna's question is not included, the second verse will become the first verse. Therefore you should appropriately calculated. If you include Arjuna's question, it is the 8th verse to 12th verse.

What is the meaning of jñānam? In this chapter, in this verse, Kṛṣṇa takes jñānam with a special meaning. Normally, jñānam means knowledge; Any knowledge is jñānam and in the context of philosophy, jñānam means spiritual knowledge. So generally jñānam means any knowledge and in the context of philosophy or vēdānta, it means ātma-jñānam or brahma-jñānam, spiritual knowledge; but in this particular context, jñānam has got still different meaning, and that is all the values of life are all the virtues of a person is called sadguṇāḥ is called jñānam. Guṇaḥ means virtues.

Kṛṣṇa is going to enumerate twenty virtues in these verses and these twenty virtues are called Jñānam. And Śankarācārya gives the reason also for that. He says if these virtues are there, knowledge is very very easy to gain. In fact, jñānam is as good as attained. Since these virtues promote self-knowledge, these virtues themselves are called Jñānam. So jñāna kāranatvat jñānam iti uchyatē. The details we will see in the next class.

Hari Om

168 Chapter 13, Verse 08

Up to verse No.7, beginning from the 2nd verse, Lord Kṛṣṇa dealt with two topics, viz., kṣētraṁ and kṣētrajña which are nothing but anātma and ātma only. This has been elaborately dealt with in the second-chapter, in the form of dēha and dēhi. And in the second-chapter from the verse 12 to 25, Lord Kṛṣṇa has elaborately dealt. Here the only difference is anātma or dēha is called kṣētram and ātma the dēhi is called kṣētrajñāḥ. That is the only difference. One is the matter-principle and the other is consciousness principle. And these two are few of the six topics that Arjuna asked for clarification.

Now from the 8th verse, which I introduced in the last class, up to 12th verse, in five verses, Lord Kṛṣṇa is dealing with jñānam. And in this context, as I said in the last class, the word jñānam is used in a peculiar meaning; the normal meaning is knowledge; whereas in this context, the word jñānam, the group of mental virtues, the group of mental virtues required to enjoy a fit mind for gaining spiritual knowledge. So spiritual knowledge friendly virtues. Like environment friendly paper, like that, spiritual knowledge friendly virtues, which means in the presence of these virtues mind will be jñāna-yōgya and in the absence of these virtues, the mind will be jñāna-ayōgyam.

And in an unprepared uncultivated unfit mind, if spiritual knowledge is injected by the Guru is imparted by the mind, the unprepared mind will resist the knowledge; it will not receive the knowledge even if it receives the knowledge, it will not be assimilated. And unassimilated Vēdānta or for that any śāstra, unassimilated is like poison, like the undigested food. Food is nourishing when it is digested; but if it remains undigested it is a poison; and that is why it is said: anābhyāsē viṣam śāstram, ajīrṇē bhōjanam viṣam. Similarly ajīrṇa-śāstram can be counter-productive and therefore more than vēdānta, one has to focus on a vēdānta-friendly virtues and this is otherwise called dharmāḥ.

And that is why we repeatedly say dharmāḥ is a stepping stone is mōkṣa puruṣārtha; without going through the set of virtues a person cannot hope to attain jñānam or mōkṣa and therefore, these values are extremely important; many virtues are enumerated throughout the Gīta; many virtues are enumerated throughout the śāstram, one great ācārya known as Bhṛthari, wrote a work called Nīti śatakam, 100 verses on inner-virtues. Thus it has been very elaborately dealt with. Here Kṛṣṇa enumerates around 20 virtues. And Kṛṣṇa will deal with the same topic again later; but this is the beginning of the introduction of this topic. We will take each virtue one by one and see its meaning and significance.

The first one, given by Lord Kṛṣṇa is amānitvam. Mānitvam means self-conceit, self-glorification, self-admiration is called mānitvam. In Sānskrīt, Ātmani puṅyatva bhāvana. Looking upon oneself as a great person. This self-admiration is called mānitvam. And amānitvam is freedom from self-conceit or in positive language, humility. Vinayaḥ or humility is the first virtue that Kṛṣṇa emphasises.

And we should know why v̥edānta looks upon self-conceit as a big obstacle. When we accomplish something in our life, in any field, be it education, or in our work field, or social field, we accomplish something, naturally the society admires. Because it is the duty of the society, to recognise any accomplishment. Society has to recognise, the society has to reward with one award or the other Padma, in the newspaper we read about, Padmasree, padma vibhūṣan, the King has to do that, the society has to do that; and when accomplish something, It often starts with the family itself; the parents admire when we do even a small thing. When we listen to this glorification, admiration of others, generally our tendency will be, easily join that group, and along with the society, we also start enjoying admiration of ourselves. When the society admires or rewards or awards, it is the duty of the society and it is perfectly OK, but unknowingly we also join others and admiring ourselves. This self-admiration is the beginning; the seed for self-conceit.

What is the problem in the self-admiration? After all we all enjoy admiring ourselves. And we consider even it as a puṇyam, but even though we tend to enjoy relish the admiration from others and self-admiration, V̥edānta says that it is a very big trap. It is a very big obstacle for a spiritual-seeker. And therefore one has to be extremely careful, when there is a possibility of getting into the trap of self-admiration.

What are the problems in self-admiration? Why do you consider it as an obstacle? The first problem is once we have started enjoying admiration, from others' as well as ourselves, it causes an addiction. Admiration is like an addiction-causing drug. An addiction-causing drug, once we use, we need it more and more. We look for more and more admiration from others and we tend towards self-admiration more and more and once we have got addicted to that, we want it all the time. And when we do not get that admiration from others; and when we do not do that, the deprivation of this admiration causes lot of disturbance. Like a smoker, suffers deprivation symptoms when he decides to quit smoking, like a liquor addict suffers when he tries to stop it; once we get addicted to the glorification of others, the deprivation causes lot of problems and therefore, just as any other sense addition has to be carefully avoided, similarly admiration addiction one has to carefully avoid. Therefore the first problem is what; it causes addiction.

And the second problem is once we start enjoying admiration from others, and also self-admiration, joining the group and blowing our own trumpet, we get so excited by that; everybody taking about myself, I am the centre of attention; and the focus of the whole world including the newspaper is on me. So once I get excited by this, any excitement is such that I will be carried away by that; and my discriminative power gets robbed by name and fame. By glorification, my discriminative power is lost.

Once my discriminative power is lost by this excitement, I get into delusion, which makes me forget important facts of life. Once discrimination is lost, I lose sight very significant and important facts.

What are the important facts I lose sight of, which I am supposed not to lose sight of? The first fact is whatever be my accomplishment, for which the society admires me, the fact is I can never take full credit for any accomplishment. Whatever be the accomplishment, my contribution is only one of the factors, for every accomplishment, there are innumerable people involved, innumerable factors involved, I can never take full credit; but in excitement, I do lose sight of this fact and I claim and feel that "I", with my full power, I have accomplished that. This is the forgetfulness caused by excitement. I should remember that whatever be the name and fame I get, 99% of the credit goes to so many other factors; I can perhaps take a little credit. This is the first fact which is lost sight of by a self-conceited person.

And the second fact that is forgotten in self-conceit is, even if I have contributed something for the accomplishment; whatever it be; may be music; may be education, may be sport; according to the Gīta which we have seen, even that little contribution from me, is really speaking not my contribution. I find I am born with that talent; that talent is a gift from the Lord, which is a fact, revealed in the 10th chapter of the Gīta, called Vibūthi-yōga: I do not enjoy any vibhuthi, credit, any glory, it is a grace of the Lord's glory which is expressing, manifesting through me, and therefore, so-called limited contribution I cannot claim. That is the fact. But in self-conceit; I forget this fact also. I forget others' contribution; I forget Lord's contribution. Self-conceit is an obstacle to devotion. Self-conceit and bhakthi cannot co-exist, because a self-conceited person forgets Lord's contribution, which is the only contribution.

तत्तदेवावगच्छ त्वं मम तेजोऽशसम्भवम् || १०-४१ ||

Yadyadvibhūtisattvaṁ śrīmadūrjitamēva vā |
tattadēvāvagaccha tvaṁ mama tējōśasambhavam || 10.41 ||

This is the second fact forgotten, in mānitvam or conceit.

And the third fact is however great I am, I can never claim myself to be the greatest one. However great I am, I can never claim myself to be the greatest one, because I live in a world where there are people; there were people and there will be people, who will be greater than me. It is a world of śadiśayatvam. It is a beautiful word used in śāstra. This is world of śadiśayatvam. Śadiśayatvam means anything can be bettered. Anything can be improved. So if I have created a record, that record is a breakable record. Any record in any field can be improved and therefore, I should remember that there are people who are either as great as me, or greater than me.

When self-conceit robs my discrimination, I get into a delusion that I lose sight of the fact that there are people who are as great as me, or greater than me. And since I forget this fact, in fact, I love to forget this fact, so that I can claim that I am the greatest. Because of the forgetfulness of this fact, what happens is I can never appreciate another person who is as great as me. I can never admire another person who is greater than me and when I find someone who is equally great or greater than me, my self-conceit does not allow the acknowledgement of that fact.

A self-conceited person cannot admire another person; because he wants to be in the centre of all the admiration coming from all directions; it never allows any other person to be the centre of admiration. Either he avoids those people, or he avoids the topic of those people, and he develops jealousy, anger, etc. These are all the consequences of self-conceit. And when this self-conceit is extreme, a person can even tend to eliminate the other people from the field. Because my superiority goes, my glory is threatened by others, and therefore that person has to be eliminated; that anger, jealousy all these are consequences of this conceit.

And if I have to find out whether I have self-conceit or not, it is very easy I should ask a question; can I comfortably admire the glory of other people. The more conceited I am, the more difficult it is to admire or glorify; especially if the other person, is in my own field, I can never acknowledge.

In our village, there was a temple nāgaswaram person. He used to play in the temple rituals, daily. It is told that he was so self-conceited, he thought that he is the nāgaswaram vidvān. And just to tease him, somebody asked him: Hello Śivarāma, how is Kārikurichi Arunchalam? He was one of the nāgaswara vidvān. How is he? And you know what was his answer: ஆ! அவனும் ஊதுவான்! Ah.., he will also blow air'. He cannot accept others' greatness. That is the indication of self-conceit. And once this self-conceit comes, the door of devotion is blocked; and without bhakthi, jñānam is never possible.

And therefore the scriptures say that the first value you have to develop is amānitvam, which translated positively means, humility or vinayaḥ. Cultivate humility. In our Upaniṣads, and in Purāṇās, we find stories after stories where people get conceited, even dēvas get into mānitvam, if you remember Kēnōpaniṣad story, they have to be humbled by the Lord.

Humiliation is called humbling experience. Every conceited person will be humiliated at one time or the other; what do you mean by humiliation; a lesson in humility is humiliation. Humiliation means humility creation. And all our ācāryas you find in any field, they all were embodiments of humility. They were all great in their field and they were all embodiments of humility. If you read the works of Kalidāsa, he has written, (he is supposed to be, or the greatest sanskrit scholar) several poems and several dramas. In all of them, he writes an introductory verse. In all of them, you can see how humble. And not only he expresses his humility, he teaches humility to others. In one work, he says:

मन्दः कवियशः प्रार्थी गमिष्याम्यपहास्यताम्।
प्रांशुलभ्ये फले लोभादुद्धाहुरिव वामनः॥ रघ्(क्)_१.३ ॥

[mandah kaviyaśaḥ prārthī gamiṣyāmyapahāsyatām |
prāṁśulabhyē phalē lōbhādudbhāhuriva vāmanah || Ragh\(K\)_1.3 ॥](#)

Will I become the butt of ridicule if I were to covet the celebrity of an eminent poet, like a short fellow overstretching his arms for a fruit obtainable only by the tall, because I am still a dunce in this subject matter? [1-3]

I am Mandhah. Kalidāsa, the greatest Sānskrīṭ scholar says that I am mandhaḥ. What about us? So we learn Rāma śabha up to 4th vibhakthi; then we claim we are Sānskrīṭ scholars. Kalidāsa is the greatest scholar in history is saying that he is mandah; kaviyaśa prarathi, through this poetry, I seem to seek name and fame, as a great poet, and the whole world is going to laugh at me. gamiṣyām upahāsyatham. And he gives an example, there he gives his glory as a poet, upamā kalidāsasya: So his capacity to give simile is supposed to be fantastic; he says it is like what: there is a tall tree; with lot of fruits hanging; and it is so tall that there is a dwarf; a vāmanaḥ, a short person, he is standing on the ground and he is jumping up to pluck that fruits. When you see a dwarf, jumping up to pluck a fruit which is inaccessible, how you laugh. Similarly, I am the dwarf who is trying to pluck the fruit of kavi-yaśa. And in other work he says:

क्व सूर्यप्रभवो वंशः क्व चाल्पविषया मतिः।
तितीर्षुर्दुस्तरं मोहादुदुपेनास्मि सागरम्॥ रघ्(क्)_१.२ ॥

[kva sūryaprabhavō vaṁśaḥ kva cālpaviṣayā matiḥ |
titīrṣurdustaram mohādudupenāsmi sāgaram || Ragh\(K\)_1.2 ॥](#)

Where the dynasty originated from Sun where the meagre intellect of mine with an intellect yet to be edified, am I inanely wishing to go across this unnavigable ocean called the solar dynasty by a small barque called my ersatz education? [1-2]

I am trying to write the Raghu vaṁśa; which is so great; where is the glory of Raghu vaṁśa and where is my capacity to express that glory and still foolishly I am trying to bring out the glory of Raghu's family. Mōhat udēbhē nēva sagaram. It is like holding to a catamaran, a small float, and if I am trying to cross the ocean, how it is impossible.

Similarly, with a small raft of my fragile mind, uneducated mind, I am trying to write the story of Raghu varṁśa. And in another work he says:

[aparithoṣāt vidhuṣam na sadhu manyē prayōga vijñānam ।
balavatha śikṣitānam ātmani apratyayam cētaḥ.](#)

I have learnt some Sānskrīt; who says: Kalidāsa; I have learnt some Sānskrīt; and I have tried to work something, I think this is the introduction to Śakuntala, I have tried to attempt to write something, yet I am not confident that my writing is up to the mark, and therefore I am offering this work to the great scholars, and I wait for their validation. And only when scholars validate, I consider I know some Sānskrīt. So this is Kalidāsa. Similarly, Śankarācārya, Similarly Surēśvācārya. Similarly, Madhusudhana Saraswati. All these people, read their works; they are giants and they say I know a little bit of śāstram.

From this we come to know how much importance is given to humility. And in one of the work, known as ṣatpadi sthōthram, Śankarācārya's first prayer is: Oh Lord. Avinaya apanaya viṣṇō. Oh Lord remove my self-conceit; make my humble; Humility is required in all the fields; humility is particularly required for vēdāntic seeker, because without humility, bhakti cannot come, without bhakthi, jñānam cannot come. That is why all the rakṣasās, do not say Om̐ Namo Nārāyaṇa, they say Om̐ Hiraṇyakaśapavē nama. Bhakthi and conceit can never go together. Therefore the first prayer is what: Oh Lord, give me, amānitvam. Humility.

Then the next virtue is adambitvam. Dambitvam is physically expressed version of mānitvam. Mānitvam is an inner feeling, I think I am wonderful, I am great; I am learned; nobody is equal to me, this inner sense of bhāvana is called mānitvam. When that mānitvam is physically expressed outside, through various means that expressed vyakta mānitvam is dambitvam. Avyakta dambitvam is mānitvam. That means what: At the physical level also, I want admiration. Because I consider that I am great; all the people should look at me and talk about me. Physically also, I conduct myself beginning from the very dress onwards. Vēṣaḥ. I should have body attractive dress; and my aim is I should be a head-turner. Have you heard this expression? Head turner, means what? When that person walks, every head turns. And therefore, self-decoration all beauty parlors become important. I should be the centre of attention. So through dress, and through my walking, and always coming to the centre stage, there would be no work, he will come and tap the mike and go; so the whole audience thinks that he is behind the whole programme. Nothing he would not have done; and till yesterday, he would not have come to the scene. And somehow he manages a volunteer badge and does like this and goes. So therefore all these are attention seeking expression; ornamentation; pretensions. So daṁbitvaṁ means all forms of pretensions through Vēṣam; through ābharaṇam; through actions; that is called daṁbitvaṁ.

And adaṁbitvaṁ means what? Just the opposite of that; I do not want to seek attention; in positive language, simplicity. In terms of dressing, in terms of movement, in terms of ornamentation, that person is so simple and inconspicuous in a crowd, even though the greatest person in the world, he does not seek attention. And therefore only the small-timers; அரை குறைச, half-boiled seek attention. As the English proverb goes, empty vessel makes noise. Full vessel does not. Therefore daṁbitvaṁ means pretension; a daṁbitvaṁ means simplicity. All great people are simple.

And then the third one is ahimṣa. Ahimṣa means non-violence. Not injuring other living beings. Himṣa means injury; or violence, and we do not talk about only human beings; all living beings avoidance of injury and at three kāraṇa level; at the level of three instruments, because we have got three instruments which can cause injury. Like different weapons to hurt others, we already have three weapons to hurt others. You may ask, I do not have any weapon in my hand? Your mere existence is enough, there are inbuilt weapons, three Nos.

And what are those three weapons? What are they? Kāyika, vācika, mānasa. The very body is a weapon, which can cause injury to others; hands and legs, which bhagavān has given with good intention, but we weapon to use it terribly.

And similarly vāk is another instrument; animals do not have this instrument. Therefore animals cannot verbally injure; human-beings are the unique ones who have the most wonderful instruments. It can be used or it can be terribly abused; verbal abuse you know is worse than physical ones. So there is kuraḷ saying also; that the wound caused by the tongue will not heal easily. And therefore verbal himṣa.

And there is a third instrument called mind, anthakaranam and that is mentally also himṣa is possible through thoughts. Mentally cursing others. நாசமா பேரட்டும்; nācamā pōṭṭum; you think. So mentally cursing others. And remember thoughts are powerful forces and therefore kāyika, vācika, and mānasa himṣā-varjanam is ahimṣa.

And why do say, ahimṣa is a value to be practised? In fact, in the Yōga-śāstra, Aṣṭāṅga yōga, they talk about ten important virtues; I call them the ten commandments of Hinduism; in the form of yama and niyama groups. We have seen this in the 6th chapter of the Gīta. In the 10 commandments of Hinduism, the first commandment is ahimṣa; ahimṣa, satyam, asthēyam, brahmacaryam, aparigrahaḥ, soucha, santhōṣa, tapa, svādyaya, Īśvara-praṇidānāni.

Dealt with in the 6th chapter introduction. I have also separately dealt with talked 10 commandments of Hinduism. Ahimsa is supposed to be mahā vṛatham. A major vow. A spiritual-seeker has to be committed.

Why do we consider a major vṛatham? It is another topic which we can deal with on and on and on; but some important features we will see.

The first significance is very simple. I should not do what I do not expect others to do to me. Very simple law. I do not want any living being to injure me, even mosquitoes. And if I do not want others to hurt me, it becomes a universal law and it is an instinctive expectation; nobody teaches this; it is instinctive and natural expectation. What is my expectation? Nobody should hurt me, which means everybody else has got the same instinctive expectation that I should not hurt him and therefore this becomes a universal law and therefore only when I follow a universal law, as Dayānanda Swami says, only when I do not rub against universal law, I can have peace of mind. Any time I am violating a universal law called dharma, I am hurting myself.

Dayānanda Swami gives a beautiful example, if you want to know. Suppose there is an old tree; puliyamaram or veppa maram; and you see the trunk, it has got a very very rugged surface; very very rough and rugged surface. And suppose you go and remove your dress, shirt, banian and all, and rub against the trunk of the puliyamaram, the tamarind or neem tree. When you rub against the tree, what happens to the tree; nothing. On the other hand, depending upon the intensity of the rubbing, you are hurt; when I rub against a tree; I am rubbing myself; I am injuring myself; Dharma, the universal law, is like puliyamaram; any time I rub against universal law, or violate a universal law, nothing happens to the law, I am hurting myself. And therefore, ahimsa is following the universal law. This is one significance.

Secondly the whole world is like a bank. Whatever I am contributing to the world, remains in the world as a deposit. And whatever I have deposited now that alone I can take later; what I deposit, that alone I can withdraw. If I am going to contribute Himṣa, I am depositing himṣa in the world, which means in future, from the world what I can draw is only himṣa. I get from the world, what I give to the world. If I give compassion I get that. If I give what you call, sharing, love, I get that; if I am giving himṣa, I get back that only.

And therefore, if I do not want to be injured by the world, I have to deposit what only ahimsa, because I get what I give; I reap what I sow. Not even what I sow. In English there is a saying. If you sow a wind, you reap a whirlwind. So it gets multiplied and comes. Therefore, ahimsa becomes important for my own future good.

And thirdly this is more important from the angle of psychology and vādānta. The tendency to hurt others is impulsive and natural. Our tendency to hurt others is impulsive and very very natural. When do we hurt others; if you see the psychology behind it, We have got lot of expectations from our set up. From our family members; and from our neighbours, from the government, we have certain expectations; and if these expectations, otherwise called rāga-dvēṣa, they are fulfilled very well, I am comfortable and happy with the set up.

And most of the time, our expectations are not fulfilled because, the other people behave not according to what I expect; other people behave according to their own freewill. Unfortunately they have a freewill. If Bhagavan has given freewill only to me and not to others, then it would have been fine; but unfortunately they have. And therefore most of the time, my expectations are not fulfilled; and the more grown up I am, the more the number of expectations are, and they become even finer and finer and finer; finer means what when I say I want colour, within the green also, this green and that green; and if that expectation is not fulfilled I get into a rage.

When expectations are not fulfilled, the natural consequence is that I am hurt. Non fulfillment of expectation is bound to hurt me. And once I am hurt, the immediate reaction is attacking that object which is the cause of my hurt. The object means, the person who did not behave, and the setup which was not up to the mark, a hurt person, reacts causing hurt to others. So the psychology is hurt person, hurts others. An injured person injures others. And there is no gap between my injury and my causing injury to others. So the child misbehaves; there is no time gap. Immediately giving one; then only we think, or we shout; it is so impulsive.

If this natural impulsive-hiṁsa should not happen, it is possible only under one condition. Hiṁsa is natural when anybody does not behave to my expectations I am bound to react, and if this natural reaction should stop, it is possible only under one condition, and you know what that condition is. My mind should become sensitive; and so sensitive that when I hurt somebody else; the sensitive-mind should feel the pain of the other person also. We have to think very well. A sensitive-person is one which feels not only the pain of oneself, it feels the pain of others also.

And once I begin to feel the pain of others, what happens? What is the consequence? When in anger I impulsively hurt another person, not only the other person is hurt. What happens, when the other person is hurt, I also sense the pain. I also go through the pain like the mother who beats the child; and afterwards the mother is never comfortable because the mother goes through the pain which the child goes through.

And therefore what happens? For a sensitive-mind, hurting another person is as good as hurting oneself. For a sensitive-person, sensitive-mind hurting another person is like self-injury. And we never like to hurt ourselves. கத்தியால் நம்மளயெ குத்திபோமா?. So since I do not like to hurt myself, I will never like to hurt others also; because when I am hurting another person, I am hurting myself. Can you see the psychology behind it? For once I become a sensitive-person, I become incapable of hurting another one because every time, I hurt another, I go through sleepless nights. How he feels humiliated; how he feels disturbed; how she is disturbed, sometime the other persons says; does not matter; then also I am so sensitive, that for days together I cannot sleep because my mind registers others' pains. And therefore, following the value of ahimsa, is possible if I make my mind sensitive. Sensitisation is required for following ahimsa. In psychological language, they call it empathy, and that has to be developed and therefore following ahimsa, makes my mind sensitive; and a sensitive mind is required to appreciate the subtle topics of vēdānta. Vēdānta is so subtle, that I require a sensitive mind.

And therefore ahimsa means sensitise your mind. Even when you read the newspaper of violence happening somewhere, my mind should feel the pain. If my mind does not feel the pain, that mind is called a gross mind. A Gross mind alone can comfortably hurt others; a gross mind alone can comfortably hut others; a sensitive mind is very much hurt in hurting others. And that is why somebody said, crime itself becomes a punishment for a sensitive mind. Crime itself becomes punishment for a sensitive mind; ஸென்ஸிடிவ் மைன்ட் அநெ போடலை; For a gross mind, others are hurt, nothing happens. And therefore, we require what? Sūkṣma-buddhihi. So ahimsa is a very important value. Ahimsa paramō dharma.

The next value is kṣānti. The word kṣānti has got several connotations. We will again see some of them. One meaning of the word kṣānti is mental resistance or immunity so that it is not disturbed when the expectations are not fulfilled. In fact it is an extension of ahimsa. Only when my expectations are not fulfilled, I get hurt; When I get hurt, my immediate response is hiṁsa. And therefore hiṁsa is only when I get hurt; when my expectations are not fulfilled.

Kṣānti means developing that mental immunity, that the set-up is incapable of disturbing my mind. Developing immunity, so that I am not vulnerable to external fluctuations, weather-wise fluctuations, behavioral fluctuations, or economical fluctuations. So many fluctuations are there; all these fluctuations do not disturb me; developing that mental immunity is called kṣāntiḥ.

Just as if a person has got a physical immunity, what happens? Whatever be the diseases around in the city, if I have the immunity, the diseases are around, germs are around, bacteria are around, even tuberculosis, today being TB day. In fact one doctor said, giving a talk, TB is supposed to spread when a diseased person breaths or sneezes in front of others; and a doctor, he said; that you take 20 people who have not got TB, and you call a person who has got the TB in advance condition, and you ask this sick person to directly sneeze and breath into the mouth of these 20 people. It is only hypothetical; 20 people and he said even though these 20 people directly receive, all these twenty will not get, because Bhagavān has created an immunity. That does mean that you should try. Swamiji, do not ask should I try. An immune system will not be affected, we are physically immune, but what is our mental immunity? If you have mental immunity, you have kṣāntiḥ. I do not want to test your mental immunity by going beyond time.

Hari Om

169 Chapter 13, Verse 08

ॐ

Having talked about the topics of kṣētram and kṣētrajña up to verse No.7, now from verse no.8 onwards, up to verse no.12, Kṛṣṇa deals with the topic of jñānam which in this context means, those virtues which will make the mind fit for receiving the self-knowledge. And he gives a list of 20 virtues here; which has to be carefully cultivated by every person. In fact, gaining self-knowledge really does not take time; it is relatively easier but cultivating these virtues alone involves time and effort.

And therefore, this is as important or more important than even vēdāntic study. And therefore Kṛṣṇa will deal with this topic again and again. The 16th and 17th chapters are exclusively dedicated to deal with this topic. So we will deal with this again later.

And now we have seen some of the virtues mentioned in the 8th verse, amānitvam, adambitvam and ahimṣa. Amānitvam is freedom from self-glorification, humility, vinayaḥ, and adambitvam is simplicity and ahimṣa is non-violence at the physical, verbal and even mental levels. Up to this we saw in the last class.

Now the 4th value mentioned here is Kṣānti. Kṣānti also is a very important virtue, it has got two aspects, the first aspect of Kṣānti is called titikṣa; and titikṣa means acceptance of all choiceless situations of life. Acceptance without resistance of all choiceless situations of life.

Even though, as human-beings we have a free will and we have the capacity to control many things, the unfortunate fact is that there are many things over which we have no control at all. We are utterly helpless. And all such uncontrollable helpless situations I call choiceless situations and in the second-chapter, Kṛṣṇa uses the word, aparihārya artaḥ; artaḥ means a situation, aparihārya means over which I do not have a control at all. And since I do not have any control over the situation, I have to only change my attitude in such a way that I welcome, I accept the situation and this acceptance of the situation is called titikṣa.

And if you look at the life, our entire past life is already over, and I have no control over my past. By regretting over the past, I will never be able to change it, even God cannot change the past. Therefore, past comes under choiceless situation and I have to prepare my mind to accept my past as it is; my parentage, my education, my date of birth, all of them; date of birth means age; So by giving a false age, you do not become younger. By covering the wrinkles by thicker powder you do not become younger. Accept the age; accept the grey hair; accept no hair. Therefore the past is choiceless. Therefore I accept the past with titikṣa.

Then the next is present is also choiceless, but present is that which has already arrived. Not arriving. If it has not yet arrived, you can send a telegram, do not arrive; but the present has already arrived and therefore, I have no choice over the present and therefore I prepare the mind, to accept the present which is choiceless. This acceptance of situations around, all the people around is titikṣa. Sahanam sarva duḥkhānam aprathikāra purvakam. Without resistance. The more the resistance is, the more you get heated up.

And this acceptance is also of two types; one is a healthy acceptance; and another is a unhealthy acceptance. What is unhealthy acceptance? Taking to the philosophy what cannot be cured, has to be endured. So there is an acceptance, but the acceptance is with bitterness. The acceptance is with self-pity. The acceptance is with frustration. Acceptance is with anger towards the world and God.

This unhealthy acceptance is not titikṣa, because when I accept with bitterness and self-pity, my mind is not available for any other constructive activity. A mind which accepts the situation with bitterness will dwell upon the situation all the time murmuring, all the time grumbling, எனக்கு ஏன் இப்படி ஆச்சு; எனக்கு ஏன் இப்படி ஆச்சு; why me; why it has happened to me? And not only this person has depression, whoever comes around, this person freely does dānam; other dānam whether he does one does not know, his grief he distributes to others. And therefore in unhealthy acceptance, my resources are not available for any constructive work. I am immobilised. I am a complaining person.

Whereas acceptance that is talked about here is a healthy acceptance wherein I do not allow the choiceless situations to overpower me. I do not allow the choiceless situation to clog my resources. I do not allow the choiceless situations to immobilise me. I ignore that situation and I allow my resources to work in a constructive manner. And often it appears very difficult but it is possible for a person to ignore unfavourable conditions and still go ahead with life and even accomplish things.

If you have any doubt, read the biographies of some of the handicapped people who have accomplished greater things than even a non-handicapped normal people. We have the Stephen Hawkins phenomenon, for whom no organ of the body works, except the brain. A person can curse himself and take to self-pity, but a person can ignore that and accomplish greater things also. That means I do not allow the situation to overwhelm me and that is called healthy acceptance; titikṣa. This is aspect No.1 of Kṣāntiḥ. This is with respect to the present.

Even though past cannot be changed by me, because it has already gone and even though the present cannot be changed, because it has already arrived; as far as future is concerned, I do have a capacity to change the future.

Astrology can perfectly talk about the past. But with regard to the future, astrology can never totally predict the future, because future can be changed by the human will. In fact astrology itself talks about prayascitta karmāṇi, by which we can change the future. And therefore, with regard to future, what I require is not acceptance. I have to accept the past, because it is choiceless. I have to accept the present; because it is choiceless. But I need not accept the future blindly, because future is not choiceless; future is choicefull (if I can use that word). That means what? I can use my freewill, my resources:

आत्मैव ह्यात्मनो बन्धुः आत्मैव रिपुरात्मनः ॥ ६.५ ॥

[Uddharēd ātmana"tmānaṁ na"tmānamavasādayēt |
ātmaiva hyātmanō bandhurātmaiva ripurātmanaḥ ||6.5 ||](#)

I can work for improving and transforming the future. But here also we should remember any transformation requires time. Any transformation, any growth, any change requires its own time. And therefore with regard to transformation, I require patience. If I have got some disease, it is not that I have to suffer the disease permanently, medical science is advanced I can take the appropriate remedy but it will take its own time; it may be a week, it may be a month, it may be even years.

And when you want to change people, when you want a change people, it is almost impossible because you cannot change others unless they want to change, and if others want to change we can work on others and try to change; but changing a person requires lot of time, which means with regard to future, I require the capacity to wait.

And this capacity to wait with regard to the future is the second part of the titīkṣa, second part of Kṣāntiḥ, which is called Kṣāma. Kṣāma means the capacity to wait for the future to unfold; even in front of the traffic signal. There it starts. The red signal has come; and it has got its own duration; may be only 1-2 minutes but you can see the lack of Kṣāma. Inch, inch, almost the other side போரயாச்சு; gone and if there are so many rows of cars, you can see, even after the green signal has come it will take a minute for your car to move. The first car will take a few seconds, the second will take a few more; by the time you are able to move, it will take a few more seconds; but you can see all the people clamoring with the horn; no patience.

And therefore the second part of the Kṣānti is everything takes its own time. A child takes ten months in the womb to grow and therefore Bhartṛhari says; Oh Human beings.

परिभ्रमसि किं मुधा क्वचन चित्त विश्राम्यतां
स्वयं भवति यद्यथा भवति तत्तथा नान्यथा ।
अतीतमननुस्मरन्नपि च भाव्यसंकल्पायन्
नतर्कितसमातमाननुभवामि भोगानहम् ॥

paribhramasi kiṃ mudhā kvacana citta viśrāmyatām svayaṃ bhavati yadyathā bhavati tattathā nānyathā | atītamānanusmarannapi ca bhāvyaśaṅkalpāyan
natarkitasamātamānanubhavāmi bhōgānaham ||

Paribhramasi kiṃ mudhā kvacana citta viśrāmyatām. Oh Mind, why are you always in a hurry; you want tomorrow to come today itself. You want next year to come this year itself. Ask your mind to wait and be patient. மனமே இரு; இரு; அவஸர படாதே; maṇamē iru; iru; avasara paṭātē. Svayaṃ bhavati yadyathā bhavati tattathā nānyathā. The future has to unfold in its own time; and you cannot hasten the process. Let the future unfold; you face it when it comes; we will cross the bridge when it comes. Atītamānanusmarannapi ca bhāvyaśaṅkalpāyan. Not brooding over the past too much; not getting concerned over the future too much. Natarkitasamātamānanubhavāmi bhōgānaham.

Develop patience in the present. And if I do not have titīkṣa with regard to present, and I do not have kṣama with regard to future; titīkṣa means what, acceptance, kṣama means what, the capacity to wait; if I do not have acceptance and waiting capacity, the result is stress and strain in the personality, which is the curse of the modern fast life. Everybody says stress and strain and there are so many programs conducted to neutralise stress and strain. And the organisers are stressed out; this has to work out; money will come or not, etc.

In śāstra it is called, anāyāsaḥ; freedom from stress; learn to sit for some moment daily, just relax. That's why they kept sandhyā vandanam at regular intervals so that you learn to sit without stress. And doctors talk about two-fold stress; the physical stress of the body; the muscles are always tensed; and there is mental stress; this physical and mental stress; accumulates over time; and that makes you irritable all the time. The indication of stress and strain is you are all the time at the flashpoint.

Somebody has to ask something; flare up, மூக்கில சுண்டி; anger at the nose-tip; I am all the time irritable; and Dayānanda Swami says when this irritable father comes home, the children run all around. அப்பா வந்தாச்சு; அப்பா வந்தாச்சு; Father has come, one goes to this room, and another in another room, the poor wife has to choicelessly deal with him. And this irritable condition is the accumulated stress and often the children are the victims; and previously when father is stressed out, mother was there as a cushion; now both of them are working; therefore generally the temperature at home is above 100. And children becomes victims and they also get the internal stress, when they grow out, they take it on their wives and spouses, and thus we have got a nuclear family, ready to explode. I was wondering why it is called nuclear family. My explanation that it is in a critical moment to explode. Therefore Kṣāntiḥ is an extremely important value to avoid stress; Stress is inflicting injury on myself. And when the stressful person explodes it is inflicting injury on the other people. Therefore a stressed person is always practising hiṃsa, upon himself and others. Therefore if ahiṃsa has to be followed, Kṣāntiḥ is required. Kṣāntiḥ is the only method to develop ahiṃsa. And therefore it is very important value in the śāstra, it is called anāyāsaḥ. A stress free relaxed mind.

Then the next value is ārjavam. Ārjavam means alignment of the three fold personality; kāyika, vāchika, and mānasa. Our personality has three layers or components; one is physical, another is verbal; and another is mental; and if all of them are in alignment; thought, word and deed are in alignment, that person is integrated personality; harmonised personality; a healthy personality. But when there is no alignment; I think one thing, and by the time I speak out, it has become different; and when I implement, it is a third thing.

मनसि अन्यत्, वचसि अन्यत्, कर्मणि अन्यत् दुरात्मनाम् ॥

manasyēkam, vacasyēkam, karmasyēkam mahātmanām
manasi anyat, vacasi anyat, karmaṇi anyat durātmanām ||

When there is no alignment, it is a split personality. And when there is no alignment, there is a strain taking place in the personality. Like any machine with several different parts; when there is a machine with several parts, all of them should be in alignment.

Adjustment is required, when you erect a huge machinery; the mechanics have to come and align. Even in a tape recorder, the head has to be aligned; there also it is said 'head', aligned and cleaned in regular intervals; otherwise recording does not take place. Similarly your head, not only tape recorder. And your ears, they all must be aligned; otherwise after one hour, if someone asks, how was the class, you will say it was wonderful; what did Swamiji say?; that is what I do not know. What is wonderful? I do not know.

And therefore alignment is very important. If alignment is not there, you would not feel the strain immediately, but gradual build up would be there. After some time, personality becomes a disharmonious, disintegrated personality and that is why disintegration and destruction are synonymous. Disintegration and destruction are synonymous.

When my organs are not integrated, then I am destroyed. Destroyed not in the physical sense, but destroyed in the spiritual sense. I cannot accomplish anything higher. And therefore integrity, or uprightness or alignment or harmonisation of the personality is important.

If you go to a music concert, there are so many instruments. Mridangist; gaḍam, violinist, ganjira, and musician. You will find that they are spending a lot of time adjusting the sṛuti. Aligning the throat, aligning the tamera, is required. If it is a north music concert, they are so particular about sṛuti. According to them, carnatic musicians do not have sṛuti at all. The North Indians take more time to adjust the sṛuti than even the concert time. So if a music concert requires alignment, life is the greatest music, which should give happiness to me and which should give happiness to others. There should be no apasṛuti, that means my thought, word, and deed should be harmonised. That is why we have one of the most wonderful upaniṣadic prayers.

वाग् मे मनसि प्रतिष्ठिता, मनो मे वाचि प्रतिष्ठिता ॥

vāg mē manasi pratiṣṭitā manō mē vāci pratiṣṭitā ||

Let me not have a split personality. Let me not have a multiple personality syndrome. And Dayānanda Swamiji beautiful says that Rāvaṇa shown with 10 heads indicates his multiple personality and the best method to develop ārjavam is starting with punctuality. I feel the first exercise in ārjavam is punctuality. And that is one thing, we do not have at all in India. And if a speaker goes for a public function, he has to start sweeping the room; he has to start from that. Only he has to go. And start the programme. Out of utter frustration, I dropped all public programs. Because nobody values punctuality.

First exercise in ārvavam is punctuality. And I find another disturbing thing. I want to be punctual. Suppose because of some reason, I am not able to be punctual, I have promised someone that I will come at 7 o'clock. And I start at 6 o'clock, because it takes one hour for me to reach. When I start, some visitor comes, or phone call comes, and I am not able to keep up the time, most people keep quiet, I consider ārvavam requires informing that person that I have promised to come at 7, I will not be able to come, I will not come or I will come at 8. But I find that many of the people do not have the tendency to call and inform; we have to phone and ask.

First ārvavam is being punctual. Second ārvavam is informing the person if I am not able to be punctual. If we start with that, we will gradually develop ārvavam. I promise someone I will give an information tomorrow at 9 o'clock. I hoped to get the information by tomorrow. But tomorrow by 9 o'clock I did not get the information. By tomorrow 9 o'clock, whether I have the information or not, I should ring up the person and give the information and if I do not have I should tell, I hoped to get, I did not get. All these things, people are so gross and insensitive, where is the question of higher things. So ārvavam starts with the word and punctuality. Thereafter bigger things.

Even Satyam is a sub-division of ārvavam only. Truthfulness is a sub-division of ārvavam arjavam only. This is another important virtue.

Then the next one is ācāryōpāsanam. This is another important virtue for a vēdāntic student. Ācārya-upāsanam literally means worship or reverence towards the teacher. ācāryaḥ. And we should remember when worship a teacher, a guru, really speaking, the worship does not go to the person itself. Because as a person, Guru is as such limited as any other person. Then why do we worship the ācārya. Ācārya represents the śāstra jñānam which is in him. Therefore my namaskāra to ācārya, is my namaskāra to the vēdas which are in him. Ācāryaḥ is a temple of the scriptures and scriptures represent Īśvara and therefore through the scriptures, the worship goes to the Lord the revealer of the śāstras.

And then the next question is: Why I should worship the śāstram? Why should I worship the Vēda? This is also a very very important thing for us to know. The knowledge that we want to acquire through the śāstra is a knowledge which can be acquired through śāstra alone. It is not a knowledge which can be acquired through any other source of knowledge. The śāstra is like the sixth sense organ.

Every sense organ like eye, ears, etc. is capable of giving a unique knowledge which the other sense organs cannot give. Eyes can give the knowledge of colour, the other four sense organs cannot give that. Similarly, ears can give the knowledge of sound, the other sense organs cannot give. And Vēda is like the sixth sense organ and it gives me a knowledge which cannot be gained through any other means of knowledge. And since it is a unique knowledge, which cannot be gained through other sense organs, other sense organs cannot, even confirm that knowledge, nor can contradict that knowledge. Other sense organs can never verify the vēdic knowledge.

So we have to accept what vēdas reveal as a new knowledge and this accepting capacity is called śraddhaḥ. Śraddhaḥ means learning to accept the knowledge given by the vēda as a unique knowledge which is not available for any other sense organs to verify. And this śraddhaḥ is an extremely difficult thing to develop and one of the methods to develop śraddhaḥ is worship; Upāsana. Imagine there is a person with only four sense organs. From birth he has got only four sense organs. He does not have eyes. He is a blind person from birth. And he has got total faith in these four sense organs. And in between at the age of 50, I give him the fifth sense organ called eye, and I tell him eyes are another means of knowledge; and the eyes give a unique knowledge which you have to accept as a fact. And suppose this person argues. No; I would not accept; whatever the eyes reveal, I want to verify through the other four sense organs, because I have faith only in the 4 sense organs. The 5th sense organs I do not want to accept, therefore I want to verify the colour which the eyes reveal with the ears. The ears can never confirm the colour, ears cannot contradict also. Therefore, I should never attempt to verify the knowledge given by one sense organ with the help of the other sense organ. Then what is my attitude. Every sense organ reveals a fact, which cannot be proved or disproved by the other ones and in our tradition we say that vēda is like the sixth sense organ.

And that is why in our tradition right from birth, they tried to create śraddhaḥ in the vēda; learn to look at the vēda as the sixth sense organ, so that the knowledge received from the vēda, I accept as a fact. And suppose a person says; this blind man; He says I will not accept the eyes, if it cannot be verified by the other four sense organs, and he says I will not accept the eyes. And who is going to be the loser? If I refuse to accept the eyes, only I will not get the new knowledge of colour. Similarly, if I refuse to accept the vēda as another instrument of knowledge, I will never get unique knowledge given by the Vēda and I will continue to prove the vēdic wisdom through sense organs and other means. I will never be able to prove. That is why science is never able to prove God; Science is never able to disprove God. Because God can be understood only through the sixth sense organ, called the Vēda. And therefore the śraddhaḥ towards the vēda should be exactly like my srāddha towards my sense organs.

And how to develop that śraddhaḥ? It has to come from birth itself and that is why they kept ācārya upāsana, as part of our culture. Vēda is another form of eye. Vēda cakṣuḥ and therefore ācāryōpāsanam, the capacity; the attitude towards Vēda as a pramāṇam. This is extremely important.

Then the next one is called śaucam. śaucam means purity. Cleanliness and purity at different levels. Purity at the level of the surroundings. So therefore house, the street in front, (not to throw our rubbish in the street), the house, they all should be clean. And then coming to my dress, that should be clean. So simple dress does not mean, unclean dress. Simple dress means clean but simple dress. Many people connect simplicity with impurity. Therefore at the level of dress cleanliness. Then at the level of physical body cleanliness. They are all relatively easier. In fact, in India we have problem with external cleanliness itself.

And then comes the tougher things, that is ānthara śaucam; inner cleanliness, cleanliness at the verbal level; the words should be healthy words; we will be seeing that later in the 17th chapter; cleanliness at the verbal level. It will be called vāk tapas. We will analyse that later.

Then cleanliness at the thought level. And that means cultivating all those virtues which will keep my mind healthy. And what are those virtues which keep the mind healthy. Amānitvam, adambhitvam, Ahimṣa, Kṣāntiḥ, ācāryōpāsanam, etc. they are called mental hygiene, which will lead to mental health.

And the opposite of each one of them. Amānitvam opposite is mānitvam. Adambhitvam opposite daṁbitvaṁ. Ahimṣa opposite hiṁsa. எதுவெல் ஆ இல்லயோ; ஆ சேர்த்திக்கணம்; எதுவெல் ஆ இருக்கோ, அதுவெல், ஆவை நீக்கணம். Anārjavam opposite of ārjavam. The opposite of each one of these virtues is mental unhygienic if that quality is there; which will cause mental sickness. And therefore enjoyment of a healthy mind, by cultivating all the virtues prescribed here is called śaucam.

And the next virtue is sthairyam. Sthairyam is sthirathā. Will power. Perseverance. Commitment is called sthiram. When we start any pursuit, certainly there will be obstacles and set back. Some of them are actual obstacle, some of them are imaginary obstacles. And because of the actual or imaginary obstacle, if I withdraw from my pursuit, it is asthirathvam. Sthirathvam means any type of obstacle may come, I will continue.

प्रारभ्यते न खलु विघ्नभयेन नीचैः
प्रारभ्य विघ्नविहता विरमन्ति मध्याः ॥
विघ्नैः पुनः पुनरपि प्रतिहन्यमानाः
प्रारब्धमुत्तमगुणा न परित्यजन्ति ॥ २७ ॥

prārabhyatē na khalu vighnabhayēna nīcaih
prārabhya vighnavihatā viramanti madhyāḥ || vighnaiḥ punaḥ punarapi pratihanyamānāḥ prārabdhamuttamaguṇā na parityajanti || 27 ||

Bhartṛhari, in his Nīti Ṣatakam, talks about three grades of people. The lowest category is that who will not start anything at all because they are afraid of failure. They will tell everyone that I have never failed in life. What did you do. Nothing. This is the first category. Never start anything.

There is a second category; they start; the slightest obstacle appears, they drop. prārabhya vighnavihatā viramanti madhyāḥ, they are mediocre. They start. And who are the uttama jana. Vighnaiḥ punaḥ punarapi pratihanyamānāḥ. Any amount of obstacle, they again get up; they have a resilient mind, they fall and they get up and continue. As they say: when the going gets tough; the tough gets going. Prārabdhamuttamaguṇā na parityajanti.

And to highlight this value only the story of Bhagiratha prayathnam, which we saw in the 10th chapter. How Bhagiratha brought Gaṅga. Gaṅga avatharaṅgam story. I do not want to get into that story. We have got the story of Samudra madanam. How many obstacles? Until it is achieved, the uttama guṇā continues and that capacity, will power is called sthairyam. This is another virtue, especially in spiritual path.

The next one is ātmavinigrahaḥ. Ātma vinigrahaḥ means self-mastery. Self management. Being the master of my own equipments or instruments. We have seen in Tatva-bōdha, we have got seventeen organs. Pañca-jñānēndriāṅis, karmēndriyāṅis five are there; praṅās, five are there; mind, the emotional faculty and buddhi, the intellectual-faculty; seventeen instruments we have got, inbuilt in us and through these instruments alone, I have to accomplish any goal in life. And before using any instrument, I have to make sure that instrument is healthy and the instrument is under my control.

In Kathōpaniṣad, we saw the example of the chariot, the horses, and the reins, the driver, etc. The horses are like the sense organs and the reins which control the reins are like the mind and intellect is comparable to the driver. We require an informed driver and we require the controlled steering or reins and the horses must be tamed and obedient, then alone I can reach the destination. In the same way, we have the body, senses, the mind and the intellect. Unless I can manage myself, there is no question of managing a company.

So in management science, what is first lesson? Can you manage yourselves? Can you manage your tongue; the eating tongue; the talking tongue? Can you manage your own emotion? If I cannot manage myself, how can I hope to manage anything and therefore Vēdas says start with self-management. And that self-management is called ātmavinigrahaḥ; Ātma means stūla sūkṣma śarīram. Not satcidanada ātma. Vinigrahaḥ means mastery.

And the entire Aṣṭāṅga Yōga of Patāñjali is meant for this purpose. If you take Aṣṭāṅga yōga, they prescribe various āsanās. This is to manage your annamaya kōśaḥ. Is your body listening to you? If I say my body to sit, whether it will listen. First problem is the knee joint. Knee joints are saying "I am here"; "I am here"; and similarly back. So therefore āsanās is the fundamental thing to keep your body obedient to you. Very important thing. We think that it is meant for some people to do extra ordinary feat. Just to sit in the class, for an hour, we require a healthy body. Āsanās is a beautiful system of Aṣṭāṅga yōga.

Then they have prāṇāyāma to get mastery over prāṇamaya kōśa, prāṇa, apāna, vyāna, udāna, samāna, the physiological system must be healthy and therefore they got prathyāhāra mastery over the sense organs. Then they got dhāraṇa, dhyāna and samādhi, mastery over the mind, developing attention span, developing focusing capacity. For that three exercises dhāraṇa, dhyāna and samādhi; absorption. Swami Chinmayānanda used to tell that the student must be so absorbed in the class so much and even if the ceiling comes down, student should not know what is happening. Otherwise, if someone comes late, we will be watching his movements, what dress, colour, etc. That 'I' should die to the world, that is samādhi.

Samādhi is not a mystical thing. Samādhi is the absorbing capacity; absorption capacity in any action I undertake. Thus yama, niyama, āsana, prāṇāyāma, prathyāhāra, dhāraṇa, dhyāna, samādhi; the entire yōga system is not for jñānam. Yōga never gives jñānam. Not for mōkṣa. Yōga gives only ātma-vinigrahaḥ. Then you have to come to guru and சமத்தாய் வேதாந்தம் படிக்கணம்; start learning vēdānta. Yōga is not to skrit vēdānta but yōga is a preparation for vēdānta sṛavaṇam.

More in the next class.

Hari Om

170 Chapter 13, Verses 09-11

ॐ

From the 8th verse of the 13th chapter, Lord Kṛṣṇa has taken up the third topic for analysis. He has already dealt with two topics; viz., kṣētraṁ and kṣētrajña and now Kṛṣṇa is dealing with the third topic called jñānam and we saw that in this context, the word jñānam refers to a set of virtues which will keep the mind a healthy one.

Just as there are certain physical parameters, which will indicate the physical-health, like the pressure, the level of cholesterol, the level of hemoglobin, etc. will indicate the physical-health; similarly there are certain parameters or virtue, which indicate mental health.

And this mental-health is useful for every human-being to enjoy peace of mind and this mental-health is particularly required for a Vēdāntic-seeker because only if the mind is healthy, the intellect will be freely available for higher-pursuit. If the mind is not healthy, the intellect will be a hostage of a sick mind. You will not be allowed to think properly because a disturbed mind will suppress your intellect and that is why when you are mentally disturbed, you can never read anything where intellectual application is required. You cannot hear any discourse where intellectual application is required; intellectual application is possible only when the mind is relaxed. Mind is relaxed only when the mind is healthy; mind is healthy only when these parameters are handled and maintained.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa gives the list. We covered the 8th verse in which some of them have been mentioned; amānitvam, adambitvam, ahiṁsa, Kṣāntiḥ, ārjavam, ācāryōpāsanaṁ, śaucam, sthairyam, ātmavinigrahaḥ; 9 virtues have been enumerated; now in the next verse, we are going to get some more virtues. We will read.

इन्द्रियार्थेषु वैराग्यम् अनहङ्कार एव च ।
जन्ममृत्युजराव्याधि - दुःखदोषानुदर्शनम् ॥ १३.९ ॥

indriyārthēṣu vairāgyamanahaṅkāra ēva ca |
janmamṛtyujarāvyaḍhiduḥkhadōṣānudarśanam || 13.9 ||

Indriyārthēṣu vairāgyam; these two words together, refers to the next virtue, viz., mastery of the sense organs. Sense organs are a set of instruments gifted to us by the Lord and they are very important instruments because through them alone we interact with the world. We have got two sets of sense organs one set is called jñānēndriyāṇi, through which we receive the input from the world, they are the entrance gate through which the world enters into us, and we have got a set of sense organs called karmēndriyāṇi, through which we express ourselves, we respond to the external world; therefore, they are exit gates.

So therefore, sense organs are extremely important for interaction with the world and not only for all ordinary interaction, for all the spiritual sādhanās also, you require these organs. And since they are a set of instruments given to us, we have to make sure that they are under our control and we are not the slaves of our sense organs. This avoidance of slavery to the sense organs; otherwise called indriya nigrahaḥ; otherwise indriya jayah; otherwise called damaḥ; otherwise called prathyāhāra; that is mentioned by Kṛṣṇa.

And this requires a constant alertness on our part, because the sense organs or generally in contact with the sensory world; and we have five sense organs and we have got five segments; śabda, sparśa, rūpa, rasa, gandha; these five sense objects and we have got sense organs, which one functioning in its own respective fields.

And when the sense-organs come in contact with any object on a regular basis, unknowingly the sense-organs develop an attachment to the sense-objects. So every sense-organ is prone to develop attachment to any particular sense-object; addiction forming nature is there, in every sense-organ. So you see an object or a person or a particular programme in the TV for a few days. Initially you say it is nice, it is wonderful, gradually the sense organs begin to demand association with the sense object. And when they demand it is for us to decide whether we should fulfil the demand of the sense organ. Exactly bringing up a child. To a child you give something, after some time, the child begins to demand; give me chocolate. Give me chocolate. The mother gives initially; thereafter, the child gets addicted; then the child demands; it begins to throw tantrums also; and the mother does not how to handle to avoid the tantrums and the problems; and she succumbs and agrees to give the child the chocolate saying that it is the last time. Then a time comes, then the child knows how to make the mother do what it wants.

Every sense object is like such a child. Initially you allow the sense organ to function in a field; later the sense organs begins to demand; and once you pamper the sense organs you have become an addict or slave. And afterwards you try to master, the sense organs has become now powerful enough and if you say no, to any addicted thing, you say no, the sense organs know how to throw tantrums. They will not allow you to do anything. If you go on reading, it is coffee time; and one day you say that I won't give you coffee. Then you do anything, there is only one japa; even Namaśivāya would not happen like this. Only coffee japa. It will not allow you to do anything. It can even create headache in some people. That is why Kṛṣṇa said in the second-chapter.

इन्द्रियाणि प्रमाथीनि हरन्ति प्रसभं मनः || २- ६० ||

yatatō hyapi kauntēya puruṣasya vipāścitaḥ |
indriyāṇi pramāthīni haranti prasabhaṃ manaḥ || 2.60 ||

Pampered by me, the sense organs can become so powerful that they can even drag the mind to its field. And then the intellect tells that it is not good; I should not pamper, I should not become a slave; because I want to attain Moksha from the whole creation. And being the slave of a coffee, a cigarette, liquor or something, if I am not a master of even few little small things, how can I become a master of, how can I get the freedom from the whole creation?

And therefore the intellect begins to feel the guilt and that is how the tug-of-war begins; intellect decide I want to get out of the habit and even I give up the habit for a few days and thereafter again he gets addicted. Mark Twain or somebody said: Who said giving up smoking is difficult? I have given up many times. Then begins the big tug of war or the intellect says that I am a Gīta student, and I should be a master, I should not be a weakling, and it takes wonderful decision, a few days they are implemented, and again gets to the old rut. Called relapse.

And then once the intellect fails a few times, intellect does not know how to handle the guilt. Then intellect uses another method; because the guilt is really painful at the same time the intellect is not able to find out a method of getting out of the addiction.

So what is the best method? If you cannot defeat your enemy, join. And the joining is called, justification. So the intellect knows how to justify every addiction. It will argue, even though the manufacturers have to live. If we do not buy, how will they live. And therefore we have to help them survive by somehow. Like that person who wanted to show the harm in taking liquor and he did an experiment, he just put an insect inside the liquor and the insect died. In front were sitting a lot of liquor addicts. He showed the experiment and asked them what is the conclusion you arrive at? Because the insect died in the alcohol. This fellow got up and said: Whoever takes liquor will have a clean stomach without any germs. Because it will all be killed and I will have a clean stomach. புரியலாமா? So therefore regularly take. Any argument you give, the intellect knows how to manipulate.

And therefore only the best solution is with regard to any addiction, prevention is always better than trying to cure. And therefore alertness becomes important and that is why they say, once in a while say No to anything that you regularly do. So all forms of tapas, vṛthams etc. we practice, they are all meant for avoidance of sense-slavery.

In yōga śāstra, it is called pratyāhāraḥ. In Vēdānta śāstra, it is called damaḥ; damaḥ. In sādhanā catuṣṭaya sampathi, śamaḥ, damaḥ, uparathi, etc. are said. So indriyārthēṣu vairāgyam means damaḥ, and vairāgyam means dispassion, not hatred; you are allowed to enjoy legitimate pleasures without becoming a slave of that pleasure. That you enjoy the pleasure; you decide what the sense organs should do, the sense organs should not decide what you should do? So that is the important virtue.

Then the next virtue is anahaṅkāra. Ahaṅkāra means self-conceit, which we saw before mānitvam. And anahaṅkāra free from self-conceit or humility. Freedom from egoism, arrogance, pride, vanity; any word you can use. Now the question is, amānitvam also means freedom from self-conceit; anahaṅkāra also means freedom from self-conceit. Why should Kṛṣṇa repeat that? After-all we have wonderful memory power! Why should Kṛṣṇa repeat?

Even though in normal context, amānitvam and anahaṅkāra means the same; in this context, we make a subtle difference between these two.

Amānitvam means freedom from self-conceit at the thought level. Mananam is thinking at the thinking level I do not have self-conceit; I do not think I am the greatest person in the world; I very well know my limitations, and therefore at thought level freedom from self-conceit is called amānitvam.

Whereas anahaṅkāra means freedom from self-conceit at the verbal level. Aham Aham iti kāraṇam, ahaṅkāraḥ. All the time, நான்; நான்; நான்; என்று போசிண்டு இருக்கொமோ இல்லயோ? Me Me Me, you are talking. All the time using only first person singular either aham, avam, mam, maya, or mahyam; all the time centered around aham. Any subject-matter you talk about, this person of self-conceit will convert into a subject matter relating to himself. You talk about an event in America; he will start; when I went to that place, he will convert it into 'I'. Any topic under the Sun, this fellow will convert into 'I' topic, that is called self-propagation, self-proclamation, blowing his own trumpet; that is ahaṅkāra. And anahaṅkāra means freedom from that.

So thus amānitvam, adambitvam, anahaṅkāra, all the three convey the same idea at three different levels; Amānitvam means freedom from conceit at the mental level; anahaṅkāra is freedom from conceit at the verbal level; Adambitvaṁ is freedom from conceit at the kāyika level; by pomp and show, dress and body things and all, simplicity. All these are the similar nature only. Therefore, anahaṅkāra ēva ca.

Then the next virtue is: janma mṛtyu jarā vyādhi duḥkha dōṣānudarśanam. Do not be body-oriented. Do not consider your life as something connected to only to physical existence. Physical existence is only a limited external aspect of yours. You are something other than the physical body. You have got a higher-nature, different from the body. This body orientation will obstruct your higher pursuit and not only that, this body orientation will lead to a lot of problems also.

And what are the problems of body oriented life? And especially nowadays so much importance is given to body; beauty objects even for men; body care; teeth care, eye care; brow care; hair care; all inch by inch I am particular about how I look. This body orientation can be terrible. Very carefully. This should not be misunderstood.

Vēdānta never says that you should neglect your body; because body is the instrument, which is required for all spiritual pursuit as well as material pursuits. But what Vēdānta says is that body is only a means; it is not an end in itself. In fact, it is only an outermost kōśa called annamaya kōśa. And how to get detached from the body. For that Kṛṣṇa says: see the problem of body attachment. Dōṣa anudarśanam. Anudarśanam means constantly reminding. Reminding of what? Dōṣa. The various defects; deficiencies; problems involved in dēha abhimāna; body orientation. And what are the Dōṣas? Janma, mṛtyu, jarā, vyādhi duḥkha. The body is subject to five-fold problems; and what are the five-fold problems. The first one is janma; any way fortunately the problem is over; நம்ம பொறந்து வெச்சாச்சு. The body has lived in solitary confinement in the womb of the mother for 10 months without any freedom; and coming out is also a struggle. Anyway that is over.

Now what are the later problems? Jarā. Jarā means the old age and attendant problems, where I do not have any will power in deciding my conditions of the body. My willpower will be strong and functioning only in the initial part of my life; as I grow older and older, helplessness becomes more and more. In addition to various other problems. Jarā means old age.

Then vyādhi; vyādhi means what? Diseases.

And then finally what? Mṛtyu; mṛtyu means maraṇam; leaving everything that is near and dear to me; separation.

All these problems duḥkham, all these duḥkham are the defect of physical life. And if you remember these dōṣas, then you will never be interested in dēha-abhimāna; and therefore, dēha-abhimāna dōṣa-darśanam is a requisite for Ātma-jñānam.

असक्तिरनभिष्वङ्गः पुत्रदारगृहादिषु ।
नित्यं च समचित्तत्वम् इष्टानिष्टोपपत्तिषु ॥ १३.१०॥

[asaktiranabhiṣvaṅgaḥ putradāragṛhādiṣu |
nityam ca samacittatvamiṣṭāniṣṭōpapattiṣu || 13.10 ||](#) asaktiḥ; asaktiḥ means mental detachment. Avoidance of mental slavery with regard to any external object, situation or person. Previously we talked about indriyārthēṣu vairāgyam. Now we are talking about asaktiḥ. Both mean detachment only but the difference is previously it is detachment from the standpoint of sense organs; it was indriya nigrahaḥ; here asaktiḥ deals with manō nigrahaḥ. So previous one is damaḥ; the present one is śamaḥ. And why does Kṛṣṇa talk about both of them?

Mental-detachment cannot be easily attained, because mind is a subtler instrument. Therefore taking the mind away from the object of attachment is extremely difficult; whereas sense organs are external instruments; they are grosser instruments and therefore they can be controlled in a relatively easier way.

And how can you control the sense organs? By physically being away from the place. If a person has a tendency to use a particular object, addiction causing object; he can be physically separated. In all the de-addiction centers; the object will not be available. பாரத்தாலே வேணம் என்று தோன்னும் பிஸிக்கலா எடுத்தாடறது. But the problem is: even when the sense organs the physically separated from the sense objects, the mind can continue to dwell on that. And as long as the mind dwells on that, again re-addiction or relapse is possible. Therefore as long as the person is physically away, he will have control. அதற்கு அப்பால் திரும்பி வந்தால்; அது திரும்பி வரும்.

इन्द्रियार्थान्विमूढात्मा मिथ्याचारः स उच्यते || ३- ६ ||

karmēndriyāṇi saṁyamya ya āstē manasā smaran |
indriyārthān vimūḍhātmā mithyācāraḥ sa ucyatē || 3.6 ||

So initially you start from sense control; and even after sense control; mind continues to have a vāsana and therefore we have to handle the mind also.

And for that the mind has to be educated of the evils involved in the addiction and once the mind is mastered; thereafter, even if the object of addiction is in front. I have got out of habit of smoking or drinking. If the other person is using that right in front; I can remain there without having a temptation. So that is the higher stage of detachment born out of vivēka śaktiḥ. And only when I say NO out of discrimination; it becomes transcending. If I stop them because of the others' pressure, it becomes suppression only. Therefore suppression should be converted to transcendence. And that transcendence is inner detachment. After inner detachment, I am not worried about temptation. I move anywhere. Rāga-dvēṣa-viyuktaistu. Kṛṣṇa tells all this beautifully in the second-chapter; towards the end;

रागद्वेषवियुक्तैस्तु विषयानिन्द्रियैश्चरन् |
आत्मवशैर्विधेयात्मा प्रसादमधिगच्छति || २-६४ ||

rāgadvēṣaviyuktaistu viṣayānindriyaiścāran |
ātmaśāyairvidhēyātmā prasādamadhigacchati || 2.64 ||

Once the mind is mastered; let this person be in any field; he can never get addicted to anything or temptations. Until that possibility is there, I have to physically get away from the tempting situations and therefore asaktiḥ. Detachment or dispassion at the mental level.

And then what is the next virtue? Putra-dāra-grhādiṣu anabhiṣvaṅgaḥ. Those two words should be read together. Not anabhiṣvaṅgaḥ one virtue; putradāra another virtue. Both together. That is putradāragrḥādiṣu anabhiṣvaṅgaḥ. Anabhiṣvaṅgaḥ means over attachment. Intense attachment. Thīvra rāgaḥ; and Anabhiṣvaṅgaḥ means absence of over attachment or absence of excessive attachment.

Towards whom? Kṛṣṇa gives a list of important things. What are they? Putra; Putra means what; putri also; putraḥ or putri means child. Dāra; Dāra means wife; Wife indicates husband also. Therefore we will translate as spouse. Putra means child. Apathyam and dāra represents spouse. Gṛham. Gṛham our own house; அதிலயும் விதியாசம் இருக்கு. Rented house சொன்ன detachment வரும். ஆரோடோ வீடு; அடி ஆணி. So own house. Gṛham ādi; means etc. a few other close things. You can supply. May be the bed; dog; you think. With regard to those few things or people, are with whom you move constantly; with whom you live not merely years; but decades and your life is closely intertwined with them. Thus there are a few things and beings with which you are intensely connected. And with regard to them you can never avoid attachment. Kṛṣṇa admits that attachment cannot be avoided with regards to a few things and beings with which you regularly move.

And if you should not have any attachment, it is possible only under once circumstance; you should be Paramahansa parivarācāryaḥ; you should never stay with a person regularly; you should never stay in one place regularly; constantly you have to move. Then there is no scope of attachment. But as long as we are living in a set-up, our live is intertwined with a few people and things; attachment will be there.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa says, I do not ask you to avoid attachment. I am only saying, avoid over-attachment. Excessive attachment, do not have. A little bit attachment permitted. So this is particularly a concession given to Gṛihasthās. இல்லைனா, புத்ர தாரா எல்லாம் ஆருக்கு; ஸன்யாஸிக்கா? It is clear. So one Sanyāsi read this. If I have to follow this virtue, I have to get married? Na Na Na. Because Kṛṣṇa has said 20 values should be followed. Therefore I do not have a wife; So let me get married and get detachment. Idiot. This is with regard to Gṛihasthās. Attachment is allowed; but Kṛṣṇa says avoid excessive attachment.

Now the next question is: How to differentiate attachment and excessive attachment? Is there a barometer, thermometer; if you keep on the head and if yellow comes, attachment and if red comes, excessive attachment. How do you know?

So Ānandagiri, who writes a sub commentary on Śankarācārya's commentary, he gives a beautiful explanation, differentiating attachment and over-attachment. He defines attachment as mamakārah; claiming a thing or a person as mine; He belongs to me. I belong to you; you belong to me. நீ என்னை சேர்ந்தவன்; நான் உனக்கு; நீ எனக்கு. Somebody said: That is how marriage starts; Mēra Mēri; Mēra Mēri and then after sometime; Māra Māri. In Hindi Māra Māri means ஆடிதடி; quarrel. Mēra Mēri; I for you; You for me. Therefore Mamakāra is attachment. And as long as I claim a thing or being as Mama, it is only a related object or person which remains even when the object is gone. I am very much there; only the object is gone; I am there as a complete person. My life is there. My journey continues. Only associated person or thing is gone; and my journey has to continue.

But when the attachment is excessive; then it is no more mamakāra; my identification becomes so complete; that I become one with that object; and therefore I do not see any difference between that object or person and myself. That means whatever happens to that person I take as happening to myself. And naturally, when that person is dead, instead of saying that person is gone and I continue to survive; I feel that I myself am dead and gone; that means my life appears to be empty. If I think my life has no meaning, without another person; it is excessive attachment.

If I think my life has no meaning without another person, it is excessive attachment, because the fact is every life has got its own meaning, irrespective of other people being there or not; because we have all come to the earth for the particular purpose of spiritual evolution and every one of us has come independently; we are never born together. We are never going to die together. As Chinmayānanda says: Alone to the Alone is All alone is Life.

And therefore we have come here for our spiritual-growth; and Bhagavān has connected a few people; so that our growth is helped. And the people will be around as long as there is need of them for my growth and once that purpose is served; thereafter each Jīva has to continue his own journey. It is like a train journey. I have entered the compartment in a particular station and I have started the journey. Another particular station another person enters. And then our seats in the neighboring No. And therefore we enquire; Who are You etc. and there is mutual exchange also; and thereafter we become friends; but both of us have got our own destination. Either I get down first or the other person gets down first; but the journey has to continue. The whole earth is a compartment alone. We have all come together and we progress and thereafter we have to continue our journey in our own direction.

If this is forgotten; I think my life is purposeless, without another person; and once that thought comes, it has become excessive attachment. That means I cannot imagine living without that person. My life is empty. எதுக்காக நான் வாழணம்? ஆருக்காக வாழணம்? I will take potassium cyanide; and I will go immediately. Blabbering indicate excessive attachment.

Kṛṣṇa says you can cry. Nothing wrong. Attachment will give grief; but you should never forget; that everyone is an individual and we have to make our own journey. And therefore not forgetting this fact: what fact? Life is like a train journey.

That is called absence of over attachment. Mamakāram இருக்கட்டும், தப்பில்லை; Not being total Tādātmyam, especially with regard to these closer ones; So putradāragrḥādiṣu anabhiṣvaṅgaḥ.

Then the next virtue is: nityam samacittatvam ca iṣṭāniṣṭopapattiṣu. So this gives the essence of karma-yōga.

योगस्थः कुरु कर्माणि सङ्गं त्यक्त्वा धनञ्जय |
सिद्धसिद्धयोः समो भूत्वा समत्वं योग उच्यते || २- ४८ ||

[yōgasthaḥ kuru karmāṇi saṅgaṃ tyaktvā dhanañjaya |
siddhasiddhyōḥ samō bhūtvā samatvaṃ yōga ucyatē || 2.48 ||](#)

என்னா என்னை பார்க்கிறேன்; This is in second-chapter; என்னோட ஸமத்வம் போயிடும் என்று தோன்றது. So siddhasiddhyōḥ samō bhūtvā; siddhasiddhyaḥ iṣṭa aniṣṭa; samō bhūtvā samatvaṃ yōga ucyatē.

Same thing Kṛṣṇa tells; Sama-cittatvam. iṣṭa means favourable situations; aniṣṭa means what: unfavourable situations. Upapattiṣu; on their arrival. So upapattiḥ means here means arrival; prāpṭhi. So sama-cittatvam means freedom from elation; freedom from depression also. Over-excitement in both situations. In a happy situation also; do not be carried away; because even that situation is temporary. As in extremely sorrowful situation also; do not be carried away, because remember; this will also pass away. But the worst situation will go; even the worst எழரை சனி will remain for 7 and half years; and generally after one or two years we get used to; like our roads; we do not complain about roads; because we are now accustomed; In fact, if we they all become alright, we will become uncomfortable. So any grīha and all you will get used to. Therefore whether it is favourable or unfavourable situation, learn to maintain the equanimity; not that the mind will not be disturbed at all; we are not machine; mind will be disturbed; it will not be a violent upheaval; let it be a manageable disturbance; Let it not be a violent carrying away disturbance. Let it a manageable disturbance. And how to do that? Kṛṣṇa does not say. But learn and practice that.

And from this advice we come to know one important thing. Kṛṣṇa says every human being should practice equanimity in favourable and unfavorable situation. From this one idea becomes clear. What is that? Every human being will have both favourable and unfavourable situations. No śāstra gives you a method of making all situations favourable all the time. அதுக்கு வழியே கிடயாது. Even if you have got prayascitta karmāṇi, remedies and all, those remedies are not useless; they can make certain situations favourable; but no human being can make the life hundred percent favourable. And that is why we are asked to read the Purāṇās all the time, so that we will come to know that even great kings; even great dhārmic people like Dharmaputra and even Avathārās; all of them have gone through ups and downs. If they themselves cannot avoid opposite experiences, what this ordinary fly. This ordinary human being I;

अवश्यम् भावि भावानाम् अप्रतिकारम् भवेत् यति
तता दुःखैर् न लिप्येरन् नळराम युधिष्ठिराः ॥

avaśyam bhāvi bhāvānām apratikāram bhavēt yati tatā duḥkhair na lipyēran naḷarāma yudhiṣṭirāḥ ||

If there is a remedy for all the problems of life, then Naḷa would not have suffered in life. Being a great king, Rāma would not have suffered; Yudhiṣṭirāḥ would not have suffered. The very fact that they suffered indicates that life is a mixture of both.

And why did Bhagavān keep philosophical question comes? Why did Bhagavān keeps them? Because according to Bhagavān and śāstra; spiritual growth requires suffering also. According to Bhagavān and śāstra; spiritual growth requires suffering also. In fact, spiritual growth is more in suffering. Because then only you remember God. இல்லைனா பகவானை யார் ஞாபகம் வெச்சிண்டு இருப்பா. Therefore opposites are bound to be there. Vēdānta does not avoid opposites; Vēdānta teaches you how to maintain the equanimity in opposites.

And what is the method? There are two methods:

In the first stage, the method is called karma-yōga; and then the higher stage is jñāna-yōgaḥ; karma-yōga is like the first aid; jñāna-yōga is like the ultimate cure. So when a person is bleeding in an accident; first aid is very important. The first aid is not there, the person would not survive. Even though the first aid is a temporary remedy; he is taken to hospital for serious treatment. He has to be given the permanent treatment also. Similarly karma-yōga is the first aid method of relative peace and jñāna-yōga is the permanent method of getting permanent peace. What is the karma-yōga method? I do not want to get into that. Care of third chapter.

To put in a nutshell; accept every experience as Īśvaraprasāda; Bhagavān has specially designed this experience: made to order. Specially designed my experience. So it means Bhagavān takes care of me specially for my spiritual growth. துன்ப புடத்தில் இட்டு தூயவனாக்கி வைத்தாய். So thus prasāda bhuddhi; helps in sama cittatvam,

When should you have the samacittatvam? Morning or evening? So Kṛṣṇa says: nityam; throughout the waking hours. During sleep, you need not need sama cittatvam; because there is no experience. Therefore throughout the waking hours, there should be the attempt to maintain peace. Iṣṭāniṣṭopapattiṣu. karma-yōga. The entire second line is one value. and that value is samatvam through karma-yōga.

Verse 13.11

मयि चानन्ययोगेन भक्तिरव्यभिचारिणी ।
विविक्तदेशसेवित्वम् अरतिर्जनसंसदि ॥ १३.११ ॥

mayi cānanyayōgēna bhaktiravyabhicāriṇī |
vividhadēśasēvitvam aratirjanasaṃsadi || 13.11 ||

So in the previous verse it was pointed that we should maintain equanimity and Kṛṣṇa does not give the method and I told you the method. I told you means I borrowed it from the 3rd chapter and that method is what? Prasāda bhāvana; prasāda means gift coming from the Lord.

And why is it called prasādaḥ? The word prasādaḥ, I think I have told you before; literally the word means tranquility of mind; and when you look upon anything as a gift from the Lord; it gives you tranquility of mind; and therefore the object is called prasādaḥ. So by implication vadai, kadalai, chundal; why are they prasādam? They are not prasādam. When you receive them, as a gift coming from the Lord, because of your devotion, you have got a sense of fulfilment; and that gives you tranquility and that produces tranquility is prasādaḥ; prasāda Janaka; prasādaḥ iti uchayatē. Therefore I should have prasāda bhāvana; that it is coming from the Lord.

And this prasāda-bhāvana is possible only if I have devotion to the Lord. Without devotion to the Lord; karma-yōga does not exist. And that is why Dayānanda Swami repeatedly says: there is no karma-yōga separate from Bhakthi-yōga and there is no bhakthi-yōga separate from karma-yōga, because karma-yōga exists and is possible only for a person who has got devotion to the Lord and therefore karma-yōga is itself is a level of Bhakthi-yōga only because karma-yōgi must have intense devotion to the Lord.

And therefore Dayānanda Swami says; there is no question of secular karma-yōga. So without touching Lord, if you ask whether you can practice karma-yōga; one has to say No.

Atheist cannot be a karma-yōgi. Karma-yōga presupposes faith in God. And of course karma-yōgi does not know the ultimate nature of God. If he knows, he will be a jñāni; so he has got his own concept of God, in any form he likes an iṣṭa-dēvathā; as ēka-rūpa-Īśvara or anēka-rūpa-Īśvara. Remember; ēka rūpa Īśvara means Lord as a personal God or God as the viśva-rūpa-Īśvara; jagatha īśadhi yukta sēvanam; aṣṭa mūrṭi brk dēva pūjanam. And therefore Kṛṣṇa wants to say without bhakthi karma-yōga is not possible. And therefore Arjuna, Mayi bhakthiḥ is the next important virtue. So Mayi means in Me. In Me means in Īśvara; and what type of devotion it should be. That we will see in the next class.

Hari Om

ॐ

In this 13th chapter, Lord Kṛṣṇa is now dealing with the topic of Jñānam, from verse No.8 up to verse No.12 and in this context, the word Jñānam has a unique meaning and that meaning is all the virtues of the mind which are conducive to the attainment of knowledge. Jñāna upakāraka guṇāḥ. Jñāna sahāyaka guṇāḥ. Can you get the meaning? Guṇāḥ means those virtues; sahāyaka meaning promoting or favoring, Jñāna self-knowledge. Any virtue which makes the mind eligible for receiving this spiritual knowledge, all of those virtues are called here together as Jñānam.

We have seen three verses in the group, 8, 9 and 10, and we have entered into the 11th verse, where Lord Kṛṣṇa emphasises the importance of bhakthi as a very important virtue. Spiritual knowledge is not possible without devotion to the Lord. Only in the atmosphere of bhakthi, Jñāna-yōga is possible; and that is why in the 12th chapter, we saw karma-yōga also should take place only in the atmosphere of bhakthi; upāsana yōga also must take place only in the atmosphere of bhakthi and finally, Jñāna-yōga also is possible only when devotion is there and that is the reason in the 12th chapter, we named each yōga as bhakthi-yōga itself. Karma-yōga itself is called bhakthi-yōga stage No.1, upāsana yōga itself is called bhakthi-yōga stage II, and Jñāna-yōga is also called bhakthi-yōga stage III, because Jñāna-yōga also requires the background of bhakthi, therefore Kṛṣṇa says: mayi bhakthiḥ, devotion towards me. Here the word Mayi does not refer to Kṛṣṇa as a person, but it refers to the Lord who can be invoked in any form that you like. Kṛṣṇa has already said in the 7th chapter:

यो यो यां यां तनुं भक्तः श्रद्धयार्चितुमिच्छति |
तस्य तस्याचलां श्रद्धां तामेव विदधाम्यहम् || ७-२१ ||

yō yō yām yām tanuṁ bhaktaḥ śraddhayā'rcitumicchati |
tasya tasyācalāṁ śraddhāṁ tāmēva vidadhāmyaham || 7.21 ||

Lord does not have a form of his own but the formless Lord can be invoked through any particular form that we like and therefore any form is OK. Kṛṣṇa it can be or Rāma or Gaṇapathi. Mayi is only upalakṣaṇa; we should not conclude only Kṛṣṇa bhakthi gives liberation; that is not the idea. And when Kṛṣṇa prescribes Bhakthi as a necessary condition, we should ask the question; what type of bhakthi? Because in the 7th chapter, Kṛṣṇa has talked about āṛta-bhakthi, arthārthi-bhakthi, jijñāsu-bhakthi and Jñāni bhakthi. Do you remember? If you remember those four types, naturally the question will be which type of bhakthi is talked about here.

Certainly, it cannot be jñāni-bhakthi, because these is a sādhanā for the attainment of Jñānam and therefore it is practised by ajñāni only. Because here we are talking about the sādhanās to become a Jñāni and therefore at this moment, this person is ajñāni. Therefore Jñāni-bhakthi is ruled out. And then what are the other three types; arta, āṛtharthi, and jijñāsu. Arta-bhaktha, artharthi-bhaktha also is not going to seek self-knowledge, because the very name shows he is interested in something. Arta-Bhaktha is a person in crisis, a problem, and therefore he will ask for only freedom from that crisis and that bhakthi will not help in gaining knowledge. In fact, he cannot even study vēdānta properly, because his mind will be (என்த ஸ்வாமிக்கு; என்த விரதம்: என்ன வேண்டுகதல் பண்ணினா, என்ன ப்ரொப்லம் போகும்? which God, what vṛtham). So when a person is obsessed with worldly problem he is not going to be interested in self-knowledge. Therefore āṛta bhakthi is never conducive and arthārthi bhaktha is interested only in arta and therefore that also is ruled out. So therefore by elimination, three are gone, so only one is left out; what is that? Jijñāsu-bhakthi. The one who considers that the Lord is the goal itself; not that I want to accomplish something through God.

In the seventh chapter, I pointed out God can be used as a means for worldly ends or God can be looked upon as an end in itself. And the bhakthi talked about is that devotion in which God is the end in itself. And if I have to choose God as the end or destination, I should have the maturity enough to understand that everything other than God is perishable and therefore cannot give what I want. Thus, this bhakthi requires vairāgyam towards the world; without vairāgyam, this bhakthi is impossible. Therefore, vivēka janya, vairāgya janya bhakthi is a devotion, in which I know God alone can give me pūrṇatvam, security, fulfilment, etc.

And that Bhakthi, Kṛṣṇa calls avyabhicāriṇī bhaktiḥ, a devotion which is unswerving, unflinching, which is one-pointed.

And ananya-yōgēna, with undivided attention, that is even when the worldly transactions are going, and even when the worldly responsibilities are fulfilled, this devotee remembers: That my goal is something else. So now and then, he should be reminded, like New Year or something like that, what is the purpose of this life. Often people ask what is the purpose of this life? Pūrṇatva-prāp̥thi is the purpose of this life. I have to keep on expanding enough to reach a stage beyond which I should not be able to expand, i.e., possible only in infinitude and that pūrṇatvam is the goal. And reminding it off and on, is ananya-yōga bhakthi and that is very very important.

Then the next virtue is vivikta-deśa-sēvitvam. This is also considered to be an important virtue. Resorting to a secluded place, now and then. Developing the habit of going to a secluded place, not with a friend; then it is no more a secluded, resorting to solitude, in which I do not have anyone around. And I do not carry a walkman. Very important. Therefore carrying walkman or runman or anyman, I should be able. And I should find out whether I can confront myself. So more than facing other people in the society, I should ask a question whether I can face myself, whether I can accept myself, those problems will surface only when I am alone.

In fact, seclusion introduces me to myself. And in fact the fundamental problem of saṁsāra also we come to know only when we are alone, otherwise we try to escape ourselves by various diversions. In fact, a materialistic society is one, which provides maximum diversion route. And the more you take to diversion, the less you diagnose your problem, and if you do not diagnose the problem, how will you work for a solution. Therefore, solitude is to know more about myself and my problems. And this solitude has got another purpose also; that one expression of saṁsāra. Saṁsāra expresses in different forms; in the form of anxiety, in the form of fear; in the form of security; there are several versions of saṁsāra, and one expression of saṁsāra is: sense of loneliness. And this problem of loneliness can attack any person at any time in life, because that is one version of saṁsāra. And this can happen in the middle age, when the children leaves the nest, it is called the nest-leaving phase; I enjoyed the company of my children, even though I complained a lot. When the children go out for either studies or they are married and they go, there is a sense of loneliness. Or as we grow old and old, the people who are around, they may leave me. Again sense of loneliness comes. Thus loneliness is a potential problem which can attack any human being at any time.

If you have to learn to face it, you cannot do that when it comes. Trying to fight loneliness when it comes, is like digging a well when the house is on fire. And that too in Madras, you try to dig a well. And therefore better learn to be alone; better learn to enjoy solitude. And what is the best method; once in a while, just go for a walk, without walkman. Go for a walk, sit on the beach; do not take any friend or anyone. And find out how you feel. Old age will be wonderful if you have learned to tackle loneliness. It is wonderful because, the loneliness can be made use of, for vĕdāntic nidhidhyāsana. When we are alone, we cannot do much work; because physically unfit. And the people are all busy. They have no time to talk to me at all. Because everyone is working. And they do not have the time to talk also. And they also know our weakness. The moment someone asks you: How are you? We start from 1947. Before freedom, and we talk on and on, and on without full stop, coma, dash, hyphen, semicolon, and the person keeps on looking at the watch, out of respect, he does not walk out, and therefore nobody wants to talk also. I am not frightening you, but every one of us has to go through that. So why can't we go through the training rehearsal to gracefully grow old. The best rehearsal is, learn to enjoy solitude. Not eternally. Once in a while, be alone and see what happens. Who says? Not me, do not get angry with me; vivikta-deśa-sēvitvam; vivikta-deśa means secluded place, sēvitvam, regularly resorting to, now and then resorting to. You need not go anywhere, even to the terrace, you go, it is OK. Many of us have not seen our terrace at all; unless you go to dry the karuvadam. Ok. Otherwise where is time to stand and stare. And therefore vivikta-deśa-sēvitvam.

Then does that mean that you should not mingle with people at all. Kṛṣṇa says I am not saying that you should hate company of people. What Kṛṣṇa says do not get addicted to people's company. Janasaṁsadi, people's company, neighbors, relatives, etc. And ratiḥ means getting lost; aratiḥ is derived from the root, ram, and there is an intoxicant called rum. ratiḥ, Ramaṇam etc. rum effect; do not carried away by people's company because people's company provides you an ideal condition for forgetting yourselves. Forgetting the problems and therefore initially you may go out of necessity. Then make it a habit; hanging around in the village and all, we are never allowed to remain out after sunset. We have to come back and we have to do our japa, pūja, etc. but nowadays the habit is hang around, in the coffee, pizza corner, in the Nungambākkam road, they had written in Tamil, பிட்சா கோர்னர் piṭcā kōrṇar; I read it as பிக்சா கோர்னர்; bhikcā kōrṇar. So I thought wonderful; so we have advanced etc. That once in a while, for emergency etc. பிக்சா சொர்னர்.! Then only I read the English version. Pizza corner. Therefore, coffee pub and all those things, we hang around till 10, 11p.m. it is revelry, but it is wonderful, but we are becoming mentally weak, that we are not able to spend time with ourselves.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa strongly warns never take to people's company as an addiction or an escapism. And Śankarācārya in his commentary writes a note, but it is OK, if it is the association with satpurūṣaḥ. So sajjana saṃsadi ratiḥ is OK, because they will guide you properly. Any other place, you should be careful. Therefore, janasaṃsadi aratiḥ.

Verse 13.12

अध्यात्मज्ञाननित्यत्वं तत्त्वज्ञानार्थदर्शनम् ।
एतज्ज्ञानमिति प्रोक्तं अज्ञानं यदतोऽन्यथा ॥ १३.१२ ॥

[Adhyātmajñānanityatvaṃ tattvajñānārthadarśanam |
ētajjñānamiti prōktamajñānaṃ yadatō'nyathā ||13.12 ||](#)

Then the next virtue; in the first line in the second word, tattva-jñānārtha-darśanam. All these virtues or values are prescribed for the sake of Jñāna yōgyatha prāp̥thi. And by gaining the eligibility for knowledge, what do you accomplish at the end? Jñānam itself. And if I have to have a value for Jñāna yōgyatha, then I should have a value for Jñānam. When I will value the examination of GMAT, TOFEL, etc. I value all those examinations when I value benefit or the result of those examinations. I want to join an American university. The more value I have with regard to the end, then I will have the value for the means.

So the love of the means, is directly proportional to the love of the end. And therefore, these virtues I will value if I have a value for Jñānam. Then when will I have value for jñānam. That I will have only if I know the benefit of Jñānam, tattva jñāna-ārtha; tattva jñānam, the knowledge of tattvam, the reality; arthaḥ means prayōjanam or phalam. Tattva Jñāna-ārthaḥ means Jñāna-phalam, I should know what will I get out of this knowledge? Otherwise I will wonder why should I study and know. And that is why, of and on, Kṛṣṇa gives the benefit of this knowledge, while dealing with sthira-prajñā lakṣaṇāni, while dealing with parā-bhaktha-lakṣaṇāni, He said what is the benefit of this knowledge.

And what is the main benefit given in the second-chapter? Ātmanyēva''tmanā tuṣṭaḥ. Latest benefit is I am comfortable with myself, irrespective of external conditions.

दुःखेष्वनुद्विग्नमनाः सुखेषु विगतस्पृहः |
वीतरागभयक्रोधः स्थितधीर्मुनिरुच्यते ॥ २-५६ ॥

[duḥkhēṣvanudvignamanāḥ sukhēṣu vigataspr̥haḥ |
vītarāgabhayakrōdhaḥ sthitadhīrmunirucyatē ||2.56 ||](#)

Things may be favourable. May not be favourable. I have got the psychological immunity and therefore I am not vulnerable to the mood disorder முட் இல்லை சொல்லறோமோ இல்லயோ? Dayānanda Swami says that the one who is given to moods, is called Mūdāḥ. Correct? So for everything I need mood. For coming to the class, there is no mood. So therefore I am not vulnerable external conditions, I am ever balanced. Imagine that jīvan mukthi state. If I should enjoy that emotional immunity; the only injection that gives you the immunity is Jñānam. The more I appreciate this fact, the more I will have value for Jñānam. And the more I have value for Jñānam, the more I will have value for Jñāna yōgyatha. So Jñāna-yōgyatha to Jñānam to jīvan-mukthiḥ. This route I should understand.

Therefore Kṛṣṇa tells, regularly remind yourselves that Jñānam gives inner freedom; So that I can tell the people: போனால் போகட்டும்; வந்தால் வரட்டும்; யாரை நம்பி நான் புறந்தேன்; போங்டா போங்; (pōṅāḷ pōkaṭṭum; vaṅṭāḷ varaṭṭum; yārai nampi nāṅ puṟaṅṭēṅ; pōṅgaṭā pōṅga). Do not go and tell these things; I have got the inner freedom. The world cannot blackmail me. So if you see that you will value all these virtues.

And then comes the final and most important virtue that is adhyātma Jñāna-nithyatvam. So systematic and consistent study of vēdāntic-scriptures for a length of time, under the guidance of a competent ācārya. உங்களுக்கு அலுத்துதோ என்னவோ; எனக்கு அலுக்கலை. Systematic, and consistent study of vēdāntic-scriptures for a length of time under the guidance of a competent guide is a must. I say it should be systematic and consistent study, because without that, I will get a stray idea here and there.

I have talked about this in the fourth chapter; if you have a lorry load of bricks which is dumped on the ground, you have got only a heap of bricks which will not be of any use at all. On the other hand, if you arrange those bricks one after the other, well cemented together, then out of those bricks, you get a wonderful room in which you can live. So in both conditions bricks are there; one is well arranged and the other is heap.

Similarly when you study vēdānta in a class like situation, systematically, step by step, we are collecting ideas and arranging it one after the other. What is karma-yōga; what is upāsana; what is jñānam. Arranged and therefore this knowledge will be like a house, which will protect you. Suppose you read one book of one author in 1975, and another book of another author in 1982, then you hear some stray lectures here and there, somebody talked about jñānam, somebody talked about bhakthi, somebody talked about japa; you gather ideas, but they all remain in your head, as a heap of ideas without any harmonisation. Therefore if the knowledge should be useful, Kṛṣṇa tells it should be systematically studied. It is Kṛṣṇa's advice, not mine.

Look at here; Adhyātma-Jñānam. Adhyātma meaning dealing with ātma, jñānam here means enquiry, śravaṇa manana nidhidhyāsana trayam is here called jñānam, otherwise called vicāraḥ. Otherwise called mimāmsa, and you do not think of this by yourselves. If your intellect speculates what is the truth; you are only going to imagine things; we do not want imaginations; we want scriptural śravaṇa, manana, nidhidhyāsana. In fact the very word śravaṇam means that there must be a guru. Because śravaṇam means hearing. If you hear, somebody must speak. The very word śravaṇam, presupposes the study of scriptures as handled by a competent ācārya. And that is why in the beginning; in the beginning means, i.e. the 8th verse, Kṛṣṇa talked about ācārya-upāsana, which means śāstra and guru go together.

Without śāstra, any guru teaches his own philosophy, better avoid it. Because he will be transferring his personal prejudices upon you. And therefore we are not interested in a guru who gives his personal philosophy. Guru is a guru only when he deals through the śāstram.

Similarly, śāstram will convey the meaning to you only when it is conveyed through or taught by an ācārya. That is why in Guru sthōthram, guru is called the Sun for the blooming of the lotus, called śāstra. Vēdānta ambuja suryōyaḥ. Śāstra is closed to an ordinary person; like a lotus but śāstram will convey the meaning, open up only in the presence of the vēdānta sūryaḥ, i.e. guru. Therefore ācārya-upāsana, and adhyātmajñānānityatvam stands for śāstra-vicāraḥ.

And all the other virtues prepare the mind and this listening to the teaching produces the knowledge. One is preparation, another is production of knowledge, both should go hand in hand. Śankarācārya tells elsewhere, it is like pathyam and auṣadam. Pathyam means the discipline to be followed by a patient. So if he has sugar problem, they will say do not eat too much. Pressure problem, avoid salt. They all come under pathyam. But pathyam alone cannot cure the disease; it should go along with auṣadam, medicine. Imagine a patient taking auṣadam without pathyam. Insulin from this side and mysurpak from that side, in kilos. That will not work. Therefore, pathyam provides the condition; auṣadam cures the disease. Śāstric study is the auṣadam and all other virtues is pathyam. If you follow only virtues and do not study the śāstra, it means you are not taking auṣadam at all. Pathyam without auṣadam is not pathyam, it is பைத்தியம். paithyam.

And therefore, adhyātma-jñāna-nityatvam. Study, study it is very important. Unfortunately śāstric study is not emphasised nowadays. More you study, you know the uniqueness of the benefit. And if you follow all of them, knowledge will definitely take place even if you do not want. And therefore Kṛṣṇa concludes ētat jñānam iti prōktham. These 20 or so virtues, including the śāstric-study together is called jñānam.

Ētat Jñānam iti prōktham and Kṛṣṇa says anything opposite to that is ajñānam. Yat athaḥ anyatha, means the opposite of these 20 virtues. And how do you find the opposite, i.e.

simple you take every word, amānitvam, what is the opposite, mānitvam, adambitvam, what is the opposite, dambitvam; ahimsa, i.e. hiṁsa, then kṣāntiḥ, aṣāntiḥ, you add 'a'; the opposite of all these together is called ajñānam, that means those negative virtues will solidify your ignorance. Ignorance will get more and more knotty and more and more difficult to remove. And that alone in the 16th chapter Kṛṣṇa calls daivi sampath and āsūri sampath.

ज्ञेयं यत्तत्प्रवक्ष्यामि यज्ज्ञात्वाऽमृतमश्नुते ।

प्रवक्ष्यामि pravakṣyāmi I shall teach (you), तत् tat that यद् ज्ञेयम् yad jñēyam which is to be known, ज्ञात्वा jñātvā upon knowing which अश्नुते aśnutē one attains, अमृतम् amṛtam immortality तत् परं ब्रह्म tat param Brahma it is the supreme Brahman अनादिमत् anādimat which is beginningless, उच्यते ucyatē it is said to be, न सत् na sat neither an effect न असत् na asat nor a cause

13. I shall teach you that which is to be known, upon knowing which one attains immortality. It is the supreme Brahman which is beginningless. It is said to be neither an effect nor a cause.

With the previous verse, the topic of Jñānam is over. So how many Kṛṣṇa has completed three topics. What are they? kṣētram, kṣētrajña and Jñānam. How many Arjuna wanted to know. 6 of them. Remaining three are there. What are those, Jñēyam; prakṛti and puruṣaḥ.

Of those three topics, now Kṛṣṇa takes up the topic of jñēyam which is from verse No.13 up to verse No.19. Jñēyam. And I have already told you that the jñēyam is similar to or same as kṣētrajña itself. Kṣētrajña itself is called Jñēyam from another angle. Kṛṣṇa gives the introduction here: Hey Arjuna, yattatpravakṣyāmi. Now I shall talk about that which is to be known by everyone. It is one subject matter every human being has to study and know at one time or the other. Every other subject is an optional one, you can learn, you need not learn it; even without learning it, you can happily survive. In fact you may be happier if you do not know that. There are many people who do not anything about economics, anything about astrophysics, anything about physics perhaps, everybody does not know every science, still they are surviving.

Kṛṣṇa says that this subject matter, everybody has to necessarily know. Why? What will happen if I do not know? Kṛṣṇa gives the answer. Yajjñātvā'mṛtamaśnutē. Because this is the one which solves the fundamental problem of every human being and which every human being is struggling to solve.

And what is that fundamental problem? The sense of insecurity. As I have often told, the fear of mortality is there all the time, right from birth itself. Not only for human beings, even for animals that is there. As a child itself, I was struggling with that fear only, as we grow up, every action of ours is driven by only the sense of insecurity. Therefore whatever you do, saving money, having extra house, having relation, and for many people, children is also a form of investment, so that in future hopefully they will take care of, if the arriving spouse is favourable. So therefore this insecurity or mortality is the problem not of a particular person; it is a universal problem. Whether he is a Hindu, or a Muslim or a Christian, an atheist or theist, man or women, young or old, there is a constant sense of insecurity and it grows more and more as we are growing.

Even the other day, in Hindu, they had put that story. One old woman was praying, He was willing to die for someone else. When actually death comes, he says go to that person! Otherwise he was telling; Oh Lord, take my life and give that to that person who is sick. I am already old and can afford to give up my life. That girl is a young girl. She has to enjoy life; Oh Lord: give my life to that girl. And then death comes in the form of a buffalo or a bull; Oh, Lord, that girl is already sick, she can afford to die. So when actually it comes, it is frightening. Therefore, who wants freedom from mortality? If you ask, what will be your answer? Every single person wants freedom from mortality and the fear of it. And if every human being wants every being has to take the medicine and the only medicine is Brahmanvith apnōti param̃. And therefore Kṛṣṇa says yat jñātva, knowing which alone, amṛtam-aśnutē, one attains immortality, and freedom from the sense of insecurity.

And therefore, Arjuna, listen to this carefully, and what is that jneyam to be known by all? Kṛṣṇa says: Param Brahma, that ultimate thing to be known is called Brahman. The word Brahman means the infinite one; Satyam, Jñānam, anantham, Brahma, we saw in Taittiriya. Infinite means that which is free from threefold limitations; one limitation is called space-wise limitation; another limitation is called timewise limitation; another is called attribute-wise limitation. Space-wise limitation is when I am here; unfortunately I cannot be elsewhere. You wish it would have been fine, to be in the house and also be attending the class also; but it is not possible; this is called dēśa-pariscēda. Kāla-pariscēda means I am limited by time, I have got a date of birth and date of death also. We only do not know. But we have; and this is called time-wise. Attribute-wise limitation; having certain attributes, if you have a particular attribute, the very presence of one attribute, excludes all the other attributes. So if there is particular colour, all other colours are not there; If I am a human being, the very humanness excludes cowness and horseness, all the other ness. That is called attribute-wise limitation. And Brahma means that which is free from all the three limitations; dēśa kāla vasthu pariscēda śūnyam Brahma. And that is therefore called param̄ Brahma, which is the absolute. And that param̄ Brahma is to be known by all, to cross over mortality.

And I do not know I told you that story; when this Brahmin was crossing the river in a boat, the Brahmin asked do you know vyakaraṇam, the boat man asked. Vyākaraṇa se kya karna, then the Pandit said one fourth of life is gone. Then the Brahmin asked; do you know tarka-śāstram. No. So two fourth of life or half is gone. Then do you know mimāmsa-śāstra. I know meen and mām̄sa. Then the Pandit said that three-fourth of the life is gone. As they were talking the boat develop leak and the water was gushing him and boatman tried to stop that leak and he was not able to. Then he asked Oh Panditji do you know how to swim. I do not know. Then your whole life is gone.

Thus you might have any number of degrees that will not make the life; THE knowledge which can make a difference is this knowledge alone and therefore it is called the absolute knowledge; that Brahman is absolute Brahman and what is its nature. Anandi mat param̄-Brahma.

Now he begins the description of Brahma. Anādimat; that which does not have ādhi. ādhi means beginning means both spacial and timewise and therefore it is anantham; the limitless one. And na sat tat na asat uchayate. In this context, the word asat means kāraṇam.

Any cause is called asat, and the sat in this context means any effect or product or kāryam. A cause is called asat because any cause is in potential form; and anything potential is not available for our utility. Oil in the seed is potentially there; but I cannot use it. Butter in the milk is there; but I cannot use it; therefore any cause is in potential form; therefore, I cannot use it; therefore it is as though non-existent. Therefore the word used is asat; seemingly non-existent, which means potentially existent kāraṇam. And na sat, sat means kāryam. Kāryam is as good as existent, because it is available for our use. And what is Brahman? Kṛṣṇa says Brahman is neither kāraṇam or Kāryam. Brahman is beyond the realm of cause and effect.

Now it is becoming mind-blogging, because the entire universe you experience is nothing but a flow of cause and effect. Yesterday is the cause for today's condition. Today is the cause for tomorrow's condition. The entire creation I experience is nothing but cause-effect-flow. And Kṛṣṇa says Brahman is beyond cause and effect. That means it is beyond time. Because, cause and effect wherever they exist, there Time is there. How do you know? Because the difference between cause and effect is determined by time. Yesterday's cause is today's effect. Yesterday's Idli is today's body. Your blood. Therefore the difference between kārāṇam and kāryam is determined by kāla only. Therefore whatever is beyond kārya kārāṇa, is kālāthītham.

सान्द्रानन्दावबोधात्मकमनुपमितं कालदेशावधिभ्यां
निर्मुक्तं नित्यमुक्तं निगमशतसहस्रेण निर्भास्यमानम् sāndrānandāvabōdhātmakamanupamitaṁ kāladēśāvadhībhīyāṁ nirmuktaṁ nityamuktaṁ nigamaśatasahasrēṇa nirbhāsyamānam

Therefore Brahman has no form, it has no attribute, it has no time. And Swamiji, how will I conceive. Better do not conceive and deliver later. Therefore it is not a concept to be conceived. And therefore Kṛṣṇa is bringing in the essence of the Upaniṣads. From 13th onwards, we get Upaniṣad sāra. Upaniṣad says.

अशब्धम्, अस्पर्शम्, अरूपम् अव्ययम्, तता रसम् नित्य अगन्धवच्चयत् asparśam, aśabdham, arūpam avyayam, tatā rasam nitya agandhavaccayat.

Brahman does not have śabda, sparśa, rūpa, rasa and gandha. So no form, colour, taste or touch and therefore you cannot see it; hear it, smell it, taste it or touch it and you are supposed to know that Brahman. How to know? That Kṛṣṇa will tell you in the following verses, which we will see in the next class.

Hari Om

172 Chapter 13, Verses 14-15

ॐ

From the 13th verse of the 13th chapter, Lord Kṛṣṇa is introducing the 4th topic of discussion, which is called jñēyam. He has already discussed kṣētram, kṣētrajña and jñānam and now he has introduced the topic of jñēyam. The word jñēyam means that which is to be known by everyone. That which is the ultimate truth of the universe which has necessarily to be known by everyone, because without that knowledge, one cannot attain immortality. And every human being wants to conquer mortality, and therefore every human being should necessarily gain this knowledge.

And what is that ultimate reality to be known by everyone. Kṛṣṇa names that as Param Brahma. The absolute Brahman is the ultimate reality, the ultimate truth of the universe. And this param Brahma alone has been discussed in all the Upaniṣads and that is why the Upaniṣads are known as Brahma vidya, because they deal with this topic mainly. And therefore having introduced Brahman as the ultimate reality to be known, Kṛṣṇa wants to give us the essence of this Upaniṣad, in a condensed version in this portion, up to verse No.19. So 13 to 19, we get Upaniṣad-sāra or Brahma-vidya. We will go into the details of this topic.

Verse 13.14

सर्वतः पाणिपादं तत्सर्वतोऽक्षिशिरोमुखम्
सर्वतः श्रुतिमल्लोके सर्वमावृत्य तिष्ठति ॥ १३.१४ ॥

sarvataḥ pāṇipādaṁ tat sarvatō'kṣīśirōmukham |
sarvataḥ śrutimallōkē sarvamāvṛtya tiṣṭhati || 13.14 ||

तत् सर्वत्र पाणिपादम् tat sarvatra pāṇipādam it has hands and legs everywhere, सर्वतोऽक्षिशिरोमुखम् sarvatō:'kṣīśirōmukham it has eyes, heads, and mouths everywhere
श्रुतिमत् śrutimat it has ears, सर्वतः sarvataḥ everywhere तिष्ठति tiṣṭati it remains आवृत्य
सर्वम् āvṛtya sarvam pervading everything लोके lōkē in the world.

14. It has hands and legs everywhere. It has eyes, heads, and mouth everywhere. It has ears everywhere. It remains pervading everything in the world.

In the Upaniṣads, Brahman is revealed as the ultimate-substance out of which the whole creation is made up. Therefore Brahman is defined as the basic stuff of the universe; basic-essence of the universe; the ultimate-content of this universe. And all the sciences are also trying to find out only the ultimate-substance, out of which the world is made.

Once upon a time, they were talking about a few elements. 110 or 120, they said the whole universe is permutation combination of these few elements only. Thereafter they want to find out whether there is some fundamental truth or substance out of which the elements themselves are made and they arrived at the molecules, whose combinations are the elements. And thereafter they said, all the molecules are nothing but the combination of atom; and the whole universe is atoms in motion. What type of atom; invisible atoms in motions, creates an experience of a visible universe. Atom is invisible, but when all of them join together, it creates a visible tangible universe. And they thought that atom was the fundamental-substance. In fact the very word atom means that which cannot be further divided at all. Atom was thought to be the ultimate substance; and thereafter the scientists broke the atom into sub-atomic particles and therefore they said that there is only particles as the ultimate stuff. The particles are invisible but when they join together, create an appearance of a tangible universe. Then the particles also, they tried to divide further, and they said energy, the intangible energy is the ultimate stuff of the universe. Thus they are going deeper and deeper and deeper, and their aim is what, to find out, what is the basic, ultimate substance.

And the interesting thing that we see is as you go deeper and deeper, the visible becomes the invisible. The tangible becomes the intangible. The concrete becomes the abstract. Therefore we come to know that the ultimate substance must be intangible formless abstract substance. And what is that final abstract substance, the scientists have not yet arrived at; they are still in the process of enquiry.

Vēdānta has analysed the same subject matter and Vēdānta has arrived at the ultimate-substance and Vēdānta calls it Brahman. Brahman is the basic-substance of this creation, and the being the ultimate-substance, it is going to be abstract, it is going to be intangible; it is going to be invisible; aśabdham, asparśam, arūpam, arasam, avyayam. And therefore understanding that Brahman is going to be a relatively tougher prospect.

So we are going to analyse a substance which is not available for seeing, hearing, smelling, touching and therefore this portion is going to be an abstract portion; I am giving you a warning. Therefore it looks like a jumble of words; it appears as though a jumble of words only, because we try to concretely conceive of something, but we are not discussing a concrete tangible thing. But still if you go on dwelling upon this teaching, slowly, the words will begin to make sense but it requires lot of intellectual acclimatization.

What I mean is, when you come from the outside world, to your house, inside the room, you have come from a brighter spot, and as you enter the house, it appears as if the whole house is dark. You have to wait a minute or two; gradually the eyes get used to that dimmer light of the room; and that is called acclimatization or preparation of the eyes. Similarly to understand Brahman, it requires certain acclimatization. Therefore, for those students are beginners, this topic will look like a bunch of words, but do not be disappointed, but slowly if you dwell on, it will make sense.

How should we approach this topic? Normally, we have seen a lot of substances in the world. So when we see a person, you qualify him and say that this is a tall man; and this person is a fat woman; OK, or lean man. I am not disturbing by saying fat woman, slender woman; and a fair person. We use a noun and an adjective. An adjective generally refers to a property, like tall, short, fat, fair, round; these are all adjectives and in English, adjectives refer to properties of an object. And generally, the noun, like the tall tree, the fat man, the nouns like tree, man, etc. refer to substance. Adjectives reveal properties, attributes and nouns reveal substances. This is where we have to begin. Adjectives reveal properties and nouns reveal substances; this is one thing we generally experience.

Now there is another experience we have, which also we have to notice. When I say a fat man, a tall tree, a round object, etc.; this is what I experience. Now I will give you another set of words; I say there is a golden bangle. There is a wooden chair; 'golden bangle' when I say, what is adjective and what is noun? Golden bangle, when you say, what is adjective? 'Golden' is adjective; and bangle is the noun. And when I say wooden chair, wooden is adjective; chair is noun.

Now in this particular case, when I say golden bangle, the adjective golden reveals a substance or a property. The 'golden' when you say, the word 'golden' does not refer to a property, even though the word is an adjective; here in this unique peculiar case, the word golden refers to the very substance of the bangle. Golden refers to the substance gold and not a property. And when I say a 'wooden chair', the word 'wooden' is an adjective, but still it is not referring to a property at all; the wooden adjective means the substance is nothing but wood.

And therefore in this particular case, adjective reveals a substance and not a property. Whereas when I say a tall person, adjective reveals a property, tallness. But when I say golden bangle, adjective reveals a substance. Therefore rule No.1, I want to convey is: Adjective can reveal either a property or an adjective can reveal a substance. Both possibilities are there.

Similarly, when I say 'golden bangle', the word 'bangle' is a noun; the word 'bangle' is a noun; But the beauty, even though the word bangle is a noun, really speaking, it does not reveal a substance at all; because there is no substance called bangle. கரக்ட் தானா பாருங்கோ! There is no substance called bangle; there is only the substance called gold; bangle is a noun, but still it does not reveal a substance.

If bangle is not a substance, then it reveals what? It reveals what? If you analyse, Gold when it is in a particular form or shape, when the gold is in a particular form or shape, that shape alone is called bangle. Similarly when you say golden ring, there is no substance called ring; ring is the name of what? A particular shape. Similarly when you say wooden chair, there is no substance called chair; chair is the name of a particular shape alone. What is the name of the substance? Chair is not the name of the substance, name of the substance is what? Wood alone. And therefore, I find, bangle is a form; chain is a form, ring is a form. So even though, bangle etc. are nouns; these are peculiar nouns, which are revealing only a form which is a property. Therefore, 'golden bangle' when you say, the adjective is revealing what? Substance, noun is revealing what? A property. Tall tree, when you say, adjective is revealing property. Tree the noun is revealing the substance.

So we have two examples, in example No.1, tall tree; adjective reveals property; Noun reveals substance. When I say golden bangle, adjective reveals the substance; the word bangle reveals not a substance but a particular form. That is why when form is changed, bangle is gone. When form is changed, bangle is gone. Therefore the word bangle refers to the property.

And therefore what Vēdānta says is adjectives can reveal either a property of a substance. Similarly, nouns can reveal either a property or a substance. Should I remind you of the four examples?

Adjective revealing property. What is the example? Tall.

Adjective revealing the substance. What is the example? Golden, wooden.

What is the example for noun revealing the substance? Tree.

What is the example for noun revealing the property? Bangle.

So now we have come to these four points. Now having come to this, Vēdānta tells all these!; 2000-3000 or several thousand years before. They have analysed all these things.

Now Vēdānta comes to this world. All this is only example. Now only we are coming to the original. When I experience a world, I say here is a book, and here is a fan; and there is a wall; there is a man; there is a woman. So when I experience the world, I refer to everyone as there is a man; there is a woman, there is a table, there is a chair. What is common to all of them? 'It is', 'It is', 'It is', and the verb "IS" refers to the existence of the world. When I say there is a clock, it means clock is existent. When I say there is a planet, the planet is existent.

Therefore, every object that I experience is what type of object; existent-tree, existent-man, existent-woman. Whatever I experience is, existent, existent, existent. If anything is non-existent, then I will not experience. Do you experience my horn? If I say, some of you may say: I see you "halo"; that is a controversy statement; that is why I did not ask a 'halo'. Do you see a horn on my head? You do not. Why you don't? Because it is non-existent. Whereas you see my head, because it is existent. Therefore everything that you experience in the world is existent object. Everything is existent. In Sānskrīt they say: San ghataḥ; san phata; sat pātram; san puruṣaḥ; san or sat means, existent-object.

Now when I say an existent tree, an existent man, an existent woman, etc. what is the noun in this and what is the adjective in this? Vēdānta asks the question. All the philosophers analyse this. Tarka śāstra and all, they are experts in these topics. What is the noun here; and what is the adjective. When I say existent-man, existent-woman, table, chair, sun, moon, stars, etc. the word existent is adjective; and man, woman, table, chair, sun, moon, etc. are nouns. So the word existent is adjective and every object is a noun.

Now Vēdānta asks the question. If the word existent is an adjective, and if the word man, woman, sun, moon, etc. are noun; tell me what type of adjective it is and what type of noun it is.

And why this question? Because previously we saw, an adjective can either reveal a property or an adjective can reveal a substance. Example, adjective revealing substance is golden. Adjective revealing property is tall or short. So the word 'existent' is an adjective, does it reveal the property of the world or does it reveal the substance out of which the world is made. When you say existent-world, the 'existent adjective', does it reveal a existence as a property or attribute of the object or does it reveal the very substance; like what example, the word golden reveals the very substance out of which the bangle is made.

Generally, until we come to Vēdānta, our general conclusion is, world is the substance and the word existent is an attribute or property; this will be our general assumption. And Vēdānta says that is the handiwork of māya. Māya makes you commit a very big blunder. And what is the blunder, which is forced by Māya? It makes me think that the existent-adjective is revealing an attribute and the world is a substance we think; but Vēdānta says that is not correct.

If that that is not correct, what should be correct? What is left out? If the word existent adjective is not revealing an attribute, according to Vēdānta, the word 'existent' reveals what? The basic substance just as the word golden reveals the substance. Similarly, the word 'existent'; reveals a substance, the substance is called existence. According to Vēdānta, it is called sat Brahma. Chandōyga Upaniṣad begins the teaching with this topic. Effortlessly it is talking, as if it is talking to an LKG student.

tadēva saumya idam agra asit, ēkam ēva advitīyam. According to Upaniṣad, the basic substance is existence and existence is not an attribute of an object, but it is the fundamental absolute substance. And being the fundamental absolute substance, it is invisible, it is intangible; it is the abstract principle.

So this is one part; second partக்கு போறோமா; shall we go. Are you surviving?

So the word existent reveals the substance called existence. If the word existent adjective revealing the substance, then the word World, existent-world we say, the world noun, is revealing what? We have confusion. If adjective here is revealing the substance, according to Vēdānta, all the nouns are revealing not a substance at all; every noun is a property. Just as bangle is the name of a property; What property? A particular shape, what is the substance; bangle is not substance; chain is not substance, ring is not substance; substance is gold only. The property alone keeps on changing. Dayānand

Swami says, really you should be naming bangly-gold, ringly-gold, chainly-gold, because they are all forms; gold alone is the substance; that must be used as a noun; நம்ம என்ன பண்ணீடோம். நெளனை அஜக்டிவாய் பண்ணீடோம்; What we have done, we have made the noun into an adjective.

And therefore according to Vēdānta, the whole world is not a substance at all. Just as chair is not a substance, the desk is not a substance, when I am touching the desk, I am not touching the desk at all, but I am touching what? The wood alone. There is no substance called desk; no substance called table; no substance called chair. Therefore Vēdānta says world is nāma rupātmakam. Traiamva: idam nāma rāpam karma jagat. Bṛhadārṇyaka, says the whole world is different names, different forms and different functions; there is no substance called world. Bangle is a name, given to a particular form, to serve a particular function. If it is a bangle name and form, what is the function? Decorating the hand. If it is chain name and function, what is its function? Decorating the neck, if it is a ring name and form, the function is decorating the finger; there is no substance called bangle, chain, ring, etc. and the substance is gold and how many golds are there? Gold is ēkam.

Applying this principle, Vēdānta says existence is the only basic substance, and everything else is name, form and functions. So what you are experiencing when you are experiencing a bangle, you are experiencing gold alone, which is the only substance. When you are experiencing the ring, you are experiencing what, the gold alone, the fundamental substance. Similarly, when you are experiencing the world, you are experiencing only one fundamental substance which is inherent in all of them. What is that substance? IS, IS, IS, IS. Śankarācārya tells all these which I have struggled for 35 minutes, in just one line, yasyaiva sphuraṇam sadātmakamasatkalpārthakam bhāsatē. When you are experiencing different ornaments, you are experiencing the fundamental substance, the gold. Similarly when you are experiencing the different object, you are experiencing the basic substance, என்னா? What? Existence. OK.

Now can we go to the next stage; it is not finished. That means what? Wherever I see any object, I am experiencing the basic substance, what is that? Existence. And how I do prove it; my language itself proves, there is a wall, there is a chair, there is a pen, existence I am experiencing. What is that existent? Brahman. So where do I experience Brahman, Brahman where do you see? Everywhere. Just as in and through the bangle, chain, ring, etc., the basic substance golden, golden, golden, is inherent; Similarly, existent, existent, existent, I experience everywhere.

But in this experience, I have a small difficulty. What is that difficulty? Even though I am experiencing the basic substance, what is that? Existence. I am experiencing the existence, along with different along with different names and forms; tree name and form; man name and form; chair name and form; existence is never experienced in pure form, but it is experienced along with some name and form; man is, when you say, Is_ness is associated with man name and form; clock is, when you say, Is_ness is associated with clock name and form. Therefore through my sense organs, I experience nāma rūpa sahita sat. புரியறதேதா பாருநேதா. See whether you are understanding. Through my sense organs I am experiencing, existence along with nāma and rūpa; because the sense organs are capable of revealing only the nāma rūpa sahita sat.

Now the question is, how can I experience the pure existence? After filtering out, after removing all the nāma-rūpa.

Now, when you remove all the nāma rūpas, i.e., names and forms, what should be left behind. Pure existence must be left behind; if I remove all nāma rūpa; but the problem is, if I remove all the nāma and rūpa, the sense organs can never experience pure existence. Because sense organs are meant to experience existence with either with śabda, or with sparśa, rūpa, rasa or gandha; கலப்படமான existenceயை தான், the sense organs can reveal only the mixed existence; not the pure existence.

Then you come to pure existence; suppose you remove all the names and form; how do you do that? Close all your sense organs; you close your eyes; all forms and colours are gone; close your ears; all the sound gone; close your nose, you will be all-out. Go to a place where you do not smell; imagine you close all your sense organs; all the nāma rūpas are gone. What should be left behind, the basic substance without name and form, what should be the basic substance; the pure existence.

Now the question is how can I experience that pure existence? Can I open the eyes and see? If you open the eyes, it will never be the pure existence. It will be associated with form is; form will come; if you open the ears, sound is mixed.

So the pure existence, how do you experience. Chāndōgya 6th chapter, this is the most well-known section of the entire Upaniṣadic literature, because it begins with pure existence and the student is now eager to know how to experience the pure existence. The teacher says: Oh Student, you can never experience the pure existence, because it is never an object of experience.

Then the student raises his eyebrows; if I can never objectify the pure existence, how do I know it is there? You may be bluffing, that your existence is there? How do you know? Then the teacher gives the well-known statement of the Upaniṣads. Aithadatmaya idagum sarvam dhruvam; tat satyam; sa ātma, tat tvam athi svētakētu.

The pure existence is never an objectifiable substance; it is nothing but YOU the witnessing consciousness. Sat, the ultimate substance, you can never see because the ultimate substance is YOU the seer principle.

Therefore to start in sat and to end in chit, the consciousness. Vēdānta ends there. Therefore it says: Tat tvam asi. Therefore what is pure existence? It is nothing but pure consciousness and what is pure consciousness; I am. Aham Brahma asmi. And what is my nature? Existence, Consciousness. Sat, chit, ātma ēva Brahma asmi. This is the essence of Vēdānta.

என்னவாவது புரியறமாதிரி இருக்கோ? Are you understanding anything? You have to go on dwelling. I am the ultimate substance and I am sat rūpaḥ; and I am cid rūpaḥ; and the whole world is nāma and rūpa resting upon me.

मय्येव सकलं जातं मयि सर्वं प्रतिष्ठितम् ।
मयि सर्वं लयं याति तद्ब्रह्माद्व्यमस्यहम् ॥ Kaivalya I.19 ॥

mayyēva sakalaṁ jātaṁ mayi sarvaṁ pratiṣṭitam |
mayi sarvaṁ layaṁ yāti tadbrahmādvyaṁsmyaham || Kaivalya I.19 ||

When this is said, it will be very very difficult to swallow. And that is why scientists are not able to find because they are looking for the substance; they are not going to come across the substance, why? Why they are not able to come across the substance? Because the searcher the searched for object. தேடி தேடி யெனோ ஓடுகின்றார்; tēṭi tēṭi yē ṅō oṭukinṛār; I am the substance. It is extremely difficult to swallow;

And to help us accept this truth; the Upaniṣad gives a well-known example, and that example is our dream experience. When I am dreaming, and seeing varieties of objects, giving me happiness, giving me sorrow giving me fear, in fact, many people, special prayers, before going to bed, so that so would not have frightening dreams. That means what? Dream is capable of terribly frightening you.

And imagine you are in dream and you are seeing terrible things and in the dream a dream guru comes and tells: you do not be frightened of all these things, you are the essence of this dream world, the dream has come out of you, the dream is resting in you, on waking up the dream will resolve, if he says, in the dream it is unbelievable. It is so realistic. But on waking up, he knows there is no dream river, dream man, dream object; none of them exist separate from me-the-waker. Vēdānta tells that this world is also another dream channel. Different channel. Channel D or something you can name.

Now it is unbelievable; it is very difficult to accept that I am the substance, but the ultimate truth is I (not this body, not this body, because body is also part of this world only), I, the witness, sākṣi caitanyam. In dream it is unbelievable I am the substance of the dream world. Similarly, during the time of ignorance, it is unbelievable, it is difficult to accept that I am the substance; but according to Vēdānta, I am the salt of the earth. And that I is Brahman, that Brahman is existent and that existent Brahman alone appears as the world with different nāma rūpa. And when Brahman, the existence, the only substance, appears with different nāma rūpa, it is called Viśva-rūpa Īśvaraḥ. Viśva-rūpa Īśvaraḥ யாருக்கு பேரு; whose name it is? It is the name of Brahman, the existence which is along with all the names and forms. Therefore, sahasraśīrṣā puruṣaḥ sahasrākṣaḥ sahasrapāt; அந்த ஒரே substance Brahman தான்; நிறய காலோட, நீயாகவும்; நானாகவும்; எல்லாமாகவும் தோன்றது. The one Brahman alone, has become you, me, that and this, etc. This is the teaching here.

Now with this background, let us try to understand the verses. It begins with the sat and ends with the cit. This is the essence of Vēdānta. Kṛṣṇa says tat, TAT means that means that Brahman, the existence principle, to remember that the Existence is a noun, substance and not a property, we write with capital E, you know it is not a property, it is a substance itself. What is the example, not tall, but golden, the word golden, golden is an adjective but it reveals a substance. Similarly Existence is the fundamental substance and that Existence Sarvadaḥ pāṇi pādām, it pervades everywhere. Just as God is inherent in all ornaments, Existence pervades everything. Imagine anything or just start Existence is there; what is the proof, you say there is a star. Imagine an object, which does not have existence. You can never imagine an object which does not have an Existence, if an object does not have Existence, it will be a non-existent object. And therefore, Existence is everywhere. Between the pillar and the mike, in between you may say nothing exists; there is vacuum only, I ask you the question, What do you say? There is vacuum. What is there in that place? Existence. You cannot think of anything without existence. Therefore Sarvadaḥ pāṇi pādām. Sad Brahman has got hands and legs everywhere, Sarvato: 'kṣīrōmukham; that sat Brahman alone has got akṣi, means eye, śira, the head, mukham, the face or mouth; there is only virāt Īśvaraḥ who has all these limbs.

And sarvataḥ śrutimallōkē; it is everywhere with sṛuti; sṛuti here it means ears. It pervades everywhere, with countless ears and lōkē, in this universe, sarvamāvṛtya tiṣṭhati. It remains pervading surrounding everything. sarvamāvṛtya tiṣṭhati. Tat sat Brahma.

Verse 13.15

Sarvēndriyaguṇābhāsaṁ sarvēndriyavivarjitam |

सर्वेन्द्रियगुणाभासम् sarvendriyaguṇābhāsam it is manifest through the functions of all organs, सर्वेन्द्रियविवर्जितम् sarvendriyavivarjitam (yet) it is free from all organs सर्वभृत् sarvabhṛt it sustains everything, च एव ca ēva yet असक्तम् asaktam it is unattached गुणभोक्तु गुणabhōkṭṛ it is the experiencer of guṇās, च निर्गुणम् ca nirguṇam yet it is free from guṇās.

15. It is manifest through the functions of all organs. (Yet) it is free from all organs. It sustains everything. Yet it is unattached. It is the experiencer of the guṇas. Yet it is free from guṇas.

All the sense organs are revealing that Brahman all the time. For example, the eyes can reveal only colours; they cannot reveal sound; ears reveal only sound; and when I experience sound, I do not experience colours. When I experience colours, I do not experience smell. Therefore śabda, sparśa, etc. are mutually exclusive; śabda comes sparśa is not there, rūpam comes, sparśa is not there; but all the sense organs experience one thing commonly. What is that? Sound IS: when you hear, sound IS: Similarly, when you use the eye, the form IS: therefore all sensory operations, uniformly reveal that Brahman alone, all sensory operations uniformly reveal that Brahman alone, in the form of śabdaḥ san, sparśa san, rūpam sat, etc.

But the problem is you are attracted by nāma rūpa, and you lose sight of what? You lose sight of the inherent Existence in all of them. Therefore, what should you do to experience Brahman? What should you do to experience Brahman? Kṛṣṇa says, you are experiencing Brahman alone every moment. When you say, śabda IS, sparśa IS, rūpam IS. But because of காலப்படி; mixture, because of mixing up of nāma and rūpa, we are absorbed in nāma rūpa and lose sight of this fundamental truth and therefore we require a sensitive and subtle intellect to appreciate that.

असक्तं सर्वभृच्चैव निर्गुणं गुणभोक्तु च ॥ १३.१५॥

Sarvēndriyaguṇābhāsaṁ sarvēndriyavivarjitam |
asaktaṁ sarvabhṛccaiva nirguṇaṁ guṇabhōkṭṛ ca || 13.15||

Arjuna, in this 13th chapter, had asked Kṛṣṇa for the clarification of six technical words used in Vēdānta: kṣētraṁ, Kṣētrajña, Jñānam, Jñēyam, Prakṛti and Purūṣaḥ. And Lord Kṛṣṇa is explaining one by one. Of these six terms, three have already been explained and they are kṣētraṁ, kṣētrajña and jñānam. And now Kṛṣṇa has entered the fourth topic and that is of Jñēyam and the word Jñēyam in this context means the paraṁ brahma, the ultimate reality; and it is known by the word Jñēyam because according to Vēdānta that is the ultimate truth to be known by all; knowing which one will get necessarily liberated. And therefore Brahman is also known as Jñēyam here. And the word vijñēyaḥ is used, in the Māndukya Upaniṣad, sa ātma sa vijñēyaḥ. And this Brahman is explained by Kṛṣṇa from verse No.13 onwards, which goes up to the verse no.19, of which we are seeing the 15th verse and in these verses, Kṛṣṇa is primarily revealing Brahman as pure existence, which is one of the subtlest concepts of Vēdānta. Two important words are existence and consciousness. Two most subtle topics and these two words have totally different meaning from what we generally think of. That is why Brahman is called sat-cit-rūpaḥ or satyam jñānam etc.

This word existence I was explaining in the last class. According to Vēdānta, existence is the unique, the most unique thing. And all the principles that we talked about for consciousness, we can extend to the existence also. With regard to consciousness, we had seen certain fundamental principles. I do not know whether you remember. I had said consciousness is not a part, a product or property of matter. Consciousness is an independent entity, which pervades and enlivens matter. Consciousness goes beyond the dimensions of matter or the body. Then I said consciousness survives even when the body is destroyed. And fifthly and finally I said that the surviving consciousness is not recognisable, not because it is not there, but because there is no body-medium for manifesting it. Just as if you do not see light in this point, not because light is absent here; but it is because there is no manifesting medium. The moment I keep the hand here, the light which was not manifest before becomes manifest through the hand. Therefore hand is not producer of light, but hand is the medium which manifests the light. Similarly, the surviving consciousness cannot be recognised because the manifesting medium is not there.

All these five principles regarding the consciousness must be extended to the existence principle also. Existence with capital E, because according to Vēdānta, Existence is the same as Consciousness. Sat ēva chit, cid ēva sat. And therefore all the five principles applicable to consciousness will have to extend to Existence also. What are the five principles? If we enumerate the principles, assimilation will take lot of time.

Principle No.1. Existence is not part, product or property of the body or any object. What is Existence? Vēdānta says Existence is not a part, product or property of any body.

Then secondly, what is the second principle, Existence is an independent entity. According to Vēdānta, Existence is the ultimate substance independent entity, which pervades the body, and makes the body existent. Existence pervades the body, and makes the body Existent.

And what is the third principle. This Existence, which pervades the body extends beyond the periphery or the dimensions of the body; just as the light that falls on my body is not on my body alone, the light extends beyond my body. Similarly, Existence is not limited by the boundaries of the body.

Then what is the fourth principle? This Existence survives even after the death of the body. Just as the light that falls on the body will survive even if remove my hand. But no reflecting medium. That is why in space travel, when they go beyond our atmosphere, you will have eternal darkness. There is no day night division at all. We are able to have day upon the earth because the earth has an atmosphere which is capable of reflecting the sunlight; that is why blue canopy we are seeing. What is the blue canopy is nothing but sunlight blue-colour scattered by dust particle. That is நீல வானம். nīla vāṇam. It is dust particle, scattering the blue colour of the sunlight. You go beyond the atmosphere where the dust particle is not there to reflect, what will you experience is eternal darkness. Even when you see the Sun, between the Sun and you in space you in space travel, there is no nothing, no atmosphere, அப்போ எப்படி இருக்கும்; இருட்டாய் இருக்கும்; only darkness. So if someone asks there is there sunlight, what reply one should give? It is, but not recognisable. அது மாதிரிதான் Existence. Like that is Existence. So Vēdānta says the existence survives even after the fall of the body.

And what is the fifth and final point is that the surviving Existence is not recognisable because of the absence of a manifesting, a reflecting medium. So wherever reflecting media are there, you will feel existence. Wherever reflecting media are not there; there will be Existence, but you would not recognise and that Existence is the consciousness. That Existence consciousness is Brahman and that Brahman Arjuna are you. Tat Tvam Asi.

So you have to travel a lot. First you have to conceive a pure Existence. Then appreciate it as pure consciousness. Then you should claim that the pure Existence consciousness is I myself. This is tattvamasi. It is not an easy topic.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa adopts a method which is used in Vēdānta. What is the method? I want to show you or teach you what is the light? But I am not able to show you the pure light, because light without medium cannot be demonstrated. So what I should I do? I put my hand here. What do I want to teach? Not hand. I want to teach the light. Therefore

I introduce my hand and ask, what do you see? You will say only hand; முன்னாலெ அப்படிதான் சொல்லுவேள்; first you will say like that only. Then I have to tell you that that it is not the hand alone, there is something other than the hand, and because of that alone you are able to see the hand, etc. if I say for an half hour, you will say that there are two things; What are the two things? Hand and the light pervading.

Thereafterwards I have to tell you please focus your attention on the light and forget the hand. So I introduce the hand, through the hand introduce the light, and thereafter quietly withdraw the hand and then I tell you that in that place, where the hand was there continues the formless light principle and what is that formless light principle; it is that because of which the hand is recognised. So introduce the hand, introduce the light; remove the hand and reveal the pure light.

This method of teaching is adyarōpa-apavāda nyāya. Introducing the hand is called adyarōpa and after revealing the light, removal the hand is called apavāda. In fact this we do all the time. Suppose I ask you, please get me some water, and then you went and brought me a cup of water; and I get angry with you as guru; I have a privilege to get angry. Therefore I tell: What did I ask? Water; I never asked you to bring the cup. Why did you bring the cup? Then what will the śiṣya think. I thought Guru is sane. He seems to have some problem. How can I bring water alone; water requires a container to communicate/transfer. And therefore, for the sake of communication/ transaction/ transference, we keep the container; so that śiṣya brings water with the container, I also take the water with the container, then when I drink what I do, the śiṣya knows, the guru knows, the cup is only used for transferring the water, I take the water part and leave the container. Similarly, pure Existence can never be understood. So you introduce an object and appreciate object plus existence and having gathered the knowledge of existence. What do you do? Remove the container and container is the object, nāma rūpa. Mike IS; Minus mike is, IS. Table IS. Minus table is what: IS. Therefore, understand Existence with the world, adyārōpa and then retaining the Existence, remove/dismiss the world, it is called apavādha.

And this method Lord Kṛṣṇa is using here; sarvëndriya-guṇābhāsaṁ sarvëndriya-vivarjitam. This existence is all the time appreciated by you through all the sense organs. Sarva-indriya-guṇāḥ, means what? Operation or usage or application. So sarva indriya guṇāḥ; vyāpāraḥ, application, usage; ābhāsaḥ means manifest. The existence is manifest is recognised through every sensory operation. Just as light is recognised; when I see the clip, do I recognise the light or not? It is not pure clip, clip plus what is there; light is there. When I look the clock, what I do I experience, clock plus light. I look at the wall. Wall plus light. In and through every perception, light is recognised. Similarly in and through every sensory operation, existence is recognised. In and through every sensory perception. How do you recognise? When you use the ears, you say there is a sound. How do we say? There is a sound; that Is what? Existence. When you use your eyes, you say that there IS a colour or form. Sound is gone; colour has come; but what is common to both? There IS, there IS. Similarly you use your nostrils, smell IS; the śabdaḥ asthi, sparśaḥ asthi, rūpam asthi, rasaḥ asthi; that asthi is Existence. And therefore Kṛṣṇa says that ābhāsam means manifest; what is manifest? Existence Brahman through all the sensory operation.

At the same time, sarvēndriya-vivarjitam. The Existence or Brahman is free from all the sense organs or objects. At the same time, the Brahman or Existence is free from them, that means that they are not the intrinsic-nature of Brahman. Light is illumining the hand alright; because of the hand, light is visible alright. But you know that the hand is not an intrinsic-part of the light. Light is not the intrinsic-part of the hand; hand is not intrinsic-part of light also; if hand is intrinsic-part of light, what will happen? Wherever light is there, there will be hand. Wherever you see Congress. Thus you appreciate existence through the mike, but mike is not intrinsic-part of Brahman. Thus you appreciate existence through the world but the world itself is not an intrinsic-part of Brahman. Therefore Brahman is world free sarvēndriya-vivarjitam. Free from all the sense organs.

sarvabhṛccaiva. This Existence-Brahman accommodates, supports everything. It is sarvādhāram. How do you know? Because of that alone, everything is Existent. Every object enjoys existence only because of Brahman; just gold alone lends existence to all ornaments. Brahman alone is sarvādhāram. Sarvabhṛt.

At the same time, asaktam. Brahman is free from all the objects of the world; that means those objects are not innate part of Brahman. Asaktam means like ākāśa. Ākāśa supports everything but nothing is an intrinsic-part of ākāśa. So sarvabhṛt, askatham, sarvabhṛt is adhyārōpa, askatham is apavāda. Sarvēndriyaguṇābhāsam is adhyārōpa, sarvēndriya-vivarjitam is apavāda. Every time you take with the glass, it is adhyārōpa, and when you leave the glass after drinking the water, it is apavāda.

Then nirguṇam guṇabhōktr ca. Guṇabhōktr means it is associated with all the properties; all the properties it is associated with. How do you know? Because you say every property IS. That IS is represents association. Green colour IS. ISness is associated with the property. Therefore guṇabhōktr at the same time nirguṇam. The properties are not the intrinsic nature of Brahman.

So the nearest example you can have is the screen and the movie. All the movie objects are associated with the screen; at the same time, screen is free from all those movie objects. If it is a movie 'Towering Inferno'; the fire in the movie is associated with the screen, but the screen is not affected by the fire; that is why at the end of the movie, screen is still present; as far as screen is concerned, there is no fire. And suppose you see the movie of Titanic; the ship sinking; throughout the movie, water you have seen on the screen; and at the end of every show, do you have a dryer to dry the screen which is wet before the next show. No, the wettest movie will not make the screen wet; the dry screen continues to be driest, even when you have water. Similarly, Brahman accommodates all, but from Brahman's standpoint, they are not there intrinsically. So nirguṇam. That is Brahman is said to be nirguṇam.

बहिरन्तश्च भूतानाम् अचरं चरमेव च ।
सूक्ष्मत्वात्तदविज्ञेयं दूरस्थं चान्तिके च तत् ॥ १३.१६ ॥

bahirantaśca bhūtānāmacaram̄ caramēva ca |
sūkṣmatvāttadavijñeyam̄ dūrastham̄ cāntikē ca tat || 13.16 ||

बहिः bahiḥ it is outside च अन्तः ca antaḥ and inside भूतानाम् bhūtānām living beings अचरम् acaram it is unmoving एव च चरम् ēva ca caram and moving, तद् दूरस्थं च tad dūrastham̄ ca it is far च अन्तिके ca antikē and near सूक्ष्मत्वात् sūkṣmatvāt being subtle तद् अविज्ञेयम् tad avijñeyam it is unknowable.

16. It is outside and inside living beings, It is unmoving and moving. It is far and near. Being subtle, it is unknowable.

So the Existence-consciousness Brahman is not only in the Body, but it is outside also. It is both within and without. Remember the example, light is upon the hand also; light is beyond the hand also. Then the question will come; how come I see the light only on the hand? What answer will you say? That is because of reflecting-medium; upon the hand is light is manifest light; in Sānskrīt, it is vyaktha-prakāśa, beyond the hand, the light exists, but in what form; in unmanifest-form. In Sānskrīt, Avyaktha-prakāśa. Wherever people are sitting, it is vyaktha-prakāśa. In this fan in vyatha-prakāśam, in that fan, vyaktha-prakāśam; in between the two fans, it is avyaktha-prakāśa. I am talking about the light, the prakāśa is, but in what form? Unmanifest, but if you put any object in between it will become vyaktham.

Similarly, the Upaniṣad says Consciousness is in this body; consciousness is in the other body. Between the two bodies also, consciousness IS. Similarly Existence is also here, there, in between also exist. In fact, even when you say, nothing is, there also what we say; Nothing..... IS; there also you are talking about IS. You can never think of the absence of Existence anywhere. Even when you talk about total blankness, what will you say, there is blankness; there also IS.

Therefore, bahirantaśca, bahiḥ means outside the body, antaḥ means inside. And because this concept is very very subtle only, in purāṇās, instead of using the word sat, chit, etc. we use the word Rāma, Kṛṣṇa, Nārāyaṇa etc. antar bahiśca tat sarvaṁ vyāpya nārāyaṇa stithā. There we can conceive and appreciate because there is form. We do not question ourselves, if Nārāyaṇa is with śaṅka, cakra, etc. what do you mean by what is inside and outside. Or is he sitting at every place with śaṅka and cakra? If you think you will have problem. If Nārāyaṇa has to be both inside and outside, he has to be formless existence alone. You can never think of an all-Pervading Nārāyaṇa unless you can think of pure existence. And therefore bahirantaśca bhūtānām. Bhūtāni means all living beings.

And acaraṁ caramēva ca. It is moving and it is non-moving. See it is confusion over confusion. What a சோதனயோ? Trial you say. If anybody has come today, and that too for the first time in this Gīta class, I am sure from the next Sunday, you cannot see him.!!

Gīta has got a few tough portions and one such tough portion is thus. So it is moving and it is non-moving. How to understand. If it is moving, it cannot be non-moving. Both are diagonally opposite. How do you say it is both? The answer is: It is really non-moving; but it is seemingly moving when the medium moves. It is really non-moving; but it is seemingly moving; when the medium moves. What is medium? It is not the 'medium' which talks and tells about your forefathers; it is the medium which manifests.

Let us take the example itself. The all-pervading light does not move at all. Light is all over the hall. It does not move. It cannot move also. But what happens? When I keep the hand here, you are able to see the light here and imagine I am moving the hand; the visible light which was at this point now, the visible light has come to this point now. Again I move to another place, the visible light has moved to that point. As the medium, the reflecting medium moves, it appears as though the light is also moving. There is an aberration; there is a seeming feeling of movement, exactly like when we are coming to Madras, after vacation; let us assume that we had gone out for vacation or some of you have gone or some of you have decided to do justice to 44 degree centigrade therefore you are here, suppose you go and when you come back, by train or any other medium, what do you say: மதிராஸ் வந்தாச்சு; Madras has come. You are travelling by train; you have crossed Bassein Bridge, as the train was halted; there you were irritated; and when the Madras station comes, you jump to the platform and say at last Madras has come. Does Madras come and go? Does not come.

The arrival of the train, the movement of the train is falsely transferred to the place Madras. The movement of the earth is transferred to the Sun. Even in the newspaper you see, Sunrise 6.15, sunset 6.45, etc. You know the Sun never rises or sets. It is stationary. What is happening? The attribute of one thing is transferred to the other. Similarly what do we do? The movement of the hand is falsely transferred to the light and therefore the light appears to be moving. You would have seen the Lighthouse also. I thought that there are three lights; powerful lights are kept; spot light or something; we see three beams moving, rotating. I thought that there are there 3 lights that is moving. And therefore I read in a book, I think that book is reliable only. They say: three lights are not there; there is only light. And not only that, that one light does not move also. So there is one non-moving light; but what is my experience? Ēkam is becoming anēkam; acalam is becoming calam. So I read that; later I tried to go and see also. Nowadays they do not permit because of LTTE problem. So what exactly is this? There is only one motionless powerful light in the middle and there is a device around the light; and that device has got a wooden or some other fake thing which has got three holes; lights are not three; but there are three holes or slit and that device is moving.

And therefore what do we do; the motion and the number belonging to the device we falsely transfer to the light. All these topics are very elaborately discussed in Vēdānta. This is called dharma adhyāsa. Property of one transferred to other. When we feel gloomy, we say today was a gloomy day. Day is the same only. Something is bad with me I say the day is gloomy. Black day, etc. Day is neither black, nor white nor gloomy. Whatever I feel, I transfer and ascribe it to the day. Similarly the Upaniṣads say that the body travels; the mind travels, the jīvarāśis travel; but the consciousness, the Existence does not travel. But it seems to travel along with the medium. Therefore acaram, really motionless, caram; but seemingly moving; because of the transference of the property.

And dūrasthaṁ cāntikē ca tat; second line, last portion. That Brahman is far away. Dūrasthaṁ means far away. Then we will decide; we have to start because it is far away and that too Vaikuṇṭa, so much distance is there; And not only they say it is far away, they say, if you keep two steps forward, Bhagavān will keep four steps. All these they tell when they talk about Bhakthi and we also enjoy. Five feet we take and Karuṇamūrthy takes ten feet and tears roll down our eyes on the compassion of the Lord, etc. It is all OK, as long as you do not use your Buddhi. If Bhagavān has to come near me by travelling, that Bhagavān cannot be all pervading. Daily we would be saying also Ananthāya Nāma; Ananthāya Nāma, etc. In one place, one direction, we say that Bhagavān is all pervading; and at the same time, we thoughtlessly say that Bhagavān will keep 10 steps when you keep two steps.

Therefore dūrasthaṁ, we have a wrong concept that Bhagavān is far away and therefore Kṛṣṇa says that āntikē ca tat. When you say Bhagavān is far away; how should you understand? Whenever anyone says that Bhagavān is in Vaikuṇṭa, what should you do: you add another word, Bhagavān is in Vaikuṇṭa also. Bhagavān is in Kailāsa, you add in Kailāsam also. That also means what? He is in Vaikuṅṭa also, Kailāsam also, bhulōkha also, Adayar also, Vidya Mandir also, the lecture hall also; and he is also in the mat in which I am sitting; which means that He is in your heart also. So dūrastham cāntikē ca tat. Brahman is far and near; in short Brahman is everywhere.

Śankarācārya gives another interpretation. For a wise person, Brahman is nearest, because he knows that Brahman is not away from me. For an ignorant person, Brahman is far away; because he continues his search; going on and on and on. So for an ignorant person, it is far away. For a wise person, Brahman is nearest, nearest is not the word; He is one with me.

Then comes the final question. If Brahman is everywhere; how come I do not recognise that Brahman? If it is everywhere, I how I do not recognise that Brahman? For which Kṛṣṇa answers: Sukṣmatvāt. Even though Brahman is everywhere, it is of the subtlest-nature, which means that it is free from attributes; attributes alone help me recognise things. When an object produces a sound, I can recognise through the ears. If the object has got a touch, I can recognise through the skin. If it has got form or colour, I can recognise through the eyes. Attribute alone helps me recognise.

And Brahman is sukṣmam; means what? Without attributes. And therefore avijñēyam, extremely difficult to comprehend. Lesser the attributes, more incomprehensible a thing becomes. More the attributes, the easier to understand. And that is why when you take the pañca bhūtāni; ākāśa, vāyu, Agni, jalam, pṛthvi, you will find that pṛthvi, the earth is the grossest thing you can recognise, because it can be recognised through śabda, sparśa, rūpa, rasa and gandha. All the five are there; When you come to water, it has got only four attributes; śabda, sparśa, rūpa, rasa. Water does not have smell. Do not tell, Swamiji tell our corporation water is the smelliest thing. When I say water, I mean pure water. And whatever smell you get in the water, does not belong to it, but to whatever is contaminating it. But water is smell_less. Only four attributes; therefore it can be recognised only through four sense organs.

Agni; three attributes; śabda, sparśa, rūpa. Agni does not have taste. If you have doubt, taste it. You do not have to taste Agni; taste only over hot coffee. You cannot taste anything for an hour later. Agni has got three elements and three attributes can be recognised through the sense organs.

Vāyu has become still subtler. It has got only śabda and sparśa. That is sound and touch; no form. If you want to teach what is air to a child, you will have a tough time.

And when you come to ākāśa, it does not have rūpa, rasa, gandha, all these things; ākāśa is supposed to have only śabda, means the echoing capacity. And that is why ākāśa has only one property and therefore it is very difficult understand.

Even now science does not know what is space? They are coming up with various theories, sometimes they had the theory of ether, sometimes that it is emptiness. Now they say it is a positive thing; particle just come out of space, that means it is not an empty space. Space is a positive matter. Einstein says: கண்ணுக்கு தெரியலை; அதிலேயும் curvature ஆம்; with curvature and elastic அது வேற; space is a curved elastic matter. We are not able to conceive of it at all. Because the lesser the properties, the more subtle the thing, and we say Brahman is subtler than even ākāśa. Therefore comprehending Brahman is going to be the toughest job.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa says, if you do not understand, it is not your mistake, it is the mistake of Brahman. Why should Brahman come like that? Can't He have come and jumped in front of us. The problem is with Brahman! Sukṣmatvat tat avijñēyam. Difficult to comprehend. This is jñēyam.

Verse 13.17

अविभक्तं च भूतेषु विभक्तमिव च स्थितम् ।
भूतभर्तृ च तज्ज्ञेयं ग्रसिष्णु प्रभविष्णु च ॥ १३.१७ ॥

Avibhaktam ca bhūteṣu vibhaktamiva ca sthitam |
bhūtabhartṛ ca tajjñēyam grasiṣṇu prabhaviṣṇu ca || 13.17 ||

च ca Moreover स्थितम् sthitam it remains, अविभक्तम् avibhaktam undivided च yet (it appears), इव विभक्तम् ca iva vibhaktam as if divided भूतेषु bhūteṣu in beings, तद् ज्ञेयम् tad jñēyam that Brahman, प्रभविष्णु prabhaviṣṇu is the creator, ग्रसिष्णु च grasiṣṇu ca the destroyer, च भूतभर्तृ ca bhūtabhartṛ and the sustainer of all beings.

17. Moreover, it remains undivided. Yet (it appears) as if divided in beings. That Brahman is the creator, the destroyer, and the sustainer of all beings.

So that Brahman is indivisible, like space which cannot be divided; that Brahman the pure existence-consciousness is vibhaktam; na vibhaktam; vibhaktam means division, it is indivisible. Therefore he says. Avibhaktam, it is undivided and at the same time, bhūteṣu vibhaktam iva sthitam. It is seemingly divided. It is really undivided but it is seemingly divided, which it is seemingly divided; why it is seemingly divided: Consciousness is all pervading, but we experience consciousness only where the body-medium is available. So therefore, 'here' consciousness can be recognised, in another living being consciousness can be recognised, but in between the consciousness is not recognisable. Therefore what we will conclusion will be, there is one consciousness here and there is another consciousness there. And therefore how many consciousnesses are there? So many; therefore there is a seeming division, but the fact is consciousness is between in what form; unrecognisable form, but wherever body is, it is recognised. You can see the light also. Here one, there one. In between there is no light. We therefore might commit a mistake that the light is also two. But what is the real understanding? Divisions belong to the fingers but the division does not belong to the light. Here there is visible light; here there is visible light, between the fingers, there is invisible light. Therefore, light is continuously there; in pockets visible; in pockets not visible.

And therefore, he says, it is seemingly divided. Again remember the light house example. There is only light; but there seems to be three lights. கவனிச்சிரிப்பேள் என்று நினைக்கிறேன்; இல்லைனா, ஒருக்க beachக்கு போயி வாநோ. (I think that you might have observed. If not go to the beach and see the three lights going around). But light is ēkam. Vibhaktamiva ca sthitam. Tad jñēyam.

And that Brahman is jagat śṛṣṭi laya kārāṇam. Out of that pure-Brahman alone, all the names and forms of the universe have originated and they exist and they dissolve into that Brahman.

So prabhaviṣṇu means śṛṣṭi kārāṇam, grasiṣṇu means laya kārāṇam. Prabhavaḥ means uthpathi, ṣṇu means the cause, prabhaviṣṇu means śṛṣṭi kārāṇam, grasiṣṇu means laya kārāṇam; literally grasiṣṇu means the swallower. Laya kārāṇam and bhūtabhartṛ, means the sthithi kārāṇam. bhartṛ means the sustainer. Husband is called bhārtha because he is supposed to be the one to sustains the family by earning and providing for the family. If the husband does not work and the wife alone works, she should be called bhartṛi and he should be called Bhāryaḥ. These are all kārāṇa names; depending upon their functions, bhārtha, bhārya, etc. are given. So Bharthṛ, Brahman is sarva bhārtha, the sthithi kārāṇam also, bhūtha means all things and beings. In short, yatō vā imāni bhūtāni jāyantē, ēna jātāni jivanti, yat prayantabhiśayan viśantiti. We will see that in Bṛghuvalli in Taittiriya. Out of that Brahman alone all the nāma-rūpa has come.

More we will see in the next class.

Hari Om

174 Chapter 13, Verses 18-20

ॐ

In this 13th chapter, from verse No.13 onwards, Lord Kṛṣṇa has come to the topic of jñēyam, which is the fourth topic of the six topics that Arjuna wanted to know and Lord Kṛṣṇa made it clear that this word jñēyam is nothing but param-Brahma of the Upaniṣad.

अनादिमत्परं ब्रह्म न सत्तन्नासदुच्यते ॥ १३.१३ ॥

Anādimatparam Brahma na sattannāsaducyatē || 13.13 ||

And having said this much, Lord Kṛṣṇa started the description of Param-Brahma as given in the Upaniṣads and as I said, this is the subtlest-topic of the Upaniṣads, and the subtlest topic of the Bhagavat Gīta also. In fact, this is the main topic. And the description was all inconceivable-descriptions; Param-Brahma is nirguṇam, it is free from all attributes and therefore not available for any kind of sensory-perception and while it is Nirguṇam, it is all pervading, it exists everywhere; in fact, in the form of the very Existence itself. Nirguṇam-Brahma is the very existence-principle which is everywhere, and not only that, it is only one; it is not plural; the objects in the creation are many; but the all-pervading attributeless-existence is Ēkam.

So Nirguṇam, sadrūpam, sarvagatham and Ēkam and this Existence even though it appears to be divided, really speaking, it is an indivisible-principle; it has got only a seeming-division. As I gave the example, the light pervading the hall or pervading the fingers cannot be divided; it is all over; but you see the light only on the fingers and in between the fingers you do not see the light and therefore it creates a misconception that one light is on this finger, second light is on this finger, the third is on this; thus there are five fingers and it appears as though there are five lights; and in between it appears as though there is no light. But the fact is that it is only seemingly divided light, but the light is continuously there; in between the fingers also. Exactly like that, Existence is seemingly divided but it is one indivisible Akandam-Brahma. Thus Nirguṇam, Sarvagatham, Ēkam, Akandam, Sadrupam, all these descriptions Lord Kṛṣṇa gives.

Now we know that it is almost impossible to conceive of such a Brahman. That we may almost conclude that it is non-existent and that is why later Kṛṣṇa will point out that you have to train your mind to understand Brahman and one of the training suggested in the śāstra is meditating upon the space. Trying to understand or conceive of ākāśa tatvam. We very loosely, very loosely use the word Ākāśa. When I use the word ākāśa, what do I see? I do not see ākāśa, I do not touch ākāśa, I do not smell ākāśa, I do not taste ākāśa; even though ākāśa is not a perceptible substance, I am able to talk about ākāśa. I am telling: இடம் இருக்கு; வந்து உக்காருங்கள்; (come and sit here, there is space here). What do I mean by it; it means that nobody is there; nobody is there means what? You may empty space; empty space means what? We use the words, but we have never thought of the meaning of the word space. And if think of space, you will know, it is something, which is not perceptible or tangible and which is all pervading, which is only one: How many spaces are there? Which is only one; which is also indivisible and it looks as though space means emptiness. But remember, science has proved space is not emptiness or void, but it is a positive substance. So by meditating upon ākāśa, in Taittiriya Upaniṣad, in the Bṛhuvalli, third chapter, we will see the Upaniṣad describing ākāśa dhyānam.

Ākāśa dhyānam is prescribed to make the intellect extremely subtle to understand Brahman, which is subtler than even ākāśa. Similarly, the Brahman description creates an impression, that it is a void or nothing. Kṛṣṇa says it is a positive entity. பாக்கலாமா? முடியாது; கேகலாமா? முடியாது; தொடலாமா? முடியாது; நக்கலாமா? முடியாது; எங்க இருக்கு? எங்கும் இருக்கு. (Can you see, No. Can you hear; No. Can you touch? No. Can you taste, No. Where is it? It is everywhere).

So then it appears that it is void. It is positive bhava padarthaḥ and therefore we have to make the mind subtler and subtler; ultimately grasping this our aim. Let it take months, let it take years; let it take janmās; ultimately only by knowing this Brahman, jñēyaṃ yattatpravakṣyāmi yajjñātvā'mṛtamaśnutē. Knowing this inconceivable Brahman or unconceivable Brahman is our ultimate goal. And therefore Kṛṣṇa struggles to describe and you should also struggle to understand. I will also struggle to explain.

Verse 13.18

ज्योतिषामपि तज्ज्योतिः तमसः परमुच्यते ।
ज्ञानं ज्ञेयं ज्ञानगम्यं हृदि सर्वस्य विष्ठितम् ॥ १३.१८ ॥

[jyōtiṣāmapi tajjyōtistamasah paramucyatē |
jñānaṃ jñēyaṃ jñānagamyam hṛdi sarvasya viṣṭhitam || 13.18 ||](#)

तद् ज्योतिः tad jyōtiḥ – it is the light ज्योतिषाम् अपि jyōtiṣām api of all lights, उच्यते ucyatē it is said to be, परं तमसः param tmasah beyond ignorance ज्ञानम् jñānam it is knowledge ज्ञेयम् jñēyam – the object of knowledge, ज्ञानगम्यम् jñānagamyam and the goal of knowledge विष्ठितम् viṣṭhitam present हृदि सर्वस्य hṛdi sarvasya in the heart of all.

18. It is the light of all lights. It is said to be beyond ignorance. It is knowledge, the object of knowledge, and the goal of knowledge, present in the heart of all.

So here Kṛṣṇa says that Satrūpam-Brahma; that Brahman which is in the form of pure Existence; formless Existence; is the same as the ātma which is the formless consciousness principle. Sadrūpam Brahma is the same as cidrūpaḥ-ātma.

And when I use the word Consciousness you have to remember all those points. Consciousness is not a product, part or property of the body; Consciousness is an independent entity which pervades and enlivens the body; Consciousness is not limited by the boundaries of the body; Consciousness survives even after the fall of the body; the surviving Consciousness is not accessible to us, not because it is absent, but because there is no medium for its manifestation.

And that consciousness is Existence-Brahma and Kṛṣṇa describes the Consciousness by a special word used in the Upaniṣad, jyōtiṣāṁ mapi jyōti. Kṛṣṇa borrows the Upaniṣadic expressions throughout; because whenever the topic of Brahman comes, one has to run to the Upaniṣads. Everybody has to come to that. And in Muṇḍaka Upaniṣad there is this expression.

हिरण्मये परे कोशे विरजं ब्रह्म निश्कलम् ।
नच्छुभ्रं ज्योतिषां ज्योतिस्तद् यदात्मविदो विदुः ॥ Muṇḍaka II.९ ॥

hiraṇmayē parē koṣē virajaṁ Brahma niśkalam |
nacchubhram jyōtiṣāṁ jyōtistad yadātmavidō viduḥ || Muṇḍaka II.9 ||

Then comes the न तत्र सूर्यो भाति न चन्द्रतारकं नेमा विध्युतो भान्ति कुतोऽयमग्निः ।

तकेव भान्तमनुभाति सर्वं तस्य भासा सर्वमिदं विभाति ॥ Muṇḍaka II.१० ॥

na tatra sūryō bhāti na candratāraḥ nēma vidhyutō bhānti kutō:'yamagniḥ |
takēva bhāntamanubhāti sarvaṁ tasya bhāsā sarvamidaṁ vibhāti || Muṇḍaka II.10||

A mantra which is used in all temples when the deepārādhana is done. What is the meaning of this word? Jyōtiṣāṁ jyōti. Jyōtiḥ means light. And jyōtiṣāṁ jyōti means the light of all lights. Like in Kēnōpaniṣad, the eye of the eye, the ear of the ear, the mind of the mind, like that, light of all lights.

In Vēdānta, the word light is used in a technical sense, I have told you before, I would like to remind you in Vēdānta light means that in whose presence things are known or recognised. Light is defined as that in whose presence things are known. And from that standpoint, all the luminaries in the sky are called light. Sūryaḥ, Chandraḥ, Nakṣatrāṇi, vidyut. Sūryaḥ means the sun, moon, the stars, as well as the lightning, all of them are called lights because in their presence we are able to know things. During the daytime, because of the sunlight alone, I am able to know what is in front of me. In the night, I recognise things with moonlight. And if it is amāvāsya night, then I have to use a fire to know things. Thus Sūryaḥ, chandraḥ, Nakṣatrāṇi, then Agni and vidhyut, vidhyut meaning, lightening; even electricity comes under vidhyut, electricity is called in Sānskrīt, Vidhyut śakti. In Malayalam also it is vidhyut śakti. All of them are called lights; why? In their presence things are known, if the current goes now, You are all there, but I cannot know you.

Now extending this principle, the Upaniṣad says that every sense organ can also be called light. Every sense organ also can be called light; because in the presence of sense organs, things are known; in their absence, things are not known. A blind man cannot see anything even if the sun, moon, and electricity everything is there. Similarly, the ears are called light, because in the presence of the ears, the sound is known, in its absence, sound is not known. Similarly, nose is a light; in the presence of the nose, smells are known; in their absence they are not known. Thus every pramāṇam, every instrument of knowledge is a light. Even logic is a form of light, because through reasoning, I come to know things.

And then the Upaniṣad says there is a special chapter, section in Bṛhadārāṇya dealing with this subject matter. It is called svayam jyōti brāhmaṇam, The Upaniṣad says, even 'words' can be called light. And suppose, there is a visitor in your house, and when he enters the power goes. And he does not know where is what in your house, and you are worried and then you give a verbal light; turn to the right, turn to the left, etc. and now he comes to know of the things in front of him, with what light, not the torch light, not electric light, not any other light, he cannot even use his eyes because of the pitch darkness, and he is able to guide and what is that light; vāca agnina. Bṛhadārāṇya says: words are lights.

And coming in this direction, the Upaniṣad says the ultimate-light is nothing but the consciousness-principle, because in the presence of consciousness alone, you can know everything and if consciousness is not there, an inert thing cannot know anything. And therefore the ultimate light in whose presence you can know everything, in whose absence you do not know anything, that light is consciousness. And if that light of consciousness is not there, then even the sun, the moon, etc. become useless, even if the sense-organs are there, they are useless, even a wonderful brain is there; Einstein's brain is persevered in a bottle; but that powerful brain you go and ask, what is two plus two cannot answer. So therefore the greatest brain, the sense organs, the sun, moon, all the lights become meaningful, only when the consciousness-principle is there, and therefore consciousness is called the light of all lights, the light in whose presence alone, the other lights become meaningful. And therefore Kṛṣṇa says jyōtiṣāmapi tajjyōti. It is the light of all lights.

And not only that param̐ tamsaḥ ucyatē. And this light is a unique light, which light, the light of consciousness, is a unique light, with which you can illumine or know even darkness.

This is a very interesting thing you have to know. If you take local light, that light can illumine everything. So the light can illumine the wall, all your bodies, your head, this mike, the book, the letter; the light can illumine everything, but the light cannot illumine one thing; you know what, it cannot illumine darkness. If you take a torch to see darkness, what happens?

That is why Swami Chinmayānanda nicely says: some people went and told Sūrya Bhagavān it seems that there is a very beautiful girl, if you want to marry; and that girl's name is Miss Darkness or Miss Night, because in Sānskrīt language night is feminine gender; niśa; rātriḥ, feminine gender; in fact, we have a prayer in Vēda, which is called rātriḥ-sūktham. Have you seen in any other literature like this? A sūktham prayer dedicated to rātriḥ. So therefore the rātriḥ dēvathā, the night is a beautiful dēvathā, if you want, you can marry. Sūrya Bhagavān wanted to go and see Miss Night. And somebody said, she is on the other part of the earth. Miss Night is on the other part of the earth. And therefore Sun started travelling to reach the other side; and then somebody said: No No No, she has gone to the other part; in search of Miss Niśadēvi, (even girls keep that name), Sūrya Bhagavān, started going round; still he is continuing. He wants to meet Miss Night. Thereafter only Sun rise and sunset started.

So sunlight however powerful it might be, it cannot illumine darkness. Whereas the consciousness is the only unique light, which is capable of illumine making you know what is darkness. ராத்திரி, இருட்டை எப்படி பார்க்கிறேன்; கண்ணால பார்க்க முடியாது. In the night, darkness how are you seeing. You are not seeing the darkness through your eyes. Eyes can never see darkness because eyes stop functioning when there is no light; eyes can function only in the medium of light and how can that I ever illumine darkness, but still we are able to know, experience darkness. So how do we gain the knowledge of darkness? It is by unique method. The consciousness alone illumines darkness and therefore all other lights are opposed to darkness, because when light is there, darkness will go away. Consciousness is the unique light, which can co-exist with darkness. And therefore it is said to be tamsaḥ paramucyatē. Param means unopposed to. Unopposed to and therefore only absolute, is the light of consciousness.

And not only that: jñānam, Jñēyaṃ and jñāna gamyam̐ hṛdi sarvasya viṣṭhitam. This sad chit Brahman alone is in the form of everything. Sarvaṃ Brahma mayam jagat. This formless existence, consciousness alone appears as this formed universe. A formless existence consciousness alone appears as the formed universe.

You may ask, how is it possible? Again you have to go back to science alone. Just as formless energy gets converted into formed and tangible matter. Energy is intangible and when energy is converted into matter, it becomes tangible. And when matter is converted to energy, again it becomes intangible. So if intangible energy can appear as tangible matter, Vēdānta says, the non-tangible Brahman is the ultimate cause of this universe and that alone appears as the tangible universe. It is jagat kāraṇam. It is in the form of everything. And therefore jñānam, Jñēyam, that Brahman alone is jñānam, jñānam means the means of knowledge. So that through which we come to know that means of knowledge is also Brahman and Jñēyam, the object that you know is also Brahman, so the subject is Brahman, the object is Brahman, the instrument is Brahman, sarvaṁ Brahma mayam jagat.

So jñānam, Jñēyam, and jñāna gamyaṁ. And through this knowledge, Brahmajñānam, the destination that you want to reach that destination is also Brahman. The knower is Brahman, the knowing instrument is Brahman, the known object is Brahman, and the destination you want to reach ultimately is also Brahman. In short, sarvaṁ Brahma mayam jagat.

And where should you discover that Brahman? Even though Brahman is everywhere, you have to discover that Brahman only in a particular place. Like the electricity is there all over the cable. It runs, it passes through, but if you want to find out whether there is power or not, what do you do? You look at the fan, electricity is not in the fan alone; is all over the cable, but to recognise you look at the fan; or you look at the light. And suppose there is neither the fan nor the light, where there is a plug point, there the tester is kept and tested. And once I test and identify electricity in the plug point, I know that electricity is not only there, but it is also throughout.

In the same way, sat cit ātma Brahman is everywhere but if you want to recognise you require plug point; what is the plug point? Every one of us is one one plug point. Do not ask whether the tester is to be kept on the head! Even though consciousness is everywhere, you recognise only in your mind. Sarvasya hr̥di viṣṭhitam. Hr̥di means mind; and I recognise consciousness in my mind, you recognise consciousness in your mind; I cannot recognise consciousness in you. That you are conscious people, I cannot see, because when I see a body and a dead body, I do not see the consciousness in you. I see only the material body.

Consciousness is not seen by me. When you nod your head, I assume that you are conscious and that you are aware of the words, and somehow you are managing to understand and you are nodding the head out of understanding and not of dozing, because in dozing also, the head shakes. Anyhow, I have to be optimistic; that you are not sleeping. Remember I have no way of recognising the consciousness in your body. That is why the scientists are struggling to recognise the consciousness in the brains of people; how consciousness is happening, any amount of brain research, they are not able to understand, because it is not visible. Therefore how do I understand consciousness? Only in one way. I am a conscious being. For that I hope you want ask for proof.

That I am conscious being is self-evident fact. And I am consciousness in my own mind; in what way? Being conscious of all the thoughts that arise in my mind, I am Consciousness, the words that are coming from outside, which form thoughts in my mind, I am conscious, whether the words I understand or not, I am conscious. Because you say that you understand; you also say that I do not understand. And when all these thoughts are resolved, and the mind goes blank, that blankness of the mind also I am conscious of. What is the proof? I am using the word blank. What I have not experienced, I cannot talk about. The very fact that I am talking about mental blankness or mental blackout, I am able to talk, because I am conscious of that.

And that consciousness is the vṛitti bhāva abāva sākṣi; the witness of the presence or the absence of thought in the mind is the consciousness and it is this consciousness which is in everyone's mind and it is this consciousness which is in between the living beings also. Thus we have to go a long long way to appreciate. Therefore Kṛṣṇa says sarvasya hṛdi viṣṭhitam. Viṣṭhitam means available, literally it means present, present being accessible; available, recognisable. And Arjuna this is Jñēyam Brahma. So with this, the fourth topic is also over.

And incidentally one point you should remember is: the topic of kṣētrajñaḥ which we discussed in the beginning and the topic of Jñēyam which we have just completed, both of them, are ultimately one and the same principle alone. Kṣētrajñaḥ is Jñēyam Brahma, jīvātma the kṣētrajña, is the paramātma the Jñēyam Brahma.

Then the question is if both of them are one and the same; why do you use two words and confuse us? Normally itself it is difficult to understand; when why you confuse by using different expressions also? We say that this is not new to Vēdānta and even in our daily transactions, we have got different words to indicate one and the same substance. In fact, in Viṣṇu sahasranāma thousand names are used to reveal whom? One Viṣṇu. And if you look at home at itself, one and the same member of family is addressed by different names by different people, one calls mother, another calls sister, another calls wife, another calls granny. So one and same substance can have different names, when the point of reference is different.

From the reference point, from the stand point of the child, the man is father. From the standpoint of the wife, the very same man is the husband. Not that the stomach is father, the head is the husband. The whole person is the father and the whole person is the husband. The whole person is the brother. So when the angle differs, the nama differs; this place itself, suppose one person says this is Adyar. Another person says that this is Tamil Nadu. Another person says that this is India. Another person says this is Asia. Who is correct? All are correct. When you are talking from the standpoint of local area of Tamilnadu, you call it Adayar. In the context of various States of India, you call it Tamil Nadu. When you are talking from the standpoint of different countries, you call it India. When the topic is in the context of continents, you call it Asia. When the topic is planet, you call it Earth. When the topic is solar system, this is the solar system. When it is galaxy, our galaxy is what, milky way. (no milk is seen, it is named milky way).

Same way, even though consciousness is all pervading, when you look at consciousness from the standpoint of the individual, consciousness obtaining in the body, the individual, we call it kṣētrajñā, the jīvātma, from microcosmic standpoint, whereas the very same consciousness as the all-pervading principle, macrocosm, we call it paramātma or Jñēyam Brahma. Kṣētrajñam is only Jñēyam Brahma.

इति क्षेत्रं तथा ज्ञानं ज्ञेयं चोक्तं समासतः । मद्भक्त एतद्विज्ञाय मद्भावायोपपद्यते ॥ १३.१९ ॥

iti kṣētram tathā jñānam jñēyam cōktaṁ samāsataḥ |
madbhakta ētadvijñāya madbhāvāyōpapadyatē || 13.19 ||

इति iti thus क्षेत्रम् kṣētram kṣētram तथा ज्ञानम् tathā jñānam jñānam च ज्ञेयम् ca jñēyam and Jñēyam उक्तम् uktam have been taught, समासतः samāsataḥ briefly विज्ञाय एतत् vijñāya ētat knowing this मद्भक्तः madbhaktaḥ My devotee उपपद्यते upapadyatē becomes fit मद्भावाय madbhāvāya to attain My nature.

19. Thus kṣētram, jñānam, and Jñēyam have been taught briefly. Knowing this, my devotee becomes fit to attain My nature.

So in this verse, Lord Kṛṣṇa is consolidating. Lord Kṛṣṇa tells Arjuna that I remember all the 6 topics you wanted to know, whether you remember or not, I remember. Of the six topics, I have discussed 4; two more are remaining. So this is a consolidating śloka.

So this is one of the method of teaching; when the teacher progresses from topic to topic and that too when it is a tersely developed discussion; it is nice to stay in a place and just look behind and take stock of what has already been discussed and make sure that the śiṣya is following. Or else, suddenly when you look back, no one would be coming with you. So this method is called Simha-avalōkana nyāya. The Lion does like that it seems. Just goes forward and makes sure that there is no challenger at all; I am the king of the forest; and everybody has to accept me; and having gone forward it looks around as having made sure that the portion covered, I have proved myself; then it goes forward.

Similarly, the teacher has to give an opportunity to the student to think what has been covered and then go forward. And therefore Kṛṣṇa here says; Hey Arjuna, I have discussed four topics: What are they. (1) kṣētraṁ and (2) you have to supply kṣētrajña, which is not said here, but which goes together; and (3) jñānam, that is the third topic and (4) Jñēyam, fourth topic, cōktaṁ, means I have taught. Jñēyam cōktaṁ means I have taught you Arjuna, samāsataḥ, I have taught you only briefly.

If you want to know more details; if your intellect is tickled and stimulated, because two things can happen. Some people it is a challenging topic, and therefore their intellect is tickled, therefore they want to know more. There is another group of Intellect says enough is enough of Vēdānta, and let me just stick to Kṛṣṇa Rāma japa, etc. and take the chundal and go home. Who wants all these kinds of hair splitting analysis etc? So therefore I have given you sample, if you are interested, care of the Upaniṣads. The Upaniṣads exclusively and predominantly deal with this subject matter alone. And therefore, this is the முன்னோடம்; trailer, next week what are the serials. Two minutes script they show; husband and wife about to fight and... next week. This person will definitely see that.

Like that Kṛṣṇa shows the trailer here, samāsataḥ, briefly I have taught you and madbhakta ētadvijñāya. So every seeker who is my devotee will certainly know this and one of the conditions is what he should be my bhaktha from which Kṛṣṇa indicates Bhakthi is an important qualification for gaining self-knowledge, which Kṛṣṇa has already mentioned mayi ananya yōgēna bhakthi avyabhicāriṇi.

So a Vēdāntic student should be necessarily a devotee. Vēdānta teacher should be a religious person and that is why in all our scriptures, philosophy and religion; philosophy and theology, they are mixed together. Whereas in other systems, especially western and all, philosophy and theology are separated an atheist philosophy is possible; but we insist if you want the philosophical knowledge, you should start with devotion. The discussion may be of pure formless truth; even though the discussion is the ultimate truth, we keep the photo of the Lord and start with the Sahanabhavathu prayer. So that we end with prayer slōkā, because without devotion, jñānam does not take place. There is no secular Vēdānta. Even if somehow knowledge takes place for a non-devotee, it remains an academic knowledge; that is called arm-chair philosophy, he will be an expert in the Upaniṣad, but there will be no transformation in his personality.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa insists that you should be necessarily a devotee. In fact, at the end of the 18th chapter, Kṛṣṇa even gives a warning to every Gīta teacher. The warning to the teacher is: never teach Gīta to a person who is a non-religious person.

इदं ते नातपस्काय नाभक्त्या कदाचन ।
न चाशुश्रूषवे वाच्यं न च मां योऽभ्यसूयति ॥ १८.६७॥

[Idaṁ tē nātapaskāya nābhaktāya kadācana |
na cāśuśrūṣavē vācyaṁ na ca mām yō'bhyaśūyati || 18.67 ||](#)

Nābhaktayā kadācana idaṁ na vācyaṁ; the one who is non-religious never give it. Therefore Kṛṣṇa here says: mat bhaktha, He goes a next step; mat bhaktha, he must be My devotee. Mat bhaktha means Īśvara bhaktha. Ētat vijñāya, such a devotee will necessarily gain the knowledge and even if he feels that this is too subtle for understanding, his devotion will refine his intellect. Second time he listens; he will understand better. But he will not say, he has improved; but he will say Swamiji you are teaching better. Anyway, the teacher is not bothered who takes the credit; whether I have improved or you have improved, or both have improved. If you understood, good.

That is why Vēdānta has to be listened again and again. First time listening certain aspects you will understand; next time some other will be cleared, and like that. Kaun Puṇyēna sravanam kuryat. Avriṭhiḥ asakṛt upadeśa. A special Brahma-sutra is dedicated for this subject. Keep on listening. So ētat vijñāyaya, my devotee will certainly know this in due course, what is the benefit he will get?

That is important; what will I get. Kṛṣṇa says; Mat bhāvāya upapadyatē. He will also attain the same nature as mine. Just as I am ever free. He will also discover the eternal freedom which is his very nature. So mat bhavaḥ means Brahma bhavaḥ, Īśvara bhavaḥ, bhavaḥ means svarūpam, therefore mat bhavaḥ, Īśvara-svarūpam; which means pūrṇatvam. Previously we considered himself to be a finite individual, now he does not have that problem. He knows I am the all-pervading Brahman. There is no sense of isolation. There is no sense of rejection; No feeling of: no one is attending me, கேள்வி கேள்பபாரீ இல்லை; kēlvi keppār illai. I am this old person sitting at home and so many children, and nobody has time to ask how are you, they are not bothered about whether I am alive or dead, etc. these are all called saṁsāra. Sense that the children are not loving me, not taking care of me, not talking to me, these are all sense of isolation, sense of rejection. And in fact it becomes more and more as we grow older and older. Because when we are younger, we can forget this saṁsāra by diversion. Go to beach, or go to a movie, or move with friends you can be busy and forget saṁsāra, as we grow old, we have no escapist route, lying on the bed without able to get up, therefore no fear of that. How wonderful it is? The children are talking; they have time, wonderful, if they are busy in their career, maybe in America, Russia, Japan, other than India; I never feel lonely. I never feel rejected, because all are existing in Me. Mai ēva sakalam jatham. This pūrṇatvam is the benefit of this knowledge. Therefore Kṛṣṇa says madbhāvāyōpapadyatē. He will become qualified.

प्रकृतिं पुरुषं चैव विद्धि अनादि उभावपि ।
विकारांश्च गुणांश्चैव विद्धि प्रकृतिसम्भवान् ॥ १३.२० ॥

Prakṛtiṁ puruṣaṁ caiva viddhyanādi ubhāvapi |
vikārāṁśca guṇāṁścaiva viddhi prakṛtisambhavān || 13.20 ||

विद्धि viddhi Know उभौ अपि ubhau api both प्रकृतिम् prakṛtim prakṛti च एव पुरुषम् ca ēva puruṣam and puruṣa अनादी anādī to be beginningless, विद्धि viddhi know विकारान् च vikārān ca all the products, च एव गुणान् ca eva guṇān and gunas प्रकृतिसम्भवान् prakṛtisambhavān to be born of prakṛti

20. Know both prakṛti and puruṣa to be beginningless. Know all the products and guṇas to be born of prakṛti.

In 19th verse, Lord Kṛṣṇa has consolidated and concluded four topics. Now Kṛṣṇa wants to discuss, the last two topics, which he has not discussed; they are puruṣa and prakṛti. And these two, Kṛṣṇa wants to discuss together, because they are closely interconnected principles, just as Kṣētram and kṣētrajña are closely inter-connected. Similarly, these two are connected, therefore together Kṛṣṇa wants to discuss from this verse, that is from verse No.20 up to verse No.24.

20-24 is puruṣa and prakṛti. And this puruṣa and prakṛti are very much similar to Kṣētram and kṣētrajña. We saw in the beginning Kṣētram represents the matter-principle. And kṣētrajña represents the consciousness principle. Vēdānta takes consciousness as an independent principle, because as we have seen, Vēdānta does not look upon consciousness as part or product of matter. And therefore it is enumerated as a separate entity. Remember the example, even though I see one fan functioning, in my understanding there are two principles, one is the visible fan and the invisible electricity, which is a separate principle, which continues even when the fan stops. Similarly, when I look at you, it is not one principle, it is a mixture of two; the visible-matter-principle and the invisible-consciousness-principle.

And in the seventh chapter, Kṛṣṇa used the word para prakṛti and apara prakṛti, para prakṛti being consciousness and apara prakṛti being matter. Now the same Kṛṣṇa is discussing again in the name of puruṣa and prakṛti; puruṣa means caitanya tatvam; the independent-consciousness-principle and prakṛti means the matter-principle. The fundamental basic invisible matter, which can be compared to energy. Compared to energy. Energy is invisible version of matter. And these two, Kṛṣṇa is going to talk about in the following verses; details of which we will see in the next class.

Hari Om

175 Chapter 13, Verses 20-22

Om

With the 19th verse of this chapter, Lord Kṛṣṇa has completed four topics, out of the 6 topics that Arjuna wanted to know. The four completed topics are Kṣētram, kṣētrajña, jñānam and jñēyam. And now from the 20th verse onwards, up to 24th verse, Lord Kṛṣṇa is going to deal with the final two topics, namely, Puruṣa and Prakṛti. And since these two topics are very closely connected, Kṛṣṇa is dealing with them parallelly, simultaneously. And for all practical purposes, we can understand the word Puruṣa as Brahman and we can understand the prakṛti as Māya and therefore the discussion is regarding Brahman and Māya of the upaniṣad. These two words puruṣa and prakṛti are generally used in Sāṅkya philosophy, but rarely in Vēdānta also, we use the word puruṣa and prakṛti for Brahman and Māya.

And Kṛṣṇa begins the discussion here saying prakṛtiṁ puruṣam caiva viddhyanādi ubhāvapi. Arjuna may you understand puruṣa and prakṛti as the two basic principles which are beginningless-principles. Anādi means without a beginning and it is in dual number which means puruṣa is also Anādi, prakṛti is also Anādi. And this puruṣa-prakṛti mixture alone we call Īśvaraḥ. Prakṛti plus puruṣa is equal to Īśvaraḥ. Brahman plus Māya is equal to Īśvara.

And Kṛṣṇa wants to point out that this Īśvara alone existed even before the origination of this universe. Since the universe has an origination; the world has a beginning, and since the Īśvara has no beginning, it is clear that even before the world originated, before the beginninged-world, there was the beginningless Īśvara, which means even before Sṛṣṭi, Īśvara existed. And since Īśvara alone existed before Sṛṣṭi, the Sṛṣṭi must have come out of whom; out of Īśvara only, because Īśvara alone was the beginningless principle.

And this Īśvara consists puruṣa and prakṛti and if you remember the 7th chapter, it was presented there as para prakṛti and apara prakṛti. The same idea you have to bring here.

Now from this verse we come to know that puruṣa and prakṛti have got one common feature. And what is that common feature? Both are beginningless. Anānditvam is one common feature; and the second common feature is that both of them together are the cause of the universe. Therefore puruṣa is also cause prakṛti is also cause, together alone they enjoy causal status; exactly like the father and mother. Father by himself cannot be the cause of a child, mother by herself can never be the cause of a child; father and mother alone can together enjoy the causal status. And that is why jagatapitharau vandē pārvathi paramēśvarau. Thus they have got two common features. First common feature is: both of them are beginningless. And the second one is that both are together cause of the universe.

And these two principles have got uncommon features also. Common features are two; uncommon features or differences are many and out of many differences, four differences are very important for our study which I had discussed in the 7th chapter; but since years have gone, I forget and therefore I will remind myself.

What is the first difference between puruṣa and prakṛti? Puruṣa is cētana tatvam; it is consciousness-principle; whereas prakṛti or Māya is acētana-tatvam, it is the basic matter-principle. Even if you would like to call it energy, I do not mind, matter and energy are one and the same in different states. That is why they are inter-convertible; whereas Consciousness is neither matter nor energy. Very careful. Consciousness is neither matter nor energy. Thus Puruṣa is consciousness-principle, Prakṛti is basic matter or energy principle; this is the first difference.

The second difference is the puruṣa is nirvikāra-tatvam; consciousness-principle is not subject to modification or change. It is ever the changeless principle, time cannot influence consciousness. Time cannot touch consciousness. Consciousness is not within the field of time. In fact, some scientists themselves are saying this. Whereas prakṛti or matter-principle is subject to time and therefore subject to modification; in Sānskrīt savikāra-tatvam. So cētana tatvam-acētana tatvam is the first difference; nirvikāra-tatvam -savikāra-tatvam is the second difference.

And because of the influence of time alone, matter is violently undergoing change, even becoming energy is a form of change; matter becomes energy. In fact in an atomic explosion; in a nuclear explosion, what is happening is, matter is converted into tremendous energy. And therefore, matter is subject to change to energy form; energy is subject to change into matter form; and within matter itself, it violently undergoes change; the sun is changing violently, the planets are changing and even the minutest atom is undergoing change. Therefore savikāra-tatvam. And the other one nirvikāra-tatvam.

Then the third important difference or uncommon feature is that Puruṣa, the consciousness-principle is free from all attributes. It is absolutely property-free. Whether you enumerate the properties as satva rajas tamō-guṇa, then we say consciousness is free from all these three. If you enumerate the properties as śabda, sparśa, rūpa, rasa and gandha, śabda means sound, sparśa, means touch, rūpa means form, rasa means taste, gandha means smell; then consciousness is free from all these five properties.

Or if you are chemistry student; who is used to salt analysis in the lab; then we talk about the physical properties and chemical properties. Physical properties and chemical properties determine a chemical as a particular chemical; physical property means what the colour, etc. chemical property varieties of reactions we do, add hydrochloric acid pass hydrogen sulphide, then. Therefore we have got a salt analysis. 1st group, 2nd group, 3rd group, etc. And if you are a chemistry student, then we say consciousness is free from all types of physical and chemical properties.

In short, consciousness is property-less-attributeless. In Sānskrīt Nirguṇa-tatvam. Whereas matter is endowed with all the properties.

So from one angle, we say matter has got three guṇas; three means satva, rajas, tamō guṇaḥ, we say; Or from another angle we say, matter has five guṇa, śabda, sparśa, rūpa, rasa, gandha; Or from chemistry angle, we say matter has got innumerable physical and chemical properties. And therefore too simply, matter is attributed. In Sānskrīt we say satguṇa-tatvam. So cētana-acētanam, nirvikaram-savikaram, nirguṇa-saguṇa (you should not change the order).

And then comes the fourth and final property for our discussion. You can have several but four only for our discussion. This is technical thing which is not directly relevant, but for future questions this will be required.

And what is that difference? Cētana or the consciousness-principle has got an independent existence and therefore it is said to be satya tatvam. The existence of consciousness is intrinsic, it is independent, it is unborrowed. That is why we say, cit ēva sat. And therefore it is satya tatvam; whereas the matter-principle does not have an independent existence; the existence of matter depends upon the consciousness principle. Even to prove that you are all sitting in the class, I should be conscious of you. What I am not conscious, I cannot talk of its existence at all. And therefore the existence of a thing, a material thing, depends upon the consciousness-principle and therefore matter enjoys or suffers dependent existence. In Sānskrīt we call it mithyā-tatvam. Satyam and mithyā. We will keep it aside, which we will deal later.

These are the four fundamental differences between Puruṣa and Prakṛti. Such a puruṣa-prakṛti mixture called God was there even before the origination of the world. And the most interesting thing is, that when we say God alone existed before the creation, we cannot even answer the question, where was He located. Heன்னு சொல்லமுடியாது; என்னவாவது சொல்லணமே என்று சொன்னோம். (He and all we cannot say; but we have to say something therefore we say He). Where was He located; even location of God we cannot talk about because, before creation, even ākāśa was not there. Ākāśa comes only after creation. How do you know? Care of Taitariya upaniṣad. Do you remember by mistake? Tasmāt vā ētat atmanaḥ ākāśa sambhūtaḥ.

Even scientists point out that you cannot imagine space at the time of or before the big bang. How they have reached Vēdānta. They will say Vēdānta has borrowed Science. Long before science came, it has been said. Therefore you cannot conceive of even ākāśa, before Sṛiṣṭi. Therefore ākāśa utpathēhē purvam, Īśvaraḥ asīth. Then if ākāśa was not there, (ākāśa, ākāśa I have been telling in Sānskrīt, but you should not look at the ākāśa without understanding what it is!), ākāśa means space.

So when I talk about God before the origination of space, how can I talk about the location of God, because the concept of location requires space? Therefore do not ask where was He? And such an unlocatable God who is a mixture of Puruṣa and Prakṛti was there before Sṛiṣṭi. Adau Kirthanarambhu, Sṛiṣṭi arambau, Bhagavān was. Who says? Bhagavān. Puruṣam Prakṛtim ubau chaiva. Ubau means both. Anādi, beginningless. So when we tell this story, children will ask, then, then, then,... then the mother gets tired; go and do homework. Similarly, here also, the student asks, then what happened?

Of these two mixtures, that Puruṣa and Prakṛti, nothing will happen to puruṣa tattvam, because puruṣa tattvam is not conditioned by time and therefore Puruṣa, the cētana tattvam will remain the same. Before Sṛiṣṭi; during Sṛiṣṭi, after pralāyam, all the time, chaitanyam is Nirvikāram.

न जायते म्रियते वा कदाचित्
ना अयं भूत्वा भविता वा न भूयः ।
अजो नित्यः शाश्वतोऽयं पुराणो न हन्यते हन्यमाने शरीरे ॥ २.२० ॥

na jāyatē mriyatē vā kadācit
nā ayaṁ bhūtvā bhavitā vā na bhūyaḥ |
ajō nityaḥ śāśvato'yaṁ purāṇō
na hanyatē hanyamānē śarīrē || 2.20 ||

If this Nirvikāra-puruṣa tattvam does not undergo any change, then all the changes must happen to only what: the other one; because only two are there; Only the other one can undergo change; and what is that: Prakṛti tatvam, basic matter or energy principle. And therefore Kṛṣṇa says at the time of creation, what happens?

विकारांश्च गुणांश्चैव विद्धि प्रकृतिसम्भवान् ॥ १३.२० ॥

vikārāṁśca guṇāṁścaiva viddhi prakṛtisambhavān ||13.20||

Out of the prakṛti tatvam evolves this universe. The matter evolves into the universe just as a seed evolves to become a sprout. Then as time goes, again it evolves into a plant and finally it evolves into a full-fledged tree. Similarly, the universe also, from kāraṇa avastha to sūkṣma avastha to sthūla avastha, this gradual evolution takes place and in this matter-evolution, what are born? Vikārāṁśca, vikārāḥ means kāryam, all the products are born out of the basic prakṛti, otherwise called Māya. That is why we call the creation Māyikam.

And what are the materials born out of prakṛti? Initially, the five basic elements are born; called the five bhūthāni, ākāśa, vāyu, Agni, āpaha and pṛthvi; and later the five elements through varieties of permutation and combination, they mix together, they produce all the other things which we call bhauthika evolution. Bhūtha evolution, then bhauthika evolution. Elements evolved THEN Elementals evolved.

And what are the elementals? All the 14 lōkās are the combination; then the mountains, the stars, the planets, and not only that, according to scriptures, our physical body is also evolved prakṛti. The physical body also is the prakṛti's evolute only. What is the proof? How do you prove that? The proof is that the first of all the physical body is matter; it consists of only chemicals. It consists of only elements; elements ~ you can take two meanings ~ the śāstric meaning, ākāśa, vāyu, Agni, āpaha, pṛthivi ~ and if you are chemistry student, elements means what? Aluminum, antimony, barium, carbon, etc. so those elements. So all those elements alone have produced the body; body is nothing but a chemical bundle. That is why we call it bio chemistry. And therefore body being matter, it is born out of prakṛti. And the second and important proof is body is subject to modification. Does anyone has any doubt? Body is subject to modification, so your food that you have taken, I do not know when, sooner or later, it gets digested and again hunger comes. So all physical modifications and of course the gross modification we put on weight and join jindal and reduce 25 kgs in 10 days and then in the next 30 days add another 30 kgs. You will eat for the 10 uneaten days, because you consumed only the pumpkin juice only all the three times. So this expansion and contraction of the body proves that it cannot be puruṣa tatvam, because puruṣa tatvam is Nirvikāram, body is savikāram; therefore body has to be a product of prakṛti only.

Then what about mind? The mind is also material in nature. And that is why the changes in the chemistry of the body changes your mind also. Enzyme changes, hormonal changes, etc. can cause tremendous mood disorders. Dayānanda Swami calls Mūdāḥ. Mood disorder is mental, but it is caused by what the disorder in the physical hormones. And they talk about HRT. Hormone replacement therapy. All these are possible, because the mind is also matter and it is influenced and changed by material. And not only that, mind is also subject to change. Should one tell for us to understand? Mind is subject to violent changes, that mind is an evolved version of prakṛti. So world is prakṛti's evolute, body is prakṛti's evolute or product, mind is the product of prakṛti. Only you may get a doubt, if you do not get, I will create that; the doubt may be: if body is a product of prakṛti, mind is also a product of prakṛti, both of them must be acētana-tatvam; because we have said prakṛti is acētana-tatvam.

If prakṛti is acētana-tatvam, body and mind which are its products, they also must be acētanam, acētanam means insentient. And mind seems to be sentient; not seems to be, if doubt, pinch and see yourselves; you know it is sentient. So for that the scriptures give the answer, body and mind are prakṛti only but they are such a fine version of prakṛti, it means refined clay. Body is refined clay. And sometimes the brain also is acting like a refined clay. So being a refined version of matter, they are able to manifest consciousness; it is not their own intrinsic consciousness; it is only reflected or manifested consciousness.

Like if my cloth is bright now, visible to you now, light from the cloth is hitting your eyes, you are able to see and when light comes from the cloth, it is not the cloth's own light, but it is the light reflected on the cloth. It is not intrinsic but borrowed. Similarly, body is prakṛti with borrowed sentiency; mind is prakṛti with borrowed sentiency. Therefore all these are the creation of prakṛti.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa says; Arjuna note it; vikārāṁśca prakṛtisambhavān; sambhavān means born out of, products of prakṛti.

And not only all the objects are born out of prakṛti; the various properties of these objects; every object has its own property. It has got a colour, form, weight, and all these properties are born out of prakṛti alone. Because the rule is what? Kāraṇa guṇāḥ kārye anuvarthantḥ; the properties of the cause will inhere in the effect also. I have told this many times. If Gold has certain combination of other elements; alloys, then the all the ornaments also will have the same proportion of the other elements. And that is why the children also will have the combination of properties or character borrowed from whom? எல்லாம் அப்பா அம்மாதான்; the parents.

Sometime father dominant, sometime mother dominant and in the olden days, interesting things used to happen; in some family they will have 10-11 children or at least 7-8. One looking like father; another looking like mother. Even complexion. One will be dark, one will be fair, it will come interchanging. What I want to say is kāraṇa guṇāḥ, kāryē anuvarthanthē, which means prakṛti guṇāḥ, prapañcē anuvarthanthē. And that is the world also has got satva rajas tamō guṇāḥ, and the world also has got śabda, sparśa, rūpa, rasa, gandha. Therefore vikārāṃśca guṇāṃścaiva viddhi prakṛtisambhavān.

And Śankārācārya points out that the even the properties, like rāga dvēṣā etc. do not belong to the Puruṣa, they all belong to prakṛti alone.

Verse 13.21

कार्यकरणकर्तृः हेतुः प्रकृतिरुच्यते ।
पुरुषः सुखदुःखानां भोक्तृत्वे हेतुरुच्यते ॥ १३.२१ ॥

kāryakāraṇakartṛtvē hētuḥ prakṛtirucyatē |
puruṣaḥ sukhaduḥkhānām bhōkṛtvē hēturucyatē || 13.21 ||

प्रकृतिः उच्यते prakṛtiḥ ucyatē prakṛti is said to be हेतुः hētuḥ the cause कार्यकरणकर्तृत्वे kāryakāraṇakartṛtvē the creation of the physical and subtle bodies, पुरुषः उच्यते puruṣaḥ ucyatē Puruṣa is said to be, हेतुः hētuḥ the cause भोक्तृत्वे bhōkṛtvē in the experience सुखदुःखानाम् sukhaduḥkhānām of pleasure and pains.

21. Prakṛti is said to be the cause in the creation of the physical and subtle bodies. Puruṣa is said to be the cause in the experience of pleasures and pains.

The first line is almost the repetition of the previous verse. Everything in the creation is born out of prakṛti, which includes the body, mind complex also. So kāryam means the body. It is a technical meaning here; normally kāryam means a product in general; but in this context, kāryam means stūla śarīram, the physical body. And similarly, the word kāraṇam in this context means the mind or the subtle body in general. Sūkṣma śarīram is called kāraṇam. kāryakāraṇakartṛtvē, kartṛtvē means in the creation. In the creation of the physical and subtle bodies, not only the human beings, but all the living beings, in the origination of them, who is the contributor; prakṛti hētuḥrucyatē; prakṛti alone does lot of work, highly active, Puruṣa is the laziest person. That is why, in home also, it so happens, இவன் சும்மா உக்காந்து பேபர் படிச்சிண்டு இருப்பான்; reading only the newspapers. It has begun at the time of creation itself. Ēvaṃ parampara prāpṭham. Because the original puruṣa does not do anything. Therefore cooperate with your wives a little bit. kāryakāraṇakartṛtvē, in the creation of the body and mind, prakṛtiḥ is the hētu.

And there is another reading also. Kārya kāraṇē kartṛtvē, there also the meaning is almost the same. In the creation of the world, which can be divided into kāraṇam and kāryam. For example, pañca bhūtani is kāraṇam and all the bhautikams, elementals are kāryam. Kāryakāraṇakarṭtvē, in the creation of elements and elementals, or the better reading this I have chosen, in the creation of body mind complex, prakṛti is alone work.

Now comes the basic question? If everything is a product of prakṛti, where is this blessed Puruṣa!! Because Īśvara is a mixture of two. Of these two, one principle we find pervading everywhere, because the pañca bhūtas are prakṛtiḥ and all the other combinations mountains, rivers, sun, and moon. In short the entire visible universe; experienced universe is prakṛti; because everything I experience undergo a change; whether it is the minutest atom or the biggest galaxy. So therefore the experienced world is changing; therefore prakṛti.

Then what about the body? Body is also experienced by me clearly, I am experiencing my body, that is why pleasures pains hunger thirst I am able to talk about. What I do not experience, I cannot talk about. And the physical body is also an experienced principle and Kṛṣṇa says that also is prakṛti because it is subject to change. Therefore experienced world is changing therefore prakṛti. Experienced body is changing; therefore prakṛti.

Then what about mind? Mind is also experienced by me. In fact the mind is experienced by me alone; at least in the case of the body, I am experiencing, and you are also experiencing, whereas mind is experienced by me because I am aware of emotions, my calmness, my anger, my knowledge, my ignorance, if there is blankness of the mind, that also. The mind is also experienced and it is subject to change and therefore that is also prakṛti.

So experienced world is prakṛti, experienced body is prakṛti, experienced mind is prakṛti; if everything experienced is prakṛti, where is this blessed puruṣa? ஆளை காணவே இல்லயே. He is not to be seen. Where is the Puruṣa hiding? Therefore we go on searching. Some people search outside. Whatever they search and find is an experienced, changing object; that is not going to be Puruṣa. Suppose I look within the physical body, if I look, what is there? (do not look inside, but if you look you see blood, marrow, ~ within also you experience changing prakṛti).

If I look within the mind, within the mind also what do I see ~ varieties of emotions, all changing thoughts; outside also I experience prakṛti, inside also I experience prakṛti, everything experienced is prakṛti; where is the blessed puruṣa? இதில் ஸந்தேஹம் வரும். Doubt will come; Kṛṣṇa says. Do not search for the puruṣa. Because the puruṣa is who? The experiencer-I. The basic subject-I, the basic conscious principle. Because I the experiencer is conscious or inert? This is a big question. I the experiencer am conscious or inert? An experiencer has to be necessarily a conscious sentient principle only. Kṛṣṇa says it is that experiencer, I, the subject witness of the world. The witness of the body, the witness of the mind. How to look that; do not ask; the moment you see, it will become an object, and again it will be within body, mind, etc. That which is ever the subject of experience and never the object of experience; that I am the Puruṣa. Aham Brahma asmi.

Who says? Kṛṣṇa says. puruṣaḥ sukhaduḥkhānām bhōkṛtvē hēturucyatē. Puruṣaḥ is not located anywhere as an object, the puruṣaḥ, the cētana, nirvikāra, nirguṇa, satya tatvam puruṣa, is I, the very subject, who is enclosed in the material body; who is enclosed in the material mind, the enclosure is prakṛti, the enclosed consciousness I, am Puruṣaḥ.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa says Puruṣaḥ is bhōktā, means what; here bhōktā the witness the sākṣi caitanyam, the subject-experiencer principle. The experiencer of what? If puruṣa is the experiencer, he will be experiencer of what? What is there other than puruṣa? Prakṛti. Therefore he is the experiencer of prakṛti. Prakṛti means the body mind complex, and not only the body mind complex prakṛti, sukhaduḥkhānām, as well as all the conditions of the body mind complex. Like favourable healthy condition; as well as the unfavourable unhealthy condition; all of them belong to what? The object prakṛti, rāga, dvēṣā, kāma, krōdha, lōbha, mōha, all are properties of what? Observed prakṛti; None of them is the property of the observer puruṣa.

So this is a very important law in Vēdānta. All the observed properties can belong to only observed objects; all the observed properties can belong to only the observed objects. No observed property can belong to what? The observer-subject. I will repeat. All the observed properties can belong to the observed-object alone. The observed properties can never belong to the observer-subject. Therefore the observer is always property-free. Therefore I am the experiencer of properties but I am without those properties.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa says puruṣaḥ sukhaduḥkhānām bhōkṛtvē hēturucyatē. Therefore in the created world, prakṛti is available as an object; puruṣa is available as the subject. In the created world, prakṛti is available as the object, puruṣa is available as the subject, and the subject puruṣa is never objectifiable.

And remember, I have given you the examples before. The eyes can see everything in the world, but the eyes can never see themselves. Maximum the eyes can see its reflection in the mirror; even the reflected eye is objectifiable but the original eye is never objectifiable, perceivable. What a tragedy? உங்க கண்ணாலே உங்க கண்ணை பார்கவே முடியாது. You cannot see your eyes, with your own eyes. Suppose a person asks:

If the eyes can never be seen, what is the proof that there are eyes. Big question, cornering question?! You have to call him idiot. Even though, eyes are never seen, you do not require proof for the eyes because every sight of every object is the proof for the existence of the eye. Every perception is pre-supposes the existence of the perceiver, even the perceiver is never perceived. Every perception presupposes the perceiver. Even though camera is never photographed, every photograph is the proof for the existence of camera. In the photograph, camera did not come. What is the proof that there is the camera?! What to tell such persons. To be taken to Kilpauk.

Therefore the subject does not require proof. Subject does not require proof; because the very search for proof presupposes the existence of the subject. The prover need not be proved. Prover does not require a prover. And therefore where is puruṣa. It is like the tenth man story. Where is the puruṣa? I am the puruṣa. What a terrible discovery? What a wonderful discovery?

पुरुषः प्रकृतिस्थो हि भुङ्क्ते प्रकृतिजान्गुणान् ।
कारणं गुणसङ्गोऽस्य सदसद्योनिजन्मसु ॥ १३.२२ ॥

puruṣaḥ prakṛtisthō hi bhuṅktē prakṛtijān guṇān |
kāraṇaṃ guṇasaṅgō'sya sadasadyōnijanmasu || 13.22 ||

प्रकृतिस्थः prakṛtisthaḥ residing in prakṛti पुरुषः हि puruṣaḥ hi Puruṣa भुङ्क्ते bhuṅktē experiences गुणान् प्रकृतिजान् guṇān prakṛtijān the guṇas born out of prakṛiti गुणसङ्गः guṇasaṅgaḥ attachment to the guṇas कारणम् kāraṇam is the cause अस्य सदसद्योनिजन्मसु asya sadasadyōnijanmasu of birth in superior and inferior wombs.

22. Residing in prakṛti, Puruṣa experiences the guṇas born out of prakṛti. Attachment to the guṇas is the cause of birth in superior and inferior wombs.

Originally, before the creation evolves or the world evolves, the puruṣa was neither the subject, nor the prakṛti was object; there was no subject-object transaction at all, before the creation evolved. Then when did the puruṣa get the subject status? When the universe evolved, naturally the body was also created, the mind also is created; and after the creation of the body and mind, the all-pervading puruṣa got enclosed within the body-mind-enclosure. Previously the enclosures were not there; therefore this consciousness was an all-pervading unenclosed consciousness; but after the creation of body-mind, we have got what? Enclosed consciousness. Just as we have got an enclosed space, when? After the creation of wall. Before the creation of the wall, space was there or not? It was; but it was unenclosed space. Once the walls are created, it become enclosed. Similarly, you create, previously it was plot, and then built the walls, and why did you build the walls. By building the wall, what are you the accomplishing? The open space is converted into enclosed space.

And once it becomes enclosed space, it is called a house. What is the definition of house, not the walls; walls do not make a house; then what is a house; enclosed space is a house, and once it is enclosed, it becomes a useful transactable thing. In the same way, previously it was unenclosed consciousness. Now it is body mind enclosed consciousness; and that becomes what? The subject-principle. And then the whole world become object.

Therefore consciousness becomes a subject, when it is enclosed. An open space becomes a house when it is enclosed. Therefore you never build a house, you build only the walls. What is a house? The enclosed space is a house, because that alone is lending you the place for transaction. Wall is not useful. All your movement, study, etc. is what houses is not the wall, what houses is the enclosed space. Thus, puruṣa becomes the subject, prakṛti becomes object. Then what happens? Go and do homework.

ॐ

Lord Kṛṣṇa has come to the last pair of topic, viz., Puruṣa and Prakṛti and he starts the discussion from the 20th verse which goes up to verse 24. And we saw the Puruṣa and Prakṛti are the two basic principles, which existed even before the origination of the world and this mixture of Puruṣa and Prakṛti alone we call God.

And we also saw that this Puruṣa and Prakṛti have got two common features; one common feature is that both are anādi or beginningless and the second common feature is both together become the cause of the universe. Puruṣa by itself cannot be the cause, nor can Prakṛti be a cause by itself. These are the two common features and then we saw they have got four uncommon features. Puruṣa is conscious principle, Prakṛti is inert; Puruṣa is changeless principle, Prakṛti is changing principle; Puruṣa is without any attribute, attributeless whereas the Prakṛti has all the attributes and finally Puruṣa is satyam, Prakṛti is mithya. So Nirguṇa, Nirvikāra, Satya, cētana tatvam Puruṣa. Saguṇa, Savikāra, Mithya, Acētana tatvam Prakṛti. Nirguṇa Nirvikāra satya cētana tatvam Puruṣa. Saguṇa savikāra mithya acētana tatvam Prakṛti.

And then Kṛṣṇa pointed out that from this mixture alone creation evolved and in the evolution of the creation, the primary role is played by Prakṛti alone, because Prakṛti alone is capable of evolution; Prakṛti being basic matter and as a result of this Prakṛti's evolution, otherwise called the manifestation, the pañca bhūthās have come, all the fourteen lōkās have come and all the physical and subtle bodies also are born, which means my own body-mind-complex is an evolute of Prakṛti.

And then comes the basic question where is this Blessed Puruṣa? Because whatever I see outside Prakṛti. How do I prove? Because they are all subject to modification. The very physical body I experience is Prakṛti, because it is subject to change, and the very mind that I experience is Prakṛti, because it is violently changing. Thus the world is Prakṛti, the body is Prakṛti, the mind is Prakṛti, where exactly Puruṣa is? The question comes. Kṛṣṇa said that Puruṣa alone is now available behind the body-mind-complex as the very experiencer principle, the Sākṣi caitanyam. Which alone we refer to by the word Aham or I, because the very word I indicates a conscious-principle not an inert principle. And therefore Kṛṣṇa's conclusion is, the I, the subject, the experiencer, the witness, am Puruṣa, and whatever I experience is Prakṛti. I, the experiencer, am Puruṣa. I, the subject am Puruṣa. I the witness am Puruṣa. Whatever is experienced; whatever is an object; whatever is witnessed is Prakṛti.

And we should remember to include the body-mind-complex also in which group? In I-group or the Prakṛti-group. அஃகூதான் Confusion வற்து. The body-mind should not join the I-party, the body-mind should not be included in the subject-list, the body-mind also must be included in the object-of-experience list. But generally there is a confusion because, even though body-mind-complex is object of experience, it is so intimately associated with me; that I use the body-and-mind as a medium for experience the world and therefore it appears as though part of the subject. I have talked about this before, the spectacles are very much object of experience only. I just take the spectacles, and I alone put on the spectacle. The moment I put the spectacle and start using the same as an instrument, it is so intimately associated with the perceiver, that I include the spectacle also as an integral part of I, the perceiver. And that is the reason when I have to enumerate various objects, I enumerate everything; but I carefully forget. I forget to include the spectacles as one of the objects.

And therefore what is the cause of the mistake? An object used as an instrument appears as though an intrinsic part of the subject. When you say I am writing a letter, in the word I, you are including the pen also. Without pen, can you become a writer? When you say I am a writer, unknowingly you have included the pen also in you. Similarly when I say I am a seer, hearer, etc. the body mind complex used as an instrument also is mistaken as the subject. Of course for transactional purposes, you can include the body and mind in the subject, but I should always be aware that body is part of Prakṛti. World is matter, body is matter. Similarly mind is part of Prakṛti; world is Prakṛti; the mind is Prakṛti; whereas I am different from the body Prakṛti, the mind Prakṛti; I am the Sākṣi tatvam. I illumine all of them; I witness all of them; at the same time, I am different from them.

This is what Kṛṣṇa said: puruṣaḥ prakṛtisthō hi bhuñktē prakṛtijān guṇān. The word bhuñktē means witnesses; even though the literal meaning of the word bhuñktē is experiences; the word experiences should be understood as witnesses or illumines whatever happens to the body as well as to the mind. And witnessing or illumining the body-mind complex is an activity of Puruṣa, but in the presence of Puruṣa, the body and mind gets illumined. Just like we say, the fire burns the fuel. We use the verb that fire is burning the fuel; but if you analyse: Śankārācārya analyses, burning is not a willful action done by the fire; if burning is an action done by the fire; the action will have a beginning, and action will have an end. But really speaking, fire does not do the action of burning; fire just exists. When you put your finger in the fire, at that time also, fire does not do any special job. Before putting my finger, fire was fire. After putting my finger also, fire is fire. No transformation; no will; no action on the part of the fire; fire exists, my finger gets burned; but I make a statement, fire burns the finger. Here is a verb which does not have verbal meaning.

When we say the Sun illumines the earth; it is the same thing; Sun does not will or plan and do the action of illumining. The sun just exists; in the presence of the Sun, whatever objects fall within the range, those objects get illumined; before the objects arrive, Sun is the same, after the objects arrive, Sun is the same; but still we use a verb, Sun is illumining the earth.

Here also verb indicates, mere sānnidhyam only. Similarly, Sākṣi does not plan, decide and illumine the body-mind, as a positive action, Sākṣi like the fire, like the Sun, it just IS, and in the presence of the Sākṣi, body gets experienced or illumined or awared. And therefore we say Puruṣaḥ bhuñktē. Sākṣi experiences; experiences means changelessly witnesses; actionlessly witnesses; will-lessly without involving a will, Sākṣi "experiences", whatever happens in the body-mind-complex. And even when nothing happens in the body mind complex, and even when the mind is blank, the blank condition of the mind, is also witnessed, experienced, known, awared by the consciousness principle. That consciousness am I. Anyway.

So Puruṣa prakṛtisthaḥ. Prakṛti means śarīram. In this context, Prakṛti means products of Prakṛti. Prakṛti kāryam is called Prakṛti and what are the two products of Prakṛti to be kept in mind; the body-mind-complex container is called Prakṛti, prakṛtisthaḥ means enclosed within the body mind complex. I was telling you in the last class, the enclosed space is useful for living and that is why we build walls, because enclosed place is only vyavahāra yōgyam. Similarly, the all-pervading consciousness, when it is enclosed within the body-mind-complex, it is called prakṛtisthaḥ Puruṣaḥ Sākṣi caitanyam.

And this I, bhūṅktē, experiences without action; without will. What does it experience? Prakṛti jān guṇān. All the consequences, all the products of Prakṛti in the form of varieties of thought, Prakṛti jān guṇāḥ means vṛitti pariṇāma; various thought modifications like pleasure thought; pain thought; rāga thought; dvēṣa thought; kāma thought; they are called Prakṛti ja guṇa; certain types of thoughts are called sātvic thoughts, certain other types of thoughts are called rājasic thoughts, in the next chapter we will be seeing. Sukam is sātvisa vṛitti, duḥkham is rājasa vṛitti, mōha or delusion is tāmasic vṛitti, all those mental conditions, guṇāḥ means condition, the Sākṣi experiences; experiences means witnesses.

And what attribute the Sākṣi has got? The body has got attribute, the mind has got attributes. I, illumine the attributes but I myself do not have any attributes. But the problem is what? When I illumine the attribute, unknowingly I take the attributes as though they are mine. This is called the problem of transference. The transference of body attributes, transference of mind attributes, upon the I, the Puruṣa, creates all the problems.

Exactly like viewing the movie; initially I know very much I am not the hero of the movie. Thus I start the movie as a mahajñāni with popcorn in hand. And thus when the movie goes on, when the plot is getting thickened and I am almost on the edge of the seat. If there is problem for the hero, why should I sit on the edge of the seat. Hero and villain are fighting and hero is wanting to marry the heroine. We also want that to happen. Unknowingly the problems of the observed-hero are falsely transferred to the observer.

And this transference is called anōnya-adhyāsa. In the case of the movie, we voluntarily do that, and we know that it is meant only two three hours, and we know we are going to come out of the movie, again as jīvan-mukthaḥ and even give compliments to the actor, அவன் நன்னா அழுதான் avaṇ naṇṇā aḷutāṇ. We are able to detach from the hero. But in life the problem is what? Our attachment to the observed-body-mind complex is so permanent and complete, that saṁsāra is a continuous process and Kṛṣṇa says that it is not only continuous, it goes to next janma also.

And therefore he says: sad-asad-yōni-janmasu kāraṇam. Sadasas yōni janma means saṁsāra cakram. The word yōni means must be read twice. sat yōni and asad yōni. Sad yōni means good śārīram. Asat yōni means inferior body. So Sad yōni means superior body; which means better janma; asad yōni means inferior body. Thus punarapi jananam, punarapi maraṇam, taking higher birth of dēvās, taking lower birth of animals, plants and asura, in short the entire saṁsāra cakram.

For this saṁsāra cakram, what is the cause? Kṛṣṇa says; guṇasaṅgaḥ ēva adhya samsārasya kāraṇam. Guṇa means the attributes of the body mind complex; to that attributes which belongs to the Prakṛti I get attached.

Guṇēna, Prakṛti guṇēna saṅgaḥ; saṅgaḥ means identification, tādātmyam, tanmayatvam. Remember the movie, totally identifying with the hero, and when the heroine dies, this person also cries as though his wife has died. And his wife has to shake him and say and I am alive. So tādātmyam or abhimāna with Prakṛti is saṁsāra kāraṇam, Puruṣa by itself does not have janma; na jāyatē mriyatē vā kadācit; just as nothing happens to the space, when the walls are pulled down; When the walls are raised, ākāśa is the same, when the walls are removed, ākāśa is the same. Similarly I-the-Puruṣa, the caitanyam am the same, whether the body, mind walls continue or whether the body, mind walls, resolves. But instead of claiming this birthlessness of Puruṣa, I identify with Prakṛti and suffer.

Verse 13.23

उपद्रष्टानुमन्ता च भर्ता भोक्ता महेश्वरः।
परमात्मेति चाप्युक्तः देहेऽस्मिन्पुरुषः परः ॥ १३.२३ ॥

upadraṣṭā'numantā ca bhartā bhōktā mahēśvaraḥ |
paramātmēti cāpyuktō dēhē'smin puruṣaḥ paraḥ || 13.23 ||

पर पुरुषः para puruṣaḥ The supreme Puruṣa अस्मिन् देहे asmin dēhē in this body उक्तः इति uktaḥ iti is said to be उपद्रष्टा upadraṣṭā the proximate witness, अनुमन्ता anumantā the permitter, gives permission. भर्ता bhartā the sustainer भोक्ता bhoktā the experiencer महेश्वरः च mahēśvaraḥ ca the great Lord, अपि च परमात्मा api ca paramātmā and the supreme Self

23. The supreme Puruṣa in this body is said to be the proximate witness, the supporter, the sustainer, the experiencer, the great Lord, and the supreme Self.

So Lord Kṛṣṇa is training us. He is giving a training programme. What is the training? He is training us to learn to dis-identify from the Prakṛti-enclosure and learn to identify with the Puruṣa, the enclosed-content caitanyam. So Kṛṣṇa says: Asmin dēhē Puruṣaḥ; that Puruṣa-tatvam, what type of Puruṣa? Nirguṇa, nirvikāra, satya, cētana tatvam; NNSC tatvam. That Puruṣa, do not search anywhere, it is like looking outside for ākāśa. You need not search anywhere, that Puruṣa is there asmin dēhē. Just as ākāśa is in every container; this particular body-mind-container also has got the Puruṣa in the form of Sākṣi caitanyam and do not search for the Sākṣi also; because that Sākṣi caitanyam, I am the subject. And this Puruṣaḥ; what is its nature? Its nature is quiet opposite to the nature of Prakṛti. In every feature, Prakṛti Puruṣa is different from Prakṛti.

And what are the great features of Puruṣa? I told you only four; Kṛṣṇa adds many; first he says; परः paraḥ, this container, the content-consciousness is not only within the body, it extends the beyond the container body. First I say the space is within the hall; because of which alone we are all accommodated; and later I say the space is not within the hall alone, the space is outside the hall also. And finally I have to say, really speaking the space is neither within the hall or outside the hall, the hall is existing within space. எல்லாம் தலைகீழாகும்) Everything should be upside down). Similarly, I say consciousness is inside the body; and then finally I say consciousness is outside the body; then finally I say consciousness is not inside or outside, all the bodies are inside the consciousness and therefore where is consciousness? The answer is; you should ask a counter-question, where is it not? Therefore it is called paraḥ. Paraḥ means free from all limitations.

And upadraṣṭā, go to the first line, this Puruṣa, the consciousness alone is the intimate witness of everything happening inside you. So upadraṣṭā is a beautiful word. Suppose I say consciousness is a witness; like the Sun, I give the example of the sun or light; we commit a mistake; the Sun is the light illuminator, witness alright. And the Sun is existing 9 crores miles away. And if I talk about the light illumining the hall, again you will think of the bulb as the light. The pervading effulgence, we have to take but light means we think of the bulb which is away; similarly when I say the ātma is Sākṣi, you will think that it is somewhere and looking at everything.

So here Kṛṣṇa says ātma is a witness, not remaining far away; but upadraṣṭā, intimately pervading the body, mind complex, it illumines the body-mind complex; just as the light illumines the hand; how, by pervading the hand. Bulb is far away; but the light, the prākāśa is the luminosity is upon the hand. Therefore it is a proximate illuminator. Proximate illuminator means one who is near, pervading the hand is illumining. Similarly, Puruṣa pervades every cell of my body. This inert bundle of chemicals, which does not have consciousness of its own; this inert bundle of chemicals is now sentient and alive, only because Puruṣa pervades and makes this body experienceable to me. And therefore upadraṣṭā. Close witness.

Then anumantā ca (careful not Hanumantha, in Tamil Ha is not there, wherever ha comes they have to write as ah. Therefore Hanuman one should pronounced as anumantha. This is anumantā, that which blesses the activities of the Prakṛti. Consciousness blesses the inert body and mind; and because of its blessings alone, body is what it is. Exactly like the electricity blesses the fan, without doing anything. In the presence of the electricity, the fan is able to do, what it is made to do. Electricity does not ask the fan to go round. The fan is made to go round. In the presence of electricity, fan does its job. Similarly, in the presence of electricity, the mike does its job of amplification.

earthquake, children are starving; however great you may be, the mind is going to empathize with that situation. Nobody can stop. And therefore body is bound by Prakṛti, the world, the mind is also bound; but Puruṣa the Mahēśvaraḥ, can never be affected by the matter-principle and therefore Puruṣaḥ is Mahēśvaraḥ; means Swāmi. Svatantraḥ. Master. That is why as body, you are never free. Not only the world will affect, even the planetary position. Guru peyarchi will affect, how many people are afraid? I do not know. And for some people, wonderful things are going to happen. For some other people, certain things are going to happen, they say, the planetary change which indicated your prārabdha. Planet is not affected. Planetary changes which indicate your prārabdha. Prārabdha will affect the body, Whereas the Puruṣaḥ, Mahēśvara. நாள் எண் செய்யும்; கோள் எண் செய்யும்; ஆரோ எழுதியிருக்கா. (nā! eṇ ceyyum; kō! eṇ ceyyum) Somebody has written Kōlar pathikam. Many people read as Kolar pathikam. It is Kōl aru parthikam. Anyway.

Mahēśvara, when I learn to separate myself from Prakṛti and its attributes, I the jīvātma will itself get the name paramātma. So I am called jīvātma when I take on the attributes of the Prakṛti and I talk about my date of birth, my age, my physical condition, etc. the attributed I is am jīvātma; but when I take the attributes and understand, they do not belong to me, but they belong to the Prakṛti alone. Handover unto Ceaser, what belongs to Ceaser! Attributes belong to whom? Prakṛti. Give them to the Prakṛti. Attributeless-I am called paramātma. Attributed-I am called jīvātma. Whether I am attributed or attributeless will depend upon whether I am ignorant or wise. Therefore ignorant-I is jīvātma, wise-I is paramātma. Who says: Kṛṣṇa says: Paramātma iti ukta. The very same I am called paramātma, Arjuna.

This is a mahāvākya. The jīvātma is equated to paramātma. Therefore this slōkā is another mahāvākya slōkā. Previously we had one mahāvākya.

क्षेत्रज्ञं चापि मां विद्धि सर्वक्षेत्रेषु भारत ॥
क्षेत्रक्षेत्रज्ञयोर्ज्ञानं यत्तज्ज्ञानं मतं मम ॥ १३.३ ॥

[Kṣētrajñāṁ cāpi māṁ viddhi sarvakṣētrēṣu bhārata |
kṣētrakṣētrajñāyōrjñānaṁ yattajjñānaṁ matāṁ mama || 13.3 ||](#)

This is also another mahāvākya. You should not ask these fundamental questions. jīvātma paramātma aikya bōdhaka vākya. A statement which reveals the oneness of jīvātma and paramātma.

Verse 13.24

य एवम् वेत्ति पुरुषं प्रकृतिं च गुणैः सह ।
सर्वथा वर्तमानोऽपि न स भूयोऽभिजायते ॥ १३.२४ ॥

ya ēvaṁ vētti puruṣaṁ prakṛtiṁ ca guṇaiḥ saha |
sarvathā vartamānō'pi na sa bhūyō'bhijāyatē || 13.24 ||

सः यः saḥ yaḥ he who एवं वेत्ति ēvaṁ vētti thus knows पुरुषम् puruṣam Puruṣa च प्रकृतिम् ca prakṛtiṁ and prakṛiti सह गुणैः saha guṇaiḥ along with the guṇas न अभिजायते na abhijāyatē is not born भूयः bhūyaḥ again सर्वथा अपि sarvathā api in whatever manner वर्तमानः vartamānaḥ he lives

24. He who knows thus Puruṣa and prakṛti along with the guṇas, is not born again, in whatever manner he lives.

And here Kṛṣṇa points out the clear knowledge about Prakṛti and Puruṣa will give a person will a great relief from the burden of saṁsāra. A life which appeared a struggle till now; a life which is very big drag, which is full of cares and worries, that life becomes a very very great relief, if I have made this discriminative knowledge and I have learned to claim I am Puruṣa and all the attributes belong to Prakṛti. This is called Puruṣa Prakṛti vivēka jñānēna mōkṣaḥ. So phalam he gives.

Ya ēvaṁ vētti, suppose a person gains this knowledge. The first knowledge itself is that I am a mixture of Prakṛti and Puruṣa. I have told you the example, first when you see the hand, you will only say there is a hand; I have to tell you, it is not hand alone, there are two things here; and I have to tell you that the hand is pervaded by a light principle; the light falls on the hand; it gets reflected and according to the science, the reflected light travels and hits your retina; therefore it is not one; there are two things.

Similarly when I use the word I, there is a Prakṛti and there is Puruṣaḥ. This is my first level of wisdom. Therefore Kṛṣṇa says suppose a person knows this clearly; What? Puruṣam, means Nirguṇa, Nirvikāra, satya, cētana tatvam Puruṣam and Prakṛtim ca. Saguṇa, savikāra, mithya, acētana tatvam, both of them are distinctly knows. And the separation between the light and the hand, we do not physically do, because light cannot be scrapped out of the hand; No. You need not separate here outside; the separation is an internal affair. It is a cognitive separation; it is not an external event. Similarly, body and ātma, physically need not separate and you cannot. It is a cognitive separation. Puruṣam and Prakṛtim vēdha.

Not only that. He also knows guṇaiḥ saḥ. He also knows that there are many attributes, like fat, lean, old, bald, haired, all are physical attributes. There are subtle attributes like anger, envy, etc. They are all internal attributes, belonging to sūkṣma śarīra guṇaḥ; stūla śarīra guṇaḥ; kāraṇa śarīra guṇas. Primarily what? Ignorance. So all the attributes I should know and how should I know? That all attributes belong to the śarīram which is Prakṛti. Whereas Puruṣa does not have stūla śarīra attributes; body is fat, I am not fat.

What a relief. Otherwise everybody will ask: Why did not you go for walking, being obese. That does not mean that tomorrow onwards, you should stop your walking. Even though you are not fat, you can keep the body in good condition and therefore you can walk; it does not require an abhimāna. Similarly, all the emotions.

न मे द्वेषरागौ न मे लोभमोहौ
मदो नैव मे नैव मात्सर्यभावः.
न धर्मो न चार्थो न कामो न मोक्षः
चिदानंदरूपः शिवोऽहं शिवोऽहम् ॥ ३ ॥

na mē dvēṣarāgau na mē lōbhamōhau madō naiva mē naiva mātsaryabhāvaḥ.
na dharmō na cārthō na kāmō na mōkṣaḥ cidānaṁdarūpaḥ śivō:'haṁ śivō:'ham ॥ 3 ॥

Thus the one who has understood this difference between Prakṛti and Puruṣa very clearly and also one who has learned to train his mind to identify with Puruṣa. That training is called nidhidhyāsanam. Because, for all transactions, you have to identify with Prakṛti. In any application form, when somebody asks for date of birth, you should not write Nil. Aham, na jāyathē, na mṛyathē, etc. Application form etc. you should fill properly with correct dates.

In all vyavahāra-transactions, we have to identify with Prakṛti and therefore we have to neutralize; we have to do prāyascitham for that; i.e., spend some time daily telling, for vyavahāra purposes for life's drama to go on. Like the Tamil saying, when you put a beggar's role and vēṣam, one should know how to beg, etc. Even though he might be a Rajanikant, very very rich person, when that vēṣam is put, he has to do that. Similarly, as a husband, or wife, father and son, laugh or cry. You also put the vēṣam and go the green room once in a while. In the green room, learn to say manōbuddhyahamkāracittāni nāhaṁ, na ca śrōtrajivhē na ca ghrāṇanētrē.

And once a person knows the whole life is a drama, and then what is the advantage? sarvathā vartamānō'pi. Let him play any role in his life or in her life because life is a series of role playing. You cannot avoid role playing. The moment you are born, whether you like or not, you are related to your parents as a child; you are related to siblings, as a brother or sister; and when your brother gets married, whether like it not, you become a brother-in-law or sister-in-law. So life is a series of role playing, and it would not be a tragedy, if you are aware of the fact that it is a role playing.

When the role becomes serious, as a beggar, and take yourself to be a beggar, and after the drama is over, if you continue with the begging bowl, then there is some problem. Therefore, Kṛṣṇa says: sarvathā vartamānō'pi. You need not change your role. If you are a brahmacāri, you can continue. If you are a gr̥hastha, you need not change your varṇa, you need not change the āśrama, you do not change your profession; no external change is required; only an inner transformation is required.

Once the transformation has taken place, any role, sarvathā vartamānaḥ, taking any role, vartamānō'pi. Sa: bhūyō na abhijāyatē. Such a jñāni does not have a rebirth at all. I do not have a punarjanma. And if somebody asks the question to a jñāni? Jñāni jñāni, how do you know you do not have punarjanma, what is the guarantee that I will not be reborn; jñāni gives a very big smile. Where is the question of rebirth; I have understood I am the ātma which does not have the first janma itself; janma is what: What is the definition of janma? Stūla sūkṣma śarīra samyōgaḥ, janma. And what is the definition of maraṇam? Stūla sūkṣma śarīra viyōgaḥ, maraṇam. The mind is there, the body is there; now the mind and body are together. At the time of death happens; what happens? The mind and body snap their connection; body is here, mind with go away, saying tata. This mind-body separation is called maraṇam, and what is punar janmam, this travelling sūkṣma śarīram, getting associated with another stūla śarīram; body-mind; new body association is called punarjanma. Mind is Puruṣa or Prakṛti? Prakṛti. Body is Puruṣa or Prakṛti? Prakṛti. Therefore Prakṛti one and Prakṛti two; Body is one type of Prakṛti and mind is one type of Prakṛti; two forms of Prakṛti, coming into contact is punarjanma; two forms of Prakṛti getting separated is maraṇam. And who am I? Which form of Prakṛti I am? I am Prakṛti No.1 or Prakṛti No.2? I am neither Prakṛti one or Prakṛti two. Why should I bother about how countless minds and bodies, getting together and separated; I do not care, I am the Puruṣa, who does not have the first janma itself; where is the question of punarjanma. This wisdom is called mōkṣaḥ. Through this wisdom, I do not get liberated. Through this wisdom I know or I claim that I was liberated; I am liberated and I will ever be liberated. I am incapable of getting bound; that after this knowledge, even if you want to become a saṁsāri, you cannot be a saṁsāri.

177 Chapter 13, Verses 25-28

ॐ

With the 24th verse of the 13th chapter, Lord Kṛṣṇa completes the last pair of topic, viz., the topic of Puruṣa and Prakṛti. He started the topic from verse No.20 and completed in verse No.24 and while concluding he pointed out that this knowledge is a liberating knowledge.

य एवम् वेत्ति पुरुषं प्रकृतिं च गुणैः सह ।
सर्वथा वर्तमानोऽपि न स भूयोऽभिजायते ॥ १३.२४ ॥

[ya ēvaṁ vētti puruṣaṁ prakṛtiṁ ca guṇaiḥ saha|
sarvathā vartamānō'pi na sa bhūyō'bhijāyatē|| 13.24 ||](#)

A person who knows that the body-mind complex is Prakṛti and also knows that I am, the Puruṣa that very wisdom releases him from the cycles of janma-maraṇam; because birth and deaths are only incidents happening in the plane of Prakṛti. The physical body is Prakṛti; the mind is also Prakṛti, the mind and the body coming together is called birth and the mind and the body separating is death.

So when an individual dies, what happens is: the mind which was occupying the body quits the physical body and the body becomes an evacuated house as it were and therefore the body perishes. The separated mind, goes in search of another physical body, and gets the body at the right time according to the Karma and the association with the new body is called janma. So śarīra-mana samyōgaḥ janma; śarīra-mana viyōgaḥ maraṇam. Śarīram is also Prakṛti, manas is also Prakṛti and therefore their samyōga-viyōga; Samyōgam means association; Viyōgam dissociation, all are happening at the level of Prakṛti. And the jñāni is one who has recognised the fact that I am the Puruṣa, in which there is neither samyōga nor viyōga and therefore where is the question of one birth itself? And when one birth itself is not possible; where is the question of re-birth, the second birth? And therefore Kṛṣṇa concluded bhūyaḥ saḥ na abhijāyatē. He gets mukthi or freedom from this cycle. And with this Kṛṣṇa has completed all the six topics that Arjuna wanted to know: Kṣētra, kṣētrajña, jñānam, jñēyam, Prakṛti and Puruṣa.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa's task is over now. And therefore he wants to wind-up the discussion in the following verses from 25 up to the 35. We will read.

25. Some (seekers) see the Self in the mind with the mind through meditation. Some others (see) through Jñānayōga. Some others (see) through karma-yōga.

In these 11 verses, 25 to 35, including both verses, Lord Kṛṣṇa deals with jñāna sādhanāni and jñāna phalam. So what are the preparatory disciplines which will lead a person to self-knowledge and what are the benefits that this person will enjoy. First Kṛṣṇa emphasis the ultimate goal of all spiritual sādhanās is self-knowledge only. Let there not be any doubt in that. The ultimate goal is ātmani ātmana ātmānam paśyanti. Ātmani means in oneself. Because the all-pervading ātma is available within one's own body-mind complex and therefore I need not identify the ātma elsewhere. I have to discover the ātma in myself. Therefore, ātmani means within oneself, as we saw in Taittiriya. Yō Vēda Nihidam Guhāyam Paramēvyōman. Therefore, ātmani means hṛdaya ākāśē.

So ātmani paśyanti and what do they see or know? Ātmānam paśyanti. Ātmānam means the satcidananda ātma. So the first ātmani refers to the hṛdaya ākāśam; the second ātmānam does not refer to hṛdaya ākāśam, the word ātmānam means satcidananda ātmānam. Thus, a seeker has to recognise the ātma in his own hṛdayam. And with what instrument should a person gain the knowledge. The instrument of knowledge is ātmana. So 3 ātma is there; confusing. Ātmani, ātmānam, ātmana paśyanthi. 7th case ātma, 2nd case ātma, 3rd case ātma. 7th case ātma means within one's own hṛdayam; 2nd case ātma means satcidānanda ātma and now we have to see the 3rd case ātma, What is the instrument? The instrument is one's own buddhi. ātmana means buddhya. Because every knowledge is to be acquired only through the instrument of buddhi. There is no other instrument which can gain knowledge. So body cannot get knowledge; Of course ātma by itself cannot get knowledge; any knowledge has to be through the instrumentality of buddhi.

But what type of buddhi? A refined buddhi; aided by, supported by guru-śāstra-upadeśa. A refined and guru-śāstra-upadeśa supported buddhi has to gain the knowledge. Śankārācārya uses the expression śāstra-ācārya-samskṛita-antakaranēṇa. With the help of the mind, which is supported by guru-śāstra upadeśa. So with that mind, one has to gain ātma-jñānam. And if this ātma jñānam is the culmination, the ultimate sādhanā, the question is how many preparatory stages are there for reaching this climax.

So what are the preparatory steps a person has to go through for the climax of self-recognition through the mind within oneself? And these are presented the stages or presented in different ways in different contexts and one type of presentation which is intended here is five-fold stages. A person has to go through five stages to reach this culmination. In each stage one gets rid of one obstacle for self-knowledge. Each stage helps in removing one, one obstacle. Pratibanda nivṛthiḥ.

What are the five stages and what are the obstacles removed? I have dealt with this in the 12th chapter also. And also in some other context; I will remind you those five stages; I am not going to elaborate.

The first stage called karma-yōga stage, wherein the mental impurities are removed. In Sānskrīt it is called mala-nivṛthiḥ. Malam means dirt; what are the impurities? Rāga, dvēṣa, kāma, krōdhaḥ, lōbhaḥ, mōhaḥ, madha, mātsaryam, etc. etc. Still more. Thus karma-yōgaḥ helps in the removal of malaṁ and it refines the mind.

Then the next stage of sādhanā is called Upāsana or meditation upon saguṇa Īśvara; the Lord with attributes or glories. And this upāsana helps in the removal of the next obstacle; that obstacle is called Vikṣēpa; otherwise called bahirmukhatvam. The restlessness of the mind, the extrovertedness of the mind is the 2nd obstacle, upāsana helps in the mind's focusing capacity. It integrates the mind. It harmonises the mind. It gives the focusing power and the extrovertedness, the outgoing mind is withdrawn. So therefore the 2nd sādhanā is called upāsana. What is the obstacle removed? Therefore Vikṣēpa nivṛtti. Means removal.

And the third stage is called Vēdānta śravaṇam. Systematically and consistently studying the upaniṣadic or Vēdāntic scriptures under the guidance of a competent ācārya; which is called śravaṇam, which will help in the elimination of ajñānam, self-ignorance. So the third obstacle is ajñānam, which is removed through śravaṇam. So karmaṇa mala nivṛtti, upāsanēna vikṣēpa nivṛtti, śravaṇēna ajñāna nivṛtti (3 steps are over).

Then the fourth stage of sādhanā is called mananam. Asking myself whether am I convinced of the teaching given by the teacher and the scriptures. Am I intellectually satisfied, because any knowledge should convince the intellect? As long as there are doubts or reservation, that doubt is an obstacle. A doubtful knowledge is as good as ignorance.

And therefore mananēna, by raising all questions and finding out the answer; either by my own enquiry or with the help of the ācārya. Therefore, the 4th stage is mananam and what is the benefit is śaṁśaya nivṛtti. Converting knowledge into conviction. Removal of the intellectual obstacle.

And then comes fifth and final stage of sādhanā called nidhidhyāsanam, which is meant to remove my habitual reaction; the removal of vāsanā, because of my regular unhealthy responses in life, I have developed a habit.

And habit is developed in-time and habit can go only in-time. This deliberate invocation of the Vēdānta, so that I can get rid of unvēdāntic reactions in life. Every disturbing reaction is unvēdāntic reaction. So anxiety, frustration, self-pity, sense of insecurity, fear, attachment; all of them are unhealthy vāsanās. This vāsanā nivṛtti or viparītha bhāvana nivṛtti is the fifth and final stage called nidhidhyāsanam.

And everybody has to go through all the five stages. They are not optional stages. They are compulsory for all. But suppose, a person has gone through the first two or three stages in this life, and then without completing the journey he dies; suppose. Each stage takes long time.

And if a person dies without the completion, the advantage is in the next janma, the journey need not begin with karma-yōga. The journey can be like getting transfer certificate from one school, and in the next school the child can go to the 6th standard; why in the earlier school, he has passed the 5th. And therefore, depending upon a person's spiritual evolution, a person should start either from karma-yōgaḥ, or from upāsana or from śravaṇa; either all the five, one to five, or two to five, or three to five, or four to five. One to five, means karma, upāsana, śravaṇam, mananam, nidhidhyāsanam. Like that. And in the case of spiritual prodigies, extraordinary spiritual prodigies is different. Spiritual prodigy means the one who has gone through the first four stages in the purva janma. Prodigy means that. There is no other specialty. Already the four stages are passed through in the pūrva janma and therefore, in this janma, the prodigy has to go through only the fifth stage. Śravaṇam need not be done. There is no need of any guru itself. A great relief, it seems! They do not require śravaṇam, mananam, all those things. Even from early stage, they feel that they have gone through these stages. For them it is a very very walk over for them.

But seeing those people I should not argue; that I would start doing like that. Because everybody is a spiritual prodigy. And therefore Kṛṣṇa says: Karma yōgēna aparē paśyanthi. Some seekers start from karma-yōga itself, because they require to go through all the five stages. Why? Because there are powerful rāga-dvēṣa, kāma-krōdhaḥ obstacle, and here the word karma-yōga includes the 2nd stage also. Kṛṣṇa does not mention, we have to supply. Some other people start from the 2nd stage, viz., upāsana. So karma-yōga, refers to the 1st two stages.

And there are some other people, they come with a refined mind, with an integrated mind; and they are naturally not interested in material things; in early childhood itself they are attracted to spirituality. For them, they can start with the third or fourth stage. And that is indicated by anyē saṅkyēna yōgēna. The word saṅkya indicates the third and fourth stages.

Third stage is what? Forgotten? Śravaṇēna, or mananēna; depending upon where they stand. So saṅkhyā refers to śravaṇam and mananam and there are some rare people who have gone through all the four stages in the purva janma. This Lord Kṛṣṇa discussed in the 6th chapter of the Gīta. Listened to it very long ago? Forgotten the 6th chapter itself. Looks like the purva janma. It is like that. Tatra taṃ buddhisamyōgam labhatē paurvadēhikam. This person gets sambhanda with purva janma jñānam. Even he does not know how he got the sambandam. For those people, they require to go through only the final stage, i.e. said here, dhyānēna ātmani paśyathi. So dhyānam refers to nidhidhyāsanam, the final stage, which is just a reinforcement; reassertion of what they have gathered. In one of the Upaniṣads. Aitharēya upaniṣad, it talks about a Ṛṣi Vāmadēvā, who declared Aham Brahmāsmi in the womb of the mother itself.

गर्भ एवैतच्छयानो वामदेव एवमुवाच.. ॥ ५ ॥ taduktamṛṣiṇā garbhē nu sannanvēṣāmvēdamahaṃ dēvānāṃ janimāni viśvā śataṃ mā pura āyasīrarakṣannadhaḥ śyēnō javasā niradīyamiti. Garbha ēvaitacchayānō vāmadēva ēvamuvāca.. ॥ 5 ॥

How come the mother herself does not know Aham Brahmāsmi? And in the mother's womb itself; how can Vāmadēvā declare and he cannot do śravaṇam in the mother's womb, how does it happen, if you ask, 95% job over in purva janma. Here it is a little bit left out and therefore for those spiritual prodigies, meditation is: {what type of meditation? nidhidhyāsana meditation} is enough and depending upon my level I have to take to five, four, three, two or one sādhana.

Verse 13.26

अन्ये त्वेवमजानन्तः श्रुत्वाऽन्येभ्य उपासते।
तेऽपि चातितरन्त्येव मृत्युं श्रुतिपरायणाः ॥ १३.२६ ॥

anyē tvēvamajānantah śrutvā'nyēbhya upāsatē|
tē'pi cātitarantyēva mṛtyuṃ śrutiparāyaṇāḥ || 13.26 ||

अजानन्तः एवम् ajānantah ēvaṃ not knowing thus, अन्ये तु anyē tu some others उपासते upāsatē pursue (Self-knowledge), श्रुत्वा अन्येभ्यः śrutvā anyēbhyaḥ by hearing from others, श्रुतिपरायणाः śrutiparāyaṇāḥ being committed to listening, ते अपि tē api they also, एव च अतितरन्ति ēva ca atitaranti definitely cross over मृत्युम् mṛtyum mortality.

26 Not knowing thus, some others pursue (self-knowledge) by hearing from others. Being committed to listening, they also definitely cross over mortality.

So here Kṛṣṇa points out that Vēdānta śravaṇam need not necessarily be the study of the original scriptures themselves. We do not insist that one should study Upaniṣad only;

Gīta only; Brahmasūtra only; we do not insist upon the text; we insist upon the teaching part only. Therefore if there is a guru who does not teach the Gīta upaniṣad or Brahma sūtra or Pañcadaśi etc. but he takes the essence of all these books and presents in a different language; without touching any of these books, in his own language, maybe English, may be vernacular, may be Russian, may be Chinese; Vēdānta does not refer to the actual language, Vēdānta refers to the content-teaching. As Dayānanda Swami says, You are the Whole, this teaching is Vēdānta, whatever be the language. You are the Whole (hole, what spelling? Put it correctly, h o l e, if you put it is a problem; it is the state now). Therefore pūrṇam, adaḥ pūrṇam idaṃ; I am full and complete; this wisdom it may be in a South American language, we do not care, and therefore Kṛṣṇa says there are some people who do not have access to the originals but still they gather the teaching from other people; from the Gurus, the Gurus themselves have the knowledge of the originals. Even if I do not know the original, it does not matter, I can gain mōkṣa, if even I am taught in any language.

Anyē tu; there are some other people, ēvam ajānantaḥ, they do not gain the knowledge through the original scriptures; the most original and fundamental scriptures being the upaniṣads, they might not study the upaniṣads, or prasthāna thrayāms, consisting of Upaniṣads, Gīta and Brahmasūtra, they do not study. Ēvam refers the traditional scriptural study, they do not do; but what do they do? Anyēbhyaḥ śrutvā. So they go to some ācārya, who has studied the original and who is capable of paraphrasing, arranging and systematically communicating, in what language? In any language that the student can grasp. That is why in India you can find that in every State, Vēdāntic wisdom is there in vernacular language. Even in the folk songs there is Vēdānta. Whether you take Malayalam; one lady sang a laluby, whatever you say, to put the baby to sleep they have some traditional song. And she sang those songs, in which the avastha thraya sākṣi, etc. are coming. And the lady also did not know what it is and of course the baby also. And after attending the class, she says I never knew that even in the songs to put the babies to sleep, there is Vēdānta. Similarly in Hindi and all other languages. Similarly take Abaṅgās of Tukāram, Namādēv, etc. and see. You will find Vēdānta is there. You gain the knowledge through any source. Source is not important, the content is important.

If a person knows the content without studying the Upaniṣad, he is liberated; on the other hand, fill up the blanks. Another person who has gone through all the Upaniṣad, but does not know the content, he is not liberated. Therefore Kṛṣṇa says

Anyēbhyaḥ śrutvā upāsatē in his own mother tongue, upāsatē. They follow the sādhanā of understanding and assimilating and Kṛṣṇa says: Tē api; even those people who are śruti parāyaṇa, who are committed to the words of the Guru.

They are not exposed to the words of the scriptures; they do not know; but they are committed to the words of the guru; so sṛuti parāyaṇaḥ, means guru vākya śravaṇa parāyaṇaḥ. Here for sṛuti you should not take Vēdā. Here sṛuti means the Guru vākya śravaṇam. In any other language; parāyaṇa; committed to that; as much śraddhaḥ a person has got, in the Vēdā, this disciple has got so much śraddhaḥ in the guru vākyaḥ; sṛuti parāyaṇaḥ.

Such committed students also mṛtyuṁ tarantīyēva; certainly cross mortality. Finitude; otherwise called saṁsāraḥ. That means that they will also attain mōkṣa. So what a broad vision!

And therefore even if in the olden days Vēdā was not accessible to all people. They kept some of the scriptures secret for some reasons but even though the originals were not accessible to all; the content of the scriptures were accessible to all people at all the times. Whether a person is Brahmaṇa, Kṣatriya, Vaiśya, Sūdra, Brahmācāri, Grihastha, Vānaprastha, Sanyāsi, male, female, Hindu, Christian, or Muslim, anyone, whether the originals were accessible or not; the contents in one form or the other was accessible. What liberates is not the Vēdā, but liberates is the content-teaching in the Vēdāḥ. Even if one does not study Vēdās, any can get liberation, Kṛṣṇa declares.

Verse 13.27

यावत् सञ्जायते किञ्चित् सत्त्वं स्थावरजङ्गमम् ।

27. Whatever being, moving or stationary, is born --- know that to be out of the union of kṣētram and kṣētrajña, Oh, Arjuna!

In the previous two verses, Lord Kṛṣṇa pointed out that everybody has to go through all the stages of sādhana and also he said all the sādhanas should culminate in ātma jñānam. Ātmani ātmanāḥ ātmānam paśyanti. To ātma jñānam everybody has to come to.

The purification of the mind through karma-yōgaḥ can be accomplished through different types of activities; we have choice; may be japa, may be pūja, may be social service; one has a choice here; but everybody ultimately has to go through the door of jñānam. That is why Swami Dayānanda beautiful says, a temple might have four doors, four gopurams, but the grabha griham has got only one door. Four doors are there for the temple, only one door is there to the Lord.

Similarly, for preparation many doors are there, but for mōkṣa, there is only one door; jñānam. This Kṛṣṇa mentioned in the previous two verses. Naturally we will have a question, why do we insist on jñānam. It looks as though we are adamant, as though we are fanatic; why are we so insistent? Kṛṣṇa says it is not fanaticism or adamancy, but that happens to be the fact. If I say darkness can be removed only by light; it is not fanaticism. I cannot have comprise or consideration; you can remove darkness by broomstick; is not possible; I cannot afford to accept many paths, not because I am narrow-minded, but the fact is that the darkness goes only by light. So if still you charge me with fanaticism, Dayānanda Swamiji says: Better I be a fanatic rather than a lunatic.

And why do we say that it is a fact. Kṛṣṇa says because saṁsāra is caused by ignorance and error. Samsāraḥ is caused by ignorance and error. What is the ignorance and what is the error? I am the Puruṣaḥ, this fact I am ignorant. Puruṣaḥ, not male-female Puruṣa. Vēdāntic Puruṣa we saw; that is the four things you ought to remember: Cētana, nirguṇa, nirvikāra, sathya, cētana tatvam Puruṣa, pūrṇa Puruṣaḥ aham; this fact I am ignorant of. This is called the ignorance problem.

And this ignorance has led to an error; and what is that error? Since I do not know I am the Puruṣaḥ, I have chosen to identify myself with Prakṛti. When I do not know I am ātma; I mistake myself to be anātma. This is what is happening in dream also. When I forget this body of mine during sleep, the ignorance of this body leads to my identification with what? The svapna śarīram. Why do I identify with the dream body? Because I am ignorant of this body, which is lying on the bed. And that is why the moment I wake up to this physical body, automatically, I decide to disidentify from the dream body. And therefore, Puruṣa ajñānam has led to Prakṛti abhimānam. Do you understand? Puruṣa ajñānam has led to Prakṛti abhimāna, or to put in another language, kṣētrajña abhimānam has led to kṣētra abhimāna. Abhimāna means identification. Ātma ajñānam has led to anātma abhimāna. Or in English self-ignorance has led to body identification.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa says: kṣētra kṣētrajña samyōgāt, because of the samyōgaḥ, samyōgaḥ means abhimāna, identification of "I" the kṣētrajña on what? the body the kṣētram. So samyōgaḥ means identification, mistaking; in English itself, mistake means what? You miss the original and take the wrong one; called mis take. I miss the Puruṣa and take the Prakṛti as myself. This is called kṣētra kṣētrajña samyōga, ātma-anātma adhyāsaḥ. Śankarācārya, in his most famous introduction to Brahma Sūtra, he writes a bhāṣyam called adhyāsa bhāṣyam. Just one and half pages only he writes. The commentators and sub-commentators and sub-sub-commentators they write a huge book on it and you know what is adhyāsaḥ, kṣētra-kṣētrañā samyōgaḥ. I, the cētana tatvam, take myself to be the material body. I, the consciousness, take myself to be the matter. See the great foolishness. But we successfully we manage; not only we manage, we successfully perpetuate also; I am the body; I am the body.

And because of the dēha abhimāna, there are two fold problem; the first problem is: I the immortal Puruṣa mistake myself to be the mortal body. Therefore mortality I take to myself. Finitude I take to myself. And once finitude comes, I cannot withstand the limitations in life and therefore start the grabbing project. Bring to me, Bring to me, give me; I grab, so that I, the finite can become, the desire is to get rid of finitude.

And therefore apūrṇathvam leads to kāma; kāma leads to karma, karma leads to puṇya-pāpam, puṇya pāpa leads to sukha duḥkha, and later to punar janma. In fact entire cycle of birth and death is dēha abhimāna.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa says yāvat sattvaṁ sañcāyatē. Sattvaṁ means living being. Every living being is born; goes through the cycles of births and death; sthāvara-jaṅgamam, whether it is a non-moving living being; what is the non-moving living being: the trees; naga siṣyaḥ (we saw in the morning), the trees are called sthāvara prāṇi; and all the other animals etc. human being, they are all called jaṅgama satvam. So sthāvara satvam, non-moving prāṇis, jaṅgama satvam, moving prāṇis; all these go through jāyatē; birth and death only because of fundamental mistake; 'I am the body' is the mistake.

Iti viddhi. Arjuna you understand and this body identification is a mistake and every mistake is born of ignorance. Every error is a product of ignorance.

And therefore if an error has to be eliminated, you can never attack the error directly, you have to attack the cause of the error. What is cause? Ajñānam. If you have to destroy a tree, cutting the branches would not accomplish that. You go on cutting the branches; what happens? It comes again and again. Never destroy the symptom; destroy the disease. An ideal medicine is that which destroys the disease not the symptom. And that is what is indicated through Rāvaṇa vadham also. Rāma destroys the heads of Rāvaṇa. The heads indicate the errors. And Rāma keeps on cutting the heads, the head keeps on coming. And then Rāma is frustrated. Then Agasthya comes and does the upadēśa of Aditya Hṛdayam, which is the essence of Vēdānta. And the brahmāstra is meant to strike the Hṛdayam dēśam. Do not cut the head which is an error; but in the Hṛdayam, ignorance is there; by tatvamasi brahmāstram, destroy the ajñānam here. Then the heads will not come again and again. And therefore Jñānam destroys ajñānam and ajñānam destroys error or adhyāsa. With that problems are solved.

And therefore Arjuna jñānat ēva mōkṣa. In which Yuga? That is also a confusion. In which Yuga? In which Yuga darkness goes by light? Any yuga, if darkness has to be removed, you need light. So in Kali yuga bhakthi is the way to mōkṣa, we will never accept. Whether it is dvāpara Yuga, trēta yuga or kali yuga, to remove ajñānam, one needs jñānam. There is only one remedy, jñānam. So thus Kṛṣṇa talked about sādhanās in these three verses; 25, 26 and 27.

Verse 13.28

समं सर्वेषु भूतेषु तिष्ठन्तं परमेश्वरम् ।
विनश्यत्स्वविनश्यन्तं यः पश्यति स पश्यति ॥ १३.२८ ॥

Samaṁ sarvēṣu bhūtēṣu tiṣṭhantaṁ paramēśvaram |
vinaśyatsvavinaśyantaṁ yaḥ paśyati sa paśyati || 13.28 ||

सः saḥ He, यः पश्यति yaḥ paśyati who sees परमेश्वरम् paramēśvaram the supreme Lord, तिष्ठन्तम् tiṣṭhantaṁ who dwells समम् samam alike सर्वेषु भूतेषु sarvēṣu bhūtēṣu in all beings अविनश्यन्तम् avinaśyantaṁ and who is imperishable विनश्यत्सु vinaśyatsu among the perishables पश्यति paśyati (alone really) sees.

28. He who sees the supreme Lord who dwells alike in all beings and who is imperishable, (alone really) sees.

So from this verse onwards, Kṛṣṇa talks about the benefit of this knowledge. Jñāna phalam. There are several benefits and Kṛṣṇa enumerates a few of them and the first benefit mentioned here is sarvatra sama darśanam. Seeing one ātma, seeing means not with the physical eye, through the eye of wisdom; jñāna cakṣu, being aware of the changeless ātma which is in and through all the changing anātma. Body changes; mind changes; thoughts change; all these change; but in and through all of them, the caitanya tatvam, the consciousness does not undergo a change. Just as there is one water permanent water; in and through the changing impermanent waves and bubbles; in and through the changing bodies and mind; there is the changeless ātma; the wise person does not lose sight of that.

Therefore, he says: vinaśyatsu sarvēṣu bhūtēṣu. Here Bhūtha means what? The body mind complex, which are innumerable. Just as waves are innumerable, there are innumerable infinite number of bhūtams, body-mind-complex, and what type of body-mind-complex? Vinaśyatsu, which are subject to birth and death; like the waves rising and setting; and all of them are viṣamam in nature. Viṣamam, different. Physically every one of us is different; mentally you do not have to ask; intellectually different; thus there are difference all through; and amidst the different innumerable perishable bodies, samaṁ parameśvaram, there is one imperishable thing. You call it either sat principle the existence, or you call it cit principle, the consciousness, that sat cit ātma is called parameśvara. Here Kṛṣṇa says that parameśvaram is not somebody sitting above the clouds. That are all LKG, they are the first lessons; but parameśvaram is who? The very changeless ātma in everyone. Īśvara sarvabhūtānam ḥṛdēśē. Yō vēda nihitam guhāyām paramēvyōman; dēhō dēvalaya prōkta; body is the temple and the ātma is the Lord; Wise person is one who does not lose sight of the Lord while transacting.

So at the level of the conscious mind, I am aware of the impermanent and changing bodies and mind, but in the background, the wise man or wise women ~ wise person; let us be safe, the wise person does not lose sight of the ātma; that is why our very greeting is what?; Not hi ~ Swami Chinmayānanda used to say that we used to say hi, to manage the cows and the horses ~ now the American culture we say hi ~ it is not hi ~ Namasthe means what. Ātma in you and the ātma in me; both of them are one and the same and to remind that alone we have some indication, either put chandanam, or kumkum or vibhuthi or thiruman or anything that is to remind the presence of the divinity in you and me.

And if I am aware of the permanent one, I will not depend upon the impermanent for security. If I am aware of the permanent one, I will handle the impermanent but I will not depend on the impermanent one; just as a drowning man trying to catch hold of a straw. What will happen? He will go down with that. So Kṛṣṇa says samaṁ sarvēṣu bhūtēṣu tiṣṭhantaṁ paramēśvaram Ātmānam yaḥ paśyathi. One who does not lose sight of this ātma; that is one who has got sama darśanam, advaita darśanam, abhēda darśanam, saḥ paśyathi; he alone has got the right vision; he is called a seer.

A sage is called a seer even though we also see so many things, nobody calls us a seer; Why? எதை பார்க்கணமோ அதை தவிர வேறே எல்லாம் பாற்கரோம் (because we see all other things except that which has to be seen). So the one who sees that thing to be seen is called Seer. Such a person is called a பாற்பான். pārpan. Pārpan means the seer is called Pārpan. Everybody should become pārpan.

Hari Om

178 Chapter 13, Verses 28-31

ॐ

Up to the 24th verse, Lord Kṛṣṇa dealt with all the six topics that Arjuna wanted to know. Prakṛti, Puruṣa, Kṣētram, kṣētrajña, jñānam and jñeyam. And thereafter, from verse

No.25 up to 27th in three verses, Lord Kṛṣṇa talked about the sādhanas or preparatory disciplines required to gain this knowledge. Knowledge given in the first 24 verses. And he talked about all the levels of sādhana, starting from karma-yōga; then passing through Upāsana, then Śravaṇam, Mananam and Nidhidhyāsanam and the culmination of the sādhanas should be only in knowledge.

And also Kṛṣṇa pointed out why he is insisting on knowledge, the reason is that the problem of saṁsāra is because of an error with regard to our perception of ourselves. So self-error, or error with regard to self-understanding is the problem and any error is caused by ignorance alone and therefore without the removal of ignorance, self-delusion cannot go away. And therefore, knowledge is compulsory and through the knowledge self-delusion goes away and through that the saṁsāra also goes away. Thus the sādhanas were talked about in three verses from verse 25 to 27 and then from 28 onwards Lord Kṛṣṇa is talking about the phalam, the benefit of this knowledge.

And this benefit Kṛṣṇa presents in different ways. In the 28 verse, the phalam that he talks about is right perceptive of the world. The right vision of the world, the complete understanding of the world which we call samyak-darśanam. A proper perceptive.

And what is this proper perceptive? This is purely based on the teaching; the teaching being, that the whole universe is a mixture of Prakṛti and Puruṣa; because the whole universe is born out of Prakṛti and Puruṣa and therefore the universe will be a mixture of the two. Just as every child will have the features of both the parents; the father and mother; Prakṛti and Puruṣa together are like the parents and therefore, the universe is a mixture of both.

And our vision will be right vision and balanced vision only if we are aware of both the Prakṛti aspect as well as the Puruṣa aspect. If we are going to be preoccupied with Prakṛti and lose sight of Puruṣa, then also problem. If we are going to be preoccupied with Puruṣa and lose sight of Prakṛti, then also problem. A right balanced vision is being aware of both Puruṣa and Prakṛti; not only in the entire creation; every living being, every human being is also a mixture of Prakṛti and Puruṣa. The only thing is the Prakṛti part of a human being is physically perceptible because it is made up of solid tangible matter. Prakṛti being saḡuṇa, (do you remember), saḡuṇa, savikāra, mithya, acētana tatvam, it is visible to the fleshy physical eyes; whereas the Puruṣa being Nirguṇa, Nirvikāra, Sathya, Cētana tatvam; it will not be visible to the physical eye but it has to be appreciated through our understanding. Just as when I look at the fan, only one aspect of the fan is visible to the eyes and that is the physical part of the fan; but behind the physical part, there is a non-tangible invisible electricity principle, which the eyes do not see but the jñāna cakṣu; physics jñāna cakṣu gives me the appreciation. What I see is one; what I appreciate is a mixture of two. The visible and the invisible.

Similarly when I look at every living being, what the eyes see is one, but with the other called, śāstra-jñāna-cakṣu, which is called the third eye of wisdom; jñāna-cakṣu has to "see"; what do you mean by seeing? Appreciating and understanding the invisible Puruṣa in every one. It is not that the Lord Śiva has only got the third eye; we all should acquire the third eye. The two eyes will see the Prakṛti, the third நெற்றிகண்; netthi kan and that they say is symbolically indicated by the tilakam that we wear. Now nobody wears it; especially the younger generation feel ashamed to put the pottu. Our śāstras say that it represents the third eye of wisdom and why do you put on the netthi? Why not on the face? Why do you put there? Because in the tantra śāstra, they talk about various chakras, symbolically and there is supposed to be a cakra called ājñā chakra; and ājñā means pūrṇa jñānam. ā being pūrṇam and jñā means jñānam. So this third eye symbolised through ājñā-cakram and tilakam is supposed to be the invisible eye, which is aware of the Puruṣa also.

And of these two principles, the Prakṛti part will be subject to change; savikāram; the Puruṣa part is not subject to change. Prakṛti part is variable from individual to individual; varṇa-bhēda is there; āsrama-bhēda is there; liṅga-bhēda is there; it is viṣamam; whereas Puruṣa is samam in all the people.

Therefore, Kṛṣṇa says samam sarvēṣu-bhūtēṣu tiṣṭhantaṁ paśyathi. This eye will be seeing what? Viṣamam paśyati. So the local physical eye, even without the study of scriptures, you do not require a guru or a śāstra or vēdānta, without any training the physical eyes are going to see the viṣamam bhūtāni; anitya bhūtāni; the śāstra cakṣu should help me in seeing what; viṣamam anitya bhūtēṣu sama nitya ātma darśanam. Darśanam not with the physical eyes but with the third eye of wisdom through vēdāntic study.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa said: sarvēṣu bhūtēṣu viṣamam anitya prakṛtiṣu samam Puruṣam. Here the word paramēśvaram indicates Puruṣa. Do not imagine a personal God is sitting in everyone. Here, the word paramēśvara represents Nirguṇa, Nirvikāra, Sathya, Cētana Tatvam paramēśvaram, yaḥ paśyati. And that does not mean in his preoccupation with Puruṣa darśanam, he loses sight of Prakṛti; he sees the Prakṛti also, he is also aware of the Puruṣa also. Just as I appreciate both the fan aspect as well as the electricity aspect. And according to the context, he emphasises Prakṛti or Puruṣa.

As I said, when somebody asks who are you?, or bio-data, somebody asks, in that context I am nirguṇa, nirvikāra, sathya cētana tatvam you should not say; context you can identify with Prakṛti and handle. But there are occasions when Prakṛti create problems. Mortality frightens. Actions become a burden. Life becomes a bore. And when a person troubled by life, when it appears noisy, constant activity and becomes a drag, then a person requires a different channel. This channel problem, what should you do. Change the channel. When you look for stability, when you look for permanence, when you for pūrṇathvam, then the Prakṛti will not be able to provide; in fact all the higher needs of human beings, Prakṛti will not provide. It is very useful and entertaining in all transactions; but whenever there is a higher need; sometime people tell, one lady was telling me; Swamiji I have everything but I am missing something. I do not have anything to complain, because wonderful husband, wonderful children, beautiful house, no water problem; and the business is going well; I cannot give any complaint at all; but there is something missing. This is called higher spiritual need; when such a need comes, I should be able to withdraw from Prakṛti and own up the Puruṣa tatvam; which alone gives peace, pūrṇathvam, security, immortality, stability, etc. And once you are rejuvenated and fresh, then you are ready for all the activities. Like getting up after sleep. Therefore, that balanced vision of Puruṣa and Prakṛti; not losing sight of Puruṣa in and through the transaction is called ātma niṣṭa. They call it sahaja samādhi. Sahaja samādhi means in and through all the transactions, not losing sight of the Puruṣa tatvam. Up to this we saw in the last class.

Verse 13.29

समं पश्यन् हि सर्वत्र समवस्थितमीश्वरम् ।
न हिनस्त्यात्मनाऽऽत्मानं ततो याति परां गतिम् ॥ १३.२९ ॥

Samaṁ paśyan hi sarvatra samavasthitamīśvaram |
na hinastyātmanā"tmānaṁ tatō yāti parāṁ gatim || 13.29 ||

हि hi for समम् samaṁ uniformly पश्यन् paśyan seeing ईश्वरम् īśvaram the Lord समवस्थितं सर्वत्र samavasthitam sarvatra who dwells everywhere alike न हिनस्ति na hinasti आत्मानम् ātmānam he does not ruin himself आत्मना ātmanā by himself ततः tataḥ thereby याति yāti he attains, परां गतिम् parāṁ gatim the supreme goal. Freedom from insecurity is mōkṣa.

29. For, uniformly seeing the Lord who dwells everywhere alike, he does not ruin by himself. Thereby he attains the supreme goal.

So the previous verse gave the first phalam and first phalam is what? Right vision: sāmyak darśanam and which is a very very anti-depression tablet. So once in a while, everybody goes through either serious or mild depression; anti-depression tablets will all create problems; what is the best tablet; this darśanam is the only permanent solution; sāmyak-darśanam.

Then in this verse, Kṛṣṇa gives the second benefit of this knowledge, which is amṛtathva prāp̥thi. Transcending mortality. Or immortality is the second benefit. As the prayer goes asatō ma sat gamaya, tamasō ma jyōtir gamaya, mṛtyōrma amṛtam gamaya. Ma means, Me, please take me from untruth to truth from darkness to light, from mortality to immortality.

The word 'ma' also means 'do not'. You should understand very clearly. If you take that meaning, what will happen? It will mean, do not take me to truth. Let me continue in the untruth. Here Ma is not the indeclinable Ma; it is declinable Dvithiya vibakthihi, ēkavacanam; take me. That amṛtathva prāp̥thi is the benefit he gives. Samaṁ paśyan. This wise person learns to have the sama-darśanam, in and through the viṣama darśanam, which is required for transaction. Transaction requires viṣama darśanam.

Even at the end of the class, when you see several chappals, there you should not say: Sarvatra-sama-darśanam. You cannot walk away with another's chappal. There you should have the Viṣama-darśanam; this is their chappal; this is my chappal, etc. Transaction requires Viṣama-darśanam, but behind samaṁ-paśyan sarvatra, sarvatra means in and through all the transactions paśyan, sṛnvan, spṛśan, jihnan.

Because the moment you lose sight of the sama darśanam, Prakṛti will frighten you. It is like the dream. The moment you lose sight of the fact that you are lying down on the bed comfortably; that is forgotten, the dream is capable of frightening you. The moment you lose sight of the screen in a movie, the characters become more real than they actually are, and the movie can terribly frighten you; not only at that time, afterwards when you go home also. Similarly, the moment Puruṣa is lost sight of, Prakṛti becomes a nightmare.

And therefore samaṁ-paśyan sarvathra; in all the states, all the conditions. What does he see? samavasistitham īśvaram. Again Īśvara here means Puruṣa the ātma. It is not ēkarūpa īśvaram that is talked about here; not even anēka rūpa īśvaram. Anēka rūpa Īśvara was discussed in the 11th chapter, whereas here the īśvaram .neither referring to ēkarūpa Īśvara nor the Anēka-rūpa Īśvara but Arūpa-īśvaram, free from all attributes. Therefore only samam, which is same in everyone.

And samavasistitham, which is very much present as the very adhiṣṭānam, the support of Prakṛti. Because Puruṣa is sathyam, Prakṛti is Mithya, without the support of Puruṣa, Prakṛti cannot exist. Just as without the support of the screen, the movie does not exist. Whether you are aware of the screen or not; screen alone supports the movie. Similarly, samyak adhistanathvēna avasthitham. Īśvaram paśyan. The wise person sees all the time; in all these places, paśyan, should not be taken as physically perceiving; but appreciating through jñāna cakṣu.

And what is the benefit he attains? Parām gatim yāti. He attains the highest goal of immortality. Amṛthathvam yāti. He attains immortality. He thereafter does not subject himself to mortality.

And here Kṛṣṇa presents that in a beautiful way that this jñāni does not destroy himself thereafter. So according to Kṛṣṇa, every ajñāni_samsāri is destroying himself. Even though he puts the blame on the world and the people, according to Vēdānta, world does not create any problem. Because of ignorance, we are killing ourselves. We are all self-destructive people. This is based on the Īśāvāsya Upaniṣad which says everyone is committing a suicide. Everyone is committing a suicide. How? Śankarācārya explains this in two different ways beautifully: we will see both meanings; interesting.

How does a person destroy himself? Because of the self-ignorance, ignorance of the fact that I am ātma, he identifies with the body, the anātma. So ignorance leads to body identification. And once I identify with the body I become a kartā. As ātma I am not a kartā, but once dēhābhimāna comes, I become a kartā. And as a Kartā, means doer of actions. As a kartā I perform varieties of actions, earning puṇya papāh karmāṇi.

And therefore what are my earnings? Whether in the local bank any deposit is there or not, in our other bank we have got a very huge deposit of puṇya-pāpa karmāṇi. And according to vēdānta, it is these puṇya-pāpa karmas which are responsible for the creation of the body. And therefore, I create a body for myself by my own karma. If in the next janma, I am going to acquire a body who is responsible? Not the next janma parents. Not God. Not anything. If I acquire a body in the next janma, I am responsible for the arrival of that body. Through what? My own karma. So therefore, I create a body and then after the body hangs around for sometime, when the body perishes, the end of the body is also caused by what? The doctors will give various reasons; heart attack or this attack or that attack, or accidents and various other causes; but doctors may say, but according to the śāstra, it is again the end of the karma, prārabhda-karma, that puts an end to the body. Therefore, body's arrival is because of whom, myself and the body's departure or death is again because of whom? Because of me alone; How? Through my own karma. And once that body is gone. what happens. that is not the end of the journey. Payanangal mudivadillai. (in Tamil ~ the journey never ends). Therefore, another body I acquire and again that body is again killed by me by my own karma, and another body create another body and who kills that body, again I alone. Therefore I alone are responsible for the repeated birth and death of myself; through the arrival and departure of the body.

Therefore I am creating myself and I am destroying myself from the standpoint of the body. And therefore, I am self-destructive. I kill myself. And how long this will continue? As long as Karmas continue. Punarapi Jananam, punarapi maraṇam, Punarapi Jananam, punarapi maraṇam. I am responsible for my death. So therefore I am a ātmāhā; ātmāhā means killer of myself, from the standpoint of my body.

And then Śankarācārya gives another meaning also. From the standpoint of my higher-nature also, that is my ātma svarūpam nature also, because of self-ignorance, I am killing as though my higher-nature. I am destroying myself; myself means not the body; my own higher-nature. Then Śankarācārya raises the question: how can a self-ignorant person kill his own higher-nature, the ātma? Because after all the ātma is indestructible; how can you say ignorant person kills the ātma? Śankarācārya ignorant person kills the ātma, as it were. Figuratively kills the ātma.

What do you mean figuratively killing the ātma? When I am not aware of my higher-nature, I disown my higher-nature. Just as a person who does not know the treasure which is lying underneath the ground; his own land; is not going to claim it, he is going to disown because of his ignorance; similarly, an ignorant person disowns his higher-nature and therefore the benefit that he can derive from his higher-nature is denied to him. Is it not? When I have got treasure underneath and I am ignorant of that fact, the benefit of the richness that I am going to lose and since I am not enjoying the benefit of my higher-nature, it is as though the higher-nature is absent. The higher-nature is present. But the higher-nature is as though absent, why? because I do not derive the benefit of my higher-nature; because of sheer ignorance; and since the higher-nature is as though absent; Śankarācārya says: we have killed or destroyed the higher-nature, as though. If something is destroyed, you do not derive the benefit of that. Similarly, ātma is as though destroyed; because I do not derive the benefit of it.

And therefore, a self-ignorant person has "destroyed" his own higher-nature, because he does not enjoy the benefit of pūrṇatvam, abayathvam, etc. And therefore from that standpoint also, he is a suicide; he is destroying himself.

And therefore every ajñāni destroys himself from the standpoint of the body also and every ajñāni destroys himself from the standpoint of ātma also. And therefore every ajñāni is a suicide. And if every ajñāni is self-destroyer, what is the definition of a jñāni? Opposite.

And therefore, Kṛṣṇa says a jñāni does not destroy himself; he is not a self-destroyer. That is said; look at the second line. na hinastyātmanā'tmānaṃ. Unlike an ajñāni, a jñāni does not destroy himself, either by the standpoint of the body or from the standpoint of the ātma. And therefore he is not a self-destroyer; he has discovered immortality. And that is said in the last portion, parāṁ gatim yāti. Parāṁ gatim means immortality; amṛthatvam.

Verse 13.30

प्रकृत्यैव च कर्माणि क्रियमाणानि सर्वशः।
यः पश्यति तथाऽऽत्मानमकर्तारं स पश्यति ॥ १३.३०॥

prakṛtyaiva ca karmāṇi kriyamāṇāni sarvaśaḥ|
yaḥ paśyati tathā"tmānamakartāraṁ sa paśyati || 13.30 ||

सः saḥ he, यः पश्यति yaḥ paśyati who sees कर्माणि karmāṇi all actions क्रियमाणानि kriyamāṇāni as being done प्रकृत्य एव च prakṛtya ēva ca by Prakṛti alone, सर्वशः sarvaśaḥ by all means तथा tathā, and likewise (sees), आत्मानम् ātmānam the Self, अकर्तारम् akartāraṁ to be actionless पश्यति akartāraṁ paśyati (alone really) sees.

30. He who sees all actions as being done by Prakṛti alone by all means and likewise (sees) the self to be actions (alone really) sees.

The third benefit of the knowledge is given here. We have seen two: first one is sama darśanam; the second one is amṛthathva prāp̥thi. The third prayōjanam akartṛtva prāp̥thi. Discovering the fact that I am akartā. I am not a doer of any action. And this is a very important thing because kartṛtvam alone is the cause of all the problems. Because as long as I am a kartā, I can never avoid karmas and therefore Kartā will be eternally associated with karma. And karmas will never remain the same, they will gradually ripen. The karmas will gradually ripen and get converted into favourable and unfavourable conditions. Even now our prarabdha karmas are ripening. Next year எப்படி இருப்போமோ? பகவானுக்கு தான் வெளிச்சம். (how we will be, is only known to God) and you cannot stop it. You cannot do anything. The karmas, whether you like it or not, they are ripening. When the karmas ripen, the ripened karma-phalam in the form of favourable and unfavourable situation, they will come back to me alone. What goes as karma outside will come back to me as karma phala, without any address-mistake. Whether your number is new number or old number, there will be no mistake, it will land properly. Sharp shooter; correctly it will land. When the karma phalas comes to me and I have to face the music, I become a bhoktā. If I am a kartā, I can never escape from being a bhoktā and that bhoktā status is a choiceless, helpless situation.

That is why they say also. That somebody was told that he is getting into seven-and-half saturn. This fellow thought that he will escape, and therefore he dug a tunnel and hid himself and closed himself, to escape from the Saturn. How long 7-1/2 years. After 7-1/2 years he came out, he called Śani and said how he escaped from you. Śani said that you sat in that corner underneath in the tunnel without proper food and any other facilities, is itself because of Me, the Śani effect.

So therefore, you can never escape from being a bhōktā. Therefore if you want to get out of bhōktvaṁ, there is only one way, you should get out of kartvaṁ. You will definitely have kartvaṁ as long as you have dēha abhimāna, because dēha means karma will be there, because there are jñanēndriyaṇi, karmēndriyāṇi; and therefore, Prakṛti abhimāna makes me a kartā. And the moment you drop the Prakṛti abhimāna, and claim that aham Puruṣa, that Puruṣa-owning up alone will take you out of both kartvaṁ and bhōktvaṁ.

Therefore, Kṛṣṇa says: Karmāṇi, all the karmas, good and bad actions, are Prakṛthya ēva kriyamāṇani, they are all done by Prakṛti alone, Prakṛti alone can do karmas, because doing karma requires modification. Any karma, change is required. If I have to talk, my mouth has to undergo change. Even if I have to do a thinking action, there should be thought change. So karma means vikāram. Prakṛti alone can do karma, because it is subject to modification.

Whereas Puruṣa means what Nirguṇa, Nirvikāra, Satya, Cētanā-tatvam, that Puruṣa is incapable of doing action and therefore Kṛṣṇa says all the actions by all means, whether it is kāyikam, vācikam, or mānasam, whether it is dhārmikam, or adhārmikam, all of them are done by Prakṛti. Prakṛti means what? The body mind complex. You can call it śarīra thrayam or you can call it kōśa pañcakam, but if you do not know what is śarīra thrayam, and kōśa-pañcakam, you can understand as body-sense-mind complex alone. Sarvaśaḥ.

And this wise person is very much aware of that. But he does not identify with the body mind complex. Then he identifies with what? Ātmanam. He does not say I am doing. He says in my presence Prakṛti does everything. In my presence, Prakṛti does everything, body mind complex does everything. Then who am I. Akarthāram ca paśyathi. I am akartā and therefore I do not have sañcitam; I do not have āgāmi; I do not have prārabdham. Or else how is it possible to experience and finish off the karmas? It is impossible for you to exhaust all the karmas, because they are all ananthakōti janmarjithāni karmāṇi; you can never experience and exhaust the karmas. In one life itself, if you are going to exhaust 2,783 karmas (just a number). Even if you exhaust 2700 karmas, while exhausting you are going to add 27000. So it is impossible to put an end to the cyclic arrival and departure of karmas. The only way out of is you do not stop the cycle, but you get away from the cycle. Like the huge merry go round. Huge one, you know, in the cycle you sit and goes round. So if it is one minute or two minutes, it is merry go around. But imagine, it is going on, going on, and the switch cannot be go, and the power also does not go. Imagine you go round and round, and you cannot do anything.

So if you cannot switch off the cycle, the only way is what? Jump out of the cycle, let it continue, you come out of it. Similarly, Prakṛti cannot be stopped; I transcend Prakṛti, like waking up from dream. And therefore, ātmanam akarthāram paśyathi.

तत्त्ववित् तु महाबाहो गुणकर्मविभागयोः।
गुणा गुणेषु वर्तन्त इति मत्वा न सज्जते ॥ ३.२८ ॥

[tattvavit tu mahābāhō guṇakarmavibhāgayōḥ |
guṇa guṇēṣu vartanta iti matvā na sajjatē || 3.28 ||](#)

Prakṛti will continue. Let me now identify with that. Of course this verse should be carefully understood. It should not be misunderstood and abused. Suppose a person argues, this is a very very convenient ślōka. So you do all the akramams and say that prakṛtyaiva ca karmāṇi kriyamāṇāni sarvaśaḥ. Aham the ātma is the akartā, abhōkhtā, etc. everything is done by the body. Imagine a criminal who is tried in the court and the judge passes a verdict and therefore 7 years RI. Sukh Ram might have become Duḥkha Ram. So 7 years RI or something verdict was passed and that criminal quotes this Gīta verse. Prakṛtyaiva ca karmāṇi kriyamāṇāni, Oh Judge, the body does all the karmas, I the ātma does not do any karma at all, why are you giving me RI. What will judge the say: My dear, I am not imprisoning you. In fact, I cannot imprison you because you are the all-pervading ātma, which cannot accommodated in a prison. In fact, all prisons are existing in you; I am not imprisoning you, because you are akartā and abhōkta; you said body only did all the crimes and therefore I am only imprisoning the body. Dhāniki Dhāniki śaripōyindhi.

So therefore: remember Vēdānta should never be used for promoting adharma. Whenever we feel like supporting adharma through vēdānta, it means we have not assimilated vēdānta properly. If vēdānta is correctly assimilated, it will promote dharma. In fact Vēdānta is the best method of promoting dharma. So whether I have assimilated vēdānta properly or not, how do I know? If vēdānta promotes dharma in my life, dharma means what, ethical life it should promote, if it is supporting adharma, the best thing is keep aside the vēdānta for some time; follow dharma śāśtra after studying it properly and therefore vēdānta is not for abuse. This should not be misinterpreted. Thus what is the third benefit of ātma jñānam? Akartṛtva prāpṭhi. Discovering the fact that I am akartā.

यदा भूतपृथग्भावमेकस्थमनुपश्यति।
तत एव च विस्तारं ब्रह्म सम्पद्यते तदा ॥ १३.३१ ॥

[yadā bhūtapṛthagbhāvamēkasthamanupaśyati |
tata ēva ca vistāraṁ brahma sampadyatē tadā || 13.31 ||](#)

यदा yadā when अनुपश्यति anupaśyati one sees भूतपृथग्भावम् bhūtapṛthagbhāvam the diversity of beings, एकस्थम् ēkastham to be based on the one (Self), च विस्तारम् ca vistāram and (their) origination ततः एव tataḥ ēva to be from that (Self) alone, तदा tadā then सम्पद्यते ब्रह्म sampadyāte brahma one becomes Brahman

31. When one sees the diversity of beings to be based on the one (Self) and (their) origination to be from that (Self) alone then, one becomes Brahman.

So this is a deeper and significant verse wherein several steps of vēdāntic understanding are hidden. The understanding of ātma has to grow through several stages. And to understand those several stages, we will first take the example of ākāśa or space. Initially, I do not understand space at all, because it is too intangible, invisible. Generally we think space is emptiness and nothingness and therefore we take space for granted. So first I should learn, that this hall, for example, or any enclosure for that matter, has got space within. So when I am looking into a hall, there are two things; not hall alone, but the hall with space inside. When space alone is there, generally we think, we say there is nothing. It is not nothing, space is not nothingness but it is a positive substance. Even scientifically space is not emptiness or nothingness, it is a positive substance; a subtle substance. முதலில் என்ன புரிஞிக்கிறேன்? What I understand first. There is space inside.

Then later I understand that space is not only within this hall, but the space is inside all the enclosures; big halls, small halls, or even a vessel or our own stomach; all space is there. That is the next stage. Space is not only within one hall, but in all enclosures, next stage.

Then the next stage I understand is that even though halls are many and varied, the space within is not many and varied; space is one and the same within every hall. The halls are different but space is not different. This is the next stage.

Then the next stage I go through is, not only there is one space inside all the halls, but there is space outside the halls also. Space is not only within every hall, but the space is outside; both inside and outside.

Thereafter the next stage is (it seems there is no end), really speaking, space is not inside and outside the hall; that is not the right expression; there is only one space, in which all the halls are resting. So space is not in the hall; but it is the reverse; halls are within spaces (you should not say 'spaces'). I will say that there is space within. Therefore space is only one. Within one space, all the halls exist. So space is the stithi kāraṇam of all the halls. That is the next stage.

And then the final stage is what? Space is not only the stithi kāraṇam, means what, the support for the existence of all the halls, according to śāstra, all the things in the creation are even born out of space alone. ākāśāth (Taittiriya, do you remember). ākāśāth vāyu, from ākāśa is vāyu, vāyōr Agni , agnē āpaḥ, adhyā pṛithvi. pṛithviyām oṣadāya. From the so called empty space alone, everything is born, and in the space alone, all of them survive and into that space alone, all of them resolve.

See how many stages we have seen. First we said that there is the hall and space. Then space is in every hall. Then space is the same in every hall; thereafter space is not only inside the hall but outside also. Then really speaking space is not inside; all the halls are in the space. And finally what we said; Space is the one which holds all the halls and space is the one from which all of them are born and into all of them resolve.

If you understand in space, you have to extend to the consciousness. So space should be equated to consciousness and hall should be equated to the body. After all these steps one has to go through. What is that? Within the body there is consciousness.

Then what is the next stage? Consciousness is not only in my body but also in every body.

Then what is the next stage. Even though the bodies are many and varied, consciousness behind all the bodies is one and the same.

Then what is the next stage. Consciousness is not only within the body, but consciousness is outside the body also.

Then what is the next stage? Really speaking, consciousness is not inside the body; then all the bodies are resting in one consciousness.

And then the final stage is not only all the bodies are resting in that consciousness, they are all born out of that consciousness; rests in that consciousness, resolves in that consciousness and that consciousness I am.

If you can tell this, you can say, Aham Brahma asmi. This is the essence of this verse. The details in the next class.

Hari Om

179 Chapter 13, Verses 31-35

ॐ

Up to the 24th verse of this chapter, Lord Kṛṣṇa dealt with the six topics that Arjuna wanted to know and from verse No.25 up to the end, Lord Kṛṣṇa winds up the present discourse by talking about jñāna-sādhana and jñāna-phalam. In three verses, 25, 26 and 27, the sādhana were talked about in the form of karma yōga, upāsana, vādānta vicāra, etc.

And now from the 28th verse onwards, the jñāna-phalam is being talked about. Of that, we have seen up to verse No.31; first phalam that was mentioned by Kṛṣṇa was sarvatra sama darśanam. Even though superficially, the sense organs continue to see the differences; the eye of wisdom sees the inherent non-duality. The inherent oneness behind this superficial duality, the jñāni sees and this very sama darśanam, saves him from strong rāga dvēṣa. Powerful rāga dvēṣa alone is the cause of saṁsāra. Rāga dvēṣa gets weakened because of the Sama darśanam. This is benefit No.1.

Then the second benefit mentioned was amṛtatva prāpthiḥ. When a person sees plurality and limitation, finitude and mortality are inevitable. When I see the variety of waves, certainly I will see the birth and death of the wave, mortality is my vision; but when I see the water behind the waves, from the standpoint of the water, there is neither birth nor death and therefore, ēkatva darśanam or sama darśanam leads to amṛtatva prāpthiḥ; that is the second phalam mentioned.

And the third phalam mentioned in the 30th verse is akartṛtva darśanam. Recognition of the fact that all the actions belong to the Prakṛti, the matter-principle only and I the Puruṣa who is the sākṣi behind the Prakṛti, who is the kṣētrajña behind the Kṣētram that I do not do any action. In my presence actions take place but myself am akartā. This akartṛtva prāpthi, freedom from the notion of doership is the third phalam. Sama darśanam, amṛtatva prāpthiḥ, akartṛtva prāpthi.

And then the fourth phalam which I introduced in the last class, in verse No.31 is brahmahva prāpthi. I recognise I am Brahman; the jagat-kāraṇam. The jagat adhiṣṭānam. And to assimilate this idea, in the scriptures self-knowledge is compared to waking up from a dream.

Imagine I am transacting in dream, when I am in dream identified with the dream body; I feel I am a small creature, located within dream time and dream space. And within the dream itself I see varieties of things and beings who are all capable of frightening me, giving me Rāga, dvēṣa, and I even run away from some of the dream objects. And I run towards some of the other dream objects; pravṛtti, nivṛtti, all of them are there. Therefore, when I am in dream, I feel that I am located within the dream world. I am a creature in the dream-world. But the moment I wake up, what is my discovery? I am not a member within the dream-world; on the other hand, the whole dream-world, including the dream-time; dream-space, dream-objects; dream-mountains, stars, my pravṛttiḥ, my nivṛtīḥ, everything is existing within me, the waker. As a dreamer, I am a creature within the dream, whereas as a waker, I am the creator of the dream.

A big reversal, the creature becomes the creator. And this conversion did not require any change at all; it only required waking up; which is nothing but dis-identifying with the dream body and claiming my waker nature. And therefore this reversal is not an impossible thing. What reversal? Reversal from creature to creator. Creature within the dream, to creator of the dream. Not only I am the creator of the dream, I am the one who sustains the dream. Not only sṛṣṭi kāraṇam, but sthithi kāraṇam and at the time of waking up, the whole dream-world resolves where? It resolves within my own mind. Not only dream-world, even dream-time and space are swallowed. I am not within the dream-time; On the other hand, dream-time is within me. I am not within the dream space; but the dream- space is within me. I am not a product within the dream-world, the dream-world itself is a product of my mind. But this we will nod our head wonderfully when it is dealing with dream. अत्र नन्ना इरुक्कु; That is good.

What vēdānta says is: This universe is also another channel of the dream and just as I convert myself from dream-creature to dream-creator, I can convert myself from the waking-world-creature to waking-world-creator and this conversion is accomplished by dis-identification from the body. Dis-identification from the dream body made me waker No.1. Dis-identification from this body will make me a higher waker. And as a higher waker, what do I claim? I am the consciousness-principle from whom, this world, this time, this space, including this body is born. Just as I create a special dream-body for myself for transacting in the dream world, this body is also created by me who am the original waker, which is called the consciousness-principle and therefore, I create this world along with time and space. I sustain this world along with time and space; and ultimately I resolve this world into what? Myself. This is revealed in the well-known Kaivalya upaniṣad mantra:

मयि सर्वं लयं याति तद्ब्रह्माद्वयमस्म्यहम् ॥ I.१९ ॥ Kaivalyya

mayyēva sakalaṁ jātaṁ mayi sarvaṁ pratiṣṭitam |
mayi sarvaṁ layaṁ yāti tadbrahmādvayamasmyaham || Kaivalyya I.19 ||

The waker is able to make this statement with regard to the dream creation. Jñāni is able to make this same statement with regard to this creation. What is this creation? Mayyēva sakalaṁ jātaṁ. Everything is born out of me. Which me? Not this miserable body. Body is a created thing. I am talking about the creator-consciousness- principle. And the day I am able to claim this glory. What glory? I am not a kāryam, but I am kāraṇam. I am not a creature, but the creator himself. Kṛṣṇa says, then and then alone, you can claim aham brahma asmi.

These are all wonderful verses giving you the sāram of the upaniṣads. Look at the slōkā. Bhūtapṛthagbhāvam ēkasthamanupaśyati. The wise person sees this following fact and how does he recognise this fact? Who helps him wake up? Just as for waking up from this dream; some parent mother or father has to wake up? Like that, the guru and the śāstram shakes me, Uthiṣṭatha, jāgratha, prāpyavarān nibhōdatā.

For how long are you going to sleep? For how long are you going to see the dreams? Wake up. Anupaśyati. Means what? Discovers this fact in keeping with the teaching of the śāstra. Anu; śāstra ācārya upadēśam anu. Supported by the teaching of Guru and śāstra, this wise person sees the fact. What fact? Bhūtapṛthagbhāvam, the existence of this manifold universe? Bhūta means what? The manifold things and beings, bhāva means existence, in whom? Ēkastham, to be located in one ātma, which is himself. ēkastham means ēkasmin ātmani mayi sthitham. So when the wise person recognises the fact that this pluralistic universe of things and beings is resting in me, the non-dual self.

That means what? I am sthithi kāraṇam and not only the sthithi kāraṇam, tata ēva ca vistāraṁ, vistāraṁ, means the origination, the emergence. Emergence of what? The pluralistic universe of things and beings. The emergence of the pluralistic universe of things and beings. To be from where? Thataha ēva. From the very same ātma. So in me alone the world rests, from me alone the world emerges. Just as we can say that the dream world rests in me, and the entire dream world emerges out of me. But the tragedy is what? The dream comes out of me; and the very same dream which I create becomes a nightmarish experience for myself. So it becomes a Frankenstein. I create something and my own creation becomes problem for me. Like some times our own children; Parāṁpara prāpṭham. We are the cause, the children are the effect and they themselves become headache for me, not always. Sometimes. Thus, this creation is my creation; now it is threatening me, frightening me. Tata ēva ca vistāraṁ means I am sṛṣṭi kāraṇam also.

So ēkastham indicates sthithi kāraṇam. Vistāraṁ, sṛṣṭi kāraṇam. What is left out which we have to supply? Laya kāraṇam also I am. Ithi yatha anupaśyathi. When I can make this statement, not merely verbally, but I can make this statement from my own inner heart. I can say it and mean it. When I can do that, then alone I can claim what? Aham brahma asmi.

So Kṛṣṇa says: tata, then and then alone, Brahma sampadyatē, jñāni has become one with his higher-nature. Just as the dreamer on waking up, has become one with what?

His own higher waker nature, fearless waker nature. Similarly, I have become one with Brahman, my own higher waker nature. Adriśyē, anātmyē, aniruddyē, anilayanē, abhayam prathiṣṭām vindathi. After waking up, dream is not a problem. In dream, dream is a problem. So what is the fourth benefit? Brahmahva prāp̥thi.

Verse 13.32

अनादित्वान्निर्गुणत्वात्परमात्मायमव्ययः |
शरीरस्थोऽपि कौन्तेय न करोति न लिप्यते || १३- ३२ ||

anāditvānirguṇatvāt paramātmā'yamavyayaḥ |
śārīrasthō'pi kauntēya na karōti na lipyatē || 13.32 |

अनादित्वात् anādhitvāt being birthless, निर्गुणत्वात् nirguṇatvāt and attributeless, अयं परमात्मा ayam paramātmā this Supreme Self अव्ययः avyayaḥ is changeless, अपि शरीरस्थः api śārīrasthaḥ though dwelling in the body, न करोति na karōti it neither acts न लिप्यते na lipyatē – nor affected कौन्तेय kauntēya Oh! Arjuna.

32. Being birthless and attributeless, this supreme Self is changeless. Though dwelling in the body, it neither acts nor is affected Oh! Arjuna.

I said that self-knowledge can be compared to waking up from dream. Even though there are many similarities between self-knowledge and waking up from dream, there is one major dissimilarity which we have to remember. So whenever we give an example, the example and the original will have many similarities; but we should remember the example and original will have dissimilarities also. If there is no dissimilarity at all, it will not be an example, it will be original.

So Jñānam is comparable to waking, but there is a small difference. What is that? When I wake up from dream, the dream totally disappears from my experience. When I wake up from dream, the dream-world physically disappears. But in the case of Self-knowledge, I do wake up from this dream alright; but even after waking up, for some time, this world continues to appear in front of me. In this respect, there is a difference between waking from the dream and waking up from ignorance.

And therefore Jñāni knows I am the kāraṇam and the world is my projection only but the world continues to appear and this state is called jīvan-mukthi and you can imagine that a person wakes up from dream and continues to have the dream. Imagine. It is not like that. Imagine the dream world continues. But somehow you have known that this is a dream, you come to know. Thereafter the dream continues. What will happen? You will enjoy the glory of the dream, but you will not be frightened; because of the dream-ness of the dream is known to you.

Similarly, the jñāni continues to live in the world, continues to be in the body also, but he has the knowledge that the body is like dream and I am like the waker, and whatever gain and loss in dream, will not make any difference for the waker; money loss, money gain, all those things will not make any difference. Similarly, gain and loss in this world also, will not make any difference for me, who is the waker, who has the higher-nature.

And therefore, Kṛṣṇa says here, ayam paramātmā avyayaḥ. I the ātma my own higher-nature of consciousness is avyayaḥ is not subject to any change. Nirvikāraḥ. Just as the waker is not wet by the dream rain; not burned by the dream fire, not wounded by the dream-tiger biting; whatever happens in the dream world, the waker is not affected. Similarly, I the paramātmā avyayaḥ. And what is the reason? Anādithvāt. Because the ātma is without a beginning. Janma rahitavāt.

And you should remember Tatva Bōdha; Janma is one of the six modifications; asthi, jāyathē, vardhathē, viparinamathē, apakiṣyathē, vinaśyathē. Birth is one of the six modifications. If birth modification is not there, all the other modifications are also not there. And therefore, ātma is avyayaḥ. Avyayaḥ means nirvikāra. śad vikāra rahitha.

And nirguṇatvāt. And since ātma is attributeless, there is no attribute-wise modification also. Modification is twofold. When milk becomes curd, the modification is substance modification; substantial modification; the milk-substance itself has undergone a change. So this is called substantial change. When you are making ornaments out of gold, when gold becomes a bangle, there is no change in the substance. If there is change in substance, nobody will give the gold for making ornaments. So when gold becomes ornaments, what type of change takes place; not substantial change; substance is the change; but the change is only in the superficial form or an attribute.

Thus change is two-fold; substantial and attribute change. Ātma does not have both changes. Being birthless, it does not have substantial-change; being attributeless, it does not have attribute-change. Attribute இருந்தால் தானே, change ஆகறத்துக்கு? For change, some attribute should be there, is it not? So when it is Nirguṇam, how can there be change in the attribute of the ātma. Therefore, it is absolutely changeless.

And this ātma śarīrasthaḥ api. Even after up waking up and knowing that I am the ātma, I continue to be in the body, In the body also, śarīrasthaḥ.

But what is the advantage; na karōti na lipyatē. Ātma remains akartā; free from actions; and na lipyatē. Continues to be abhōkta, without the phalam. The śarīram has got action and results, mind has got action and results, but ātma does not have karma or phalam.

And therefore, what is the next benefit of ātma jñānam? I know that I am abhōkta. Akartā we have talked about earlier. We are now adding abhōkta. I have akartṛtvaṁ, and abhōkṛtvaṁ.

And remember, saṁsāra is defined as kartṛtva and bhōkṛtvaṁ tvam only; doership and enjoyership is saṁsāra; ātma is free from both.

Verse 13.33

यथा सर्वगतं सौक्ष्म्यादाकाशं नोपलिप्यते |
सर्वत्रावस्थितो देहे तथात्मा नोपलिप्यते || १३- ३३ ||

yathā sarvagataṁ saukṣmyādākāśaṁ nōpalipyatē |
sarvatrāvasthitō dēhē tathātmā nōpalipyatē || 13.33 ||

यथा yathā just as, सर्वगताम् आकाशम् sarvagatām ākāśam the all-pervading space न उपलिप्यते na upalipyatē is not affected सौक्ष्म्यात् saukṣmyāt due to its subtlety, तथा tathā so also, आत्मा ātmā the Self, अवस्थितः avasthitaḥ which is present सर्वत्र देहे sarvatra dēhē in everybody न उपलिप्यते na upalipyatē is not affected

33. Just as the all-pervading space is not affected due to its subtlety, so also, the Self, which is present in everybody, is not affected.

In the previous verse Lord Kṛṣṇa said, ātma is associated with everything; but not affected by anything. So this is called immanence and transcendence. Immanence means it is associated with everything and transcendence means what, it is not affected by anything. Just as the screen of the movie is associated with every object in the movies; so when there is the lac-bungalow show in the Mahabhāratham, the screen is intimately associated with the fire, but it is not burned. Similarly, when it is a titanic movie, the water is all over; screen is intimately associated with the water, but it not wet by water. Otherwise, after every show, they have to dry the screen with a dryer. They do not do it. Its pervasion is called immanence but remaining untainted is called transcendence. Antharyamithvē sathi asaṅgathvam.

And to assimilate this idea; which idea? Ātma is associated with all, but not affected by any; Kṛṣṇa wants to give two examples: most well-known example; very widely quoted in the Upaniṣad. Kṛṣṇa borrows from the Upaniṣads, one example is ākāśa, another example is prakāśa. Ākāśa means space and remember space is not emptiness, but it is the subtlest form of matter. Space is not nothingness or emptiness, it is the subtlest form of matter. Space is one example, and prakāśa, the light is another example.

Space and ātma have got several common features. That is why it is an ideal example. What are some of the common features?

Ēkathvam. Both are only one. Ātma Ēkaḥ. ākāśaḥ Ēkaḥ.

Sarva vyapakathviam. Ātma is all-pervading. Ākāśaḥ is all-pervading.

Acalatvam - Being all pervading, ātma cannot move from one place to another, ākāśaḥ cannot also move. ஆகாசம் மும்பாய் போயிட்டு வருமோ? Your body can go. You cannot go.

Ēkathvam; Sarva vyāpakathvam; Acalatvam; Nirvikāratvam. Ākāśaḥ remains the same. It does not get older or younger. It does not get out of shape; all these are for objects in ākāśaḥ, ākāśaḥ itself is Nirvikāra, ātma is also nirvikāra.

Akhandatvam. Ātma is part-less. Khandā means part. Ākāśaḥ also does not have part. Ākāśaḥ is indivisible and ākāśaḥ and ātma are asaṅgaḥ. This is the main thing Kṛṣṇa is going to talk. Ākāśaḥ is associated with everything but ākāśaḥ is not polluted; is not tainted by either the good qualities or the bad qualities; ākāśaḥ does not become turbid; it does not become fragrant or foul smelling; asaṅgatvam.

And finally to conclude; ākāśaḥ is sarva ādhāratvam. It accommodates, supports everything. The whole cosmos is located in ākāśaḥ, therefore ākāśaḥ is viśvādhāram, and Bhagavān is also; ātma is ALSO viśvādhāram. That is why in Viṣṇu Sahasranāma, after viśvādhāram, what comes; gaganasadr̥śam. gaganam, means ākāśaḥ. And therefore, ātma is like ākāśaḥ. Ātma is not ākāśaḥ being, ākāśaḥ is jaḍa m, acētana tatvam; whereas ātma is cētana tatvam; therefore it is only comparable to ākāśam. In next week in Taitariya Class, we will see in meditation, ākāśaḥ dhyānam.

And one more, Sūkṣmatvam. Ākāśaḥ cannot be easily comprehended intellectually. That is why scientists had confusion in determining the nature of ākāśaḥ. Some time they thought that it is emptiness; for some time, they thought that it is ether; they postulated that even now, I do not know whether Scientists clearly know what space is: Therefore it is not easily comprehensible, you cannot see; you cannot hear it; you cannot touch ākāśaḥ; see ākāśaḥ, but somehow you conceive of ākāśaḥ. Therefore Sūkṣmatvam is another common feature between ākāśaḥ and ātma.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa gives this example: sarvagatām ākāśam na upalipyatē. All pervading space is not affected by anything. Because of what: saukṣmyatvāt. Because of its extremely subtle nature; Fine nature; minute nature; it is not affected by anything; tatha.

In the same way; ātma na upalipyatē. The ātma also is not tainted by polluted by anything.

Sarvatra dēhē avasthitaḥ. Even though it is associated with everybody. Body may be fat; but ātma is not fat; you need not slim the ātma. Ātma is not lean; mind may have rāga dvēṣa kāma krōdha, but ātma does not have: na mē dvēṣarāgau na mē lōbhamōhau. So thus ātma is comparable to ākāśaḥ.

Then the next example.

Verse 13.34

यथा प्रकाशयत्येकः कृत्स्नं लोकमिमं रविः |
क्षेत्रं क्षेत्री तथा कृत्स्नं प्रकाशयति भारत || १३- ३४ ||

yathā prakāśayatyēkaḥ kṛtsnaṁ lōkamimam raviḥ |
kṣētram kṣētrī tathā kṛtsnaṁ prakāśayati bhārata || 13.34||

यथा yathā just as एकः रविः ēkaḥ raviḥ one sun प्रकाशयति prakāśayati illuminates, इमं कृत्स्नं लोकम् imam kṛtsnaṁ lōkam this entire world, तथा tathā so also, क्षेत्री kṣētrī, the kṣētrajñā प्रकाशयति prakāśayati illuminate, कृत्स्नं क्षेत्रम् kṛtsnaṁ kṣētram the entire kṣētram भारत bhārata Oh! Bharata (Arjuna)

34. Just as one Sun illumines the entire world, so also does the Kṣētrajñā illumines the entire kṣētram, O Arjuna.

The second example is sūrya prakāśaḥ. The sun light. Not the soap! OK. So sunlight and I am not talking about the Sun also; Sun is thing located at 9 crores miles away; we are not talking about the source of the light; but we are talking about the sunlight, the formless light which pervades the entire earth during daytime. And ātma is comparable to the sunlight. And here also you can find several common features; many of them similar to the ākāśaḥ example.

So here also Ēkathvam Sunlight is only One, because there is only one Sun. Do not say stars are there; from the solar system angle; and here also sarvagatatvam, the sunlight pervades the entire earth, at least relatively, and acalatvam; sunlight does not move because it is already everywhere, Nirvikāratvam, the light does not undergo any change at all when I move the hand; light is not moving or changing.

And similarly, asaṅgatvam, the light does not get polluted, even when it falls on my hand. Light falls on my hand but light does not get dirty.

Similarly, akhandavtham; light is partless. If light has got part, when there is no current in your house, what you can do, a chunk of light you can cut and take home. But cannot cut; acchēdyah, adāhyaḥ, aklēdyah, a'sōṣyah.

And finally, the light illumines everything and like the light, ātma also illumines. Illumines means what? Makes everything known, because of consciousness alone, things are known or illumined; without consciousness, if matter alone is there; in the universe, there will be nobody to know anything. Imagine, without us being present, things like, light fan, etc. are there. Who is conscious of whom?

There is no subject object relationship at all. Subject can come only when consciousness comes and therefore consciousness is the illuminator of everything like the Sun.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa says here, ēkaḥ raviḥ, one sun or sunlight, imaṁ kṛtsnaṁ lōkam prakāśayati; illumines this entire universe but without getting polluted by that.

And similarly sūkṣmathvam, the light also cannot be touched by me; light is here; I cannot touch it; you cannot taste it; light cannot be smelled; you cannot hear the light; in fact you cannot even see the light here. I have often told you when the light is there; without a reflecting medium, the light by itself is incomprehensible. So therefore light is what sūkṣmam. Similarly, ātma also cannot be touched, cannot be smelled; cannot be heard; cannot be seen; अप्पो इल्ले एण्णु सोल्लपपडात्तु; Therefore you cannot say that it is not there; since I cannot touch the ātma, therefore ātma is not there; one cannot tell that way; since I cannot touch the light, you cannot say that light is not there; you cannot say that: light is there; even though intangibly. Similarly,

अशब्दमस्पर्शमरूपमव्ययं
तथाऽरसं नित्यमगन्धवच्च यत् ।
अनाद्यनन्तं महतः परं ध्रुवं
निचाय्य तन्मृत्युमुखात् प्रमुच्यते ॥ Part I. Canto III. १५॥

aśabdamasparśamarūpavyayaṁ
tathā:'rasaṁ nityamagandhavacca yat | anādyanantaṁ mahataḥ paraṁ dhruvaṁ nicāyya tanmṛtyumukhāt pramucyātē || Part I. Canto III. 15 | |

This is the definition of ātma given by Kathōpaniṣad. Therefore, previous slōkā compared ātma to ākāśaḥ, this slōkā compared ātma to prakāśaḥ.

And that ātma I am; and therefore, what is my knowledge. I am like ākāśaḥ and I am like prakāśaḥ. This is an aide for meditation. So thus, two brilliant examples Kṛṣṇa gave. They are not original examples of Kṛṣṇa; they are humbly-simply borrowed from the upaniṣad; in Kathōpaniṣad,

सूर्यो यथा सर्वलोकस्य चक्षुः
न लिप्यते चाक्षुषैर्बाह्यदोषैः ।
एकस्तथा सर्वभूतान्तरात्मा
न लिप्यते लोकदुःखेन बाह्यः ॥ Part II. Kanto 2. 22 ॥

sūryō yathā sarvalōkasya cakṣuḥ na lipyatē cākṣuṣairbāhyadōṣaiḥ | ēkastathā sarvabhūtāntarātmā
na lipyatē lōkaduḥkhēna bāhyaḥ ||Part II. Kanto.2. 11||

Kathōpaniṣad has given that example. That is borrowed.

Now Kṛṣṇa concludes in the 35th verse.

Verse 13.35

क्षेत्रक्षेत्रज्ञयोरेवमन्तरं ज्ञानचक्षुषा |
भूतप्रकृतिमोक्षं च ये विदुर्यान्ति ते परम् || १३- ३५ ||

kṣētrakṣētrajñāyōrēvam antaram jñānacakṣuṣā |
bhūtaprakṛtimōkṣam ca yē viduryānti tē param || 13.35 ||

35. With the eye of knowledge, those who know thus the distinction between the kṣētram and the kṣētrajñā, as well as the absence of prakṛiti which is the cause of beings attain the supreme.

So the final benefit of this knowledge is given here in the form of mōkṣa itself. Freedom. Freedom for whom; the one who has got the discrimination between Kṣētra and Kṣētrajñā. kṣētrakṣētrajñāyōḥ antaram ēvam viduḥ; the wise people recognise the difference between Kṣētra and Kṣētrajñā; or to put in another language, the difference between Puruṣa and Prakṛti; or to put in English, the difference between consciousness and matter. The difference between consciousness and matter. The wise people recognise. How do they see the difference? Jñāna cakṣusa. With the penetrating discerning eye of wisdom. So the sense organs cannot differentiate. Just as I cannot differentiate the electricity and fan by this eye, but the differentiation is in terms of my understanding. The light and hand are not physically separated, but intellectually you know the difference between the light and hand. Similarly, brain and consciousness; they are not one and the same; brain is matter; consciousness is a separate principle. The one who knows the difference and what are the differences? We saw four differences:

One is cētanam, another is acētanam; sentient; and insentient; one is nirguṇam another is saguṇam; one is attributeless; the other is attributed; one is means which one; consciousness is attributeless; matter is attributed. Nirvikāram-Savikāram, Consciousness is changeless; matter is ever changing.

And Kṛṣṇa wants to emphasise the fourth difference in this slōka, which is the most important and technical difference. Do you remember the fourth difference? Cētanam-acētanam, nirguṇam-saguṇam, Nirvikāram-Savikāram. Then? Sathyam, and mithya. Consciousness alone exists independently, matter cannot exist independently. So consciousness has got intrinsic existence; matter has got only borrowed existence. Just as the screen exists independent of the movie; but movie characters cannot exist, independent of the screen. If screen goes, movie characters cannot be there, movie characters goes, screen will be there. Interval we see the screen, is'nt. Similarly I the consciousness exist independently; the whole world is like a movie running in me and just as movie cannot taint the screen, the mithya prapañca cannot affect I, the sathya Puruṣa.

Therefore, bhūtaprakṛtimōkṣaṁ ca. So here mōkṣaṁ refers to mithyathvam. Very careful. Very misleading mōkṣa means the absence of real existence. Mōkṣa, absence of real existence; That means it has got only borrowed existence; like the dream or movie.

So mithyathvam of what? Puruṣa or Prakṛti? ராமயணம் எல்லாம் கேட்டு, கடசிலே ராமனுக்கு ஸீதை யாருன்னு கேக்கறமாதிரி; mithyathvam of what: bhūtaprakṛti. The mithyathvam of Prakṛti as well as the other inert things and beings. So bhūtaprakṛti mōkṣaṁ cha. The mithyathvam of matter, which indirectly includes the satyathvam of consciousness.

tē yē viduḥ. Those who recognise aham sathyam jagan mithya. And therefore world cannot touch me.

iti yē viduḥ tē param yānti. They alone attain freedom from the fear of the world. That is called jivan mukthiḥ, they attain. Param means mōkṣa. This is the final benefit of self-knowledge.

With this Kṛṣṇa concludes jñāna phalam topic also.

ॐ तत्सत् इति श्रीमद्भगवद्गीतासूपनिषत्सु ब्रह्मविद्यायां योगशास्त्रे श्रीकृष्णार्जुनसंवादे क्षेत्रक्षेत्रज्ञविभागयोगो नाम त्रयोदशोऽध्यायः ॥

Thus ends the thirteenth chapter called kṣētra kṣētrajña vibhāga yōga or Prakṛti Puruṣa yōga.

180 Chapter 13, Summary

ॐ

Today I will give you a summary of the 13th chapter. I had pointed out that the thirteenth chapter is the beginning of the 3rd śatkaṃ of the Gīta, the third group of the six chapters. In the first śatkaṃ consisting of the first six chapters, Lord Kṛṣṇa highlighted karma-yōga sādhana; while in the 2nd śatkaṃ, the 2nd group for six chapters beginning from the 7th chapter up to the 12th chapter, Kṛṣṇa highlighted upāsana Yōga and now in the third and final śatkaṃ, beginning from the thirteenth is going to highlight Jñāna-Yōga. And especially in the three chapters, thirteen, fourteen and fifteen, Kṛṣṇa brings out the essence contained in all the Upaniṣads, and therefore all these three chapters are important and among them also, the thirteenth chapter is considered to be very important from philosophical angle.

The entire Upaniṣad sāra is given in this chapter and this chapter, like most of the other chapters, begins with a question from Arjuna which is given in some Gīta books. In certain Gīta books, this question is not there; but we can supply the question because it is useful and in this question found in the first verse, Arjuna asked for clarification regarding six technical terms, occurring in the śāstra.

एतद्वेदितुमिच्छामि ज्ञानं ज्ञेयं च केशव ॥१३.१॥

[prakṛtiṃ puruṣaṃ caiva kṣētraṃ kṣētrajñamēva ca |
ēadvēditumicchāmi jñānaṃ jñēyaṃ ca kēśava ||13.1||](#)

Prakṛti, Puruṣa, Kṣētra, Kṣētrajña, Jñānam and jñēya. ēadvēditumicchāmi. Six topics only. And on scrutiny, we find that even though six topics are mentioned by Arjuna, really speaking, they can be reduced to three topics. Because some of the topics repetition.

What are the repetitions? The word Kṣētrajña, the word Puruṣa and the word jñēyam; all these three talk about the same principle. Kṣētrajña, Puruṣa, and jñēyam. And all these three we can refer by the general term ātma. So Kṣētrajña is equal to Puruṣa, is equal to jñēya, is equal to ātma. So three we have reduced into one.

Similarly, the word Kṣētram, and Prakṛti are two words implying the same topic. We can refer to it as anātma. So Kṣētram is equal to prakṛti is equal to anātma.

Therefore, three topics we have reduced into one, two topics we have reduced into one, put together 5 topics, we have reduced into two.

So, thus ātma is one topic; anātma is another topic. Then the 6th and final topic that Arjuna wants to know is jñānam. And this jñānam should be separately taken because it does not come under ātma, it does not come under anātma also; therefore jñānam should be taken as separate topic. Thus 6 topics can be reduced into three; ātma, anātma, and jñānam.

Now these 6 topics are to put in our present language; 3 topics, ātma, anātma and jñānam, Lord Kṛṣṇa discusses from the second verse up to the 24th verse; Verse No.2 to verse No.24, Kṛṣṇa gives these three topics; ātma, anātma, and jñānam.

Now we will briefly see what is Kṛṣṇa's description? First I will take up the word anātma, which is equivalent, which two words, Kṣētram and Prakṛti put together, we are referring together as anātma.

And what is anātma as revealed by Kṛṣṇa here. Kṛṣṇa says whatever I experience; whatever I experience in front of me, whatever dṛśya padārtha is there, will come under anātma. In Sānskrīt, we use the word dṛśyam, in English we can translate it as, as anything experienced is anātma. Then what all things will fall under this anātma. The entire universe will fall under anātma, because it is an object of experience. It is an object of experience. It may not be an object in the present, which can become an object of experience. So any objectifiable thing is called anātma. Even the heavens will come under anātma; because even though I do not objectify the heavens now; if I gather sufficient puṇyam and go there, then the heavens will become objectifiable. And therefore, we do not say what is objectified. We say what is objectifiable, whatever is experiencable, is anātma; therefore the world is anātma.

And then Kṛṣṇa points out that the very body comes under the object of experience, because I am able to intimately experience the conditions of the body and therefore the body also will come under anātma.

And coming further closer, even the mind is an object of experience, because I am able to intimately feel and know the conditions of my mind; which includes the intellectual conditions also. And therefore, the mind also comes under anātma.

And therefore, putting them together, the world plus the body plus the mind along with all their conditions put together is called anātma.

And what is the nature of this anātma? If you analyse, the nature of this anātma is: No.1, it is acētana svarūpam; it is jaḍa m, material in nature; so the entire drśya prapañca, the anātma is made up of matter and therefore, it is inert in nature. Even though, the body seems to be sentient; according to the scriptures, the sentiency of the body is not intrinsic or natural sentiency but it is borrowed; and that is why at the time of death, this sentient body becomes insentient; indicating that sentiency is not the intrinsic nature. So therefore, body even though seemingly cētanam, body is also naturally acētanam, and extending that Kṛṣṇa says, the mind also is material; only it is made up of subtle matter, and therefore mind is also intrinsically acētanam. So therefore world plus body plus mind is equal to anātma, and this anātma is acētanam; that is its first feature.

And its second feature is this anātma is full of attributes or saguṇam endowed with varieties of properties, varieties of attributes. So it is acētanam, it is saguṇam, and finally, this entire anātma is subject to constant fluctuations or modifications. So it is savikāram in nature, it does not remain the same even for one moment. Within one moment and the other, everything has undergone a change. And therefore anātma is acētanam and anātma is saguṇam and anātma is savikāram.

And because of its changing nature, it will not remain in this visible condition all the time. Because of its changing nature, it will broadly go through two conditions; one is called the manifest visible condition; in Sānskrīt called kārya-avastha, vyaktha avastha, vyaktham means manifest or visible condition.

and very same thing will at the time of destruction it will go back to kāraṇa avasthya, avyaktha avastha.

Just as when you boil the water, the visible water is gone but you know the water is not destroyed; but what has happened to water? The visible vyaktha-jalam has become avyaktha vapour. Similarly, this cosmos also has got vyaktha avastha called prapañca and it has got an avyaktha avastha, when you call it māya. Therefore, maaya is also an unmanifest form of matter only.

So manifest matter is called universe; unmanifest matter is called māya. So therefore, māya or the universe, including the body, including the mind, all of them come under what? Anātma; which is acētanam, saguṇa, savikāra-tatvam. So this is the description of anātma.

Then we have to go to the description of the next topic, viz., ātma. And the word ātma refers to three things in the 13th chapter. What are those three? The word ātma includes three names, Kṣētrajña, Puruṣa and the jñēyam; all these three can be referred to by the word ātma.

Now the question is what is that ātma? Kṛṣṇa says if the whole universe falls under dṛśya prapañca and object of experience, an experienced-universe; then an experienced-universe presupposes the presence of..... fill up blanks. The experienced-universe, presupposes the presence of what? An experiencer-subject. Without the experiencer-subject, the experienced-object is never possible.

And therefore, every object presupposes the existence of a subject and the unfortunate fact is this subject can never become, what? An object. So object is never possible without the subject and the subject is never available for objectification. Remember the example I gave. If I am seeing different colours and forms in front of me, the perception of every form, the perception of every colour, presupposes the existence of the eyes, but the unfortunate fact is what? The eyes themselves are not perceivable. But even though the eyes are not perceivable, I can never doubt the existence of the eyes, because the very perception is possible because of the perceiver alone. Thus, extending this principle, we can say, all the experienced-object proves the existence of the experiencer; but the experiencer himself cannot become an object of experience.

And this unobjectifiable experiencer principle is called ātma. The unobjectifiable experiencer is called Ātma. And since ātma is the unobjectifiable-experiencing-principle, it will be cētana or acētana? You do not require a Phd to answer this question. The experiencing principle has to be necessarily a cētana-tatvam. If, every dṛśyam is acētana, the dṛk has to be cētana. If every object is acētana, the subject has to be what? Consciousness-principle only. And who is that experiencer principle. Who is experiencing the world? What will your answer? You will say. I myself am experiencing. And therefore ātma is I, the consciousness principle, which objectifies everything but which itself is not available for objectification. This is the ātma.

Now the question is, what are the features of this ātma tatvam, the caitnam tatvam. We saw the features of anātma? What is it? Acētana, saṁguṇa, savikāra. Like that, what are the features of I, the ātma, the consciousness principle. Then as an answer, we have to remember the five points I have repeated several times. What are those five?

I, the observer consciousness-principle who objectifies the body and mind, that I, the consciousness, am not a part of the body, not a product of the body; not even a property of the body. So I the consciousness and neither a part, nor a product, nor an attribute or property of the body. I prefer the word property, because, one can remember easily, P P P. part, product, property.

Then the second point I would like you to remember is: I, the consciousness, am an independent entity, who pervade and enlivens the inert body. Because we have said body is inert, I, the independent consciousness-principle pervade and enliven; just as the electricity, the independent principle pervades and enlivens the fan.

Then what is the third point? We said: I, the consciousness principle, am not limited by the boundaries of the body. Just as electricity is not located in the fan alone; similarly, I, the consciousness, am not limited by the boundaries of the body, which means I the ātma is all-pervading. In fact, one of the meaning of the word ātma is all-pervading.

The word ātma in Sānskrīt is derived from four different roots and one root out of which the word ātma is derived is āp to pervade. Not the Hindi āp. Sānskrīt. Āpnōti, sarvatra vyapnōti iti ātma. And therefore what is the third point; I, the observer consciousness, pervade everywhere. The limitations and location belongs to the body which is an object of consciousness but the subject-consciousness, am not located. So, therefore, I am all pervading.

Then what is the next point, we had seen. That I the consciousness principle, will continue to exist even when the body, the manifesting medium collapses or dies; I will survive and therefore, mortality is a feature of the body; but not of me, the consciousness pervading the body. So I am sarvagataḥ, I am nityaḥ; ātma sarvagataḥ, ātma Nityaḥ.

And fifthly and finally, we had seen (we have to remember in this context) what is that? If the body-medium dies, I, the consciousness will continue to survive, but that I, will not be available for transaction; not because 'I am absent' but because the medium for transaction is not there. It is exactly as it happens in deep-sleep state; the body is not functioning, resting; the mind is not functioning, resting; transactions have ended; but I have not ended. While sleeping, whether the transactions are ending, or I am ending? Thank God, only the transactions are ending and not I, the transactor, continue to survive.

And that I is the ātma, the cētana tatvam and to conceive of this consciousness principle, Kṛṣṇa gives two beautiful examples later, which we can remember in this context. What are the two examples; consciousness is comparable to ākāśa, the space-principle, is comparable to the Prakāśaḥ-tatvam. 2 kāśa. Ākāśa and Prakāśa.

And that means what? If you want to conceive of consciousness, we have to see the features of these two examples. Then we will get a nearer picture. And what are the features in these two.

Both are ēkam. Ākāśa is one. Sūrya Prakāśa is one. Kṛṣṇa says consciousness is also one. Ēkatvam.

And then, Ākāśaḥ is acalam; Ākāśaḥ cannot move from place to place; everything moves in Ākāśaḥ but Ākāśaḥ itself does not move. Suppose this hall Ākāśaḥ moves? What will happen? We will be flying? Similarly, Surya Prakāśa also. Even this Prakāśa in the hall, the light, does not move. My hand moves in light, but the light itself does not move. Exactly like that consciousness-principle itself is acalam. Nithya sarva gatha sthānu acalōyam sanatham. Like Ākāśaḥ and Prakāśa, ātma is acalam.

Next feature is akandhaḥ. Space is indivisible. You cannot apportion space. The earth can be divided. Water can be divided and we have quarrels also between Karṇātaka and Tamil Nadu, but the space itself cannot be divided. Similarly, Prakāśa also cannot be cut and therefore both of them are akhanda. Similarly ātma the caitanyam is akhandam. So acalam, it is akhandam, it is Ēkam.

Next, akāśh is asaṅgam. Space is everywhere but it is never contaminated by anything. Space is uncontaminable or uncontaminatable. It is unpollutable. Water can be polluted; earth can be polluted; everything else can be polluted; vāyu can be polluted; not space. Similarly Prakāśa, the light is also asaṅgaḥ. It cannot be contaminated by anything. Śankarācārya says whether the light falls on dirty coovam water or gaṅga water, the light cannot be polluted by the dirty water. And therefore asaṅgatvam is the next feature.

And Ākāśaḥ is sarvādharam. It is the support of everything and similarly, consciousness is the support of matter. Not vice versa. We think matter is supporting is consciousness but Kṛṣṇa says, it is not so. Consciousness is not located in brain. All the brains are located in one all-pervading consciousness. And if it becomes a dead brain, Einstein's brain is preserved it seems; not because consciousness has departed or gone away; what has happened is that the capacity of the brain to manifest the consciousness is lost. The medium has lost the capacity like a fused bulb; power is very much there; but the bulb has become fused. If there is any doubt, touch and you get instant realisation!

So therefore, it is not the absence of electricity but absence of a functioning medium which can manifest. And therefore consciousness is sarva ādhara like Ākāśaḥ and finally, consciousness like the Surya Prakāśa, the light of the Sun, it illumines everything, because of the presence of consciousness alone; things are known; and therefore, sarva ādharaḥ and sarva Prakāśa, is that ātma and that ātma I am.

So this is called ātma-anātma vivēka-jñānam; discriminating between consciousness and matter and claiming that I am the consciousness-principle who am functioning through the body but I myself am not the body. So the medium comes, the medium goes, but I never come and go. So these are the features of ātma.

Anātma, ātma, two topics are over. According to 13th chapter, we have covered 5 topics. ātma means two and anātma means three; 2+3 FIVE.

Now lastly one more topic is left. What is that? Jñānam.

And we saw that the word jñānam in the 13th chapter has got a unique meaning and what is that? All those virtues which are required for gaining ātma jñānam. All virtues, sat gunaḥ, required for gaining ātma jñānam, the preparatory values or virtues. In short a dharmic way of life. This is how ethics and morality enter vēdānta śāstra. People ask the question, in vēdānta philosophy, is there any scope for ethics and morality, our answer is there is a scope; what is the scope. Only a mind which has ethics and morality; that mind alone can receive ātma jñānam. And without these values, twenty values are enumerated by Kṛṣṇa; without these values, one cannot understand vēdānta; and even if one understands vēdānta, it will become an academic knowledge. It will not transform my personality. Value plus study is equal to transformation. Study minus values, is equal to information.

So do you need information or transformation. The decision is yours. The difference is caused by the presence and absence of morals. And these values alone are generally presented in the vēdānta śāstras, as sādhana cathuṣṭaya sampathi. Four Ds. Discrimination, Dispassion, Discipline and Desire. D D D D.

Discrimination means the understanding that God alone can give Pūrṇatvam and security in life. Fullness or peace or security can come only from one source and that is nitya vastu, the Īśvara tatvam. And the world; however wonderful, beautiful it might be, you can experience it, enjoy it, you can possess it, you can handle it, but the world cannot give peace, security and Pūrṇatvam. This understanding is called Discrimination.

And what is Dispassion? Dispassion is after this understanding, changing the priorities of life; between God and World. Which one is primary and which one is subservient. With regard to this, I have to do some reshuffling and in that reshuffling, when world becomes subservient and secondary, that attitude is called dispassion,

And when God or Brahman or Nitya vastu becomes the top priority, it is called spiritual Desire. God as priority is called spiritual desire, world being lesser than that is dispassion. Remember not hatred, we do not prescribe hatred. But what we say prioritisation must be proper.

Then the fourth one is Discipline; the integration of the entire personality. Physical body, the 10 sense organs, organs of action and organs of knowledge, the mind, the intellect, all of them when they are disciplined and organised. And instead of I, becoming their slave, I become their master. Then I am the master of my sense organs; when I master of my mind, self-mastery; self-integration is called discipline; Discrimination, Dispassion; Desire and Discipline; these four are called sādhanā chathuṣṭayam.

These four alone have been expanded by Kṛṣṇa into 20 values. So 20 condensed is four. Four diluted is twenty. So in the summary, we will see four. The expansion we will see 20. That is what.

So sādhanā catuṣṭaya sampathi is here called jñānam. With this, all the six topics, Kṛṣṇa has covered. And this is from verse No.2 to 24.

Now from verse No.25 to 35, Kṛṣṇa wants to conclude his teaching by presenting jñāna sādhanāni and jñāna phalam. What are the stages that one should go through to attain this knowledge. And what is the phalam that I get out of this knowledge.

And Kṛṣṇa presents five stages to attain the knowledge. What are they? Karma-yōgaḥ, upāsanaṁ, śravaṇam, mananam, nidhidhyāsanam.

karma-yōga is the first stage to remove the impurities of the mind; mala nivṛtti or to attain purity.

The second stage is upāsanaṁ. That is meditation on Lord with attributes or form and the upāsana is to remove the restlessness of the mind; the extrovertedness of the mind; vikṣēpa nivṛtti, so that the mind becomes tranquil and focussed. This the second stage.

The third stage is śravaṇam, which is consistent, (do you remember), and systematic study of vēdāntic scriptures for a length of time, under the guidance of a competent ācārya. It is not a-day affair. It is for a length of time. That is why, many people say, after 6 years listening, now I think I am understanding your teaching better! Does not matter! So it requires soaking like the pickle. This is called śravaṇam, which removes ignorance. Ajñāna nivṛtti is the third.

And the 4th one is called mananam, after comprehensively studying Vēdānta I begin raising my doubt. During śravaṇam, doubts are not allowed; first you dump all the data; and having done śravaṇam for a length of time, then generally most of the questions will be cleared, even if some are there; raise the question and answer and it is called saṁśaya nivṛtti, removal of doubt.

And the fifth and final stage is called, Nidhidhyāsanam. Dwelling upon the teaching. Because I have to change my perspective of myself. Because all the time I have been looking upon myself as the body. The body orientation is the most powerful vāsana. And therefore, whatever happens to the body, I take it as happening to myself and therefore, the response is different; that is called saṁsāra and therefore I have to spend some time and tell myself, I am not the body; but I am functioning through the medium of the body. In sleep, I have dropped all the transactions but I continue to exist. Similarly in death also, the body may end, but I continue to survive. And therefore, I am not a mortal one; the shift of self-perspective. And when I change my opinion about myself, my opinion about the world also will change. And this process is called Nidhidhyāsanam or meditation to remove old orientation. Otherwise we can call, deconditioning.

Thus after five levels. karma, upāsana, śravaṇam, manana, and nidhidhyāsana. At the end of all these five levels of sādhana, I own up this fact that Aham Nityah Caitanya Rūpa Ātma Asmi. So these are the sādhanas.

Then comes the phalam. The benefit of this knowledge. Kṛṣṇa mentions a few.

First benefit he mentions is sarvatra sama darśanam. Because this person's vision has shifted from anātma-pradhāna to ātma-pradhāna. So instead of different waves, I see one underlying water. Instead of seeing different ornaments, I see one underlying gold. I keep the words bangle, ring, chains, for transactions, but in and through the transactions, I have got what darśanam? Gold darśanam. Whatever ornament I transact. Similarly this person has got the ātma-darśanam, and ātma being the same in all, it is sama darśanam and the practical benefit is freedom from Rāga and Dvēṣa, which are the two primary problems of saṁsāra. Rāga Dvēṣa abhāva. Freedom from attachment and aversion. This is one benefit.

The next benefit Kṛṣṇa gives is amṛtatva prāp̥thi. When I took myself as the anātma-body, I concluded I am mortal. When I know I am the ātma, now I claim I am immortal. When the wave thought that it is a wave; it was afraid of its mortality. But the moment wave shifted the vision, and claims I am the water, the wave is not afraid of mortality; because as water, it does not die. Therefore, amṛtathva prāp̥thi, immortality is the second benefit.

Next benefit is akartṛtva, abhōkṛtva prāp̥thi. I come to know that I am neither a kartā, nor a bhoktā; but in my presence, matter is interacting. All the changes belong to the matter. I, the consciousness, am like the Sunlight; I illumine everything but I am not tainted by anything. So this is akartṛtva, abhōkṛtva prāp̥thi.

Finally Kṛṣṇa says, this alone is called brahmatvam. Aham Brahma asmi iti brahmatva prāpti. Brahmatva. Limitlessness. As a wave, I am limited; but once I know I am water, I can claim that I am everywhere. So these are the benefits, in simple language, jeevan mukthi.

Jīvan mukthi is the benefit of this knowledge and therefore Kṛṣṇa concludes. Hey Arjuna, gain this knowledge, which makes a difference in your life. All the other disciplines of knowledge will not make any fundamental difference, whereas this knowledge makes a crucial difference, takes you from bondage to liberation. So,

क्षेत्रक्षेत्रज्ञयोरेवमन्तरं ज्ञानचक्षुषा |
भूतप्रकृतिमोक्षं च ये विदुर्यान्ति ते परम् || १३- ३५ ||

kṣētrākṣētrajñayōrēvam antaram jñānacakṣuṣā |
bhūtaprakṛtimōkṣaṁ ca yē viduryānti tē param ||13.35||

With this, Kṛṣṇa concludes the 13th chapter, and the chapter is kṣētra kṣētrajñā vibhāga Yōga; because in this chapter, Kṛṣṇa clearly differentiates consciousness and matter. Kṣētram meaning matter, kṣētrajñā meaning consciousness.

CHAPTER – 14: The Yōga of the Division of the Three Guṇas

|| caturdaśō'dhyāyaḥ - guṇatraya-vibhāga yōgaḥ||

Having completed the 13th chapter, now we will enter into the 14th chapter of the Gīta as I had pointed earlier, the 14th chapter also falls within the last ṣatkam or group of the Gīta and the last ṣatkam is focusing on jñāna-yōga or self-knowledge. And in these six chapters also, the first three chapters, viz., 13th, 14th, and 15th mainly focus upon jñāna-yōga or self-knowledge; and therefore all these three chapters are important, and all of them have the essence of the Upaniṣads. Sarvōpaniṣadō gāvaḥ dōgdhā gōpālanandanah. He said in the Dhyāna slōkās, that means Kṛṣṇa has milked the essence of the Upaniṣads, from the Upaniṣadic cow it is mentioned; that Upaniṣadic essence is throughout the Gīta but especially in these three chapters, 13th, 14th, and 15th, the self-knowledge, viz., the knowledge of our higher-nature.

And in the previous chapter, the knowledge of our higher-nature was presented as "I" the kṣētrajña or the witness principle. Ātma is revealed as the dṛk the kṣētrajña the observer and everything else is presented the kṣētram, the observed, the Dṛśyam. The differentiation was done based on the observed-observer principle and this method of teaching is called, Dṛk-Dṛśya vivēka. It is a popular method used in the śāstra, to arrive at my true nature; I go on negating everything that I experience. Nēti Nēti method; whatever I experience, I am not. And if I go on negating everything that I experience, finally there will be only one thing left out, and that is the experiencer who can never become an object of experience. And this method of arriving at the subject by negating every object, including the body, mind and the thoughts; this method is called Dṛk-Dṛśya vivēka, the thirteenth chapter employed this method.

Now in the 14th chapter also Kṛṣṇa is going to deal with the same subject matter, but here ātma, my nature is going to be revealed as Guṇātithaḥ, or Nirguṇa tatvam and everything that has got guṇās or attributes, they are all anātma, the object and by negating everything Saguṇa, what will be left behind is the guṇathithaḥ, the Nirguṇa ātma.

So what was presented as the observer in the thirteenth chapter, the same ātma is presented here as the attributeless principle. And therefore this chapter is in the form of guṇa thraya, guṇāthithaḥ, vibhāga yōga. Previous chapter is kṣētra-kṣētrajña vibhāgaḥ, subject-object differentiation; here the topic is Saguṇa-Nirguṇa vibhāgaḥ; Saguṇa means with attributes, Nirguṇa means without attributes.

And the Saguṇa is going to be here termed as Guṇa traya. The three-fold guṇas. The details we will see in due course. And the Nirguṇa tatvam is called guṇāthithaḥ. That which transcends all the attributes. And we are going to differentiate guṇa trayah and the guṇāthithaḥ and we are going to claim that I am the guṇāthithaḥ ātma; I am not the guṇa-traya anātma. This is going to be the subject matter of this chapter; a small chapter but an important chapter. With this background, we will enter into the chapter proper.

श्रीभगवानुवाच |
परं भूयः प्रवक्ष्यामि ज्ञानानां ज्ञानमुत्तमम् |
यज्ज्ञात्वा मुनयः सर्वे परां सिद्धिमितो गताः || १४- १ ||

Śrī Bhagavān Uvāca
param bhūyaḥ pravakṣyāmi jñānānām jñānamuttamam |
yajjñātvā munayaḥ sarvē parāṁ siddhimitō gatāḥ || 14.1 ||

श्री भगवान् उवाच śrī bhagavān uvāca The Lord said भूयः bhūyaḥ once again प्रवक्ष्यामि pravakṣyāmi I shall impart, परं ज्ञानम् param jñānam -(that) supreme knowledge, उत्तमं ज्ञानानाम् uttamam jñānānām which is the greatest among all forms of knowledge ज्ञात्वा यत् jñātvā yat and gaining which सर्वे मुनयः sarvē munayaḥ all the sages गताः gatāḥ have reached परां सिद्धिम् parāṁ siddhim the supreme goal, इतः itaḥ from here.

1. The Lord said - Once again I shall impart (that) supreme knowledge which is the greatest among all forms of knowledge, and gaining which all sages have reached the supreme goal from here.

The chapter begins with Lord Kṛṣṇa's voluntary offer to teach further. In the thirteenth chapter, Arjuna asked a question. And therefore Kṛṣṇa answered, whereas here we do not find Arjuna raising any question, at all. Kṛṣṇa himself out of sheer compassion offers to teach the same thing once again. Why should Kṛṣṇa do that? Is it because he had nothing else to do? Or because he had a captive audience? Not even audience; only one person; because he has got a captive student or he loves the teaching, what is the reason.

Śankarācārya often says when the subject matter is very very subtle, a teacher has to repeat it again and again. When the subject matter is shallow, you need not repeat. You know there was one Swami, who used to make very very deep and significance sentences and used to say: Think. And he will give a half minute gap. Because it is worth thinking.

And somebody observed that Swami and they found Swami is making statements and asking the audience to think, and he wanted to imitate that Swami and therefore this Swami started a discourse and said "Gīta has 18 chapters. Think". என்ன Think பண்ண இருக்கு? What is to be thought of it here? So therefore, we should know where to repeat, where to give a pregnant silence, one cannot repeat at each and every place. One should not also be silent at each and every place.

Similarly, Lord Kṛṣṇa knows which deserves repetition. And this ātma jñānam being durvignēyatvāt ati sukṣmatvāt, repetition is not a defect. When the subject matter is simple, repetition becomes a dōśa, it is called punaruthi dōśa. But when the subject matter is deep, punaruthi is not a dōśa, but it is an ornament to the teacher. Therefore Kṛṣṇa says Hey Arjuna, what I taught in the 13th chapter or previously, is an extremely subtle; you are a good student; you would have understood; but still for my satisfaction, I would like to present it again. But if I give the same title, you will be bored; and therefore, in another fashion, I will present it. Just as the very same 'Sēvai' is presented as Lemon-Sevai and Coconut Sevai, Ulundu sevai, etc. people want different ruchi or taste. Similarly, Kṛṣṇa presents from a different angle. Previously it was Kṣētra-Kṣētrañja vibhāgaḥ, Puruṣa-Prakṛti vibhāgaḥ, now it is guṇa traya- guṇāthithaḥ vibhāgaḥ.

So Kṛṣṇa says here: Sri Bhagavān ucāva. Bhagavān voluntarily offers: भूयः प्रवक्ष्यामि bhūyaḥ pravakṣyāmi: I shall once again give you the same teaching; what? jñānam; the same jñānam; ātma jñānam I shall impart once again and what type of jñānam it is?

param̐ uttamam̐ jñānam. So it is the greatest knowledge in the world. Param means greatest, uttamam means greatest; so the greatest knowledge I am going to give.

So Śankarācārya in his commentary raises a question, param̐ also means the greatest knowledge, uttamam̐ also means the greatest knowledge; why should Kṛṣṇa say the greatest-greatest knowledge? Why not say only once? Śankarācārya says there is a subtle difference.

The first 'greatest' indicate a knowledge which deals with the greatest thing, Reality in the world. In terms of the subject-matter, this knowledge is the greatest, because it does not deal with the ordinary perishable thing, but it is dealing with the greatest reality, the pāramārthika satyam and therefore the first 'greatest' indicate viṣaya dṛṣṭya uttamam.

And then the second 'greatest' means not only the subject matter is the greatest one; that is ātma or brahman. The result that we derive out of this knowledge, the phalam also is the greatest. First greatest represents the subject matter; viśaya dṛṣṭya uttamam. the second one refers to Phala dṛṣṭya also uttamam.

Because this is the knowledge which gives the greatest result of mōkṣa whereas all other branches of knowledge can give the result of the perishable artha, perishable kāma, perishable dharma, whereas this is the only knowledge, which gives the result of imperishable mōkṣa. Thus uttama viśyatvāt, uttama phalatvāt, this knowledge is the greatest knowledge.

And that is why in Muṇḍaka Upaniṣad, this knowledge is called Parā vidya. In the 9th chapter, it is called Rāja vidya. And therefore Arjuna, I shall keep you that knowledge which is the greatest among jñānam, all the branches of knowledge.

And what is the result that they are going to get; I said mōkṣa. So naturally, we will ask the question What is mōkṣa? So mōkṣa is a technical term; and therefore Kṛṣṇa himself explains that mōkṣa phala.

yat jñātvā, by gaining this wisdom, the greatest wisdom.

sarvē munayaḥ; all the seekers; and the word Muni literally means a sanyāsi, and the word sanyāsi indicate the detachment and the word detachment indicates sādhana catuṣṭaya sampathi. Therefore, munayaḥ means those seekers who have got all the necessary qualifications in abundance.

In the last class summary, I talked about 4 Ds, Discrimination, Dispassion, Discipline and Desire for mōkṣā. So the one who has got all these qualifications is called Muniḥ, in this context. Muni does not refer to the external qualifications like a flowing beard, etc. munayaḥ means Adhikāriṇaḥ. All those prepared seekers.

What did they get? parāṃ siddhiṃ gatāḥ itaḥ; they attained mōkṣā which is the highest accomplishment in life. Gaining which alone the life can be called worthwhile. Kenōpaniṣad points out:

iha cēdavēdidatha satyamasti na cēdihāvēdīnmahati vinaṣṭiḥ.

Any other thing you get, life is not worthwhile; life is validated; made meaningful only if this knowledge is attained. And therefore parāṃ siddhiṃ; the highest accomplishment of mōkṣā.

itaḥ gatāḥ. they have attained while living. Not only while living; even after death; they have gained the vidēha mukti also. So itaḥ means marāṇāntharam. Liberation while living is called Jīvanmukti. Liberation after death is called vidēha mukti. These people have attained both.

Verse 14.2

इदं ज्ञानमुपाश्रित्य मम साधर्म्यमागताः |
सर्गेऽपि नोपजायन्ते प्रलये न व्यथन्ति च || १४- २ ||

idaṁ jñānamupāśritya mama sādharmaṁāgatāḥ |
sargē'pi nōpajāyantē pralayē na vyathanti ca || 14.2 ||

उपाश्रित्य upāśritya resorting to, इदं ज्ञानम् idaṁ jñānam this knowledge, आगताः āgatāḥ they have attained, साधर्म्यं मम sādharmaṁ mama the same nature as Mine, न उपजायन्ते na upajāyantē they are not born, अपि सर्गे api sargē even during creation, न च व्यथन्ति na ca vyathanti nor do they suffer (death), प्रलये pralayē during dissolution.

2. Resorting to this knowledge, they have attained the same nature as Mine. They are not born even during creation; nor do they suffer (death) during dissolution.

Introduction continues. In the previous verse it was pointed out that this jñānam is superior_most, because it deals with the greatest reality; and the benefit is also the greatest, which consists of jīvanmukti and vidēhamukti.

Now the next question is what is jīvanmukti and what is vidēhamukti? Kṛṣṇa briefly defines them; idaṁ jñānam upāśritya; by taking recourse to this knowledge, by acquiring this knowledge, mama sādharmaṁ āgatāḥ. The seekers have attained oneness with me. They have also attained Īśvara-svarūpam, dropping their jīvātman. So mama sādharmaṁ, means Īśvara-svarūpam.

And what do you mean by Īśvara-svarūpam? Īśvara has got pūrṇatvam, and these people enjoy the pūrṇatvam even while living. So the first indication of jīvanmukti is total inner sense of self-sufficiency. Not missing anything in life; as Kṛṣṇa said in the 2nd chapter, ātmana ēva ātmana thuṣṭa. Bhagavān is ever pūrṇaḥ; this jñāni also enjoys pūrṇatvam.

And the second feature or glory of Bhagavān is abhāya svarūpaḥ. Bhagavān is free from the sense of insecurity; whereas Jiva is full of insecurity feeling. This jñānam will remove the sense of insecurity. Adṛśyē, anātmīyē, aniruddē, anilayanē, abhayam pratiṣṭām vindatē.

So Īśvara-svarūpam means abhāyam, freedom from insecurity; freedom from finitude; freedom from slavery. Bhagavān is called Swami. Swami means what? The one who is the master of everything and a saṁsāri is called bṛtya-dāsāḥ, a slave. A slave of what? Slave of people; slave of circumstances; slave of karma. A jñāni by this knowledge attains Īśvara-svarūpam, means this jñāni also becomes a Swami. He is no more a slave of karma phala; ihaiva tairjitaḥ sargō yēśāṁ sāmyē sthitam manaḥ.

They are the masters of the situation; and mastery means no regret over the past, and no anxiety with regard to future. So this svamitvam, pūrṇatvam, abhāyam, ānanda svarūpaha, ānanda, all these are indicated by the word sādharṁyam. This sādharṁyam indicates jīvanmukti. So even while living, they enjoy the glories which belong to the Lord. This is called jīvanmukti.

And then what happens to them after death? After death they attain vidēhamuktiḥ and what do you mean by vidēhamuktiḥ? Vidēhamuktiḥ means freedom from punarjanma. Punarjanma leads to: you can easily fill up the blanks. punarjanma leads to punar maraṇam and punar maraṇam will lead to punar janma. Punarapi jananam, punarapi maraṇam cycle, they are free from.

And therefore, vidēhamuktiḥ is defined in the second line sargē api na upajāyantē; they are not born again as miserable individuals and therefore sargē means in the next sṛiṣṭi, they are not created again.

And therefore pralayē na vyathanti ca. They do not come to grief again, caused by mortality. So pralayē at the time of pralayam, they do not grieve. They are not afflicted by the pain of death. In short; they are free from janma-maraṇa cycle, which is called vidēhamuktiḥ and therefore Arjuna, if you want to enjoy this jīvanmukti and also get the benefit of vidēhamuktiḥ, concentrate on this jñānam.

मम योनिर्महद् ब्रह्म तस्मिन्गर्भं दधाम्यहम् |
सम्भवः सर्वभूतानां ततो भवति भारत || १४- ३ ||

mama yōnirmahad-brahma tasmīngarbhāṁ dadhāmyaham |
sambhavaḥ sarvabhūtānāṁ tatō bhavati bhārata || 14.3 ||

महद् ब्रह्म mahad brahma the great Prakṛiti मम योनिः mama yōniḥ in My womb, अहं दधामि aham dadhāmi I place गर्भम् garbhāṁ the seed तस्मिन् tasmin in that, ततः भवति tataḥ bhavati thereupon takes place, सम्भवः sambhavaḥ the origination, सर्वभूतानाम् sarvabhūtānām of all beings, भारत bhārata Oh Arjuna!

3. They great prakṛti is My womb. I place the seed in that. There upon takes place the origination of all beings, Oh Arjuna!

The introduction continues. In the first two slōkās, Kṛṣṇa introduced the subject matter, subject matter is what: ātma jñānam, and he also talked about the glory of the subject matter, the glory is that it is a liberating knowledge. So having introduced the subject matter, now in these two verses, the 3rd and 4th, Kṛṣṇa summarizes the process of creation which he had dealt with in the 13th chapter. So as a reminder, Kṛṣṇa is summarizing the process of creation; because the development of the teaching depends upon the knowledge of the creation. And therefore, as a foundation, He reminds that. And what was the creation that He talked about in the 13th chapter? There He said:

प्रकृतिं पुरुषं चैव विद्धानादि उभावपि।
विकारांश्च गुणांश्चैव विद्धि प्रकृतिसम्भवान्॥ १३.१९ ॥

prakṛtiṃ puruṣaṃ caiva viddhyanādi ubhāvapi
vikārāṃśca guṇāṃścaiva viddhi prakṛtisambhavān || 13.19 ||

He said before the creation, there were originally two principles, known as Puruṣa and prakṛti. And He said both Puruṣa tatvam and prakṛti tatvam are anādi; anādi meaning beginningless. They are the cause of the creation; but they themselves are not created entity. There Kṛṣṇa said both are anādi. And we talked about 4 differences, if we remember.

Puruṣa is cētana tatvam, conscious principle. Prakṛti is acētana tatvam, inert principle.

Puruṣa is nirguṇa tatvam, without any attributes.

Prakṛti is saguṇa tattvam, with guṇas; Puruṣa is Nirvikāra tatvam, without any modifications; whereas Prakṛti is savikāra-tatvam, subject to modification.

Fourthly and finally, Puruṣa is satya tatvam having independent existence of its own; whereas prakṛti the matter does not have independent existence. Mithya.

So Nirguṇa, Nirvikāra, Satyah, Cētana Tatvam is Puruṣa; Saguṇa, Savikāra, Mithya, Acētana Tatvam is Prakṛti.

In English consciousness and matter existed from beginningless time. And He also pointed out that this mixture, which mixture? Puruṣa-prakṛti, consciousness-matter is the cause of the creation. And this mixture alone is called Īśvaraḥ. Īśvara is neither pure-Puruṣa, nor pure-prakṛti, but it is a mixture of these two. And either of them cannot independently become the cause of the creation and to convey this idea, Kṛṣṇa takes the comparison of the Father principle and the Mother principle. The Puruṣa tatvam is compared to the father principle and the Prakṛti tatvam is compared to the mother principle. It is only a comparison: because male alone can produce a child; female alone can produce a child; male and female together alone can be the cause of the creation; and therefore Puruṣa is compared to a male and Prakṛti is symbolized as female. It is only a symbolism. Do not extend it too much and ask whether all the ladies are inert!!!

When I say females are compared to prakṛti, it is only a comparison; do not extend it too much; you will have problem. Then why this comparison, only to show that both the tatvams put together alone can cause the creation.

Then Kṛṣṇa wants to point out; if the Puruṣa and Prakṛti, i.e. father and mother, and that too inseparable father and mother, like what?

vāgarthā vivasāṃprittō vagarta pratipattayē, jagata pitarō vandē, pārvati paramēśvarō; inseparable like Śiva and Pārvati; the Ardhanārīśvara, inseparable like Viṣṇu and Lakṣmi, who is occupying viṣṇu's chest; like Brahma and Saraswati, who is occupying Brahma's tongue. Similarly father principle Puruṣa, mother principle Prakṛti, put together is called Īśvara; you may call it Ardhanārīśvara; i.e. the cause of the creation.

And then Kṛṣṇa wants to point out that if this mixture is the cause of the creation; all the products will have the features of both the father and mother. Because the general rule is what; kāraṇa guṇaḥ, karyē anuvartantē, the features of the cause will inhere, pervade the effect also. If gold is the cause of the ornament, the ornament is also golden in nature. And if the cause-Gold has a percentage of copper, the ornament also will have a percentage of copper. If the children are born out of the couple, the children will have some features of the father; some features of the mother; both will be there. Only thing is the proportion. One child might have more of the mother and less of the father; another might have more of the father and less of the mother; but the principle you have to note, the causal features will inhere in the effect. And therefore Kṛṣṇa wants to extend that principle and say every individual is a mixture of Puruṣa and Prakṛti tatvam. Every individual jīva, whether it is plant or ant or elephant; whether it is a human being, male or female; every one of us is a mixture of Puruṣa, father principle, as well as prakṛti the mother principle.

If we do not recognise this nature of ours, which nature, I am a mixture of Puruṣa tatvam, what type of Puruṣa tatvam; nirguṇa-nirvikāra-sathya-cētana Puruṣa tatvam; and saguṇa-savikāra-mithya-acētana prakṛti tatvam, if I do not understand my composition very clearly, I will not know how to handle myself properly.

Self-knowledge is required for self-mastery. Anything you want to master, what is the first step, learn to understand. If a disease has to be cured, before finding a remedy for the disease, what is the first step, I have to understand the nature of the disease. What is cancer bug, what is a HIV virus, what is hepatitis, whatever is, B, A or C. If I should handle myself properly, which is a prerequisite for handling my set up. If I do not know how to handle myself, how am I going to be the master of my family. Child is not listening. You are not able to obey yourselves. What is the complaint? Therefore, self-mastery requires self-knowledge. Self-knowledge involves knowing my composition.

And Kṛṣṇa wants to say that I am composed of Puruṣa aspect as well as prakṛti aspect. And to show and proof that I am the mixture of both, Kṛṣṇa wants to point that I am the mixture of both, because my cause Īśvara is a mixture of both. So kāraṇam is a mixture of both, kāryam the jīva is also a mixture.

For that, he is introducing the creation. Therefore, Kṛṣṇa says here: Hey Arjuna, I am the Puruṣa Tatvam and inseparable from me is the prakṛti tatvam, otherwise called Māya tatvam and māya is comparable to my wife. Therefore I am Brahman the husband; Puruṣa the husband; and māya is like my wife, indicating I cannot create the universe without prakṛti, the māya. That Soundarya lahari begins with that.

शिवः शक्त्या युक्तो यदि भवति शक्तः प्रभवितु न चेदेवं देवो न खलु कुशलः स्पन्दितुमपि । ॥ १ ॥

śivaḥ śaktyā yuktō yadi bhavati śaktaḥ prabhavituṁ na cēdēvaṁ dēvō na khalu kuśalaḥ spanditumapi । ॥ १ ॥

That is why we have an idiom, சக்தி இல்லையானால்; சிவனே என்று இரு. If there is no śakti, you have to keep quiet. (In Tamil). Vēdāntam. பர்கரிதி இல்லையானால் புருஷனுக்கு ஒன்றும் பண்ண முடியாது. If prakṛti is not there, Puruṣa cannot do anything. Even now, in many houses, the wife you ask, she will say, I will check up and say. Many houses the parampara continues.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa says; mama yōniḥ, yōniḥ literally means womb, in this context, womb, means wife, the female principle, my wife, Kṛṣṇa says; is Mahat brahma. That is very very misleading verse; the word brahma here is Māya, the prakṛti tatvam; the word brahma in this context means prakṛti. The matter-principle, the māyatatvam.

And what type of wife she is? Mahad brahma, is a universal mother, and therefore mahat means what: infinite; because the pregnancy of the universal mother should be a great pregnancy because the universal mother has to conceive the universe. And therefore Kṛṣṇa says Mahat brahma, infinite māya is my wife as it were; and who am I, we have to supply, I, the Puruṣa tatvam am comparable to the father principle. I, the consciousness am the father; māya is the mother principle.

And what do I do? When the right time for creation comes; what do I do? Tasmin garbham ahaṁ dadhāmi. I transfer the garbham; means the life principle, the power to create; power to reproduce; I hand over, I transfer to the Mother. Just as at the time of conception, the male transfers the seed of the baby to the female. Similarly at the time of creation, I bless māya with the power to produce the universe. Tasmin garbham dadhāmyaham.

And philosophically speaking, garbādānam is supposed to be blessing the māya tatvam with the cidabhāsa or the reflected consciousness; blessing the māya is considered to be garbha dānam. I activate the māya. So tasmin garbham dadhāmi. I activate māya; I impregnate māya, I give māya the power to evolve itself into a universe.

And once the conception has taken place; father, male principle has done the job, female principle has conceived, and thereafter the male principle need not do anything, the baby fetus will grow in the body of the mother, perfectly according to the law of nature. Father need not know all the laws. Even the mother need not know all the laws to conceive the baby and every week grow appropriately and whatever transformation is needed in the mother's body, that also will take place; Similarly, here also Kṛṣṇa says: once I bless the māya, I need not do anything; māya will evolve into this creation. The subtlest form of matter, which you may call as energy itself, that will evolve like after the big bang things evolve perfectly according to the law. Similarly evolution happens.

sambhavaḥ sarvabhūtānāḥ; sambhavaḥ, origination, emergence. Just as the baby grows in the mother's body, and at the appropriate time, 9th month or the 10th month, by the same law of nature emerges:

Tasmāt dvā ētasmāt ātmana ākāśa sambhūtaḥ. Before big bang cannot talk about time and space. Even the concept of time and space is impossible before big bang. During the time of singularity (scientists call it singularity) you cannot talk about anything, it is a state of non-information. Singularity they call, it is a state of non-information. In Vēdānta non-information is called māya. It means that you will not understand. This people call it state of non-information. In Sānskrīt it is called māya. In this place what is there? If we say māya, we will not understand. If you have understood māya well, then you know māya is un-understandable.

सन्नाप्य सन्नाप्युभयात्मिका नो। भिन्नाप्यभिन्नाप्युभयात्मिका नो।। साङ्गाप्यनङ्गाप्यु भयात्मिका नो।
महाभूतानिर्वचनीयरुपा।।

Sannappya sannapya ubhayathmikhānō, bhinnapya bhinnapyō ubhayathmikhānō, nangāpya nangaapya ubhayathimikānō, mahabhutha anirvaciniya rūpam.

Anirvacaniyam means where information is lacking. At the time of big bang, information was not there; but out of that evolved this universe; Similarly, ākāśa sambhūtam, thereafter we can trace how the creation evolved.

आकाशात् वायुः, वायोर् अग्निः, अग्नेर् आपः, अद्य पृथ्वी, पृथ्व्याम् ओषदयः, ओषधिभ्यो अन्नम्, अन्नात् पुरुषः |

ākāśāt vāvuh. vāvōr aqniḥ, agnēr āpaḥ, adya pṛthvī, pṛthvyām oṣadayaḥ, oṣadhibhyō annam, annāt puruṣaḥ ॥

Everything happens. therefore Kṛṣṇa says sarvabhūtānām. Bhūtāni, means all things and beings; sambhavaḥ, the origination of all these.

tatah bhavathi; tatah, Thereafter, and that moment of big bang, the inexplicable moment, from that moment, everything evolves naturally. bhārata, hey Arjuna.

So then what happens:

Verse 14.4

sarvayōniṣu kauntēya mūrtayaḥ sambhavanti yāḥ |
tāsām brahma mahadyōnirahaḥ bījapraḍaḥ pitā ॥ 14.4 ॥

कौन्तेय kauntēya Oh Arjuna! याः भूतयः yāḥ bhūtayaḥ whatever forms सम्भवन्ति sambhavanti are born सर्वयोनिषु sarvayōniṣu in all the wombs तासाम् tāsām all of them महद् ब्रह्म योनिः mahad brahma yōniḥ the great prakriti is the womb अहं पिता ahaḥ pitā I am the father बीजप्रदः bījapraḍaḥ who provides the seed.

4. Oh! Arjuna, whatever forms are born in all the wombs - for all of them the greatest prakriti is the womb. I am the father who provides the seed.

So Kṛṣṇa said that I am the universal father; and māya is the universal mother; and we the universal couple, jagata pitarō, are comparable to any local couple, there also because of their combination the child is born, the child has the features of both of them.

Then what is the difference between the universal couple Bhagavān and Bhagavati and the worldly couple? Kṛṣṇa says even though many things are common; there is one main difference. What is that? if you take any couple in the world; any male and female, humans species, you take, the human couple can produce only what child; human child; Thank good; if something is born as a monkey; we do not expect that; we do not want like monkey; what to talk of monkey itself; so when you take any one couple in the universe that couple is the cause of only one species, whereas the universal mother has given birth all the species.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa says, ahaḥ bījapraḍaḥ pitā; second line, I am the universal father; who activate, who impregnate māya, who enliven māya by blessing it with reflected consciousness, cidabhāsa pradhānēna, I bless the Māya and therefore I am the universal father.

And mahad brahma yōniḥ; mahat brahma as we saw in the previous verse, mahat brahma, means the infinite māya. Here also the Brahma means, māya, very careful, mahat, the infinite māya is yōniḥ the mother principle; comparable to the mother principle.

And blessed by me; the māya becomes the universal mother not for one species, but for all the species. And therefore Kṛṣṇa says sarvayōniṣu yāḥ mūrtayaḥ sambhavanti. So whatever species of living beings is born in the world; whatever we see, the monkey species is there; buffalo species is there; locally the buffalo child is born out of buffalo mother; monkey child is born out of monkey mother; whatever species is born out of the corresponding mother; all of them when you go to the original cause, the original cause is what? Only one māya, which is the cause of all the monkey species also; buffalo species also; octopus also; snails also; whatever.

Therefore Kṛṣṇa says; sarvayōniṣu yāḥ mūrtayaḥ. Murthy means whatever types of body, murthy means here śārīram. So whatever bodies or whatever species you experience here, born out of the local mothers. For all of them, the immediate cause may be the immediate mother, but the original cause is māya only.

So, yāḥ sambhavanti. Whatever living being is born; tāsām; for all of them, brahma yōniḥ, māya is the universal mother. And therefore we are all children of brahman plus māya. Puruṣa plus prakṛti. Consciousness plus matter; nirguṇam plus saḡuṇam. And therefore we also will have a mixture of both. This is going to be studied later which we will see from the next class.

182 Chapter 14, Verse 05

In this 14th chapter, the first 4 verses happened to be introductory verses, in which Lord Kṛṣṇa first mentioned that he is going to deal with Self-knowledge in this chapter also; just as in the 13th chapter he dealt with ātma jñānam; this is also a chapter on self-knowledge and he glorified self-knowledge, as the liberating wisdom and therefore worthy of study by everyone.

After giving a brief introduction to the subject matter, in the first two verses; in the third and fourth verses, which we saw in the last class, Kṛṣṇa talked about the creation. And the purpose of dealing with this topic is to point out that every product in the creation including every individual is a mixture of two parts; one is the Puruṣa part and the other is the prakṛti part.

And for this purpose, He talked about the cause of the creation, as none other than Īśvara himself; who is a mixture of Puruṣa tatvam and prakṛti tatvam; otherwise called brahma tatvam and māya tatvam; or to present symbolically, the father-principle and the mother-principle. The Puruṣa tatvam represents the father principle; prakṛti tatvam represents the mother principle and this is to show that Puruṣa cannot create the world without the support of prakṛti and prakṛti cannot create the world without Puruṣa and therefore whenever we talk of God, it is a mixture of both; father and mother are inseparably there. That is why in the purāṇa also, Pārvathi cannot be separated from Parameśvara, because they are Ardhanārīśvara and Lakṣmi cannot be separated from Viṣṇu because she occupies the chest of Viṣṇu. That is why you keep the pocket here, for keeping the money; because Viṣṇu keeps Lakṣmidēvi there; and therefore Lakṣmidēvi never separate from Viṣṇu. And we are supposed to do the same thing; but not knowing this fact, we are keeping the packet elsewhere; so where to keep money. It is not money to be supposed to be done; money is Lakṣmidēvi, she is not supposed to occupy your back, and that too lower back. Thus Lakṣmidēvi cannot be separated; Viṣṇu is called Sreenivasah, Sriyah Lakṣmyah nivāsa sthanam hi. Similarly, Saraswati cannot be separated from Brahmāji; she occupies Brahmāji's tongue itself. All these are to indicate that Puruṣa and Prakṛti are inseparable; this mixture alone is called God.

And what Kṛṣṇa wants to point out is since the cause of the creation, viz., the Lord is a mixture of two principles, the effect also must be a mixture of these two because the components of the effect will be exactly the same as the components of the cause. If the Gold has got 6% silver or copper, then all the ornaments also will have the same percentage; because the law is kārana gunāḥ, kāryē anuvarthanthē. You can understand easily: kārana gunāḥ, the features of the cause will inhere the effect also. And therefore every individual Jīva; you and I, is also a mixture of Puruṣa tatvam and Prakṛti Tatvam, and therefore to understand oneself thoroughly, we should clearly know how to differentiate/distinguish these two features within ourselves. And therefore for the sake of self-study, Kṛṣṇa is introducing the creation and there we saw in the fourth verse:

तासां ब्रह्म महद्योनिरहं बीजप्रदः पिता || १४- ४ ||

sarvayōniṣu kauntēya mūrtayaḥ sambhavanti yāḥ |
tāsāṁ brahma mahadyōnirahaṁ bījapraḍaḥ pitā || 14.4 ||

Hey Arjuna, I am the Puruṣa Tatvam and what is Puruṣa Tatvam, do you remember the definition? Nirguṇa, Nirvikāra, Sathya, Cētana tatvam. Puruṣa means the changeless, attributeless, consciousness principle, which is an independent and absolute reality. Whereas prakṛti tatvam is saguṇa, savikāra, mithya, acētana tatvam, that which has attributes, that which is subject to changes, and that which is of the nature of jaḍa, acētana, inert principle. In English we can say consciousness plus matter is equal to Īśvara tatvam and Īśvara paramātma is kāraṇam, jivātma is kāryam. If a kāraṇam is a mixture consciousness plus matter, kāryam is also a mixture of consciousness-principle-plus-matter-principle.

So in me also, both are there, and therefore, I should understand both these features. And this analysis is going to be the subject matter of the 14th chapter. So you have got the changing feature also and you have got a changeless feature also. You have got a nature which is attributed, saṅguṇa feature also and you have got a nirguṇa feature also, and similarly, you are a mixture of matter and consciousness and you are a mixture of lower Mithya principle and higher Sathyam principle. And therefore I should thoroughly understand both and that analysis is going to start hereafter.

So from 5th verse, the analysis is going to begin.

We will read verse No.5

Verse 14.5

सत्त्वं रजस्तम इति गुणाः प्रकृतिसम्भवाः |
निबध्नन्ति महाबाहो देहे देहिनमव्ययम् || १४- ५ ||

[Sattvaṁ rajastama iti guṇāḥ prakṛtisambhavāḥ |
nibadhnanti mahābāhō dēhē dēhinamavyayam || 14.5 ||](#)

सत्त्वं रजः तमः satvaṁ rajaḥ tamaḥ Sattva, rajas and tamas इति गुणाः iti guṇāḥ these are the three guṇās, प्रकृतिसम्भवाः prakṛtisambhavāḥ born of prakṛiti निबध्नन्ति nibadhnanti they fasten अव्ययं देहिनम् avyayam dēhinam the changeless self देहे dēhē in the body, महाबाहो mahābāhō Oh Arjuna!

5. Sattva, Rajas, and Tamas – these are the three guṇas born of prakṛiti. They fasten the changeless Self in the body, Oh Arjuna!

Before entering into the analysis proper, I will give you a bird's eye-view of the development that is going to come hereafter. I said Bhagavān is a mixture of consciousness and matter, and therefore every one of us is also a mixture of both. And what is the material aspect of the individual. The physical body is material in nature; it is made up of prakṛti tatvam; because body is made up of matter and body has got attributes; properties are there; it is fat; it is lean; it is healthy, it is sick; it is saṅguṇa. And body is savikāram or nirvikāram? Subject to change or is it changeless? You clearly know body is violently changing and therefore body comes under the prakṛti part of the individual. Similarly the mind also comes under the prakṛti part of the individual. And other than the body mind complex, there is the puruṣa tatvam, which is the consciousness principle.

And what is that consciousness? I hope you remember, consciousness is not part, product or property of the body, consciousness is an independent entity which pervades and enlivens the body and consciousness-principle is not limited by the boundaries of the body, it goes beyond and the consciousness-principle does not die when the body dies; and finally, this surviving consciousness-principle cannot be contacted by us; not because it is non-existent, but because there is no medium of contact. I have given you the example of light, which is pervading this body and this consciousness-principle in me which enlivens the body-mind-complex is called puruṣa tatvam.

And in vādānta, we use two technical words; I would like to introduce. The pure consciousness principle, which is nirguṇa, nirguṇa means attributeless, nirvikāra, which is changeless, that consciousness is called sākṣi tatvam. The witness principle; the changeless-witness of all the changes that happen.

Now the mind is in peaceful condition; there is a witness of the peaceful state of mind; Next moment the mind is turbulent; the mind changes kaleidoscopically; it changes, but there is a changeless-witness-consciousness is aware of the previous condition of the mind- aware of the present condition of the mind. This changeless witness consciousness is called sākṣi tatvam, which is one aspect of mind. This Vādānta calls my higher-nature; my superior nature; my diviner nature; my loftier nature.

Then, of course, I have got this body principle, the mind principle, which is by itself inert in nature. Body by itself is inert in nature, why? Because it is made up of matter, it is a bundle of chemicals; a bundle of five elements; this body by itself is inert; but even though intrinsically the body is inert, because of the pervasion of consciousness, the body has got borrowed consciousness. Just like now, my body is shining for you; not because the body has got its own luminosity; now my body is shining because of what? The light pervading the body.

Similarly, this body is inert; but because of the pervading consciousness, body has got borrowed consciousness; like the hot water. The hot water is not hot because heat is its intrinsic nature but water is hot because it is pervaded by the invisible Agni tatvam. You cannot see it with the visible eyes. If you put your finger, you will know. Water looks the same; hot water is hot; not because heat is its nature, but it is borrowed from the fire principle. Similarly, this body is now sentient; not because of the intrinsic-sentiency but because of borrowed-sentiency; in Sānskrīt we call it; Cidabhāsa pratibhīm̐ba caitanam, reflected consciousness; we had discussed this long before in Tatva Bōdha; OC, RC, RM. If you have forgotten better you have to brush through your notes.

So now this body has got borrowed sentiency; therefore it is a live body. It is prakṛti but a live prakṛti. Similarly, the mind also is made up of subtle matter only; subtle-elements only and therefore the mind is also intrinsically-insentient; but the mind has become sentient due to what? Borrowed sentiency, which is technically called cidabhāsa. So thus we have got a live body; with borrowed-consciousness, we have got a live mind with borrowed consciousness. In short we have a got a live prakṛti, prakṛti means the body mind complex, with borrowed consciousness.

And in Vēdāntic parlance, this body-mind-complex, otherwise called prakṛti, with borrowed-sentiency, borrowed-consciousness, this body-mind complex is Ahaṁkāraḥ. Ahaṁkāraḥ is equal to body-mind complex; otherwise called prakṛti-plus-borrowed-consciousness; i.e. cidabhāsa. So Sariram-plus-cidabhāsa is equal to ahaṁkāra. Prakṛti-plus-cidabhāsa is equal to ahaṁkāra. Matter plus borrowed consciousness is called ahaṁkāra.

And what is the name of the original consciousness? What is the name of the original consciousness? Sākṣi Tatvam. So sākṣi is the name of the original consciousness; Ahaṁkāra is the name of the body-mind-complex plus the reflected or borrowed consciousness. And every individual is a mixture of Sākṣi and ahaṁkāra. Every individual is a mixture Sākṣi plus ahaṁkāra. When I say, Sākṣi, you should remember; OC, the original consciousness, ahaṁkāra means what? The body plus reflected consciousness. In Tatva Bodha we used the expression RM plus RC. RM means reflecting medium; what is the reflecting medium, body-mind-complex, RC means the reflected consciousness.

So now let us put the formula. OC is the sākṣi, RC plus RM is equal to Ahaṁkāra. I hope it is not confusing. And every individual is a mixture of Ahaṁkāra and Sākṣi. Therefore when I use the word I, it has got an ahaṁkāra-aṁśa as well as sākṣi aṁśa. Whenever I use the word I, it has got the ahaṁkāra-aṁśa, is equal to body with borrowed consciousness and also sākṣi-aṁśa, which is what? The original-consciousness. Of this, if you make a comparative study, the sākṣi-aṁśa is nothing but original consciousness, which is Nirguṇa, Nirvikāra, Sathya tatvam. The Sākṣi part of mind; the sākṣi aspect of mind is nothing but attributeless changeless, real, absolutely real-consciousness and when a jñāni says Aham brahmāsmi, that Aham refers to which aspect? the sākṣi aspect, the original consciousness, which is nirguṇa, nirvikāra, sathya, caitanyam, whereas when you take the ahaṁkāra aspect of mind, what is the nature of ahaṁkāra; your mind should shift to the body mind complex with borrowed consciousness.

That will be saḡuṇam or nirguṇam? Ahaṁkāra being body mind complex, body mind complex being prakṛti, ahaṁkāra is saḡuṇa. Ahaṁkāra is savikāra or nirvikāra? Ahaṁkāra is maha savikāra. Ahaṁkāra is cētanam or acētanam? Confusion will come. Ahaṁkāra is cētanam or acētanam? It is cētanam alright; but not intrinsically cētanam but it has got borrowed cētanatvam.

And Kṛṣṇa wants to say Arjuna you are a mixture of ahaṁkāra and sākṣi. And you should be able to differentiate the guṇāthitha sākṣi and saḡuṇa ahaṁkāra. You should be able to differentiate the guṇāthitha sākṣi, another name for nirguṇa sākṣi, and saḡuṇa ahaṁkāra.

And Kṛṣṇa wants to point out Ahaṁkāra is your lower nature. It is your individuality, whereas Sākṣi is your higher-nature. And then Kṛṣṇa wants to point out as long as you are taking yourselves as ahaṁkāra, as long as you are remain as ahaṁkāra only, saṁsāra cannot be avoided. Ahaṁkāra is vulnerable to saṁsāra and the only way of getting out of saṁsāra is you have to transcend your lower ahaṁkāra -nature and you have to own up your higher sākṣi-nature.

And for this purpose, Kṛṣṇa wants to point out, how the Ahaṁkāra is poison. It is a problem. And why it is a problem? Because it is saḡuṇa. The very saḡuṇa nature of ahaṁkāra makes it a problematic aspect of yours. And naturally the question will come; how the guṇas or saḡuṇātvaṁ, becomes responsible for saṁsāra?

And for that Kṛṣṇa wants to talk about the various guṇas of ahaṁkāra. And he points out that ahaṁkāra has got three guṇas; because it is made up of prakṛti, which has got three guṇas. Are you understanding? What is the split up? Body-mind-complex plus borrowed-consciousness. Body mind complex is Puruṣa or prakṛti? It is prakṛti. Since prakṛti has got three guṇas, body-mind-complex also has got three guṇas, therefore Ahaṁkāra also has got three guṇas. Sātvika ahaṁkāraḥ, rājasa ahaṁkāra, and tamasa ahaṁkāraḥ, and Kṛṣṇa says all the three ahaṁkāras are saṁsāri-ahaṁkāra. எங்கே போனாலும் மாட்டிப்பாவீ. Wherever you go, you will be in trouble. And each ahaṁkāra is bound in a different way. Sātvika ahaṁkāra is bound by satva-guṇa; rājasa ahaṁkāra is bound by rajō-guṇa; and tāmasa ahaṁkāra is bound by tamō-guṇa.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa wants to talk about the nature of each guṇa and how each guṇa binds a person and what are the indications of the presence of each guṇa and what will be the consequences of the respective bondage; all these Kṛṣṇa is going to analyse; that is why the very chapter is called guṇa traya vibhāga yōgaḥ. Domination of each guṇa binds the ahaṁkāra.

And in Sānskrīt language, the word Guṇa has two meanings; one meaning is a property or an attribute. And the second meaning is a 'rope' or a shackle. So the very word guṇa indicate that it is a rope which will bind you to saṁsāra and which will never allow you to be a free person. Therefore, you have to break the shackles of three guṇas and discover the freedom of mōkṣa.

And now, we will briefly see the expressions of each guṇa. At the time of creation, in the prakṛti or in matter all the three guṇas are there; but they are in equilibrium. Equilibrium means what? The same proportion. So before the creation emerges, at the time of praḷayaṁ, the condition is guṇanām sām̐ya avastha. Sām̐yam means equilibrium. And in equilibrium state, there is no creation. And when the time for creation comes, the guṇas are disturbed; the proportions are disturbed, and the creation has got all the three guṇas alright; but not in sām̐ya avastha, but in viṣama avastha. The proportion will vary; the percentage of these three guṇas will vary.

And according to the scriptures, even the most inert object in the creation also has got three guṇas and the plant kingdom has also three guṇas; the animal also has three guṇas; human-beings also have got three guṇas; every one is a mixture of three guṇas; but the differences in a particular thing is because of different proportions in the guṇas.

And in the human being, how does the domination of each guṇa expressed itself?

Kṛṣṇa points out satva-guṇa makes the character or the nature of the individual to be jñāna pradhāna Puruṣaḥ. Satva represents jñāna pradhānam. It makes a person a cognitive individual; an intellectual person interested in, or thirsting for more and more knowledge. So in his case, the jñānēndriya, the five sense organs of knowledge, as well as the controlling intellect will be highly active. And diagonally opposite is the raja pradhānam. In a rajasic character, it will be karma pradhāna; activity oriented. So jñānēndriyas are generally passive; do not ask me what are the jñānēndriyas? The eyes, the ears, nose, the tongue and the skin and the intellect; the analysing-intellect; the thinking intellect, judging-intellect; that will be active, whereas in a rājasic personality, it will be karma pradhāna which means karmēndriyas will be active. Vāk, (will never to silent, can go on non-stop, you can see this in any group, some people not talking at all ~ the other person would be dominating all the time) vāk pradhāna, and if you do not allow him to talk in a lecture hall or something, vāk cannot be active, but the hands and legs cannot be quiet. So therefore vāk, pāni, pāda, pāyu, upastha and behind that the pañca prāṇās, the energy is highly active, hyper-active.

So satva-guṇa is jñāna pradhāna, rajō-guṇa gives a karma pradhāna personality. And Tamō guṇa will be the suppression of both. Neither the jñānēndriyas will be active, nor will karmēndriyas be active; more inertia will be there. So mainly if you study satva and rajas, tamas you can easily find out, it is the suppression of both of them.

And when a person is a jñāna pradhāna person; generally that person will be turned inwards, internal-oriented-mind a person will have, because a mind which seeks knowledge is always intellectually-active, analysing, thinking, hypothethising, theorizing, in fact, intellectuals live in their own world of ideas; they are not even aware of the surroundings. Therefore Satva dominant will express itself in the form of Nivṛṭti pradhāna. Nivṛṭti means turning inwards or withdrawal.

Whereas when rajōguṇa is dominant, it will be pravṛṭti pradhāna, the person will be highly turned outwards. One is inward, another is outward. When satva-guṇa is dominant, and a person is thinking, contemplative, etc.; naturally that mind will not like to relate itself with the external world of objects, because very relationship or interaction or transaction will make the mind extrovert; whereas sātvic mind being turned inward, it does not like saṅga; saṅga means what interaction, transaction, etc. it does not like. Therefore, this is asaṅga- pradhāna whereas a rājasic mind loves turning outward. Socialising, interacting, talking to people. So if you go for a camp, you will find that one person would love to be inside the room, the other people will love to go out and socialise, meet, talk and enquire, all those things. What makes the difference, one is satva pradhāna and another is raja pradhāna. One is asaṅga, the other sasaṅga.

The fourth difference that we can see is that a thinking mind would naturally love a set-up which is conducive for contemplation, and therefore it loves silence. Tranquility, quietitude; It wants niśabdathā, whereas the silence is poison for the rajasic mind, it cannot withstand silence. It will switch on the TV to the top decibel. Cannot withstand silence or one has to call someone on the phone. Something or the other or use the walkman. Something or the other, it likes noisy activity; that is why we say that there is buzzing activity. We never say silent activity. Buzzing activity; lot of noise. Noise will be there.

And Tamōguṇa is just the opposite, it suppresses both satva and rajas and Kṛṣṇa wants to point out that all the three guṇas are bondage. All the three guṇas cause bondage in different ways.

How all the three guṇas cause bondage? A sātvic mind will love a set-up which is quiet, and which is conducive for thinking, contemplation, study, etc. and if that set up is disturbed, by any sound or any visitor; then a sātvic mind is upset. And therefore, it is a duḥkha-miṣṛitha condition. Because as long as the set up is favourable to me, the sātvic mind enjoys. In fact many people after studying Vēdanta, they would like to spend more time in study, meditation, etc. at home, and they complain, Swamiji, lot of disturbances. Irritating disturbances. And even if no other sound is there, the sound of the clock, this person gets irritated. Or even the lizard says ki, ki, ki; this person gets irritated. A sāvīc mind is also a bound-mind because it cannot totally control the set-up, when the set-up is disturbed, it has to come.

Similarly, a rājasic mind, of course hates silence and quietude, and if there are no people around, that person is upset and disturbed and therefore, he wants to disturb the neighbour. Cannot keep quiet. Because he cannot face silence. Therefore a rājasic mind also will face duḥkham because, as long as it is able to order the set up as it wants, it is fine; but when the set-up is disturbed, it is unhappy and tamasic mind, that also will have problems. Kṛṣṇa will tell the details later; the greatest problem being there is no scope for progress at all. So, therefore, all the three guṇas are mixed with pain or sorrow. And Kṛṣṇa points out that all the three guṇas cause dependence. A person who loves silence is addicted to silence. And he is not a free person because to enjoy happiness, he requires silence. And therefore he is mukthaḥ or baddhaḥ? Sāvīc person is also bound, because he is addicted to silence.

What about rājasic person? That person is also bound, because he is addicted to noise; company he wants. If all the people go out, this person will feel lonely and disturbed. Therefore, bandakatvam, dependence and bondage is common to all the people; pain is common to all the people, wherever dependence is there; pain is also there.

And thirdly, all the people will have athrupthikārathvam (this is said in Upaniṣads), duḥkha-misrithatvam, athrupthikārathvam, bandhakatvam. Athrupthikārathvam is also common to all the three.

How, a sāvīc person wants to gain more and more knowledge. He has a got a great hunger for knowledge. And without knowledge, he feels a limited person; and therefore he wants to remove the knowledge-wise limitation; which limitation, the rājasic person will never feel. Sāvīc person alone will have the unique sense of limitation; what I know is less; and therefore, he goes on acquiring knowledge; because he wants to become omniscient, sarvajñā. But to his utter desperation and dismay he finds out any amount of knowledge he gathers, his limitation, knowledge-wise limitation does not go away.

In fact, the more you learn the more you know about you do not know. Therefore greater your knowledge, more you know about your ignorance, and that is why in every field, he goes on specialising, specialising, specialising, and the whole life time is not enough to concentrate on one subject. One medicine into so many parts; whole body is divided into ophthalmology, ENT Department, dentistry and dermatology. Swamiji says dermatologists has skin-deep knowledge. If you go little deeper, he will say that it is not my department, and you have to go to the bone specialist. Orthopedist. Whatever it is.

So therefore, as somebody nicely defined, a specialist is one who learns more and more about less and less things. And therefore I am never going to become omniscient in the field of any branch of science and therefore saṁsāra; this is called intellectual saṁsāra. I want to know more about; and I am not able to know.

Similarly, a rājasic person also suffers from saṁsāra, not in terms of knowledge but in terms of activity. He wants to do more and more; accomplish more and more. He becomes a workholic; he says a miles and miles I have to travel; and do all these things. And at any time he looks at himself, he is not satisfied.

Satvic person travels from finitude to finitude, rajasic person travels from to finitude to finitude, tamasic person does not travel at all; therefore he is from finitude to....? There is no From; he continues in finitude.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa says: all the three guṇas will bind you. And all the three forms of ahaṁkāra are bondage. Sātvic ahaṁkāra is also bondage; rājasic ahaṁkāra is also bondage, tāmasic ahaṁkāra is also bondage.

If you want to transcend bondage, you have to transcend ahaṁkāra and own up your higher-nature and what is your higher-nature? The Sākṣi, guṇāthitha Sākṣi.

But Kṛṣṇa wants to point out one important thing; even though the three guṇas are causes of bondage, for liberation, you will have to use the three guṇas only as stepping stone. Even though they are the causes of bondage, you will have to intelligently use them and transcend them; like a poll vaulter; what does he do? He has got a poll. To vault himself. And what does he do? He uses the poll; runs, fixes down and with the help of the pole alone, he goes up, and cross the bar, thereafter what does he do? he should not say that because of this pole alone, I am on the top now; I should show my gratitude; at this time, if I leave the pole, I am not loyal to the pole at all, therefore nicely I will hold on to it; etc. if someone says, he is a fool. You have to drop. So one person uses the pole, goes up and refuses to drop. He is an Fool No.1. There is another person who says, anyway after reaching up, I have to drop the pole, why take the pole at all; prakṣālanāti pankasya dūrāt, asparśanam vanam.

Therefore he refuses to use the pole. This fellow is super idiot. An intelligent person uses the pole, goes up, drops the pole and wins the Commonwealth gold medal. Similarly use the ahaṁkāra pole. You require tamōguṇa also. If you do not have tamōguṇa at all, if you are all the time jñāna pradhāna and karma pradhāna, you will never go to sleep. And if you do not sleep at all for you and more than that problem for others; therefore we require Tamōguṇa for sufficient rest; and recuperation, use tamōguṇa and you have to use rajōguṇa and become a karma pradhana person to follow karma-yōga.

Karma-yōga requires a rājasic āhaṁkāra. And thereafter you have to go to jñāna-yōga and jñāna-yōga requires what ahaṁkāra? Sātvic ahaṁkāra. Suppose in the class you have got tāmasic ahaṁkāra, what will you be doing? Dozing. If you have a rājasic ahaṁkāra, what will happen? Wandering all over; who are all come; who are all sleeping, etc. you will be watching. There are some people who love to watch who are all sleeping. Rājasic ahaṁkāra.

So a wandering mind cannot learn, a dozing mind cannot learn, an alert, vigilant and non-wandering mind absorbs the teaching like sponge. And once it gets it wisdom; what is the wisdom? The wisdom is I am not this inferior saḡuṇa ahaṁkāra nature; because it is mithya and inferior; my real nature is Aham guṇāthitha sākṣi asmi.

Thus, we have to know the nature of the three guṇas and how they bind us and we also should know how to intelligently use the three guṇas, and become guṇathithaḥ and guṇathithaḥ is a liberated person.

This is going to be the analysis in the verses beginning from the 5th verse onwards, the details of which we will see from the next class.

183 Chapter 14, Verses 05-09

ॐ

For analysing the three guṇas, Lord Kṛṣṇa has given the introduction and in the introductory portion we saw that every individual is a mixture of two portions; one is called sākṣi-aṁśa, the higher part of the individual and second is ahaṁkāra -aṁśa, the lower part of the individual. Of these two portions, the sākṣi portion the higher part consists of only consciousness which is pure caitanyam; whereas the ahaṁkāra the lower part consists of two things, one is the inert-body-mind-complex, is part of ahaṁkāra, and this inert-body-mind-complex, enjoys the reflected consciousness or borrowed consciousness and because of that, the body-mind-complex has become sentient. Just as a mirror, a non-luminous-mirror becomes a bright-mirror when it has got a reflected sunlight. So when I look at a bright-mirror, I should remember it has got two parts; one is the mirror part and the second is the reflected sun.

In the same way, the ahaṁkāra, like the bright-mirror has got two parts, one is the inert-body-mind-complex, like the mirror, and the second is the borrowed or reflected consciousness. In Sānskrīt we call it Prathibhimbha caitanyam plus the body. And this mixture prathibhimbha-caitanyam plus the body together is called ahaṁkāra and what is the sākṣi? Sākṣi is neither the body, nor is the reflected consciousness. Sākṣi is different from both the body and the reflected consciousness and what is that? The original consciousness. If you remember Tatva Bōdha, RM + RC = Ahaṁkāra. RM means the reflecting medium, the body + RC, the reflected consciousness is equal to the ahaṁkāra.

Then what is the sākṣi? It is neither the RM, nor is it the RC, but it is OC. In OC itself our life is running!!!. So this OC part is called the higher part, the sākṣi-amśa, RC plus RM is called the lower part, the ahaṁkāra amśa, the sākṣi-amśa and the ahaṁkāra amśa is together inseparably. When I use the word, I, it is a mixture of both the sākṣi and Ahaṁkāra. And of these two amśas, the sākṣi is the nirguṇa amśa, because it is pure consciousness; whereas the ahaṁkāra contains the body-mind-complex, and the body-mind-complex is matter. It is prakṛti and therefore Ahaṁkāra is endowed with three guṇas. So Ahaṁkāra amśa is saguṇa amśa, whereas Sākṣi-amśa is (amśa means aspect, facet or part). So my lower nature is saguṇa nature and my higher-nature is Nirguṇa sākṣi.

And having said this much, Kṛṣṇa wants to point out that the ahaṁkāra can never escape from the three guṇas; because ahaṁkāra consists of prakṛti, it is made up of the prakṛti and therefore ahaṁkāra (when I say, ahaṁkāra, you should remember, body-mind-complex plus the reflected consciousness); body-mind complex is born out of prakṛti principle. You have to remember that always, and then only ahaṁkāra and saguṇa can be understood clearly.

Therefore, my lower part; the ahaṁkāra amśa can never escape from these three guṇas and the only juggling that I can do is change the proportion of the guṇas. Like some political parties do, they change the ministers to party work and from party work to ministry and then to governorship. The party consists of the same type of people. I am not telling whether they are good people or bad people. You can decide the composition!

Ahaṁkāra can never escape from the three guṇas. Ahaṁkāra can only be dominant in satva-guṇa; in which case it will be sātvic ahaṁkāra, it can be dominant in rajō-guṇa in which case it will be rājasic ahaṁkāra or it can be tāmasic ahaṁkāra.

And Kṛṣṇa wants to say that whether it is sātvic, rājasic or tāmasic; all these three guṇas are bound to bind the individual. Only the type of saṁsāra caused will change; the mode of bondage will change, one may be a golden shackle; another may be silver shackle;

another may be an iron shackle; but all the three are shackles. Like in Saudi Arabia, when a member of the royal family commits a crime and they have to behead, they will use a gold sword. What will be difference, when it will be cut by a gold sword or silver sword? Therefore Kṛṣṇa wants to say that all these three guṇas would bind; therefore you want to be free you have to transcend the saṅga ahaṁkāra, and you have to own up your higher guṇāthitha, nirguṇa, sāksi-amśaḥ.

But one thing that Kṛṣṇa admits is to become a guṇāthitha, initially you will have to use the three guṇas as a stepping stone; as I gave the example of the pole, used by the pole-vaulter. The pole will have to be used to go above the bar; but having gone above, the pole will have to be dropped. Not using the pole is also foolishness, not leaving the pole is also foolishness; use the pole, cross the bar and leave the pole. Similarly use the guṇas and then drop the guṇa; drop means, transcend the guṇa and become guṇāthitha.

This is what Kṛṣṇa is going to teach. For that purpose the analysis of the three guṇas is started from verse No.5, which will go up to verse no.18. And Kṛṣṇa gave the introduction in fifth verse. There are three guṇas associated with ahaṁkāra; dēhīnām, dēhī means what: the Ahaṁkāra pradhāna jīva. And that ahaṁkāra, the jīva is associated with all the three guṇas in different proportions and nibadhnanti; all the three guṇas will bind differently.

Up to this we saw in the last class.

तत्र सत्त्वं निर्मलत्वात्प्रकाशकमनामयम् |
खसङ्गेन बध्नाति ज्ञानसङ्गेन चानघ || १४- ६ ||

tatra sattvaṁ nirmalatvāt prakāśakamanāmayam |
ukhasaṅgēna badhnāti jñānasaṅgēna cānagha || 14.6 ||

तत्र tatra among them सत्त्वम् satvam sattva प्रकाशकम् prakāśakam is bright अनामयम् anāmayam and harmless निर्मलत्वात् nirmalatvāt due to (its) purity, बध्नाति badhnāti it binds, सुखसङ्गेन sukhasaṅgēna by causing attachment to pleasure च ज्ञानसङ्गेन ca jñānasaṅgēna and by causing attachment to knowledge, अनघ anagha Oh Arjuna!

6. Among them, satva is bright and harmless due to (its) purity. It binds by causing attachment to pleasure and by causing attachment to knowledge, Oh Arjuna!

For the sake of our convenience, this analysis of the three guṇas can be divided into five topics.

The first topic is the definition of each guṇa. In Sānskrīt, we call it Lakṣaṇam. Lakṣaṇam means the definition. What is the definition of Satva? Similarly Rajas and Tamas.

Then the second topic that Kṛṣṇa will discuss is the mode or method of bondage. How each guṇa binds a person in its own unique way? In Sānskrīt we call it bandana prakāraḥ. Bandanam means bondage, prakāraḥ means mode or method. This the second topic.

The third topic is the indication or clue to find out which guṇa is predominant in a person. Whether I am a satva predominant person, having a sātvic ahaṁkāra, or whether I am a rājasic or tāmasic; how can I know. So we should have some indicator or test that indicator is called Liṅgam. So thus satva liṅgam, rajō liṅgam, and tamō liṅgam. Liṅgam does not mean Śivaliṅgam; liṅgam means an indicator.

Then the fourth topic is the gathiḥ. What will be the type of travel taken by, the course of travel taken by a jīva, after death? If a person dies, with satva predominant, which direction he will travel; if he dies with rajas predominant, which direction he will travel; similarly, tamasaḥ gathiḥ. So the word gathiḥ means maraṇa ananthara prayāṇam. This is the fourth topic.

Then the fifth and final topic is: the consequences of the domination of each guṇa in this life itself. If satva is predominant in a person, what consequences we can find, here when we are alive. In Sānskrīt, we call it phalam. Satva phalam, raja phalam, and tamō phalam.

What is the difference between gathiḥ and phalam? Gathiḥ is the consequence after death; phalam is consequence before death. These are the five topics. Lakṣaṇam, bandana prakāraḥ, liṅgam, gathiḥ and phalam.

Of these five topics, first we are going to take up lakṣaṇam and bandana prakāraḥ. In verse No.6, Kṛṣṇa talks about satva lakṣaṇam and satva bandana prakāraḥ. Then in the 7th verse, rajō lakṣaṇam and bandana prakāraḥ; and in the 8th verse, tamō lakṣaṇam and bandana prakāraḥ.

Now let us look into the verse. Tatra. Among these three guṇas of ahaṁkāra or sākṣi? Sākṣi does not have. The ahaṁkāra, tatra, satvam, when satva is predominant in a person, in the ahaṁkāra, nirmalatvāt; it is called śuddha satvam or nirmala satvam. And what do you mean by śuddha satvam or nirmala satvam? It means when satva-guṇa is dominant, the other two guṇas will not contaminate, influence or pollute satva-guṇa. If rajō-guṇa and tamō-guṇa contaminate or pollute the satva-guṇa, it will be called malina satvam, but when satva is dominant, rajas and tamas will not affect it. And when rajas and tamas do not affect, what will be the nature of that satva. Prakāśakam.

When tamō-guṇa influences the satva, tamō-guṇa being dullness, tamō-guṇa being ignorance and darkness and dullness. If tamō-guṇa pollutes satva-guṇa, the mind will be turbulent; like water mixed with particles will be turbid water, will not be bright and pure. When tamō-guṇa influences satva, the mind will be turbid; but when tamō-guṇa does not influence satva, it is like clean filtered water; treated water, zero-B water; the mind will be clear; in thinking there will be clarity. So when will there be clarity in thinking? When satva-guṇa is nirmala, that means not influenced by tamō-guṇa. Dullness. Tamas stands for dullness. Therefore Prakāśatmakam. Therefore a satva pradhana mind will have clarity of thinking. That is why in English also, we use the expression, he is a bright boy; bright; means clarity of thinking.

And similarly, if rajō-guṇa pollutes the satva, what will be condition? Rajō-guṇa stands for activity; restlessness; as I said in the last class, extrovertedness etc. when rajō-guṇa pollutes the satva, the mind will be restless, wandering, vacillating, wavering.

but when satva-guṇa is predominant, and rajō-guṇa does not influence, that satva-guṇa is nirāmayam.

Prakāśatmakam means unpolluted by tamō-guṇa. Nirāmayam means unpolluted by rajō-guṇa. Nirāmayam means free from tension; free from stress; free from strain; free from restlessness.

When rajō-guṇa pollutes, the mind cannot relax. Whereas when satva is predominant it becomes a Prakāśatmakam, bright and calm. And therefore, what is the definition of satva-guṇa? It is Prakāśatmakam, it is of the nature of brightness and calmness, quietitude, tranquility And this seems to be a wonderful nature; if the mind is bright and calm, it is capable of learning things; it is capable of absorbing; it is capable of contemplation, it is capable of self-analysis.

Satva guṇa seems to be a wonderful thing; how do you say, satva-guṇa binds? Kṛṣṇa says: satva-guṇa is also bondage, because a sātvic mind seeks always a tranquil atmosphere; a sātvic mind seeks seclusion; a sātvik mind seeks freedom from noise pollution. OK, அதுல என்ன தப்பு? What is wrong in it? The problem is you can never control the external atmosphere. So if you are addicted to seclusion and quietitude, you become a dependant person, dependant on what?; quietitude and seclusion. And if a situation comes in the family, where you cannot order quietitude and seclusion, you become highly disturbed. Nobody allows me to be peaceful even for a small time; the phone calls, the doorbell, the noise, neighbours, etc. you want quietitude, quietitude becomes a cause of bondage.

Whereas a liberated person is defined as a person who does not depend even quietitude or seclusion for fulfilment and happiness. Any type of dependence is bondage, satva-guṇa leads to noble dependence, but noble dependence is also dependence.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa says: Sukha saṅgēna; the sātvic ahaṁkāra sees seclusion, quietitude, etc. and that becomes, that need becomes bondage. And unfortunately, in India, with such a big population you go anywhere; one thing you cannot avoid is noise. So many festivals and there is no connection to the cinema music blaring all-round in the temple compound!! And you get irritated and go there; there is one, he switches on and he goes away for tea. So you get highly irritated, because you need tranquility. So sukha saṅgēna badnāthi.

And second type of bondage is jñāna saṅgēna ca Anagha. Sātvic mind is attached to knowledge. It is an introvert mind which wants to think and know and study and increase the range of knowledge. Just as a rājasic mind we will see is attached to karma, rājasic mind is karmēndriya pradhāna, a sātvic ahaṁkāra is jñānēndriya pradhāna, it wants to increase knowledge. And both have got greed. There the greed is for action; here the greed is for knowledge. OK, what is wrong; if a sātvic ahaṁkāra wants more and more knowledge; the problem is any amount of knowledge you gather; you can never become full and complete, because of omniscience is impossible. Just as you gather any amount of money, you are finite, you gather any amount of knowledge, you are intellectually finite. And therefore a rājasic person is dissatisfied with his external possession; a sātvic person is dissatisfied with his internal possession of jñānam.

And therefore here by jñānam I mean the material knowledge. I am not talking about ātma jñānam; I mean aparā vidya; he wants to gather more and more. Satvic person suffers from intellectual saṁsāra. He wants to solve the fundamental problems of science and when he dies incapable of solving a crucial scientific problem, he dies a restless person, because he could not solve that problem. And they think that you can solve all the problem, always there will be some scientific unsolved problem. For knowledge is bound.

Hey anagha, means Arjuna and by using the word Anagha, Kṛṣṇa indirectly says Arjuna you have a pure mind. Because he asked for knowledge. śiṣyastē'haṁ śādhi māṁ tvāṁ prapannam. So thus in the first line, tatva lakṣaṇam is given, in the second line is tatva bandana prakāra is given. What is lakṣaṇam; Prakāśātmakam. What is bandana prakāra? Sukha Saṅgēna. Attachment to quietude is the bondage.

Now we will come to the rajō lakṣaṇam and bandana prakāra.

Verse 14.7

रजो रागात्मकं विद्धि तृष्णासङ्गसमुद्भवम् |
तन्निबध्नाति कौन्तेय कर्मसङ्गेन देहिनम् || १४- ७ ||

rajō rāgātmakam viddhi tṛṣṇāsaṅgasamudbhavam |
tannibadhnāti kauntēya karmasaṅgēna dēhinam || 14.7 ||

विद्धि viddhi understand, राजः रागात्मकम् rājaḥ rāgatmakam rajas to be of the nature of passion, तृष्णासङ्गसमुद्भवम् tṛṣṇāsaṅgasamudbhavam (and) to be the cause of desire and attachment, तद् निबध्नाति tad nibadhnāti it binds, देहिनम् dēhinam self कर्मसङ्गेन karmasaṅgena by causing attachment to activity, कौन्तेय kauntēya Oh Arjuna !

7. Understand Rajas to be of the nature of passion (and) to the cause of desire and attachment. It binds the self by causing attachment to activity, Oh Arjuna.

First line deals with rajō-guṇa lakṣaṇam. rajō rāgātmakam viddhi. It is of the nature of attachment and passion; a rājasic mind is highly extrovert; and it always wants to relate with things and people. The nature of rajō-guṇa is that the mind is always extrovert and it always wants to have relationship with things and people. If satva is nivṛttiḥ pradhāna, seclusion and withdrawal; rajas makes a person pravṛtti pradhāna; interested in companionship; in people, in relationship, in interaction. And it never loves quietitude; all the time it wants to talk to someone or the other. If you put a rajasic person in a room alone, he cannot survive for five minutes; he will break the door and come out. Whereas if you put a sāvīc person, you will not know that such a person is there; it is just the opposite.

Therefore Kṛṣṇa says: rājaḥ rāgātmakam, rāgā means relationship, attachment, passion. All the time trying to stick to people. And even while sitting there are some people, so much space would be there; they will sit others also. In sleep also they have to embrace someone; if nobody is there; then the pillow is there. It is the type of mind. I am not saying it is good or bad; I am saying the two types of mind; it is a non-judgmental observation. We require each guṇa to attain liberation. Because karma-yōga will require activity. Pañca maha yajña will require activity, in which case, we will require rajō-guṇa and of course the study of vēdānta will require satva-guṇa. Therefore no guṇa is good or bad, each guṇa plays its own role. In fact, if you see the range of sādhana, in each level of sādhana, we are making use of one guṇa or the other.

And therefore rājaḥ rāgātmakam viddhi, sticky type, passionate. And naturally, tṛṣṇāsaṅgasamudbhavam. Since it is an extrovert mind, a restless mind, a dynamic mind, it has got lot of ambitions and wants to achieve; always wants to achieve something or the other; it is an ambitious mind; and therefore it has tṛṣṇa; tṛṣṇa means desire for external thing; Lot of possession; lot of people; And if husband is sāvīc and wife is rājasic or wife is sātvic and husband is rājasic, you had it. One wants peace and one wants blah blah. You have to manage. So tṛṣṇa means what?

Of course the desire we will divide into two, either selfish desire or selfless desire; the mind is full of desire by which a person wants to become a workaholic person and not only tṛṣṇa, means Kāma;

And after acquiring things, asaṅgaḥ, he wants to hold on to everything. The old pen, with which he wrote the SSLC examination 3 times. It is not writing now; it is an ink pen; who needs that now: yet he keeps that. Even the disposable cups and bottles all of them he does not want to give up anything. Because fashion is there, the gum is there and therefore parigraḥ pradhanā. Parigraḥ means possession.

Whereas satva-guṇa makes a person. aparigraḥ pradhanā; aparigraḥ, he wants to drop things. One wants to hold and the other wants to drop. And therefore Asaṅga. Sticking to everything. Samudbhavam means it is the source. What is the source? Rajō guṇa is the source of desire and attachment. Desire for things not possessed and attachment to things which are already possessed. In fact you begin to wonder he possesses the object or he is possessed by the object. So this is the rajō-guṇa definition; what is the definition? rāgātmakam: of the nature of attachment.

And how does the rajō-guṇa bind the individual? Hey Kaunteya. Tat nibadhnāti. Rajō guṇa also binds, dēhinām, the individual, karma saṅgēna, by making him attached to karma, all the time. Karma saṅga make him a workaholic. And we may argue karma is required for accomplishing them. Even karma-yōga is required for citta śuddhi, what is wrong in doing karma? Since you ask, what vēdānta says, karma is required up to a particular stage; after that particular stage, one has to shift to jñāna-yōga. Karma-yōgaḥ as to be followed by jñāna-yōga, but the problem with rajasic person is, he can never come to jñāna-yōga. Karma, Karma Karma, Karma, Karma; fall dead. So that is called attachment. Therefore Karma saṅgēna, attachment to karma is binding. What about satva-guṇa? Jñāna saṅgēna. Here it is karma saṅgēna.

Verse 14.8

तमस्त्वज्ञानजं विद्धि मोहनं सर्वदेहिनाम् |
प्रमादालस्यनिद्राभिस्तन्निबध्नाति भारत || १४- ८ ||

[Tamastvajñānajaṁ viddhi mōhanaṁ sarvadēhinām |
pramādālasyanidrābhistannibadhnāti bhārata || 14.8 ||](#)

विद्धि viddhi understand, तमः तु tamaḥ tu tamas to be अज्ञानजम् ajñānajaṁ born of ajñāna मोहनम् mōhanam and to the deluder सर्वदेहिनाम् sarvadēhinām of all beings तद्

निबध्नाति tad nibadhnāti it binds प्रमादालस्यनिद्राभिः pramādālasyanidrabiḥ by (causing) negligence, indolence, and sleep, भारत bhārata Oh Arjuna !

8. Understand tamas to be born of ajñāna and to be the deluder of all beings. It binds by (causing) negligence, indolence, and sleep, Oh Arjuna.

So now comes the Tamō guṇa lakṣaṇam and tamō-guṇa bandana prakārah. Kṛṣṇa says Tama ha tu ajñānam thu viddhi. Tamō guṇa also is born out of ajñānam. Ajñānam in the context means prakṛti. Because Prakṛti is the original source of the creation. From prakṛti alone satva-guṇa also flows; rajō-guṇa also flows; tamō-guṇa also. Therefore, this tamō-guṇa is also equally born out of prakṛti or māya. And therefore one cannot escape from tamō-guṇa.

But here we are dealing with what problems? The predominance of tamō-guṇa, will cause what all problems; தூங்குதல் problem இல்லை; ஆனால் தூங்கிண்டே இருக்கிறது தான் problem (sleeping is not problem; then what is the problem. Continuing to sleep is the problem) Sleeping is not the problem; everyone has to sleep. If one does not sleep, there is some problem; insomnia is a problem; for that person also; and more than that for the other people also. Therefore, we do not condemn tamō-guṇa but we are talking about the predominance of tamō-guṇa will create the following problems.

The first problem is that it suppresses the satva-guṇa and rajō-guṇa. Since satva-guṇa is suppressed, there is no clarity of thinking. And therefore one even does not ask what is the purpose of life. Human life is never taken seriously. The precious time is never taken seriously. The young age is never taken seriously. All because of the lack of clarity of thinking.

And because of that, mōhanātmakam; mōhanam means delusion. Mōhanam, is not mōhana rāga here, mōhanam means of the nature of delusion, that means there is no clear thinking and also often there is no goal in life; it is just moving along with the current; there is no goal and even if goals are there; the priorities are not clear. How much money is important; how much health is important; how much knowledge is important; with regard to all these, there is no clarity and therefore Mōhanam sarvadēhinām; it causes delusion for all those people, and therefore what is the definition of tamō-guṇa; mōhanātmakam of the nature of delusion.

And there are some people who are so intensely deluded that you try to talk to them and help them, they are so powerful that they make you also confused. They transfer the confusion to you also. Nothing can be done, except prārthana. Sometime such children are born in our own family; they do not take to study seriously, mother is worried; Swamiji, is there some prayer, this boy is not studying; and in this highly competitive society, if he does not study properly, in future which girl will marry him; girls are all P.hds, this fellow does not want to go beyond SSLC ~ so therefore, will he get married; will he get a good job; parents are worried; but the child does not know the seriousness of the life itself. Therefore of the nature of delusion; at least for the children, if it is up to a particular stage, it is OK but there are people even grown up not clear about life and its goals.

And how does Tamō guṇa bind a person? Pramādālasyanidrābhistannibadhnāti. Pramāda, means carelessness; negligence with regard to the proper utilisation of the body.

Labdhvā kathacinnarajanma durlabham. Getting narajanma is very very rare. Nari janma is possible. Nara janma is durlabham; and that too we are born in a vēdic culture which talk about the higher goal, and if I do not make use of this wonderful opportunity; இப்பிறவி தப்பினால்; எப்பிறவி வாய்க்குமோ? (If this life is missed, what life will we get?) No guarantee that next janma will be manuṣya janma. We do not want; we are all liberated! Other people; So pramādha. Not Tamil pramādha, is the Sānskrīt pramādha, carelessness, negligence, Alāsyam, laziness or indolence; idling the time.

And then Nidrā, means sleep. Therefore, most of the time, this person is asleep or sleepy. This two avasathas he is aware only. He is not aware of the third stage of jāgrat avastha at all. Either he is asleep or sleepy with half closed eyes; you think he is meditating, but he is sleeping. For such people, never prescribe meditation. So if you prescribe meditation, they will continue sleeping in sitting posture. Therefore you have to prescribe Karma. And therefore, Pramāda, negligence; laziness and sleep. Through these three, tannibadhnāti bhāratha.

Tamō guṇa binds a person. This person does not acquire puṇyam or pāpam. There is an advantage in Tamō Guṇa. This person does not acquire puṇyam or pāpam, why? Puṇyam and pāpam are karma-phalam; and this person does not do any karma; if only you do karma, to get puṇyam and pāpam. Therefore the advantage for this person, he will not acquire much āgāmi, he will not acquire fresh puṇyam and pāpam, but remember that is not a great achievement, animals also do not acquire puṇyam or pāpam. If I stay I have not acquired any puṇyam or pāpam, it means I have been like a buffalo. Is it a credit, therefore it is perpetuation of bondage. So tannibadhnāti Bharatha.

Verse 14.9

सत्त्वं सुखे सज्जयति रजः कर्मणि भारत |
ज्ञानमावृत्य तु तमः प्रमादे सज्जयत्युत || १४- ९ ||

Sattvaṁ sukhē sañjayati rajaḥ karmaṇi bhārata |
jñānamāvṛtya tu tamaḥ pramādē sañjayatyuta || 14.9 ||

सत्त्वं सज्जयति sattvaṁ sajjayati Sattva binds (one), सुखे sukhē to pleasure रजः rajaḥ Rajas (binds one), कर्मणि karmaṇi to action, उत तु uta tu whereas, तमः tamaḥ sajjayati tamas binds(one), प्रमादे pramāde to negligence आवृत्य āvṛtya by veiling ज्ञानम् jñānam the discriminative power भारत bhārata Oh Arjuna!

9. Sattva binds (one) to pleasure, Rajas (binds one) to action; Whereas Tamas binds (one) to negligence by veiling the discriminative power, Oh Arjuna!

In this verse, Kṛṣṇa repeats the topic of bandana prakāraḥ; even though he has talked about it; he is putting that in a nutshell in this verse; how each guṇa binds a person; by creating a particular form of addiction. Each one binds by creating a particular form of addiction, which is called saṅghaḥ.

And what are the three addictions?

Sattvaṁ sukhē sañjayati; Satva guṇa causes addiction to quietude, Nivṛitti, withdrawal, silence; addiction to silence is also a form of addiction. So Sukham means tranquility, quietitude, seclusion, etc. So sukha saṅgha is the mode of bondage.

Whereas rajō-guṇa causes another form of addiction; karma saṅgēna. So it causes addiction to karma; doing karma is harmless; addiction to dharma is the problem. Enjoying silence is wonderful but addiction to silence is a problem. Like meditation is wonderful, but addiction to meditation is a problem. In fact, Vēdānta goes to the height of saying; even addiction to śāstra is an addiction. So do not say: I will leave all this now. We have not formed an interest all. So we can think of leaving after some time. Addiction to some guru, śāstra.

Vēdānta goes even up to God: அசை அறுமின்கள்; ஆசை அறுமின்கள்; ஈசனோடாகிலும். That kind of detachment we need not develop now; but Kṛṣṇa wants to say is karma is OK, karma addiction is a bondage.

Similarly, Tamō guṇa binds, How?: Pramādē; as we saw before is carelessness. Lack of attention. So no job is done wholeheartedly, whatever job he does, there are mistakes, there are corrections required; So pramāda saṅghaḥ, or you can say, Nidra Saṅghaḥ also.

And how does it cause that? jñānamāvṛtya; by way of covering the clarity of thinking. So by covering the discriminative power, the tamō-guṇa makes a person addicted to lose jobs all the time. So that means what; you cannot make that person responsible. Whatever job you give you have to stand behind. For that, we can ourselves do; he can never be a responsible person. More we will see in the next class.

Hari Om

184 Chapter 14, Verses 10-13

ॐ

In the last few classes, we saw that our higher-nature known as the sākṣi svarūpam is ever nirguṇam and therefore free from the influence of the three guṇas; but our vyāvahārika nature, our lower nature, which is called ahaṁkāra is a mixture of the body-mind complex, as well as the reflected consciousness. And till the ahaṁkāra consists of the body-mind complex and till the body-mind complex is born out of prakṛti, the ahaṁkāra can never escape from the three guṇas. And therefore, our body-mind complex is made up of three guṇas and the ahaṁkāra which consists of this body-mind complex is the necessarily made up of these three guṇas, and therefore, we can never escape from them. We have to live with these saḡuṇa ahaṁkāra.

And once we are forced to live with this ahaṁkāra, it is better that we understand the ahaṁkāra well, so that we know how to handle it properly. If you have to live with some people at home, if you have no escaping from them, better you try to, whether to succeed or not, try to understand those people well, because understanding will help in handling anything. Science is able to handle the nature more and more only because science has been able to know nature more and more. Knowledge gives the capacity for better handling. And therefore Kṛṣṇa says: you have to understand your own ahaṁkāra very well. For that, you must know what type of ahaṁkāra you have; which guṇa is dominant, which guṇa is in middle; the second place, and which guṇa is the lowest; better you understand and you also know how these guṇas influence your vyāvahārika life; both material life, as well as the spiritual life.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa stated into an enquiry into the three guṇas which we divided into 5 topics: the first topic being the definition of the three guṇas and he gave the definition; satva-guṇa is Prakāśātmakam and rajō-guṇa is rāgātmakam; and tamō-guṇa is mōhanātmakam. By the word Prakāśātmakam it means, a mind which would be inclined to gain more and more knowledge; a mind which is pre-disposed to the pursuit of knowledge. A mind with more and more knowing tendencies, a mind which want to use Jñānēndriyas more is called a sātvika mind.

Whereas rajō-guṇa is said to the rāgātmakam which is a personality with tend to add to more, more than knowing tendency; this personality has doing tendency; it is a dynamic mind which want to use the karmēndriyas more than the jñānēndriyas. And therefore, karma pre-disposition or karma tendency is rajō-guṇa lakṣaṇam, knowledge tendency is satva guṇa lakṣaṇam.

And tamō-guṇa is defined as mōhanātmakam, which means a personality, which is always in doubt; always indecisive; always procrastinating; always not sure what to do. A mind which is in eternal conflict and delusion and procrastination and if you try to help them resolve the conflict; not only you do not resolve their conflict, they will put conflict in your mind also. So powerful is their mōhaḥ. So this constant vacillation tendency is the expression of tamō-guṇa which we called mōhanātmakam. This is the first topic, the definition. Then the second topic that we did was banda prakāraḥ, how the three guṇas bind a person which we can easily infer, a calm mind has always a knowing tendency; learning tendency; therefore, naturally it is addicted to any infrastructure which is conducive for learning. It always loves learning infrastructure which means quietitude, which means seclusion, which means silence, which means withdrawal, which means reduction of relationships, because relationships requires extrovertedness. And therefore, a calm mind is attached to knowledge infrastructure whereas a rājasic mind hates knowledge infrastructure of quietude, withdrawal etc.

A rājasic mind craves for a karma infrastructure. It wants to do something or the other; therefore it wants gadgets, it wants to go out, i.e. it wants an infrastructure in which karmēndriyas can be active. And this is called bondage it is addicted to such a set-up and if such a set-up is not available, that person is a fish out of water. He is unhappy and therefore, whether unhappiness is caused by silence, or whether unhappiness is caused by noise, unhappiness is unhappiness and Vēdantā defines mōkṣa as that state of mind, in which there is no unhappiness in noise also, there is no unhappiness in silence also, it is not one which is not bound by either noise or silence. Therefore, sattvaṁ sukhē sañjāyathi, i.e. called sukha saṅgha or jñāna saṅgha, the bondage, and rajō-guṇa binds through karma saṅgha, attachment to karma.

And tamō-guṇa binds to nidrā and ālasya, tamō-guṇa mind is not bothered about what infrastructure it wants. It does not even know what it wants. Still groping in darkness. And also it does not want to decide. Decision making is tamō-guṇa mind, does not want, it is attached to vagueness, it is attached to negligence; it is attached to carelessness. So this is Pramāda saṅgha. Up to this we saw in the last class. Now we have to go to the next topic verse No.10.

रजस्तमश्चाभिभूय सत्त्वं भवति भारत |
रजः सत्त्वं तमश्चैव तमः सत्त्वं रजस्तथा || १४- १० ||

rajastamaścābhibhūya sattvaṁ bhavati bhārata |
rajah sattvaṁ tamaścaiva tamaḥ sattvaṁ rajastathā || 14.10 ||

सत्त्वं भवति satvaṃ bhavati sattva manifests, अभिभूय abhibhūya by overpowering, रजः च तमः rajaḥ ca tamaḥ rajas and tamas रजः rajaḥ rajas (manifests), सत्त्वं च एव तमः sattvaṃ ca ēva tamaḥ (by overpowering) sattva and tamas तमः tamaḥ tamas(manifests) सत्त्वं तथा रजः sattvaṃ tathā rajaḥ by overpowering) sattva and rajas भारत bhārata Oh Arjuna

10. SATTVA manifests by overpowering rajas and tamas. Rajas (manifests by over powering) sattva and tamas. Tamas (manifests by overpowering) sattva and rajas, Oh Arjuna!

For the third topic that Kṛṣṇa is going to deal with is the liṅgam or the indicatory mark to know, whether one is sātvic, rājasic or tāmasic; but before entering into this third topic, Kṛṣṇa is taking a small diversion. The 10th verse is a diversion verse. Of course, it is a deliberate diversion, because Kṛṣṇa considers this topic, this diversion topic important and what does Kṛṣṇa wants to say here? He says everything and being is made up of three guṇas; because everything and being is born of prakṛti. From an inert object to the most intelligent human being, every blessed thing in the creation is the product of prakṛti and therefore, everyone has got all the three guṇas.

But there is only one difference and that difference is even though everything is made up of three guṇas, the proportion is not uniform. The proportion was uniform before the creation; during the pralaya avastha, the three guṇas were in equilibrium. In saṅkya philosophy, they called it guṇānām sāmāya avastha praḷaya. Once the creation has started, there is no more equilibrium; there is viṣāmya avastha, viṣāmyam means inequilibrium.

And therefore in the case of an inert object, there also three guṇas are there, but tamō-guṇa will be the most dominant one in an inert object and that is why the object does not have a learning tendency. You do not find a wall in interested in Vēdānta. Does it mean that the wall does not have satva-guṇa? Not that; but tamō-guṇa is dominant, therefore it does not have the learning capacity nor has the wall the doing capacity. Thank God, if the wall wants to do some action; like going for an evening walk; it is a problem; it does not do that; it has got inertia. By inertia, we mean neither knowing capacity nor doing capacity, because tamō-guṇa is dominant.

And once you come to the plant kingdom, it has got some amount of satva and rajas, even though the plant is almost like an inert object only; but the plant has a little more of satva and rajas, and it has got some sentiency about the environment, which the inert object does not have. It does not have the extraordinary satva-guṇa, to learn. Therefore you do not have schools and colleges for plants; it does have that capacity. And similarly, the activities also in the case of a plant is limited, the plant has a limited activity of growing, but you won't see a plant going for a walk. Thank God. Or else the tree in the side of the road will come to the centre, while you are driving!! The plant has more satva, and rajas than an inert object but it has got only a limited.

And when we come to animals, we find satva and rajas are still more dominant; their capacity to learn and understand is more than the plant. And also they are not sthāvara; not stationary living being; but the animals are moving living being, that means rajō-guṇa is still more; higher grade.

And once you come to the human being, satva and rajas are still more dominant and therefore the human-beings have got schools and colleges, and books and knowledge goes on increasing going up to Brahma jñāna. Similarly, the number of activities the human-beings undertake also are innumerable/many. So thus find a gradual change in the proportion of the three guṇas and within the human-beings themselves. Kṛṣṇa points out that all the human-beings do not have the same proportion of guṇas; among the human-beings themselves, some of them have got more satva, some of them have got more rajas, some of them have got more tamas, and therefore, their svabhāvās, their character vary.

And therefore, a sātvic person is defined as one who has got the predominance of satva; it does not mean he does not have rajas and tamas, it only means satva is dominant and similarly in rājasic person, rajas is dominant, and in a tāmasic person, tamas is dominant.

And this tamas can be so dominant that some people can be closer to animals and some people can be closer to plants; and some people can be closer to stones. All these are possible even among human beings.

And therefore, Kṛṣṇa points out that satvam bhavathi. In a sātvic person, you have to supply that: in a sātvic person, satva-guṇa is present: How? overpowering abhibhūya: raja and tamō; overpowering rajaḥ and tamaḥ; satva is dominant. Hey Bhāratha, Hey Arjuna.

Then rajaḥ bhavati, bhavati; you have to supply, rajō-guṇa is present 'in a rājasic person' also we have to supply. So Rajō guṇa is present in a rājasic person, sattvaṁ tamaścābhibhūya, abhibhūya; you have to add; overpowering satva-guṇa and tamō-guṇa. Rajas is dominant in rājasic people

And tamaḥ bhavati, in a tāmasic person, tamō-guṇa is present; how? Sattvaṁ raja ca abhibhūya, we have to add abhibhūya, overpowering satvam guṇa and rajō-guṇa, tamas is dominant in tāmasic people.

Then comes a very very important question. If a person is Sātvic, Rājasic or Tāmasic, is it a fixed character or is it possible for us to change the character of a person? Is it possible for a person to change the proportion of the guṇas? If we cannot change the character of a person, we are doomed, because we are helpless; our future is already decided. Fortunately scriptures point out that the svabhāvā of a person can be transformed. The rate of transformation will defer from individual to individual and the amount of transformation also will defer from individual to individual but transformation is possible. In fact, all spiritual sādhanas are meant to change the proportion only because every sādhana requires a particular guṇa as a dominant thing. And according to śāstra, generally, most of the people are born with tamō-guṇa predominant only, because as baby what were we doing? Only two things; Undal uranganam. Urangiyal, as babies. We were sleeping for 10-15, 18 hours and babies wakes up only for one purpose, for feeding. And after feeding is over, again it goes to sleep.

Therefore generally, we are all janmana tama pradhāna and therefore śāstras prescribe the initial sādhana, to convert from tamō-guṇa pradhāna person to rajō-guṇa pradhāna person. The scriptures want us to be active in life; and that is why Vēdā begins not with jñāna-kāṇḍam, Vēdā begins with karma-kāṇḍam. Your life has to start with karma or activity.

And this karma kāṇḍa also they divided into two: because a rajō-guṇa itself is of two types; one rajō-guṇa is a rajō-guṇa, which is backed by tamō-guṇa. That is rajō-guṇa dominant, say 70% and next one is tamō-guṇa, say 20% and last one is satva-guṇa 10%. So in one type of rajō-guṇa, it is backed by tamō-guṇa and such a rajō-guṇa will hold the person for selfish activity for the fulfilment of personal desires. Vēdās say: And let your life start with selfish activity; you might have, why might have, you have any number of personal desires; and even if you do not have karma kāṇḍa itself, give advertisement for various types of desires, the scheme of karma kāṇḍa is what? To make one get up. Therefore, the Vēdās tempt a person to fulfil the worldly desires of artha-kāmah, earn money, buy house, a have TV, computer, car all of them Vēdā encourages, and we do not have time for any service to the society; Vēdās say does not matter, serve yourselves. This is called selfishly-active type of person, which I discuss Cāturvarṇyam context; I do not know whether you remember. And once a person has been selfishly active, Vēdās says, gradually change the character of activity; or previously it is RTS, and the composition should be changed to S, instead of tamō-guṇa in the second position, let satva-guṇa be in the second position, and the tamō-guṇa be the bottom.

So when a person converts himself form RTS to RST, a person is active because of rajō-guṇa, but the activity is selfless activity. Even though there is selfish activity it is limited, more and more activities are beneficial, to more number of people. So sakāma karma to niškāma karma.

And once a person has gone through these three stages, thereafter Vēdā says that if the rajō-guṇa is predominant and you are extrovert and active, you can never find time for jñāna yōga. And therefore let Karma continue up to a particular stage, when the mind has become mature and a time should come when your rājasic tendency should be converted into satva-guṇa (you should not tell that I will convert it right now). Be active, what karma can give, upāsana can never give. What upāsana gives, karma can never give.

And therefore karma yōga is also must, upāsana is also must, upāsana will convert a person from RST to SRT; What is SRT? Satva-guṇa pradhāna, and rajō-guṇa is in the middle position (or else he will not come to the class even, for that at least rajō-guṇa is necessary), Swamiji, you can come to my house!!! No No No. You have to come, so that he will have to have sufficient rajō-guṇa to come to the class, and of course, tamō-guṇa is also required. Therefore, inactivity to selfish activity to selfless activity to enquiry. This is our gradual transformation. Inactivity to selfish activity to selfless activity to enquiry is our journey and in fact if you take the four āśrams, brahmacarya āśrama, gṛhastha-āśrama, vānaprastha āśrama and sanyāsa-āśrama; these four āśramas also represent the gradual transformation.

And then a person finally comes to enquiry. Even though predominantly knowledge, he does not have any regret, he has already contributed to society through karma yōga. Contribute and then withdrawal, there will be no guilt. Without contribution if I withdraw, I will always have a guilt. What have I done to the world? And therefore, contribute, withdraw, learn, know and be free. And therefore character can be changed or not; and final character that is required is what: satva-guṇa pradhāna. To use the 4th chapter language, we all should become guṇa brāhmaṇa; from a guṇa śūdra to guṇa vaiśya, guṇa kṣatriya to guṇa brāhmaṇa. Guṇa śūdra is lazy, guṇa vaiśya is selfishly active; guṇa kṣatriya is selflessly acting; guṇa brāhmaṇa is pursuing knowledge, withdrawn or contemplative.

Therefore, Arjuna you have to understand where you stand and you have to adopt the appropriate sādhana and finally come to self-knowledge, which is an important aside, this is only to change our character, do not apply this to change others. OK.

We are not here to study and judge other people unless they are under our care. If they are our children, it is OK. Otherwise our primary concern is how to change our svabhāva. Then, now how and where do I stand. Am I a guṇa śūdra? Am I a guṇa kṣatriya, am I a guṇa brāhmaṇa, which guṇa is dominant in me, how to know? Kṛṣṇa says, I will give you the clue to find out, which is the third topic, guṇa liṅgāni, the indicator to find out where I stand.

What are the indicators we will read:

Verse 14.11

सर्वद्वारेषु देहेऽस्मिन्प्रकाश उपजायते |
ज्ञानं यदा तदा विद्याद्विवृद्धं सत्त्वमित्युत || १४- ११ ||

sarvadvārēṣu dēhē'smin prakāśa upajāyatē |
jñānam yadā tadā vidyādvivṛddham sattvamityuta || 14.11 ||

यदा प्रकाशः ज्ञानम् yadā prakāśaḥ jñānam when the light of knowledge, उपजायते upajāyatē grows सर्वद्वारेषु sarvadvārēṣu in all the sense organs, अस्मिन् देहे asmin dehe in this body, तदा विद्यात् tadā vidhyāt tada vidyat then, one should know इति उत iti uta that सत्त्वं विवृद्धम् sattvaṃ vivṛddham sattva is predominant.

11. When the light of knowledge grows in all the sense organs in this body, then one should know that Sattva is predominant.

So the third topic we are entering. Liṅgam, the indication and in the 11th verse, satva liṅgam is given. 12th verse gives rajō liṅgam, 13th verse tamō liṅgam. How to know? Kṛṣṇa says:

Asmin dēhē sarvadvārēṣu prakāśaḥ upajāyatē. Here dvāra means the five sense organs. dvāraṇi means indriyāṇi, and they are called dvāram or hole because through the five holes alone, we gather the knowledge of the external world. Śabda jñānam comes through srōthram. Similarly through the eyes, similarly smell through the nose; sarva dvārēṣu, and prakāśaḥ means brightness, the absorbing capacity. When all the five sense organs are bright and alert and have great absorbing capacity, and therefore jñānam and when they are able to acquire knowledge faster. Because when the absorbing capacity is more, the rate in which a person gathers knowledge also is high and if we have got such a photograph memory, like they have the drill, they will have a few objects, either drawn or the objects themselves are kept, they will ask you to observe you for 2 minutes and after that they will close, and you will have to tell what all items were there; 10 to 13 items; you can try this exercise; a diagram is there; you are asked to observe the diagram for a minute or two, and then you have to reproduce the diagram and try to find out how much percentage you are able to reproduce. Or you look at a Gīta verse and read slowly. And find out how many times reading is necessary to close the eyes and repeat the verse. If you have to read 10 times, I can read 8 times, he can read one and reproduce, the sense organs are really powerful. The mind is really alert. Satva is really top.

And there are some people who can do that once in a day. That is not enough. Generally itself, if I have the capacity, the jñānis are very active and efficient; it indicates satva pradhāna. Therefore prakāśaḥ upajāyate. So this is always an experience. Any announcement I give, there are always some people who miss the date; who miss the month; who miss the venue; or for the morning programme of 6 a.m. that person will come at 6 p.m. and once we had announced Dayānanda Swami 's jñānam particular date, in a particular month, mistake committed was about a month. So next month 25th was the date. So many people came to the Kāmaraj hall; all noted the date, but they forgot the month. Then only I understood that after the particular date of that month only, one should give an advertisement should be given. I always do lot of research to announce; more research than how to teach Gīta; and my aim is that no student should have doubt. But I have never succeeded. There is an announcement for one minute. Any way wanted I wanted to say is: jñānam yadā, jñānam prakāśaḥ upajāyate, when the sense organs are bright and therefore there is more knowledge acquisition; yadā tadā, one can judge oneself to be a sātvic person; sattvam vivṛddham iti vidya. Ok. If rajō-guṇa is dominant, what will be the indication.

Verse 14.12

लोभः प्रवृत्तिरारम्भः कर्मणामशमः स्पृहा |
रजस्येतानि जायन्ते विवृद्धे भरतर्षभ || १४- १२ ||

lōbhaḥ pravṛttirārambhaḥ karmaṇāmaśamaḥ sprhā |
rajasyētāni jāyantē vivṛddhē bharatarṣabha || 14.12 ||

12. Greed, activity, commencement of works, restlessness, and craving –these appear when rajas is predominant, Oh Arjuna!

So rajō-guṇa is dominant, lōbhaḥ, lōbhaḥ means inordinate greed to achieve worldly things; super ambitious person, of course such people accomplish so many things in the society, in fact, a country's material progress is dependent on such people, we should be very careful, we are not criticising rājasic people here, because if a nation has to progress, we require lot of activity also.

At least, Swami Vivekananda felt that our country required more rajas than satvam; because this people are more tāmasic, and to the tāmasic people you prescribe meditation, they will land in sleep; therefore he whipped up people into activity. Therefore activity is very important for material progress, but the problem is there should a limit and after some time a person should gradually change to satva pradhāna.

So these people are highly ambitious, even at the age of 95. And therefore, scheming, planning, endlessly, and it will go on, and naturally planning to implement those plans, pravṛitti, they are workaholic people, all the time, running about; they have no time for nithya karma; they have no time for japa, they have no time for puja; they have no time for Gīta; they have no time to question what is the real goal of life. So therefore, pravṛittiḥ, and karmaṇāmaśamaḥ, initiating many activities, without bothering whether they can take care of all of them. They will start initiate umpteen projects; but everything will be in standstill.

Therefore karmaṇām arambhaḥ; therefore what is the condition of their mind; aśama; ever restless mind; ever restless mind; ever impatient mind; not only they are overactive, they expect the same amount of speed from the people around. And then call someone, they want the other person before them like Bhagavān, instantly. Or else, they get angry, otherwise things will fly. Generally rājasic people are impatient; generally they are highly irritable, generally they cannot stand other people; they become very very unpopular; they are very high achieving people, but generally people who are close by, they know the problem of working with them. Generally angry, you know, the anger is at the tip of their nose. Anything happens, they are violent. They become violent also. They will be beat also, even though they are grown up. Also those things will be there; though they are great achievers, they are aśamaḥ, highly restless; short-tempered.

And spṛhā, they have strong attachment to their accomplishment, to their achievement, ie. highly egoistic. They want their place. Dayānanda Swami says, those people who says: Self-made man: most dangerous people. All the time saying: I started from the scratch and have now become a millionaire; and keep on saying that. They will repeat this umpteen times; and we have to listen; if we do not listen, they will get angry. Therefore, highly arrogant. Spṛhā; attached to their egos.

And therefore if there is no acknowledgement also, of their contribution, again they will get disturbed, therefore they are subject heavy disappointment. When the expectations are high, disappointments is big. Therefore, frustrated and therefore they will throw things and run away. And they will come back again after a day or two. Highly volatile. But positive side is that Great achievers. They are great achievers but highly volatile. People volcano. And all these things will increase when rajasi vivṛddhē sathi, when rajōguṇa increases; all these things will also increase. Therefore somebody had written how a rājasic people pray to God. Oh Lord! Give me Darśan! Right Now. Or else I will beat you!. Even prayer is in this state.

Verse 14.13

अप्रकाशोऽप्रवृत्तिश्च प्रमादो मोह एव च |
तमस्येतानि जायन्ते विवृद्धे कुरुनन्दन || १४- १३ ||

aprakāśo'pravṛttiśca pramādō mōha ēva ca |
tamasyētāni jāyantē vivṛddhē kurunandana || 14.13 ||

अप्रकाशः aprakāśaḥ dullness अप्रवृत्तिः च apravṛttiḥ ca inaction प्रमादः pramādaḥ negligence, एव च मोहः ēva ca mōhaḥ and delusion एतानि जायन्ते ētāni jāyantē these appear तमसि विवृद्धे tamasi vivṛddhē when tamas is predominant कुरुनन्दन kurunandana Oh Arjuna !

13. Dullness, inaction, negligence, and delusion – these appear when tamas is predominant, Oh Arjuna !

So the tāmasic person. No problem, no problem for himself as well as others; because he does not take part in living itself. Therefore, aprakāśaḥ, all the jñānēndriyas are dull. So even to read a news-item, he will have to read several items, simple news. They have to read several times; just to hear several times; dull jñānēndriyas.

Then what about karmēndriya? Apravṛttiḥ ca, karmēndriyas are dull, neither ambitious or contemplative; and apravṛttiḥ indicates the absence of rajas, absence means what, rajas is absent, rajō-guṇa is overpowered by tamas, satva-guṇa is also overpowered by tamas.

So aprakāśaḥ, indicates the absence of satva.

And therefore, generally, he does not do anything. And if you force him to do things, you will have to go behind and make him do anything and if he does independently invariably you have to rectify. Later you have to decide, that it is better to do it yourself.

So therefore pramādaḥ, negligence; all the time oversight problem is there; mistakes are many; therefore pramādaḥ, carelessness, mōhaḥ, delusion, conflict; life-long he does not know what he wants to do. You just ask that person what do you want? There is no proper answer. He is slippery. He is not very clear about what he wants. At least if we decide, he will not listen. He will not know himself and he will not listen also (like our son-in-law!). Neither he can decide, nor he will follow what I ask him to do. Only thing you can do is what? Prayer, and if you have to live with such people, not only he requires prayer, you also require lot of prayer.

Therefore, mōhaḥ, all the time in conflict, procrastinating, tamasi vivṛddhē sathi, when tamō-guṇa is dominant, all these expressions will come. From these expressions you can infer the dominance of three guṇas. Śankarācārya says why do we require inference? Inference is required because three guṇas are not pratyakṣam. Where pratyakṣam do not work, anūmāna has to be made. If I cannot see the fire, I have to indirectly go to the indicator and through the smoke, I have to infer the fire, because the fire is not seen. Similarly which guṇa is dominant in me, I cannot see with the physical eyes, because guṇa apratyakṣatvāt. Wherever prathyakṣa pramāṇam does not work, we have to look for clues, indicators, and the indicators are the details of the liṅgam and therefore judge yourself, find out where you stand and choose appropriate sādhana, never develop a complex, never compare yourselves with other people; be happy with what you are at present, and gradually progress. This is the third topic. Now we have to enter the 4th topic; which we will do in the next class.

Hari Om

185 Chapter 14, Verses 14-19

ॐ

Analysing the three guṇas, Lord Kṛṣṇa has dealt with three topics, the first topic is the definition of each guṇa, which we called lakṣaṇam; and the next topic was bandana prakāraḥ; how each guṇa binds a person and finally Kṛṣṇa discussed the topic of liṅgam the indicator to find out which particular guṇa is dominant in us. And there, he pointed out when satva-guṇa is dominant jñānēndriyas will be more operational, whereas rajō-guṇa is dominant, karmēndriyas will be more functional; whereas when tamō-guṇa is dominant, neither jñānēndriyas nor karmēndriyas will be operational. I hope you remember the meaning of the word, jñānēndriyas; instruments responsible for knowledge, karmēndriyas meaning responsible for activity. Therefore Kṛṣṇa said in the 13th verse, aprakāśaḥ apravṛttiḥ ca. Tamō guṇa will suppress the jñānēndriyas and therefore all the jñānēndriyas will have aprakāśaḥ, meaning non-bright; not bright means, they will be dull. And similarly when Tamō guṇa is predominant, it will suppress the karmēndriyas also, and apravṛttiḥ ca; there will be no dynamism and there will be no activity and there will be no ambition also.

In fact, they will support vēdānta very much and they will talk about vairāgyam, not because of their evolution or superiority, but because of sheer laziness. And therefore aprakāśaḥ apravṛttiḥ ca pramāda mōhaēva ca; they will be riddled with conflicts. Every moment will be a conflict or delusion and whatever little do, will be full of omissions and commissions. All these indicate the predominance of tamō-guṇa and as we have seen before, a tamō guṇi should never attempt to directly become satva pradhāna. From tamō-guṇa a person can never directly go to satva, and therefore, we should never prescribe Vēdānta to tamō-guṇa pradhāna person; we should never prescribe upāsana for a tamō-guṇa pradhāna person, we should prescribe only karma. And even among the karmas, as I said before, one has to start with sakāma karma, because that alone will tempt him and push into activity. Thus, he has to be pushed into sakāma karma, then he should graduate to Niškāma karma, then he can think of upāsana, then alone he can think of vēdānta vicāra. Up to this we saw in the last class.

Now we are going to enter into the 4th topic. What is the 4th topic I said? Gathiḥ; What do you mean by gathiḥ? The travel after death; maraṇa ananthara prayāṇam is called gathiḥ. If a person dies with satva-guṇa domination, pre-dominance, what will be the direction of his travel; if a person dies as a rajō-guṇa pradhāna person, what will be the direction of the soul's travel; soul means the jīvātma and if a person dies as a tamō-guṇa pradhāna, which direction will his soul take. That is the topic, we are going to enter into.

यदा सत्त्वे प्रवृद्धे तु प्रलयं याति देहभृत् |
तदोत्तमविदां लोकानमलान्प्रतिपद्यते || १४- १४ ||

yadā sattvē pravṛddhē tu pralayaṃ yāti dēhabhṛt |
tadōttamavidāṃ lōkānamalān pratipadyatē || 14.14 ||

यदा तु, yadā tu If देहभृत् dēhabhṛt a person, प्रलयं याति yāti pralayaṃ dies, सत्त्वे प्रवृद्धे sattvē pravṛddhē when sattva is predominant, तदा tadā then प्रतिपद्यते pratipaddhyatē he attains अमलान् amalān lōkān (those) pure worlds, लोकान् उत्तमविदाम् uttamavidām belonging to the Upāsakās of great deities.

14. If a person dies when satva is predominant, then he attains (those) pure worlds belonging to the Upāsakās of great deities.

So satva gathiḥ is talked about in this verse. Satva gathiḥ means, satva pradhāna puruṣasya maraṇa ananthara gathiḥ, i.e., the topic of this verse. Kṛṣṇa says: yadā sattvē pravṛddhē dēhabhṛt pralayaṃ yāti. dēhabhṛt means a jīvā; a jīvātma; pralayaṃ yāti, here pralayaṃ means maraṇam; not the deluge of the whole universe; pralayaḥ means maraṇam. Suppose a jīvātma dies when a yadā sattvē pravṛddhē, when satva-guṇa is dominant. And here we are talking about what type of jīvātma; ajñāni or jñāni, we should be very very careful. What will be direction of jñāni's travel? We have seen. Jñāni does not travel at all; all the three śarīrams are dissolved here and now; he is ONE with the all-pervading Brahman.

na tasya prāṇaḥ utakramanātī, brahmaiva san brahmāpyēti is the Bṛhadāraṇya vākyam. His prāṇa, his sūkṣma-śarīram does not leave the physical body and travel on the other hand stūla śarīram will merge into stūla prapañjā, sūkṣma śarīra will merge into sūkṣma prapañjā. Just as an iceberg dissolves into the ocean; similarly jñāni dissolves; jñāni does not have travel; and therefore, we are dealing with ajñāni, you should remember.

So if a satva-guṇa pradhāna ajñāni, satva-guṇa pradhāna ajñāni dies, what will happen to him? amalān lokān pratipaddhyatē; that satva-guṇa pradhāna ajñāni will go to purer lōkās, higher lōkas; purer and higher means, puṇya pradhāna lōkaha. Like bhuvan lōka, suvar lōka, mahar lōka, jana lōka, etc. and in that higher lōkas, since puṇya is dominant, that person will enjoy greater levels of happiness, as we saw in Taittiriya upaniṣad.

Tē yēṣa tamam manuṣya gandarvāṇām ānandaḥ, sa ēko dēva gandarvāṇām ānandaḥ. better body, better world, better sense objects. And therefore Kṛṣṇa says amalān, pure, i.e. puṇya pradhāna lōkān pradipadyathē. And these lōkas are generally attained by whom, uttamavidām lokān; a lōka, which is reached by great upāsakas. Uttama vidāḥ, Uttamaḥ means Īśvara, and Vith means Upāsaka, and therefore Uttamaḥ vidāḥ means Īśvara upāsaka. What type of Īśvara? saguṇa or nirguṇa; very careful, being Ajñāni, they will not know what is Nirguṇa Īśvara, Uttamaḥ vidāḥ are ajñānis saguṇa upāsakās; these upāsakās will go to higher lōkas, this satva-guṇa pradhāna people will go. In simple language, Urdhva gathi, upwards travel. This is for the satva pradhāna puruṣa.

What about raja-pradhāna? That is said in the next verse No.15.

Verse 14.15

रजसि प्रलयं गत्वा कर्मसङ्गिषु जायते |
तथा प्रलीनस्तमसि मूढयोनिषु जायते || १४- १५ ||

rajasi praḷayaṁ gatvā karmasāṅgiṣu jāyatē |
tathā pralīnastamasi mūḍhayōniṣu jāyatē || 14.15 ||

प्रलयं गत्वा praḷayaṁ gatvā Having died रजसि rajasi when Rajas is predominant जायते jāyatē one is born, कर्मसाङ्गिषु karmasāṅgiṣu amidst those who are attached to action
तथा tathā Likewise प्रलीनः pralīnaḥ having died तमसि tamasi when tamas is predominant जायते jāyatē one is born मूढयोनिषु mūḍhayōniṣu in the wombs of deluded beings.

15. Having died when rajas is predominant, one is born amidst those who are attached to action. Likewise, having died when tamas is predominant, one is born in the wombs of deluded beings.

So in this verse, the travel of both the rajō-guṇa pradhāna puruṣa as well as tamō-guṇa pradhāna puruṣa; both are dealt with. In the first line, raja pradhāna puruṣas are talked about. Praḷayaṁ gatva; So here also Praḷayaṁ means maraṇam, so having died, having left this physical body, rajasi; rajasi means rajasi pradhānē sathi, when rajō-guṇa is predominant. So having died when a rajō-guṇa is dominant this person will be reborn; he is ajñāni, remember, and this ajñāni rajō-guṇa pradhāna puruṣaḥ; jāyathē, he will certainly be reborn; where? Karma saṅghiṣu, in a lōka in which people are given to lot of karmās; karma pradhāna lōka.

And in the śāstra, karma pradhāna lōka is manuṣya lōkāḥ, or Bhulōka, because the higher lōkas are said to be the lōkas of only bhōga; one cannot acquire puṇyam or pāpam in the higher lōkas; they can only exhaust their karmas. Similarly in lower lōkāḥ also, one can only exhaust the karma; earning karma is not possible; either in higher lōkas or lower lōkas; only in manuṣya lōkāḥ it is possible; and that is why we say that manuṣya lōkā janma is very rare.

And therefore karmasaṅghiṣu, manuṣya lōkēṣu, they are in the Bhu lōkahs, which is neither in the higher lōkās, or lower lōkas, their travel is neither vertical; it is not up nor down, but it is horizontal travel; satva-guṇa person will go that way; tamō-guṇa pradhāni would go down; rajō-guṇa pradhāni would be hovering around. The middle lōkā called manuṣya lōkā. karmasaṅghiṣu manuṣya lōkēṣu jāyate; whereas tathā praḷina, suppose a person dies praḷina means maraṇam prāpya, praḷayaṁ prāpa, when tamasi, with tamōguṇa predominance when a person dies, then mūḍhayōniṣu jāyatē; then that person is reborn in lower janmas, or lower planes of existence. The lower planes can be defined as the lower lōkās, sapta lōkās are talked about; during Avani Avittam they will say: athala, vithala, suthala, rasātala, mahātala, talātala, pathalākyēṣu; seven lower lōkas are there; either the people will go to the lower lōkas, or even if they are born in Bhu lōkā, they will not get manuṣya janma where free will and buddhi are there; but they will be born as animals. They will be born as plants; where also they will never have a freewill to acquire fresh karmas and that is why they are called mūḍhayōni; mūḍhayōni means Buddhi is not evolved. And that is why in the Gīta Class you do not find any of the animals coming. So they have only bhōga; they do not have a freewill to acquire karma; and therefore mūḍhayōniṣu jāyatē. So thus the gati of the three types of people also has been talked about; and that is consolidated later.

Verse 14.16

कर्मणः सुकृतस्याहुः सात्त्विकं निर्मलं फलम् |
रजसस्तु फलं दुःखमज्ञानं तमसः फलम् || १४- १६ ||

[karmaṇaḥ sukṛtasya"huḥ sāttvikam nirmalam phalam |
rajasastu phalam duḥkhamajñānam tamaṣaḥ phalam || 14.16 ||](#)

आहुः āhuḥ (scriptures) say that फलम् phalam the result, सुकृतस्य कर्मणः karmaṇaḥ sukṛtasya of Sattvic action निर्मलं सात्त्विकम् nirmalam sāttvikam is pure puṇya, phalam फलं रजसः phalam rajasaḥ the result of rajasic (action), दुःखम् duḥkham is sorrow, तु तु whereas, फलं तमसः phalam tamasaḥ the result of tamasic (action) अज्ञानम् ajñānam is ignorance.

16. (Scriptures) say that the result of sātvcic action is pure puṇya. The result of rājasic (action) is sorrow. Whereas the result of tāmasic (action) is ignorance.

In this verse, Lord Kṛṣṇa comes to the fifth topic; and that is the phalam for the predominance of each guṇa; so the previous two slōkās talked about gathi, now this slōka talks about Phalam, what is the difference between Gathi and Phalam; I told you before ~ do you remember ~ Gathi is the consequence after death; whereas Phalam is the consequence in this life itself. So if satva is predominant, what will be the consequences experienced here and now. Similarly if rajas is predominant, etc. All the three are given in this one verse itself;

Sukṛtasya karmaṇaḥ phalam sāttvikam āhuḥ. That we have to read a small rearrangement. Instead of reading sukṛtasya''huḥ karmaṇaḥ sāttvikam, we will rearrange as sāttvikasya karmaṇaḥ phalam sukṛtam. Sukṛtasya you have to read as sukṛtam, and sāttvikam, you have to read as sattvikasya. So sāttvikasya karmaṇaḥ phalam. When a sāttvik person undertakes activities, they are good and noble activities, and therefore, the phalam is sukṛtam means Puṇyam. Spiritually elevating; that which will promote, peace, balance, tranquility; etc. which is Nirmalam. Nirmalam means pure, freedom from stress, freedom from tension; freedom from anxiety.

In fact, in the very presence of those people, you can tangibly feel the śantiḥ; if you go to certain places, you can feel the peace tangibly. If you to certain other houses, you can feel the tension all around. We do not know, when the flare-up will comes. It will be little unsettling. Therefore Kṛṣṇa says: So when Sātvcic persons deal with their life's interactions, you can see harmony and peace, where the house will be a home. In fact that is called a Home; there is an understanding, there is love; there is love; there is consideration; there is harmony, there is peace, that is called Nirmalam phalam.

Whereas rajasastu phalam, when a person is a rajasic person, naturally there will be a tremendous amount of activity; but the main problem is what? There is a tension; there is anxiety; there is stress; there is strain; there is irritation; there is intolerance; and where there is stress and strain, there is neither physical health nor is there mental peace. And therefore Kṛṣṇa says rajasasthu phalam duḥkham; wherever transactions are taking place among rajasic people; you can find there is stress and strain.

And not only that, because of the very tension and irritability, there are flare ups very often. There is anger; there is angry exchanges and therefore, there is himsa involved; each one will be hurting the other member; husband hurts the wife; and wife hurts more; or other way round ~ do not get angry with me ~ wife hurts and husband hurts more. If there are elders, they are hurt. There is a chain reaction going; nobody is happy; there is no home. This is called a non-functioning home. It is not a home. It is a house only. Where there is harmony, it is home; where there is no harmony, there are walls, there is bricks, there is food, there is kitchen, there is money, but in spite of all these, you cannot have a home. Home means harmony among the members. Even communication, after some time stops, like living in a hostel, each one comes, and does his or her job, and goes. So therefore, duḥkham; it is a broken down environment.

But there is lot of money, lot of achievement, because of dynamism is there; lot of activity is there; material prosperity will be there; but the inner peace and harmony will not be there; And therefore, superficially looking, that place is full of riches, but something is missing; ~ you might have heard, everything is there except நிம்மதி; Nimmadhi ~ and unfortunately, any amount of money cannot buy even one gram of nimmadhi. So then you begin to wonder, what is the use of all these accomplishments? Whereas in the case of satvic people, material accomplishments will be lesser definitely, but there is atmosphere of peace and harmony. That is why, Nirmalam there and duḥkham here. So rajasthathu karmaṇaḥ, (which have to supply) phalam duḥkham.

And tamasaḥ karmaṇaḥ phalam, wherever tamasic transactions are going on, which means tāmasic transactions are going on ~ meaning sleeping in this room and that room ~ there is no duḥkham also ~ because one has to get up and be awake to be aware of duḥkham ~ so what is the problem ~ if one keeps on sleeping, it is good is'not it ~ no problem? Ajñānam tamasaḥ phalam ~ human life is wasted; ignorance will be perpetuated. So therefore, all forms of ignorance including self-ignorance will be perpetuated; the wonderful advantage of human birth is lost. So Ajñānam is the result of tāmasic karma. Very careful, when we say ignorance is the result of tamasic karma, ignorance is not produced by that karma; ignorance need not be produced by, why ~ as it is we are very rich in ignorance ~ therefore, ignorance is the result means, perpetuation of the ignorance is the result of tamasic life; exactly like animals, animals do not quarrel like human being; animals cannot learn anything out of this life. So these are the three phalams of satva pradhāna, raja pradhāna and tama pradhāna lifestyles. So with this the 5th topic is also over.

Verse 14.17

सत्त्वात्सञ्जायते ज्ञानं रजसो लोभ एव च |
प्रमादमोहौ तमसो भवतोऽज्ञानमेव च || १४- १७ ||

sattvātsañjāyatē jñānaṃ rajasō lōbha ēva ca |
pramādamōhau tamasō bhavatō'jñānamēva ca || 14.17 ||

ज्ञानम् सञ्जायते jñānam sañjāyatē knowledge is born, सत्त्वात् sattvāt out of sattva, लोभः एव च lōbhaḥ ēva ca Greed (is born) रजसः rajasah out of rajas, प्रमादमोहो pramādamōhō Negligence and delusion, एव च ēva ca along with, अज्ञानम् ajñānam ignorance भवतः bhavataḥ are born, तमसः tamasah out of tamas.

17. Knowledge is born out of Sattva, Greed (is born) out of Rajas. Negligence and delusion along with ignorance are born out of Tamās.

So the same idea is repeated in this verse also. That is the consequence of the predominance of the three guṇas in this life itself. That is triguṇa phalam. Topic is continued. sattvātsañjāyatē jñānam. Out of satva-guṇa jñāna is born, because when satva-guṇa is dominant, the jñānēndriyas are all operational and bright, and therefore the learning capacity; the absorbing capacity; the retaining capacity; the building-up capacity, everything is high. Therefore, knowledge increases in leaps and bounds, whether it is material knowledge or even spiritual knowledge; for both knowledge, satva is required. So sattvātsañjāyatē jñānam.

Whereas, lōbhaḥ sañjāyatē; when rajō-guṇa is dominant, lōbhaḥ sañjāyatē; lōbhaḥ means greed, ambition, plans, scheme, till the last breath, this person will turn like a top. Therefore lōbhaḥ, there is no ṭṛp̥thi at all; greed is the result of rajō-guṇa pradhāna.

And tamasō pramādamōhau sañjāyatē. Out of tamō-guṇa are born pramādaḥ; pramādaḥ I have told, not Tamil pramādhā, this is Sānskrīt pramādaḥ. In Sānskrīt means oversight, forgetfulness, omissions, etc. will come and mōhaḥ, means delusion or conflicts; indecisiveness, incapacity to decide anything; eternally 'to be' or 'not to be'. 'To go' or 'not to go'. 'To eat' or 'not to eat'. In everything this conflict; that is the tamō-guṇa phalam, and not only these two increases, ajñānam ēva cha, ajñānam means the perpetuation of ignorance will also continue, because of tamō-guṇa. Thus 16 and 17 talk about of the phalams of 3 guṇas.

Verse 14.18

ऊर्ध्वं गच्छन्ति सत्त्वस्था मध्ये तिष्ठन्ति राजसाः |
जघन्यगुणवृत्तिस्था अधो गच्छन्ति तामसाः || १४- १८ ||

ūrdhvaṃ gacchanti sattvasthā madhyē tiṣṭhanti rājasāḥ |
jaghanyaguṇavṛttisthā adhō gacchanti tāmasāḥ || 14.18 ||

सत्त्वस्थाः sattvasthāḥ Sattvic people गच्छन्ति gacchanti go ऊर्ध्वम् ūrdhvam up राजसाः rājasāḥ Rajasic people, तिष्ठन्ति tiṣṭanti remain मध्ये madhye in the middle तामसाः tāmasāḥ tamasic people, जघन्यगुणवृत्तस्थाः jaghanyaguṇavṛttasthāḥ abiding by the functions of the lowest guṇa गच्छन्ति gacchanti go अधः adhaḥ down.

18. Sattvic people go up. Rājasic people remain in the middle Tamasic people, abiding by the functions of the lowest Guṇa, go down.

So in this verse, Lord Kṛṣṇa is talking about the gathi topic once again, which topic we have already dealt with in verses 14 and 15. The same topic is repeated and therefore, the 18th verse should be read along with 14 and 15, because this verse also talks about the gathiḥ, means the travel after death. How do they travel? Satvasthaḥ urdhvam gacchanti, you can understand. Satva guṇa pradhāna, those people in whom satva is predominant, urdhvam gacchanti, they go to higher lōkas, 6 of them, bhuvāḥ, suvāḥ, mahāḥ, janaḥ, tapaḥ, satyam. Out 14 lōkas, 6 are up, 7 are down. $7-6 = 13$, DO NOT ASK WHERE THE one is missing. 6 up, 7 down and this one. Ūrdhvaṁ gacchanti sattvasthā.

What about the rājasic people madhyē tiṣṭanti rājasāḥ, they neither go up or down, they are only in the manuṣya lōka only or bhu lōka only and they stagnate; so plus point is that they have not come down; the minus point is that they have not gone up; therefore both are there.

Jaghanyaguṇavṛttisthā, those who continue in the lowest guṇa, the lowest, the inferiormost guṇa, tamō-guṇa, those who remain in that vrittam; lifestyle or way of life, those who remain in a tamasic way of life, tāmasāḥ adhō gacchanti; they go downwards. adhō gatiḥ.

And of course incidentally we should remember, when we saw svarga lōkā is higher, paṭala lōkā is lower etc. the word higher and lower do not indicate any spatial location. Lower means this and higher means this side, you should think, because the higher and lower itself is a relative thing. So for the people who are in America, higher is different from for those who are in India. Therefore, higher and lower have nothing to do with particular time and space, because according to śāstra, each lōkā has got a different time and space.

So we can never locate another lōkā in terms of our time and space. If you have to understand this, it is like our dream objects. So you experience objects in dream, they are all located in which time and space? They are located only in dream time and space; you can never talk about the location of dream object in terms of this particular time and space; dream elephant was on this side or that side, if someone asks, can you answer?

You can never locate the objects of one lōkā in the time and space of another lōkā. Then how do you say svarga is higher. There the higher does not mean spatial location at all.

And similarly, time location also we cannot talk about and that is why in dream, you have got months of experience, but in terms of waking time, you have dreamt for 1-1/2 minutes. During that time itself, your grandson is got married and had a children and he also got married; WHY? Because dream time is different from our time. That is why when we want to offer food etc. for the pitṛs or dēvās, we do not have to feed them every 3 hours; that is in this lōkā. but the dēvās lōkā, our one year is 1 day for them. That is why the word higher is not in terms of time and space but in terms of quality. Higher lōkā means qualitative superior lōkā, which means the body and sense organs enjoyed by them is of a higher refinement. And similarly the sense objects also are of higher refinement. Like within the earth itself, in some other country, everything is good, including water. They say in some other country, they can drink water directly from the tap. Here, even if you buy Bisleri, one has to suspect. Why? We are in this lōkā.

So therefore, when we find the refinement relative within the bhū lōkā itself, what to talk of higher lōkā and therefore Urdhvam qualitatively superior and location wise, where is it? Svarga is here and now, you cannot say beyond the cloud, etc. You cannot say that. In fact, you are able to change this body even while here; suppose you can remove this physical body and put on Indra śarīram, just suppose, then, here itself you can experience svarga. Therefore the field of experience depends upon the type of medium that you use. So if you have got a dog body, then you hear certain sound, which you do not hear now. Now even the normal sound is itself difficult to hear. If you have 'dog-ears'; when everybody says it is silent for you it will be very noisy.

And therefore remember, different lōkas are different planes of experience. It has nothing to do with our time and space and that is why, by travelling in this lōka, you can never reach svarga lōkā. Just as by taking the vehicle of the jāgrat avastha, can you travel and reach the Kāśī of the dream; there is no corridor or road connecting the jāgrat prapañca and svapna prapañca; by travelling any amount of distance in svapna, you cannot reach jāgrat avastha; by travelling any amount of distance in waking state, you cannot reach svapna lōkā, there is no corridor connection these two lōkā. Therefore, do not say that those people who went in the rockets etc to the space, etc. did not see the svapna, etc. Any amount of travel, you cannot reach svarga. For reaching svarga, what is the first qualification; you should die. Ok. Therefore, "do not mistake me", with this body and this time this space and this vehicle, you can never, because it is totally different plane. Thus ūrdhvaṁ, madhyē and adhaḥ, they are all in terms of the quality, not in terms of spatial location.

Verse 14.19

नान्यं गुणेभ्यः कर्तारं यदा द्रष्टानुपश्यति |
गुणेभ्यश्च परं वेत्ति मद्भावं सोऽधिगच्छति || १४- १९ ||

Nānyam guṇēbhyaḥ kartāraṁ yadā draṣṭā'nupaśyati |
guṇēbhyaśca paraṁ vētti madbhāvaṁ sō'dhigacchati || 14.19 ||

यदा yadā when, द्रष्टा अजुपश्यति draṣṭā ajupaśyati the seer understands कर्तारम् kartāram doer न अन्यं गुणेभ्यः na anyam guṇēbhyaḥ to be none other than the Guṇās, च वेत्ति ca vētti and knows (the Self), परं गुणेभ्यः param guṇēbhyaḥ which is beyond the Guṇās, सः अधिगच्छति saḥ adhigacchati he attains, मद्भावम् madbhāvam MY name.

19. When the seer understands the doer to be none other than the Guṇās and knows (the Self) which is beyond the guṇas, he attains My nature.

So with the previous Kṛṣṇa completes the analysis of the three guṇās which he started from verse 5. Through this analysis, he revealed certain fundamental point; the first point is that nobody can escape from these three guṇas. The body-mind- complex, otherwise called the ahaṁkāra; do you remember the definition of ahaṁkāra? Very important, ahaṁkāra is defined, body-mind complex with the reflected consciousness; the cidabhāsa. The live body-mind complex is called ahaṁkāra, this ahaṁkāra, which is my lower I, which is called the ego, can never escape from these three guṇas. Either I have to be satva pradhāna or I have to be raja pradhāna or I have to be tama pradhāna; you can only reshuffle the guṇas; the ahaṁkāra cannot escape from the guṇas. That is point No.1.

And the second important point that Kṛṣṇa indicated is whatever be the type of guṇa, bondage cannot be avoided. Because each guṇa binds a person; and that is why the second topic discussed was what? How does each guṇa bind a person? So from that it is clear, each guṇa will bind; only difference is what? The method of binding would be different; like a person asking should I kill by shooting or cutting the head; which is better? This is better or that is better; the result is what: death only. The mode of destruction may vary. Therefore all these three guṇas are going to bind me, how the three guṇas bind we saw, a satvic ahaṁkāra will naturally be addicted to a particular type of environment and if that is not available, it will be disturbed. And what is the environment we seek is what? That which is knowledge-friendly environment.

Similarly rajasic ahaṁkāra is going to seek another type of set up; it will be attached to; it will be addicted to; and if that type of set up is there, it will be happy; if it is not there; it is going to be unhappy. You ask him to remain in a room for a long time; he will break down the wall.

Similarly tamasic person; expect his own environment; and therefore all the three guṇas are going to bind.

And therefore what is the solution? The only solution is I should transcend the three guṇas. I should transcend the three guṇas; I should become guṇa athithaḥ; that is the only solution.

Now the question is: How can I become guṇa athithaḥ? Guṇa athithaḥ, is another word for Nirguṇa, remember. Now here alone, we face the problem. Ahaṁkāra is nothing but the body-mind complex with the reflected consciousness and therefore ahaṁkāra can never become guṇa athithaḥ. So the greatest what is call distressing news is that ahaṁkāra can never escape from the three guṇas. Ahaṁkāra by a process of change, can become only a satva-guṇa pradhāna to rajō-guṇa pradhāna to tama guṇa pradhāna; therefore ahaṁkāra cannot become guṇa athithaḥ.

Now the next question is other than ahaṁkāra, there is another entity in me. What is the other entity other than the body-mind complex and the reflected consciousness? What else is there? Do not say there is nothing. If there should be a reflected consciousness (if the mirror and reflected face is there, there must be something other than the mirror and the reflected face). What is that? This fellow is searching. There is one thing. What is that? The original face, without which reflection is impossible. That original one is called the cit, the original consciousness which I called sākṣi caitanyam; the higher-nature of the personality.

And this higher I, the sākṣi has got what guṇa? Consciousness has got which guṇa? The consciousness fortunately or unfortunately is free from all the guṇas and therefore, the higher I, is nirguṇaḥ; and therefore the question is can the sākṣi become guṇathithaḥ? That is the question; what we asked first? Can ahaṁkāra become guṇa athithaḥ? What is the answer; ahaṁkāra cannot become guṇathithaḥ.

Now the question is: Can sākṣi become guṇa athithaḥ? What will be the answer? If you say cannot, it is wrong; if you say, can, it is also wrong. You cannot say that Sākṣi cannot become guṇa athithaḥ, you cannot say sākṣi can become guṇa athitha, because there is no question of becoming guṇa athithaḥ, because sākṣi is already guṇa athithaḥ; therefore it need not become guṇa athithaḥ. Ahaṁkāra cannot become guṇa athithaḥ, sākṣi need not become guṇa athithaḥ and therefore who becomes guṇa athithaḥ. Nobody becomes guṇathithaḥ; therefore the very question how to become guṇa athithaḥ is wrong.

OK. Now I have understood. Now tell me: how to become guṇa athithaḥ. If you insist upon answering that question, I can give you only a compromised version of the answer, if you become guṇa athithaḥ, by shifting your identification from ahaṁkāra to sākṣi. You become guṇa athithaḥ, "become" in quotation, you become guṇa athithaḥ, when you shift your identification from the lower I; the ego to the higher I; the consciousness. From anātma to ātma; from body to consciousness; from kṣētram to Kṣētrajñā. As long as I take myself to be the body-mind complex, I will be saguṇa ahaṁkāra. As long as I identify, with my body-mind complex, I will be saguṇa ahaṁkāra, and as long as saguṇa ahaṁkāra, I can never escape from saṁsāra.

Therefore the only way is what; shift the identification from the body-mind-complex to the sākṣi caitanyam. Instead of saying I am the body with a sākṣi; instead of saying I am the body with a sākṣi, you have to practice, reversing the statement; what is that? I am the sākṣi, with an incidental and temporary body given by the Lord.

And incidentally for the sake of transaction, there is nothing wrong in identifying; but this is done with an awareness; just like an actor identifies with the role; with the awareness that I am not the role. You need not tell that in the middle; that I am not the Rāvaṇa; etc. I am Amitabh Bhachan or Rajnikanth; Babā; I am not baba, I am Rajani kanth. So therefore you need not disclose this outside, but you remember the fact that I am ever the guṇa athithaḥ sākṣi, and I am functioning in the world through the saguṇa ahaṁkāra, and as long as I am playing the role, I have to do everything properly. And therefore the only solution is knowing about the higher-nature and owning up of the higher-nature. Knowing and owning.

And therefore, in these two verses; which are the most important verses of the 14th chapter, viz., 19 and 20th, Kṛṣṇa tells you can become guṇa athithaḥ only by knowing your higher-nature and it is not enough that you know, but you should learn to identify with your higher-nature; and look upon the ahaṁkāra as a temporary vēṣa. Make your life into a drama with the ahaṁkāra role. Ahaṁkāra is only the vēṣa. This is going to be said. Ahaṁkāra ātma vivēkaḥ is going to be said in the next two verses. We will see in the next class.

Hari Om

186 Chapter 14, Verses 19-21

ॐ

Lord Kṛṣṇa analysed the three guṇas elaborately from verse No.5 to 18, and pointed out that each guṇa binds a person in one way or the other. Because each guṇa demands a particular set up;

If it is satva-guṇa, it demands knowledge and a conducive set up for knowledge.

If it is rajō-guṇa, it expects activity and an infrastructure for activity;

If it is tamō-guṇa it wants to sleep and conducive atmosphere for sleeping.

Thus each guṇa is a demanding guṇa, asking for a specific set up and if that set up is not provided, it throws lot of tantrums, and the creates lot of mental disturbances. And therefore, I can never accept the set up as a bhōktā, if it does not suit my particular guṇa and therefore there is a struggle either pravṛtti or nivṛtti, looking for a conducive set up and getting away from the unconducive set up. Each guṇa leads to lot of pravṛitti and Nivṛitti; pravṛitti means going after a favourable set up and Nivṛitti is running away from the so-called unfavourable set up. This favourable and unfavourable classification is determined by the type of guṇa. So a particular set up, satva will consider as favourable. The very same set up, rajō-guṇa will dislike. When a satva guṇi says that it is silent like an āsrama, the rajō guṇi will say that it is quiet like a cremation ground. Silence remaining the same, one gets a positive thinking; for another it is a negative thinking.

And therefore, as a bhōktā, I divide the set up into favourable and unfavourable and I want to adjust and fine tune the set-up and therefore, I develop strong rāgā and dvēṣa and to change the set up, I have to become a kartā. As a bhōktā I am not satisfied; and therefore I want to change the set-up and to change the set up I have to do what? I should become a kartā. And having done a few things, I again look up at the set up as a bhōktā; no satisfaction. Like a painter, painting, going behind and again goes a gives a touch up. And this goes on; adjusting, dissatisfied bhōktā becomes a kartā and again he becomes bhōktā and again he begins a kartā; in short, he is never allowed to think of his higher nirguṇa sākṣi svarūpam.

The three guṇas keep this person busy with the body complex only and that is why Kṛṣṇa said in the 5th verse, nibhadnanthi mahābhāhō, and dēhē dēhinam avyayam. I am the sākṣi caitanyam which is all pervading; I am never allowed to own up my infinite nature, and I am all the time made to identify with the limited body. Thus the three guṇas tie me up the physical body, never allowing me to think of the possibility of something else. All the time throwing tantrums like a baby. In some houses, the parents sometimes ask some question to the visiting Swami. And there will be a baby. 3 months or 4 months or something. And keeping that baby on the lap, they ask vēdāntic questions to the Swami. What is mahāvākyam? And the poor Swami tries to seriously explain, the baby will be crying: KAY.... and the father is sitting, the baby will say I want to go to the father. Swami has to wait and then again goes to the father; Swami restarts something and then again the crying AYYYYYYY started. Where is the question of listening to something when there is something else drawing my attention all the time?

Similarly, the saṅga physical body, the saṅga mind and the saṅga set up, keeps me so busy all the time, that I can never think of the Nirguṅa-I and this is the tantrum thrown by the three guṅas which keeps me in dēha abhimāna, and therefore Kṛṣṇa said there Dēhinām; the sākṣi-I is tied down to the physical body which I-the-sākṣi is never allowed to think of the all-pervading Brahma svarūpam and I am made to think of my limited ahaṅkāra svarūpam only.

This is the called guṅa dragging the Sākṣi to this ahaṅkāra level and by adjusting the set up you are never going to improve the situation, because there is no such thing called ideal set up at all. And even if some how you are able to manage the change the set up you cannot retain the set up permanently like that; Surēśvaracārya says elsewhere it is like balancing an apple on the tip of your sharp nose. Not Japanese nose, it may be possible. Like balancing an apple on the sharp tip of the nose, how it is impossible, the three guṅas are constantly fluctuating and therefore the set up fluctuates, the body it becomes a pumpkin and then a drumstick. There is constant expansion/contraction and mind (you do not have to ask itself) now satvik, now rajasic, now tamasic, and therefore this person is in eternal struggle; and this a few people understand and come to the conclusion that the only remedy is transcending the triguṅa ahaṅkāra. Transcending the triguṅa body-mind-complex or anātma. This is the only remedy.

And how do you transcend the saṅga ahaṅkāra? As I said in the last class, ahaṅkāra can never be made Nirguṅa. Because ahaṅkāra is body-mind complex and it is made up of prakṛti and therefore the three guṅas are bound to be there. Even the Māhajñāni will have a sātvic, rājasic or tāmasic mind. Nirguṅa mind does not exist at all. Jñāni's mind is saṅga or nirguṅa. Do you have doubt? Mind, jñāni's or ajñāni's or Bhagavān's mind, which is called Māya; even Bhagavān's mind Māya is triguṅathmakam, the mind will be saṅga, body will be saṅga, and therefore there is no question of converting anātma into nirguṅa; transcending the guṅa. Then what about the sākṣi? You cannot make the sākṣi nirguṅa, because need not be made Nirguṅa, because it is already Nirguṅa. Therefore the only remedy is switching the identification from saṅga ahaṅkāra to nirguṅa sākṣi. This is called ātma-anātma vivēka and knowing the fact that I am not the body with consciousness, but I am the consciousness with a temporary body. I am not a body; temporary body with permanent consciousness, but I am the permanent consciousness with a temporary body. And as ātma, the sākṣi, I am ever Nirguṇa, I am ever akartā, and I am ever abhōkta and this jñānam alone is the solution.

And therefore transcending the guṇa is equal to ātma jñānam. And ātma jñānam means guru mukathaḥ vēdānta śravaṇa manana nidhidhyāsanam. We have to apply all that, though it is said here, we saw that in the 4th chapter.

तद्विद्धि प्रणिपातेन परिप्रश्नेन सेवया
उपदेक्ष्यन्ति ते ज्ञानं ज्ञानिनस्तत्त्वदर्शिनः || ४- ३४ ||

[tadviddhi pranipātēna paripraśnēna sēvayā |
upadēkṣyanti tē jñānam jñāninastattvadarśinaḥ || 4.34||](#)

You have to have śāstra guru upadeśa and know that I am ever the Nirguṇa sākṣi.

And that is said here by Kṛṣṇa guṇēbhyaśca paraṁ vētti. So this seeker comes to know the sākṣi caitanyam. And what is that sākṣi caitanyam? Paraṁ, which is guṇēbhyaḥ, beyond the three guṇas, which includes the physical body which is also three guṇas, which includes the mind, also which is the three guṇas, guṇēbhyaḥ paraṁ means beyond the body-mind complex, beyond the anātma. So consciousness is beyond the material body.

Now the next question is what do you mean by beyond? Because we normally we use the word beyond to convey something farther in distance. If I say that particular house is beyond the car, and what do you think? What do you understand? Car is here, and the house is beyond. A physical distance is understood. Similarly we may misunderstand when we say that Sākṣi is beyond the body; as the sākṣi is somewhere in the clouds, etc. So here beyond does not mean physically remote; then what is the meaning of the word beyond? It is in and through the body mind complex, but not related to or affected by the body-mind-complex, just as the light principle is beyond my hand; here beyond means what? Light is in and through the hands, pervades the hands, but whatever happens to the hand, light is not affected. In Sānskrīt it should be translated as asaṅgatvam. The sākṣi, the consciousness is in and through the triguṇātmaka śarīram; it enlivens the triguṇātmaka śarīram; but it is not tainted by:

न मंत्रो न तीर्थं न वेदा न यज्ञाः

na puṇyam na pāpam na saukhyam na duḥkham na mantrō na tirtham na vēda na yajñāḥ

The diseases of the body do not belong to the consciousness; the disturbances of the mind do not belong to the consciousness, this asaṅgatvam, is said here as param̄. So guṇēbhyaḥ param̄, is the sākṣi caitanyam, and that sākṣi caitanyam I am.

Aham iti vētti, we have to supply this. This person recognises the consciousness which is beyond the three guṇas as himself.

Yadā draṣṭā. draṣṭā, means the intelligent seeker, who is tired of adjusting the set up in keeping with the three guṇas. Likes a particular set up now; after one week, you are not satisfied; change this chair to there, and shift the table to here, etc. some adjustment and if that is not possible, cut the hair and start growing the beard; that is the cheap thing; therefore you go on changing, because the mind fluctuates. Your idea of ideal set up changes, you go on tuning endlessly but some people understand the problem is not with the set-up, the problem is the way I look at myself. And the day I know my pūrṇatvam, is not dependent on the set up, that day I stop all my struggles to change the set up or health improvement. Changing the set up for practical purposes is different. If the table is in this place, and if you change to the other side, and it is convenient for working, that is a different thing, when I change the set up to improve my image, then that is called saṁsāra, once I discover that I am pūrṇa sākṣi, I do not expect a change in the set up for my improvement. I am perfectly satisfied with myself; whether the set-up is sātvic set up, or rajasic set up or tamasic set up. duḥkhēṣvanudvignamanāḥ, he is going to tell, the one who is not moved by set up.

And therefore draṣṭā, an intelligent person changes himself, rather than this set up. Anupaśyati. Discovers that higher-I, the sākṣi-I, the guṇathitha-I. And here the word is anupaśyati. So anu means in keeping with the teaching of guru and śāstra. This discovery will never come independently. If I am left to myself, without śāstra, I will continue my mistake of changing the set-up, all the time hoping that one day everything will be ideal. Wife will be exactly as I expect here to be, the son will be exactly as I expect him to be; the roads will be exactly as I want to be; he will be the working the ideal set up, without questioning his pursuit. Śāstra alone gives a jolt and asks: did you ask or did you think whether there is some other method of discovering fulfilment? And that method is adjusting the button inside. And therefore that insight, the śāstra and guru alone will give. Therefore in keeping with guru śāstra upadeśa, yadā anupaśyati. So the intelligent seeker, recognises this fact.

And also he knows guṇēbhyaḥ anyam kartāram na paśyati; and he also recognises the fact that all the karmas belong to the anātma. So guṇēbhyaḥ, means anātmabhyaḥ, and anātma means what sthūla, sūkṣma, kāraṇa śarīram, or the pañcakōśas; this anātma will be eternally a kartā. There is no retirement for anātma. Retirement is what? Taking up some other work; and not only that, if anātma really retires, it will become sick also. Therefore, Anātma has to be eternally a kartā, if you have to transcend kartṛtvaṁ, we have to come to ātma alone.

So guṇēbhyaḥ anyam kartāram na paśyati. Of course, Kṛṣṇa uses a double negative language. What Kṛṣṇa wants to say is anātma is the kartā, this is what he wants to say. Anātma means the body mind complex is the kartā. But to emphasise this fact, he uses the double negative language, and that language is that there is no kartā other than anātma. If you put it in positive language, how will it be? Anātma alone is Kartā. Negative language, there is no kartā other than anātma. Both are the same. Do you doubt? Go home and think. Anātma alone is kartā, is equal to there is no kartā other than anātma. And who am I? Ātma or anātma? I am the ātma; therefore eternally akartā-abhōkta.

Iti yadā paśyati; the day a human being recognises this fact, only then, he will be free from the rat-race called life; the eternal journey of bhōktā; not satisfied; therefore, becomes kartā; improves the status of bhōktā; improved but not totally satisfied; again become kartā, again become bhōktā, and at the time of death also, you ask are you satisfied: You say I am satisfied, But! Only one small thing; something or the other will be there. Since the ahaṁkāra dies with dissatisfaction, it cannot get liberated; kāmānya kamāyathe manyamānaḥ, sa kamabhir jāyathē tatra tatra.

The dissatisfied ahamkāras have to again take to birth and continue the struggle and at the time of death, again dissatisfied; பயணங்கள் முடிவதில்லை. (the journey never ends); punarapi jananam, punarapi maraṇam. The struggle will end like the pūri (I hope you remember the pūri example) when it is in the oil, it will be running around. And as it runs it expands and once it has become pūrṇam, full, then you will find that it is ātmana ēva ātmaiva thuṣṭa, it will be floating there itself. Why? It has become pūrṇam. And that is why it is called pūri; pūri is shortened form of pūrṇam.

Similarly the day I discover I am the pūrṇa sākṣi, the running about for pūrṇatvam will stop. Thereafter also I may run around, but not for pūrṇatvam but it is out of pūrṇatvam. If I am acting for pūrṇatvam, there is eternal anxiety; I cannot sleep properly. If I am acting out of pūrṇatvam, there is no anxiety; When I am in the bed, I forget the days ups and down the moments my head hits the pillow, snoring can be heard; no anxiety; no tension.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa says: Madbhāvam adhi gacchathi. The one who has discovered the sākṣi, he attains Īśvara bhāvam. Kṛṣṇa says madbhāvam, Kṛṣṇa being the Lord, it is Īśvara bhāvam; Īśvara Bhāvam means Īśvara Svarūpam. Īśvara Svarūpam means pūrṇatvam. So any time, the inner most mind says everything is OK. As they say in transactional analysis: You are OK. I am OK. Everything else is OK. Or else, always something is not OK. And therefore madbhāvam means pūrṇatvam, means jīvan mukti, saḥ adhigacchati.

The most important point to be noted here is what? Kṛṣṇa says this pūrṇatvam is only through knowledge. So the word Vētti should be underlined. Vētti means the one who knows; discovers pūrṇatvam. And therefore how many paths are there for Mōkṣa? karma-yōga, bhakthi yōga, raja yōga, hatha yōga, kuṇḍalini yōga, etc. so many yōgas; Kṛṣṇa says nothing doing; even if there are many other yōgas, we are willing to accept all other yōgas, but they are all for preparation of the mind; ultimate discovery of pūrṇatvam is vēdānta śravaṇa, manana, nidhidhyāsana; otherwise called jñāna-yōga.

So Very important verse. This verse is also very important. Not only in the 14th chapter, but in the entire Bhagavat Gīta, this is one of the important verses:

Verse 14.20

गुणानेतानतीत्य त्रीन् देही देहसमुद्भवान् ।
जन्ममृत्युजरादुःखैह विमुक्तोऽमृतमश्नुते ॥ १४.२०॥

guṇānētānatītya trīn dēhī dēhasamudbhavān |
janmamṛtyujarāduḥkhairvimuktō'mṛtamaśnutē || 14.20 ||

अतीत्य atītya having gone beyond, एतान् त्रीन् गुणान् ētān trīn guṇān these three guṇān, देहसमुद्भवान् dēhasamudbhavān which are the cause of rebirth देहि dēhi a person विमुक्तः vimuktaḥ becomes free जन्ममृत्युजरादुःखैः janmamṛtyujarāduḥkhaḥ from death, old age, and sorrow अश्नुते aśnutē and attains अमृतम् amṛtam immortality.

20. Having gone beyond these three guṇas which are the cause of rebirth, a person becomes free from birth, death, old age, and sorrow, and attains immortality.

The jñāna phalam is clearly mentioned here; dēhi ētān trīn guṇān atītya; dēhi means this jīva, this individual, with the help of the knowledge learns to disidentify from the three guṇas. Atītya means transcending; here transcending is dis-identifying from the three guṇās; and the three guṇās represent the three śarīrams, the five kōśas, in short, the entire anātma. Instead of claiming I am the body, I say that I have a body; gifted by the Lord for the temporary use; and what is the purpose of this temporary use? Not for eating, the body is given by the Lord that too the human body is given by the Lord only for gathering the knowledge. What knowledge? I am not the body, I have the body for my temporary use. This is called Adītya. In Taittiriya Upaniṣad, it was said

एतमन्नमयमात्मानमुप'सङ्क्रामति ।
एतं प्राणमयमात्मानमुपसङ्क्रामति

ētamannamayamātmānamupa' saṅkrā' mati |
ētaṁ prāṇamayamātmānamupasaṅkrāmati

Adītya, means upasaṅkramya; And all these three guṇas belong to what? Dēhasamudbhavān. So dēhasamudbhavaḥ, dēhasamudbhavaḥ means kāraṇam, and dēhaḥ means body. So dēhasamudbhavaḥ, means the cause for the physical body, and cause for the body means cause for janma. Because janma is defined acquisition of a new body. Therefore the three guṇas have given me this body and the three guṇas alone will give me the next body also.

And what type of body will be given will depend upon, ūrdhvaṁ gacchanti sattvasthā; satva-guṇa will give a higher body. Perishable or imperishable? Is there any doubt? Perishable body; rajō-guṇa will again give body alone and not mōkṣa.

Thus all the three guṇas are the cause of the body; cause of punar janma. So dēhasamudbhavaḥ, punarjanma kāraṇa bhūthān. So these three guṇas which are the causes of repeated acquisition of bodies; this jñāni disidentifies from these three guṇas.

And when a person disidentifies from the guṇās and the body, what happens? vimuktaḥ, he is free; free from what? Free from all the problems which belong to the body. When I identify with the body; the body's problems are my problem. When I identify with the car, and if it is brand new car, every small scratch is like a scratch on my heart. It is my car; the conditions of the object of abhimāna becomes my own condition. Similarly, the bodily conditions will be my conditions when I identify with the body and therefore when the body is mortal, I do not say body is mortal. The problem is what? I say I am mortal.

Body is mortal is not a problem; because hundreds of bodies are mortal and daily dying. Obituary column you read; what happens to you? You read the news-item. Somewhere boat tragedy. 35 people died. You read drinking coffee; and you may maximum say: chu chu chu. Pavam. Then you have forgotten even. So the mortality of the body itself is not problem. Death itself is not problem, because hundreds and millions of death we are seeing, hearing, etc. The problem is I-am-mortal is the problem. Mortality is not the problem; I-am-mortal is the problem. And Vēdānta does not remove the mortality of the body; Vēdānta removes the idea that I-am-mortal. And how does it remove the idea? By teaching me the fact that I am not the mortal body, but I am the immortal-I, behind the mortal-body.

And therefore, vimuktaḥ, he is free from all the problems of the body. What are the problems of the body? The first problem is janma, it is birth, birth itself is a problem in the sense, initially one has to be in solitary confinement, one has to remain in the womb of the mother, and coming out is a problem for both the mother and the baby, and once there is janma, the inevitable consequence is what? Jātasya hi dhruvō mṛtyurdhruvaṁ janma mṛtasya ca. Maraṇam is the next problem, then there are people who say: Swāmiji I am not frightened of death. It is a bluff only; but many people say I am not frightened of the death; but my only prayer is that I should die instantly. I just should pop off, preferably in sleep. So those people who say I am not afraid of maraṇam, they are afraid of jarā; means old age. And all the consequent problem. I need not describe and remind all those things; and you may not come to the class, and jarā, and dukhaiḥ, and all other problems and the beauty is what? These are really speaking not problems. The body being born growing decaying and dying, they are really speaking not problems, they are the nature of the body. Just as heat is the nature of the fire; it is svarupam of the fire. Similarly, the cold is the nature of Ice. Similarly vikārāḥ, asthi, jāyathē, vardathē, vipariṇamathē; the vikāra, means modification is the nature of body.

And a nature becomes a problem if I refuse to accept the nature of a thing as it is. Resistance to the fact is sorrow. Imagine I complain fire is hot, fire is hot, fire is hot; that is foolishness. Similarly, body's vikāra becomes a problem, when I resist the vikāra. And I will resist the modification if I have got strong abhimāna in the body. Abhimāna becomes; abhimāna removes my objectivity. Identification removes my objectivity. I will say let everybody else die, because that is nature; except people from my house. That's why Kṛṣṇa warned in the second-chapter:

तस्मादपरिहार्येऽर्थे न त्वं शोचितुमर्हसि || २- २७ ||

[jātasya hi dhruvō mṛtyurdhruvaṁ janma mṛtasya ca |
tasmādaparihāryē'rthē na tvam śōcitumarhasi || 2.27 ||](#)

When I discover the fact that I am the sākṣi, I learn to look at my body objectively. And the moment I get the objectivity I accept this body does not have any specialty; ஈட்டி கொம்பா? ஈட்டி கொம்புபுண்ண, மாட்டா? Therefore this body is like any other body, therefore it has to grow and it has to go.

Thus the sākṣi jñānam gives me objectivity with regard to my own body. Therefore old age is a fact; it is welcome; even if it is not welcome, at least I have no resistance. And along with old age, joint will say that I am here, I am here, and the ear will hear less, eye will see less; buddhi is always a problem; therefore these things are natural. I objectively see and accept.

And once the objectivity comes, the intensity of the problem comes down. This is called Abhibhava method; you do not remove the problems of the body; the body would have to go through its condition. But you develop a different perspective and from the new perspective; problems will not appear to be a major tragedy in life. Like when the sun rises, what happens to the stars? During the day time, there are stars in the sky or not? There are stars in the sky or not? We know there are stars during the day time also. But what happens? Stars are as though removed, because of the powerful sunlight. So what does the sunlight do? It does not destroy the stars, but it makes the stars as though non-existent by making their light extremely insignificant. Similarly, I am the Sākṣi jñānam, will not change the physical conditions; will not change the family members, it would have been better; will not change the water situation in Chennai; all the prārabhdā conditions will be there, but I develop new perspective from which, they are not worth talking about.

That's why they give the example of Āñjanēya. Āñjanēya thought that crossing the ocean is big task. But the moment he thought of Rāma, the ocean became a small pool of water; gōṣpathi kritha vāraśim; the ocean became what? A small pool of water; the ocean did not change its size; but because of the remembrance of the Lord, he got the extra strength and from that standpoint, the big ocean became small. Then what about the powerful rakshasas? Maśaki kritha rākṣasām. All the rākṣasāms became mosquitoes. Means what? Even if they bite, it is not felt; destroying the mosquito, what preparation you require?

You do not require any great effort. You effortlessly destroy. Therefore this knowledge gives me a new perspective; from which all the so-called problems are insignificant pinpricks. And therefore vimuktaḥ. They are not worth talking about. And this is called Jīvan mukti. So jīvanmukti is making the lives' problems insignificant, by changing the perspective through knowledge is called Jivan muktiḥ.

And a result of this knowledge; amṛtam aśnutē, not only the mortality of the body is not a serious problem for him and he has also owned up his immortality nature and therefore amṛtam aśnutē, he attains immortality.

And again what is meant by attaining immortality? The ahaṁkāra attains immortality or sākṣi attains immortality? Ahaṁkāra or body cannot become immortal. Ātma आत्मा? need not become immortal. Attaining immortality is shifting my abhimāna identification from the mortal body to the immortal Ātma. This is called Jīvan muktiḥ.

And this is called guṇathithatvam. Therefore, Jñāni is called here guṇathithaḥ.

अर्जुनः उवाच Arjunaḥ uvāca Arjuna asked प्रभो prabhō Oh! Lord कैः लिङ्गैः kaiḥ liṅgaiḥ with what characteristics अतीतः atītaḥ (does a person) who is beyond, एतान् त्रीन् गुणान् ētān trīn guṇān these guṇās, भवति bhavati appear? किमाचारः kimācāraḥ what is his conduct? च ca and कथम् अतिवर्तते katham ativartatē how does he go beyond, एतान् त्रीन् गुणान् ētān trīn guṇān these three guṇās?

21. Arjuna asked --- Oh Lord! With what characteristics (does a person) who is beyond these three guṇas appear? What is his conduct? And, how does he go beyond these three guṇās.

Arjuna is inspired by the Lord's teaching. And naturally he wants to know more about that jñāni who becomes a guṇāthitha. And therefore Arjuna asks the Lord: Arjuna uvāca; prabhō ētān guṇān atītaḥ kaiḥ liṅgaiḥ bhavati. Liṅgam means characteristics; indicators. So what are the characteristics of the indicators of a person, who has transcended the three guṇas successfully? Exactly as he asked in the 2nd chapter: sthitaprajñasya kā bhāṣā? Will there be any change in his physical body; whether he will slim or become fat, or will there be a halo around him; because in the pictures, you see a halo. Jñāni's back.

Now you are wondering when you are going to become a jñāni. Daily morning, or at least fresh after the Sunday class, you stand in front of the mirror and look for a halo. The only halo is the bald; getting developed. Will there be any halo or will I develop some extraordinary siddhis? There are some people who believe that a jñāni will automatically get siddhis, like the capacity to read the mind of the other. Ask Swamiji, do you read our minds? And we had come with certain questions, you answered exactly that question till that that is the proof. Even a few people think that Swamiji reads. Nothing like that. Vēdānta deals with all the questions and therefore what I talk will answer somebody's some question. So therefore the thought reading, siddhis, etc. they expect. Arjuna also is curious to know whether there will be any such indications. Lingam means indications. kaiḥ liṅgaiḥ guṇān athithaḥ, guṇāthitha jñāni with what indicators does he exist. Second question: Kim ācāraḥ. How does he conduct himself? How does he relate to the people? How does he interact with the people; because a jñāni also lives in the same society; therefore will there be a change in his language. Will he start talking in Sānskrīt suddenly? Katham? In the second-chapter he asked; how will he walk? So therefore will he walk sideways, etc.!! How does he eat; all misconceptions and that is why anybody who is physically different with long thadi, a shabby head, he must be a jñāni, we conclude. We have that misconception; there should be external change. Or else have a shaven head; some change people want; therefore we have to do something for the others also; there is no other change. The whole difference is fear inside. We look for what is over the head; we should look for what is inside the head. There is no other difference other than a clear understanding about what is what?

There is no mysticism connected to Vēdānta. Anything mystical belongs to non-vēdāntic subject. Vēdānta has no mysticism, even an iota in it. This confusion even Arjuna has; therefore how does he conduct himself. This the second question: What are his characteristics; how does he conduct himself.

And the third question is katham ca ētān guṇān ativartatē; katham ca ētān, (do not read Chaithan - There is no Shaithan in Gīta. ca ētān) How does he transcend the three guṇās? Is it a physical journey? Some people expect some kind of a physical journey for mōkṣa; going to some other lōkā, some people expect a transformation in time. And some people expect some kind of a sudden flashy event. So there is no event called liberation; there is no timewise transformation; there is no spacial journey, it is nothing but a clean understanding of an ever obtaining fact. What is the fact? Fortunately I am ever free. So therefore, he asks the question. How does he transcend the three guṇas? So this is Arjuna's question for which Kṛṣṇa gives the answer in the following verses; which we will see in the next class.

Hari Om

187 Chapter 14, Verses 22-27

ॐ

After elaborately talking about the three guṇās, and also how they bind a human being, Lord Kṛṣṇa pointed out the method of becoming guṇāthitha which is the only means to liberation and that method which He gave in the two important verses, 19 and 20; is ātma jñānam only, because the anātma cannot become guṇāthitha and the ātma is ever guṇāthitha and through knowledge I come to know that I am ever the guṇāthitha, and using the saguṇa anātma as a medium of transaction. And when this much was taught by the Lord, Arjuna raised a question in the 21 verse, which we saw in the last class.

In this question which has three parts; the first part is guṇāthitha liṅgam; the second part of the question is guṇāthitha ācāraḥ; and the third part of the question is guṇāthithatva sādhanam. Guṇāthitha liṅgam means what is the indicator by which I can know whether I have become guṇāthithaḥ or not; so that then I can decide to attend the next class or not. So the indications to know whether I am guṇāthitha.

The second is guṇāthithaḥ ācāraḥ, the way of the life, or the conduct of the guṇāthitha puruṣa or the jñāni. This is the second part.

And the third part is: guṇāthithatva sādhanam; the sādhanā by means of which one can become a guṇāthithaḥ. So līṅga, ācāraḥ, sādhanāni; these are the three questions for which Lord Kṛṣṇa gives the answer in the following verses. We will read.

Verse 14.22

श्री भगवानुवाच --

प्रकाशं च प्रवृत्तिं च मोहमेव च पाण्डव

न द्वेष्टि सम्प्रवृत्तानि न निवृत्तानि काङ्क्षति ॥ १४.२२ ॥

Śrī Bhagavān uvāca

rakāśam ca pravṛttim ca mōhamēva ca pāṇḍava |

ta dvēṣṭi sampravṛttāni na nivṛttāni kāṅkṣati || 14.22 ||

श्री भगवान् उवाच Śrī Bhagavān uvāca The Lord said पाण्डव pāṇḍava Oh Arjuna ! न द्वेष्टि na dvēṣṭi He does not hate, प्रकाशं च prakāśam ca brightness, प्रवृत्तिं च pravṛttim ca activity, एव च मोहम् ēva ca mōham delusion, सम्प्रवृत्तानि sampravṛttāni as they arise; न काङ्क्षति na kāṅkṣati nor does he desire (them) निवृत्तानि nivṛttāni as they withdraw..

22. The Lord said --- Oh Arjuna! He does not hate brightness, activity, and delusion as they arise, nor does he desire (them) as they withdraw.

In the first two verses, that is 22 and 23, Kṛṣṇa answers the first question guṇāthitha līṅgam, then in the next two verses, 24 and 25, Kṛṣṇa talks about the guṇāthitha ācāraḥ, the conduct, and then in the 26th verse, Kṛṣṇa answers, the last question guṇāthithatva sādhanā. So two verses to answer the first question, two verses to answer the 2nd question and one verse the answer the last question.

But in the indicator to know whether I am guṇāthitha or not, Kṛṣṇa says a guṇāthitha is one who is detached from his own body-mind complex. So guṇāthitha is one who is detached from this own body-mind complex, and therefore, he is able to look at his own body-mind complex as part of the world and therefore he enjoys an objectivity with regard his own body-mind complex. So this objectivity, freedom from too much worry and anxiety with regard to one's own body-mind complex is the indication of guṇāthitha. This jñāni, or this guṇāthitha, because of his very source of sādhanā, enjoys a better health at the body and mind level, because he has gone through karma yōga sādhanā, upāsana sādhanā, etc. and therefore his mind is predominantly a sātvic mind. A jñāni's mind is a predominantly sātvic mind, which he has attained through sādhanā.

And because of the very same sādhanā, jñāni has got a strong mind, jñāni has got a refined mind, and jñāni has a mind which is free from violent reaction. In fact that is the definition of the satva pradhāna mind and therefore the reactions are less to life's situation, and even if there are reactions in the mind, they are milder and even if there are milder reactions, he has got the capacity to recover by himself quickly. Thus a jñāni enjoys a healthy mind.

But a jñāni knows that even if I enjoy a healthy mind as a result of the sādhana, there is no possibility of 100% healthy mind at all possible. Just as there is no possibility health at the physical level, no mind can be 100% healthy at the psychological level also. And therefore jñāni accepts the fact that his mind is generally healthy, but his mind also is subject to the fluctuations of the three guṇas. And when the mind has got some times disturbances or fluctuations, even towards such a mind, jñāni does not violently react or get upset. And therefore, he has got objectivity with regard to his own mind, and therefore, if the mind has got certain problems, which are generally feeble, with regard to those problems also, jñāni has got a healthy response.

What do you mean by healthy response? He is neither too indifferent or inactive, if the mind has certain problems, he is not going to be indifferent. At the same time if the mind has got certain disturbances he is not going to be over-reactive also to that situation.

Therefore he is aware of the mental situation, and he enjoys improving the mind, all the time remembering the fact that the improvement of the mind has nothing to do with my pūrṇathvam. I enjoy improving the mind, I enjoy making the mind more and more healthy, so that life is good for myself and others; but all the time I remember the fact that the conditions of the mind have nothing to do with my pūrṇathvam, because I am the ātma who is different from the mind also.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa says prakāśaṁ ca pravṛttiṁ ca; Jñāni's mind enjoys prakāśaṁ predominantly; prakāśaṁ means satva-guṇa; pravṛttiṁ ca, Jñāni's mind has also rajō-guṇa, and mōham ēva ca; mōhaḥ means tamō-guṇa. Jñāni's mind also has got satva, rajas and tamō-guṇa; the only difference is Jñāni's mind is dominantly satvic, and rajō-guṇa is in the middle position and tamō-guṇa is in the lower position. But he knows his mind is not 100% sātvic. For that matter, no mind is 100% sātvic. And therefore his mind is subject to, what you call, the differences in the proportion in the three guṇas; and not only there is difference, these proportions will vary also. Vary also means what? There are times when tamō-guṇa is predominant; afternoon after a good lunch anybody has got what type of mind? Unḍa urakkam Thonḍanukkum, therefore jñāni's mind has also tamō-guṇa predominance, jñāni's mind also has got a rajō-guṇa predominance, but it you take the duration; most of the time, he is sātvic. And jñāni is aware of this fact.

And because of this the appreciation of this fact, how does he respond? Sampravṛttāni when the three guṇās are ripe at different times, na dvēṣṭi, he does not hate his own mind, when tamō-guṇa is predominant or rajō-guṇa is predominant, he does not hate his mind, based on its guṇa; na nivṛttāni kāṅkṣati. And when the guṇās go away or recede at particular times, satvic guṇa is receding at a particular time, na kāṅkṣati; he is not attached to the satva-guṇa also. So he is neither attached to satva-guṇa or rajō-guṇa or tamō-guṇa, nor does he hate satva-guṇa, rajō-guṇa or tamō-guṇa; he knows these three guṇās are inevitable compositions of everything, including my own mind. And therefore he is able to accept his own mind. Accepting one's own body and accepting one's own mind is the indication of guṇāthithatvam.

Verse 14.23

उदासीनवदासीनो गुणैर्यो न विचाल्यते ।
णा वर्तन्त इत्येव योऽवतिष्ठति नेङ्गते ॥ १४.२३ ॥

udāsīnavadāsīnō guṇairyo na vicālyatē |
guṇa vartanta ityēva yō'vatiṣṭhati nēṅgatē || 14.23 ||

यः आसीनः yaḥ āsīnaḥ he remains, उदासीनवत् udāsīnavat as if indifferent, न विचाल्यते na vicālyatē he is not disturbed गुणैः guṇaiḥ by the guṇas न इङ्गते na iṅgatē he does not waver यह अवतिष्ठति yah avatiṣṭhati he remains firm इति iti (with the understanding) that गुणाः एव वर्तन्ते guṇāḥ ēva vartantē the guṇās alone interact.

23. He remains as if indifferent. He is not disturbed by the guṇas. He does not waver. He remains firm (with the understanding) that the guṇas alone interact.

Kṛṣṇa explains the same idea in this verse also. What do you mean by the acceptance of one's own body-mind-complex; or objectivity, or healthy response? Generally, the problem an ajñāni faces is, extreme response to situations. One extreme response is total indifference. It is a tamasic response. When the physical body has got some disease or sickness, imagine I do not feed the body at all; I am not careful at all, indifference or carelessness or inaction is one extreme response, which is called tamasic response.

Then there is another extreme response, what is that? The moment the doctor says that you will have to go through the blood test, this fellow presses the panic button, this fellow is extremely worried about the body, the moment the body is sick, he imagines only the worst possible disease; would it be cancer? Would be aids; leukemia, this or that? That is called violent reaction; which is called rajasic response; which causes anxiety, tension, fear, stress, strain, etc. This is one extreme.

So one extreme is inaction; another extreme is reaction. What is healthy response? Neither inaction nor reaction; but healthy action to improve the situation. If the body has some problem, there is no panic; at the same there is no complacency also; what is to be done, I do.

Similarly, the mind is there; it is not going to be all the time sama, the mind will have disturbances, because the mind is a dynamic instrument and therefore disturbances are going to come. And when the mind is not healthy, then also I do not panic. After studying the Gītā for so many years, and my mind is like this and therefore I do not feel guilty, or inferiority complex or frustration. I do not frustrated with my own mind. Then what do I do? Mind has got a problem and therefore I have to handle, neither inaction or reaction; but whatever can be done to improve.

And even when I choose improve my mind, I remember the fact, the improvement of the mind has nothing to do with my pūrṇatvam. The mind can be infinitely improved. There is no question of 100% perfection of the mind, No jīvan muktha has got 100% perfect mind. Just as no jñāni has got 100% perfect body, no jñāni has got 100% perfect mind. Mind can be refined eternally and I enjoy refining the mind; not to for liberation; but as a liberated person; as an ever liberated ātma, I enjoy the game of refining this mind objectively.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa says udāsīnavat āsīnaḥ; Jñāni appears as though he is indifferent, because when the body falls sick he does not violently react to the sickness, it appears as though Jñāni is indifferent to his health. But Kṛṣṇa says he is not indifferent; he is as though indifferent; as though indifferent, means there is no violent reaction but at the same time, there is no inaction also; whatever is to be done; he will do to the body; therefore, udāsīnavat means he is balanced with regard to his own body mind complex.

Guṇaiḥ na vicālyatē. So in the fluctuation of the three guṇas, he is not disturbed at all. So whether the mind is satva pradhāna, or raja pradhāna or at times tama pradhāna, he is not going to be upset because he knows I am not the imperfect mind. That does not mean he let loose the mind. He always tries to keep the mind in a refined condition; but all the time detached. Therefore, guṇaiḥ, because of the three guṇās, na vicālyatē, he is not shaken.

Then what is his attitude? Guṇāḥ varthanthē; everyone, everything in the creation, has the three guṇas in different composition; my own mind has got the three guṇas, no doubt, due to my sādhanas, I have made it predominantly sātvic, but even then, there are moment, when it is rajasic. And if he is heavily rajasic and he feels that the mind may hurt others, he will withdraw, so that he does not disturb others. Therefore, guṇāḥ ēva vartantē; these three guṇas will be there; and these three guṇas will fluctuate also.

Ityēva; with this knowledge. Avatiṣṭhati. He remains balanced without self-criticism. Without self-judgment. Without low self-image. Yaḥ avatiṣṭhati. He remains with a balanced mind.

Na iṅgatē. Means he is not disturbed. Na vicālyatē. He is balanced. So this objectivity with regard one's own body and mind, is the indication of the guṇathitha; or a jñāni.

Verse 14.24

समदुःखसुखः स्वस्थः समलोष्टाश्मकाञ्चनः ।
तुल्यप्रियाप्रियो धीरः तुल्यनिन्दात्मसंस्तुतिः ॥ १४.२४ ॥

samaduḥkhasukhaḥ svasthaḥ samaloṣṭāśmakāñcanaḥ |
tulyapriyāpriyō dhīrastulyanindātmasaṁstutiḥ || 14.24 ||

धीरः dhīraḥ the wise man स्वस्थः svasthaḥ abiding in the self, समदुःखः samaduḥkhaḥ is the same in pleasure and pain, समलोष्टाश्मकाञ्चनः samaloṣṭāśmakāñcanaḥ he is the same towards a clod of earth, a stone, or gold तुल्यप्रियाप्रियः tulyapriyāpriyaḥ he is the same in desirable and undesirable situations तुल्यनिन्दात्मसंस्तुतिः tulyanindātmasaṁstutiḥ he is the same in censure and praise of himself (by others).

24. The wise man, abiding in self, is the same in pleasure and pain. He is the same towards a clod of earth, a stone or gold. He is the same in desirable and undesirable situations. He is the same in censure and praise of himself (by others).

So with the previous two verses, Kṛṣṇa has answered the first question; what is the indication of a guṇathitha, the indication is the objective acceptance of my own body mind complex.

Now Kṛṣṇa answers the second question in these two verses. The second question is: How does he respond to the worldly situation? And answer is the same. Just as the body-mind-complex is made up of the three fluctuating guṇas, the entire world is also made up of the three guṇas only and therefore you will have to interact with people who are sātvic, which will be happy interaction and you will have to interact with rājasic people, all the time tense and angry and irritable and all and you will also have to interact with Kondimādu, those people who will not move at all. After half an hour repetition, they will just ask what did you say? And thereafter they will say and they will just do it; and you will have to wait and wait for eons for them to complete the job. How much you screw them up, they would not move; these three types of people will be there eternally in the world; and not only that; one and the same person, himself or herself, will not be sātvic all the time, or rajasic all the time, and therefore the people in your own family will change.

And that is why they said with regard to marriage and all: Do not choose based on the character because nobody's character will remain the same. Marriage is dharma based and not compatibility based according to our śāstra, because compatibility is impossible; and even if there is a compatibility, husband is also changing, wife is also changing, after a few years, the compatible couple would have changed sufficiently to become a bayankara incompatible couple, because one has developed interest in Gīta; which was not there at all, because the other person does not like the Gīta /Swami at all, etc. There are such chances. Therefore different people are different, and the situations are also made up of the fluctuating prakṛti; therefore situations will change. And Jñāni accepts this fact of the creation and the very acceptance gives him a balanced state of mind and therefore samatvam is the ācāraḥ. Tranquility, balance, poised in all situations.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa says dhīraḥ; dhīraḥ means this jñāni's avasthaḥ, jñāni is one who always abides in his higher-nature: Sva means svarūpam, svarūpam means his real nature, and what is his real nature? Guṇāthitha ātma and sthaḥ means abiding. So he always abides in guṇāthitha ātma svarūpam.

And what do you mean by abiding in ātma? Does it mean that he sitting on the ātma? Abiding in the ātma means not forgetting the fact that I am guṇāthithaḥ. Self-abidance is equal to non-forgetfulness of my nature. Just as a saṅgītā vidvān, whatever song he sings, one corner of the mind is aware of the tampa sṛuti. It is not that 100% he thinks of sṛuti only; then he cannot sing the song properly; it is not that he forgets the sṛuti 100%; then apasṛuti would come; in one corner of the mind is aware of the sṛuti and whenever there is a doubt he will go behind and check up, just as a musician he is aware of the sṛuti, Jñāni is aware of the sṛuti. What sṛuti? Vēdaḥ. And what is the sṛuti teaching? I am not the changing guṇa; guṇāḥ guṇēṣu varthantē, body is saguṇa; world is saguṇa, saguṇa body and saguṇa world will interact, varieties of situations would arise, but I am different from both the saguṇa body and saguṇa world. This constant awareness is called svasthaḥ.

And because of this awareness, what does he enjoy. Samaduḥkhasukhaḥ. There is no resistance to favourable and unfavourable situations which are inevitable in life; so dēśa, kāla and prārabhdhā, these three things will affect our life all the time. Dēśaḥ; if you are in a tropical country, you are affected in one way; means what? Through weather condition. Summer will be always there; this is called dēśa affecting. Kāla, the time will affect the situation, the body will grow older and older and older, and the people around will grow older and older, dēśa will affect, kāla will affect, and finally our own prārabhdhā, so gurupeyarchi, śani peyarchi, rāhu peyarchi, etc. ketu peyarchi. So the prārabhdhā will also fluctuate and they are bound to bring sukhaḥ and duḥkham. Health and ill-health. Financially better and in an adverse situation; they are bound to happen; and when such situations come; samaḥ; and what do you mean by samaḥ, it is not indifference to the situation, nor is it overreaction to the situation; but whatever can be done to improve the situation, it is done, but all the time poised.

Therefore samaduḥkhasukhaḥ. Similarly samalōṣṭāśmakāñcanaḥ; lōṣṭam means a clod of earth (மண்ணாம்கட்டி maṇṇāmkaṭṭi), aśma means a rock and kāñcanaḥ, means gold; towards all of them: samaḥ. So sama lōṣṭam aśma kāñcanaḥ; sama means what? there is neither rāga nor dvēṣa, because things will come, gold will come; gold will go; wealth will come, wealth will go; mā kuru dhana jana yauvana garvaṁ harati nimēṣātkālah sarvam; lakṣmīsthōya taranga bhaṅga capala vidhyut chalam jīvitham; Lakṣmidēvi is the most fickle women on earth; who never loves to stay in one place; leaves a place as she thinks, in an instant. Therefore they will all come and go; samaḥ.

Then, tulyapriyāpriyō dhīraḥ, priyaḥ means that which gives sukham; sukha sādhanam priyaḥ and apriyaḥ means what? Duḥkha sādhanam because of duḥkham. Previously, it was said that he was balanced towards sukham and duḥkham, now he says, he is balanced towards the sukhaḥ duḥkha sādhanams, which is the cause of sukham and duḥkham; pleasant and unpleasant situations.

And tulyanindātmasaṁstutiḥ, nindā means what? Criticisms coming from people and saṁstutiḥ praise or glorification coming from people, whatever you do some people will glorify; and there will be some other people to criticize, if you want 100% approval from all people, you can never do anything in life. Therefore, approval seeking is an indication of low self-image.

And therefore a Jñāni, whatever be the course of action he has to take, he will see the pros and cons, the demerits and merits, and if he has to take opinion from known people, he will take, perhaps he will consult the śāstra, and thereafter, once he has decided a course of action, he will plunge into that; whatever be the opinion of others. And whatever you do, there would be some people, who will question everything. You decide to buy a house, they will threaten; you decide to sell a house, they will threaten. You decide to marry, they will ask, are you going to marry this chap? OK, then they will say ALL THE BEST, in a sorry mood. You decide to marry, people will criticise. You decide to take sanyāsa; my God! There will be others who criticise that. Do not be over-bothered about nindā and stutiḥ. Nobody is left out; Rāma has been criticised; Kṛṣṇa has been criticised; Śankarācārya has been criticised. Nobody can escape the criticism of others; and therefore do not be carried away by nindā and stutiḥ. And if somebody criticises and enjoys in the process; they say you be happy because at least somebody is happy criticising me. If they are getting some santhōṣam out of it, why should I disturb that happiness.

Man nindhaya yadi jana parithōṣamēthi, nanva prayasa janithōya manugrahōmē, srēyarthinō hi puruṣa para tuṣṭi hētōhō, klēśārjithani api danāni parithyajanthi.

I am supposed to give happiness to all the people; here I am giving happiness to others in the cheapest way; I do not do anything, they are happy, by talking ill of me; why should I disturb it; let him talk. Once you say that; they will stop talking. That is the way. Therefore, tulyanindātmasamstutiḥ. One who is balanced in censure and praise.

Verse 14.25

मानापमानयोस्तुल्यः तुल्यो मित्रारिपक्षयोः ।
सर्वारम्भपरित्यागी गुणातीतः स उच्यते ॥ १४.२५ ॥ mānāpamānayōstulyastulyō mitrāripakṣayōḥ |

sarvārambhaparityāgī guṇātītaḥ sa ucyatē || 14.25 ||

तुल्यः tulyaḥ he is the same मानापमानयोः mānāpamānayōḥ in honor and dishonour तुल्यः tulyaḥ he is the same मित्रारिपक्षयोः mitrāripakṣayōḥ towards a friend and a foe, सर्वारम्भपरित्यागी sarvārambhaparityāgī he is a renouncer of all actions, सः saḥ he उच्यते ucyatē is said to be गुणातीतः guṇātītaḥ a guṇatita

25. He is the same in honour and dishonour. He is the same towards a friend and a foe. He is a renouncer of all actions. He is said to be a Guṇatita.

Samatvam is further explained here. Mānāpamānayōḥ tulyaḥ. Again you cannot escape mānam or apamānam. After all, your own family members, May be your son, daughter, son-in-law, daughter in law, sambandhi, all those things. I am a sambandi and I am not respected; all these things samaḥ.

Difference between Nindha sthuthi and Māna apamāna, I have talked about before; nindāstutiḥ is at the verbal level; vāchikam; māna apamāna is at the kāyikam level; at the level of action; So tulyaḥ, this Jñāni is samaḥ.

Mitrāripakṣayōḥ; again he is the same towards friends and foes; enemies; you should not ask whether Jñāni has an enemy. Jñāni does not have enemy, but there are people who look Jñāni as their enemy. What can be done for that? So therefore, towards both types of people, who look upon me as a friend and as a foe, towards both of them; tulyaḥ, samaḥ; this is samatvam.

And sarvārambhaparityāgī. Ārambhaha means all the binding activities; ārambhaḥ means bandhaka karmāni and parityāgī means the one who has given up. What do you mean by binding activity? A binding activity is that by the fulfilment of which I consider that will become pūrṇaḥ. When I expect pūrṇatvam through an activity, it is a binding activity; because there are expectations.

Non-binding activity is one which is done out of pūrṇatvam. And therefore the success of the activity and the failure of the activity has nothing to do with my pūrṇatvam. At the anātma level activities are going on; but whatever happens at the anātma level, pūrṇamadha, pūrṇamidham, aham pūrṇaḥ asmi. Even the activity to improve your own body-mind should not be a binding activity. I should remember I tried to improve the body-and-mind, but that also has nothing to do with my pūrṇatvam. Aham pūrṇaḥ, whatever be the conditions of the body-mind complex. With this awareness, I enjoy improving everything, including the improvement of the body mind complex. Such a lifestyle is a game.

I have told you the example. When they have got a 5 match series cricket match, and our team has won three and therefore we have won the series and 4th and 5th match, how do we play? That is called jīvan mukthaḥ. We play very well, because we want to win those two also. But all the time, pūrṇaḥ, pūrṇaḥ, series won, series won, series won. Not like our England match. So imagine the state of mind of that team. This is the life of a jīvan muktha. Whole life is a game; both the success and failure has nothing to do with my pūrṇatvam. So sarvārambhaparityāgī. Saha guṇāthithaḥ ucyatē. So with this, the ācāra part is also over. Two main things are samatvam and also freedom from binding activities.

मां च योऽव्यभिचारेण भक्तियोगेन सेवते ।
स गुणान्समतीत्यैतान् ब्रह्मभूयाय कल्पते ॥ १४.२६ ॥

mām ca yō'vyabhicāreṇa bhaktiyōgēna sēvatē |
sa guṇān samatītyaitān brahmabhūyāya kalpatē || 14.26 ||

सः यः सेवते saḥ yaḥ sēvatē he who worships मां च mām ca Me alone अव्यभिचारेण भक्तियोगेन avyabhicāreṇa bhaktiyōgēna through the yōga of unswerving devotion कल्पते kalpatē becomes fit ब्रह्मभूयाय brahmabhūyāya to attain the nature of Brahman. समतीत्य samatītya by going beyond, एतान् गुणान् ētān guṇān these guṇas.

26. He who worships Me alone through the yōga of unswerving devotion becomes fit to attain the nature of Brahman by going beyond these guṇas.

The third question is answered here: What is the third question? Guṇathithatva sādhanam? What is the means of 'becoming' guṇāthithaḥ? In fact, Arjuna should not have asked this question, because Kṛṣṇa has already answered that in verse No.19 and 20. Kṛṣṇa has answered the question. What is the answer? Jñānam is the only means of "becoming" (becoming within quotes) guṇāthithaḥ, jñānam is the only part. Kṛṣṇa has already told and therefore Arjuna's question must be a reshuffled here. Arjuna has understood the means of becoming guṇāthitha is jñānam and therefore his present question is what is the means of getting jñānam? So his question is what? What is the means of becoming Guṇathithaḥ? What we have to do? We have to redefine. Question is how to attain jñānam by which one can become guṇāthithaḥ.

And Kṛṣṇa says the means of jñānam is bhakthi. So bhakthi-yōgaḥ consisting of karma and upāsana, which we have seen in the 12th chapter, five levels of bhakthi. Do you remember? I do not want to get into that now. Five levels of bhakthi, Kṛṣṇa talked about in the 12th chapter. That bhakthi-yōga is the sādhana. Therefore he says: bhaktiyōgēna sēvatē. Suppose a person worships me with bhakthi-yōga consisting of five levels explained in the 12th chapter, and what type of bhakthi yōga, avyabhicāreṇa bhakthi yōgēna, unflinching bhakthi yōgēna, devotion.

And what do you mean avyabhicāra bhakthi? For that you have to go to the 7th chapter, where he talked about arta bhakthi, artharthi bhakthi and jijñāsu bhakthi. That jijñāsu bhakthi is here called avyabhicāri bhakthi. A bhakthi through which I seek the Lord and Lord alone. And that is called here avyabhicāri bhakthi. Through that one who worships me saḥ ētan guṇān samatīthya. That person will certainly cross over the three guṇas, because he will be going all the levels of sādhana consisting of karma, consisting of upāsana and the final level of bhakthi-yōga is: vēdānta sṛavaṇa, manana, nidhidhyāsana. This should be kept in mind very importantly.

Going through all these levels, saḥ brahmabhūyāya kalpatē, he becomes fit, eligible to become one with Brahman. Brahma bhūya, means Brahma bhāvaḥ. Brahma bhāvaḥ means Brahma svarūpam. Brahma svarūpam means nirguṇa svarūpam, because Brahman is nirguṇam. Nirguṇa svarūpam means guṇathithatvam. Such a person will attain jñāna and become guṇāthithaḥ.

With this all the three questions are answered. Now Kṛṣṇa concludes the teaching:

Verse 14.27

ब्रह्मणो हि प्रतिष्ठाहम् अमृतस्याव्ययस्य च ।
शाश्वतस्य च धर्मस्य सुखस्यैकान्तिकस्य च ॥ १४.२७ ॥

brahmaṇō hi pratiṣṭhā'hamamṛtasyāvvyayasya ca|
śāśvatasya ca dharmasya sukhasyaikāntikasya ca || 14.27 ||

अहं हि प्रतिष्ठा aham hi pratiṣṭhā I am indeed the basis, अव्ययस्य avyayasya of the changeless च अमृतस्य ca amṛtasya immortal ब्रह्मणः brahmaṇaḥ saguṇa) Brahman, च शाश्वतस्य धर्मस्य ca śāśvatasya dharmasya the eternal dharma च एकान्तिकस्य सुखस्य ca ēkāntikasya sukhasya and unconditional ānanda.

27. I am indeed the basis of the changeless immortal (Saguṇa) Brahman, the eternal dharma, and unconditional ānanda.

Here Kṛṣṇa says: Arjuna, that Brahman which you want to attain which is guṇāthitham is none other than I myself. So I am not a ordinary Dēvaki nandana Kṛṣṇa, I myself am the embodiment of that Brahman. Aham ēva brahmaṇa prathiṣṭa. I am the embodiment of Brahman; packed Brahman I am; packed in Kṛṣṇa śarīra.

What type of Brahman I am? The description of his nature.

Amṛthasya; which is immortal.

Avyayasya, which is decay free; which is free from jarā, avyaya means apakṣaya rahithasya; which is free from declensions or decay or jarā, etc.

and śāsvathasya, which is ever changeless, so the three words put together, amṛtasya, avyayasya, śāsvathasya, put together means ṣad vikāra rahithasya. One who is free from all forms of modifications.

kalathithasya iti artha; one who is beyond time.

and dharmasya, Dharmasya in this context means the one who is reached through dharma. One who is the goal of dharma. And the word dharma means the vēdic-teaching. So dharmasya means vaidika dharma prāpyasya, the one who is the destination of all the scriptural teachings and sādhanas,

And ēkāntikasya sukhasya; that which is ānanda svarūpa, which is unmixed with sorrow. ēkāntikasya sukham means duḥkha rahitha sukham. Unalloyed ānanda. Unlike the worldly pleasures which are mixed with pain; Brahman is ānandō Brahmēthi vyajānāt. So such a changeless and ānanda svarūpam Brahman I am, and that I, you will reach by following this sādhana.

So with this Kṛṣṇa concludes the teaching.

ॐ तत्सत् इति श्रीमद्भगवद्गीतासूपनिषत्सु ब्रह्मविद्यायां योगसास्त्रे । श्रीकृष्णार्जुनसंवादे गुणत्रयविभागयोगो नाम चतुर्दशोऽध्यायः ॥

Thus is concluded the 14th chapter of the Gīta, which is happily titled guṇathraya vibhāga, the classification of the three guṇas, satva, rajas and tamas, and also guṇa athitham brahma. Guṇa thraya, guṇa athitha vibhāga yōgaḥ.

188 Chapter 14, Summary

Today I will give you a summary of the 14th chapter. The 14th chapter, like the previous chapter, falls within the third śatkam of the Bhagavat Gīta; the third group of six chapters and I had pointed out that in the third śatkam, Lord Kṛṣṇa concentrates on jñāna-yōga. And therefore we find the topic of jñāna-yōga, the essential teachings of the upaniṣads condensed in these chapters; especially the 13th, 14th and 15th chapters. In the 16th and 17th chapters, we will see later, Kṛṣṇa deals with jñāna-yōga- friendly virtues. This 'friendly' word is very very common now. Environment friendly paper, etc. 16th and 17th chapter will deal with jñāna-yōga friendly virtues whereas these three chapters 13, 14 and 15; deal with Jñāna-yōga the pursuit of self-knowledge or ātma jñānam. Though, these three chapters are relatively small, they are very very significant chapters and this is known as Guṇathraya vibhāga-yōga, in this chapter, Kṛṣṇa deals with the three guṇas as the stepping stones, through these three guṇas, Lord Kṛṣṇa takes us to the guṇāthitha ātma. Guṇa thraya dvāra. Through the three guṇas as stepping stone, going to the guṇāthitha ātma, is the subject matter of this chapter and therefore, it is called guṇa-thraya vibhāga-yōga.

And in the first four verses of this chapter, Kṛṣṇa gives an introduction in which he mentions the subject matter of ātma jñānam as the liberating wisdom and therefore the greatest knowledge. All the other disciplines of knowledge are called aparā vidya; inferior knowledge; whereas this is the knowledge which is called parā vidya in the upaniṣad and rāja vidya in the 9th chapter and this knowledge is the greatest knowledge because this alone releases a person from saṁsāra. All the other disciplines of knowledge will make me only smaller and smaller because the more I study I come to know how little I know. So instead of growing bigger in terms of knowledge, I only feel smaller and smaller as I study more further. Therefore they make me smaller; and whereas this is the only wisdom which makes me own the fact that I am Brahman, the biggest. Therefore, Kṛṣṇa says this is a liberating knowledge, which gives liberation while living called jīvan-muktiḥ and it is also gives liberation after death, which is called vidēḥ muktiḥ. And by vidēḥ muktiḥ we mean freedom from punarjanma. Sargē'pi nōpajāyantē praḷayē na vyathanti ca (14.2). Cycles of births and death.

Thus having introduced the subject matter, later Kṛṣṇa gives the foundation for the teaching and in that foundation he briefly mentions the process of creation. While pointing out that God is the cause of the creation, and God consists of two aspects, one is the consciousness aspect and the other is the matter aspect. Cētana acētana tatva dvaya vilithaḥ Isvaraḥ.

In the 7th chapter, Cētana tatvam was called parā prakṛti, acētana tatvam was called aparā prakṛti.

In the 13th chapter, Cētana tatvam was called puruṣaḥ and acētana tatvam is called prakṛtiḥ.

And in the upaniṣads, the generally the cētana tatvam is called brahman and the acētana tatvam is called Māya.

These two principles together is called and this Īśvara is anādi and from this Cētana - acētana misram alone the entire universe has originated, including every individual also. And from this we can easily infer that every individual also must be a mixture of Cētana - acētana tatvam because as the cause is, so the effect will be. As the parents are, (very difficult to assimilate, but the truth is), so the children will be. That is why when the children are very wayward, they ask the question: Whose child is this? So based on the same principle, I, the individual, also AM is the mixture of puruṣa and prakṛti, brahman and māya; cētanam and acētanam. Otherwise technically called ātma-anātma misraḥ I am.

And from this we can infer another aspect also. And that is the anātma part of mind which is born out of prakṛti will have the three guṇas which belong to prakṛti. So prakṛti is responsible for the origination of my anātma part and therefore my anātma part will have three guṇas and what is anātma part; the body-mind complex; Otherwise we can call the ahaṁkāra part. So the body-mind complex is equal to the anātma part is equal to the ahaṁkāra part is saḡuṇaḥ, endowed with the three guṇas, because it is a product; originating from the prakṛti.

And similarly I have got a puruṣa aspect also; the cētana aspect also; which is called the ātma aspect; which is nirguṇam in nature and this nirguṇa ātma is technically called sākṣi. Therefore saḡuṇa ahaṁkāra plus nirguṇa sākṣi. Saḡuṇa matter plus nirguṇa consciousness is the individual.

Do not ask me what is saḡuṇa; saḡuṇa means with guṇa or properties and nirguṇa means without guṇa, the properties or attributes. The pure ahaṁkāra also cannot interact in the world. Pure sākṣi also cannot interact in the world. All the interactions are done by the mixture sākṣi + ahaṁkāra.

And the whole aim of this teaching is I should learn to own up more and more of my higher sākṣi svarūpam, which is the persistent and permanent nature of mine and I should not be over obsessed with my inferior ahaṁkāra materialistic nature. Not that ahaṁkāra should be neglected; because without ahaṁkāra, pure sākṣi cannot transact. So ahaṁkāra is needed; but over-importance and undue importance, obsession with ahaṁkāra will lead to all types of problem. And therefore instead of seeing myself as ahaṁkāra, I should learn to see myself as sākṣi, now transacting through ahaṁkāra kanchukam; ahaṁkāra overcoat. For this purpose, the Kṛṣṇa talked about the creation and the essence of this topic is I am also a mixture of saḡuṇa and nirguṇa aspect.

And having presented this foundation, Lord Kṛṣṇa begins the teaching from the 5th verse onwards. He talks about the three guṇas of ahaṁkāra, to show that all the three guṇas are causes of bondage, if we do not know how to make use of them properly, like anything in the creation. If I know how to handle things, it can help me grow; if I do not know how to handle, the very same thing will cause problems. You take fire, it is a blessing or a curse; it depends upon whether I know how to handle fire. Electricity is a blessing or curse? By itself it is neither; but if I do not know how to handle, it becomes a curse. Similarly, the three guṇas also. If I do not know how to make use of, they can become guṇa. Guṇa has got a second meaning, they can become 'ropes' or chains to bind me.

And therefore I should have a thorough understanding of the three guṇas. So from 5th verse, up to 18th verse, we get an analysis of the three guṇas which is essentially an analysis of the ahaṁkāra. Because ahaṁkāra has the three guṇas.

And for the convenience of our study, Kṛṣṇa classifies this analysis into five parts. What are those five parts?

First he gives the lakṣaṇam or definition of the three guṇas.

And then He gives the mode of bondage; how each guṇa binds. If we do not know how to handle ~ that is always to be supplied ~ if we do not know how to handle; bandana prākaraḡ.

Then He gives the liṅgam, indication to find out which guṇa is dominant in me;

Thereafterwards, Gatiḡ, gathi means what? post-death travel; the travel after life; and then Finally phalam, the consequences of the predominance of each guṇa.

First he gives the definition, we have got a chart in our books; we can refer to the chart later, he gives the definition, satvaḡ prakāśātmakam; rajas is rāghātmakam, tamas is mōhanātmakam.

Satva is that disposition of the mind which makes the mind knowledge-friendly. Today I am in the friendly-mood. So satva makes the mind endowed with that disposition, which is knowledge-friendly, which makes the mind a bright mind. In Sānskrīt, jñāninōnmukha anthakaraṇam. So disposed to the acquisition of knowledge; whereas rajō-guṇa makes the mind karma-friendly; activity-friendly; a disposition which is suited for dynamism; lot of work.

Whereas tamō-guṇa makes the mind unfit for, inimical to both, not inimical to one, neither knowledge-friendly nor activity-friendly. Such a disposition of mind is called satva, rajas or tamas. Propensity-based definition.

Then the next one is the mode of bondage. How does it bind? When my mind is knowledge-friendly, naturally I become a pūsthaka pūchi, a bookworm; all the time interested in operating the jñānēndriyas; not karmēndriya-active person; and Jñānēndriya active person and therefore I look for an infrastructure which is conducive to more and more study. A library atmosphere; with lot of books around, bright light; in modern houses, very very unfriendly for reading; only one small bulb in the corner; seems that is the fashion; most unfit for reading; and if you put bright tube light, they say is it a shop or what? They think that shop should only be bright; and not homes. So it is a knowledge-unfriendly lighting/atmosphere, whenever you go to such a place.

And therefore the mind seeks books, people who can teach, quiet atmosphere, ideally a desk and a table, pen. In many houses, they would not even have a pen, pencil, rubber, paper, etc. and they will go and buy if I request.

After the school life is over, they use the pen only for taking down the phone nos.!! And generally that pen would not work also. So stationeries would not be there. A learning person will first look for those things. And it becomes a bondage, and if such a conducive atmosphere is not there; this person becomes restless and unhappy. That is the bondage caused by satva-guṇa. So jñāna saṅgēna badnāti. By creating attachment to a knowledge-infrastructure.

Whereas rajō-guṇa creates attachment to what? It does not like library; library if you say it gets angry. It wants to do lot of things; and therefore it looks for activity friendly atmosphere. And when such an atmosphere is there; that mind is very happy; if that is not there; if you want to punish him, leave him in an āśramam. In three days he will become mad. Not only he will become mad, he will also make others mad. So therefore, jñāna saṅgēna satvam satvam badnāti, karma saṅgēna rajaḥ badnāti.

And tamaḥ; it will look for what? Nidrā saṅgēna, this is the three types of bandana prakāraḥ. This the three types of bandana prakāraḥ.

Then the liṅgam, the indication of the three guṇas; this is a corollary we get from the previous discussions.

When is satva dominant? When is jñānam increases. Reading increases; study increases; thinking increases; it is in the indication of satva vritti; whereas when lot of activity increases, it is an indication of rajō vritti and when sleep and sleepy condition increases, it is an indication of tamō vritti.

And then next Kṛṣṇa talked about the gathi after death. When a person dies when satva is predominant, one goes to higher lōkās; when a person dies with rajas predominant; he is born in the manuṣya lōkā; because manuṣya lōka is meant for karma; so karmāṇu bandini manuṣya lōkē; we will soon see in the 15th chapter. When tamō-guṇa is predominant after death, that person goes down. So urdhva gathi, madhyama gathi and adhō gathi.

And finally, the consequences of these three guṇas were also pointed out; that is the phalam; the consequences in this life itself. That also we can easily derive.

When satva-guṇa increase, jñāna vṛddhi takes place; when rajō-guṇa increases, the ambition and activities increase; and when tamō-guṇa increases, nidrā, pramādhā, means negligence; that the life will be closer to the animal.

So thus, lakṣaṇam, bandanam prakārah, liṅgam, gathi and phalam. All these five topics Kṛṣṇa discusses from the 5th verse up to 18th.

And then comes the crucial two verses. 19 and 20, in which Kṛṣṇa talks about transcending the three guṇas. And for transcending the three guṇas one will have to make use of the three guṇas. Just as a fruit requires skin and also the stem of whatever it is to connect it to the mother tree, for ripening and once it is ripened, it does not require this skin and that is why naturally the skin comes out. So skin is required for ripening and after ripening, you cannot say, skin was very much useful, and therefore I should be grateful to the skin also, I should not peel the skin and throw away; that is ingratitude and therefore I will eat the banana along with the skin. I do not know whether naturopathy would recommend that. They will say, eat with the skin.

Normally we do not do, that does not mean, I disrespect the skin. Skin is required up to a particular time and then it has to peel off. Similarly, the entire spiritual-sādhana is a gradual journey from tama pradhāna life to raja-pradhāna life to satva-pradhāna life to guṇāthitha life.

And how does the scripture accomplish that? The scripture prescribes lot of karma to a person who is now tama pradhāna. And what type of karmas. Sakāma karma. Selfish activities to fulfil worldly materialistic desires. In fact scriptures encourage desires; just as we have got advertisement now, to generate desires, Vēda itself has itself commercials. Vēda-pūrva-bhāga is full of advertisement. Because it wants to inject desires in the tamō-guṇa person, who is always sleepy and refuses to get up and make him rajō guṇi. So therefore karma, what type of karma? Sakāma karma, selfish activity, the scriptures recommend for the initial step.

And once a person has got into sakāma karma, then the scriptures gradually changes his status, rajō-guṇa should be maintained and it should be a different type of rajō-guṇa. The first rajō-guṇa is tamō-guṇa tainted rajō-guṇa is the first phase, satva-guṇa tainted rajō-guṇa should be the next stage. Śankarācārya calls it tamaḥ upasarjana rajaḥ is first stage; satva upasarjana rajaḥ is the second stage. What is the difference these two? Both rajō-guṇa s will activate a person. It will make the person extremely ambitious; it will whip up the ambition but the difference will be initially all desires are personal selfish-oriented. That means the beneficiary of my activity will be only, i.e. I am the beneficiary or maximum my family. That will be the first stage; whereas when that rajō-guṇa is converted to the higher rajō-guṇa, sakāma karma will be converted into niškāma karma which means the beneficiaries of my activity will be more and more. Not my family alone; there is a wider circle, neighbours benefit, the entire community benefit; the temples around benefit, the educational institutions around benefit. Not myself only. As the beneficiaries increase, sakāma karma is getting converted into niškāma karma. This is travel from tamō-guṇa from lower rajō-guṇa to higher rajō-guṇa. To use the 4th chapter language, guṇa sūdra to guṇa vaiśya to guṇa kṣatriyaḥ. Guṇa kṣatriyaḥ is a person whose life and activities will benefit the entire community; nation-wide community, whole universe itself.

Once a person has lived a guṇa kṣatriyaḥ life, which is otherwise called karma-yōga, then the scriptures ask you to graduate you to the next stage, what is that? Satva guṇa pradhāna life; after the peak of activity, gradually one has to withdraw. Gṛhastha āśrama to vānaprastha āśrama, you may not physically leave home, but in the life style, the orientation is gradually changed.

And at this stage alone, the scriptures talk about more of upāsana and less of karma. So upāsana is the sādhanā which makes an extroverted active person into a quiet and withdrawn and Self/ātma oriented person. Thus upāsana sādhanam makes me a satva pradhāna puruṣaḥ.

When I become a satva prādhanā puruṣa, the activities are gradually dropped, and one does not feel any guilt because he has contributed to the society sufficiently. He is not a selfish person because of so many years he has contributed. Now he can turn to concentrated spirituality. And not only that, physically also, this person becomes incapable of more activity; when for him getting up and sitting down itself become a project. No other project is required. Sitting is a project and getting up is a project. What work he will do? He requires people to help him out. Therefore even physically it is more conducive for inward directed life. So thus tama pradhāna to raja pradhāna to satva pradhāna he has come; by following karma-yōga and upāsana.

Then from satva-guṇa to nirguṇa travel alone is a totally different type of travel. There is no corridor connecting satva-guṇa and nirguṇa. Tamō guṇa can be changed to rajō-guṇa, rajō-guṇa can be changed to satva-guṇa; satva-guṇa can never be converted into nirguṇa. If satva-guṇa is converted, it will again become tamō-guṇa or rajō-guṇa only. There is no corridor connecting guṇa thraya and Nirguṇa, or guṇathitaḥ and therefore the sādhana is jñānam.

So after a person becomes a satva-guṇa pradhānaḥ, karma-yōga is dropped, upāsana is dropped, because they have done their job by making me satva-guṇa pradhānaḥ. In fact satva-guṇa pradhāna person is called sādhana catuṣṭaya sampanna adhikāri. Then what is the sādhana ? Jñāna yōga. That Kṛṣṇa tells clearly.

नान्यं गुणेभ्यःकर्तारं यदा द्रष्टानुपश्यति ।
गुणेभ्यश्च परं वेत्ति मद्भावं सोऽधिगच्छति ॥ १४.१९ ॥

[Nānyam guṇēbhyaḥ kartāraṁ yadā draṣṭā'nupaśyati |
guṇēbhyas̄ca param vētti madbhāvaṁ sō'dhigacchati || 14.19 ||](#)

As I said the crucial word in that 19th verse is Vētti, he comes to know. And Kṛṣṇa does not say how to get the knowledge, because he has already said that in the 4th chapter. Knowledge does not automatically happen. Whether your mind is a noisy mind or whether your mind silent mind, ignorant mind will be ignorant, no knowledge. No knowledge, for that matter, can happen naturally.

That's why Dayānanda Swami beautifully says: If you sit quietly what would have happened is; previously noisy ignorant mind, to quiet ignorant mind; so by stilling the mind or quietly sitting in meditation, knowledge does not happen. What should you do:

तद्विद्धि प्रणिपातेन परिप्रश्नेन सेवया |
उपदेक्ष्यन्ति ते ज्ञानं ज्ञानिनस्तत्त्वदर्शिनः ॥४.३४ ॥

[tadviddhi praṇipātēna parapraśnēna sēvayā |
upadekṣyanti tē jñānaṁ jñāninastattvadarśinaḥ || 4.34 ||](#)

Jñāna-yōga means going to a guru. Sthrōthriya brahmaniṣṭa guru and systematic study of the Vēdanta. Not a casual now and then listening to some satsaṅga here and there, and all of them are meant to inspire you, inspiration is different; teaching is different. Dayānanda Swamiji says: Preaching is different; teaching is different.

And systematic study includes śravaṇam, mananam and nidhidyāsanam, study of the scriptures for a length of time, and thereafter removing all the doubts by proper mananam or analysis and thereafter internalisation of the teaching. So through śravaṇam, manana and nidhidhyāsana, I become guṇāthitha.

Now the question is: How do I become guṇāthitha, by śravaṇam? As I said, the body, mind complex will be eternally saguṇa, it would not become nirguṇa. Then what do I do through jñāna-yōga? I learn to dis-identify from the body by knowing the fact that body is only an incidental instrument I am using for worldly transaction exactly like the spectacle and when I remove the spectacles, what happens? I am not gone, but I am not able to see the people, similarly when the body-mind- complex is not there, I do not disappear, I do not have the medium to interact with the people; and we do experience such a situation daily, When? During the deep sleep state. And therefore, body mind complex is temporarily used and then it will be dropped, I should take the instrument as myself.

Then if I am not the body-mind-complex, who am I? For that alone, Kṛṣṇa gave the answer:

क्षेत्रज्ञं चापि मां विद्धि सर्वक्षेत्रेषु भारत ॥
क्षेत्रक्षेत्रज्ञयोर्ज्ञानं यत्तज्ज्ञानं मतं मम ॥ १३.३ ॥

[Kṣētrajñam cāpi māṃ viddhi sarvakṣētrēṣu bhārata |
kṣētrakṣētrajñayōrjñānam yattajjñānam matām mama || 13.3 ||](#)

I am not the body, but I am the experiencer of the body; I am not the mind; I am the experiencer of the mind; and therefore, all the known attributes belong to the known body mind complex only.

This is a very important law. You should remember. Any experienced attribute, belong to the experienced object. If I see green colour, the colour belong to the eye or the object. The seen colour belongs to the seen object; does not belong to the seer eye. Whatever colour I am seeing, all those belong to what? The objectified-attribute belong to the objectified-substances; no attribute belongs to the objectifier-eye.

And therefore all the guṇas belong to the body-mind-complex. I am free from all the three guṇas. So you do not contact the guṇāthitha ātma, you do not become the guṇāthitha ātma, you own up the fact that I was guṇāthitha; I am guṇāthitha, and I will be guṇatita. For how many days? I am incapable of becoming saguṇa. So this transformation in the I, takes place and this knowledge based transformation is called mōkṣaḥ or jīvan muktiḥ.

नान्यं गुणेभ्यःकर्तारं यदा द्रष्टानुपश्यति ।
गुणेभ्यश्च परं वेत्ति मद्भावं सोऽधिगच्छति ॥ १४.१९ ॥

[Nānyaṃ guṇēbhyaḥ kartāraṃ yadā draṣṭā'nupaśyati |
guṇēbhyaśca paraṃ vētti madbhāvaṃ sō'dhigacchati || 14.19 ||](#)

गुणानेतानतीत्य त्रीन् देही देहसमुद्भवान् ।
जन्ममृत्युजरादुःखैह् विमुक्तोऽमृतमश्नुते ॥ १४.२० ॥

[guṇānētānatītya trīn dēhī dēhasamudbhavān |
janmamṛtyujarāduḥkhairvimuktō'mṛtamaśnutē || 14.20 ||](#)

So after death, will I have urdhva gathi or madhyama gathi or athō gathi? If I have satva-guṇa I will have urdhva gathi; if I have rajō-guṇa I will have madhya gathi; tamō-guṇa I will have athō gathi. If I am Nirguṇa, what gathi? No gathi. Aham agathiḥ asmi. Not Tamil 'agathi' (refugee). I am agathiḥ, because I cannot move from one place to another, because I am the ātma, the caitanyam which is all-pervading, in Me the consciousness, the saguṇa matter appears and in Me the consciousness the saguṇa matter resolves. And I am never affected by the three guṇas. This is called mōkṣa.

And naturally Arjuna is curious to know what will be the lifestyle of such a guṇāthitha person, and therefore he asked three questions in the 21st verse,

अर्जुन उवाच -
कैर्लिङ्गैस्त्रीन्गुणानेतान् अतीतो भवति प्रभो ।
किमाचारः कथं चैतान् त्रिन्गुणानतिवर्तते ॥ १४.२१ ॥

[Arjuna uvāca
kairliṅgaistrīn guṇānētānatītō bhavati prabhō |
kimācāraḥ kathāṃ caitānstrīn guṇānativartatē || 14.21 ||](#)

The three questions are: What are the indications of the guṇāthitha? Characteristics of guṇāthitha and then what is the conduct of the guṇāthitha? Ācāraḥ, and the method of becoming guṇāthithaḥ.

And Kṛṣṇa gives the answer, the indication is the very knowledge makes the mind less and less reactive to the situation because the mind has become an enlightened mind and an enlightened mind learns to have the right attitude towards the saguṇa creation.

And what is the right attitude? The creation will be different. Why different? Because the proportion of the guṇas varies from individual to individual therefore no human being can be like me. And therefore there is no question of compatibility. So looking for compatibility is the worst that you can do and even if by chance there is any compatibility between two persons, it cannot be for long, because both have dynamic changing mind; and therefore differences are natural in anātma. Changes are natural in anātma.

Association and dissociation are natural in anātma. Birth, growth, declension and death are natural in anātma. And therefore I cannot change the anātma, I should only change my attitude. And this changing of the attitude takes place gradually only because the old behaviour continues.

And through Nidhidhyāsanam, which is called dwelling upon the teaching; I reduce my reactions gradually. And when the reactions reduce, knowledge does not improve. Knowledge does not become brighter, but knowledge seems to improve, because the reactions are decreasing.

Just like on a purnami day, the moon seems to be brighter and brighter in the evening, but you know that moon is not becoming brighter but as the sunlight recedes, sunlight is an obstacle to the brightness of the moon. As the sun light recedes, the moon seems to be brighter and brighter; similarly my reactions come down as a result of the assimilation; as a result nidhidhyāsanam.

And as I had said before, we can see the decrease in reaction at three levels; frequency of unhealthy reactions, like frustration, like fear, like insecurity, anger, etc. the frequency comes down. Not that today you got knowledge, tomorrow you are all gems. No: even after study of Gīta, it will continue, because habits have to be gradually changed. So do not expect a flashy transformation. It is not going to happen. It is a gradual assimilation.

Not only frequency comes down, the intensity of the reactions also come down; and how do you know? The decrease in the intensity; the most intense reaction is at three levels; mānasam, vāchikam, and kāyikam. That is why when there is extreme reaction, there is butterfly in the stomach.

Before writing examination, the stomach upset; therefore, mental, verbal, physical. Therefore Arjuna got

सीदन्ति मम गात्राणि मुखम् च परिशुष्यति.... ॥१. २९॥

sīdanti mama gātrāṇi mukhaṃ ca pariśuṣyati.... || 1.29||

As the intensity comes down, it will be at two levels; physical reactions will come down; but mental and verbal will be there; constantly grumbling and making others also upset. And thereafter further reduction intensity, verbal reactions are gone, even physical reactions are gone but in the mind reactions do arise; even after studying Vēdānta for years. But the greatness is that nobody else will know, because there is no physical or verbal reaction; but that person knows the rising of reaction.

So this is reduction in intensity and finally there is a reduction in the recovery period also; previously once I get angry it continues for days; and then it comes down to hours; then it comes down to minutes; then it comes down to seconds; so I get a mental resilience to bounce back, even though I violently reacted, I am able to forget that and continue with my life. So thus nidhidhyāsanam converts jñānam into jñāna-niṣṭa, reducing the violent reaction.

But we should remember, reactions can never become zero. Zero reactions are only in the case of a table, the chair, etc. they do not have it. They do not get angry. So our mind is live mind; therefore we can reduce the FIR, not the police report, Frequency, Intensity, Recovery period, these three we can bring down, but it can never become zero. It will be there; but what happens is once I bring it down sufficiently, thereafter; my meditation or nidhidhyāsanam becomes slightly different; and that nidhidhyāsanam is that I should not be too much obsessed with the mind and its reactions; because to be over obsessed with the mind, is again identification with the mind. That is ahaṁkāra and therefore, I reduce the reaction and thereafterwards, I learn to distance from my mind, and I do not worry too much about the reacting mind. That is reaction to the reaction. Do you understand? First we will react. Then I remember that I am a Gīta student; and I react a second time.

So every Gīta student has to face two reactions; one is the natural reaction to the situation; and the second is reaction to the fact that I reacted, leading to depression. That I am not progressing at all. I need not come to the class, etc. What is the use? Even if we do not get depression, family members will create. What is the use of going to Gīta class? Without attending Gīta classes I am better, they will say. That hurts your ego more. This is called the secondary reaction. So after a particular time, I drop my secondary reactions; I am not over-obsessed with the reaction of the mind. And I say that I do not have any reaction because I am the witness of the reacting mind. You should not start it now. Only in the last. First reduce the reactions, then give up the reactions to the reactions.

This is called jñāna-niṣṭa and that Kṛṣṇa tells in the last few beautiful verses 22 to 27. In the 22nd verse, Kṛṣṇa is talking about the absence of reaction to the reaction. In one of the guru pūrṇima talks, I have dealt with this topic very elaborately. Reaction to the reaction is a greater saṁsāra; a jñāni does not react to the reaction. And thereafter, this is the definition or this is the indication of jñāna niṣṭa; I am not obsessed with my mind and its tendencies.

And then the second question was how does he conduct himself in life. Kṛṣṇa emphasis one main point, sarvatra samatvam.

समदुःखसुखः स्वस्थः समलोष्टाश्मकाञ्चनः ।
तुल्यप्रियाप्रियो धीरः तुल्यनिन्दात्मसंस्तुतिः ॥ १४.२४ ॥

samaduḥkhasukhaḥ svasthaḥ samalōṣṭāśmakāñcanaḥ |
tulyapriyāpriyō dhirastulyanindātmasaṁstutiḥ || 14.24 ||

There is an equanimity of the mind; mind is free from violent reactions. And even if there are little bit reactions, he does not react to those reactions. So samatvam is his ācāraḥ.

Final question is how to become guṇāthitha. And what is the answer? Knowledge gained with the bhakthi of the Lord? Surrender to the Lord and by the grace of the Lord, may you get jñānam and that jñānam is the only solution.

मां च योऽव्यभिचारेण भक्तियोगेन सेवते ।
स गुणान्समतीत्यैतान् ब्रह्मभूयाय कल्पते ॥ १४. २६ ॥

māṁ ca yō'avyabhicārēṇa bhaktiyōgēna sēvatē |
sa guṇān samatītyaitān brahmabhūyāya kalpatē || 14.26 ||

Through Bhakthi you do not get liberation. Through bhakthi you get conducive atmosphere for knowledge and a conducive personality also; and then through knowledge you will attain mōkṣaḥ. So with the answers to Arjuna's question, the 14th chapter is over.

Chapter 15

189 Chapter 15, Verse 01

ॐ

Having completed the 14th chapter, now we will enter into the 15th chapter, one of the smallest chapters in the Gīta, with only 20 verses; but one of the most important and popular chapters of the Gīta, and it is often used as a prayer verse before taking food. Therefore generally, when this chapter is chanted, people remember the food, rather than the Lord, but it is a very important Vēdāntic chapter.

And since it occurs in the last ṣatkam of the Gīta, all the three important topics of the last ṣatkam are dealt with in this chapter. The three important themes of the last ṣatkam, if you remember is jñāna-yōga as the sādhana, jīvātma paramātma aikyam as the subject matter, and the importance of values are sadguṇaḥ as a preparatory step for the aikya jñānam. Jñāna yōgaḥ, aikyam and sad guṇaḥ, these three are the main theme of the last ṣatkam and all these three topics have been well dealt with in this chapter.

And this chapter is titled Puruṣōttama yōga and in the 15th chapter, the word Puruṣōttama means Nirguṇa caitanyam. It does not refer to saguṇa Isvara, neither it refers to saguṇa Viṣṇu, nor saguṇa Kṛṣṇa, and of course not saguṇa śiva; it refers to Nirguṇam Brahma or Nirguṇa caitanyam and this meaning Lord himself gives at the end of the chapter, so there can be no controversy, because Kṛṣṇa himself says Puruṣōttama means attributeless consciousness and yōgaḥ a means the subject matter in this contact. So Puruṣōttama yōgaḥ means the topic of Nirguṇam brahma, which is the main teaching of this chapter.

With this background we will enter into the Chapter proper.

chandāṃsi yasya parṇāni yastam veda sa vēdavit || 15.1 ||

श्री भगवान् उवाच śrī Bhagavān uvāca the Lord said प्राहुः prāhuḥ They speak of अव्ययम् अश्वत्थम् avyayam aśvattham the eternal fig-tree (of Samsara), ऊर्ध्वमूलम् ūrdhvamūlam whose tap root is above, अधः शाखम् adhaḥ śākham whose branches are below, यस्य पर्णानि yasya parṇāni and whose leaves छन्दांसि chandānsi are the Vēdās सः यः वेद saḥ yaḥ vēda He who knows तम् tam it वेदवित् vēda vit is the knower of the Vēdās.

1. The Lord said: "They speak of the eternal peepal-tree (of saṁsāra) whose tap root is above, whose branches are below, and whose leaves are the Vēdās. He who knows it is the knower of the Vēdās".

As the very title of this chapter shows, the topic is Nirguṇa Brahma and by the study of this chapter, one will get Nirguṇa Brahma jñānam. And naturally a person will have a question, why should I get nirguṇa brahma jñānam at all, because a person would not go after any knowledge, unless he expects some benefit out of it: prayōjanam anuddiśya, mandōpi na pravarthathē.

The subject we study in the college is from the standpoint of employment and the employment is from the standpoint of, udara nimitham bahukrita vēśa. So the question will come, why should I get Brahma jñānam. We should remember Kṛṣṇa is giving here Brahma jñānam as a means of mōkṣa or freedom. So mōkṣa sādhanam, Brahma jñānam.

Then the next question will come, what do you mean by mōkṣa? What is the price per kilo is mōkṣa? So we say mōkṣa is saṁsāra nivṛttiḥ; freedom from saṁsāra. And naturally, the next question will be what? What is saṁsāra? Saṁsāra is the varieties of problems that a human being continuously faces, and to get out of the problem he continuously runs about. I have told you before; autobiography of an individual is like the biography of an auto. Means what, running about from one place to another; not only he runs about in this life; but the travel continues (பயணங்கள் முடிவதில்லை) in the next janma also. So saṁsāra means continuously facing problems and running about to get rid of the problem. And this struggle is called saṁsāra. And freedom from that saṁsāra is called Mōkṣaḥ and Brahma jñānam is the remedy for that mōkṣa.

And according to the Vēdānta, Brahma jñānam is not one of the remedies, it is the only remedy available. And even if we make use of some other remedies, they may or will work for some time; they will serve only a palliative, but they will never serve as a curative; it will not solve the problem. And therefore, Brahma jñānam is for mōkṣa; mōkṣa is freedom from saṁsāra.

Now the thing is: I would like to get rid of saṁsāra, only if I think saṁsāra is a problem. Only a person who looks upon saṁsāra as a problem; he alone would love to get rid of this; if a person says I am very very comfortable as a saṁsāri. In fact many people laughingly they say: I am a big saṁsāri. So therefore as long as a person loves saṁsāra, he would not like mōkṣa and as long as he does not like mōkṣa, for him Brahma jñānam is irrelevant. And therefore Brahma jñānam is relevant only for those people who have seen and discerned the problems of saṁsāra. So saṁsāra dōṣa darśanam is required for mōkṣa iccha. Saṁsāra dōṣa darśanam is a pre-requisite for mōkṣa iccha (are you understating, since I was using Sānskrīt words?) saṁsāra dōṣa darśanam means seeing the problem of saṁsāra is the pre-requisite for the desire of mōkṣa, and mōkṣa iccha is a pre-requisite to develop interest in Brahma jñānam. And interest in Brahma jñānam is a pre-requisite for continuously attending the class. So therefore Kṛṣṇa wants the students to continue and that is possible only if they have diagnosed the problem. Without diagnosing the disease, I will never attempt an appropriate treatment. And everybody has got this basic disease called bhava rōgāḥ.

பழ வினைகள் துடராது உன்னை பஜிக்க?

pava rōkam ara vēru maruntētu
paḷa viṇaika! tuṭarātu unṇai pajikka?

Bhava rōgāḥ, saṁsāra rōgāḥ, I have to see. And that is why they prescribe after 40 years of 50 years, they say, once in a while you should go for a master checkup. Whether you benefit or not, the hospitals benefit. Doctors do not misunderstand me; What is the purpose of master check up? Doing all the scans; the idea is what? If I have a problem I should know what problem I have. And unless I know, how will I attempt to remedy the problem. Similarly, we have a scanning of our life to discover the disease called bhava rōgāḥ; then we can go through a treatment programme jñānam course and therefore Kṛṣṇa begins the 15th chapter with a description of saṁsāra. Saṁsāra means the whole life of change. The whole life of birth and death; the old age, disease and death; association and disassociation; this whole transforming life He talks about in the first 2-1/2 verses. That is the first two verses and the half verse of the third one. And in the 15th chapter, we do not find Arjuna asking any question. Therefore Kṛṣṇa himself volunteers to continue the teaching.

Arjuna உனக்கு பிடிச்சுதோ பிடிக்கலயோ (whether you like it or not), I love teaching, and therefore I would like to clarify further. And to give a description of this saṁsāra, the changing universe, the changing beings, the changing life, Kṛṣṇa compares this saṁsāra to a huge tree called aśvattha vṛkṣaḥ. Aśvattha means a peepal tree. In Tamil it is called அரசு மரம் araśa maram. There is another tree called ஆல மரம் āla maram, that is banyan tree; or vata vṛkṣaḥ; we are not talking about the banyan trees here, which has got the secondary hanging stems. We are talking about the peepal tree; aśvattha vṛkṣaḥ, which is very very huge tree. And this comparative study is not Kṛṣṇa's own original version but this has been already done in Kathōpaniṣad. And somehow it appears that Kṛṣṇa loves

Kathōpaniṣad, and so He collects or quotes maximum verses from Kathōpaniṣad and in Kathōpaniṣad in the last section, last valli, the first mantra is

ऊर्ध्वमूलोऽवाक्षाख एषोऽश्वत्थः सनातनः ।
तदेव शुक्रं तद्ब्रह्म तदेवामृतमुच्यते ।
तस्मिँल्लोकाः श्रिताः सर्वे तदु नात्येति कश्चन । एतद्वै तत् ॥ १ ॥

ūrdhvamūlō:'vākṣākha eṣō:'śvatthaḥ sanātanah |
tadēva śukraṁ tadbrahma tadēvāmṛtamucyatē |
tasmimँllōkāḥ śritāḥ sarvē tadu nātyēti kaścana | ētadvai tat || 2.3.1||

Kathōpaniṣad, second-chapter, third section, first mantra.

Of course, does not bodily quote. He takes some portion of that mantra and in that mantra, the universe; the changing universe and life; is compared to a huge aśvattha tree.

And Śankarācārya gives a very very elaborate commentary on this, both in his Kathōpaniṣad Bhāṣyam as well as the Gīta Bhāṣyam. Śankarācārya gives an elaborate commentary, in which he studies the common features between the saṁsāra and the aśvattha tree. Because a comparison is possible only when two things have got common features. If you say somebody looks like muruṅgakāi, and the you look like puṣanikāi, some common features must be there; in Sānskrīt it is called sadharmyam, means common features. At least there must be minimum one common feature to compare. If it is said 'Muruṅgakāi' it is not that you can eat him; idea is, one common feature is there. That both are slim. But an example becomes a very very significant germane example if there are many common features; the more the common features, better is the example.

And Śankarācārya brings out several common features between the universe and the aśvattha vṛkṣaḥ. I will just tell you some of the common features just to appreciate.

The first common feature is mahatvam. Mahatvam means both of them are very very huge; very very vast; vastness is the common feature. The universe is also very huge and vast; and the aśvattha vṛkṣaḥ also; not a small plant, it is a huge tree. Hugeness is common feature No.1.

The second common feature is ādyanta rahithatvam. You cannot trace the beginning of both, which is one of the fundamental questions please ask. When did the universe start? Is an invariable question? Why am I born, they ask. What answer can I give? To give me problems. What can I say? Anyway jokes apart, I have to tell the simple answer, because of your karma, because my karma is there; because of your karma you are born. And I think I have answered your question but if you are intelligent you will ask how did that karma come? Then I will say, of course because of your previous janma. Then you will not leave, you will ask the next question? How did the previous janma come; of course because of the previous karma, and then you get irritated and ask me how did the first janma come.

Every thinking-intellect will ask this question; how did the first karma come or how did the first janma come. And then the next question will be why did Bhagavān give me the first janma. என்னை ஏன் படைத்தான்?; நான் ஏன் பிறந்தேன்? eṇṇai ēṇ paṭaittāṇ?; nāṇ ēṇ piṇṇāṇ? Why did Bhagavān create? All these questions are natural. Here he says there is no beginning for the creation. Therefore never ask the question how did the first karma or first janma come. It never came; the universe ever was. So you cannot talk about the beginning and also you cannot therefore talk about the end; it is an eternal cycle of karma to janma; janma to karma.

And the same thing you can see in a tree also. If somebody ask how did the tree come; what will be my answer; of course because of the seed; then you will ask, how did the seed come; of course because of the previous tree; how did the previous tree, because of its previous seed; தென்ன மரமா? தேங்யா? கோழியா? முட்டயா? teṇṇa maramā? tēṇyā? kōḷiyā? muṭṭayā? Therefore never ask this question because creation is a cyclic phenomenon, and for a cyclic phenomenon, ādi/anta cannot be talked about. Therefore what is the second common feature? World is also ādiantarahitham/tree is also ādiantarahitham. Ādiantarahitham is the second feature.

Third feature is anivarcaniyatvam. Inexplicability. Logically uncategorisable. In what sense? You can never say a thing is a cause or an effect. You can never pinpoint a thing is a cause or an effect, because from a standpoint, a thing is a cause, the very same is an effect, from another standpoint. So today is cause or effect. What reply you would give. From yesterday's standpoint it is an effect. From tomorrow's standpoint it is a cause. A person is an effect from the standpoint of his parents and the cause from the standpoint of his children.

And that is why fate/freewill question also is eternally unresolved; because you can take any point of time and you can call it, fate or you can call it freewill also. If you look at a particular point and see as an effect of the cause, you will call it fate. And if the very same point is seen as the cause of the future, you will call it what? Freewill. You can never pinpoint whether a thing is absolutely freewill or absolutely fate; absolutely cause or absolutely effect; or absolutely parent or absolutely children; nobody is absolute parent. And similarly am I guru or śiṣya? From the standpoint of my students, I am guru; from the standpoint of my guru, I am śiṣya. So thus nothing is clearly categorisable. Logically classifiable. And therefore the tree is also anirvacaniyam. The universe is also anirvacaniyam. That is why we use the word, Māya. It is a magic.

The more you probe into the creation, the more mysterious it becomes. And scientists will say: we are about to solve the mystery of this creation. They have been telling this for several decades. When they solve a mystery, it is replaced by a bigger mystery. Therefore what is the third common feature? Anirvacaniyathvam.

Then the fourth common feature is Mūlavatvam. The tree has got a root. You can never have a tree without a root below. But the peculiar thing is the tree is visible; pramāṇa gōcaram; whereas the root is underneath; it is not visible to you. But even if you do not see the root, you certainly know that there is a root; because without a root, there cannot be tree. Extending the same principle, we say that the universal tree also must have a mūlam, a root. And that root is called Bhagavān. Īśvaraḥ. And if you ask Bhagavān is not seen, I will tell you that you do not see the root also. Root is also invisible; the root of the universe is also invisible. But one thing, even though I do not see the root, I know that without the root, the tree cannot stand.

Similarly, I do not see Bhagavān around, but I know that the universe cannot stand without a mūlam and that is Bhagavān's Viśvādhāram. And therefore tree has an invisible root and the World also has got an invisible root called Bhagavān. That is why in Viṣṇu Sahasranāma, one of the names of the Lord is Adōkṣajaḥ. Akṣajaḥ means sensory knowledge. Akṣa means sense organs. Jaḥ means born out of. Adhaḥ means beneath or beyond. Not falling within. So adōkṣajaḥ means the one who is beyond the sensory knowledge. And therefore the invisible root of the universe is Bhagavān and this root is common to both, we call it mūlavatvam. This is the 4th common feature.

Then the fifth common feature is śākāvatvam. A huge tree has got many branches; spreading far and wide and some branches are on the top. உச்சாணி கோம்பு; Ucāṇi kōmbū, and some branches are in the bottom, and some branches are in the middle. So top, middle and bottom branches are there; many, for this tree. Similarly, the universe also has got several branches called the higher, middle and lower lōkās. So the higher lōkah and the higher bodies; dēva śarīram represents urdhva śākās, the upper branches; manuṣya lōkā comes under the middle branch and the athala, vithala, suthala, rasātala mahātala, talatala, pātala paryanthm, all the lower lōkahs will come under the lower branches. Thus the universe is a vast tree with the fourteen lokahs as its branches. So śākāvatvam is the next common feature.

Then the sixth common feature is parṇavatvam. The tree is full of leaves. The tree is full of leaves. And so thick foliage that you do not even see the trunk and branches; So many leaves are there; and similarly, the universal tree has got the leaves in the form of karmāni or karma kāndā of the vēdās are compared to the leaves of the saṁsāra tree. So here you will require a slight explanation.

Why do we compare karma kāndā to the leaves of the tree? The leaves are very important for the perpetuation and the growth of the tree. In fact, leaves protect the tree; helps the tree survive. And you know the leaves alone have got the chlorophyll; that is why it is green, and it does photosynthesis and it cooks food and because of that alone, the tree survives. And through osmotic pressure, it absorbs the water. You have all learned and forgotten this in the school. In Sānskrīt it is called; chadanāt chandhamsi. The karma kāndā of the vēdās is called chandas because it protects the saṁsāra tree like the leaves of the original tree.

Now the question is? How does the karma kāndā protect, perpetuate and help the growth of the tree? You must have inferred by now. Karma kāndā talks about varieties of karmas and also tempts all the people to do those karmas by promising varieties of results. You do this karma, you will get children. You do that karma, you will get money. You do that karma, you will go to heaven. Full of advertisements. And naturally a person is attracted by karma kāndā. In fact jñāna kāndā is never appealing. If I ask how is Māṇḍūkya upaniṣad? How is it? You will say it is very very dry. You had it, you choose to come! So jñāna kāndā is generally not appealing, whereas karma kāndā is the most appealing thing because he asks you to do varieties of karma to get varieties of results. And therefore this person will take to varieties of karmas and karmas will produce what? Karma phalam. And karma-phalam means what puṇya-pāpam. Puṇya pāpas as they increase, they will lead to punarapi jananam, punarapi maraṇam. Thus the saṁsāra cycle of birth and death is perpetuated by karma kāndā; by tempting the people to do varieties of karma. Urdhavam gacchanti satvasvtha; puṇya karma you will go up. Madhyē thiṣṭanti rajasa; middle karmi, you will be in the middle; jaganya guṇavrittistha, adhō gachhanti tāmasa. While jñāna kāndā puts an end to the saṁsāra tree, karma kāndā nourishes the saṁsāra tree. And therefore they are like the leaves of a tree. Therefore parṇavatvam.

Then the seventh common feature is phalavatvam. Any tree or most of the trees will have fruits, because they have to attract the birds for the perpetuation. Therefore, the tree means phalam or the fruit will be there; and fruits are of three types, some of them are sweet; some of them are sour, and some of them are khatta-meetta; it is a mixture. Some mangoes, sweet this side and other side is sour. Similarly, the whole saṁsāra vṛkṣaḥ also gives us three types of fruit; sukham phalam, majā, you are very very happy, you glorify God, World is wonderful, because the son got the admission. Only this has happened. You are jumping nonstop. And then comes some news. Another son lost the job and returning from America. Gone, and you are flat. Then you begin to curse the world. Why this life at all. I do not want anything. Saṁsāra is misery. Why should Bhagavān create this world? Now only criticism. So thus all the time what were you doing? Jumping up and falling flat. One is called sukha phalam and another is called duḥkha phalam; sometime misra phalam. I have told you. சிலர் அழுவார்; சிலர் சிரிப்பார்; சிலர் அழுதுகொண்டே சிரிப்பார். So, therefore crying and laughing together. Misram. Thus sukha duḥkha misra phalavatvam for the saṃsāra tree. That is the seventh common feature.

Then the eighth common feature is asrayavathavam (two more: I will give and stop, do not worry ~ do not say that this itself has become saṃsāra !, because Śankarācārya has given many, therefore I thought that I should tell 10 out of it). If you read the original Śankarācārya's work, you will enjoy the highly poetical work also. Huge compounds, ha ham hu hu, munja munja, people are shouting, very interesting poetry there; I thought I will tell you something. Put up with me for two more.

So the eighth feature is pakṣi asrayavathavam. The tree becomes the support for the nest of the birds. So the trees serves as the nesting site for the birds, which alone would eat the fruit. The tree is not going to eat; only the birds which occupy the tree, they alone enjoy this sukha duḥkha phalam. Similarly in the vast universe, who are the birds; all the jīvas are the birds. Some jīvas are the higher branches, means svarga lōkās, dēva śarīram; some of them are in the middle branch, means manuṣya lōkās, manuṣya śarīram; some of them are in the lower branches, means adhō lōkā and adhō śarīram and therefore pakṣi āsraya means the support. The tree supports the birds. Similarly the saṃsāra tree supports the jīva world. And when I say jīva bird, the upaniṣadic student should remember, the well-known Muṇḍaka upaniṣadic mantra.

द्वा सुपर्णा सयुजा सखाया समानं वृक्षं परिषस्वजाते ।
तयोरन्यः पिप्पलं स्वाद्वत्त्यनश्नन्नन्यो अभिचाकशीति ॥III.1.१ ॥

[dvā suparṇā sayujā sakhāyā samānaṃ vṛkṣaṃ pariśasvajātē |
tayōranyaḥ pippalaṃ svādvattyanāśnannanyō abhicākaśīti || III.1.1 ||](#)

The jīvatma bird perched on the saṃsāra tree, experiences the sweet and bitter fruits. So pakṣi asrayatvam is the eighth feature.

The ninth feature is chalanavathvam. The huge tree moves because of the wind; especially when there is powerful cyclonic wind. Even though it is a huge tree, it moves up and down, here and there. In the same way, the whole saṃsāra tree along with all the jīvas are taken here and there by the wind of prārabdha karma. So we are all taken to various conditions, various places, various situations, lashed by the wind of prārabdha. People say: wanted to be in Madras, transferred. Goes elsewhere and gets transferred elsewhere and our life is governed by the prārabdha wind and therefore calanatvam is the ninth common feature.

The 10th and final common feature (final for us!) is cēdyathvam. Even though the tree is very very huge, by appropriate effort, this tree can be uprooted. It is possible to put an end to this tree and the cycle, by using the appropriate axe. Similarly, the huge saṁsāra chakram also can be uprooted by the special axe called jñānam. In fact the very word vṛkṣaḥ means that which can be uprooted. It is derived from the root vrasch; vraschanam means cēdanam. Śankarācārya gives in his commentary om vraschu chēdanē. So Dhathu pata, the quotes and vraschanāth, vṛkṣaḥ, it is possible to uproot; not easy. If it is a small plant, we can effortlessly remove, but if it is asvatta tree, not that easy.

These are the common features, because of which saṁsāra is compared to the three. And Kṛṣṇa mentions many of the common features and Kṛṣṇa also adds a few more common features, which we will see as the verse come.

With this background, we look into the first verse.

Āśvattham prāhuḥ. You have to supply the word saṁsāram. So this entire saṁsāra; the life of change is considered to be similar to āśvattha vṛkṣaḥ. Saṁsāram āśvatta tulyam prāhuḥ. Is comparable to āśvattha vṛkṣaḥ. What type of āśvattha tree? The description comes. Ūrdhvamūlam which has got a root called ūrdvam.

The word ūrdvam has two meaning; one meaning is that which is superior; therefore sacred. And the Lord is superior and sacred because the Lord is the cause; the parent of the universe, and the entire universe is the child of the Lord and therefore Bhagavān, the cause the universal father; is superior father; therefore ūrdvam. Superior.

You should not take the literal meaning of the word here. Literal meaning of the word urdhvam means physically or spacially above. It does not mean Bhagavān is spacially sitting on the ceiling. So we are not talking about spacial aboveness, because the very word above is a relative word. What is above for us is different and for the Americans is below. So therefore here ūrdvam means superior. Utkrstvathavam. Ūrdvathvam.

And the second meaning ūrdvam means that which is beyond our comprehension. And that is why, if you do not understand a talk; Māṇḍuykam, take for example, you say today's class went above my head! So above my ahead, what is meaning? So there, 'went above my head', it was incomprehensible. Therefore one meaning is superiority, the second meaning is incomprehensibility. In Sānskrīt, dhurvijñēyatvam. Utkrstvatvam and dhurvijñēyatvam are the two meaning of the word urdhvam and what is superior and incomprehensible is Brahman or paramātma. And this superior incomprehensible Brahman is the Mūlam of this saṁsāra tree. This superior incomprehensible Brahman or Bhagavān is the mūlam. Mūlam means the root of the saṁsāra tree, which I have already talked about.

Then the next is adha śākām. All the branches in the form of the fourteen lōkahs are adhaḥ means below, and here the word below also has got two figurative meanings. There 'above' I told you superior and therefore 'below' means what? Inferior. So the inferior lōkahs are the branches of this saṁsāra tree and the second meaning of the word below is there we said incomprehensible, what is the opposite of incomprehensible? Comprehensible. Visible. The perceptible lōkah is comparable to the branches. The imperceptible God is compared to the root. Inferior world is comparable to the branches, superior God is comparable to the root.

And this asvatha vṛkṣa is avyayam. Avyayam means eternal whose beginning and end cannot be traced, because it flows in the form of a chain; the tree producing the seed and the seed producing the tree. So in the form of tree/seed cycle or chain, it is anādi and anathaḥ. And similarly, the human life also is a cyclic chain. You can never talk about the beginning of the jīva. Because this janma is because of previous karma, previous karma is because of previous janma, previous janma is because of its previous karma, and karma-janma-chakra rūpēṇa avyayam. It is eternal.

Then chandāṁsi yasya parṇāni. So the protecting sustaining leaves of the saṁsāra tree are none other than the vēda prescribed karmas. Chandāṁsi means vēdāsyā karma kāndām. And karma kāndā always make the people to always remain in the field of rituals. There are many who love the rituals by they never like Gīta, Upaniṣads; those topics they do not like at all. They are highly religious people. They go from temple to temple; abhiṣēkams to abhiṣēkams. Athirudrams to maharudrams, etc. Love the ritualistic portion, they never come to the Vēdānta. That means what? The successfully perpetuate the saṁsāra.

Then does it mean that karma kāndā should be thrown away? Very careful. It does not mean that karma kāndā is our enemy to be thrown away; What we say is, karma kāndā must be used up to a particular limit and sooner or later, one should transcend the ritualistic portion and spend more time in philosophical portion. Generally, people tend to go to two extremes. One extreme is people never like religious poojas or rituals. One extreme. And their problem is what? They have no way of purifying the mind. Pooja is the only method of purification. Therefore some people get into one extreme. And there is another extreme. They love pūja, abhiṣēka, etc. and there problem is what, they permanently remain there; like saying I love the 5th standard so well, the teacher is also so compassionate, I will sit here itself. That is also not correct. Enter karma kāndā, purify and come to jñāna kāṇḍa. So which alone you have done successfully I think.

chandāṃsi yasya parṇāni. Yaḥ tam vēda. So the one who understands this universal tree, with many branches, leaves, fruits etc. the one who knows this universal tree and Śankarācārya adds; along with the root of Brahman; you should know the tree of this universe along with the root of Bhagavān or Brahman. Samūlam vṛkṣam yaha vēda, saha vēdavit. He alone is a wise person, who has understood the scriptures properly. Vēdavit means vēdārtha vith. The one who is a jñāni.

The details in the next verse which we will see in the next class.

ॐ

In the beginning of the 15th chapter, Lord Kṛṣṇa gives a description of saṃsāra, so that a seeker will know what is mōkṣaḥ. Because mōkṣaḥ is defined as saṃsāra nivṛttiḥ; freedom from saṃsāra. So if I do not know what saṃsāra is, I will not know what is saṃsāra nivṛtti. Especially Tamilians are to be told what is saṃsāra; otherwise they will think that it is wife. And only when I know what is saṃsāra, I can understand saṃsāra nivṛtti rūpa mōkṣa and only when I value mōkṣa, I will turn my attention to the mōkṣa sādhanam; the means of attaining mōkṣa.

If I do not have a value for the end; the destination, I will never have the value for the means, because the value for the means is directly proportional to the value for the end and therefore we will be committed to this spiritual sādhana only when we clearly know what is the sādhyam, the destination which we are attempting to reach. And therefore we get the description of saṃsāra in the first 2-1/2 verses of this chapter, of which we have covered the first verse, in which Lord Kṛṣṇa compared saṃsāra to a huge eternal tree of birth and death. And this tree comparison continues in the next verse also which we will see now.

अधश्चोर्ध्वं प्रसृतास्तस्य शाखाः गुणप्रवृद्धा विषयप्रवालाः ।
अधश्च मूलान्यनुसन्तानि कर्मानुबन्धीनि मनुष्यलोके ॥ १५.२ ॥

Adhaścōrdhvaṃ prasṛtāstasya śākhā guṇapravṛddhā viṣayapravālāḥ | adhaśca mūlānyanusantāni
karmānubandhīni manuṣyalōkē || 15.2 ||

तस्य शाखाः tasya śākhāḥ its branches, गुणप्रवृद्धाः guṇapravṛddhāḥ which are nourished by the 'gūṇas', विषयप्रवालाः viṣayapravālāḥ and whose shoots are the sense-objects,

प्रसृताः prasṛtāḥ are spread अधः च ऊर्ध्वम् adhaḥ ca ūrdhvam below and above च ca further मूलानि mūlāni (its) roots अनुसन्ततानि अधः anusantatāni adhaḥ are stretched below, कर्मानुबन्धीनि karmānubandhīni causing actions मनुष्यलोके manuṣyalokē in the world of men.

2. Its branches, which are nourished by the gūṇas and whose shoots are the sense-objects, are spread below and above. Further, (its) roots are stretched below, causing actions in the world of men.

In the previous verse Lord Kṛṣṇa had mentioned that God or Brahman is the primary root of the saṁsāra tree and the entire visible universe is the trunk as well as the branches and all the karma kāndā or the ritualistic portions of the vēda are to be taken as the leaves of the tree, which sustain the saṁsāra vṛkṣa.

Now in this verse, more details about the branches of the saṁsāra tree we get. He says: tasya śākhāḥ prasṛtāḥ; the branches of the huge saṁsāra tree, the tree of life are spread far and wide. And where are they spread? Adhaḥ ca ūrdhvam, some of the branches are up above, and some of them are down below; and some of them are in the centre or middle. In short all the 14 lōkās are the branches of the huge saṁsāra tree. There bhūr lōkā and sūvar lōkā are the upper branches; and then, athala, vithala, suthala, rasatala, etc. are the lower branches; and the bhū lōkā is the middle branch and therefore Kṛṣṇa says; adhaḥ ca ūrdhvam. Down and up, the branches are spread.

And not only that, in every lōkā, in every world; there is a corresponding body also to experience the world. Higher lōkās means the superior body. So Dēva śārīram, gandharva śārīram, pithṛ śārīram, etc. are the superior, more refined physical bodies, and these bodies also can be equated to the higher branches. So higher lōkās and the superior bodies are the higher branches of the tree. And similarly bhū lōkā and the middle body, the human body is neither superior, like that of the Dēvas, nor it is inferior like the asūras or animals, and therefore human body is madhyama śārīram. So uttama śārīram is higher branches, along with uttam lōkās. Madhyama lōkā and madhyama śārīram, śārīram means the bodies, are the middle branches; adhō lōkās and adama śārīram, inferior bodies like the animal body, the plant body etc. are compared to the lower śārīram.

And the jīva is not the body itself because we have seen body is not the individual or jīva; body is the location in which or the tenement or house in which the jīva comes for occupation. And therefore jīva is consisting of what? The definition of jīva you should remember. The sūkṣma śārīram, the subtle body, with the reflected consciousness is the jīva. And this physical body is madhyama branch; mediocre branch, and this jīva the sūkṣma śārīram is now occupying the middle branch of saṁsāra and occupying this branch the jīva is experiencing pleasures and pain. And when the karmas change, the jīva leaves this branch. So the body becomes dead; means what? Jīva bird has left the madhyama śāka, the middle branch called manuṣya śārīram; and the jīva can go to uttama śāka, uttam śāka means what? A finer body. Indra, Agni, Varūna, those śārīrams or bodies or tenements are the superior branches. So Indra śārīram is not the Indra, Indra śārīram is only an abode or tenement, even I can occupy the Indra śārīram, a body which is superior. So thus the jīva can go to the higher lōkās and get a higher body, or if the pāpam is going to be predominant, the jīva leaves this middle branch and takes the lower branch called animal śārīram or plant śārīram. So we saw in Kathōpaniṣad:

योनिमन्ये प्रपद्यन्ते शरीरत्वाय देहिनः ।
स्थाणुमन्येऽनुसंयन्ति यथाकर्म यथाश्रुतम् ॥ 2.II.७ ॥

yōnimanyē prapadyantē śārīratvāya dēhinaḥ |
sthāṇumanyē:nusāmyanti yathākarma yathāśrutam || 2.II.7 ||

A very important mantra in Kathōpaniṣad. A human being need not always progress. It is not uniform linear evolution. It is not that a jīva should always go higher and higher. According to vēda, after manuṣya janma, a person can come down to lower janma also; a slip is also possible.

And that is why the life is compared to the game of snake and ladder; whereas some theories like the theory of evolution, they say the jīva only goes from upper to upper ranges and then after manuṣya janma it is still higher. They think of uniform progress but vēda does not accept the linear progress. If we do not lead a proper life, there is a chance of slipping also. Slipping means what? Instead of going through the ladder, (I do not know whether you remember) Manuṣya janma means you have reached the No.94 and the dice you have to put the number 6. 94 plus 6. Home, you have reached Home. Home means வீடு; Veedu in Tamil means Mōkṣam. அறம்; பொருள்; இன்பம்; வீடு; Aram Porul Inpam Veedu. But the problem is what? After 94 three snakes are there in 95, 97, 99. So if you put 5, from 99 you slip to 56 through the snake. There if you put 3, if 59 to 1, another snake. So therefore there is no guarantee that we will go upwards only. We have to be responsible. A very big responsibility it is.

And therefore each type of body is also compared to a branch. Now I am occupying manuṣya śārīram branch; in the next janma which śārīram will be the branch I will perch on, I do not know. But our attempt is what?

Not going to higher branches or lower branch, leave the tree itself and fly sky high, to freedom. We want to be free birds and therefore do not think upper branch or lower branch; no branches; we hope we will succeed in becoming a free bird and therefore, adhaścōrdhvaṁ prasṛtā. Uttama madhyama adama śārīra rūpēna śāka prasṛtāḥ.

And how are these branches, which include the three forms of bodies, how are they generated? How are the dēva śārīram generated? Manuṣya śārīram generated or animal śārīram generated? Bhagavān creates different types of body, not according to His whim and fancy, we ourselves give our order to Bhagavān. So whatever order we give, accordingly Bhagavān will produce the body.

If my life is sātvic way of life, I am giving an order to the Lord: Oh Lord, give me sātvica śārīram. What is sātvica śārīram? Uttama śārīram called dēva śārīram. What will be my next body is not decided by Bhagavān not decided by fate, but decided by my freewill which I can use or abuse or misuse. So therefore He says: Gūṇa pravṛddha. Each body is determined by the three gūṇās. Sātvika jīvitihēna uttama śārīram, rājasa karmaṇa madhyama śārīram; tāmasa karmaṇa, adama śārīram. We saw in the 14th chapter.

ऊर्ध्वं गच्छन्ति सत्त्वस्था मध्ये तिष्ठन्ति राजसाः |
जघन्यगुणवृत्तिस्था अधो गच्छन्ति तामसाः || १४- १८ ||

Ūrdhvaṁ gacchanti sattvasthā madhyē tiṣṭhanti rājasāḥ |
jaghanyaguṇavṛttisthā adhō gacchanti tāmasāḥ ||14.18 ||

And therefore guṇapravṛddh.

Viṣayapavālāḥ. All the sense objects are like all the shoots which are responsible for the branch. Before a full-fledged branch comes on the tree from the trunk of the tree, initially the branches emerge in the form of a small shoot and that shoot alone, it is called shoot, because it shoots forth, and this shoot is the rudimentary form of the branch and the shoot alone is gradually nourished and will become a full-fledged branch.

Similarly here also, my next body must exist in this janma itself, in the form of a shoot. I am preparing my next body, now itself. By what? A type of activity and now who is responsible for the type of activity? Kṛṣṇa says the sense objects of the world are responsible for the type of activity I choose. Because these sense objects alone create a desire in me. Every sense object is the producer of a desire. That is why we have advertisement overkill. Everytime they show something, they want to generate a want in you. And therefore sense objects are responsible for kāmaḥ; kāma means a desire. Every sense organ is a potential kāma. And kāma desire leads to what? Karma, because desires can be fulfilled only by activity. If you see a particular brand of car, and you develop a desire, local Maruti, or Benz, or some other expensive car, he has to start saving now itself. I do not know the cost of the Benz, how many lakhs. So I should start earning and saving. That means Viṣaya leads to kāma; kāma leads to karma; karma leads to karma-phalam called puṇya pāpa; puṇya pāpa determines next śārīram. See the grand connection: Objects to desire, to action; to puṇya pāpa; to next śārīram.

And once you get the next body, do we keep quiet. There also we do the mischief. Then in the next body also, I am exposed to the world, and kāma and karma and phalam and śarīram. Puṇyē na puṇyam lōkam nayathi, papēna pāpam upābhya manuṣya janma.

And therefore viṣayapravālāḥ; sense objects are the shoots which are responsible for the next śarīram, by what path? Remember the step: objects to desire, to action, to puṇya pāpa to next śarīram. Therefore, viṣayapravālāḥ.

And not only that, adhaśca mūlānyanusantatāni; for any tree, there will be several roots; one root will be the main root, the primary root called the tap root. But the primary root alone is not sufficient, there will be several secondary roots also spreading all over. Bigger the tree, more the number of secondary roots and more vast it is. In the neighbours' house, if there is a huge tree, the roots will come to your house. And the in between wall also will be threatened. There will always be quarrels; big quarrels. And not only one house, sometime root can go to 2-3 houses. If the local tree has a primary root and many secondary roots, the saṁsāra vṛkṣa also must have primary as well as secondary roots.

The primary root has been already mentioned in the first verse. What is the primary root? Do you remember? Ūrdhvamūlam, Brahman or Bhagavān is the primary root. What are the secondary roots? Kṛṣṇa says there are many secondary roots spreading all over. He does not actually name them but the commentators explain, rāgaḥ-dvēsaḥ vāsanās are the spreading secondary roots. Rāgaḥ-dvēsaḥ vāsanās, well entrenched vāsanās. Tendencies, in the form of rāgaḥ, I like these things, and I dislike these things. In fact, every experience makes me judge the experience. As I go forward in my life; every experience makes my intellect classify things, as this is welcome, this is not welcome. You meet a person for two days or three days, you will classify. Even in the class; if you do not like, you will sit elsewhere. In the camp, do not put this person as my roommate. How much I have suffered, you know? Nobody sympathises with me. And give me this roommate and preferably that room. Strong rāgaḥ and dvēsaḥ in 8 days. And there too in the most of the class only in the temple only. In the intermediary time, we have managed to develop powerful rāgaḥ-dvēsaḥ to rooms and the mates.

And if this is the lot in 8 days, in 80 years, should one ask? You will have tons tons. Clear slotting or categorisation; this is welcome; this is not welcome. And every rāgaḥ leads to pravṛtti. When I consider some thing as favourable, I have to chase that object. I have to go after that object. Thus rāgaḥ leads to pravṛtti and once I dislike something, dvēsaḥ leads to nivṛtṭiḥ; withdrawal, avoidance. So thus rāgaḥ-dvēsaḥ lead to pravṛtti, nivṛtṭi, pravṛtti nivṛtṭis are karma and karma will lead to puṇya pāpa, puṇya pāpa will lead to punarjanma.

And therefore he says: adhaḥ ca, further down, along with main root; tap root, further down, mūlāni, here mūla means the secondary roots, are Anusantatāni, spread all over, remember our rāgaḥ dvēsaḥ are not confined to our own house; it spreads to neighborhood, to other states in the country, we have got rāgaḥ-dvēsaḥ.

If you watch a tennis match between Australia and American, in five minutes, unknowingly you will start supporting one of them. At least India and Sri Lanka; I should not have reminded you perhaps! At least India and Sri Lanka, you will have a natural tendency. But even when an Australian and an American plays a tennis match, in the Open; US Open, you watch for 10-15 minutes you will begin to support one of them. That means that what? Secondary roots spread all over the world; Santatāni.

And these secondary roots lead to what? Karmānubandhīni; whose consequences are varieties of karma. So ānubhandaḥ means consequences. Consequences of rāgaḥ-dvēsaḥ vāsanās. The consequence of every rāgaḥ and dvēsaḥ is karma. What type of karma? Either pravṛtti rūpa karma or nivṛtti rūpa karma; going after or going away. These two only we have been doing; getting or getting rid. So karmānubandhīni.

And all these are happening where? Manuṣyalōkē. In fact this is the biography of a human being. Pravṛtti/nivṛtti, one set is over, again next pravṛtti / nivṛtti, next pravṛtti/nivṛtti and die. And then again take another body, pravṛtti /nivṛtti and die and this cycle goes on and on and on and on. Like the huge merry go round in England. Recently they inaugurated a huge one. Giant wheel and we can come out at will.

Suppose you enter that and you cannot come out; and the switch cannot be put off and you are sitting there and it is going on and on, and now I ask; Is it merry go around; you will scream and say it is sorry go around. Similarly if you plan to come as a human being, and withdraw at will, it is wonderful, when you find helplessly stuck and you do not know how to get out of the giant wheel, when you are not able to, it will be wailing period. And therefore karmānubandhīni manuṣyalōkē.

And why does Kṛṣṇa specifically use the word manuṣya lōkā? When there are 14 lōkās; because manuṣya janma alone is considered to be karma janma, whereas in all the other lōkās or other śarīrams, it is bhōga pradhāna janma; there is no question of fresh acquisition of karma and since it is karma bhumi, that has been mentioned here.

न रूपमस्येह तथोपलभ्यते नान्तो न चादिर्न च सम्प्रतिष्ठा ।
अश्वत्थमेनं सुविरूढमूलम् असङ्गशस्त्रेण दृढेन छित्त्वा ॥ १५.३ ॥

na rūpamasyēha tathōpalabhyatē
nāntō na ca"dirna ca sampratiṣṭhā | aśvatthamēnaṃ suvirūḍhamūlam
asaṅgaśastrēṇa dṛḍhēna chittvā || 15.3 ||

रूपम् अस्य rūpam asya the form of this (tree), तथा tathā as such न उपलभ्यते na upalabhyatē is not perceived इह iha here, न आदिः na ādiḥ (it has) no beginning, न च सम्प्रतिष्ठा na ca sampratiṣṭhā middle न च अन्तः na ca antaḥ or end, छित्वा chitvā one should cut, एनं सुविरूढमूलम् ēnaṃ suvirūḍhamūlam this well-rooted, अश्वत्थम् aśvattham Aśvattah tree (fig tree), दृढेन dṛḍhēna firmly असङ्गशस्त्रेण asaṅgaśastrēṇa with the weapon of detachment.

3. The form of this (tree) is not perceived here. (It has) no beginning, middle, or end. One should cut this well-rooted fig tree firmly with the weapon of detachment.

So in the first half of this verse, the description of the saṁsāra continues. I said 2-1/2 verses. So we have one more verse dealing with saṁsāra varṇanam. Here Kṛṣṇa conveys a very important technical information and that is when you try to probe into this universe and this life, and try to understand what is this creation, and what is this life; when did it begin; when will it end; the more you try to probe into this creation; the more mysterious it becomes.

So the whole creation is a mystery; a māya. So superficially seeing, it will appear as though you can understand the creation well. Scientists have been thinking that they will have clear explanation to every phenomenon. They are all working for a theory of everything. It is called the TOE. They want a theory of everything. And they solve certain mysteries and find that those smaller mysterious are replaced by further deeper mysteries. And therefore, Kṛṣṇa says here; Asya rūpam na upalabhyatē. Rūpam means what svarūpam or the nature of the universe is not comprehensible. It is anirvacanīyam. The details we will get in Māṇḍukya kārika. In the Upaniṣad class, very technical analysis of what is māya and what is anirvacanīyam? Here casually hints at that. More you probe, the more mysterious it becomes. If somebody asks, why am I born? I will give an immediate answer, it is because of your karma. And if you are associated with me, because of my karma also. OK. Two have to be added. Because of our karma, we are born. And this person is satisfied. OK. My question has been answered. Why I am born. Our karma. Our fate.

But you will be satisfied go home but another question comes, Why I did I do that karma, how did that karma come. So come the next day, I say that it is very simple, because of the previous janma, some previous janma, then you are previous janma, because of the previous karma, and then you home and come the tubelight, then comes the next comes, how did the previous janma come, because of previous karma. Then you get irritated and ask, how did the first karma or first janma come. If you get into that logical question, you go to the theory of causation. That is the specialisation topic of Gaudapada in Māṇḍukya kārika, the theory of causation, you study. You will get into mind-boggling logical problem.

Just to give you one hint, I thought that I need not tell சொல்லவேண்டாம் என்று நினைத்தேன்; when you talk about the beginning of creation, we should remember the question involves the beginning of time. Because time and creation are inseparable. You can never separate time, space and creation; therefore whenever you talk about the beginning of creation, you are talking about the beginning of time; beginning of time is a contradiction. Because to talk about to beginning of time, you require what? Another time. So there must be a particular time, field must be there; 7 o'clock, 8 o'clock, 9 o'clock. Swamiji 9 clock time started. To talk about the beginning of time, you require another time. To locate the timewise beginning of the second time. And naturally the question will come, how did the second series of time originate. You will require for that another time to locate the time of time. You will find that intellectually it will be flabbergasting. Similarly space. So therefore, you can never talk about the beginning or end of the creation; tennamarama, tengayaa? Which came first; the coconut tree or the coconut seed? Kozhiya muttaya? Which came first.

Even scientifically analysing, the scientists are telling that perhaps this question can never be answered. Some scientists have still some hope. Many scientists have given up home and they say it may be an eternal mystery; including Stephen Hawkins. He is putting a big question mark? He says there are religious implications when we are studying cosmology. Himself an atheist. So all these Vyāsācārya wrote then itself and forgotten. He says, Asya rūpam, the nature of this universe is incomprehensible, the word we use in our culture is Māya. And every Indian is familiar with the word, they will say that everything is māya when they do not understand anything. Even there was a movie named Vazhvē māyam.

All these 15th chapter. They do not know it is 15th chapter. That is the only difference. asya rūpam iha na upalabhyatē. And therefore na antaḥ. And you cannot talk about the beginning, because of beginning of universe is beginning of time. Beginning of time is intellectually non-comprehensible. And not only the beginning cannot be talked about, na ca antaḥ. Antaḥ means the end also cannot be talked about. So the end of creation is the end of time.

And people will ask after the end, what will happen? Think of that. After the end of time, what will happen? In the question itself, can't you see the contradiction? After the end of time, that very word, AFTER is illogical. The very word AFTER refers to time concept, AFTER time is a contradiction, BEFORE time is a contradiction. But Swamiji we are using the word: you came to the class before time; that before time is different; there before time is before 7 o'clock or before 6 o'clock, we are referring to; but try to conceive of before the time concept itself. It is unimaginable. So na antaḥ, na ādhi.

So what about the middle? If you cannot think of the beginning or end, how can you talk about the middle? Suppose I ask you, what is the middle of this hall. If I ask you to mark the middle of the hall, the first thing you do is what? Try to find out both the ends of the hall. Without locating the beginning and end, you cannot pinpoint the middle, therefore, if you do not the beginning and end, you cannot talk about the middle.

And therefore, Kṛṣṇa says na ca sampratiṣṭā. Sampratiṣṭā means the middle. Madhyam. In this context, normally sampratiṣṭā means a support a substratum, etc. but in this context, the word sampratiṣṭā, the middle or madhyam. In short you do not know these three things. Other than the middle, beginning and the end, I know everything, means I know nothing.

So this mysterious universe is saṁsāra. Never try to understand this. You only try to remove the saṁsāra by going to the root; you get rid of the saṁsāra. You need not know the details, only you have to get rid. If the dream is creating lot of problems, what is the solution? Instead of struggling to understand what is dream; there are some psychologists who do analysis of dream, and they will miss the waking state; you go on studying the dream and miss the precious waking time; the more you analyse the dream, the more mysterious it will be. If dream is causing the problem, what is required is not analysing, what is required is what? Wake up from the dream. Similarly here also, you have to get rid of this saṁsāra; and the method of saṁsāra nivṛtti is given from the second line of this verse. So up to the sampratiṣṭā, is saṁsāra varṇanam. So the first topic is over.

Hereafter from the 2nd half of this verse, we are entering into the second topic. What is that topic, saṁsāra nivṛtti upāyaḥ? How to get out of this vicious terrible uncontrollable, unpredictable saṁsāra chakra? And Kṛṣṇa is going to talk about four methods or four disciplines; not optional but all the four are important. And what are those four? First I enumerate them and we will see the details later.

First one is vairāgyam. The second one is Brahma vicāra. Vairāgyam you know the meaning dispassion. Brahma vicāra is enquiry into the root of this saṁsāra vṛkṣaḥ. And the third discipline is śaraṇāgathiḥ. Surrender or devotion. The word used is prapathiḥ, which is a very important concept in Viśiṣṭa advaita Vaiśṇava Sampradāya. That prapathi, otherwise called śaraṇāgathiḥ or bhakthi is the third. And the fourth upāya is sad-gūṇāḥ.

Developing a healthy refined mind. Otherwise called values enumerated in the 13th chapter, viz., amānitvam, adambitvam, ahimsa, śānti ārjavam. I will call them sad-gūṇaḥ. So vairāgyam, brahma vicāra, śaraṇāgathiḥ and sad-gūṇaḥ, these four upāya, upāya means methodology are going to be enumerated.

The first one is mentioned here: Vairāgyam. So Kṛṣṇa says first may you take the sword, the knife or the axe of vairāgyam and with the axe of vairāgyam, may you learn to reduce your dependence on the world; because the world is constantly changing, because the world is mysterious, because the world is unpredictable, learn to reduce your dependence on the world. It does not mean hatred, from world-dependence, may you gradually develop God-dependence. God in any form initially in the form of an iṣṭa dēvatha. And later, when we discover that Lord in our own heart, in the form of our own higher-nature, then from God-dependence I will come to self-dependence, which is otherwise independence. What is independence? Dependence on myself. And therefore turn your attention from world dependence to God dependence.

And therefore he says asaṅga śāstrēṇa. Asaṅga means vairāgyam. Dispassion, detachment, śāstrām means the axe or sword.

With that dṛḍhēna chittvā, so strongly forcibly may you cut your leaning and what you should cut?

Ēnam suvirūḍhamūlam aśvattham. May you cut the dependence on this aśvattha vṛkṣa, or this saṁsāra vṛkṣa.

And what type of saṁsāra vṛkṣa? suvirudha mūlam, which has got a very very strong root; this well rooted, well entrenched saṁsāra, you are leaning upon, which is a risky thing.

I have often told you that when there is a card board chair; a well decorated card-board chair is there; atta-chair, it is so beautiful, so nice, you can keep it in the show case or navarithri kolu, you can keep there, you can do everything, enjoy it, nothing wrong, do not destroy, only one small thing, what is that: already you are 95 kilos, and you sit on the chair; you fall and break your head. So therefore, except leaning or sitting, you can do everything else. Similarly, love people, move with people, show your care, everything you do; it is a gift from the Lord, whatever I have, but when you need stability and security, have the Lord as the source of security. This is stage No.1.

What is that? World dependence to God dependence. This is called vairāgyam. Not hatred. Maturity. So asaṅgaśāstrēṇa dṛḍhēna chittvā. Having done that, the sentence is grammatically incomplete, having done that, don't stop with that; there are three more disciplines, which you have to practice. What are those three?

That is given in the next verse.

Verse 15.4

ततः पदं तत्परिमार्गितव्यं यस्मिन्गता न निवर्तन्ति भूयः ।
तमेव चाद्यं पुरुषं प्रपद्ये यतः प्रवृत्तिः प्रसृता पुराणी ॥ १५.४ ॥

tataḥ padaṁ tat parimārgitavyam yasmin gatā na nivartanti bhūyaḥ | tamēva ca'dyaṁ puruṣaṁ prapadyē
yataḥ pravṛttiḥ prasṛtā purāṇī || 15.4 ||

ततः tataḥ thereafter तत् पदम् tat padam that goal, परिमार्गितव्यम् parimārgitavyam should be sought गताः यस्मिन् gatāḥ yasmin reaching which न निवर्तन्ति na nivartanti they do not return भूयः bhūyaḥ again प्रपद्ये prapadyē (one should pray "I surrender तम् एव च आद्यं पुरुषम् tam ēva ca ādyaṁ puruṣam to that primal God, यतः yataḥ from whom, पुराणि प्रवृत्तिः purāṇī pravṛttiḥ the ancient process (of creation) प्रसृता prasṛtā has proceeded."

4. Thereafter, that goal should be sought reaching which they do not return again (one should pray). "I surrender to that primal God from whom the ancient process (of creation) has proceeded".

Tataḥ means thereafter, thereafter means whereafter? After getting vairāgyam, not suppression, but mature dispassion. Suppression is never correct; it is going out of the dependence, just as we grow out of the attachment to the dolls and play things we used in our childhood, only thing is the physical growth from childhood is a natural process. You need not do anything, you survive somehow. You will physically grow; as you physically grow, you will not be leaning upon those dolls, computer games and all things; biscuits you are NO MORE interested in local biscuits, but only in gold biscuit; different biscuit. So physical growth is natural. But emotional growth requires working on it. That is called vivēka janya vairāgyam.

We have to study our experiences and learn and after getting that dispassion, healthy dispassion; you have to go to the second upāya, upāya means disciplines or sādhana, which is parimārgitavyam. Parimārgaṇam means enquiry. Vicāraḥ, searching, seeking; seeking of what tat padam, padam means that ultimate destination of life and also the ultimate substratum of the saṁsāra tree; and what is the root or substratum of the tree; Brahman. So may you enquire into Brahman; not sitting with closed eyes and asking Brahman what is Brahman what is Brahman, enquiry means guru śāstra mukēna vēdānta vicāraḥ; Brahma vicāraḥ. Brahman enquiry is śāstric enquiry. Śāstric enquiry involves the guidance of a guru. May you enter into vēdānta Vicāraḥ.

More we will see in the next class. Hari Om

191 Chapter 15, Verses 04-05

ॐ

In the first part of the 15th chapter, Lord Kṛṣṇa gave a description of saṁsāra, so that a person would get a desire for saṁsāra nivṛtti or mōkṣaḥ. Because unless one diagnoses the human problem, there will never be an attempt to get out of the problem and therefore he gave the description of saṁsāra by comparing the saṁsāra to the huge tree of avastha. This was done in the first 2-1/2 verses and thereafter Kṛṣṇa has now entered into the sādhanās meant for saṁsāra nivṛtti; mōkṣaḥ prāpthi sādhanāni, or saṁsāra nivṛtti sādhanāni.

And many disciplines are discussed in the śāstras and Lord Kṛṣṇa is here highlighting four disciplines which I introduced in the last class; the first one is vairāgyam; which Kṛṣṇa called asaṅgatvam. And by the word vairāgyam, we saw the idea conveyed is deciding to depend upon the Lord more than the world. So shifting from world-dependence to God-dependence is vairāgyam. So that later, we can discover that the Lord is none other than my own higher-nature.

The scriptures do not reveal this fact in the beginning, in the beginning Lord is presented as a third person, other than me. So He sṛjīti kartā, He is sthithi kartā, He is omniscient; He is omnipotent; God is described as a parōkṣavastu, as someone different, and we are asked to depend upon that Lord in any form we like; in the form of Ganeśa, Śiva, Viṣṇu, etc.

And thereafter alone, we discover the fact that the Lord is not away from me, the Lord is my own higher-nature, and therefore, God-dependence will later be converted into self-dependence, which is total freedom. So thus vairāgyam is shifting the dependence from the world to the Lord.

The next one, the second one, that Kṛṣṇa mentions is śaraṇagathi or surrender to the Lord, to pursue the mōkṣaḥ mārga. This is based on the discovery of the fact that any human undertaking can be successful only when two factors are favourable. Any human undertaking can be successful only when two factors are favourable; one is my sincere effort called prayathnaḥ. Without my effort, nothing can happen. As they say, ten people can take a horse to the waterfront, but the horse alone has to drink. Similarly, if my effort is not there, even God cannot help me. Therefore, prayathna is one factor, and the second factor is Īśvara anugrahaḥ; the grace of the Lord, so that all the other factors are favourable to me. All the hidden factors are favourable to me, and to seek this grace of the Lord, I surrender to the Lord. Śaraṇagathi or prāpathi is the second sādhanā.

And the third one is the development of healthy virtues. So sadguṇa sampādanam because only in the atmosphere of healthy virtues, self-knowledge can take place. Just as in chemistry, when they talk about various chemical reactions; they always specify the temperature and the pressure; in whose conditions alone the reactions can take place. Certain reactions require NTP, chemistry students will know, NTP means what? Normal temperature and pressure; in the case of certain other reactions higher temperature and pressure. In the case of certain other reactions lower temperature and pressure. Cryogenic experiments always take place in very very low temperature. Similarly they talk about acid medium, alkaline medium; when we have the acidity problem.

So when the local events require certain conditions, to successfully take place, Vēdānta says that self-knowledge can take place only in certain conditions. And what is that? There should be normal temperature and pressure. Here also we use the expression; lot of pressure Swamiji. And also we get heated up. We say. Therefore the ideal condition of the mind in which self-knowledge can take place is called sādhanā catuṣṭaya sampathi. There you say NTP; here I say SCS. Sādanā catuṣṭaya sampathi. In simple language; healthy virtues. Some of the virtues, Kṛṣṇa will Himself enumerate later, some we have already seen in the 10th, 12, 13th chapters.

In one word, I will say Sadguṇas. Vairāgyam, śaraṇagathi and sadguṇaḥ. And the fourth Vēdānta vicāraḥ. Enquiry into the scriptures or scriptural study. Unfortunately, this sādhanā is not emphasised at all nowadays. All the other sādhanās are highlighted; nobody talks much about the scriptural study; that too systematic scriptural study. Just as we study physics in the college for a length of time, chemistry we study, mathematics we study, Vēdānta is also a systematic śāstra, requiring a systematic study.

And this we call as Vēdānta vicāraḥ; consisting of śravaṇa, mananam and nidhidhyāsanam, and Kṛṣṇa uses the word here parimārgaṇam. Parimārgaṇam means self-enquiry, through the instrumentality of scriptures. Just as you enquire into the disease in the body, the doctors use the appropriate instrument, even to have a master check-up, the doctor cannot study your body, your blood, etc. through ordinary eyes and ears, he has got many gadgets. So many scanning, eeg, ecg, brain scan, etc. how many instruments are there. So to make an appropriate enquiry, you require an appropriate instrument. Self-enquiry requires the instrument called śāstra pramāṇam.

That is why we always say, self-enquiry is equal to śāstric enquiry. Ātma vicāraḥ is equal to Vēdānta vicāraḥ. Remember the example of the mirror I gave you the other day. If I have to see my face, I have to make use of the mirror. And when I am looking into the mirror, it appears as though I am looking outside; but what I am actually seeing is not outside, I am seeing myself. I see the face on the mirror or in the mirror, but when I apply chandanam or kumkum, I do not apply on the mirror, I apply here because, I know I see there; but I see is here.

Similarly, the more you get into the śāstras, properly with the right guru, greater the śāstric study, the greater the understanding of myself. The deeper you penetrate into the śāstras, the deeper is your understanding of yourselves. So this is the fourth one, Vēdānta vicāraḥ; vairāgyam, śaraṇagathi, sadguṇaḥ, and Vēdānta vicāraḥ.

And of these four sādhanās, what is the most important one; of the four, what is the most important one. Kṛṣṇa does not mention, but we should remember that the most important one is Vēdānta vicāraḥ alone. The other three are only supportive causes, because they only prepare the condition of the mind. So just as preparing the condition for a chemical reaction, or preparing the condition for a surgery, the conditions are important, but what cures the disease is the surgery. You cannot tell the patient to go home after preparing the condition. They are all important. Sugar has to be brought down; pressure has to be handled; all these conditionings are important; but it is the surgery, the treatment which removes the disease; and remember, here the virus or bacteria is ignorance bacteria.

And ignorance is removed only by knowledge generated by Vēdānta vicāraḥ; śaraṇagathi cannot remove ignorance, all the virtues cannot remove ignorance. If you have all virtues, you will be a virtuously ignorant; previously viciously ignorant; now virtuously ignorant; virtues cannot remove ignorance. Vairāgyam cannot remove ignorance; therefore vairāgyam, śaraṇagathi and sadguṇaḥ, they only create the condition, the actual job is done by vēdāntic study; which generates the knowledge and in the process; removes the ignorance, as I often say, it is ignorancesoductamy. Therefore three are supporting causes and Vēdānta vicāraḥ is the primary cause. All these four are mentioned in the third verse; vairāgyam has been mentioned in the 4th verse; Kṛṣṇa is mentioning Vēdānta vicāraḥ and śaraṇagathi. So look at the third line first.

Tamēva ca''dyaṁ puruṣaṁ prapadyē, every devotee must be a devotee of the Lord. Without Īśvara bhakthi, any amount of intellectual acumen will not bless a person, we do require a sharp intellect, no doubt, but bhakthi is very very important. And that is why we start the class with a prayer; pārthāya pratibōdhitām, when the mind is in the prayer or not, you will chant with the mouth, amba tvāmanusandadhāmi bhagavadgītē bhavēdvēṣiṇīm; I surrender. Therefore the last two lines are within quotation, the surrender expressed by the devotee. He address the lord, Oh Lord, tam puruṣam a'dyaṁ prapadyē, I surrender to that Lord who is called puruṣaḥ, the word puruṣaḥ has two meaning, one meaning is the all-pervading one, pūrayathi sarvam ithi puruṣaḥ. pūr to fill or pervade. From that only śaṣṭiabdhapūrthi etc. the root is pūr, and there is another meaning also, purē iti vasathi, iti puruṣaḥ; puram means the body, vasathi, one who dwells; therefore puruṣaḥ means the one who indwells the body and that is natural because if the Lord is all pervading, the Lord will be in my heart or not; the all-pervading Lord has to be pervading this hall also. Therefore, that puruṣaḥ. That all pervading Lord who is in my heart, I surrender.

And What type of Lord he is? Yataḥ purāṇī pravṛttiḥ prasṛtā. Pravṛttiḥ means the emergence, uttpathiḥ, the emergence, the origination of what? this creation, beginning from the space onward; tasmāt dva ētatasmāt atmanaḥ ākāśa sambūdha. Ākāśāt vāyu, vāyōr Agni, agnēr āpah. Even space originates from the Lord. And when all this start? When does this origination begins? Kṛṣṇa says purāṇī pravṛttiḥ, the most ancient creation; we do not know when the big bang started; billions of years ago, so this ancient origination or creation; prasṛtā, proceeds or emerges from which Lord, from which source, that original Lord I surrender to. So this is called śaraṇagathi. This is the second upāyaḥ.

And then we will go back to the first line, in which the third sādhanā is mentioned, viz., Vēdānta vicāraḥ, tataḥ, means what, after preparing the mind very well. So after providing the condition, even a farmer will sow the seed only after preparing the land and after Cavery water or monsoon; unless there is water, how can you farm? And therefore, any activity requires the condition and therefore tataḥ means sādhanā catuṣṭaya sampathi anantharam.

That is how brahma sūtra begins. Vyasācārya writes the famous brahma sutra, consisting of 555 sūtras, most important vēdāntic literature and it begins with athāthō brahma jijñāsa. And Śankarācārya writes an elaborate commentary on the first word, athā, by reading which itself you get heated up. He analyses various possible meaning of the word Athaḥ and dismisses all other possible meanings and arrive at the meaning thereafter. For that 1-1/2 page commentary, for which 10 page sub-commentary and 100 pages sub-sub-commentary has been written by others for athaḥ. And once he establishes the meaning as 'thereafter', he himself asks the question, thereafter means?, whereafter; after drinking coffee, is it. So that we will be fresh for brahma sutra. Then Śankarācārya himself answers the question, sādhanā catuṣṭaya sampathi anantharam. After preparing the mind. In fact our entire religious life is for this preparation. All our rituals are called saṁskāra, the very conception is a saṁskāra, garbhādhāna saṁskāra, puṁsavana saṁskāra, seemantha saṁskāra, jātakarma saṁskāra; saṁskāra means what refinement process. Everything that we do in our religion, including navarathri kolu and also chundal; all are meant for refinement of the mind; saṁskāra, what a beautiful name!

And a mind which is refined is called saṁskṛita anthakāraṇam. So here the word tataḥ means athaḥ of brahma sūtra. Tataḥ is equal to athaḥ, (one should not say athaḥ). What should you do? Parimārgītavyam; enter into vēdāntic study seriously, systematically. Find out what is stūla śarīram, what is sūkṣma śarīram; what is kāraṇa śarīram; is there something beyond, if there is something beyond; what is its nature? Very elaborate enquiry. So parimārgītavyam vicārayitavyam. There in the Vyāsa sūtra it is called Brahma jijñāsah. jijñāsah means parimārgaṇam.

What do you enquire into? Padam. Padam in the last class I explained; one meaning is the ultimate goal of every human being, which is Brahman. So destination. Padyatē iti padam. Karma utpathi; and there is a second meaning also, and that is the basis or substratum. And according to the second meaning also, it is Brahman only. So Brahman which is the destination and Brahman which is the substratum of the whole creation, which is the root of the saṁsāra vṛkṣa; that Brahman may you enquire through Vēdānta.

OK. What is the advantage of reaching that destination? Already I have got a several destinations in life. Got a big agenda. So among so many agendas, which are incomplete, you are adding one more. This was not there till now and you have added Brahma jñānam on that list. So in what way this destination is better? Kṛṣṇa tells that this is the best destination because this is the only destination reaching which further travels are not there. A person has reached Home. So Brahman alone is the real home, where you can feel at Home.

Any other goal you fulfil, for a day, you are fulfilled, relaxed; then day you are ready for what next? Education over? What next? Employment. Employment over? What next? Getting settled? It is a figurative expression for getting married? Then what? Children? Then what next? They should be settled. Then what next? Grandchildren; they should be settled. I am eternally unsettled. Looking for somebody settlement or the other; I am always unsettled; the agenda never ends. And this has been going on from anādi kāla, (payaṅgal mudivathē illai – travel never ends). Whereas this is the destination where you feel at home with yourselves and thereafter whatever you do, it is not a struggle, but it is a sport or enjoyment. And therefore Kṛṣṇa says yasmin gatha, reaching which destination; that is Brahman destination, mōkṣah destination, reaching, bhuyaḥ na nivarthanthi. One does not come back to saṁsāra, which is the perpetual struggle. Perpetual struggle ends once and for all. Remember, the snake and ladder. The moment you reach the paramapadam (for vaikunḍa ēkādaśi, vaiṣṇavās have to play paramapadam) na nivartanti bhūyaḥ. May you seek that goal through Vēdānta vicāra. With this three sādhanas, have been talked about.

What are the three? Vairāgyam; śaraṇāgathi, and Vēdānta vicāra. Now the fourth we have to see in the next verse we will read.

Verse 15.5

निर्मनमोहा जितसङ्गदोषा अध्यात्मनित्या विनिवृत्तकामाः
द्वन्द्वैर्विमुक्ताः सुखदुःखसंज्ञैः गच्छन्त्यमूढाः पदमव्ययं तत् ॥ १५.५ ॥

nirmānamōhā jitasāṅgadōṣā
adhyātmanityā vinivṛttakāmāḥ | dvandvairvimuktāḥ sukhaduḥkhasaṃjñaiḥ gacchantyamūḍhāḥ padamavyayaṃ tat || 15.5 ||

निर्मनमोहाः nirmānamōhāḥ those who are free from pride and delusion जितसङ्गदोषाः jitasāṅgadoṣāḥ who have conquered the evil of attachment, विनिवृत्तकामाः vinivṛttakāmāḥ who are free from desires, विमुक्ताः द्वन्द्वैः vimuktāḥ dvandvaiḥ who are free from the pairs of opposites सुखदुःखसंज्ञैः sukhaduḥkhasaṃjñaiḥ known as pleasure and pain अध्यात्मनित्याः adhyātmanityāḥ who are ever committed to the spiritual pursuit, अमूढाः amūḍhāḥ – and who are wise गच्छन्ति gacchanti attain तद् अव्ययं पदम् tad avyayaṃ padam that imperishable goal

5. Those who are free from pride and delusion, who have conquered the evil of attachment, who are free from desires, who are free from the pairs of opposites known as pleasures and pain, who are ever committed to the spiritual pursuit, and who are wise attain that imperishable goal.

So the fourth discipline is sadguṇaḥ; cultivation of healthy virtues; Vēdānta-friendly virtues, which serve as a catalyst for the mōkṣaḥ reaction to take place. So what are those virtues? We have already enumerated in the thirteenth chapter, from verse No.8 to 12; amānitvam, adambitvam, etc. and Kṛṣṇa will again elaborate in the 16th chapter, in the form of daivi sampathi and later in the 17th chapter also. So Kṛṣṇa wants only to give certain sample virtues.

And what are they? Kṛṣṇa says, nirmānamōhāḥ, first and foremost develop humility; get rid of arrogance; pride, vanity, which unknowingly creep into our personality; a few achievements can easily get into our head. And a few people glorify us, we have lost our balance. And therefore our scriptures emphasise Vinaya or humility as one of the most important virtues required. And as I said, the thing in one of the classes before, one of the exercises prescribed is learning to do namaskāra. The very physical prostration has the capacity to develop humility; and in our culture left and right, any occasion, namaskāra is there; Not only in front of the Lord, namaskāra to parents, to elders, to teachers; So this is one method;

And the second one is to constantly remember that there are people who are greater than me; and superior to me in any field. I am never the greatest one in the creation. If I remember this fact, humility will be automatic.

And secondly and more importantly I should remember; whatever glories or faculties I have, they are all gift from the Lord, it does not take much time to lose them; a wonderful voice can be easily lost with one ice-cream; or anything. So any faculty that I have, can be lost at any time; Remember the 10th chapter of the Gītā; everything I possess is Bhagavan's gift. And any glorification I receive, you do not have that problem!! It is OK, if no one curses! Any glorification I receive, any namaskāra I receive, I directly handover mentally to the Lord.

If these two points I remember; first point, that there are people who are superior and greater and second point, whatever I have is Bhagavān's grace. If these two I remember in my mind, and physically I keep doing namaskāra wherever appropriate, without hesitation, satsaṅga namaskāra, if there is a back-ache, pancāṅga namaskāra, if I cannot bend at least the short cut namaskāra, you do, nirmāna is nothing but amānitvam of the 13th chapter, vinayaḥ.

Then the next virtue is nirmōhaḥ, that nir should be read twice. Nirmāna and nirmōha; you should not say nirmāna and mōha is another virtue; mōha is not a virtue which we have to acquire, because we already have a plenty. So nirmōhaḥ, freedom from delusion.

And that means what? Proper thinking or discrimination and what is proper thinking? We should remember, every individual is a mixture of a spiritual personality and a material personality. Spiritual personality is the ātma tatvam and the material personality is the anātma personality and every individual is a mixture of spirit and matter.

We are both spiritual and materialistic. As Dayānanda Swamiji says; even the greatest spiritual person when he is eating food, he is a pucca materialist only; because he is dealing with matter to nourish the matter; there is no ātma involved in eating. So we have both the personalities; our growth is balanced growth in which I take care of my material needs and I should also take care of my spiritual growth.

And that is why we have divided the puruṣārtaḥ into four; arta kāma are also important; dharma mōkṣaḥ are also important. There should not be a lopsided approach. That is what Kṛṣṇa said in the 16th chapter; suppose a person says that I will do 24 hour meditation only and no eating food, etc. materialistic pursuit, Kṛṣṇa said it would not work, if you do not eat at all, you will meditate only on idlis and chappathis; and not on Brahman. So 100% spiritual pursuit nobody can have. 100% material pursuit is also lopsided. Therefore Kṛṣṇa says: Give balanced time for arta kama, earn well, eat well but at the same time have time for attending the Sunday classes. So Sunday classes also. No time there, do not say. And therefore mōhaḥ means the misconception that pursuit of money alone will give me fulfilment in life. Kaśēthan kaduval ada; philosophy would not work. kasum kaduvulum is OK. Kaśēthan kaduvul is a problem.

So earning money required; but you cannot spend your entire life in earning and entertainment alone; that is why I often say what I have alone is not the criterion for my joy, what I am also should be taken care of. We are taking care of only what I have; but we are never taking care of what I am. And therefore, nirmōhaḥ means the one who gives equal importance to spirituality also.

And the next virtue? Jita saṅgha dōṣāḥ. Saṅgha means emotional slavery; emotional attachment, emotional addiction, emotional leaning upon external factors is a risky proposition; because the external world is constantly changing. So leaning upon a changing support is not a healthy one and therefore use everything but do not lean on anything. And if at all you want to lean upon something, lean upon something śāsvatham. And that is why I told in the beginning itself, world-dependence to God-dependence. So jitasāṅgadoṣāḥ, those who have mastery, those who are not emotional slaves of people, of situations and of things. So this will take time, but we have to work on that. In fact all our vṛthams prescribed in the scriptures are meant to develop that self-dependence only; whatever we are used to, we are asked to give up for a day, for a week; those people who take vṛtham for Śabarimalai, they learn to live without those dependences. See what happens if coffee is not there for? You have start there. So therefore, freedom from slavery.

Then the next one. vinivṛttakāmāḥ. Not developing new dependence. Previous value is giving up present dependence and there are some people who give up, they say I have given up smoking and what do I do? Pan parag; kathi pochu, valu vanduthu; you have left one and replaced by something equal or worse. So many people have got the habit of arecanut, which cause cancer of the mouth, they say. It is extremely difficult for them to give up. Some people it is snuff. All the time having cinmudra ~ snuff - cinmudra.

There was one śāstri, great scholar, vēdāntic class; and he will have that very good scholar, teaches well, but he takes snuff; Therefore what I am saying is vinivrittha kāma, do not replace one dependence by another. So vinivṛttakāmāḥ, free from fresh attachments or desires.

Then the next virtue is dvandvaiḥ vimuktāḥ; those who can withstand the opposite experiences of life; the capacity to withstand the opposite experiences of life; which are inevitable in life. So there is prosperity, lot of money, and then there is also situation, lot of debts also, and health is there; ill-health is also there; and gain is there; and loss is there; victory is there; failure is there; māna apamāna, in fact life is a series of opposites. In Sānskrīt we call it dvandvam. Dvandvam means pair. And that is why reading purāṇic stories, which is useful because from the purāṇas we come to know that even the greater emperors and even great bhakthas and even avathārās have faced opposites; Rāmayaṇa you read; Rāma was in the palace, and in the forest; Dharmaputra was in the palace, and in the forest; Naḷa was a great king; lost everything. And thus when we read we come to know that when great emperors cannot avoid ups and downs, what am I a small man going to do.

अवश्यम् भावि भावानाम्, प्रतिकारो भवेत् यति

[avaśyam bhāvi bhāvānām, pratikārō bhavēt yati

When they had to face choiceless situations, irremediable situations, how can I help? And therefore I have to toughen myself, I have to thicken my skin; that is called shock absorber, through vivēka and bhakthi; discrimination and devotion will give a mind with a shock absorber. Therefore free from reactions towards violent reactions towards. You cannot avoid reactions totally, but the shock absorber would reduce the intensity. I would not go Mad, I would not think of committing suicide, I may be upset a little bit; but it is withstandable, manageable condition. And those who are free from violent reactions with regard to adverse circumstances. And what are the adverse experiences, sukha duḥkham sama; in the form of pleasure and pain; and others. So when that well known proverb, you might have heard, when going gets tough, the tough gets going.

In Sānskrīt, we have got a beautiful slōkā, in which they divide the human-beings into two types of balls. One is a wet clay ball; a ball made-up of wet clay; and another is a rubber ball. Now you drop both of them down; what will happen? The wet clay ball once it falls, never gets up. Fallen for good. It does not have the capacity to bounce back. Low resilience; permanently scarred and damage; whereas the rubber ball, the moment it falls, it bounces back; in fact, the harder the fall, more is the bounce.

तता तु अनार्य पदधि, मृत् पिण्ट पतनम् यथा ।

[yathā kaṇḍuka pādēna udpadadi ārya padānapi
tatā tu anārya padathi, mṛt piṇṭa padanam yathā |](#)

You know the meaning. kanduka pādēna, fall of the regular ball, it has resilience, the other one is the ball of wet clay. I have to decide whether I am clay or ball. And one who is like a ball, is called dvandvairvimuktāḥ. OK. this was a tragic condition, cry one day, two day, Then start again, who has not lost kingdom, husbands, or children, all these things happen; that resilience is the virtue;

And the next and the most important virtue is adhyātmanityāḥ; adhyātmanityāḥ means what? Regular study of scriptures. In fact they nourish these virtues. Just as physical health requires a consumption of regular nutritious food; physical health requires regular consumption of nutritious food; not junk food, OK. Similarly, mental health requires regular consumption of nutritious food called scriptural study. It is a nutrition for the mind and the intellect. And if you read any other book; star dust; what will happen? We will go to dust; that is all. That is called junk food; therefore, reading Gīta, reading the saying of the mahātmās. Remember, that is nourishment to the mind and intellect and therefore Kṛṣṇa says adhyātmanityāḥ means what? Regularly committed to adyātma means spiritual scriptures. So either by reading or writing or sharing, find out one victim; and then share. As Swami Chinmayānanda says; invite him and give a hot cup of coffee. So that he cannot go until he completes it, so you get 15 minutes. Next time, he may come or may not come. So share, that is also scriptural study only.

And if a person follows these virtues, along with the other three; other three, vairāgyam, śaraṇāgathi and Vēdānta vicāraḥ.

then amūḍhāḥ, such people who follow all these four sādānās, vairāgya, śaraṇāgathi, and Vēdānta vicāraḥ, those who follow, amūḍhāḥ bhavanthi, they become wise people. Amūḍhāḥ, means jñāni. Brahma vid, sthira prajñāḥ, they become wise people.

And then tad padam gacchanti, they will reach the destination of Brahman, the destination of God or the destination of mōkṣaḥ; they will certainly attain; guaranteed.

And what type of destination it is; avyayaṁ, which is permanent, which is never lost. Because wisdom is never lost. Money you gain, it gets depleted; exhausted; but knowledge when you share with others, it will never get depleted; if it is going to get depleted, as I teach Gītam ore and more, and at the end of the fifth course, my knowledge will be half; by the time I come to the fifteenth, I would not know anything. That is not so. The more I teach, the more I know.

न चोरहार्यं न च राजहार्यं न भ्रातृभाज्यं न च भारकारि ।
व्यये कृते वर्धत एव नित्यं विध्याधनं सर्वधनात् प्रधानम् ॥

[na cōrahāryaṁ na ca rājahāryaṁ na bhrātr̥bhājyaṁ na ca bhārakāri |
vyayē kṛtē vardhata ēva nityaṁ vidhyādhanam sarvadhanāt pradhānam ||](#)

The more you use your knowledge, the more it increases; and therefore mōkṣaḥ is permanent benefit. Never lost.

More in the next class.

Hari Om

192 Chapter 15, Verses 06-07

ॐ

After giving a description of saṁsāra in the first few verses, Lord Kṛṣṇa dealt with the saṁsāra nivṛtti upāya, the means or methods for removal of saṁsāra; saṁsāra nivṛtti means mōkṣaḥ, and therefore saṁsāra nivṛtti upāyaḥ means mōkṣa upāya. What are the disciplines to be followed to attain freedom the above described saṁsāra? And as we see in the previous classes, four disciplines were highlighted. The first one is vairāgyam or dispassion; the second one is śaraṇāgathi, surrendering to the Lord in the form of any Iṣṭa dēvatha; the third discipline is the acquisition or cultivation of healthy values, which we called sadguṇaḥ, or sad acārāḥ, or in the 16th chapter, it will be called daivi sampath. Cultivating healthy virtues is the third discipline and the fourth and the primary discipline is vēdāntic enquiry; vēdānta vicāraḥ, vēdānta sṛavaṇa manana nidhidhyāsanam. And the word Kṛṣṇa uses is parimārgaṇam. tataḥ padaṁ tat parimārgitavyam; parimārgaṇam is vicāraḥ, padam means Brahman, padam parimārgitavyam, means Brahma vicāraḥ karthavyaḥ. And enquiry into Brahman is possible only through Vēdāntic scriptures and therefore Brahman enquiry automatically means vēdāntic enquiry.

Of these four, as I said in the last class, the first three are supporting sādhanās, and vēdāntic enquiry alone is the primary sādhanā which alone removes the self or Brahman ignorance. And if a person follows all these four disciplines, what would be benefit that he will attain? That was mentioned in the 5th verse, the 4th line, which we saw in the last class; amūḍhāḥ. By following four disciplines, the seekers will become wise people. Amūḍhāḥ means jñāninaḥ. Mōhaḥ means ajñānam; mūḍhāḥ means ajñāni and amūḍhāḥ means non-ajñāni, not ajñāni means jñāni. So amūḍhāḥ bhavanthi; jñāninaḥ bhavanthi and by way of becoming jñānis, what is the benefit they will enjoy? Tad avyayaṁ padam gacchanti. They will attain the avyayaṁ pada, known as Brahman. Avyayaṁ means undecaying; undecaying means not affected by time. Not affected by time, means kālāthītham. So they will attain the kālāthītham padam; which is none other than Brahman. So thus previously Brahman was presented as the root of the world and now Brahman is presented as the destination of the seeker. So what is the substratum of the world alone is the destination of the seeker, and that is why the word padam is a versatile word; it has got both meanings. One meaning is the substratum, the other meaning is the destination. So Brahman is padam, the support of the world and Brahman is padam, the destination of the seeker, that Brahman they attain. So Brahma prāp̥thi alone is called mōkṣa prāp̥thiḥ. Up to this we saw in the last class.

न तद्भासयते सूर्यः न शशाङ्को न पावकः ।
यद् गत्वा न निवर्तन्ते तद्धाम परमं मम ॥ १५.६ ॥

na tadbhāsayatē sūryō na śaśāṅkō na pāvakaḥ |
yadgatvā na nivartantē taddhāma paramam mama || 15.6 ||

सूर्यः न भासयते sūryaḥ na bhāsayatē the sun does not illumine तत् tat it, न शशाङ्कः na śaśāṅkaḥ neither the moon न पावकः na pāvakaḥ nor the fire तद् मम परमं धाम tad mama paramam dhāma it is my supreme abode गत्वा यत् gatvā yat attaining which न निवर्तन्ते na nivartantē they do not return.

6. The Sun does not illumine it; neither the moon nor the fire. It is My supreme abode attaining which they do not return.

In the previous verse it was mentioned that the seekers who follow the four fold disciplines will attain that undecaying padam, which is called Brahman, which is the root of the universe. Now in this verse, Kṛṣṇa says what is the nature of that Brahman; which is the destination of the seekers; which is the substratum of the universe; what is the nature of the substratum, destination Brahman? Substratum-cum-destination Brahman; what is its nature? So this verse is the Brahma lakṣaṇa slōka. A verse which defines Brahman. Wherever Brahman is defined that verse considered important. We call Brahma lakṣaṇa slōkaḥ. Yesterday we were seeing Turiya lakṣaṇa mantra; ~ nantha prajñā, na bhahi prajñām, mōhayathi prajñām ~ that is also definition of Turiyam, which is another name for Brahman. So here also, we get the definition of Brahman.

And while defining Brahman in this verse, Kṛṣṇa is borrowing from a well-known upaniṣad mantra. I have often told that the entire Gīta is a borrowed teaching, Kṛṣṇa does not give anything original of Himself; the whole Gīta is extracted from the upaniṣad. That is why you should remember the verse, sarvōpaniṣadō gāvō dōgdhā gōpālanandanah, pārthō vatsaḥ sudhīrbhōktā dugdham gītāmṛtam mahat. So this verse is based on a well-known upaniṣad mantra, which occurs both in the Muṇḍaka upaniṣad and Kathōpaniṣad and it is so well known that it is used in all the temples regularly, at the time of deeparadhana. And you know what is that mantra.

नेमा विद्युतो भान्ति कुतोऽयमग्निः ।

तमेव भान्तमनुभाति सर्वं तस्य भासा सर्वमिदं विभाति ॥ १० ॥

na tatra sūryō bhāti na candratārakam nēmā vidyutō bhānti kutō:'yamagniḥ | tamēva bhāntamanubhāti sarvaṁ
tasya bhāsā sarvamideṁ vibhāti || 2.II.10 ||

We won't notice that he would go on express speed and we would not understand. It is one of the very important definitions of Brahman which we use at the time of āraṭhi. What is the meaning of this definition? The essence is Brahman cannot be objectified by any instrument of knowledge. Brahman is not objectifiable through any instrument of knowledge. Brahman cannot be illumined by anything. And to convey this idea, the Upaniṣad uses the example of light. Light in Vēdānta is that in whose presence things are known. In Vēdānta, light means that in whose presence things are known. For example, this is called light, because in its presence I am able to know you are seated in front. Imagine light goes away; I will not know whether you are continuing to sit or quietly walk off. I won't know. Therefore light is that in whose presence things are known.

And keeping this definition, the upaniṣads mention or point out that every sense organ can be compared to a light. Every sense organ can be compared to a light, because sense organ is that in whose presence things are known. Therefore ear is a light, in whose presence sounds are known; therefore ear become a light ('light' with quotation, it is figurative expression)' nose is a light in whose presence smells are known; tongue is a light in whose presence, tastes are known and if you extend further, any pramāṇam or instrument of knowledge is called a light. Any pramāṇam; any instrument of knowledge; is also called a light, why?, because in the presence of instrument of knowledge the objects are known. Thus 'inference' is also a form of light, through which you can know things. And even words are a form of light. Even a lecture is a form of light. That is we have an expression in English: Can you throw some light upon that particular topic? When somebody asks me throw some light on a particular topic, what do I do? I give a talk and this person says I am enlightened. See all the words. Throw some light. I am enlightened. Even though what I have done is giving some speech only. Thus even words are a form of light called śabda pramāṇam through which we come to know things and the upaniṣads says that there are so many lights in the world. Sun is a light; moon is a light; stars are light; fire is light. There are so many lights, and there are many sense organs which are also light and in addition to that, there is śabda pramāṇam which is light. Thus there are so many lights and Brahman is that which can never be illumined by; known through any light. No light can objectify that Brahman. To use a technical language, anything which can be known through a light, an instrument of knowledge, anything that is known through a pramāṇam is called a pramēyam. Anything that is objectified, known, illumined through any pramāṇam is called a pramēyam. Kṛṣṇa says Brahman is that which is not an object of knowledge, it is not a pramēyam at all.

Therefore what is Brahma lakṣaṇam? Apramēyam Brahma. Sarva pramāṇa agōcaram Brahma. Anyadēva viditat athō aviditat Brahma. And then finally, we will have a question. If Brahman cannot be objectified through any instrument of knowledge, does that Brahman exist at all. If you say that it cannot be tasted, touched, seen, heard, etc.; if it cannot be inferred or described; if it cannot be known through any instrument of knowledge, does it exist at all. Is it குதிரை கொம்பு (Horse Horn)? The upaniṣads say that it does exist.

So Brahman is not an object of knowledge. Brahman exists. This is the quiz programme. Kaun Banēga Crorepati. Brahman is not an object of knowledge. At the same time, Brahman exists; what is that brahman? You can have only one answer, if Brahman exists, and if it is not an object, there can be only one answer, what is that? It is the very subject; it is very conscious being, which objectifies everything but which can never be objectified. Which is the experiencer of everything, but which is never experienced. It is this seer of everything but never seen. The unseen seer; the unseen hearer, the unsmelled smeller; the untasted taster, the untouched toucher; these are all not my expressions. These are all upaniṣadic expressions. adṛṣṭō draṣṭāḥ, asṛṭō srōtā, amato manto, avijjātō vijnatā. This is the definition given in the Brihadārṇyaka upaniṣad.

Whenever you do not know where a particular mantra comes, you do not know, Brihadārṇya you say. Two reasons. It is such a vast upaniṣad, that all important ideas come in that. Therefore it is true that any idea, that comes in Bṛhadārṇyaka. And the second reason is nobody will cross check whether it is true or not.

So therefore, adṛṣṭō draṣṭāḥ, asṛṭō srōtā, amatō mantō, avijjātō vijnatā, this subject is never objectified and objectifiable is Brahman. In short, Brahman is the consciousness-principle. It illumines the inert world; but it is not illumined by the inert world. It illumines matter; but it is never illumined by matter. It knows the matter, but it is not known by the matter. So thus Brahma lakṣaṇa is finally caitanya svarūpam brahma. Cid rupam brahma. Satyam jñānam anantham brahma; this is the sāra of this verse.

And why do we use this mantra at the time of deeparadhana? We use this mantra to expose our foolishness. Oh Lord you are the illuminator of everything, I am using the miserable camphor light; miserable, because we use one fourth a camphor piece, we want to keep it for the entire navarathri. So therefore, the pūjari says, Oh I am Aśadu. I am trying to illumine through this fire, but the fact is fire does not illumine you. On the other hand, it is you the consciousness which is illumining this fire. And that is the significance of such a prayōga.

Now look at the slōkā. Kṛṣṇa says: sūryaḥ tat na bhāsayatē. The sun light does not illumine the Brahma caitanyam, the Conciousness; on the other hand, the sunlight itself is known because of the Conciousness only.

Na śaśānkaḥ tat bhāsayatē; tat bhāsayatē, you have to repeat. The moonlight does not illumine that Brahma caitanyam.

Na pāvakaḥ. pāvakaḥ means the fire light; the light of the fire; so the fire does not illumine that Brahman. On the other hand, Brahman illumines the fire; illumines, means makes the fire known. In vēdānta, the word illumine is equal to making something known. So Brahman illumines the fire means, Brahman alone makes the fire known because the Brahman is the Conciousness principle because of which I am conscious of the fire's existence.

And in the original Muṇḍaka mantra, two more are added; tāraḥ and vidyutaḥ; tāraḥ; means stars; vidyut means lightening. Stars do not illumine. Flashes of lightening, do not illumine that Brahman.

And if that Brahman is Conciousness, which can never be objectified, I said that Brahman has to be the very subject itself. Now the question is if Brahman happens to be I, the subject; how many kilometers, I should travel to reach that Brahman? This fellow says that I have understand. That Brahman is the subject. Subject, I, the observer, the conscious-principle. In short the very ātma. Once I know Brahman is the very ātma aham, how far should I travel to reach Brahman. I need not travel even a millimeter, because by the very knowledge I have discovered the fact that there is no distance between Brahman and me. And therefore, we get a very very important idea, we should know. Reaching Brahman is not physical event. Reaching Brahman is not a physical event, which requires a time or a process; reaching Brahman is an intellectual event. Reaching brahman is an intellectual event; what type of intellectual event it is? It is an event which involves dropping a misconception. Dropping a misconception is that event; and what is the misconception that there is misconception between Brahman and me is my false notion. Is the false notion, which was distancing me from Brahman or which was distancing Brahman from me; so the distance is physical; distance is not temporal; distance is notional distance. What notion? ப்ரம்மன் எங்கே இருக்கு; நான் அடையணம்; ப்ரம்மன் எங்கே இருக்கு; நான் அடையணம் (Brahman is somewhere and I should reach there) All the movies will reinforce our misconception. A Bhakta will die, in the movie or in the TV serial and you will see a jyōthi raising from the bhakta, a flame from the body, what flame? jīvātma flame, and the flame will travel, come out of door, (all the modern technology are used), flame will be travelling, travelling, and will rise and rise and paramātma will be sitting there, and jīvātma will travel and travel and merge. இரண்டற கலந்தார். Irandara Kalandar. All these things will reinforce my misconception, that there is a distance between me and God.

What Vēdānta says is if God is all-pervading, there cannot be a distance between me and God. And if at all there is a distance, it is a distance caused by a false notion; that Bhagavān is in Kailasa or Vaikuṇṭa.

If the distance is caused by a false notion, how do you remove the distance? By removing the false notion. And how do you remove the false notion? By knowledge. Therefore knowledge is equal to merger. Other than jñānam, there is no other merger with Lord. Therefore Kṛṣṇa says yat gatvā, having merged into that Brahman; "merge" within quotation, by dropping the notion that there is a distance between Brahman and Me and knowing that I was never away from Brahman and I can never be away from Brahman, having removed the notion, na nivartantē. There is no question of coming back to saṁsāra once again. When merger is in the form of knowledge; it is permanent merger. If merger is in the form of a physical event, that merger will be temporary; you will merge and remain there for some time; every union will end in separation. Any physical merger is not permanent. That is why we all have come together between 6 and 7 am. Samyōga at 6 o' clock and viyōga at 7 o clock. Samyōga in svarga lōkā and afterwards what viyōga; any physical merger is temporary. That is why we say if merger is going to vaikunṭa, you will go alright, but after some time, if merger is going to Kailasa, you will come back. Physical merger is temporary. But Vēdāntic merger is what? Not physical. It is in the form of jñānam. And knowledge based merger is permanent, because ignorance once gone, is gone for good.

And therefore, yat gatvā, having merged into Brahman, na nivartantē; that person does not come back again and tad mama paramaṁ dhāma. That destination Brahman is nothing but Kṛṣṇa says my own higher-nature; Hey Arjuna Brahman is my own higher-nature. So by saying higher-nature, Kṛṣṇa indirectly indicates I have got a lower nature also. When you say that person is more intelligent, this person is less. When Bhagavān has got higher-nature and lower nature and that has already been described in a previous chapter, I do not know whether you remember, or whether I should give you an assignment; in which chapter the higher and lower natures are discussed; the seventh chapter; para prakṛti and aparā-prakṛti. Parā-prakṛti is nirguṇa caitanyam, aparā prakṛtiḥ is saḡuṇa śariram of the Lord. And therefore Arjuna my body is my lower nature, and the Conciousness is my higher-nature.

And therefore tat brahma, mama paramaṁ dhāma; dhāma means svarūpam; prakṛti, paramaṁ dhāma, parā-prakṛti. And what was the definition of parā-prakṛti given in the 7th chapter? We said: Nirguṇa, nirvikāra, satya, cētana tatvam. And aparā-prakṛti we defined as saguṇa, savikāra, mithya, acētana tatvam. Go back and refresh your notes, if you have not got. I do not want to go into the details.

ममैवांशो जीवलोके जीवभूतः सनातनः |
मनःषष्ठानीन्द्रियाणि प्रकृतिस्थानि कर्षति || १५- ७ ||

[mamaivāṁśō jīvalōkē jīvabhūtaḥ sanātanah |
manaḥṣaṣṭhānīndriyāṇi prakṛtisthāni karṣati || 15.7 ||](#)

अंशः मम एव aṁśaḥ mama ēva a part of Myself alone सनातनः जीवभूतः sanātanah jīvabhūtaḥ is in the form of the eternal jīva जीवलोके jīvalōkē in the world of beings, कर्षति karṣati He pulls, इन्द्रियाणि indriyāṇi the (five) sense organs मनः षष्ठानि manaḥ ṣaṣṭhāni with the mind as the sixth प्रकृतिस्थानि prakṛtisthāni which reside in the body

7. A part of Myself alone is in the form of the eternal jīva in the world of beings. He pulls the (five) sense organs, with the mind as the sixth, which reside in the body.

So with the previous verse, that particular topic is over. The topic of the mōkṣa upāyaḥ. The methods or disciplines to be followed for attaining mōkṣa, which is the four-fold disciplines and by following that one will attain mōkṣa which is nothing working into Brahman. In the second-chapter, it was called, Brahma nirvāṇam. Nirvāṇam means merger. So with that, the first part of the 15th chapter is over.

Now from the 7th verse onwards, Kṛṣṇa is entering into another very important topic and that topic is Brahman alone is in the form of the whole universe. Brahman alone is in the form of whole universe, which means there is no universe at all, other than Brahman. Just as saying there are no ornaments other than the gold; ornaments are nothing but different names that we use, but they are not substances. There is no substance called bangle. Substance is gold alone. There is no substance called chair; the chair is nothing but wood alone. Similarly there is no substance called world. Brahman alone is known by the name world. And this idea has been hinted in the fourth chapter of the Gīta. In the well-known verse,

ब्रह्मार्पणं ब्रह्म हविर्ब्रह्माग्नौ ब्रह्मणा हुतम् ।
ब्रह्मैव तेन गन्तव्यं ब्रह्मकर्मसमाधिना ॥ ४.२४ ॥

[Brahmārpaṇam brahma havirbrahmāgnau brahmaṇā hutam |
brahmaiva tēna gantavyam brahma karma samādhinā || 4.24 ||](#)

And if we chant this verse, you will get hungry, because it is used for eating!!!. But the idea, the content of this slōka is: Brahman alone is in the form of everything.

And to convey this idea, Lord Kṛṣṇa divides the entire world into two parts; and one part is the jīva rūpa; jīvas; so the conscious experiencers known as jīvaḥ, and the second part is the inert objects of experience, called jagat. So universe is nothing but jīva plus jagat. The experiencer plus the experienced; if you remember the Māṇḍukya; the pramāta and the pramēyam; the jīva and jagat. And Kṛṣṇa wants to say that one Brahman alone is appearing in the form of jīva also and that the same Brahman is in the form of jagat also, the inert world also.

And for this purpose, we should know what is the definition of jīvaḥ. What is the definition of jīvaḥ? For this purpose, you should remember Tatva Bōdha; which we have seen long before. And Kṛṣṇa defines jīva as all pervading brahma caitanyam, all pervading consciousness, which is reflected or manifest in our body mind reflecting medium. In Sānskrīt, we call caitanya prathibhimbam, jīvaḥ. The original all pervading Consciousness is called Brahman or paramātma. In Tatva Bōdha, we used the expression, OC. OC means original consciousness. And that original consciousness when it is expressing through the body, expressing through the mind that reflected or manifest consciousness is called RC; the reflected consciousness. And this body-mind-matter medium, is called the RC, the reflecting medium. So OC, RC and RM.

And to understand this, I will give you an example, which also we have seen before; I am reminding you of that example. Imagine during the daytime there is the original sun in the sky. We will call it OS. Original sun. OC and OS. And imagine there is a room down below or a hall down below, and because there is roof and also the doors are closed, the room is dark within. There is no light. And original sunlight is not able to illumine the light because there is a roof obstructing the sun light. And you take a mirror. A darpanaḥ, a reflecting mirror and you open one of the windows of the room, and you keep the mirror in a particular angle outside, 45 degrees you keep outside. You know that the mirror does not have a light of its own. Therefore it is not an illuminating principle, it is not a luminous principle at all. But when you keep the mirror down below, the original sunlight gets reflected in the mirror. And now the mirror has got RS; the Reflected sunlight. And what is the mirror? The mirror is the reflecting medium. Therefore OS, RS, RM. RM is common to both and this RM which is not luminous by itself has now become luminous because of what? The reflecting sunlight. And not only the mirror has become bright, it is capable of illumining the dark room.

Now I ask you a question; what is illumining the dark room; the mirror, or the original sunlight? What is illumining the dark room, the mirror or the original sunlight? Suppose you say, original sunlight is illumining; not the mirror, then I will ask you to remove the mirror and illumine the room and you will find that once the mirror is removed, the hall gets dark. It cannot be illumined.

Suppose another person says, the mirror alone is illumining, original sunlight is not required. Then I will ask you in the night you try. So it is the mirror alone nor the original sunlight alone; but you require the combination of both. You require the combination of both to illumine the dark room.

Now in this combination you can focus on any one of them. You can give importance to any one of them; because both are equally important. In a particular context, you can highlight; like father and mother; who is important for the child to be born; both are required. But at some time, the mother takes the credit; at some time the father takes the credit. He tells your son. Is this not Akramam? As though he does not have a contribution to the tragedy, for whatever event it is. Contribution of both. Therefore, you can focus on any one of them.

Based on this, we have got two ways of presentation. One way is I say the mirror illumines the dark room; blessed by the original sun; So in this the importance is given to the mirror, when the mirror illumines the dark room; but I add quietly blessed by the original sun. But who is the illuminator? The mirror illumines. In this the importance is given to the mirror.

Or I can present in a different language also; the Sun alone illumines the dark room; not directly but through the mirror. The sun alone illumines the dark room, not directly; but through the mirror and therefore the credit of illumination goes to ultimately the sun alone.

In the same way, our body mind complex is like the mirror. The original consciousness is Brahman, the reflected consciousness is Jīva. The body-mind complex is RM; the reflecting medium, it does not have sentiency of its own; body is inert matter, mind is inert matter. Just as the mirror by itself non-luminous and this body-mind-complex has got the reflected consciousness, we call the Jīva, and the reflected consciousness is possible because of what? The original consciousness called Brahman. And therefore we say: Brahman alone is available in the body-mind complex as the jīva. OC-Brahman alone is present in the body-mind-complex as the RC-jīva and as the jīva, Brahman alone illumines or experiences the dark room. What is the dark room? The entire world is comparable to dark room.

And suppose you remove the mirror; what happens? Original sunlight will be there; but since there would not be reflection, mirror is removed; the room will become darker.

Similarly, during sleep, what happens? The mind-mirror is removed, and therefore the reflected consciousness is not available and therefore the world becomes what? Dark, means during sleep, there is total darkness. Why there is darkness? Not because Brahman is not there; the original consciousness is, but the reflecting medium the mind has resolved, therefore the world is not illumined.

And therefore in these verses, from the 7th up to the 11th, Kṛṣṇa says Brahman the OC alone is in the form of jīva, RC, Brahman the original consciousness alone is in the form of Jīva, the Reflected consciousness.

Now look at the slōkā. Mama ēva amśaḥ, amśaḥ means reflection; pratibimbhaḥ, ābhasaḥ, mama means mine; mine means Brahman's and what is Brahman? The original consciousness OC. Therefore mama amśaḥ means the reflection of OC and what is the reflection of OC? RC, mamaiva amśaḥ, jīva bhutaḥ, is in the form of the jīvas and the original sunlight is how many? Ēkaḥ, whereas reflected sunlight would be how many? It can be any number. You can have several mirrors. If there are ten mirrors, there would be ten reflections. Similarly, as many bodies are there, so many RCs will be there. Thus OC is one; RCs are many. Paramātmā is one, jīvātmās are many.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa says: Jīvalōkē, in the world of Jīvās, I, the Brahman alone am in the form of reflection and this reflected-consciousness alone makes the body-mind complex alive and sentient. And once the RC is not there; the body will become dead matter. So this is the description, which is going to come, the details we will see in the next class.

Hari Om

193 Chapter 15, Verses 07-08

ॐ

In the first 6 verses of the 15th chapter, we saw the first part of the vēdāntic-teaching. Kṛṣṇa described the nature of saṁsāra, by comparing it to the aśvatta tree and then He talked about the four important disciplines, by following which, a person will get out of saṁsāra, the disciplines being, vairāgyam, śaraṇāgathi, satguṇaḥ, and vēdānta vicāraḥ.

And by following these four, a person attains freedom from saṁsāra, which is otherwise called attainment of mōkṣa. Attainment of mōkṣa is nothing but attainment of Brahman, which is the very substratum of the saṁsāra tree and Kṛṣṇa concluded that discussion by defining the nature of Brahman through a very important verse, na tadbhāsayatē sūryō, which is paraphrasing the very important upaniṣad mantra, na tatra sūryō bhāti na candratāraḥ.

And through this verse, Kṛṣṇa defined Brahman as the consciousness principle, which objectifies everything but itself cannot be objectified through any instrument. And then finally Kṛṣṇa added a note pointing out that this consciousness is my higher-nature. I-the-Lord have got two natures or features; which was said in the seventh chapter, as aparā and parā-prakṛti, the lower and the higher-nature; the lower nature is the saṅuṇa Īśvara, and the higher-nature is the nirguṇa Īśvara, which is the consciousness. And therefore, indirectly Kṛṣṇa tells: Hey Arjuna! Do not look upon me as a physical body; born as the other day as son of Dēvaki and disappearing on another day; this visible personality of mine is only my inferior lower material nature and my real higher-nature is the Nirguṇa caitanyam which is never subject to birth or death, or even travel. That is why, we use the word, Kṛṣṇa paramātma, and that Kṛṣṇa, the paramātma; the caitanya svarūpam, cannot travel from one place to another, because that Lord is all-pervading. And therefore Kṛṣṇa hereafter talks about himself as Nirguṇa Brahma caitanyam.

This we have to remember because Kṛṣṇa uses the word I, in three different meanings, which has confused many students of the Gītā. Kṛṣṇa is very very loose in using the first person singular. In certain context he uses the word I as the physical Kṛṣṇa; having a date of birth and a date of death, and born as a contemporary of Arjuna and a friend of Arjuna. Sakēti matva; bhaktōsi ma saha chēti rahasyam hē tat uttamam; Arjuna you are my friend. When Kṛṣṇa addresses Arjuna as his friend, Kṛṣṇa is taking himself to be a personal God, Dēvaki paramānandam, Vasudēva sutam Kṛṣṇam. So thus the word 'I' sometimes means a ēkarūpa Īśvaraḥ.

And there are other times when Kṛṣṇa uses the word I; not as a personal localised God, but as the all-pervading virāt svarūpam. Not with one form; with anēkarūpam Īśvara; and where do we get such an expression. You can easily find out, the entire 11th chapter, Kṛṣṇa uses the word-I not as Mr. Kṛṣṇa but as the total universe. Anēkabāhūdaravaktranētram paśyāmi tvāṃ sarvatō'nantarūpam; not ēkarūpa, anēkarūpam.

And there are certain rare occasions, where Kṛṣṇa uses the word I, not to represent ēkarūpam Īśvara, not to represent anēkarūpam, but arūpa, Nirguṇa caitanyam. And where does Kṛṣṇa use I, the first person singular; in the 9th chapter, in the 7th chapter:

अव्यक्तं व्यक्तिमापन्नं मन्यन्ते मामबुद्धयः |
परं भावमजानन्तो ममाव्ययमनुत्तमम् || ७- २४ ||

[Avyaktam vyaktimāpannam manyantē māmabuddhayaḥ |
param bhāvamajānantō mamāvayamanuttamam || 7.24 ||](#)

People think I am human being; people think I was born, because people do not know my formless higher-nature. Maya tata idam sarvam, jagat avyaktha murthina. I have got an invisible nature, which pervades all over. So in such context, the word Aham means arūpa Īśvaraḥ.

So what are the three; ēkarūpa Kṛṣṇaḥ, Īśvaraḥ, anēkarūpa, virat-Īśvara, arūpa-nirguṇa Brahma-caitanyam.

Therefore whenever Kṛṣṇa says, aham, maya, mama, we have to enquire and find out is it in meaning No.1, 2 or three.

And many people get confused, and they take arūpa in the place of anēkarūpa, and anēkarūpa in the place of ēkarūpa, etc. sarvadharmān parityajya māmēkaṁ śaraṇaṁ vraja. Surrender to me alone. Therefore, which Me? ēkarūpa, anēkarūpa or arūpa? In the 18th chapter it is going to come. I should not open the suspense. If you ask a Kṛṣṇa consciousness fellow, such a fanatic Kṛṣṇa bhaktha, māmēkaṁ śaraṇaṁ vraja, Kṛṣṇa alone you should worship, not Rāma, not Ganeśa; never Śiva; why these people have a dvēsaḥ towards Śiva; only if you surrender to Kṛṣṇa, you have mōkṣam.

So Śankarācārya writes a very elaborate commentary, we will see that later, Śankarācārya says their mām, neither means ēkarūpa, nor an ēkarūpa, but arūpa, nirguṇam brahma alone can be the meaning there. How? It will be seen there. I will not tell now. It is under suspense.

Here in the following portions when Kṛṣṇa says tat dāmam paramam mama, there mama refers to my own nirguṇa svarūpam. Having said this much in the first six verses from the seventh verse onwards, Kṛṣṇa is entering into the next topic.

The next topic is: I, the Nirguṇam Brahma alone, of course, with the help of Māya, I alone appear as both the jīva as well as the jagat. The conscious experiencer in the world, and the experienced object; both of them are my own manifestation. Just as in dream, we divide ourselves into two; both the dream-world and the dream-experiencer, and we interact. Just as I bifurcate myself in dream, similarly, I the Lord alone divide myself into bhōkthā and bōgyam. So Aham ēva jīva rūpēṇa bhaviṣyāmi; aham ēva jagat rūpēṇa abibhavāmi. And therefore, I alone am everything. This is called sarva Īśvara bhāvaḥ. Sarva brahma bhāvaḥ. That is the topic.

And there from the 7th verse up to the 11th verse, Kṛṣṇa says that I am in the form of jīva; jīva means the individual experiencers in the world and from the 12th verse onwards, yadā''dityagataṁ tējō onwards up to 15th verse Kṛṣṇa says, I alone am in the form of universe also. And therefore I am all. I am everything. I am not a சின்ன ஆள்; I am பெரும் ஆள்; சேர்த்தி படிச்சா; பெருமாள். (chinna all. I am perum all, reading together, perumal). So this is the topic now.

So there in the 7th verse, I introduced how Bhagavān, the consciousness alone is in the form of every jīva. And how are we to understand? Every jīva, individual, has got primarily two bodies; the physical body and the subtle body. The causal body is not relevant at this time. Therefore, we will ignore that now; every individual consists of the physical body and the subtle body, we can take as the mind. And according to the śāstra, the physical body is also inert, because made up of matter, and mind is also inert, because it is also made up of matter. We have seen in Tatva Bōdha, that mind is also made up of pañca sūkṣma bhūthani.

अपञ्चीकृतपञ्चमहाभूतैः कृतं सत्कर्मजन्यं manaścaikā buddhiścaikā

ēvaṁ saptadaśākalābhiḥ saha yattiṣṭhati tatsūkṣmaśarīram |

Where did we see this? In Tatva Bodha. I do not want to go to the details. The idea is that the mind is made of subtle matter or energy, therefore body is also inert, intrinsically, the mind is also inert, intrinsically. But now we find the body and mind are sentient. We are experiencing the sentiency of the body and mind. The scriptures point out that this sentiency or life in the body-mind complex is not natural to the body mind, but it is borrowed from Brahma caitanyam.

The original all-pervading consciousness when it pervades the mind, the mind becomes a live-mind. By itself it is dead matter; but pervaded by the consciousness, the mind becomes live. And that consciousness which pervades the mind is called pratibhimba caitanyam, or ābhāsa caitanyam. In the last class, I used the word, RC, the reflected consciousness. So when the original consciousness pervades the individual mind; the mind becomes live. And what does the mind do? It has borrowed life from Brahman, and out of the borrowed consciousness, the mind lends consciousness to the physical body. கடனில் இருந்து கடன்; Kadanil irundu kadan; because mind itself has borrowed from OC.

And from that borrowed consciousness, mind lends consciousness to the body, and therefore now the body is also alive. Now the body is alive, because of what, the mind. The mind is sentient because of what? The OC. At the time of death, what happens? At the time of death, the mind quits the body. You should not say consciousness quits; poor consciousness cannot quit because, it is all pervading; where can it go? எங்கே போகும்? Consciousness does not quit; whereas the mind quits, and therefore what happens? The mind is no more available to lend consciousness to the body.

Why can't the original consciousness lend consciousness to the body, if you ask; OC cannot directly lend to the body. If OC, the original all-pervading-consciousness can lend consciousness to the body, what will be the consequence? Can you imagine what will be the consequences? If OC can lend consciousness to the body, body will be eternally sentient. சாகவே மாட்டோம். We will never die. You may say it is good. Already we have got 6 billion people and imagine nobody dies. So therefore for the good of the world, and for the good for the others, we all should successful die, which means the mind should quit the body; and thereafter the body will become insentient; and it will decay and it will cause problem; therefore, people will dispose it off.

So therefore, the consciousness makes the mind sentient; the mind makes the body sentient. Therefore whenever I see a live body, I should remember that behind the live body, there is a live mind; even though I do not see the mind. That is why you can escape, you can think of something else also, because I do not see your mind and I do not know whether you are 'here'. I do not see your mind, whether you are listening to me or not. It is my great optimism.

But how do I know that there is a mind? Because, thank God, you are alive. Therefore every activity of the body is the proof to the presence of the mind; live-mind; and the presence of the live-mind is the proof for the original consciousness. Because without the original consciousness, lending the consciousness, mind will not be sentient. Therefore body helps me recognise the mind; mind helps me recognise the original Consciousness, that is called God.

Therefore Kṛṣṇa says, every activity of a live person is a proof for the existence of the original consciousness, called God. Suppose somebody asks the question: Is there electricity in this hall; power இருக்கா? இல்லையா? irukka, illaya? How do you know? You cannot perceive because electricity is invisible. So if somebody asks whether there is power or not, what do I do. Look at the bulb; the bulb is called sthūla śarīram. So when I see a bright bulb, I know that the bulb does not have brightness of its own; therefore the brightness of the bulb is what? Borrowed brightness. And this brightness of the bulb is given by what? Inside the bulb, stūla śarīram, there is a sūkṣma śarīram called the filament; tungsten filament; and that filament is very bright; and that bright filament alone lends brightness to the bulb.

Now the next question is: How is the tungsten filament is bright. Does the brightness belong to the filament itself or is it borrowed? What will be your answer; the filament is not bright by itself; but now it is bright because an invisible power pervades. I do not see but I recognise because I tell other people, there is power. I do not say that there is bulb. I am seeing the bulb; I do not say I see the filament; my reply is there is power. Power means electricity. How do I recognise? Electricity enlivens the filament makes it bright and that bright filament makes the bulb bright. And sometimes the bulb is there; power is also there; but it is not burning. Why, electricity is there, bulb is there; but it is not burning. It does not burn, why? You say bulb is fused. Sūkṣma śarīram out. The filament is gone. Similarly, there is a person till yesterday, walking talking scolding; one day I see the bulb is there; the body is like a bulb (round!) and of course Consciousness is there everywhere, but no life. Why, the mind filament which borrows consciousness and lends to the body, that mind has quit this place. Because mind is not all-pervading. And therefore Kṛṣṇa says: whenever you see the activity of a living being, you remember that it is the touch of the all-pervading Consciousness called God. You do not require any special tapas to realise God. One leg standing or standing on two feet or one foot or upside down or downside up; you need not do any tapas. Kṛṣṇa says; for a mature mind, God is realizable in and through every movement. If I am able to talk, it is because of God; Śrōtrasya śrōtraṁ; manasō manō yad. Consciousness blesses the mind; the mind blesses the mouth and therefore the mouth speaks. And the consciousness blesses your mind and your mind blesses your ears and therefore you hear. That I talk that you listen is the most amply evident proof for the existence of God. And Kṛṣṇa says in spite of so much clear evidence, people ask, what is the proof for God? What should be your answer? You are asking the very question, because of God, Lord alone. This is the essence; beautiful portion. Now look at the slōka.

Kṛṣṇa says mamaiva aṁśaḥ. Mama, my, when Kṛṣṇa says my, which my, there is three, does he refer to ēka rūpa, anēka rūpa or arūpa; here it refers to arūpa nirguṇa brahma caitanyam; aṁśaḥ means reflection or prathibhimba. So my own reflection alone is formed in the inert mind of every one. Just as the electricity alone is behind every live bulb, that is why we say the wire is live wire. There also we use the word live wire. I do not see but I discern; we have to discern. If you cannot discern; instant realisation and vidēha muktischa, if we touch. Therefore, He says, mamaiva aṁśaḥ means prathibhimba. Is there; in the jīva lōke, in the world of living beings, which means in everybody mind complex. And what is the name of the reflected consciousness; Kṛṣṇa says jīvaḥ; the word jīva means prathibhimba caitanyam; or abhāsa caitanyam. Both mean the same thing; So jīva is Īśvara in reflected form. Just as the original sun reflected in the sun, we get a reflected bright sun; how many, as many mirrors are there; similarly, as many minds are there; so many reflected paramātmās are there. Each reflected paramātma is called the jīvātma. So jīva bhūtaḥ, and how long this jīva lives, sanātanaḥ. He is eternal. At the time of death also, jīva does not die; jīva quits or leaves the body, the death belongs to the physical body alone; because it does not have the blessing of the mind with RC and that mind with RC is called jīvaḥ. That jīva does not die, that jīva travels. And therefore, that jīva is eternal.

When did that jīva begin? Anādi kāla pravṛthaḥ, that is why in sankalpa, we say anādi avidya vāsanaya, not only the jīva is beginningless, the jīva will continue the journey endlessly also until liberation. And therefore jīva is called sanatana, during death jīva does not die; even during praḷayam the cosmos dissolution, jīva does not die, the mind does not die, the mind goes to dormant condition; as it happens in sleep.

In sleep what happens to our mind? Does not die; mind goes to dormant state. How do you know? It has not died; that it has gone to dormant state? Because we get up with the same worry, if it is a different worry, we can say that it is a different mind and that it has been switched. But we wake up with the same problem, indicating during suṣupthi, the mind survived, during praḷayam also the mind with reflected consciousness called the jīva will survive. Therefore sanātanaḥ.

And what does that jīva do, at the time of death; he says, at the time of death, that we have to take from the next verse; in the next verse, there is an expression yaccāpyutkrāmatīśvaraḥ verse No.8, first line, 2nd part, yaccāpyutkrāmatīśvaraḥ, that part has to be lifted from that verse, you have to bring it to this verse; yaccāpyutkrāmatī means when the jīva leaves the body; what is jīva? Reflected Consciousness.

What does that jīva do? Indriyāṇi karṣati; not only the reflected Consciousness goes away, but it drags the entire sūkṣma śārīram also along with that. And what is the sūkṣma śārīram? all the sense organs; sense organs do not mean the physical sense organ, this is called gōlakam; the physical sense organ will be there; but behind the gōlakam, the sensory perception faculty is there; that is called the indriyāni, they are taken. That is why in the dead body, physical eye will be there, but cannot see;

Ekibhavati, na paśya tītyāhuh; ēkibhavati, na jighnatītyāhuh; ēkibhavati, na rasayat ētyāhuh; ēkibhavati na vadatīt – yāhuh; ēki bhavati, na śrunōtītyāhuh; ēki bhavati na manuta ityāhuh; ēki bhavatina sprṣātīt yāhuh; ēkibhavati na vigjñānātītyāhuh.

All the physical parts will be there. In short the anatomy will be there; but the physiology will be missing; physiology, the power of acting that is sucked by the RC. So karṣati, means dragged; Not only the sense organs, mana ṣaṣṭāni, which includes the mind also. Not only the five jñānēndriyas, but also the mind behind the sense organs

And until death, where were they located? Prakṛtistāni. Prakṛti means the physical body; in this context, the word prakṛti has several meaning, but we have to carefully note, in this verse, the word prakṛti means stūla śārīram. All our sensory faculties are thank God, they are there in this physical body now, but at the time of death, they are taken. Who does that? Jīva, who is the jīva, RC. And what time? You have to take from the next verse it yaccāpyutkrāmatī, yacca utkrāmatī; when the jīva leaves the body.

Then the next incidental question which is not answered in this verse is: When will the jīva leave the body? Suddenly we get frightened. So what is the criterion for taking it out? Is it arbitrary or does God decide or does a do the family members decide? When does it happen? It is decided by karma. So we have got a set of puṇyams and pāpams to be exhausted through this medium. We have taken this specific medium called the physical body to exhaust our puṇya-pāpam. And once those puṇyams and pāpams are exhausted then this medium is left.

Then what happens? Next bunch of puṇya-pāpam is waiting in queue. You remember sañcita karma is there? Out of the old bunch; sañcita karma, another bunch gets ready and that next bunch of karma will determine what should be the type of next body. Whether it should be uttama śārīram, madhyama śārīram or adama śārīram. And that karma guides the jīva to the appropriate environment. And that is called the travel of the jīva.

Verse 15.8

शरीरम् यदवाप्नोति यच्चाप्युत्क्रामतीश्वरः ।
गृहीत्वैतानि संयाति वायुर्गन्धानिवाशयात् ॥ १५.८ ॥

Śārīram yadavāpnōti yaccāpyutkrāmatīśvaraḥ |
grhītvaitāni saṁyāti vāyurgandhānivāśayāt || 15.8 ||

ईश्वरः Īśvaraḥ the Lord (pulls the sense organs), यद् उत्क्रामति yad utkrāmatī when He leaves the body यत् च अपि yat ca api when अवाप्नोति avāpnōti He acquires शरीरम् śārīram another body, संयाति saṁyāti He moves, गृहीत्वा एतानि grhītvā ētāni with these (organs), इव वायुः iva vāyuḥ just as the wind (moves with), गन्धान् gandhān the fragrance आशयात् āśayāt from one place (to another).

8. The Lord (pulls the sense organs) when He leaves the body. When He acquires another body, He moves with these (organs) just as the wind (moves with) the fragrance, from one place to (another).

Yaccāpyutkrāmatī, we have seen already. Yaccā, means yada cha, utkrāmatī, the jīva leaves the body, and how do you complete the sentence, you go back to the previous slōka and complete, when the jīva leaves the body, it carries the sense organs and the mind, so the Sānskrīt anvaya would be: Yada jīvaḥ utkrāmati, tada, prakṛtistāni manasatāni indriyāṇi karṣati.

Now the next question is: What will the jīva do next? We are all eager to know. Whenever death occurs in the neighborhood or in our own family, you suddenly begin to think of, what happened to that person? Where will that person go; when will he go; how will he go; what will happen? etc.

Kṛṣṇa answers that question. Śarīram avāpnōti Īśvaraḥ, Īśvaraḥ means this jīva who is the Lord of the body; jīva itself is called here Īśvaraḥ, we have to carefully note. Why is jīva called Īśvaraḥ? Because of two reasons: first reason is Īśvaraḥ alone is in the form of jīva when he is reflected; after all jīva is what? Reflected version. The problem is that there is some distortion in the reflection; that is the only thing; but the jīva is Īśvara reflected in the mind. Therefore, jīva is called Īśvara and the second reason is Īśvara means the master, the Lord and jīva is called Īśvara the master, because jīva is the Lord of the individual body, because only his presence makes the body alive; and his absence makes the body dead and therefore Īśvaraḥ means Śarīrasya Swami. And this Swami jīvaḥ, after leaving this body, what does he do?

Śarīram avāpnōti; he takes another body, as I said uttama, madhyama, or adhama; there is no rule that human being will take only human birth; there is no rule; human being can become a dēva, one of the Gods also; human being can become another human being; or even inferior janmās are possible. Because there are some other philosophers who say that evolution is uniformly from lower to higher only; matsya, kūrma, varāha. They take it as the Darwin's theory of evolution; first we were monkeys (Now also doubtful), and then man குரங்கிலிருந்து பிறந்தவன் மனிதன். We think from lower forms of life, we uniformly go to higher form, but vēda does not accept that; the journey need not be always upwards, that is why we give the example of the snake and ladder. You may take a ladder. So a human being may take a lower janma also.

Then the next question is; Who determines? Is it Bhagavān? We want to put the blame on someone. Śāstras says do not blame anyone. It is totally dependent on karma, and karma is dependent on kartā, and you are the kartā and therefore you alone determine your next janma.

And in the 6th chapter, Kṛṣṇa gives a great consolation for us; all the Gītā students will never take lower janma. So be regular in the class; that is better. So all the Gītā students, of course, they will get liberation; no janma at all, but if at all they do not get liberation, the next janma will be invariably manuṣya janma only.

Not my promise, Kṛṣṇa's promise, I do not know whether you will believe me or not, Kṛṣṇa says: Nahi kalyanakṛt kascit durgathim tata gachhati. And you will start attending Gīta classes from younger age itself. Now also you are young, but I mean from still younger age; and therefore the next body is determined by puṇya pāpa karma. And the śārīram avapnōti. When the jīva takes another body, what does he do? He has taken all the indriyas, sense organs from the previous body and all those sense organs, He will place in the respective physical plane; eye, the sense organs must be placed, eye the sense organs must be placed in the cakṣur gōlakam, cakṣur indriyam must go to cakṣur gōlakam, just as when we shift the house, we would have taken the kitchen material, study room material, drawing hall material, all of them you pack in a huge package, and after opening the package, what do you do? bathroom, that goes to bathroom, similarly, jñānēndriya are placed in that gōlakams, karmēndriyas are placed in the karmēndriya gōlakas; you have opened the package and set the house and start the transactions in the new transferred place. First you look at the neighbor; who is your neighbor, etc. So rebirth is nothing but a transfer.

Therefore you need not feel bad about it. Therefore Kṛṣṇa says; gṛhītvaitāni samyāti; ētāni means what all the sense organs and mind; the jīva carries along with it; samyāti, travels. And he gives an example, vāyuḥ gandhān iva āśayāt. Vāyuḥ means the wind or the breeze; which is compared to the jīvaḥ; and imagine there is a flower; the flower is compared to the physical body; because it is visible; and the flower has got the fragrance, the fragrance is compared to the sūkṣma śārīram, invisible mind. So the invisible vāyu, wind, carries the invisible fragrance from the visible flower and travels. And how do you know vāyu carries the fragrance. You can feel the smell. Therefore, just as the invisible vāyu carries the invisible fragrance; similarly the invisible jīva carries the invisible mind from the physical body. Āśayāt, means flower, gandha, means fragrance, vāyuḥ, the wind.

And the next question they will ask it, how long does it take to take the next body (so that they can stop the sṛāddam), the people are interested in stopping the sṛāddam in one way or the other; how long it will take; it all will depend upon the fructification of the next karma, it can be one day; one year, or one lakh years, it will vary from individual to individual. Therefore there is no regular rule and secondly, once the jīva quits this body, another important fact we should remember is, this particular time and space will become irrelevant for the jīva which has quit this body. You should remember that this time and space are relevant only when you function through this body; that shows how time and space are highly relative. That is why the moment you withdraw from this body, and enter the dream body, for your dream experiences, you have a different time, space field. So if this is true for your dream experiences, extend it to the other thirteen lōkās.

Each lōkā is a distinctive like your dream world, which means the present time and space are meaningless. Therefore how can you measure the duration of jīva's travel based on our present time and space? And what is 100 years for us, may be one year or one day; Therefore, we cannot say and that is why śāstra says; when you are doing sṛāddam, do for three generations; we simply obey them; it is not based on when the jīva takes rebirth.

So vāyu gandhān āśayāt iva, Īśvara ētāni gṛhītvā samyāti. And what Kṛṣṇa wants us to remember is we should not forget our primary topic.

What Kṛṣṇa wants to say is: the sentiency of the body is the proof for the presence of the mind, and the presence of the live-mind is the proof for the existence of god, and therefore, life is the proof for the presence of God and the death is a bigger proof for the presence of the Lord; because when the body becomes dead body. What has happened? The Īśvara's blessing in the form of reflected consciousness is withdrawn. When Īśvara is there in this body, I am alive, when Īśvara has quit this body, Īśvara means you should understand, Īśvara in the form of cidabhāsa, has quit the body, the body becomes dead. So life is the proof for the Lord, death is the proof for the Lord and in the next verse he will say that between life and death, whatever mischief/activities you undertake, they are also the proof for the presence of the Lord. How can you miss that Lord? It is like asking what is the proof that there is electricity? Sitting under the fan, sitting in a well light, what is the proof for electricity; that he is able to see, that he is able to feel the breeze of the fan, is the proof for the invisible electricity.

194 Chapter 15, Verses 08-12

ॐ

In the first six verses of the 15th chapter, Lord Kṛṣṇa talked about saṁsāra and also the means of crossing the ocean of saṁsāra; otherwise called mōkṣa and He defined mōkṣa as merging into Brahman; which happens to be the very root and base of the creation. Brahma aikya prāp̥thi; otherwise in the second-chapter, Brahma nirvāṇam, merger into Brahman as mōkṣa.

And incidentally, we should merger into Brahman is not physical event, it is only dropping the notion, that I, the Jīvātman, am away from the Brahman. Dropping the notion, which is purely a cognitive or intellectual event, that is called mōkṣa, that is why in vēdānta, jñānam and mōkṣa are treated synonymously, because Mōkṣa is dropping the notion or wrong notion and any wrong notion is removed by right notion (we cannot say that) by right knowledge.

And Kṛṣṇa gave the definition of Brahman in the 6th important verse, which is based on the well-known upaniṣadic mantra, na tatra sūryō bhāti na candratāraḥ, and it was presented here as na tadbhāsayatē sūryō..., etc. which essentially means that Brahman is the all-pervading consciousness. Caitanya svarūpam Brahman, which can objectify everything but which itself can never be objectified by any means. Unobjectifiable subject, unobserverable observer; caitanya svarūpam brahma.

And having defined Brahman in the sixth verse, from the seventh verse onwards, Krishnan introduced two important topics to show that Brahman alone appears in the form of everything. Just as God alone appears as varieties of ornaments, wood alone appears as different kinds of furniture or waker alone appears in the form of the dream universe. Similarly Brahman alone is in the form of the universe. This is called sarvātmakatvam. Sarvātmakatvam means Brahman being everything.

And for the sake of convenience, the entire universe is divided into two parts; one is the cētana Jīvas, the sentient living beings, and the other acētana prapañcaḥ, the insentient objects. So the creation is cētanam plus acētanam, the sentient Jīva plus the insentient jagat. And in these verses Kṛṣṇa points out Brahman alone appears in the form of jīva also; Brahman alone appears in the form of jagat also. Jīvaḥ api brahmaiva, jagat api brahmaiva, sarvam brahma mayam jagat; which is beautifully revealed in all the upaniṣads, especially in the well-known Muṇḍaka upaniṣad Mantra,

ब्रह्मैवेदममृतं पुरस्ताद् ब्रह्म पश्चाद् ब्रह्म दक्षिणतश्चोत्तरेण । अधश्चोर्ध्वं च प्रसृतं ब्रह्मैवेदं विश्वमिदं वरिष्ठम् ॥ 2. II.11 ॥

brahmaivēdamamṛtaṁ purastād brahma paścād brahma dakṣiṇataścōttarēṇa | adhaścōrdhvaṁ ca prasṛtaṁ brahmaivēdaṁ viśvamiḍaṁ variṣṭhaṁ ॥ 2. II.11 ॥

Whether you experience a sentient living and you are experiencing an insentient object, everything is Brahman alone and of this from verse No.7 up to 11, Kṛṣṇa says Brahman alone is in the form of Jīva. So paramātmā brahmaiva Jīvarupēna sarvatra sarvam anubhavathi. This is from verse No.7 to 11.

Then from verse no.12 to 15, Kṛṣṇa says Brahman alone is in the form of the inert universe also. Brahmaiva jagat rūpēna api sarvaiḥ anubhuyatē. Of this we are now seeing the first part. Brahman alone is in the form of Jīva. And in this particular portion, as I said in the last class, Kṛṣṇa is referring to himself as Brahman and therefore the Brahman is replaced by the word I, in the first person singular; therefore whenever we hear the word aham, or I, we should replace it by the word Brahman. Therefore Kṛṣṇa said,

ममैवांशो ज्जीवभूतः सनातनः ।
मनःषष्ठानीन्द्रियाणि कृतिस्थानि कर्षति ॥ १५.७ ॥

mamaivāṁśō jīvalōkē jīvabhūtaḥ sanātanah |
manaḥṣaṣṭhānīndriyāṇi prakṛtisthāni karṣati || 15.7 ||

शरीरम् यदवाप्नोति यच्चाप्युत्क्रामतीश्वरः ।
गृहीत्वैतानि संयाति वायुर्गन्धानिवाशयात् ॥ 15. ८ ॥

śarīraṁ yadavāpnōti yaccāpyutkrāmatisvarah |
grhītvaitāni saṁyāti vāyurgandhānivāśayāt || 15.8 ||
