I, the original all-pervading Consciousness, alone am present in every living being as the reflected consciousness; the cidabhāsa caitanyam obtaining in the mind. And this cidabhāsa alone makes the very body sentient and alive. Just as the pervading electricity alone makes the filament bright and the brightness of the filament only makes the light bright, appreciating the light, my mind has to appreciate the invisible electricity which is expressing as the light in the bulb; as the motion in the fan, as the magnifying power in the mike, as the heat in the ironing machine. So different expressions I experience, but they are all what? The blessings of the one invisible electricity. Similarly, all our physical bodies are like bulbs, very fragile; and our subtle body, the sūkṣma śarīraṁ is like the filament; and ātma or Brahman is like the electricity; Brahman is electricity, do not say that - Brahman is comparable to electricity. Bulb is visible, filament is visible, and electricity is invisible. Similarly body is visible, mind is partially visible, whereas Consciousness is invisible. But the presence of electricity can be discerned through the functions of the bulb, fan, mike, radio, television, etc. Similarly, if all of us are alive and sentient, as Taittiriya upaniṣad says:; kō hyēvānyātkaḥ prāṇyāt | yadēṣa ākāśa ānandō na syāt |

If our breath is going out and coming in; all these are because of the cidabhāsa obtaining within and cidabhāsa itself is possible because of the original chit. And therefore Kṛṣṇa says every function of every organ reveals the presence of Brahman. And this is said beautifully in Kēnōpaniṣad, śrōtrasya śrōtraṁ manasō manō yad vācō ha vācaṁ sa u prāṇasya prāṇaḥ. Praṇā is prāṇā because of the presence of consciousness. Eye is an eye because of the presence of consciousness. Ear is ear because of it. And this cidabhāsa alone leaves the physical body at the time of death; after which alone the body which is so sacred, which is so divine, which is very much decorated bathed and shampooed and painted and lipsticked and all those things we do, because it is alive; but the moment that cidabhāsa quits; cit quits (be careful) the moment reflected consciousness leaves along with the reflecting medium; what is the reflecting medium? The mind is the reflecting medium, the mind leaves the body, the cidabhāsa leaves the body. The sacred body has become an impure corpse. Śankarācārya says bhāryā bibhyati tasminkāyē.

यावत्पवनो निवसति देहे
तावत्पृच्छति कुशलं गेहे |
गतवति वायौ देहापाये
भार्या बिभ्यति तस्मिन्काये || ६ ||

yāvatpavanō nivasati dēhē
tāvatpṛcchati kuśalam gēhē |
gatavati vāyau dēhāpāyē
bhāryā bibhyati tasminkāyē ||6||

It has become aśoucham and the sooner it is disposed the better it is. What makes the difference between the dead body and live body? The scientists, the doctors; can only say that the functions have stopped but they can never say what was responsible for this function and what has left the body, they do not know. They cannot understand what is life; they cannot understand what is death. All others they know. What all others? What others, when there is only two. When the cidabhāsa leaves, it takes the all the pañca jñānēndriyāṇi, pañca karmēndriyāṇi, and goes to another body, and starts its new business in a small shop. And that is said beautifully, śārīraṃ yadavāpnōti yaccāpyutkrāmatīśvaraḥ.

This cidabhāsa, the Jīva is called Īśvara. Here the word Īśvara, the Jīva which is the Lord of the body. And when this Jīva leaves this body, and śārīraṃ avāpnōti, takes another body; change of residence; only that; change of residence, for which we make such a big fuss. And the rent is karma. Puṇyapāpam prārabhdā is the rent, the local dollars you cannot pay. Puṇyapāpam prārabhdā, is the rent, when that is gone; it goes to another body; how does it go? Along with a huge lorry of all the things. And he gave the example, vāyurgandhānivāśayāt. Just as the invisible wind carries the fragrance from the visible flower; the invisible cidabhāsa carries the fragrance of life.

What is the fragrance of life? Not powder and snow. The fragrance of body, is the very life, carries the visible body and goes to another set up. What does it do there? Again start the old business of LKG, UKG, college, get married, get children, get grandchildren, then what? Pop off; then what; and again go to another place, it will go on like that.

श्रोत्रम् चक्षुः स्पर्शनं च रसनं घ्राणमेव च ।
अधिष्ठाय मनश्चायं विषयानुपसेवते ॥ १५.९ ॥

Śrōtraṃ cakṣuḥ sparśanaṃ ca ranaṃ ghrāṇamēva ca |
adhiṣṭhāya manaścāyaṃ viṣayānupasēvatē || 15.9 ||

अधिष्ठाय adhiṣṭāya resorting to श्रोत्रम् śrōtram the ear चक्षुः cakṣuḥ the eye स्पर्शनम् sparśanam skin रसनं च rasanam ca the tongue, एव च घ्राणम् ēva ca ghrāṇam and the nose च मनः ca manaḥ as well as the mind अयम् उपसेवते ayam upasēvatē he experiences विषयान् viṣayān the sense-objects

9. Resorting to the ear, the eye, the skin, the tongue, and the nose as well as the mind, He experiences the sense-objects.

So this invisible cidabhāsa, the reflected consciousness carries the entire sūkṣma śarīraṃ and sūkṣma śarīraṃ includes all the organs, pañca jñānēndriyāṇi, pañca karmēndriyāṇi pañca prānaḥ, manāḥ, buddhi; all the sense organs it carries. Sense organs means not the eye ball. It does not carry the eye ball; but behind the eye ball, the perceptive power is there; which is carried the sense organ, that is taken.

When a new body comes, and there also only if the next body is a human body, where all the five sense organs can be used, if it is a tree body, the tree does not have five sense organs; so the tree has got only the skin part only; and the other four sense organs are in the tree, but they do not physical part for utilisation. So therefore this sūkṣma śarīraṃ of the tree has got all the sense organs but they do not have the physical medium for utilisation.

Here Kṛṣṇa assumes, the Jīva goes to another human body and in that human body, what does it do? The cakṣur indriyam is placed in the cakṣur gōlakam; the srōthram indriyam, the invisible part, is placed on the srōthra gōlakam, which is called the physical part; indriyam is the invisible part, gōlakam is the visible part. Similarly, the srōthra, tvak, cakṣu, rasana, all of them are placed in the respective slots. That is said here. Srōthram, ear, cakṣu, the eye, sparśanam, the skin, invisible organ of touch, rasanam, the invisible organ of taste, grāhnam, the organ of smell, all of them are placed in the respective gōlakas and also adhiṣṭāya manaḥ ca. All the sense organs have to be backed by the mind and therefore the mind also must be located appropriately and according to the śāstra, hṛdyam is the location of the mind. Not the brain. According to śāstra, hṛdyam is the gōlakam, for the indriyam called mind. Which hṛdyam? The physical heart only. The physical heart is the gōlakam, because gōlakam should be visible or invisible? Gōlakam must be the tangible part of the body, the tangible physical heart is the gōlakam; mind is the indriyam; which is located there.

Ādhiṣṭāya; adhiṣṭāya means resorting to all these six organs, pañca jñānēndriyāṇi and plus one anthakaraṇam, resorting to all of them. What does the Jīva do? Start experiencing the new environment. If the parents are wonderful parents, the child would have a gala time. If the parents are terrible, the child would have only misery; poor innocent child, harsh the experiences right from the birth itself and what determines the type of experience. It is not child's freewill, child was not consulted as to who should the parents; spouse can be chosen by svayamvaram; parents cannot be chosen, you are already born with parents. Therefore the innocent child's life is determined by what? Determined by God? No. God cannot determine, it is determined by the pūrva janma karma. If it is puṇya karma; wonderful mom, wonderful dad, wonderful siblings, wonderful neighbour, wonderful place; if karma's are not good, we are hearing lot of child abuse and all, and child cannot even protest. Now only some methods are suggested; child has to silently suffer. All because of what; purva janma puṇya and pāpa.

Depending on that viṣayān upasēvatē; the child experiences varieties of sense objects; some children are born with golden, some with silver spoons, some with eversilver spoon, some with aluminum, some with plastic, some with no spoon; all determined by karma. Viṣayān upasēvathē. And remember all these are possible; the experience of pleasures or pain; both are possible because of the cidabhāsa alone. A dead body cannot experience pleasure; nor can it experience pain. Therefore experience reveals the presence of life which is cidabhāsa. Which reveals the presence of Brahman, which is the chit, the all-pervading consciousness.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa says: every moment of life reveals Brahman, for a discerning mind. Every moment of life reveals Brahman. Just as every letter you read in your book, reveals the presence of what? The light all over. The presence of light is not revealed at a particular moment, every letter you read is because of the presence of light. Similarly every word I speak and every word you listen is because of Brahman. And a person asks for the proof of Brahman. What to say? Like some children. So the mother would have asked. In our house, power is not there; please go to the neighbour's house and ask whether power is there or not. And the child is an obedient child; the child enters and sees the fan is on; the light is there; TV is running; all these are; mother asked me to check up with you whether there is current in your house. A child can do that. If a grown up person asks, you will laugh. Similarly an immature person can ask for a proof of God; but for a mature person, the very question is a meaningless ridiculous question. That is said in the next verse.

उत्क्रामन्तं स्थितं वापि भुञ्जानं वा गुणान्वितम् ।
विमूढा नानुपश्यन्ति पश्यन्ति ज्ञानचक्षुषः ॥ १५.१० ॥

utkrāmantaṃ sthitaṃ vā'pi bhujjānaṃ vā guṇānvitam |
vimūḍhā nānupaśyanti paśyanti jñānacakṣuṣaḥ ||15.10 ||

विमूढाः vimūḍhāḥ the deluded ones न अनुपश्यन्ति na anupaśyanti do not recognise (Him), उत्क्रामन्तम् utkrāmantaṃ who leaves (the body), स्थितं वा अपि sthitaṃ vā api who resides

(in the body) भुञ्जानं वा bhuñjānaṁ vā who experiences (objects), गुणान्वितम् guṇānvitam (and) who has guṇas ज्ञानचक्षुषः jñānacakṣuṣaḥ those who have the eye of wisdom पश्यन्ति paśyanti recognise (Him).

10. The deluded ones do not recognise (Him) who leaves (the body), who resides in the body), who experiences (objects), (and) who has guṇas. Those who have the eye of wisdom recognise (Him).

So the previous verses are the preparatory verses. This is the crucial verse. So here alone Kṛṣṇa says for a discerning mind, Brahman is recognisable in every activity of the individual, in every function of the Jīva. Just as the invisible electricity is discerned in every function of the electrical gadgets; in every function of the Jīva, Brahman is discerned. Of course, directly discern the function from the functions, we discern the cidabhāsa; reflected consciousness; and from the reflected consciousness; we discern the original Consciousness, because we know that the original consciousness alone appears as the reflected consciousness. When you want to apply kumkumam or candanam or vibhūthi, you see the mirror and you see the face upon the mirror in front of you, and when you want to apply, you see the mirror but apply the tilakam, where? On your face, and not on the mirror, because you know that there is no difference that face and this face. What you see is that face, but what you discern or recognise is this face. And if you find a black dot on your face, but you wipe here. What does it mean? Seeing the ābhāsa mukham, you discern the original mukham. Similarly, I experience the ābhāsa caitanyam, every moment, I understand the original consciousness and therefore Kṛṣṇa says mature people appreciate God in every breadth.

jñānacakṣuṣaḥ; people who have the eye of discernment, because it is not the physical eye that sees the electricity. Physical eyes sees only the moving fan but I have got a third eye, called jñāna cakṣu and that jñāna cakṣu tells me that behind the visible moving fan, there is an invisible electricity blessing it; because I know a fan by itself cannot move. If a fan can move by itself, the increase in electricity charges will not affect you. But when the power tariff is increased; we are worried; because I know the fan by itself cannot move. Similarly, this body is like fan; and I discern through my third eye, the invisible Consciousness which touches the body. Jñāna cakṣusa; means the people who have the eye of understanding. And what is the understanding? Body is inert by itself, mind is inert by itself; but both are now as though sentient; because of an extraneous factor. That is called ātma anātma vivēkaḥ. Jñāna cakṣuḥ, those people.

Paśyanti, they discern, not through the physical eye, but the eye of understanding. What do they discern? The cidabhāsa, the Jīva, which is none other than Brahman which has descended down; Brahman's avatāram is Jīva. Because the original face alone has descended down on the mirror; Similarly, chit alone is in the form of cidabhāsa, and that Brahman they recognise. Brahman in the form of cidabhāsa.

And in what all ways that cidabhāsa is playing in the body? Sthitam; first we will take the word sthitam, which is very much present in the body, keeping the body alive. So sthitam means residing in the body. What is the proof? What is the proof you are asking; that very question is possible because of the cidabhāsa or Brahman is there.

And bhuñjānam. And this Jīva alone, this consciousness alone, experiences everything. Śabda, sparśa, rūpa, rasa, gandha; bhuñjānam, experiences the world. Because my expression is what? I am aware of the sound; I am conscious of the form and therefore cit in the form of cidabhāsa alone experiences śabda, sparśa, rūpa, rasa, gandha, which is called bhuñjānam. Bhuñjānam means experiencing the world. So resides in the body, experiences the world and as even the experience comes; every experience generates a response. So when you hear the pattās, there is a response. One who is bursting the cracker. What is the response? joy; kushio kushy; because he has purchased the crackers only for making the sound; more sound the merrier it is. If you are not able to hear the word, what is your response? Irritation.

Sound remaining the same, two forms of response and the responses are broadly divided into three; sātvic response, rajasic response and tamasic response. Śankarācārya calls it sukha, duḥkha and mōha responses. And that is said here, guṇanvitham. Here guṇa refers to varieties of reactions and these reaction. Here the word guṇa means reactions. What are the reactions? Sātvic reactions, rajasic reactions, reactions are called guṇas, anvitham, the Jīvātma is endowed with these threefold reactions and every reaction reveals the presence of the Brahman in the body. Because in a dead body; because the dead body is burned; they do a hōma at the time of creation on the body; the fire is lit; no response from that person; why? because there is no Jīva residing in the body. Therefore every response reveals the presence of the Jīva. Therefore guṇanvitham, Jīvam, all these words are adjective to Jīva, which is an image of what? Brahman. And such a Brahman, jñāna cakṣuḥ paśyanti. Mature people recognise.

But vimūḍhāḥ, the immature people, the indiscriminate people, non-discerning people; na paśyanti, na anupaśyanti. They think that the body has got consciousness of its own. Their philosophy that consciousness is the property of matter, the material body. Such a philosophy is cāruvāka matham, the cāruvāka people do not believe in God. They say body has got natural life; God need not enliven the body. That is called materialistic philosophy. What do we say? Body can never have a life of its own. If body has life it is the gift of the Lord alone. Therefore vimūḍhāḥ, cāruvākaḥ, na paśyanti; they do not recognise.

यतन्तो योगिनश्चैनं पश्यन्त्यात्मन्यविस्थितम् ।
यतन्तोऽप्यकृतात्मानः नैनं पश्यन्त्यचेतसः ॥ १५.११ ॥

yatantō yōginaścainaṃ paśyantyātmanyavasthitam |
yatantō'pyakṛtātmānō nainaṃ paśyantyacētasah || 15.11 ||

यतन्तः yatantaḥ striving, योगिनः च yōginaḥ ca the yogis पश्यन्ति एनम् paśyanti ēnam find Him अवस्थितम् आत्मनि avasthitam ātmani present in the body अकृतात्मानः akṛtātmānaḥ the impure-minded अचेतसः acētasah the indiscriminate ones न पश्यन्ति na paśyanti do not find एनम् ēnam Him अपि यतन्तः api yatantaḥ in spite of striving.

11. Striving, the yogis find Him, present in the body. The impure-minded, indiscriminate ones do not find him in spite of striving.

So here Kṛṣṇa talks of the two types of people; the discerning, the discriminate vivēki and the non-discerning, non-discriminate avivēki. Just as I see only one fan, but I have discrimination, I know that there are two things; what I see is one; what I understand is two. These two are the invisible electricity and visible fan. They are intimately associated, but they are not one and same; they are separate entities. Even after the destruction of the fan; the visible fan, the electricity continues to be there. Immediately he will recognise if one puts the hand inside. What I see is one; what I recognise is two.

Similarly what I see in every living being is only one, but if I study vēdānta, I know, there is a visible body and an invisible consciousness. Body will perish; consciousness will survive. And consciousness is, you have to remember, not a part, property, or product of the body; it is an independent principle.

So Kṛṣṇa says yōginaḥ; yōginaḥ means what? The discriminate people the discerning people, mature people, ēnam na paśyanti, they recognise this Brahman, which is present in the body as Jīva. They recognise Brahman which is present in the body as Jīva. mamaivāṃśō jīvalōkē, they recognise ēnam, this paramātma. And where is this paramātma? ātmani avasthitam. Here the word ātma means the body-mind complex, and the paramātma resides in the body-mind complex.

Āvasthitam, residing, In what form? In the form of the reflected consciousness, in the form of RC, the OC is available OC (freely). The OC obtains in the BM-complex as RC. Here ātma has to be translated as body, mind complex.

And that is why there is a well-known verse, Dēhō dēvalaya prōkthaḥ; paramātma is residing in our body, as the very Jīvātma and therefore body is a temple. Mind is the garbha griham, the sanctum; and the consciousness is the deity. In fact before the Śiva mānasa pūja, we are chanting, there is one dhyāna slōkā. I did not introduce that: It is a beautiful slōkā:

आराधयामि मणि सन्निभ आत्मलिङ्गम्
मायापुरि हृदय पङ्गज सन्निविष्टम् ।
श्रद्धा नदि विमल चित्त जलाभिषेकैः नित्यम् समाधि कुसुमै अपुनर्भवैः ॥

ārādhayāmi maṇi sannibha ātmaliṅgam māyāpuri hr̥daya paṅgaja sanniviṣṭam | śraddhā nadi vimala citta jalābhiṣekai:
nityam samādhi kusumai apunarbhavaiḥ ||

Ārādhayāmi maṇi sannibham ātma liṅgam. That paramātma is there; as the Jīvātma liṅgam in myself. Ārādhayāmi maṇi sannibham ātma liṅgam, māyā puri hr̥daya paṅkaja sanniviṣṭam.

And that ātma liṅgam Śiva is there in the Hr̥dya paṅkaja; the lotus heart; sraddha nathi vimala citta jalābhiṣekai. With the pure mind and pure thought, a devotee does abhiṣekam regularly. You can do abhisēkam with two types of water; with coovam water and gaṅga jalam; Similarly, all our thoughts are doing abhiṣekam to consciousness alone, shradda nadi vimala cbhisēkai, nityam samādhi kusumai; and meditation or absorption in that Lord is the offering of flowers. May I do that abhiṣekam regularly, to get release from apunar bhavāya; punar bhavaya, means punar janma. Apunar bhava means freedom from punar janma. For mōkṣa, let me worship ātma liṅgam residing in the body.

That is what he is saying here: Āmani avasthitham enam ātma liṅgam. Yōgina, sādhanā catuṣṭya sampanna adhikāriṇaḥ, that is the qualified people, paśyanti. They recognise.

And how do they accomplish that?

Yathantaḥ; by putting appropriate effort. So the discovery, this recognition through yathanta kurvanthaḥ. And what is prayathnam? All the spiritual sādhanās are the prayathnam. Which means what? Karma yōgēna citta śuddiḥ, (hope you remember), karma yōgēna citta śudhiḥ, upāsanēna citta ēkāgratha, sṛavanēna ajñāna Nivṛtti, mananēna saṁśaya Nivṛtti, nidhidhyāsanēna vāsana nivṛtti (I will later tell you again in some occasion).

In short by going through all the sādhanās, including attending the classes; yathantha paśyanthi, they recognise. Whereas akṛtātmānaḥ, whereas the other people who have not qualified themselves, who have not acquired the required qualification, akṛtam means impure; kṛtam means samskṛtam, akṛtam means asamskṛtam, asamskṛtam means unrefined. Ātma means mind. So akṛta ātma means what people of unrefined mind; uncultured mind; untuned mind.

Those people, acētaṣaḥ, and therefore only they do not have a discriminating intellect; cētas means discriminate intellect; and acētaṣaḥ means people without discriminate intellect; unintelligent people, indiscriminate people.

ēnam na paśyanti; they never recognise the Lord in their hearts. And that is why every day, before doing the pūja, pūja starts with ātma pūja. ātmanē namaḥ, antharatmanē namaḥ, paramātmanē namaḥ, Jīvātmanē namaḥ, because the Lord is very much in the sanctum in the Mind and after ātma puja, we invoke the Lord outside and they do bhāhya pūja. So ātma pūja should be the beginning and the end also should be ātma pūja only. If I say now, people will think, it is arrogance. With wisdom when I worship, that worship will go to the Lord only because the Lord alone resides within me.

Akṛtātmānaḥ na paśyanti, yatantaḥ api. Even though they study the scriptures, if the mind is not pure, even scriptural study will not fructify in self-knowledge. It will become an academic exercise; and it will add further to the ego. Already egoistic. Now I have finished Gīta also he will say. I have finished Gīta. Finished Upaniṣads. Finished brahma sūtra. So, a pure mind will benefit out of study. An impure mind will not get the benefit and that is why along with śāstric study, a religious life also should parallelly go. Both are equally important.

यदादित्यगतं तेजः जगद्भासयतेऽखिलम् ।
यच्चन्द्रमसि यच्चाग्नौ तत्तेजो विद्धि मामकम् ॥ १५.१२ ॥

yadā"dityagataṃ tējō jagadbhāsayatē'khilam |
yaccandramasi yaccāgnau tattējō viddhi māmakam || 15.12 ||

तेजः tējaḥ the light, आदित्यगतम् ādityagataṃ in the sun यद् भासयते yad bhāsayatē which illumines अखिलं जगत् akhilaraṃ jagat the entire Universe यत् चन्द्रमसि yat candramasi (the light) in the moon च यद् अग्नौ ca yad agnau and (the light) in the fire विद्धि viddhi understand तत् तेजः tat tējaḥ that light मामकम् māmakam to be me

12. The light in the sun which illumines the entire universe, (the light) in the moon, and (the light) in the fire – understand that light to be Mine.

With the previous verse, the first topic is over. What is the first topic? Brahman alone is present in every body as the cidabhāsa the Jīvātma. Paramātma alone resides in every body as Jīvātma and that is why in our culture, anybody we see, our method of greeting is not hi, hi. Swami Chinmayānanda says that we use that for driving the horses. When we meet the people, Indian method of meeting people is namasthe; that means, tey namaḥ, my namaskāram to you; we know very well that person does not deserve namaskāram, but we still offer, because we know that behind this body mind, what is there, is paramātma alone in the form of Jīvātma, behind a unclean body mind; but paramātma, the Jīvātma is ever śuddhaḥ. So therefore, paramātma or brahma Jīva rūpēṇa varthathē. This is topic No.1.

From 12th to 15th, we are entering the second topic. What is that? Brahman alone is in the form of the jagat; the inert universe also. brahmaiva jagat rūpēṇa api, sarvartra sarvaihi anubhūyathē. This is the topic.

The details we will see in the next class.

Hari Om

195 Chapter 15, Verses 12-15

After defining Brahman in the 6th verse of this chapter, Lord Kṛṣṇa establishes in the later verses, that Brahman alone is in the form of everything. And in Sānskrīt, this is called sarvātmakatvam and here Kṛṣṇa talks as one with Brahman instead of saying is in the form of everything: He says: I alone are appearing as everything. I am everything. He has already talked about this in the seventh, ninth, tenth, and eleventh chapters. In the fact the very viśvarūpa darśanam is revealing this fact that Bhagavān is everything and that sarvātmakatvam is briefly dealt with in these verses and for this purpose, the whole universe is divided into two; the sentient living beings, and the insentient objects of the creation.

Cētana prapañcaḥ and acētana prapañcaḥ and Kṛṣṇa says that I alone appear in the form of cētana jīvā, I alone appear in the form of the acētanam jagat also. Of these we have seen the first part, from verse No.7 to verse No.11. We have seen the first part. What is the first part? I alone am in the form of the cētana jīvā. We have entered into the second part, from verse no.12, which I introduced in the last class. And this part is I, the Brahman alone am in the form of acētanam jagat also. So from the 12th verse, up to the 15th verse, Brahman or Bhagavān is everything.

And in this context, Kṛṣṇa does not give the logic behind this conclusion because the logic has already been given in the previous chapters. Why do we say that Bhagavān is everything? The logic that we say IS: Bhagavān being the cause of everything, Bhagavān alone has to be everything. Remember the example, gold is the cause of all ornaments and therefore gold alone is in the form of all the ornaments. So cause of the ornaments means, it is in the form of ornaments, because there are no ornaments other than gold. Wood is the cause of the furniture, means wood alone is in the form of furniture; there is no furniture separate from wood.

Generalising, cause alone is in the form of all the effect; extending that Brahman or Bhagavān being the cause of everything, Brahman or Bhagavān alone is in the form of everything. In short, there is no creation different from separate form Īśvara and this is the uniqueness of the vēdic-teaching, because that is why, we worship the Lord in any form and every form. We worship animals as God; we worship human-beings as God; we worship trees as God; we worship rivers as God; we worship even the five elements as God; the reason is: these do not exist separate from Bhagavān or Brahman. And therefore Bhagavān is in the form of everything. And therefore Kṛṣṇa has to say, I am the table, I am the chair, I am the pen, I am the book, I am you, I am he, I am mike; if Kṛṣṇa has to enumerate everything in the creation, the 15th chapter will not end at all.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa wants to take a few important things in the creation and he points out they are my own manifestation. Just a few samples are taken to point out that Bhagavān is in the form of them and from that you can extend to everything else also. And what are those few samples Bhagavān takes. They are the fundamental, natural forces that we experience all the time; which we have not created, but they are very much part of this creation. Without these natural power or forces or energy, we cannot think of the creation or its survival. What are the natural forces that Kṛṣṇa takes? He takes three of them. One is sūrya śaktiḥ. The solar energy. The solar power called sūrya śaktiḥ and the second one is the lunar power, the candra śaktiḥ. Kṛṣṇa uses the word tējaḥ instead of śaktiḥ. Therefore sūrya tējaḥ, candra tējaḥ; tējaḥ is śaktiḥ, energy, power and the third one is Agni śaktiḥ and Agni tējaḥ. The power of the fire.

So these are the three natural and very very important forces or energy; the more you study their glory, the more you admire. The scientists have been studying the Sun for years and decades, for centuries they are studying, still they have not completed the glory of the Sun. Put the correct spelling. Whether our... s o n... has glory or not, I do not know; I mean.... s u n. And therefore Kṛṣṇa enumerates them first and says I am in the form of sūrya śaktiḥ and I am in the form of candra śaktiḥ and I am in the form of Agni śaktiḥ. That is said in the 12th verse, which we read in the last class.

Ādityagatam tējaḥ. Tējaḥ means the power, the energy. And even those people who feel that all other sources of energy will be exhausted; they think that ultimately we have to tap the solar energy only. And especially, we the people in the tropical country, we have got solar battery, solar cells; so many things, solar, solar. Kṛṣṇa says that energy belongs to me. Ādityagatam, means located in, present in the Sun, tējaḥ, that is No.1, which is akhilaṁ jagat bhāsayatē, which illumines the entire universe; to illumine this particular hall, how many lights we require. And how much electricity charges we have to pay which is going on increasing per unit and that too the power goes off and on. And during day time; not this hall, but the entire earth or a portion of the earth is illumined free of cost; how much money we pay. So he says; akhilaṁ jagat bhāsayatē. And the Sun never gets fused out; the energy of the Sun never ends.

And yat candramasi; you have to supply the word tējaḥ; and that energy which obtains in the moon, the moonlight or the lunar energy, of course it is borrowed from the sun only, but imagine, the sun is 9 crores miles away. And the moon is 2 lakhs 50 thousand miles or kilometers away. The sunlight is getting reflected in the moon; there is a cidabhāsa there. The original sunlight is getting reflected in the moon; that reflected itself is so powerful that on a full purnami day, you can even read a book. Of course if you have normal eyes. What I am saying is that even the reflected light is so powerful and therefore Kṛṣṇa says, yat tējaḥ candramasi. That means the candra śaktiḥ.

And what is the third one, yad ca agnau; here also, we have to supply the word tējaḥ, yat tējaḥ agnau, and that energy which is there stored in Agni; Agni means the fire principle, Agni śaktiḥ, all these three powers belong to me. Tat tējaḥ; that power mamakam viddhi, may you know as my power and that is why in the vēdic discipline, the day begins with the worship of the Sun. And all the prayers are Sūrya prayers.

ओम् मित्रस्य चर्षणी धृतः श्रवो देवस्य सानसिम् । सत्यं चित्रश्रवस्तमम् ॥ मित्रो जनान् यातयति प्रजानन् मित्रो दाधार पृथिवी-मुतध्याम् । मित्रः कृष्टी-रनिमिषामिचष्टे सत्याय हव्यं धृतवद्विधेम ॥

This generally comes in the sandhyā vandanam. So this Sun alone sustains the living beings. If the Sun is not there, the planetary motion itself is not there; the earth cannot survive. Sun exists 9 crores miles away only, its very existence sustains the earth. And therefore, Mitra dātram pṛthivī-mutadhyām. Mitra means the Sun. Sun alone sustains the earth. And in the afternoon, mādhyanikam also,

आसत्येन रजसा वर्तमानो निवेशयन्मृतं मर्त्यं च । हिरण्ययेन सविता रथेनाऽऽदेवो याति भुवना विपश्यन् ॥

āsatyēna rajasā vartamānō nivēśayannmṛtaṁ martyaṁ ca | hiraṇyayēna savitā rathēnā:'dēvō yāti bhuvanā vipāśyan |

Savitha ayāthi. The brilliant light and energy and lot of nutrients like vitamin D, etc. in Sunlight D is there; in Europe and England and other places, they have to crave for the Sunlight and that is why they go to tropical countries, in beach lying down, கொஞ் நேரம் மலந்து படுத்துப்பா; கொஞ் நேரம் கமந்து படுத்துப்பா. (like dōsai, upside down and downside up), because the skin requires that. And even our sleep and waking is connected to sunlight; there is something, melamine or something is there in the skin, that is directly connected to solar light and body's rhythm of activities is connected to Sun. And that is why they say, do not take heavy meal in the night, because, everything slows down including digestive power. So the more you study the Sun, the more its glory is. Therefore morning begins with the Sūrya Namaskāra and almost paurṇami days, we have got some festival or the other; every month you see paurṇami is special for us, because again moonlight we worship. And then of course Agni worship is fundamental to vēdic religion. The Ṛg vēda beings Agni Mīdē purōhitham, why, because Sūrya Śaktiḥ, Candra Śaktiḥ, Agni Śaktiḥ, māmakam viddhi. Do not take them for granted.

In the following verses, Kṛṣṇa is going to talk about the glory of each śaktiḥ. What is the contribution of sun light? Sunlight ~ not soap, but the solar energy. What is the contribution of moonlight? He is going to explain in the following verses. We will read.

गामाविश्य च भूतानि धारयाम्यहमोजसा ।
पुष्णामि चौषधीः सर्वाः सोमो भूत्वा रसात्मकः ॥ १५.१३ ॥

gāmāviśya ca bhūtāni dhārayāmyahamōjasā |
puṣṇāmi cauṣadhīḥ sarvāḥ sōmō bhūtvā rasātmakaḥ || 15.13 ||

आविश्य च गाम् āviśya ca gām having entered the earth अहं धारयामि भूतानि ahaṁ dhārayāmi bhūtāni I sustain all beings ओजसा ojasā with (My) energy च भूत्वा ca bhūtvā having become, रसात्मकः सोमः rasātmakaḥ sōmaḥ the sappy moon पुष्णामि puṣṇāmi I nourish सर्वाः ओषधीः sarvāḥ oṣadhīḥ all plants

13. Having entered the earth, I sustain all beings with energy. Having become the sappy moon, I nourish all plants.

The first line talks about the contribution of the sūrya Śaktiḥ, which is a blessing from the Lord. So Kṛṣṇa says: gām āviśya, regularly the solar energy, through the rays of the Sun, penetrate or enter on to the surface of the earth; athaditya udayan yat prāchīm diśa praviśadi, thēna pracyān raśmin raśmiṣu sannidattē.

It pervades all the directions and blesses all the jīvā rāsis with ojas or prāṇa śaktiḥ. So gām āviśya, having entered the earth, gām means pṛthvīm; bhūtāni, the sun rays or the solar light penetrates into every being, that is why we are asked to get up before sun rise and we are supposed to expose ourselves to the morning sunlight. And therefore they go to the rivers for bath; (what we can do with having only Koovam; they go to the temple, they do pradakṣinam, all for exposing our body to the solar energy; which is called prāṇic energy.

That is why the prāṇic healers talk about drawing energy from the Sun and handing over to our prāṇa maya kōśa. The entire prāṇamaya kōśa is sustained by the Sun. And therefore, bhūtani; bhūtani means all the living beings, here bhūtani does not mean pañca bhūtani but all living beings, dārayāmi, I sustain. Who says? Kṛṣṇa says: I sustain through the solar energy, ōjasam, by blessing the living beings with ōjas. Ōjas means what prāṇa śaktiḥ, prāṇic energy, vital force. And this is supposed to be responsible for the health of the annamaya kōśa. And it is also responsible for the health of manōmaya kōśa; directly prāṇamaya kōśa; indirectly annamaya and manōmaya. That is why, one of the most powerful daily prayers is āditya hṛdayam. If you do not know, you can learn it; and daily chant it morning; it will take care of the annamaya kōśa health; prāṇamaya kōśa health; manōmaya kōśa health, and vijñāna maya kōśa health; those who do not know gayathri mantra, those who do not chant gayathri, they can replace their sandhya vandhanam with Aditya Hṛdya, because it is invoking āditya Śaktiḥ; so ōjasa aham dārayāmi, through pranic energy, I sustain. This is the contribution of the sūryaḥ.

Then what is the contribution of the sōma Śaktiḥ? Moon energy. He says: rasātmatka sōmaḥ bhūthva, I myself become the moonlight or lunar energy and what type of moon light it is? Rasātmakaḥ, which is full of the plant nutrient; according to śāstra, the moonlight has got lot of energy or nutrition, which is directly given to the plant kingdom. So here rasa means the sap of the plants, the nutritional power of the plant is here called rasaḥ and I become that. And through that, what do I do, oṣadhīḥ sarvāḥ puṣṇāmi, I nourish all the plants. So through Sūrya Śaktiḥ I nourish the human beings; through candra śaktiḥ, I nourish the plant kingdom; i.e. why they say, some of the farmers they expose the seeds to the moonlight. They say it is very good, to expose the seeds to the moonlight; before sowing them; it will draw energy from the moon. So rasātmakaḥ sōmaḥ bhūthva aham puṣṇāmi. Thus sūrya tējaḥ I am; candra tējaḥ I am. Then what is left out? Agni tējaḥ.

अहं वैश्वानरो भूत्वा प्राणिनां देहमाश्रितः ।
प्राणापानसमायुक्तः पचाम्यन्नं चतुर्विधम् ॥ १५.१४ ॥

aham vaiśvānarō bhūtvā prāṇinām dēhamāśritaḥ |
prāṇāpānasamāyuktaḥ pacāmyannaṁ caturvidham || 15.14 ||

आश्रितः देहम् āśritaḥ dēham residing in the body प्राणिनाम् prāṇinām of beings भूत्वा वैश्वानरः bhutvā vaiśvānaraḥ as the digestive fire प्राणापानसमायुक्तः prāṇāpānasamāyuktaḥ and supported by exhalation and inhalation अहं पचामि ahaṁ pacāmi I digest चतुर्विधं अन्नम् caturvidhaṁ annam the fourfold food.

14. Residing in the body of beings as the digestive fire, and supported by exhalation and inhalation. I digest the four fold food.

So in this verse, the Agni śaktiḥ or Agni tējas or power is talked about. In the śāstra, Agni tatvam is divided into two types; one is called bhāhya Agni, the external fire principle; which is the popular one; which we see the bhāhya Agni, and the śāstra says there is another internal fire principle; which is within our stomach, which is called ānthara Agni ; the internal fire; this ānthara agniḥ, is known by different names. It is called jātarāgni; jataram means stomach; jātaram, means within the stomach; so jātarāgni, the fire within the stomach. And it is also known by another name, vaiśvānara Agni and this fire is called the digestive fire, which cooks the eaten food, the second time; before the body assimilates the food, the food should go through two types of cooking; one is the external cooking; another is the internal cooking; and in each cooking; the food gets transformed. Initially you gather the food in the form of vegetables; grains, cereals etc. and you do not directly eat the grains; normally we do not eat directly, and vegetables also generally we do not eat directly unless you are a naturopath and all the time living on salads only. Cooking is banned for them. Eat with the skin is their motto. Skin has got more nutrients than the original fruit. There are some who eat the skin and leave the fruit.!! To Bhagavān Kṛṣṇa, Vidhura did like that. Some people deliberately do that. But generally we do not do that; the first transformation takes place in the external cooking; where the vegetables are converted into variety of foods, so that we have the tastes. Taste buds, and we have to do lot of 'dressing' so that it becomes eatable. First conversion is make it eatable, tasty for the tongue. And once you have eaten all the varieties of vegetables, it goes inside. But remember, idlis and dosais, cannot be directly taken. Second cooking has to take place, wherein the eaten food items have to go through second transformation. And after that alone the body can absorb; and this is done by what; the digestive fire; vaiśvānara Agni. In science they called digestive juices and the enzymes and acids, we have lot of acid and enzymes; pepsins, amilins, etc. all enzymes are there. That is why if you do not feed the body, as the acid come out, they are burning acid; if you do not satisfy the fire with prāṇāya svāhā,... the acid begins to eat your own stomach, which is called ulcer. Therefore you have to feed the internal fire, which cooks the food a second time.

And once the second time cooking takes place, all the idlis and dosais, have been converted into carbohydrates, fats, proteins, minerals; all these conversion takes place and the body absorbs this converted food alone. So first conversion called cooking outside; the second cooking or conversion is inside; first cooking is done by bāhya agniḥ, the second cooking is done by ānthara agniḥ; vaiśvānara agniḥ.

And Kṛṣṇa says, that cooking power belongs to me alone, which is otherwise called samāna prāṇaḥ; the digestive power is Bhagavān's power and that is why, before we eat the food, we worship Bhagavān and consider the food as an offering to the Lord. To which Lord; the Lord who is in your stomach. And what type of Lord he is? Vaiśvānara agniḥ. And that is why, that offering is also called another form of Agni hōtram. According to Chāndōgya upaniṣad, eating itself is a form of Agni hōtra ritual called prāṇāgni hōtram. You can tell everyone, daily I do Agni hōtram; I am nityāgni hōtri. But do not tell what it is; so what is nityāgni hōtram, the Vaiśvānara Agni is offered food, that is why they do the pariṣēcanam, prāṇāya svāhā, apānāya svāhā; And according to the rule, when you are offering Prāṇāya svāhā, etc. you are not supposed to taste, you have keep it directly in the tongue and look for the taste, but swallow, why because it has to go directly to the Vaiśvānara Agni and therefore Kṛṣṇa says I am that power.

In Bṛhadārṇya upaniṣad, there is a special upāsana upon vaiśvānara Agni; you meditate upon your hunger, or digestive power as the Lord. Hunger upāsana, have you heard anywhere? And how do you detect your hunger. The upaniṣad says, when you are hungry within the stomach, you hear of varieties of noises; kur bur, tur bur, so that noise represents the digestive power, the hunger which is asking for food, and therefore meditate upon the sound; As what? Bhagavān.

ayam agnir vaiśvānaraḥ yōyamantā puruṣē; yēnētham annam paccyatē; yaditam adyatē; tasyēṣā ghōṣō bhavathi.

Ghōṣa means the internal sound, meditate upon the sound as the digestive power, the Lord, called vaiśvānara upāsana. So Kṛṣṇa reminds us of that; he says; Aham vaiśvānarō bhūtvā, I myself am in the form of ānthara Agni śaktiḥ; the bāhya Agni Kṛṣṇa does not talk about here, that we can supply, here he talks about only the internal digestive fire.

And where do I reside? Prāṇinām dēhamāśritaḥ; so I reside in the body of every prāṇi, I occupy the madhya pradesh; samāna Agni is here; and residing there, what is my job? Caturvidham annam pacāmi; I cook all forms of food that is offered inside; second cooking; what is the second cooking; convert the food into the respective nutrients called carbohydrates; fats, etc. So I, digest the food, assimilate the food; What type of food? caturvidham annam, the four types of food; which a human being consumes. What is the caturvidham annam? Four types of food, what is that; normally he is a South Indian, he will say, sāmbar rice, rasam rice, pāyasam and curd rice!! But remember, that is only the south Indian, when Kṛṣṇa talks about the universal caturvidham annam; What is that? They say all the food consumed by all the living beings can be classified into four types, based on the mode of consumption; not-based on the type of food, if it is type of food, there are millions of it; Gujarati food, Tamil food, etc. etc.

Here we classify the food based on the type of consumption, method that we used to eat; and accordingly we use four types; they are called bhakṣyam, bhōjyam, lēhyam and cōkṣyam; these are the four types of eating. What are those four?

Bhakṣyam means, those types of food which are masticated, which you bite and masticate and swallow, any solid type of food, which you have to bite and eat, those which are masticated. In Sānskrīt, mastication is called carvaṇam; biting and biting and eating; or those types of food, which you cannot eat after certain age; are called bhakṣyam; easy to understand; which you cannot eat even with false teeth; like Aluva, teeth which goes into the aluva;

Second type is bhōjyam; those types of food, which you directly swallow; liquid type of food, like milk or soup or coffee or tea, which are directly swallowed. You do not require to masticulate; to be masticated; to be swallowed; second type called bhōjyam.

The third one is called lēhyam; lēhyam means that which has to be licked and consumed. You cannot directly pour into the mouth; like honey, honey you should not directly pour, it is viscous liquid, if you directly take, one could even be dead; it has to be licked; or Ayurvēdic lēhyam, it is derived from the root, to lih, to lick, in English, lih to lick. And all forms of pickles will come under lēhyam; we are protruding the tongue; this is the third one;

The fourth one is cōkṣyam, which has to be sucked inside, like the sugar cane, etc. you bite and you suck inside, உறிஞ்சுதல் in Tamil, sucking, or modern day example is what, the way you consume the soft drinks with a straw. how do you do that; the head is up, when the head is up, it becomes bhōjyam; but when the head is down, we have got straw; that is called cōkṣyam.

And in Andhra pradesh, there is a mango called Rasālu; you press it well, and remove the cork, the tip you remove and it goes inside. So they all come under cōkṣyam. So bhakṣyam, bhōjyam, lēhyam and cōkṣyam; these are the only four types of eating. Try to imagine the fifth type, there is not. Do not say intravenous; you cannot include that; intravenous feeding, nasal feeding, they are irregular exceptions. A normal healthy human being will use only these four and Kṛṣṇa says all these types of food, I cook, or I digest in the form of digestive fire.

And naturally, the question will cook, the external fire is kindled by fanning. When they want to do a hōma or even in cooking, the fire is kindled by fanning. Now alone gas stove has come; no fanning is required, in the olden days whether it is fire for cooking, whether it is the fire for oblation offering, they will fan; or they will use a tube; hōmakuzhal; it is hōmakuzhal.

So if the external fire is kindled by fanning; the question comes how is the indigestive fire kindled? Kṛṣṇa says that is also done by fanning; You require another type of fanning; prāṇa, apāna, breathing in, and breathing out is the fanning of the digestive fire. And therefore, whenever you do extra activity; which we never do, what happens? Breathing becomes faster, and when breathing becomes faster, what happens; internal fire is kindled; intensely and therefore Vaisvānara Agni become big, when Vaiśvānara Agni is kindled, you feel hunger, therefore you eat more.

When the breathing slows down, hunger slows down; and breathing increases; hunger increases; from that it is clear, breathing is the fanning of the digestive fire; therefore Kṛṣṇa say, prāṇa, apāna, prāṇa means breathing out, or exhalation; and apāna here means breathing in, inhalation, samāyukthā, supported by, activated by the breathing, I in the form of vaiśvānara Agni, digest the food; and that is the Agni śaktiḥ. And therefore, Hey Arjuna appreciate Me in the creation; in the form of sūrya śakti, candra śakti, and Agni śakti. And therefore I am everything.

And now Kṛṣṇa concludes that topic.

सर्वस्य चाहं हृदि सन्निविष्टः मत्तः स्मृतिर्ज्ञानमपोहनं च ।
वेदैश्च सर्वैरहमेव वेद्यः वेदान्तकृद्वेदविदेव चाहम् ॥ १५.१५ ॥

sarvasya cāhaṁ hṛdi sanniviṣṭo
mattaḥ smṛtirjñānamapōhanaṁ ca |
vēdaiśca sarvairahamēva vēdyo
vēdāntakṛdvēdavidēva cāham || 15.15 ||

अहं सन्निविष्टः ahaṁ sanniviṣṭaḥ I am seated हृदि hṛdi in the heart, सर्वस्य च sarvasya ca of all स्मृतिः smṛtiḥ Memory ज्ञानम् jñānam knowledge च अपोहनम् ca apōhanam and forgetfulness, मत्तः mattaḥ are from Me सर्वैः वेदैः च sarvēḥ vēdaiḥ ca through all the Vēdas, अहम् एव वेद्यः aham ēva vēdhyāḥ I alone am to be known, अहं वेदान्तकृत् ahaṁ vēdāntakṛt I am the initiator of the Vēdāntic tradition एव च वेदवित् ēva ca vēdavit and (I am) the knower of the Vēdas.

15. I am seated in the heart of all. Memory, Knowledge, and forgetfulness are from Me. Through all the Vēdas, I alone am to be known. I am the initiator of the Vēdāntic tradition. And (I am) the knower of the Vēdas.

So here concludes the topic, pointing out I am everything; I am in everything; sarvasya hṛdi aham sanniviṣṭaḥ. Hey Arjuna, I, the paramātmā, reside in the heart of everyone. So everybody is like a temple; the heart represents the mind, the mind represents the sanctum or garbha griham; dēhaḥ dēvālayaḥ, and mind is the garbha griham; and in that mind, I, the paramātmā, am present as the jīvātma; witnessing every thought occurring in the mind. Therefore, Hṛdi sākṣi caitanya rūpēna, kṣētrajñā rūpēna. In the form of the very consciousness, I am in every living being; And mattaḥ; because of Me, the consciousness alone, all the functions of the body are going on, mattaḥ smṛtir jñānamapōhanam ca, all the mental faculties are alive because of me; what are some of the faculties? Jñānam means the capacity to learn, learning faculty is alive because of Me.

Then smṛtiḥ, learning should be followed by what? Remembering, or else I have to take the 15th chapter in the next class also, remembering faculty is because of me, And some people may say, I do not have remembering faculty, I have got forgetting faculty. Remember, we think forgetting is a curse, remember, forgetfulness is also important, we go through lot of painful experiences in life; in due course we have to forget; imagine if you remember all the painful experiences, you will be terrible; and that is why we say time is a healer; because in time, we forget those things. So remembering is also an important faculty. Forgetfulness is also an important faculty; But the problem is what should be remembered what should be forgotten; there is small bug is there; all our classes are successfully forgotten; somebody said something in 1953, you said that, what a memory power? Kṛṣṇa says what is to be remembered: remember; what is to be forgotten, you forget; both faculties are a blessing; and both of them are my glory alone.

And one commentator gives a special meaning for these words; it is a very beautiful thing; not by Śankarācārya, by other ācārya. He says jñānam refers to the waking state; because the waking state we are gathering fresh experiences. Smṛtiḥ represents dream state; because in dream, we do not gather anything new, only what is already registered that is projected again; therefore smṛtiḥ indicates svapna avastha. And apōhanam means forgetfulness and forgetfulness represents suṣuptiḥ avastha; because in sleep, we forget everything. Therefore jñānam, jāgrath, smṛtiḥ, svapna, apōhanam, suṣuptiḥ, all these three avasthas are because of Me alone. So I am in everyone, responsible for their experiences in all the three states. And not only that; sarvaiḥ vėdaiḥ aham ēva vėdhyāḥ; I am the subject matter of all the scriptures; because scriptures are dealing with the Lord alone, the vėda pūrva bhāga is dealing with saguṇa Īśvara; vėda antha bhāga is dealing with nirguṇa Īśvara. In short the entire vėdah is dealing with what; Īśvara alone.

Therefore he says, through all the four vēdas, I am the one to be known. And vēdāntakṛt aham; and I am the one who is the initiator of the vēdāntic tradition; vēdāntic tradition includes the vēdic also, the entire vēdic tradition, I have initiated; So therefore, what is known through the vēda, I am, and the vēdas themselves are nothing but myself or my creation;

Then what about the students of the vēdic-teaching? He says the students are also Myself; so vēdavī; vī with the students; the knower of vēdah. So the knower I am; the known I am; the means of knowledge, I am; pramātā, pramāṇam, pramēyam, the entire tṛpti I am. Therefore I am everything.

So with this Kṛṣṇa concludes the second topic also. What is the second topic? I am in the form in the insentient world also. Previously he said I am in the form of the sentient living beings also; therefore, cētana-acētana prapañca aham asmi. This is called sarvātmakatvam.

More in the next class. Hari Om

ॐ

With this the 15th chapter, which we completed in the last class, Lord Kṛṣṇa completes the important topic of Brahmaṇa sarvātmakatvam. Brahmaṇa sarvātmakatvam means Brahman alone is in the form of everything. sarvaṁ brahma mayam jagat. Very careful. sarvaṁ bhrama mayam jagat. Brahma is confusion. It is Brahma. This is the essential teaching of all the Upaniṣads. In the Mundakōpaniṣad we saw

ब्रह्मैवेदममृदं पुरस्ताद् ब्रह्म पश्चाद् ब्रह्म दक्षिणतश्चोत्तरेण ।
अधश्चोर्ध्वं च प्रसृतं ब्रह्मैवेदं विश्वमिदं वरिष्ठम् ॥ 2.11.19 ॥

[brahivēdamamṛdaṁ purastād brahma paścād brahma dakṣiṇataścottarēṇa |
adhaścordhvaṁ ca prasṛtaṁ brahmaivēdaṁ viśvamidaṁ variṣṭham || 2.II.11 ||](#)

What is in front is Brahman, what is behind is Brahman, what is on the right, on the left, above and below.

Everything is Brahman, with different names and forms, which cause only a superficial difference. So the world is superficially different, but in essence the whole world is Brahman; there is nothing other than Brahman. And Kṛṣṇa has mentioned this in the 4th chapter also:

ब्रह्मार्पणं ब्रह्म हविर्ब्रह्माग्नौ ब्रह्मणा हुतम् ।
ब्रह्मैव तेन गन्तव्यं ब्रह्मकर्मसमाधिना ॥ ४.२४ ॥

brahmārpaṇam brahma havirbrahmāgnau brahmaṇā hutam |
brahmaiva tēna gantavyam brahma karma samādhinā || 4.24 ||

That verse also conveys the same idea. Brahman alone is everything. And this topic Kṛṣṇa started from the 7th verse and he concluded this in the 15th verse, and we should remember that the ultimate discovery is that Sarvātmakam Brahma is nothing but myself. It is not enough that we say Brahman is everything; there the sādhana is incomplete; I should finally that That Brahman I am. Then the statement would be reworded; instead of saying Brahman is everything; we say I am everything. Aham Annam, Aham Annādaḥ, Aham Slōkakṛt, Aham ēva idaguṃ sarvam. This is called sarvātmabhāva. And that we completed in the last class.

Now in the following three verses, 16, 17, and 18, Kṛṣṇa gives the definition of the word puruṣōttama and based on this word alone, the very chapter is called puruṣōttama yōgaḥ. What is puruṣōttama? Who is puruṣōttama? Kṛṣṇa tells in these three verses; we will read verse 16.

Verse 15.16

द्वाविमौ पुरुषौ लोके क्षरश्चाक्षर एव च ।
क्षरः सर्वाणि भूतानि कूटस्थोऽक्षर उच्यते ॥ १५.१६ ॥

dvāvimau puruṣau lōkē kṣaraścākṣara ēva ca |
kṣaraḥ sarvāṇi bhūtāni kūṭasthō'kṣara ucyatē || 15.16 ||

क्षरः च kṣaraḥ ca The perishable एव च अक्षरः ēva ca akṣaraḥ and the imperishable इमौ imau these are द्वौ पुरुषौ dvau puruṣau the two puruṣaḥ s लोके lōkē in the world, क्षरः kṣaraḥ the perishable सर्वाणि भूतानि sarvāṇi bhūtāni is in the form of all beings अक्षरः akṣaraḥ the imperishable is said to be उच्यते कूटस्थः ucyatē kūṭasthaḥ the deceptive (Maya).

16. The Perishable and the imperishable – these are the two puruṣaḥs in the world. The perishable is in the form of all beings. The imperishable is said to be the deceptive (Maya).

First I all give the gist of these three verses, so that you will get a total picture, then understanding these verses is easier. To reveal Puruṣōttama, Lord Kṛṣṇa divides the whole universe into three portions or three components; aṁśa trayam is going to be talked about. What are the three portions of the universe? The first portion is the visible universe, which is accessible, perceptible to our sense organs. This sensorially visible, tangible universe is one component and this we can call the manifest matter. Because the universe, this visible universe is made up of matter, we know. Scientifically it has been shown that the world is made up of matter and even scripturally we know that the world is made up of pañca bhūtāni, ākāśa, vāyu, āpaḥ, pṛthvi, and all of them are matter, inert-matter-principle. Therefore, the first component is what? Manifest matter. And Kṛṣṇa gives a technical for this component and that is kṣaraḥ puruṣaḥ. This manifest matter, shortened MM, manifest matter; Kṛṣṇa calls kṣara puruṣaḥ. And this we have to very carefully note, because normally, matter is indicated only by the word prakṛti. Normally matter is referred to as prakṛti tatvam; but this is an exceptional context in which the manifest matter is called kṣaraḥ puruṣaḥ.

Then Kṛṣṇa talks about the second component, what is that? When matter is destroyed; what happens to matter? We know scientifically, logically and śāstrically that matter cannot be totally destroyed; by the law of conservation of matter and therefore when matter is destroyed, it will get converted into unmanifest form, you may call it energy form, but it goes to the invisible intangible, unmanifest form and therefore at the time of total destruction of this universe, at the time of pralaya, the matter will continue but not in the form of manifest matter, but it will survive in the form of unmanifest matter and therefore the second component of the universe is matter in unmanifest form.

So unmanifest matter which is also inert in nature, is the second component. UM. That was MM. This is UM. Kṛṣṇa gives a technical name for this, as akṣara puruṣaḥ. Akṣara puruṣaḥ. This is also an exceptionally rare usage because normally, the word akṣara puruṣaḥ is used for Nirguṇam Brahma or consciousness. That is the general feeling; but in this exceptional context; the unmanifest matter, you may called it energy; is named akṣara puruṣaḥ. In other context, that alone is called Māya, because in Vēdānta Māya is unmanifest universe, unmanifest matter, and that māya tatvam, unmanifest matter-principle, in this context is called akṣaram puruṣaḥ. So we have manifest matter; unmanifest matter; kṣaraḥ puruṣaḥ and akṣara puruṣaḥ.

Then the third component of the entire cosmos is the consciousness principle. Consciousness principle, cētana tatvam is the third component, because according to our scriptures, consciousness is distinct from matter. Remember, consciousness is not a part, product or property of matter.

Consciousness is a distinct and independent entity; it is neither a part of matter; nor a property of matter, nor is it a product of matter. Material sciences think that consciousness is a product or phenomenon in matter, vēdānta strongly rejects that view and vēdānta says consciousness is independent of matter and this independent consciousness is the third component or part of this universe. And this consciousness principle, Kṛṣṇa names Uttamaḥ puruṣaḥ. This consciousness principle, Kṛṣṇa calls uttamaḥ puruṣaḥ. Do not put UM, it will create problem. So Supreme puruṣaḥ. SM. OK.

Now you make a comparative study of these three components. We will see certain important differences among them; of these three. What are the three? Manifest matter, unmanifest matter, consciousness. Of these three, the first two components being matter, both of them are acētana tatvam; inert principle, whereas the third one being consciousness, it is cētana tatvam. First two are inert, the third one is sentient. Then the first two principles being matter, or material, it is full of varieties of properties or attributes or qualities. In Sānskrīt, we call it guṇaḥ; therefore the first two components are saḡuṇam in nature, whereas the consciousness according to vēdānta is free from all the attributes; therefore nirguṇa tatvam. Seventh chapter I have said, I am just reminding; one is cētanam, the other is acētanam; one is saḡuṇam and the other is nirguṇam.

Then the third difference, both manifest and unmanifest is subject to modification; violent changes. Matter can never remain the same. It is constantly undergoing changes. In fact, this manifest and unmanifest matter themselves are inter-convertible.

Manifest matter can be converted into unmanifest matter can be converted into manifest matter. In scientific language, we say matter and energy are inter-convertible. The whole $E = mc^2$ equation is only revealing the fact of the inter-convertibility of matter and energy. In fact, at the time of creation, unmanifest matter is getting converted into manifest matter and at the time of praḡayam or dissolution, what is happening is the manifest matter is getting converted.

अव्यक्ताद्व्यक्तयः सर्वाः प्रभवन्त्यहरागमे ।
रात्र्यागमे प्रलीयन्ते तत्रैवाव्यक्तसंज्ञके ॥ ८.१८ ॥

[avyaktād-vyaktayaḥ sarvāḥ prabhavantyaharāgamē |
rātryāgamē praliyantē tatraivāvyaktasaṃjñakē || 8.18 ||](#)

We had seen a parallel idea in the 8th chapter. This topic has come there also. Therefore the first two are savikāram, whereas consciousness is nirvikāram. You cannot say there is manifest consciousness getting converted into unmanifest consciousness. You cannot say that. Because if you talk about the transformation of consciousness itself into manifest and unmanifest, etc. consciousness also will be subject to change, but it is not so. So acētanam, cētanam, saḡuṇam, nirguṇam, savikāram, nirvikāram.

Then the fourth difference, the matter-principle, both manifest and unmanifest are subject to divisions; they are subject to divisions; it is divisible principle. This body itself can be divided. This carpet can be divided. In fact our body gets divided; teeth is missing after some years. After some time, hair will disappear; one by one it will disappear; and we all add also. Artificial one; whereas consciousness-principle is indivisible. One is savikalpam is matter, savikalpam is divisible; nirvikalpam is consciousness. And finally and most importantly, matter does not have an independent existence of its own. It does not have the svatantra satta. Therefore it is called mithya. Therefore both kṣara puruṣaḥ and akṣara puruṣaḥ both are mithya whereas uttama puruṣaḥ, the consciousness-principle alone has independent existence and therefore it is called satyam and therefore uttama puruṣaḥ alone lends existence to kṣara and akṣara puruṣaḥ. Just as the screen lends existence to the movie drama going. Similarly, the uttama puruṣaḥ lends existence to the kṣaraḥ, akṣara puruṣaḥ drama going on which is called creation, destruction. Matter manifests; matters goes to unmanifest form. All these drama is sustained by the screen called uttama puruṣaḥ, the caitanyam.

And therefore of these three components, Kṛṣṇa says that the third component is the supreme one. Why? Because that is sarva ādharam. Viśvadhāram gagana sadṛśam. (Mēghavarṇam should not be said here), is uttama puruṣaḥ.

And having said this much, Kṛṣṇa very intelligently says that uttama puruṣaḥ, the consciousness alone is my real nature. This caitanya tatvam alone is my real nature and therefore I would like to claim myself not as kṣaraḥ puruṣaḥ, I would no claim and I won't claim myself as the akṣara puruṣaḥ also, but I would like to claim myself as Uttama puruṣaḥ, which is cētana nirguṇa, nirvikāra, nirvikalpa tatvam. And since I am the uttama puruṣaḥ, in the whole world as I am known as puruṣōttama, by reversing these two words; uttama puruṣaḥ reversed as puruṣaḥ uttamah. Puruṣōttama. I am Puruṣōttama, the nirguṇa caitanam. இதுதான் ஸாரம். This is the sāram; the essence. Now we will go to the verse.

Lōkē dvāvi puruṣau mau. In this cosmos, in this creation; firstly there are two puruṣaḥs. The third one will be introduced later. First he talks about two puruṣaḥs, and what are they known as? Kṣaraḥ ca ēva ca; those puruṣaḥs are known as kṣaraḥ puruṣaḥ and akṣaraḥ puruṣaḥ. And who are they? Kṛṣṇa himself defines them. Kṣaraḥ sarvani bhūtani, all the things and beings, which are visible matter; beings and things means what? The visible material universe. The word 'beings' represent our physical body, and the word 'things' represents all the objects, both the body as well as the objects come under visible matter. Remember the body also comes under matter-principle, because the body is made up of iron, sodium, carbon, nickel, cobalt, etc. You will know it when there is deficiency. They will be iron deficiency; you should eat of lot of keera. It is made of all those things; and therefore, sarvāni bhūtani, the entire visible matter is kṣaraḥ puruṣaḥ and kūṣasthō'kṣara ucyatē. Kūṣasthaḥ, the unmanifest matter.

It is a very misleading word, because the kūṣasthaḥ has come in the 8th chapter and in the 12th chapter. If you do not remember, you are blessed. If you remember by mistake; in those two chapters, the word kūṣasthaḥ has a different meaning.

Therefore in this context, the word kūṭasthaḥ means unmanifest matter; maya tatvam. And since this maya is relatively eternal, it is kūṭasthaḥ. Kūṭasthaḥ means relatively eternal. kūṭasthaḥ the unmanifest matter is akṣara uchyatē, means it is called akṣara puruṣaḥ. So in this slōka what has He said; manifest matter is kṣara puruṣaḥ; unmanifest matter is akṣara puruṣaḥ. After that:

उत्तमः पुरुषस्त्वन्य परमात्मेत्युदाहृतः ।
यो लोकत्रयमाविश्य बिभर्त्यव्यय ईश्वरः ॥ १५.१७ ॥

uttamaḥ puruṣastvanyaḥ paramātmētyudāhṛtaḥ |
yō lōkatrayamāviśya bibhartavyaya īśvaraḥ || 15.17 ||

अन्यः तु anyaḥ tu different (from these), उत्तमः पुरुषः uttamaḥ puruṣaḥ is the supreme puruṣaḥ उदाहृतः इति udāhṛtaḥ iti said to be, परमात्मा paramātmā the supreme Self, यः आविश्य yaḥ āviśya which pervades and बिभर्ति bibharti sustains लोकत्रयम् lōkatrayam the three worlds अव्ययः ईश्वरः avyayaḥ īśvaraḥ it is the imperishable Lord.

17. Different (from these) is the Supreme puruṣaḥ, said to be the supreme Self, which pervades and sustains the three worlds. It is the imperishable Lord.

Anyāḥ; so there is a different principle, a third principle, other than kṣaraḥ and akṣara puruṣaḥ. Other than the manifest and unmanifest matter, there is a principle which is called caitanyam. Since we used the word consciousness, we have to supply anyāḥ means the cētana tatvam. How do you know; because the previous two are acētana tatvams; so this is cētana tatvam. And what is the cētana tatvam? Uttamaḥ puruṣaḥ is the third component of this creation; which is called uttama puruṣaḥ. And what is its nature? You have to supply, the uttama puruṣaḥ caitanyam is nirguṇam, nirvikāram, nirvikalpam and satyam.

That satyam must be remembered very well. Otherwise you will wonder there are three tatvams; how do you talk about advaitam. Even though we have enumerated three tatvams, kṣaraḥ, akṣara, uttama, still we say advaitam because two of them are mithya; mithya means unreal; and therefore, those two cannot be counted. Satyam is only one. And therefore it is uttama puruṣaḥ, satya tatvam iti.

And this uttama puruṣaḥ, the caitanyam, is known as paramātmētyudāhṛtaḥ. In all the upaniṣads, this consciousness-principle is called paramātmā.

उपद्रष्टानुमन्ता च भर्ता भोक्ता महेश्वरः ।
परमात्मेति चाप्युक्तः देहेऽस्मिन्पुरुषः परः ॥ १३.२३ ॥

upadraṣṭā'numantā ca bhartā bhōktā mahēśvaraḥ |
paramātmēti cāpyuktō dēhē'smin puruṣaḥ paraḥ || 13.23 ||

It comes in the 13th chapter, paramātmētyudāhṛtaḥ. What is the function of this uttama puruṣaḥ? We know the functions of the matter, manifest and unmanifest matter, its functions we know; because all the sciences are dealing with what? Matter and energy. And all the advancements are in the field of matter and energy.

Now the question of what is function and role of the uttama puruṣaḥ, the paramātma. Kṛṣṇa says: yaḥ, this uttama puruṣaḥ is lōkatrayamāviśya. Pervades all the three universes. All the three worlds. āviśya. Pervades. Penetrates, inheres. And here the word lōkā trayam represents kṣara, akṣara puruṣaḥ.

So lōkā traya āviśya, pervading the matter-principle, what does the uttama puruṣaḥ do? Bibarthi, means sustains; supports lends existence; exactly like what? Gold pervades all the ornaments and lends existence. Wood pervades all the furniture and lends existence. Water pervades all the waves and lends existence. Minus gold, no ornaments. Minus wood, no furniture. Minus water, no wave. Minus uttama puruṣaḥ, there can be neither kṣara puruṣaḥ nor akṣara puruṣaḥ. No matter or energy is possible without consciousness principle. Consciousness is the very substance behind matter and energy. And therefore lōkatrayamāviśya bibharti, śāstha purthi pradhātha bhavathi.

And avyayaḥ. Even though the consciousness pervades the changing matter, consciousness itself does not undergo any change. In the movie, the characters may move, the vehicles may run, but the screen does not run. Not 'does not run'; 'should not run, In fact, in the presence of the stationary screen alone, all the movements are possible. Similarly in the presence of the motionless consciousness alone, all the changes of the universe are possible. That anchor of the universe is consciousness. Therefore avyayaḥ. avyayaḥ means changeless.

And not only that Īśvara. Īśvara means this consciousness even though pervades the changing matter, the consciousness is not affected by, not tormented by whatever happens in the material universe. The body may be born; it may grow old, and it may die and the individual level; upheavals may take place in the cosmos; there may be atomic explosions; whatever happens to matter, consciousness is unaffected; Therefore it is called master; svatantraḥ. Īśvaraḥ means master of matter; not the slave of matter. Consciousness is not a slave of matter; that means whatever happens to matter, consciousness is asaṅgaḥ. நான் என் செய்யும்; கோள் என் செய்யும்; வினை தான் என் செய்யும். Nal en cheyam, kol en cheyam, vinay than en cheyam. All the navagrahas may affect the body. Navagrahas cannot affect the caitanya ātma tatvam. Achēdyōyam, adhāhyōyam, etc. you have to remember. Therefore, consciousness is the real God. Īśvaraḥ.

Verse 15.18

यस्मात्क्षरमतीतोऽहम् अक्षरादपि चोत्तमः ।
अतोऽस्मि लोके वेदे च प्रथितः पुरुषोत्तमः ॥ १५.१८ ॥

yasmāt kṣaramatītō'ham akṣarādapi cōttamaḥ |
atō'smi lōkē vēdē ca prathitaḥ puruṣōttamaḥ || 15.18 ||

यस्मात् yasmāt since अहम् अतीतः aham atītaḥ I am beyond क्षरम् kṣaram kṣarapurusa अपि api and च उत्तमः ca uttamaḥ beyond अक्षरात् akṣarāt akṣarapuruṣaḥ अतः ataḥ therefore अस्मि प्रथितः asmi praśitaḥ I am well known लोके lōkē in the world च वेदे ca vēdē and in the vēda s, पुरुषोत्तमः puruṣōttamaḥ as puruṣōttamaḥ.

18. Since I am beyond Kṣarapurusaḥ and beyond Akṣarapurusaḥ therefore, I am well-known in the world and in the Vēdas as puruṣōttamaḥ.

This third component, viz., the consciousness-principle is kṣaram atītaḥ. Atītaḥ, superior to. Consciousness is superior to kṣaraḥ puruṣa; kṣaram means manifest matter, Consciousness is superior to manifest matter. And also akṣarat api uttamaḥ. Consciousness is superior to even unmanifest matter. It is superior to even all forms of energy.

That is why we should remember, consciousness is not a form of energy. Consciousness is a principle, distinct from and superior to all forms of energy, because energy is only unmanifest matter. Therefore Kṛṣṇa says consciousness is superior to manifest matter, and unmanifest matter.

And in Sānskrīt, the word uttamaḥ means superiormost. Uttamaḥ means superior most. And since the consciousness is superior to both kṣara and akṣara puruṣaḥ, it has been given the title uttamaḥ puruṣaḥ. Athaḥ. Therefore, means what? Being the superior most prathithaḥ; the consciousness is well known, as what? Uttamaḥ puruṣaḥ, or if you reverse it, puruṣōttamaḥ. The consciousness is well known as puruṣōttamaḥ, being the uttamaḥ puruṣaḥ. And where is it well known? lōke ca, vēdē ca. Both in the world of people as well as in the scriptures. Both in the world and in the scriptures, it is called uttama puruṣaḥ or puruṣōttamaḥ.

But here Kṛṣṇa does a small mischief, instead of saying Consciousness is superior Kṛṣṇa quietly identifies that consciousness claiming it as His real nature. And therefore Arjuna, that consciousness is Myself. Do not look at My body. My body is kṣara puruṣaḥ. Do not look at My body. Then who am I? I am the consciousness-principle behind the Kṛṣṇa śārīram and that therefore that is My real nature and therefore I would say I am the Uttama puruṣaḥ, superior to kṣaraḥ puruṣaḥ and superior to akṣara puruṣaḥ. Therefore I am uttama puruṣaḥ. And therefore I am called puruṣōttamaḥ.

Therefore Kṛṣṇa says: Aham, That is myself, சைதன்யத்துக்கு பதிலாக நான் என்ற வார்த்தையை சொல்லிட்டார். Instead of the word caitanyam. Kṛṣṇa is puruṣōttamaḥ. We are not referring to Kṛṣṇa śārīram; we are not referring to Saguṇa Kṛṣṇa; we are referring to the nirguṇa Kṛṣṇa, who is caitanya svarūpaḥ. And therefore, I am puruṣōttamaḥ.

So with this, Kṛṣṇa concludes the definition of the word Puruṣōttamaḥ. And because of this reason alone, this chapter is called Puruṣōttamaḥ yōga and now Kṛṣṇa says the aim of every spiritual-seeker is the knowledge of Puruṣōttamaḥ. Puruṣōttamaḥ jñānam is the aim of every seeker. So he says,

यो मामेवमसंमूढः जानाति पुरुषोत्तमम् ।
स सर्वविद्भजति मां सर्वभावेन भारत ॥ १५.१९ ॥

yō māmēvamasammūḍhō jānāti puruṣōttamam |
sa sarvavidbhajati mām sarvabhāvēna bhārata || 15.19 ||

असंमूढः asaṃmuḍhaḥ Undeluded सः यः saḥ yaḥ he who, एवं जानाति evam jānāti thus knows, मां पुरुषोत्तमम् mām puruṣōttamam Me, the puruṣōttamaḥ सर्ववित् sarvavit is the knower of all भजति माम् bhajati mām he worships Me सर्वभावेन sarvabhāvēna wholeheartedly भारत bhārata Oh Arjuna.

19. Undeluded, he who thus knows me, the puruṣōttamaḥ, is the knower of all. He worships Me wholeheartedly, Oh Arjuna!

So here the Lord says all the intelligent people of the world will not go after kṣara puruṣaḥ; they will not go after akṣara puruṣaḥ, they will go after uttama puruṣaḥ; puruṣōttamaḥ, the nirguṇam brahma. Whereas deluded people alone will be materialistic people. What do you mean materialistic people? Going after manifest matter; or unmanifest matter; and they are asaṃmuḍhaḥ, deluded people, whereas asaṃmuḍhaḥ, a vivēkhi, a sādhana catuṣṭaya sampanna will go after uttama puruṣaḥ, puruṣōttamaḥ, by following karma, upāsana and jñāna-yōga.

Ultimately what will they do? Puruṣaḥ tatvam jānathi. They will come to know puruṣōttamaḥ; the nirguṇa, nirvikāra, nirvikalpa, cētana, brahma tatvam jānathi. So intelligent people know the puruṣōttama. And those people, saha sarvavit bhavathi. They are called the omniscient ones, because by knowing Brahman, they have known everything because Brahman alone is everything. Brahman alone is everything; And therefore, knowing Brahman is knowing everything. Ēka vijñānēna sarva vijñānam.

Therefore, sa sarvavidbhajati. Puruṣōttama jñānēna sarvavit bhavathi. And thereafter he will continue to worship me, but his worship will be of a higher order.

So Kṛṣṇa says sa sarvabhāvēna mām bhajati. Such a jñāni will worship me in totality. Wholeheartedly, fully, he will worship me.

And what do you mean by wholeheartedly or fully worshipping? Śankarācārya says, the worship will be in the form of the knowledge that that puruṣōttama is none other than I, the ātma caitanyam. That all-pervading consciousness puruṣōttama is I, the consciousness, obtaining within my body, mind complex. And therefore, jñāni worships in the form of advaita bhakthi. So sarva bhavēna means advaita bhavēna, abhēda bhavēna.

And in the 7th chapter, Kṛṣṇa talked about four layers of bhakthi, artha bhakthi, artharthi bhakthi, jijñāsu bhakthi and jñāni bhakthi; and there Kṛṣṇa said jñāni bhakthi is the highest bhakthi; that is advaita bhakthi. I do not whether you remember. If you forgotten, please revise. He enters the abhēda jñāni bhakthi. So saḥ sarva bhavēna mam bhajathi. And continuing Kṛṣṇa concludes:

इति गुह्यतमं शास्त्रम् इदमुक्तं मयानघ ।
एतद् बुद्ध्वा बुद्धिमान्स्यात् कृतकृत्यश्च भारत ॥ १५.२० ॥

iti guhyatamaṁ śāstramidamuktaṁ mayā'nagha |
ētat buddhvā buddhimān syāt kṛtakṛtyaśca bhārata || 15.20 ||

20. O Arjuna! Thus this most secret teaching has been imparted by Me. Having known this, one becomes wise and fulfilled, Oh Arjuna!

इदमुक्तं शास्त्रम् गुह्यतमं idamuktaṁ śāstram guhyatamaṁ. This teaching about sarvatmakam brahma, this teaching about puruṣōttamaḥ, both are one and same, sarvakatma brahma, or puruṣōttamaḥ, are same. This teaching about Brahman or puruṣōttamaḥ, this Brahma vidya or puruṣōttamaḥ vidya is guhyatamaṁ. The greatest secret not available that easily. You may go all over the world, there may be so many universities giving varieties of courses and there may be additions of newer and newer courses, but all those courses will be dealing with what? Either kṣara puruṣaḥ or akṣara puruṣaḥ. All the researches in the world happening, they are dealing with what? kṣara or akṣara; all objective sciences are material sciences, all the material sciences are kṣara, akṣara puruṣaḥ vidya, and Muṇḍaka upaniṣad calls them, apara vidya, they are all inferior sciences; whereas para vidya is that which is the study of puruṣōttamaḥ, the nirguṇa caitanyam. In fact some of the scientists claim and assert that the material sciences can never study consciousness. Therefore if you want that knowledge, that is very very rarely available Arjuna and I have told you that secret.

So Idam maya ukthaṁ. And why I choose you for teaching? Firstly you asked, that is important, and secondly you deserved the teaching also, because you are anagha; Anagha means what? Pure minded. Agam means pāpam; anagha, pāpa rahithaḥ, śuddha puruṣaḥ. Since you are pure one, I choose to give you this teaching.

Ētat buddhvā; may you receive this teaching and assimilate this teaching. And how should you assimilate, by practising that uttama puruṣaḥ, I am. I am neither the body which is the kṣara puruṣaḥ; nor the mind, which is also kṣara puruṣaḥ; nor even the kāraṇa śarīram which is akṣara puruṣaḥ. You can connect to Māndūkya also; I am not the prathama, dvitheeya pāda, which is the kṣara puruṣaḥ, I am not the thṛthīya pāda, which is the akṣara puruṣaḥ, but I am the Turiyam, which is the Uttama puruṣaḥ. In fact, the word uttama puruṣaḥ and this is the teaching given in the eighth chapter of the Chandōgya upaniṣad. That is the basis for the fifteenth chapter.

So ētat buddhvā; may you receive and assimilate and buddhimansyāt, may you become buddhiman, means wise person. Until now you are buddhuman. So buddhu man (Man, English man), may you become buddhiman. May you become wise person.

Then you will ask the fundamental question; what will I get out of it? That is the question. Kṛṣṇa says; there is a practical benefit; what is that practical benefit? This knowledge alone will give fulfilment in life. Kṛta kṛthyāḥ bhava. You will get fulfilment only by this knowledge. Nothing else will give you fulfilment; even if it gives fulfilment, it is a fake and temporary fulfilment. Sooner or later, you are again ready for next thing. அதுக்கு அப்புறம் என்ன? Then what? Therefore the journey of fulfilment ends only when you get this wisdom. Therefore, puruṣōttama jñānēna, tripthiḥ bhavathi. Atman ēva, atmana tripthaḥ bhavathi, hey Bhāratha, hey Arjuna.

So with this Kṛṣṇa completes this teaching, giving the phalam of this knowledge.

Thus ends the fifteenth chapter named puruṣōttama yōgaḥ in Srimad-bhagavad Gīta which is the essence of the upaniṣads, which deals with Brahman-knowledge as well as the preparatory disciplines, and which is in the form of a dialogue between Lord Kṛṣṇa and Arjuna.

197 Chapter 15, Summary

Today I will give you a summary of the fifteen chapter of the Gīta, which we completed in the last class. The 15th chapter, titled puruṣōttama yōgaḥ, is a very popular chapter. Many people learn it by-heart, because in many places, people have to chant it compulsorily to get food!! Therefore, many people learn it by-heart and some people learn it because it is one of the shortest chapters, and therefore useful for regular pāraṇam and some people learn it because it is one of the most significant and complete chapters of the Bhagavat Gīta. This contains all the important features of the upaniṣads. Sarva upaniṣad sāra essence is contained in this chapter and therefore this is a very very significant chapter. And for the convenience of our summarisation, I will divide the chapter into five portions and then summarise each portion.

- The first topic is saṃsāra varṇanam; the description of saṃsāra, transmigration.
- The second topic is mōkṣa sādānāni, the spiritual disciplines leading to liberation.
- The third topic is Brahmaṇaḥ sarvātmakatvam; Brahman being in the form of everything. Brahman as everything. Brahmaṇaḥ sarvātmakatvam.
- Then the fourth topic is Brahmaṇaḥ puruṣōttamatvam, Brahman being puruṣōttama,
- And then the fifth and final topic is Brahma jñānam phalam ca. The knowledge of such a Brahman and the benefit of such a knowledge.

These are the five topics of this chapter. We will take one by one and summarise.

1. Saṃsāra varṇanam.

The first topic is saṁsāra varṇanam which we get in the first 2-1/2 verses. In this Lord Kṛṣṇa compares the whole universe to a huge Aśvatta tree, a huge fig tree or peepal tree, because of several common features between the tree and the universe. And Kṛṣṇa himself mentions several common features between the Aśvatta vṛkṣa and the whole universe. I do not want to go to the details. I have enumerated several common features. And among several common features, there is one significant feature, we have to note and remember. And Kṛṣṇa has not mentioned that feature in the 15th chapter but we have to borrow that from the Upaniṣads; because this comparison is not Kṛṣṇa's own invention but it is borrowed from two upaniṣads. One is Kathōpaniṣad where this comparison is elaborately given.

ūrdhvamūlō:'vākṣākha ēṣō:'śvatthaḥ sanātanah |
tadēva śukraṁ tadbrahma tadēvāmṛtamucyātē |
tasmimँllōkāḥ śritāḥ sarvē tadu nātyēti kaścana | ētadvai tat ||2.III.1||

This is a Kathōpaniṣad mantra, from which Lord Kṛṣṇa has borrowed this imagery. Also the same comparison comes in Muṇḍaka upaniṣad also.

द्वा सुपर्णा सयुजा सखाया समानं वृक्षं परिषस्वजाते । तयोरन्यः पिप्पलं स्वाद्वत्त्यनश्नन्नन्यो अभिचाकशीति ॥ 3.I.१ ॥

dvā suparṇā sayujā sakhāyā samānaṁ vṛkṣaṁ pariśasvajātē | tayōranyaḥ pippalaṁ
svādvattyanaśnannanyō abhicākaśīti || 3.I.1 ||

In Kathōpaniṣad, the tree is called Aśvatta vṛkṣa, and Muṇḍakōpaniṣad, it is called pippalam; Aśvatta and pippalam means the same. In the Muṇḍakōpaniṣad, all the jīva rāśis or living beings are compared to the birds which are seated or perched on the saṁsāra tree. If the whole universe is comparable to a tree, all the living beings are comparable to the birds which are seated on different branches of the tree; higher, lower and middle branches. And not only we are the birds seated on the saṁsāra tree, we are constantly consuming the fruits which comes in the saṁsāra vṛkṣa and therefore the jīva bird is eating the fruit which comes in the saṁsāra tree. And those fruits produced by the saṁsāra tree, are of two types, one is called sukha phalam and another is called duḥkha phalam; the fruit of pleasure and the fruit of pain. One is tasty fruit; another is a bitter fruit.

And therefore through the imagery, Lord Kṛṣṇa points out that the universe is going to constantly give us pleasures and pain. Just as tasty and bitter fruits are produced by the tree, the world will constantly produce pleasures and pains and as birds, we the jīvās, will have to constantly experience pleasure and pain. Which means nobody can uniformly expect pleasures, nobody need worry about uniform pain also, life will give you a mixture of pleasure and pain. And therefore pleasures and pains are like the two sides of one coin; you can never have one alone. Just as a one-sided coin is impossible; mere pleasures also is impossible; mere pain also does not exist.

And therefore in life, we have only two options, in life we have got only two options. What are those two options? Welcome the pleasures and be ready to consume the attendant pains also. Welcome the pleasures, with a readiness to consume the painful experiences also; this is one option.

And the second option is what? Reject all the pains but along with the pains, you have reject or forego the worldly pleasures also. Either accept both or reject both. The idea of welcoming one alone and giving up the other, simply is not impossible. So accept both or reject both.

But the problem is if we have to accept both, or reject both, both options require tremendous mental strength. Whether you choose to accept both or whether you choose to reject both; both options require tremendous mental strength. Because when you are accepting both, you should have the mental strength to withstand the pain. When you reject both; you should have the mental strength to give up the worldly pleasures. Both require mental strength.

And the problem of human being is he is weak in his mind. The problem is not with the world; the problem of the human being is, he is weak in mind and therefore neither he is able to accept both nor is he able to reject both. Sometimes he feels like accepting everything, so that he can enjoy a wonderful life; and when the pains also come, then he says, Swamiji, I want to run after leaving everything. When he runs away to a quiet place, he cannot stay there for more than a week. That becomes a miserable life; then he feels coming to the city and leaving with everything is wonderful. When in Chennai, Rīṣikeṣh seems to be wonderful, in Rīṣikeṣh, Chennai seems to be wonderful. Problem is neither with Rīṣikeṣh nor with Chennai, the problem is inside.

And therefore saṁsāra is because of the mental weakness of the human being, because of which he is neither able to accept both pleasures and pain, nor is he able to renounce both pleasure and pain. Neither he is able to take gṛhastha-āśrama nor is he able to take to sanyāsa-āśrama. In Gṛhasthāśrama, sanyāsa-āśrama seems better, and in sanyāsa-āśrama, gṛhastha-āśrama seems the best.

The problem is not with the āśrama, the problem is inside. And therefore the solution is not changing the world, because the nature of the world is that it is a mixture of pleasure and pain. Therefore the solution is removing the weakness from the mind; Gathering, collecting inner strength. Once I gather inner strength; I can choose any of the option. I will have the strength to give up both; or I will have the strength both; I will be able to remain in gṛhastha āśrama or I will be able to remain in Sanyāsa Āśrama. I will be able to remain in an active life or I will be able to remain in a secluded life.

So secluded life is also not better; active life is also not better; problem is neither with activity, with seclusion; the problem is with the mind. And therefore freedom from saṁsāra is freedom from mental weakness.

Therefore mōkṣa is transformation of the mind. manaēva manuṣyāṇām kāraṇam bandha mōkṣayō. Mind alone is the cause of bondage, mind alone is the cause of liberation. The weak mind is the cause of bondage; strong mind is the cause of liberation. So this idea is indirectly conveyed through saṁsāra varṇanam, in the first two and half verses of this chapter.

2. Mōkṣa sādhanāni.

Then comes the second topic from the second half of the third verse up to the 6th verse. Verse No.3 to verse No.6, is the next topic. How do you make the mind strong? What is the method of strengthening the mind, so that I can be in gṛhastha-āśrama and enjoy the pleasures of the family members and also the problems caused by relationship? Every relationship has two sides. Or I can give up all relationship and take sanyāsa and enjoy that state also. How to strengthen the mind; Kṛṣṇa prescribes four-fold disciplines? Four sādhanās are mentioned. No.1 Vairāgyam. No.2, sadguṇāḥ; No.3 śaraṇāgathiḥ and No.4 ātma vichāraḥ or śāstra vicāraḥ. Vairāgyam, sadguṇāḥ, śaraṇāgathiḥ and śāstra vicāraḥ.

What do you mean by Vairāgyam? Vairāgyam is freedom from addiction. Freedom from slavery, with regard to the tamasic and rājasic pursuits of life. Freedom from addiction to tamasic and rājasic pursuits of life. What do you mean by tamasic pursuits? Any adharmic activity, unrighteous activity, improper activity, unethical activity or pursuit is called tamasic pursuit. I have to give up all such addictions and pursuits or improper nature. That is de-addiction No.1.

And the second de-addiction is from rājasic pursuits. And that is dhārmic materialistic activities are called rājasic pursuits. I take to dhārmic activities only but they are all materialistic in nature. They are called rājasic pursuit. The tāmasic addiction will lead to spiritual downfall; rājasic addiction will lead to spiritual stagnation. Tāmasic pursuits will lead to spiritual downfall; and rājasic pursuits will not lead to downfall, but it will lead to spiritual stagnation; And therefore reduction of the adharmic activities and the reduction of dharmic materialistic activities is called vairāgyam. And how do you remove those two addictions; or at least reduce those two addictions? The method is forming a new addiction. You have to remove the thorn with another thorn. முள்ளை முள்ளால் எடுக்க வேண்டும். அடிசுடினை அடிசுடினால் எடுக்கவேண்டும். Remove addiction with addiction. Tāmasic and rājasic balanced, or reduced by forming sātvic addictions; like attending Gīta class; I have to make sure that you keep coming. So therefore sātvic addiction or good addiction which will reduce tāmasic and rājasic addiction.

Then you will ask Swamiji how to handle sātvic addiction. Let sātvic addiction come first; why are you bothered about handling that now; we will see that when face that problem. We do have methods of handling sātvic addictions also later and therefore, satsaṅga as well as śāstric study, etc. are sātvic addiction, which will promote vairāgyam. Satsaṅgatve, nissāṅgatvam. This is Vairāgyam.

The second sādhana is sadguṇāḥ. Developing vēdānta friendly virtues. Developing virtues which are conducive to vēdānta, conducive to spiritual growth. We have already seen a big list in the 13th chapter, from the 8th verse up to the 12th verse. amānitvam, adambitvam, etc. Kṛṣṇa reminds them in this chapter. Nirmāna mōha, jita saṅgha dōṣa; Nirmāna means amānitvam. Thus developing healthy virtues. Moral values is the second spiritual discipline.

Then the third one is śaraṇāgathiḥ. What do you mean śaraṇāgathiḥ? A very important spiritual disciplines. It is developing a particular attitude in life. Śaraṇāgathi is cultivating a particular attitude. What is that attitude?

Whatever choiceless situations, I face in life; whatever helpless choiceless situations I face in life, they are all specially sent by the Lord for me; made to order, specially designed and sent to me by the Lord; for the sake of my spiritual refinement and growth. A very difficult attitude but we have to cultivate that. That is why we have to cultivate. It will not come easily. You will only get angry with God. Whenever a choiceless situation comes, especially unfavourable choiceless situation. Any unfavourable choiceless situation comes; I cannot change the situation. Why? Choiceless I have said; Swamiji how to change the choiceless situation? I have said that it is choiceless; since choiceless situations cannot be changed; work on changing your attitude. Intelligence is working to change what can be changed. Intelligence is working to change on what can be changed. Therefore in all choiceless unfavourable situations, I work on 'my mind', because I can work on my mind only.

And what is the direction of the work? Changing the attitude. And what is the attitude? I require that situation. I require that situation. And it is specially designed by the Lord and he has sent it to me. This is very very difficult attitude. If you can develop that attitude, this is called śaraṇāgathiḥ. This is the third sādhanā.

And also śaraṇāgathiḥ includes, seeking Lord's help for the spiritual growth, so that I will convert the choiceless situations into a spiritual ladder. Seeking Lord's help so that I will convert choiceless situations into a spiritual ladder or stepping stone. This is called śaraṇāgathiḥ. Vairāgyam, śaraṇāgathiḥ and sadguṇāḥ are all over.

Then the fourth one is śāstra vicāraḥ of Vēdāntic scriptures for a length of time under the guidance of a competent ācārya or guru is called śāstra vicāraḥ. All these four will cumulatively contribute to the reinforcement of the strengthening of the mind, which will lead to mōkṣa. Mōkṣa means freedom from mental weakness. viśṛjya saśaraṇ cāpaṁ śōkasaṃvignamānasaḥ (1.47).

Arjuna, the bravest warrior, was tormented by mental pain when a crisis situation arose. And how does this work the four fold sādhanā? How does it work? That also Kṛṣṇa said, the four fold sādhanā will lead you to Brahma prapthiḥ. It will take you to Brahman, which is the only source of strength in the creation. It will lead you to Brahman, which is the only source of strength in this universe, Brahma prāpthiḥ. And of course you should make a note. When we say that it will lead you to Brahman, do not imagine, Brahman is sitting in Mumbai, Calcutta or somewhere, and the sādhanā will lead you to Brahman, which is your inner higher real nature. You will fall back to yourselves. This Brahma prāpthi is called mōkṣa.

And then Kṛṣṇa defines that Brahman also in an important verse.

न तद्भासयते सूर्यो न शशाङ्को न पावकः |
यद्गत्वा न निवर्तन्ते तद्धाम परमं मम || १५- ६ ||

[na tadbhāsayatē sūryō na śaśāṅkō na pāvakaḥ |
yadgatvā na nivartantē taddhāma paramaṁ mama || 15.6 ||](#)

A very important definition of Brahman based on the upaniṣadic mantra, occurring in Kathōpaniṣad and Muṇḍakōpaniṣad. Na tatra suryō bhathi na candra tārakam. That upaniṣadic verse is paraphrased and in that definition Kṛṣṇa points out that the Brahman is nothing but the pure consciousness which is formless all-pervading entity, which consciousness objectifies everything and which consciousness cannot be objectified by anyone. Unobjectifiable-subject. That consciousness; that witness caitanyam is Brahman, satyam, jñānam, anantham brahma. This is the second topic. Mōkṣa sādhanāni.

3. Brāhmaṇa sarvātmakatvam.

Now we will go to the third topic, from verse No.7 to 15 and in this Lord Kṛṣṇa points out that Brahman alone appears or manifests in the form of the world. There is no world other than Brahman. Brahman is the only substance. Consciousness is the only basic substance. There is no such thing called matter. And this Brahman, this consciousness alone with different names and forms, appears as the material universe. Consciousness plus names and forms is equal to space. Consciousness plus name and form is equal to air. Consciousness plus name and form is fire. Ākāśa, vāyu, Agni, āpaha, pṛthvi and all the elemental products:

Are you understanding? So if you think that there is a substance called ornament, it is a delusion; there is no substance called ornament, the substance is only gold; we are wrongly attributing substantiality to ornament. We are wrongly attributing substantiality to the furniture. Furnitures are not there; then what is there; wood; This the wooden headed fellow does not understand. Clay headed fellow does not understand that the clay is the truth. Wooden headed does not understand that the wood is the truth. Similarly Vēdānta says that there is only one substance called Consciousness; the formless Consciousness manifests as the formed materials of the creation. The intangible consciousness manifests as the tangible material universe. So brahmaiva jagat rūpēṇa varthathe.

And here also the whole world is nāma rūpa, but in this nāma rūpa also, there are two varieties. There are two varieties of nāma rūpa. What are those two varieties? One variety of nāma rūpa is that which manifests the existence-nature of Brahman. Sadrūpam of Brahman alone it manifests. And that is not able to manifest the cit aspect and therefore that part of the creation exists but it is only inert in nature.

But there is another set of nāma rūpa, which is able to manifest, not only the existence the sat nature, but also it is able to manifest the cit or consciousness nature also. Like the physical body it manifests Brahman's existence also, and also consciousness. Here Sat and Cit is visible outside, but when you look at this mike, the existence you are able to appreciate; consciousness, it is not able to manifest.

To give an example, suppose you heat a piece of metal, and a glass of water. You heat a piece of metal and a glass of water. The heat principle, the fire principle will pervade the metal also, the fire principle will pervade the water also, when it comes in contact with fire. We know the fire has got two attributes. What are the two attributes of fire? Heat is one; light is the other. It has got uṣṇatvam and prakāśatvam; the fire pervades the metal also; the fire pervades the water also. But you find interestingly the metal because of the contact with fire, borrows the heat from the fire. Therefore the metal becomes hot; if you have doubt, touch and see. And not only the metal borrows the heat, the metal becomes bright also, shining also, with a red hot metal. Glowing metal. Therefore metal manifests uṣṇatvam and prākaśatvam of the fire.

Whereas what about water? Water comes in contact with fire, but water borrows only the heat part of the fire, water never becomes what, bright. It does not borrow the light. Both are materials; but one is capable of borrowing only one feature, the other is capable of borrowing two features.

Similarly, in the universe, some part will borrow sat aṁśa, another part borrows sat and the cit aṁśa; wherever sat and chit are there; that is called sentient part of the universe, wherever sat alone is manifest, it is called insentient universe. Thus Brahman is manifest in the universe in the form of sat in some portions, in the form of sat and cit and when the cit is manifest in some portion, it is called the jīvaḥ. When sat alone is manifest, it is called jagat. Thus Brahman alone is in the form of the insentient jagath also; Brahman is also in the form of sentient jīva also. Jīva rūpēṇa jagat rūpēṇa; sadrūpēṇa cidrūpēṇa; Brahman is everywhere.

And Kṛṣṇa concludes that portion saying when Brahman is manifest in this whole creation, just as gold is manifest in all ornaments, Brahman is manifest. If a person misses this Brahman, which is evident everywhere, that person must be a very very gross and unrefined person. Like looking at the ornaments and missing the gold. Looking at the electrical gadgets and missing the electricity. Similarly looking at all human beings, if I miss the consciousness in everyone.

उत्क्रामन्तं स्थितं वापि भुञ्जानं वा गुणान्वितम् ।
विमूढा नानुपश्यन्ति पश्यन्ति ज्ञानचक्षुषः ॥ १५.१० ॥

vimūḍhā nānupaśyanti paśyanti jñānacakṣuṣaḥ || 15.10 ||](#)

My capacity to talk is an expression of the consciousness-principle and your capacity to hear is an expression of consciousness principle; minus consciousness, I cannot talk and you cannot hear. And if a person misses this consciousness it is his problem. And for a person who has prepared the mind; Brahman is appreciated everywhere. Paśyanti jñāna cakṣuṣaḥ. This is the third topic. Brahman being cētana-acētana prapañcaḥ or sarvātmakatvam.

4. Brahmaṇa puruṣōttamatvam.

Then the 4th topic from the 16th to 18th verse is Brahmaṇa puruṣōttamatvam. Brahman being puruṣōttamaḥ. And to convey this idea, Lord Kṛṣṇa divides the whole universe into three parts; three components. What are those three?

No.1, manifest matter; the material universe which is manifest; manifest meaning visible to the sense organs,

And the second part is unmanifest matter; that matter which is not sensorily perceptible or tangible. You can call it energy. We will use the word unmanifest matter; MM and UM.

And then beyond these two, matter and energy, there is the third part, which is the all-pervading consciousness principle, which is a distinct entity; which alone, we called in Tatva Bōdha, the original consciousness, OC. MM, UM and OC. OC means the original consciousness. This is not part of matter, this is not product of matter, this is not property of matter, but it is an independent entity. The first one is called kṣara puruṣaḥ, the second one is called akṣara puruṣaḥ and the third one is called uttama puruṣaḥ.

And Kṛṣṇa says, of these three factors, the third one consciousness alone is the greatest principle. Is the highest principle. The word uttama means the greatest utkṛṣṭa tama, uttama. What is the reason? Because matter cannot exist independent of consciousness, whereas consciousness can exist independent of matter. Consciousness alone lends existence to the matter.

Therefore, Kṣara puruṣaḥ is inferior, akṣara puruṣaḥ manifest and unmanifest matter and when I say matter, it includes the reflected consciousness also. Even if I do not say, include it. RC is also included in Kṣara puruṣaḥ. And akṣara puruṣaḥ also RC; if you do not know, what is RC, I do not want to get into that. Just take it as matter is inferior, OC the original consciousness is uttamaḥ puruṣaḥ. And this uttama puruṣaḥ alone is reversed and called puruṣōttamaḥ.

And Lord Kṛṣṇa says that uttama puruṣaḥ or puruṣōttama is My real and higher-nature; which was called in the 7th chapter, as Parā prakṛtiḥ. The uttama puruṣa of the 15th chapter is the para prakṛti of the 7th chapter. Therefore Arjuna: real God is formless consciousness. The real God is formless consciousness and He is not (one should not say HE) and that God is not located anywhere. That formless, intangible consciousness which is the real God is all pervading. Then all the forms attributed to God in the religious scriptures are temporarily given as a stepping stone to go to the formless God. From the form, you go to the formless. Form is the stepping stone to the formless one.

Every person in the beginning is not capable of appreciating the formless God. The attributeless God, everybody cannot understand, because mantāḥ. Upaniṣads says mantāḥ. For them you give a support: Rāma form, Kṛṣṇa form, and that is why we have no quarrel with any form that you choose. As a Iṣṭa dēvatha, you can choose any form, but form is only a stepping stone, the destination is not form. Destination is the formless. And when you reach the destination, formless-Viṣṇu is identical with formless Śiva, who is identical with formless Kṛṣṇa, who is identical with formless Rāma. Why do you quarrel? That I am śaiva; I am vaiṣṇavite. Religious quarrel is meaningless if religion is understood properly.

That is why somebody said that we have enough religion for quarrel, we do not have enough religion to live harmoniously, because it is not understood.

Thus formless puruṣōttama is the real Kṛṣṇa, who says? Kṛṣṇa. So where is He? There and Here. So this is the puruṣōttama topic. Very important because of which the chapter is called puruṣōttama yōgaḥ.

5. Brahma jñānam.

Then the last topic end two verses, 19 and 20, Kṛṣṇa talks about Brahma jñānam. Hey Arjuna, everyone has to attain this Brahma jñānam to derive mental strength, so that you can live a life of a gṛhastha or you can live a life of sanyāsi, without any burden. Therefore jñānam is the destination of all; and the benefit of this jñānam is kṛtakṛtyaśca bhārata. You will attain total fulfilment. Kṛtakṛtyatvam means total fulfilment in life. You will feel that the life has been a meaningful life. To make the life meaningful, you have to attain this jñānam. This jñānam and phalam, the fifth and final topic of the 15th chapter is over.

ॐ तत् सत् इति श्रीमद्भगवद्गीतासूपनिषत्सु ब्रह्मविद्यायां योगशास्त्रे श्रीकृष्णार्जुनसंवादे पुरुषोत्तमयोगो नाम पञ्चदशोऽध्यायः ॥

||ōṃ tatsaditi śrīmadbhagavadgītāsūpaniṣatsu brahmavidyāyāṃ yōgaśāstrē śrīkṛṣṇārjunasaṃvādē puruṣōttamayōgō nāma pañcadaśō'dhyāyaḥ||

Thus ends the fifteenth chapter named puruṣōttama yōga in Srimad-Bhagavad Gīta which is the essence of the Upaniṣads, which deals with Brahman-knowledge as well as the preparatory disciplines, and which is in the form of a dialogue between Lord Kṛṣṇa and Arjuna.

198 Chapter 16, Verse - 01

Having completed the 15th chapter, now we will enter into the 16th chapter of the Gītā. The two chapters 16th and 17th have got a subject matter, which is different from the main subject matter of the previous three chapters, 13th, 14th, and 15th. There is a shift in Kṛṣṇa's teaching.

And this shift in the subject matter is based on a very important principle and that principle is that the goal of life of a person; a person's goal of life and a person's way of life, both of them are closely related. The way of life and the goal of life; when I say goal, the primary top most goal of life, these two are closely connected. Each one will influence the other; the goal of life will influence my way of life, and my way of life in turn will influence my goal of life also. Therefore, these two things cannot be separated and therefore, if a person wants to successfully accomplish his goal of life, he has to take into account his very way of life also. One cannot ignore the way of life, and fix the goal of life alone. One should pay attention to the way of life, and also it has to be made in such a way, that there is alignment between the way and the goal. One should align and tune the way of life in such a way, that it is conducive to the accomplishment of the goal.

This our scriptures especially the Vēdās consider very very important. You cannot hope to lead any way of life, and you cannot hope to accomplish any goal of life which is totally disconnected from the way of life. It is impossible. Just as the environment and the type of plant, both are interconnected. You cannot grow any type of plant in any type of atmosphere. It is impossible. Both are interconnected.

And therefore, the Vēdā pūrva bhāga, the beginning portion of the Vēdās concentrate upon the way of life; and the final portion of the Vēdā, the Vēdānta concentrates upon the goal of life. So if we do have a particular culture, which is determined by Vēdā pūrva, you can understand the significance of our culture only if you keep in mind the way Vēdānta which talks about the goal. Indian culture can never be understood without keeping Vēdānta in mind.

And therefore Lord Kṛṣṇa also feels that he has talked about the spiritual goal of life; He has talked about the self-knowledge as the goal of life, in the 13th, 14th and 15th chapters, and Kṛṣṇa feels that His teaching is complete only when He talks about the complimentary part; viz., the way of life, which is conducive to and which will promote the goal that He has presented in the previous chapters. Therefore, previous three chapters deal with the goal, these two chapters, 16th and the 17th deal with the way of life, because they cannot be separated.

And the way of life, a person leads is heavily determined by the character that a person possesses. The way of life is heavily influenced by, determined by, controlled by, directed by the character, the personality, the make-up of an individual. Therefore character determines the way of life, and the way of life will determine the goal of life. Therefore all these three are inter-connected; Character, Way and Goal. And trying to tamper one alone, without taking into account the other two, will be a lopsided approach, which will not be successful. All the three we should take into account. And based on this, our scriptures divide or studies the character of the human being. And all possible characters. It is a full-fledged śāstra, and our scriptures have made a thorough study of the possible human characters, because character will determine the way of life, which will in turn, determine the goal.

And this human character is divided into several types in different contexts; sometimes they classify into four types; sometimes they classify into three types; sometimes they classify into two types; different classifications are there; depending upon the context. And for our study, we will see the three-fold classification of human character. The three fold classification of human character.

The first classification is called dvēsaḥ -pradhāna svabhāvaḥ; dvēsaḥ -pradhāna svabhāvaḥ; a character in which lot of dvēsaḥ or dislike is predominant. We do not know why? It may be because of pūrva janma; it may be because of present janma; it may be because of the childhood experiences; it may be because of the parental upbringing; it may be because of the friendship; whatever be the cause; that we do not study now; one type of character is dominantly dvēsaḥ -pradhāna; a character in which I dislike most of the things. I have complaint almost against everything. All most a cynical character. Complaint against the government system; complaint against family members; complaint against television; complaint anything; of course; God, complaint against.

And this dvēsaḥ -pradhāna character, as he accumulates this dvēsaḥ, because one is not able to express outside, because of suppression, parental suppression it might be; shut up, shut up, shut up, the child has lot of complaint but could not express, if expressed will get two more. And this accumulated dvēsaḥ leads to lot of anger suppressed inside. Anger against everything. So dvēsaḥ -pradhāna character is generally krōdhaḥ pradhāna character and this leads to himsa-pradhāna character; a person who is highly short tempered. Highly volatile. Does not require any great thing. Even the smallest incidents will cause an earth quake or volcano. The śāstra class it rākṣasa svabhāvaḥ. Rākṣasa svabhāvaḥ. Why does the śāstra call this rākṣasa svabhāvaḥ? Because when a person is so volatile and short-tempered, about to explode all the time, what will be the attitude of other people? Do the other people love to come near him? Or will try to run away from him? Try to avoid him at all cost.

Swamiji says that in some houses, when the father comes from office, all the children say: appa has come, let us go inside; as though volcano is coming; In some cases, it may be amma also.

So therefore, rākṣasa svabhāvaḥ is that svabhāvaḥ from which people want to protect themselves; rākṣanti jānaḥ asmath iti, rākṣasa. It is derived from rākṣa to protect; a svabhāvaḥ, from which people would love to run away. Avoid, escape; save. This is called dvēṣaḥ pradhāna svabhāvaḥ. Generally, insensitive to others' feelings. Generally, rude and gross minded and generally goes on hurting people; often without his knowledge. He is like that porcupine (முள்ளாம்பனி) ~ that one which has got a thorn). Imagine that animal runs amidst people. How will it be? Wherever he goes, you get pricked. And this human being is like a porcupine. Wherever he goes, either through his words, deeds or thoughts; his travel is a devastating travel, in the process, he keeps hurting people. And the tragedy is he or she does not even know. This is character No.1.

Dvēṣaḥ-pradhāna and this character is uncondusive to spiritual growth and still worse, this character brings a person down spiritually. It leads to spiritual retrogression. Not progression. This is No.1; dvēṣaḥ pradhāna svabhāvaḥ; rākṣasa svabhāvaḥ. Rākṣasa, when you say; not necessarily having long and curved teeth, etc.; explosive character.

Then comes the second character. Rāgaḥ-pradhāna svabhāvaḥ. A svabhāvaḥ which is heavily rāgaḥ-oriented; attachment oriented; which leads to lot of kāmaḥ; lot of desires. What type of desire? Desire for name, fame, money, possession, position, and revelry, merry making. Life is meant for enjoyment and therefore, have no goal. Let go philosophy. They do not harm others; but they are given to likes rāgaḥ and kāmaḥ and this svabhāvaḥ is also supposed to be uncondusive to spiritual progress, because a person does not have time or inclination to turn inwards. Rāgaḥ pradhāna svabhāvaḥ is an extrovert svabhāvaḥ; all the time bothered about these few little things; my status, etc.

And this svabhāvaḥ does not lead to spiritual downfall, because this person does not harm others. But this person or character will lead to spiritual stagnation. There is no downfall; but there is no scope for spiritual growth; because generally, these people do not consider religion and spirituality is relevant for life. They wonder! For earning money and enjoying life; why do we require God. One lady was telling that she wanted to bring her husband also to these classes; spirituality, Vēdānta, Gīta, scriptural study. And that person argues it seems: Religion is meant for the weak-minded and sick minded people. I am healthy and fine; I do not have any problem at all. Why are you unnecessarily introducing me to all these things?

Most of these people belonging to the second variety, they are harmless, even well behaved, and good mannered but they tend to be nāsthikas. They consider religion is not required; Vēdānta is not required to lead a comfortable and happy life. In fact, they may even go one step further and say religion is a problem. Because they read lot of violence here and there; and therefore, according to them, religion and spirituality contributes to only problems in society. In fact, if they are banned or abolished; it is better. This is the second variety. Materialistic people, in simple language. They won't negate God often; but they feel God is not relevant to our life. Spirituality is not relevant, scriptures are not relevant; does not appeal to them. And in fact, most of our youngsters are tending to this alone.

There was an article, somebody gave me, in Indian Express it seems, whether it was fact or fiction; I do not know. A couple had visited a family and it is in connection with some marriage proposal and after the visit, the couple had gone, this girl says, I do not want to get married to this family at all. Why? Because they are all Talibans. Afghan Muslim fundamentalists. This girl's parents were shocked; why are you calling them Talibans? The reason is that both the parents have come with lot of religious marks on their forehead. Our children does not believe in it. They think that it is religious fanaticism. And that girl argues that because of these clear-cut religious marks alone, we are dividing the society as Hindus, Christians, Muslims and it is only causing, division, disparity and quarrel; therefore why do we require. Simple application of the vibhūthi or kumkum, the younger generation looks upon as religious fundamentalism. It may be a fiction, but what I want to say is the tendency of the next generation.

This is rāgaḥ pradhāna svabhāvaḥ and they are not bad or evil or immoral. They are wonderful children; thinking children, but they end up as what? Materialistic people, totally away from our culture, which is a non-materialistic culture. This is the second group of people and Kṛṣṇa calls them āsura svabhāvaḥ; āsura svabhāvaḥ. Āsuraḥ does not mean people with tusks and horns, and all, it is derived from asuṣu ramantē iti āsuraḥ. Āsuraḥ means the sense organs. Ramantē means revellery. Āsuraḥ means a person or a society or a group, which values sensory revelry; noise making, merry making alone. So this svabhāvaḥ āsuraḥ svabhāvaḥ. This people will not fall down spirituality; there is no scope for spiritual growth. Therefore the second character that which lead to spiritual stagnation. First one is that which leads to spiritual retrogression or downfall.

Then comes the third character, which is jñāna pradhāna. Which considers spiritual knowledge as 'The goal'. That is why in Sandhyaā vandhana mantras also, when the child is initiated into the sacred thread and prayers are given, and all of them, what is asked for; even before the child understands what it is, what is asked for is, knowledge. And knowledge, especially the spiritual knowledge, is symbolised as lamp in our culture and therefore lighting the lamp is the first thing that we do; whatever be the undertaking. Early morning start with lighting the lamp. Any function start with lighting the lamp. Even the so-called secular functions. Film festivals. They show all violence, but the cinema actors come nicely dressed, showing all the 32 teeth and they light the lamp, because when India turns materialistic, the spirituality cannot be taken away from India. We cannot destroy spirituality totally, in one form or the other, it will come. Therefore, jñāna pradhāna, those who consider that jñānam is the top priority and whatever is required for that jñānam, that also is top priority. Not that they dislike money or name or fame; it is not they are against them, but they never think of that; at the cost of spiritual growth. Keeping in mind the spiritual growth, whatever can be accomplished, whatever entertainment is there; or music, dance, the whole family can go and watch the dance, because the theme is Kṛṣṇa, Bhāgavatham, Rāmāyaṇam. And the Jīvātma, pining for Paramātma; that is our dance theme, and the lyrics also written by saints and sages. There is a scope for all, but it is in keeping with spirituality. Similarly, in dance. There is programme called deepa pradakṣiṇam. So in Rādha Kalyānam. Overnight they do; here also the pubs are coming; pubs and clubs and also such things; be aware of it from the papers, but you need not go. Very interesting to know what is happening around. Because young body has lot of energy and therefore they want to dance; our culture understood and they included deepa pradakṣiṇam. If you want to shout: shout swamiyē śaraṇam. For shouting there is scope. For dancing there is scope. In deepa pradakṣiṇam, you can violently go around; but what is centre; deepaḥ. Deepaḥ means brahma jñānam. Everything there is scope. But it is all centered around this only; jñāna pradhāna way of life is the third svabhāvaḥ; and Kṛṣṇa calls them daiva svabhāvaḥ. Daiva svabhāvaḥ; dēvaḥ means light; bright. Derived from the root, div. Divyathi prakāśathē is dēva. prakāśaḥ and it stands for knowledge, wisdom; brightness.

These are the three svabhāvaḥ; dēva or daiva; asura; and rākṣasa svabhāvaḥ. All these three characters are compared to a wealth that a person possesses. All these three people possess their own wealth, in the form of these characters. And these characters are compared to wealth because with that character, they can buy; they can accomplish their goals. How?

Character decides the way of life. Way of life, decides the goal; therefore character purchases your goal. Character purchases your goal. And therefore it is called sampath.

எங்கயோ போயிண்டு இருக்கேன் என்று நினைக்காத்ரிடுவா. Do not think I am going somewhere. I know it is 16th chapter only. Daiva-Asura Sampath.

Therefore in the 16th chapter, Kṛṣṇa wants to talk about daivi sampath; otherwise called daiva svabhāvaḥ; which is the inner wealth of character; which will accomplish a particular type of goal. Then āsuri sampath or asura svabhāvaḥ, the 2nd type of inner wealth or character, which will purchase another type of goal. And the third one is what? Rākṣasi sampath; that is named, but we have to include daiva-asura, rākṣasa sampath vibhāga yōgaḥ.

And having presented the these three characters or inner wealth, Kṛṣṇa wants to say: Arjuna, if your goal is spiritual knowledge, or mōkṣa, the only conducive way is daiva svabhāvaḥ. If you do not value, spiritual knowledge, I have nothing to tell. I will only tell I wish you all the best. But Kṛṣṇa says if you value spiritual knowledge, but if you value Mōkṣa then the way of life, which is in alignment, which is conducive to that is daiva svabhāvaḥ.

Therefore you have to take into account, your way of life, every small or big thing that you do, right from the food that you eat, right from the entertainment that you have, right from the type of magazine that you read, right from the TV programmes that you watch, right from the type of the friends you move with, right from the type of the way you spend your leisure time. Every minute thing contributes to the way of life, which is in the long-term going to determine the goal; whether you reach or not.

And therefore Arjuna!, I have talked about the goal; I will better talk about the way. I have talked about the Vēda anta bhāga; better let Me talk about the Vēdā pūrva bhāga also, because Vēda pūrva and Vēda anta are inseparably interconnected and therefore the 16th and 17th chapters deal with the way of life conducive to this spiritual goal. And the subject matter is picked from the Vēda pūrva bhāga. The previous three chapters are Vēda anta bhāga. These two chapters are the Vēdā pūrva bhāga subject matter. With this background, we will enter into the chapter.

Lord Kṛṣṇa begins the teaching, even without Arjuna's asking for anything, because Kṛṣṇa feels that this teaching is complete only when he talks about this also. If I have to talk about growing a particular plant, I am wise only when I talk about the conditions in which the plant will grow, because soils are different; clay soil, dark lava soil, for cotton; for rice growing what is the soil; what type of water condition it should be; lot of water, limited water, what should be the temperature, what should be the height of land, etc.

When we went to the Yercaud camp, and in every camp; most of the campers love shopping; Vēdānta is there or not, shopping is an integral and inseparable part of the camp and in Yercaud there is no shopping facility. Therefore they went to some Nursery and there where lot of pots with plants. Yercaud is an elevated place, and you know what is Madras. So many people came back with the pots. It would not work here. So therefore, ātma jñānam can work only when a particular way of life is also adhered to. That is why culture become very important. And in the olden days, when they glorified our culture, and banned our people from mixing with other culture, it is not because, we look upon other culture, every culture is beautiful, but we had values, because this culture is designed for a particular goal. Others are designed for a particular other goal. There is no inferior or superior culture; but what do you want in your life?

And therefore Kṛṣṇa feels the teaching is complete only when the way of life is also prescribed. Therefore in these three verses, he gives a list of virtues or traits which are conducive to Vēdāntic study, initially, and later conducive to Vēdāntic assimilation. Both are equally important; reception of knowledge is important; assimilation of knowledge is equally important, only after reception and assimilation, transformation can take place. And therefore he gives a list of virtues which he calls daivi sampath. Daivi sampath. And this is not completely new; Kṛṣṇa has talked about them, in the thirteenth chapter; from verse No.8 to 12th.

आचार्योपासनं शैचं स्थैर्यमात्मविनिग्रहः ॥ १३.८ ॥

in four or five verses, Kṛṣṇa even gave a name to those virtues, you know what was the name (we are the only people without monthly tests) I do not keep because I feel you are coming because there is no test ~ previously I used to have tests at the end of each chapter and then I found that students take French leave on that day. I thought that at least let them come to the class!! We had examination at the end, and some of them were walking in the night up and down studying, and another Lady said that Swamiji I went to the bathroom several times; then I said it is not necessary. You should enjoy the camp; therefore I dropped the tests. Anyway!

Anyway, the name given there was jñānam. Ētat Jñānam Iti prōktam, ajñānam ētatō anyatha. So the list of virtues. The first virtue that Kṛṣṇa emphasises is said abhayam. Abhayam means courage. Self-confidence. Faith in myself; faith in God is important; faith in Guru is important, faith in the scriptures is important; but above all, faith in myself that I can follow and accomplish. This self-confidence is important because spiritual life is an adventure. It is a greater adventure than reaching Everest, than going to Artic circle or Antartic circle. So many adventures are there; but this is the greatest adventure; the most challenging adventure. And therefore, it requires tremendous inner courage; not weight lifting; not using dumples; it means the inner strength. Munḍaka Upaniṣad says:

nāyamātmā balahīnēna labhyaḥ. A man who does not have the inner courage cannot succeed in spirituality, and therefore it is an adventure or challenge.

And a person can continue with perseverance only when he appreciates its value, which is not that easy. Value of money you can easily appreciate. Even a child knows that. Value of position everybody knows. Value of possessions everybody knows. Value of power, everybody knows. For admission. These values anybody and everybody will understand. If I have to perseveringly continue I should know the worth of spiritual goal. And since this requires lot of inner maturity; it is very very rarely understood thing. Most of the people do not know its value; therefore most of the people will not vote for this; Kṛṣṇa said in the 7th chapter, manuṣyāṅām sahasrēṣu kaścidyatati siddhayē.

And therefore, we are in minority. Spiritual seekers all are always in minority, and therefore the spiritual journey is often a lonely journey. Therefore it requires tremendous courage to continue. Because people will say that it is better to be in hell with other people, rather than alone in heaven. If the neighbours are also coming to Naragaḥ; then I am prepared to go there, rather than go alone to Svarga. To travel alone it requires tremendous courage and there are other people always to tease and make fun of Gīta? நீங்களா; கீதா க்ளாஸுக்கா: இப்போதேவா? என்னாச்சு; லவ் பெலியறா? பிஸினஸ் நஷ்டமா? (Are you going to Gīta class? Now itself are you going, but what happened? What is wrong, failed in love affair, lost in business); it means only in tragedy one should come to Gīta. I thought everything is alright with you, etc. If these kinds of questions are asked of you, three four times, you will drop your pursuit and stop coming to my class, because you will start entertaining doubts, and say perhaps in the next course I will attend.

Therefore Abhayam, self-confidence, courage to continue this in spite of obstacles and in spite of being in a minority. Abhayam and how to have that. One is, once I have a value for the goal, I would not mind the obstacles. So the size of the obstacle will depend upon the value for the goal that you have. If the value is lukewarm, the obstacles appear bigger, and if the value is intense, the obstacles will appear smaller.

Obstacles do not have a size of its own; the size and the weight is determined by your subjective projections. Everest. There are people who go. Even to walk to the bus stop we hesitate. Little bit rain is there, you will phone and ask Swamiji whether the class is there is not; slightest obstacle is the greatest excuse.

Therefore what I am telling is obstacles are obstacles when you lose sight of the goal. Not only applicable to spirituality; applicable to anything. Therefore one method of discovering courage is learning to appreciate the value of the goal. Courage will come from somewhere. The second is of course, surrender to the Lord; seeking strength from the Lord, and telling myself: ananyāścintayantō mām yē janāḥ paryupāsātē.

Imagine a person who becomes a sanyāsi, without having a security around and at least now, institutions are there for sanyāsis. In those days, institutions were not there; every sanyāsi was a possessionless person on the street; what gave him the courage to deliberately take to that way of life? It is a sheer surrender to the Lord. And therefore Bhakthi and Vivēka one has to discover abhayam, fearlessness.

BBB

The next virtue is satvasamśuddhiḥ. Purity of mind, Satva here means antakaraṇam, śamśuddhiḥ means purity. And what do you mean by purity? Those types of thoughts which will keep the mind healthy. Those which are not toxic to the mind or mental health; just as for the physical body, we have got items which are conducive to health and which are not conducive. When those toxins are there inside, they damage the health and lead to physical destruction; extend that to the mind also. In the physical body the toxins are certain types of food items or chemicals. For the mind the toxic ones are certain patterns of thinking; certain types of thoughts like jealousy; hatred, fear. These are all toxic thoughts which if they remain in the mind for longer time, they will cause erosion and make the mind weaker. And therefore satvasamśuddhiḥ means maintenance of healthy thoughts.

Then the next virtue is jñānayōgavyasthitiḥ. In and through all this way of life, you should not forget what is the goal or purpose for which this way of life I am following; and what is that purpose? Spiritual knowledge. And knowledge never happens naturally. Knowledge never happens naturally. Many other things happen in time, you need not work for it; wrinkles, you did not work; just survive; wrinkles will come; grey hair; you need not work, it will come. Tooth loss, you do not require a sādhana; it will come. Many things will happen in time; knowledge is one thing which can never naturally happen. Any knowledge, physics knowledge, you lead a moral life; and what do you what, in due course, I want to become a M.Sc physics. I will not go to college; because I lead a moral and ethic life. Moral and ethical life is good; but that will not automatically lead to physics knowledge. It will not lead to chemistry knowledge; it is a separate pursuit you should undertake; you require a physics guru, and a physics book and you have to study and if required you fail a few times; So, then it becomes. Thus, knowledge does not happen. The word bhōdōdayam should not be misunderstood; Buddha got bhōdōdayam, Buddha got enlightenment under bōdhi tree and many people sincerely believe that knowledge happens; either a leaf might fall, or a fruit might fall, knowledge will not fall or descend down, you have to work and work hard.

Therefore Kṛṣṇa says: jñānayōgavyasthiḥ; committed pursuit of jñāna-yōga, which means sṛavaṇam, what is sṛavaṇam? Which is consistent and systematic study of the Vēdāntic scriptures for a length of time, under the guidance of a competent teacher. You might have got bored; I would not get bored; and therefore I will repeat. Therefore, sṛavaṇam, then mananam, reflecting over that and understanding and removing doubts and nidhidhyāsanam, internalising to such an extent that my life and my knowledge, there is no disparity. What I know and what I am, there is no disparity. So vyavasthithi means commitment Niṣṭa in jñāna-yōga, sṛavaṇa manana nidhidhyāsana. For that what should you do; regularly attend the classes; come to the next class also.

As I said in the last class, Lord Kṛṣṇa is dealing with the way of life that a spiritual-seeker should lead, so that it is conducive to the reception of spiritual knowledge; as well as the assimilation of spiritual knowledge and this way of life, Lord Kṛṣṇa calls Daiva mārgaḥ. And this daiva mārgaḥ, the spiritual path, the satvic path involves the observation of certain virtues in daily life, and Lord Kṛṣṇa enumerates those virtues in these verses, which the Lord calls Daivi sampath.

In the first three verses, we are getting the list of these virtues. We were seeing the first verse in the last class; abhayam, satvasamśuddhiḥ, jñānayōgavyasthiḥ. Abhayam means spiritual courage; to cross all the hurdles which come in the way of my spiritual path; the inner courage, satvasamśuddhiḥ is the purity of mind, which is nothing but enjoying the virtues enumerated here; anthakaraṇa śuddhiḥ. Then jñānayōgavyasthiḥ, which means, Vēdānta sṛavaṇa manana nidhidhyāsanam. Jñānam, means sṛavaṇa mananam, and yōga means nidhidhyāsanam. So jñāna plus yōga is equal to sṛavaṇa manana nidhidhyāsanam. I have talked about this before, I hope you remember. And this one is the primary sādhana which should go along with the others, without jñāna-yōga any amount of virtues will remain incomplete.

Without morals, jñāna-yōga is impossible, without jñāna-yōga, a moral life is incomplete. It can never lead to liberation; therefore they are complimentary; therefore they should be given due importance. Jñānayōgavyasthiḥ; the word vyasthiḥ means committed pursuit. It is niṣṭa, it is a casual pursuit, it is not a lukewarm approach, it is not an amateurish undertaking, but it should be sincere and serious and therefore he uses the word vyasthiḥ; commitment. Up to this, we saw in the last class.

Now we will go to the second line; dānam or charity is another important virtue highlighted in the scriptures. Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad enumerates three virtues as very important,

तमेतं वेदानुवचनेन ब्राह्मणा विविदिषन्ति
यज्ञेन दानेन तपसाऽनाशकेनैतमेव विदित्वा मुनिर्भवत्य्

[tamētaṁ vēdānuvacanēna brāhmaṇavividiṣanti
yajñēna dānēna tapasā:nāśakēnaitamēva viditvā munirbhavaty](#)

Yajñā, dānam and tapas are considered the most important disciplines and Lord Kṛṣṇa himself borrows from Brihadārṇyaka and in the 17th and 18th chapters, Kṛṣṇa highlights these three virtues again. So dānam means charity and why do we say dānam is a very important virtue and also a very difficult virtue; we can follow everything else but dānam is difficult. Why do we consider this important?

Dānam has significance from different angles; the first benefit of dānam is that it serves as a remedy for a very serious mental problem called lōbhaḥ. Lōbhaḥ is a very serious mental problem; which is caused by the sense of insecurity. One fundamental human problem is continuous sense of insecurity. எனக்கு என்ன ஆகுமோ?; நாளக்கு வயஸாகறத்த என்னாகுமோ? (What will happen to me; what will happen tomorrow, when I get old?)

This insecurity; like the tamera ṣṭuti, continues all the time. And we do not know why the insecurity is caused; and the generally we have a misconception that this sense of insecurity will go away if we hold on to external possessions. We think that possessions is the only remedy for the problem of insecurity; even though there is no truth in that conclusion. Because there are people who have lot of possessions and continue to be insecure. And there are many people who do not have any possessions and they have full sense of security.

From this it is very clear people with possessions continue to be insecure; people without possessions are there with security sense. From this it is very clear, that the possessions and the security have no connection; but even though this is the truth; we have got the strongest mōha that the insecurity will go away as we increase our possession. And this sense of possession is so strong; and this alone is called lōbhaḥ; and this lōbhaḥ or sense of possession expresses in twofold ways; one way is, it wants to grab more and more; get more, get more, get more. This is one expression of lōbhaḥ. And the other expression is: whatever you get you very carefully hold on to, never give away. Therefore get more and give less. This is lōbhaḥ. In English we translate it as greed plus miserliness is equal to lōbhaḥ and this greed miserliness problem, lōbhaḥ is because of the misconception that the greater the possession, the greater the security.

And this lōbhaḥ leads to several problems in life. The first problem is that a person wants to grab more and more; and therefore unknowingly he begins to compromise with dharma; because beyond a limit; greed will force a person to cut corners to comprise with dharma. Thus it will lead to adharmā; it will lead to pāpam; it will lead to himsa; thus lōbhaḥ is a very very serious mental problem. And not only this is the problem, this person with lōbhaḥ begins to suspect every human being who comes near. Because we do not whether he is coming for me for whether he is coming for my money. Whether he loves me or my money. Thus the eye of suspicion will be there all around, even I look at my family members differently. Thus lōbhaḥ is a serious problem and the only remedy for lōbhaḥ is gradually developing the sense of charity. Dānam is the only remedy for lōbhaḥ disease. And therefore dānam is important.

And the second significance is, if dānam is not there in society, a person goes on amassing and accumulating without sharing, there will be a big disparity between the rich and the poor and when this gulf increases, then that society will have lot of problems like crime etc. Most of the crimes, economic crimes like kidnapping for ransom; murdering for gain, burglary; all these things will happen when there is a big gulf between the rich and the poor.

And when we read such news items more and more in the newspapers, the rich person will feel, more and more insecure than secure. The irony he has got lot of money for security; the very money has thus caused insecurity, because of the fear burglary, kidnapping and all those things. And therefore a healthy social order requires people who have willing to able to share with who need. Therefore dānam takes care of social order.

And the third significance of dānam is that it is the only touchstone to find out whether I have detachment or not. If I do not have detachment, dānam will be the most painful affair; even though for social purposes, I give, it will be with a lot of heart burn. If I have got inner detachment, dānam will be the most happy discipline or sādhanā that I practice. Therefore dānam becomes a test for my detachment. And therefore dānam is significant.

And fourthly, dānam is considered a very important prayascitha karma. We all have acquired lot of pāpams; durithams; for which we have to do prāyascittams and varieties of prāyascittams are mentioned in our śāstra; and one of the prāyascittam karma is dānam and that is why at the time of death; or immediately after death; varieties of dānam are given. In fact, we are supposed to do that before we die; but we will not have that mind (ஆவியை விட்டாலும், சாவியை விடேன்); we will lose our life rather than loosen the purse.

Remember this; and therefore at least our children are supposed to do that; so that the soul can soar high; rid of the pāpa karma; 16 dānam, 18 dānam, people do not do that. In one rupee, all the 16 dānams are finished. For all the dānams, we will manage with just one rupee and akṣatha. தானாற்றத்தம் அக்ஷதான் ஸமர்ப்பயாமி. Dānam is very very important prāyascitta karma. This is the fourth significance.

And fifthly and finally, dānam is the beautiful sādhana, which makes our death peaceful; because death is an event in which everything that I have carefully earned will be taken away from me. Whether it is house or bank balance; anything I have earned, everything including my physical body; after death, I cannot even own my physical body; everything I have to give back to the World, God or Lord, as you look at. This release of all my possessions should be comfortable to me, I should have practised dānam in my earlier days; and if I have enjoyed dānam during my life; I will look upon death also as a form of dānam.

Till now, whatever I had, it had given me, it will give me pleasure and I will try to hold on; then Yamadharmaraja snatches and I die painfully.

Death will be peaceful for a person who has learned to enjoy giving away things because of these reasons. I can tell still more, but the rest is your homework. Dānam is a very very significant spiritual sādhana. Initially at least we should give away what we do not want. If you have heart burns even for that; what to do? Even though I do not want, this person cleans the house for Pongal and keeps away things for disposal. And again he will check and recheck and think why should I give it now and keep it back again inside. Everything he took out, again goes back. Even a match box. Because great grand child can play with that. My child is not yet married. I am planning for the great grand child. That is why they said;

śatēṣu jāyatē śūrah, sahasrēṣu ca paṇḍitāḥ, vaktā śatasahasrēṣuḥ, dātā bhavati na vā.

Among hundred persons there will be one śūrah, courageous person; sahasrēṣu ca paṇḍitāḥ, there will be one scholar at least among one thousand people, vaktā śatasahasrēṣuḥ; śatasahasrēṣuḥ, hundred thousand, in one lakh, among one lakh people, at least you can find one good teacher; vaktā means guru. Even though they are rare, dātā bhavati na vā, a real giver is very very difficult to find. It is difficult, but we have to practice as I said, start giving what you do not want; and thereafter we can find whether we can give even those things that we want. If it is useful for somebody else more. Therefore, Kṛṣṇa says, dānam.

Then damaḥ; damaḥ means indriya nigrahaḥ; sense control. Sense control does not mean suppression of sense organs; we never encourage suppression, because any form of suppression is an oppression. It will lead to depression, we never encourage. By damaḥ, what we mean is voluntarily directing the sense organs which is born out of my conviction. I decide what is good for me for my spiritual growth and I decide what is not good for me; and with conviction, I myself turn away the sense organs. It is called mastery over the sense organs. But when I turn the sense organs away; because of somebody else's enforcement, then it is called suppression. The difference between suppression and mastery is what? When I do it for another's sake, it is suppression; when I do it out of my own conviction, it is never a suppression; It is called indriya jayaḥ. It is victory. Suppression will lead to mental health problems; mastery will lead to mental growth. Therefore damaḥ is mastery of the sense organs.

Then the next virtue is yajñāḥ. Yajñāḥ literally means worship of the Lord. Yaj means to worship; yajñāḥ means the practice of worship and our scriptures talk about two forms of worship; one is the regular ceremonial worship, in the form of pūja at home and hōmas or pūja in the temple etc. which is the regular ceremonial ritualistic formal worship.

And there is a second form of worship which is conversion of all our activities themselves into a form of worship. As the well-known saying goes; work itself is a worship and this conversion is brought about by a change of attitude which is called karma-yōga attitude; bhāvana parivarthanam. Śad-bhāvana and what is the bhāvana parivarthanam; change of attitude; I look upon every karma as an offering to the Lord and therefore I cheerfully do all the karmas. Enthusiastically whole-heartedly, sincerely, cheerfully, I do, whether it is mundane action or the most important action. And that is called Īśvara arpaṇa bhāvana and more importantly I prepare my mind to face any consequences that will come out of my action. It may be good name or bad name; it may be acknowledgment or non-acknowledgment or gratitude or they may not be grateful to me. People may reciprocate or not; or any consequence I accept without resistance as prasāda of Lord. This is called prasāda bhāvana; Īśvara arpaṇa bhavāna with regard to karma; prasāda bhāvana with regard to karma-phalam will convert every karma into an yajña.

Yadyat karma karōmi tattat akilam śambhō tavārādanam. In the 9th chapter, yat karōṣi yadaśnāsi yajjuhōṣi dadāsi yat. So this is an improvised form of yajña, which yajña is important; both are equally important; formal pūja cannot be given up; at home pūja must be there; only then there will be an atmosphere of auspiciousness. We read in the papers, books and all, there are so many evil forces and all, people ask: திர்ஷ்டி பட்டால் என்னவாவது ஆகுமா? கண் திர்ஷ்டி விநாயகர். Dṛṣṭi patta ēnavathu akuma; kan dṛṣṭi vināyakar. Now spreading. New Invention; not in the vēdās; we are always afraid of evil forces; black magic. We do not know whether such things are there or not. Whether they are there or not; an atmosphere of divinity; lighting the lamp, chanting the prayers; etc. will insulate the house; serve as a kavacham against all the invisible negative forces.

And therefore formal external pūja is a must and in addition to that, we also require second type of pūja, what is that? Converting every action into worship. Karma-yōga rūpa pūja; and in this yajña itself, in the third chapter, I have talked about pañca mahā yajñāḥ; I do not want to get into those details; you have to remember that topic also in this context. So yajñāḥ; svādhyāyaḥ; svādhyāyaḥ means scriptural study. So this is waning from our society; previously these things were there; but slowly we are forgetting that; this was called in the third chapter, we named it Brahma yajña. All part of the Hindu society; it was all part of vēdic karma; So they had sandhya vandanam, and gradually they reduced from 3 to 2, from 2 to one and full sandhya vandanam has been dropped to just Gāyathri, etc. and nowadays they ask whether we have to chant, etc. So therefore, scriptural study is called svādhyāyaḥ. This study is twofold, one is called pāṛāyaṇam, which is nothing but śabda avṛtiḥ. Pāṛāyaṇam means recitation, which is considered to be a beautiful kavacham against any type of evils, including materialism. In fact, whether ghosts are there or not, I consider the most powerful ghost is materialism; which is catching up fast with our society; our culture is eroding; காசேதான கடவுளடர்; kaśēthan kadavuḷada is coming; money is becoming the only God. If the other ghost is there or not, we do not know; there is one powerful ghost, that is materialism; and not only; one of the remedy for that is svādhyāyaḥ. 15 minutes for some pāṛāyaṇa. Viṣṇu sahasraṇama; everybody may not or need not know sandyāvandanam; some prayer chanting is a must. It is called śabda avṛtiḥ.

And there is another type of svādhyāyaḥ; which is arta avṛtiḥ; dwelling upon the meanings of the scriptures. So first one is śabda pradhāna, the second one is arta pradhāna; the first one is simple recitation, even without knowing the meaning, recitation will bless the home; svādhyāyaḥ.

Then the next virtue is ārjavam. Ārjavam means integrity. Uprightness, enjoying a harmonious personality; we have talked about five layers of personality in Tatva Bōdha; annamaya, the physical body; prāṇamaya, the prāṇic personality; manōmaya, the emotional personality; vijñāna maya, the rational or intellectual personality; all the different layers of my personality, which is normally expressed as the thought, the word and the deed; all of them should be harmonious. So harmonisation, integration, concordance of all my personality is called Arjavam; ṛju means one line, ārjavam means all my personalities are in one line. I do not have a crooked personality; உள் ஒன்று வைத்து புறம் ஒன்று பேசுவார் உறவு கலவாமை வேண்டும். uḷ oṇṇu vaittu puṛam oṇṇu pēcuvār uṛavu kalavāmai vēṅṭum. (I do not want the company of persons who talk one thing outside, keeping something else in their minds - Saint Rāmaṅga adiyar).

मनस्येकम् वचस्येकम् कर्मणि एकम् महात्मानम्
मनसि अन्यत्, वचसि अन्यत्, कर्मणि अन्यत् दुरात्मना ॥

manasyēkam vacasyēkam karmaṇi ēkam mahātmānam
manasi anyat, vacasi anyat, karmaṇi anyat durātmanā |

You can understand. मनसिलेयुम्; वाक्किलुम्; செயலிலும் ஒருமை; in the mind, in the word, in action. Mahātmas have only one thing. Whereas for durātmas, what they think is one, what they speak is another and what they do is yet another.

And when there is no ārjavam, a strain is created in the personality. Because one layer is pulling in one direction; another layer is pulling in another direction. So there is a stress and a strain formed within; it has nothing to do with the external society; I myself am creating a rift, a cleft in my personality. This strain will not be felt initially; but when I such a hypocritic or double life, the strain gets accumulated; and when the strain accumulates goes beyond a limit, it creates a rupture in the personality; which comes in the form of all types of ill-health; emotional ill-health; physical ill-health. All types of problems; and therefore, integrity is required for my survival as one whole person. Otherwise, I will have holes all over. Can you understand the difference? Ārjavam. So this word ārjavam has come in the thirteenth chapter also, I should not be explaining this much; amānitvam, adambitvam, ahiṁsa, śānti ārjavam. There I have said.

दया भूतेष्वलोलुप्त्वं मार्दवं ह्रीरचापलम् ॥ १६.२ ॥

dayā bhūteṣvalōluptvaṁ mārđavaṁ hrīracāpalam || 16.2 ||

The next virtue is ahiṁsā. This also I have talked about elaborately in the thirteenth chapter; therefore I do not want to go to the details and we also know its importance. Ahiṁsā is avoidance of non-violence at the kāyika, vācika and mānasa level. And the simple rule is what I give to the world, that alone I will get back ultimately. So therefore it is like throwing a ball against a wall; when I throw the ball it hits the wall and comes back to me only. And the force of the ball will be directly proportional to the force with which I throw. And therefore, we should remember that the ultimate truth is what I get will be what I give. From the bank what I can take is what I have deposited in the bank. If I deposit violence in the world bank, world bank, not that world bank, the bank called the world, it will come back to me alone, if not now, later. And therefore for my own peace of mind, I have to avoid hiṁsa. Of course, we never say that ahiṁsā is absolute.

There may be occasions when himsā becomes a necessary evil. And the best example is what? The Bhagavad-Gīta occasion itself. Gīta is a very interesting study; In several places, 2-3 places, Kṛṣṇa says: Ahimsa, 13th chapter, now here, further also he will tell; then Kṛṣṇa's conclusion is what; Arjuna, therefore, fight. How is it?

After talking repeatedly about ahimsā; Tasmāt yudhyasya bhāratha. Is Kṛṣṇa contradicting himself; here alone, we should remember, ahimsā is a general value, but every value has got an exception, including ahimsā. There are cases when non-violent methods miserably fail. Just as it failed in the case of Duryōdhana. And when non-violent methods fail, and for the protection of dharma, the only available means is himsa; then there is nothing wrong in taking. In fact Kṛṣṇa goes one step further and says: This dharma yuddha will not give you pāpam, on the other hand, it will give you puṇyam. And therefore, we should not blindly talk about ahimsā. Misplaced ahimsā will have very very negative consequences. Imagine a doctor who does not want to treat the patient, because it is painful; How will it be? Doctor has to do that; and therefore judicious ahimsā is a value.

Then the next one is satyam. Satyam means truthfulness; or more correctly, avoidance of untruth. Because if speaking the truth is going to hurt a person; if speaking the truth is going to hurt a person, then we have to follow the value of ahimsa; and avoid speaking the truth; but that does not mean that we should speak untruth; avoid speaking untruth. So therefore Satyam is equal to asatyavarjanam.

And suppose you have to tell the truth to correct a person, and telling the truth is going to be painful; what to do? We have got dharma sankat. We have to tell the truth for correcting the truth; it may hurt; may be your own child, may be your own family members. Then we say you can do that but you have enough paddings to reduce the hurt caused by speaking the truth.

And what is that method? Speak some other pleasant truth; there are unpleasant truths; but there are so many pleasant truth; therefore talk about the pleasant truth predominantly and when the person's mind is well-cushioned, with the cushioning speak the unpleasant truth; do not dwell upon the unpleasant truth. Speak more of pleasant truth; dwell upon pleasant truth; and when the situation is ideal; As they say, strike when the iron is hot; speak pleasant truth; dwell upon pleasant truth; and when the situation is ideal; just mention the unpleasant truth briefly, do not dwell upon that; and you will find that the person will be a able to receive the truth and improve. This is psychology. When we are forced to tell the unpleasant truth. Therefore Satyam.

Then the next one is akrōdhaḥ; akrōdhaḥ means learning to handle the problems of anger. Anger management; anger handling; because anger is a very powerful emotion; which can hurt the angry person, and which can hurt the people who are around the angry person. And therefore one has to necessarily learn to handle anger. How to do that? Several methods are there; one of the methods is understanding anger as a form of emotional pain.

Understanding anger as a form of expression of mental pain or emotional pain; because anger is the name of a mental condition; we think shouting is anger. No. Anger is an emotion belonging to the mind; shouting cannot be called anger. Shouting is a consequence of anger. Hitting is not anger; it is a consequence of anger; anger has nothing to do with the body; speech, it is purely an inner emotional condition and I only know my anger.

Others know only the expressions of anger; anger is purely a mental condition; which is a form of pain. And this mental pain is very very similar to physical pain. If you understand the role of physical pain, we can understand the role of mental pain or anger. If you look at physical pain, superficially seeing it is a curse; because pain who would like? It is a curse; nobody would like to have pain because it is a highly unwanted thing; but if you look at the pain from another angle, from medical angle; they will say pain is a great blessing; Bhagavān has kept physical pain not with an intention of hurting you; but it has been kept with a noble motive; what is that? Pain is a signal which is meant to report to you that there is something wrong with your system. Any pain indicates that things are not functioning properly; therefore it is red light. So Bhagavān wants to say, please check up that location, any pain is a signal, a red light which tells you something is wrong within and therefore take care of that.

And how to take care? Not immediately swallowing any tablet available. Once I have decided to take the pain as a signal, I tried to find out what is wrong within, or without or the pain can be with external or internal cause, which means I have to diagnose. Because one headache, 2000 varieties they say; and headache can be a symptom of any problem; it can be because your spectacles are wrong; you will get headache; may be problem with the tooth; it may be problem with stomach; it may be your wife or husband also. This is joke, do not take seriously. Understand joke as joke; headache because of any blessed reason.

I should never take a medicine impulsively; pain is not; pain should not lead to impulsive medication; but I should do diagnose and I should take the proper medication; or otherwise it can become counter-productive. And then you may get the stomach ache. If this is understood is also a signal in the form of mental pain; it should never lead to impulsive reaction. I should understand it as a signal; mind tells me that something is wrong; somebody's behaviour is wrong; or the set-up is wrong; and I have to find out what is wrong; and I should take deliberate steps. And therefore, management of anger is understanding anger as an internal signal. I should intelligently use it to find out a remedy to the cause of that anger. This is called akrōdhaḥ; so management of anger.

Then the next one is tyāgaḥ; tyāgaḥ means sanyāsaḥ; sanyāsaḥ means renunciation. The moment we say renunciation, everybody gets jittery. So the renunciation is two-fold, one is the external renunciation; which is called sanyāsa-āśrama ḥ; chaturtha āśramaḥ; taking to a monastic lifestyle; Monasticism is one meaning of tyāgaḥ.

And there is another meaning for the word tyāgaḥ; which is not external renunciation, but inner renunciation called detachment; vairāgyam. Or detachment is called tyāgaḥ. And what do you mean by detachment? An appropriate attitude towards my possessions. A right attitude.

What is the right attitude towards the possession? It is the understanding that I really do not possess anything; I really do not possess anything; everything belongs to the Lord and Lord alone. And God out of his infinite kindness, have provided me with certain possessions for my using them; and growing spiritually. And I am supposed to use them and grow; and it has to go back to the Lord only; I can never hold on to anything; including my own body. So everything belongs to the God; and God can choose to take back anything as he wants; he might give one month notice; he might give three months' notice; you give for vacating the house, like that; or he may not give any notice. And if God chooses to take away anything from me, I will voluntarily return it to the Lord, with a note of thanks. Thank you note. American thank you note. Returned with thanks. This attitude is called tyāgaḥ;

You use everything, have house, have car, have people around; have jobs, have anything you have, but remember that God can take away anything. I heard that in America and all, your job you might be dismissed from the job at any time. And it means they will keep a yellow notice; a yellow slip. In our culture, yellow is maṅgalam; but there yellow slip is amaṅgalam. Here only 3 months notice; there hire and fire. So asked some boy he said I have got a safe job; but in America, you can lose at any time; Not only job, everything. So therefore, this readiness to lose anything is called renunciation.

So tyāgaḥ, then śāntiḥ; śāntiḥ means equanimity of mind. Freedom from violent emotional disturbances. Balance of mind is called śāntiḥ. The details we will see in the next class.

Hari Om

200 Chapter 16, Verses 02-04

In the beginning of the 16th chapter, in the first three verses, Lord Kṛṣṇa is giving a list of virtues which He names daivi sampath; and when a person lives a way of life; taking into account these virtues; then it will become conducive to ātma jñānam. Vēdānta-friendly character is given in these verses. We completed first verse in the last class and in the first verse, I had left out one word and I am happy that the students noted my omission and pointed it out to me. First I will take up the omitted word, tapaḥ, in the second line; dānaṃ damaśca yajñaśca svādhyāyastapa ārjavam.

If you split it; the word tapas or tapaḥ. The word tapas has several meanings. Lord Kṛṣṇa will talk about tapa elaborately in the 17th chapter, and He will divided tapas into three types, sātvika, rājasika, and tāmasika tapas. Here we will see one of the meanings of the word tapas. It is deliberately and willfully going through a painful experience for toughening one's physical and mental personality. Voluntarily, deliberately going through some painful experience. Of course, within a limit, in a controlled way; going through a painful experience, so that my body and mind will get toughened enough, immunised enough, to withstand pain or difficulty. So immunisation of the body, toughening of the body is the purpose of any form of tapas.

And we have got many types of tapas, in the form of vṛthams. For example, those who go Sabarimala, the Ayyappa temple in Kerala, they take a 41 day or 48 days of vow. Nowadays they do not do at all; and during these days; they willfully give up certain comforts. Certain types of physical comforts are given up, and the body is allowed to go through discomfort and similarly they walk 48 miles through thorns, stones and all those, without wearing a chappal; is a voluntary invitation of physical pain. Even though nowadays they can go through the very very short route; they do that. Sometimes we can see people going to the Himalayan shrines of the Kedarnath and Badrinath, higher altitude, very very cold; as a vow; there also they go without proper cover, without chappal they go; this is a clean invitation of physical pain; but you do not call it suffering. A suffering is a suffering only when it is force upon me by somebody else. Whereas a suffering becomes a tapas when I myself voluntarily force on myself for the sake of toughening my body and mind.

I have talked about this before; the difference between fasting and starving, is purely based on the attitude. When I want to eat food, and food is not available, it is starving; but food is available, but deliberately today happens to be Ēkādaśi and in some place, today is Vaikuṅṭha Ēkādaśi also. In Sriraṅgam there are people who fast the whole day, even when food is available; I deliberately forgo and go through the pang and discomfort of hunger; and this voluntary suffering is called tapas.

Śankarācārya calls it śarīra piḍanam; piḍanam word he is using; but it is voluntary. And the benefit, advantage of this tapas is the body gets a tolerance capacity; tolerance of heat; tolerance of cold; tolerance of pain; so increase of titikṣa or tolerance is the benefit. And in Vēdānta, tolerance is considered to be a very very useful sādhanā. It will help a person in several ways spiritually. One benefit is that if I toughen myself and develop tolerance; later in life; when I have to go through choiceless pain, everyone will have to face pain in life. Sometimes there are remedies, but there are occasions when a person is forced to go through pain and there is no cure or remedy. Like incurable disease or anything, if I have got tolerance, choiceless pain in life will not disturb me too much. Thus tolerance prepares myself to face choiceless pains in life; which is caused by prabhāla-prārabhada.

Durbhala prārabhda, weak prārabhda, gives me pain but I have remedy for weaker prārabhda, but there are prabhāla prārabhda, which will give me pain for which I can have no remedy. How to face such choiceless pain? There is only one way; I have to raise my level of withstanding power; just as the military people develop that power; so they have to learn to starve for days together; living with water; they have to survive with whatever they get. They have got endurance tests; unimaginable; and they should have even though we may not require endurance test to that extent; every human being requires increase in endurance power. And therefore titikṣa is useful to face choiceless situations.

Then the second benefit of the titikṣa or tolerance is; tolerance which is developed through tapas; the second benefit of tapas or increase of tolerance is we can avoid impulsive reactions to situations. Any impulsive reaction is because of lack of tolerance. I cannot tolerate nonsense. I cannot tolerate adhārmic action; I am extremely sensitive; many people say. When I am sensitive and intolerant, the greatest disadvantage that I face, I impulsively and immediately react to the situation without thinking. Any thoughtless action is reaction; and any thoughtless reaction is improper; because we are not even judging whether our actions are right or wrong.

The only solution for impulsive reaction is developing the tolerance power, so that even if somebody is doing improper action, I can wait, analyse, think well and react at the proper time. And when I react at proper time deliberately thoughtfully, it is no more a reaction; it is an action. If I have to postpone my reaction, and deliberately act, I require titikṣa or tolerance and that tolerance comes by practising tapas. This is the second benefit.

The third benefit of tolerance is this. Bhagavān has kept pain in life; not merely for hurting us. The role of pain is not merely wounding us, but Bhagavān wants to teach certain important lessons through pain also. So sufferings also have a very very important role in human life.

And the important role of suffering is teaching; especially spiritual teaching; and if I should have the capacity to learn from suffering, I should enjoy an undisturbed mind. If suffering emotionally disturbs me, I will not be able to learn from suffering. I will go through sufferings but will continue to be where I am. So how can I learn from suffering? Only when my mind is calm, I can go through suffering and learn; and that is possible only when there is titikṣa; there is tolerance. Therefore the third benefit of tolerance is developing the faculty of learning from pain. Learning from suffering.

In fact, the very first chapter of the Gīta is Arjuna viṣāda yōgaḥ. So Arjuna suffering taught a lot. At least he learned that he requires external help to solve the problem of rāgaḥ, śōkaḥ and mōhaḥ. And that is how he decided to surrender. Therefore pain also has a role in spiritual growth; and I can make use of it only if I have tolerance. Thus tapas plays a very important role in developing tolerance and therefore it is included in spiritual-sādhāna.

And now coming to the second verse, we saw the word Ahimṣa, satyam, akrōdhaḥ and tyāgaḥ. The word tyāgaḥ, I pointed out, refers to renunciation; renunciation can be either external or internal. External renunciation is taking to a monastic life; internal renunciation is mentally dropping the ownership notion. I do not own anything. Bhagavān is the only owner; I am a trustee; I am supposed to only maintain things or maximum use the things for the time being. This freedom from mamakāra is called tyāgaḥ; mamakāra tyāgaḥ. Up to this we saw in the last class.

The next value is śāntiḥ; śāntiḥ means the equanimity of mind; poise of mind; tranquility of mind; freedom from stress and strain. Another word they use is anāyāsaḥ; inner relaxation. And this śāntiḥ is a virtue, which we have to try to maintain throughout the day, which Kṛṣṇa called samatvam yōgaḥ ucyatē. The very karma-yōgaḥ way of life is to maintain this poise. And why this śāntiḥ is important? Only when the mind has śāntiḥ, intellect will be active and functional. When the mind is disturbed, it will jam the intellect, like in computer and certain other gadgets they use the expression the instrument is jammed; it would not work. Similarly, the intellect will get jammed if the mind is disturbed; and a Vēdāntic student has to do sṛavaṇam, mananam and nidhidhyāsanam; all the three require an equanimous mind; therefore śāntiḥ. We can say, it is the samatvam attained through karma-yōgaḥ. It is otherwise called samaḥ; previously damaḥ was mentioned. Now samaḥ is mentioned.

Then the next virtue is: apaiṣunam. Apaiṣunam means not publicising the defects of other people. It is a very very enjoyable thing; it is a very very juicy topic; to talk about what are the things happening in the neighborhood. Therefore whatever defects are there; whatever deficiencies are there; whatever weaknesses are there, I enjoy talking about and whatever virtues are there; I carefully avoid. Sastra says it is never correct. If at all you want to talk about others, talk about their virtues. So para guṇa prakatīkaraṇam, para dōṣa tirōdhānam.

When it comes to our own virtues, that is why it is said para guṇa, when it comes to our own virtue, first we should ask the question, do we have virtue, even if by some mistakes, virtues are there; we are not supposed to publicise. Accādayān svān guṇān. Cover up your virtues; publicise others' virtues. Now also we are doing cover up and publicity; only thing is reversed; we publicise others' weaknesses and we cover up over weaknesses. Therefore he says apaiṣunam; never talk about the other people's weaknesses.

Then the next virtue is dayā bhūtēṣu. Dayā means compassion, towards bhūtēṣu, here Kṛṣṇa uses the bhūta, instead of manuṣya; bhūta means all living beings; human beings, animals, towards all of them compassion, i.e. learn to look at their suffering by standing on their shoes. Temporarily imagine what will it be if I am in their position. So then certainly it will be impossible for us to injure others. Therefore bhūtēṣu dayā, or bhūta dayā is considered to be a very very important virtue.

Then the next one is alōluptvam; alōluptvam means not yielding the temptations of sense objects. So the world is full of māya. And the world is full of temptations, my sense organs can very easily become an addict to anything. So even when such temptations are there; not yielding to them, that self-control is called aloluptvam. Previously we saw the word damaḥ; damaḥ is general sense control; aloluptvam is specific sense control; when there are temptations. Alōluptvam; In the advertisement they say. 'Say No to drug'; one thing they write; 'Say no to drugs'; because there are certain temptations like drug, liquor, cigarette, etc. We have to yield only once; first time it is a deliberate mistake, and second time, that object becomes the master and I become a slave. First I am master, the cigarette is slave; second time, the cigarette become stronger; then time, it will still become stronger; after sometime, I am utterly helpless that I can even imagine giving up. That's why that person said, I was regularly reading the magazine, which says smoking is injurious, ultimately I gave up, what?; reading the magazine, not the cigarette; you will find that once a person becomes an addict, it is almost impossible to get out. You have to read the book of Alcoholic Anonymous. They say God alone can help such an addict. For that one has to surrender to God. Even that becomes difficult. And therefore, always say No first. Afterwards we may not be able to and in Rāmayaṇa, Vāli represents that. When Vāli comes in front of anybody, he is supposed to get half of his strength. Any temptation is like that; once it is in front of me, it takes half of my freewill or three fourth of my freewill; therefore, better not to go in front at all itself; and therefore aloluptvam.

Then the next one is mārḍavam; mārḍavam means gentleness, in handling people, in handling things, gentleness or politeness in manners. Not being rude is called mārḍavam. It is a beautiful ślōka which says:

वज्रातापि कठोराणि, मृदूनि कुसुमादपि, लोकोत्तराणां चेदामंसि, कोणु विज्नातु अर्हसि:

vajrātāpi kaṭōrāṇi, mṛdūni kusumādapi, lōkōttarāṇām cēdāmamsi, kōṇu vijnātu arhasiḥ

The mind of the wise people is very very unique. It has got two opposite virtues. One angle it is stronger and harder than even diamond; vajrātāpi kaṭōrāṇi, and from another angle mṛdūni kusumādapi; they are tender; more tender than even flowers; How come one mind is both hard and tender. It is said when they are receiving experiences people insulting, people criticizing, people misbehaving; when they are facing adverse situations, their mind takes the mode of hardness; the mind is so strong that any adverse situation cannot affect it; like the rock of Gibraltar, it will not get affected; but the very same wise people when they are handling other people, when they are talking to other people, their language and behaviour is tender than even flowers. So as a kartā they have a tender mind; as a bhoktā they have got a diamond like hard mind. But the problem of the ignorant person is the other way around. He also has a hard and soft mind. The problem is what? When he faces situation, it is too soft; that at the slightest insult he is affected. When he handles people, it is so rock like and rude, neither he is happy nor the other people around are happy. Gentle in handling other people.

Then hrīḥ; hrīḥ means modesty, and also a sense of shame; a healthy sense of shame. There are two types of shame, one is a healthy sense of shame. A healthy shame is defined as that, which obstruct a person from doing wrong actions. Sometimes we feel ashamed to do certain things in front of others, when that shame restrains us from doing adharmic actions, that sense of shame is worthy sense of shame, it has to be cultivated. Shamelessness in that respect is an evil thing. We also say shamelessly you are behaving; therefore healthy shame is called hrīḥ or modesty is hrīḥ.

Then the next virtue acāpalam; cāpalam means restlessness expressed at the body level. Restlessness which is primarily a mental condition and when the mind is highly restless, it overflows to the body level and through the body language, the person shows he is uncomfortable. Hands and legs are moving; facing is twitching. He is biting the finger; first nails then finger. They eat pencils and pens; all kinds of things happen; fidgety character is called chāpalam; where the body does lot of movements purposelessly.

Moving the legs purposelessly, moving the hands purposelessly. All of them are called chēṣtai. When we are children, parents used to tell us. Sit quietly without doing any chēṣtai. That indriya chēṣta is called cāpalam; acāpalam is freedom from that; body also is relaxed.

तेजः क्षमा धृतिः शौचम् अद्रोहो नातिमानिता । भवन्ति सम्पदं दैवीम् अभिजातस्य भारत ॥ १६.३ ॥

tējaḥ kṣamā dhṛtiḥ śaucamadrōhō nātimānitā |
bhavanti sampadaṁ daivīmabhijātasya bhārata || 16.3 ||

Then next virtue is tējaḥ. Tējaḥ means not being a victim of exploitation; goodness. Simplicity, does not mean அசட்டுதனம்; idiocracy. Being simple does not mean, being simpleton, it is not required; Be gentle; be good; be tolerant; all these virtues are very good; that does not mean that we should become door mats of other's exploitation. If somebody is committing a mistake; if somebody is improperly behaving; it should not mean I should silently suffer and victimize I can certainly take appropriate action. I need not be taken for a ride in the name of being a Gīta student. Being Gīta student, everyone is cheating me. ஏமாத்தாதே; ஏமாறாதே; ēmāttātē; ēmārātē. Do not cheat and do not get cheated. So this un-ஏமாற_able uncheatable condition is tējaḥ. Only thing is when somebody is exploiting, it does not mean I should impulsively react and get angry. It is not necessary, we can study the situation and first we can use non-violent methods of handling and later, even if we have to take violent steps; by all means take violent steps. If that is the ultimate necessary evil. We have got certain necessary evils; including the Mahābhāratha war itself and Kṛṣṇa says you can take steps but let it be thoughtful steps, after exhausting non-violent methods, you can handle; you need not be a victim of adharma.

So this non-self victimisation is called tējaḥ; because just as we should not hurt others, we should not hurt ourselves also. We have a duty to our own body; our own mind; it does not mean I should unnecessarily suffer; it does not mean I have to put up with nonsense. Need not. No nonsense attitude is tējaḥ.

Then the next virtue is kṣamā. Kṣamā is otherwise called śāntiḥ in the 13th chapter, it is called titikṣa, in the 2nd chapter.

मात्रास्पर्शस्तु कौन्तेय शीतोष्णसुखदुःखदाः ।
आगमापायिनोऽनित्यास्तांस्तितिक्षस्व भारत ॥ २.४ ॥

mātrāsparsāstu kauntēya śītoṣṇasukhaduḥkhadāḥ |
āgamāpāyino'nityāstāṁstitikṣasva bhārata || 2.14 ||

And this word kṣamā has several meanings; one meaning is tolerance, which we saw before; kṣamā is the benefit gained through tapas. While explaining Tapas I said, by practising tapas, a person will get forbearance or tolerance. This is one meaning.

But Śankarācārya gives another meaning for the word kṣamā by contrasting it with the word akrōdhaḥ in the second verse. In the second verse there was a virtue mentioned akrōdhaḥ. And here kṣamā. Śankarācārya takes these two words and contrasts; akrōdhaḥ means capacity to handle anger. When the anger comes inside; before it is expressed outside, I allow that to go through the filter of discrimination. Before expressing, if I can use my discrimination, discreet expression of anger; or discreet non-expression of anger; or discreet partial expression of anger; that is the management of anger. This was called akrōdhaḥ in the second verse; Śankarācārya says kṣamā here means the mind becomes free from anger. Very tough. In the first stage, anger was allowed but it should be under your control; let it be but it should be within your control; but kṣamā means enjoying a mind in which anger does not rise at all. So non-arrival of anger is kṣamā; management of arrived-anger is akrōdhaḥ. Is it possible for a person to avoid the rise of anger at all? Looks it is almost impossible. In fact even psychologists say anger is a healthy sign; healthy part of a regular mind; psychologists will not accept that. But Śankarācārya says it is possible. But he does not say how; You will get angry with him. You are telling non-anger but you are not telling how to do that; I am getting angry with you. We get the clue, in the third chapter; we get the clue in the third chapter, there he had mentioned: kāma ēṣa krōdha ēṣa rajōguṇasamudbhavaḥ. There he defined anger is nothing but expectations converted to irritation; when it is obstructed; obstructed expectation gets converted to irritation; obstructed expectation gets converted to irritation.

And since irritation is the converted form of expectation, if you have to handle irritation, you have to handle your expectation. Lesser the expectation, lesser the scope for anger; and even if expectations are unavoidable, try to make them into preferences. All of these I have told earlier; even if you cannot avoid expectations; BUT expect, but let it be in the form of preference; preference means if it comes, good, if it does not, OK. If the children behave like this, it would be wonderful; but who knows; nowadays' children. Children rights' are coming; they are taking away the word obedience from the dictionary. The psychologists are taking away the word obedience. They say it is improper. We should not force the children, So the children need not obey the teachers, Parents. Even if they disobey, you should not give cane treatment; one should smile and go! So therefore, obedience idea is going; and therefore everyone wants freedom, the children beyond 13, 14, 15. They have got their own likes and dislikes; therefore, the parents' expectation, may be fulfilled; may not be fulfilled; if it is fulfilled, you are puṇyavān; otherwise be ready. And therefore reduce the expectation and whatever minimum you have non-binding expectation; called preference. That is the only way to avoid anger. There is no other remedy. Therefore kṣamā, angerlessness.

Dhṛtiḥ. Dhṛtiḥ means fortitude, perseverance, or will power is called dhṛtiḥ; the capacity to continue a sādhanā in spite of obstacles. In spite of hurdles is called will power. You have the example of samudra madanam, how the dēvās and asūrās continued in spite of varieties of obstacles; until they got amrutham. We have heard gangavatharaṇam, bhagiratha prayathnam, how he brought down the Gaṅga from the heavens. All these things indicate, the willpower. Kṛṣṇa will talk about the importance of willpower in the 18th chapter. And there He will talk about three types of willpower; sātvic willpower; rājasic willpower and tamasic willpower. I will not talk about it now; I hope you will have the willpower to continue the classes until the 18th. Therefore, dhṛtiḥ; dhṛ means holding on to. dhṛ, dhāranē; holding power; willpower.

Then the next virtue is śaucam. This also has come in the 13th chapter, ācāryaupāsanam. Śaucam is cleanliness and orderliness. It should not stop with cleanliness only. We should include orderliness, of the surroundings, from our street, visible from the surroundings, we have the best teaching and least implementation; we have got the best scriptures in the world; but we never implement. And the other countries; they do not have such scriptures; and they seem to implement. We have the enclosure for putting the rubbish; but it is put everywhere else, but in that particular place. So therefore cleanliness of the surrounding; cleanliness of our dress; cleanliness of the body. And above all, the toughest is the purity of the mind; I have talked in the 13th chapter, and therefore I do not want to go to the details.

Then the next virtue is adrōhaḥ; adrōhaḥ is ahimsa at the mental level; not even desiring to harm others; not even tending to harm others. நினைக்க கூடப்படாது. So they will not even think himsa. Himsa icchā abhāva. Ahimsa means himsa abhāva, ahimsa. Adrōhaḥ means himsa icchā abhāva; even having the desire. Śankarācārya says, not only you should not hit others, even raising the hand saying that I will hit, not doing that is adrōhaḥ; not even intending to harm others is called adrōhaḥ.

Then the next one is nātimānitā. This is amānitvam of the 13th chapter. Freedom from pride, freedom from superiority complex, or positively put, humility; humbleness is called nātimānitā. This is supposed to be a very important virtue for a spiritual student. Because, a spiritual student has to do the namaskāram to the guru. If I have got arrogance, namaskāram is the most difficult thing. And that too, namaskāra to another human being is very very difficult; and if a person does not have that humility; knowledge will not flow down; because if something has to flow down; it has to be from higher level to lower level. If the knowledge should come; I should bend humbly. And therefore nātimānitā means vinayaḥ; Humility.

All these virtues; sampadaṃ daivīm abhijātasya. All these virtues will be present in a person who has got daivi sampath; who is born with daivi sampathi. So daivīm sampadaṃ abhijātasya, who is born with satva-guṇa h, or one who is a sāvīc person, he or she will have all these virtues and if these virtues or not there from birth; we have to cultivate them. We need not say if they are not there, we need not say. 99% of the case, we do not have them. Therefore in Vēdānta, cultivating these virtues alone will take more time. Vēdāntic study really does not take time; maximum time is getting this daivi sampath; daivīm sampadaṃ abhijātasya bhavanthi.

दम्भो दर्पोऽभिमानश्च क्रोधः पारुष्यमेव च ।
अज्ञानं चाभिजातस्य पार्थ सम्पदमासुरीम् ॥ १६.४ ॥

dambhō darpō'bhimānaśca krōdhaḥ pāruṣyamēva ca |
ajñānaṃ cābhijātasya pārtha sampadamāsurīm || 16.4 ||

दम्भः dambhaḥ pretension दर्पः darpaḥ arrogance अभिमानः ca abhimānaḥ ca vanity क्रोधः krōdhaḥ anger पारुष्यम् एव च pāruṣyam ēva ca harshness, च अज्ञानम् ca ajñānam and lack of discrimination अभिजातस्य abhijātasya these belong to a person who is born with आसुरीं सम्पदम् asurisampat, āsurīm sampadam पार्थ pārtha Oh Arjuna.

4. Pretension, arrogance, vanity, harshness and lack of discrimination - (these belong) to a person who is born with asurisampat. Oh Arjuna!

So having talked about the daivi sampath, that is the virtues belonging to a spiritually oriented person. Now Kṛṣṇa wants to talk about asūri sampath; which is naturally there; in a materialistic person. As I said asūri sampath does not mean a person who has got the protruding teeth like demon, etc.; it is not; materialistic tendencies are here called asūri sampath.

And what are they? Kṛṣṇa is going to enumerate. In this verse, He presents them in a nutshell; Sangraha asūri sampath. And later, from the seventh verse, He will elaborate the very same asūri sampath, vīsthara asūri sampath from seventh verse we will get up to verse No.21. So 4th verse and 7th verse to 21st verse, asūri sampath. What is materialism? We get a very very beautiful list. What are they?

Dambhaḥ; dambhaḥ means pomp and show; exhibitionism of their wealth; their position; their status etc. which is called ostentation is no.1; dambhaḥ.

Then the next materialistic tendency is darpaḥ. Along with money and power, comes arrogance. Disrespect great people, disrespecting elderly people, we have got Duryōdhanās and Rāvaṇās in our puraṇās. Therefore darpaḥ, arrogance; then abhimānaḥ; abhimānaḥ means mānitvam, superiority complex, looking upon oneself as pūja yōgya. One who deserve namaskāra, honor, reverence, hāram, if possible pada pūja, if got, it is good.

The difference between darpaḥ and abimāna is; darpaḥ is externally expressed arrogance; mānitvam is unexpressed internally thought. One is at bhāvana level another is at the karma; action level.

Then krōdhaḥ; krōdhaḥ you know; krōdhaḥ is anger; because there is power; because there is position; and therefore he does not mind ill-treating anyone; krōdhaḥ means anger.

pāruṣyam; rudeness, harshness, impoliteness; mannerlessness; all are called pāruṣyam; in language, in action, etc.

Then Ajñānam, ajñānam means ignorance and here the word ignorance means ignorance of dharma śāstra. We are not talking about spiritual ignorance; because we are not dealing with philosophy in these two chapters; 16th and 17th are dealing ethics and morality. And therefore the word ignorance here means ignorance of ethics, ignorance of morals; dharmādharma vivēka. All these are in full measure. He is rich in these character. Therefore ajñānam ca āsūri sampadām abhijātasya bhavathi. These are all naturally there in a person who is born with rajasic and tamasic tendencies. Especially if he belongs to a rich family, parampara rich family; then do not know what is humility, what is namaskāra, becomes a very big obstacle.

ॐ

In the 16th chapter of the Gīta, Lord Kṛṣṇa is talking about two types of lifestyles, one that is conducive to spirituality and mōkṣa and the other one non-conducive to spiritual goal and these two lifestyles are called daivi sampath and āsūri sampath. We can roughly translate as spiritual-value-system and materialistic-value-system; and what are the values which are based on this spiritual value system were mentioned in the first three verses; abhayaṃ sattvasaṃsuddhir, etc. and the materialistic-value-system, Kṛṣṇa summarised in the 4th verse and he will elaborately deal with that from the 7th verse up to 21st verse later. And before elaborating the āsūri sampath, Kṛṣṇa points out that if you want to gain mōkṣa, then your life style should be governed by daivi sampath. That is mentioned in the 5th verse; we will read:

दैवी सम्पद्विमोक्षाय निबन्धायासुरी मता ।
मा शुचःसम्पदं दैवीमभिजातोऽसि पाण्डव ॥ १६.५ ॥

daivī sampadvimōkṣāya nibandhāya"surī matā |
mā śucaḥ sampadam daivīmabhijātō'si pāṇḍava || 16.5 ||

मता matā it is known that दैवी सम्पत् daivī sampat daivi-sampat, विमोक्षाय vimōkṣāya leads to liberation आसुरी āsurī and āsūri-sampat निबन्धाय nibandhāya (leads) to bondage मा शुचः mā śucaḥ do not grieve, पाण्डव pāṇḍava oh ! Arjuna असि अभिजातः asi abhijātaḥ you are born with दैवी सम्पदम् daivīrṁ sampadam daivi-sampat

5. It is known that daivi-sampat leads to liberation and āsūri-sampat leads to bondage, Oh Arjuna, do not grieve; you are born with Daivi-sampat.

Daivī sampadvimōkṣāya bhavathi; the spiritual value system which I gave out in the first three verses will take you towards Mōkṣa. It is conducive to self-knowledge. Mōkṣah hētuḥ bhavathi; whereas the āsūri sampath, the materialistic value system; Nibandhāya bhavathi, will keep only in saṁsāra; only in bondage. And naturally Arjuna is worried to which category he belongs to, he wants to know, therefore, Kṛṣṇa pats Arjuna and says, Arjuna fortunately, you are with daivi sampath only. Mā sucaḥ. So do not worry; daivim sampatham abijathaḥ asi. You are born with spiritual inclination. You have a value for spiritual growth; daivi sampath, which is because of purva janma sukṛtam only. Interest in spirituality is possible only if we have got a little bit spark of spirituality, inherited from the previous birth; anēka janma saṁsiddha thatōyāthi paramgathim. Kṛṣṇa said before, spiritual development takes place through many janmas. If we had such a lifestyle in this birth also, we will have a natural inclination for religious or spiritual life. Arjuna, you are born with such an inclination. You have got a sātvic tendency; you are a guṇa brāhmaṇa by birth itself and therefore you can feel happy. And you can nourish that spiritual tendency more and more.

द्वौ भूतसर्गौ लोकेऽस्मिन् दैव आसुर एव च ।
दैवो विस्तरशः प्रोक्तः आसुरं पार्थ मे शृणु ॥ १६.६ ॥

dvau bhūtasargau lōkē'smin daiva āsura ēva ca |
daivō vistaraśaḥ prōkta āsuram pārtha mē śṛṇu || 16.6 ||

अस्मिन् लोके asmin lōkē in this world द्वौ भूतसर्गौ dvau bhūtasargau there are two types of created beings द्वैवः dvaivaḥ the daiva, एव च आसुरः ēva ca āsuraḥ and the asura दैवः

प्रोक्तः daivaḥ prōktaḥ the daiva has been described विस्तरशः vistaraśaḥ elaborately शृणु आसुरम् śṛṇu āsuram hear about the asura, मे me from Me, पार्थ pārtha Oh Arjuna!

6. In this world there are two types of created beings – the daiva and the āsura. The daiva has been described elaborately. Hear about āsura from Me, Oh Arjuna!

So here Kṛṣṇa says, He Arjuna, the entire humanity can be divided into two groups. Not merely Indians; not merely the vĕdic people, the entire humanity can be divided into two groups; based on their tendencies; their values. Asmin lōkē dvau bhūtasargau, two types of human creations are there in this world. Daivaḥ, one group of humanity we can call daiva group, which means naturally having a spiritual tendency. They might be born in a materialistic society; but something pulls them towards spiritual people, spiritual books, spiritual topics, something attracts them, they themselves do not know the reason. And there is another group, āsuraḥ ēva cha; utterly materialistic group, down to earth group, as a Yamadharmarāja said in Kathōpaniṣad. śrēyaśca prēyaśca manuṣyamētaḥ tau samparītya vivinakti dhīraḥ. Yamadharmarāja calls them śrēyas and prēyas group. So āsuraḥ meaning materialistic tendencies; even though they born in a spiritual family; surrounded by Vēdās, surrounded by Brāhmaṇās, surrounded by temples; father himself may be a jñāni, but in spite of all these influences; there are people who turn towards materialism. Therefore, āsuraḥ.

And of these two, daivō vistaraśaḥ prōktaḥ; I have talked about the daiva group, the spiritual people, who have got a spiritual value system, I have talked about; in the first three verses: abhayaṁ sattvasaṁsuddhir Jñānayōga vyavasthitiḥ, etc. but I have not elaborately talked about the materialistic value system. and I have briefly mentioned that in the fourth verse, but Kṛṣṇa feels that it should be elaborated. Therefore he says, āsuram; the elaborate study of Āsūri sampath, mē śṛṇu; Arjuna may you learn from me; so that you can avoid such a tendency; you can be forewarned. Thus Kṛṣṇa gives an introduction to the āsūri sampath; and hereafter He will elaborate that.

प्रवृत्तिं च निवृत्तिं च जना न विदुरासुराः ।
न शौचं नापि चाचारः, न सत्यं तेषु विद्यते ॥ १६.७ ॥

pravṛttim ca nivṛttim ca janā na vidurāsurāḥ |
na śaucam nāpi cācāraḥ na satyam tēṣu vidyatē || 16.7 ||

आसुराः जनाः āsurāḥ janāḥ the asura people न विदुः na viduḥ do not know प्रवृत्तिं च pravṛttim ca what is to be done च निवृत्तिम् ca nivṛttim – and what is not to be done, तेषु विद्यते tēṣu vidhyatē they have न शौचम् na śaucam neither purity न च आचारः na ca ācāraḥ nor religious discipline न सत्यम् अपि na satyam api (they have) no truthfulness also.

7. The āsuraḥ people do not know what is to be done and what is not to be done. They have neither purity, nor religious discipline. They have no truthfulness also.

All the human-beings by nature by birth are materialistic in character. Nobody knows that there is a such a goal called mōkṣa. And nobody knows that there is such a thing called dharma, because dharma is not visible to our eyes; mōkṣa is also not visible to our eyes. Both of them are called apauruṣeya puruṣārtha; goals not available for our sense organs; or even for science they are not available. And since these two goals are not known, every human being has got only two puruṣārthās, they are called arta and kāmaḥ. Arta means what? Money, value for wealth is very natural, even a child has value for money. And the second thing is kāma pleasure or enjoyment; therefore everybody by birth has a value for artha kāma puruṣārtha; and therefore our mind develop its own rāgaḥ-dvēsaḥ. Rāgaḥ means likes and dvēṣa means dislike. Right from birth, our life is governed by rāgaḥ-dvēsaḥ s, our instinctive likes and dislikes; which are again based on arta kāma puruṣārtha. And our scriptures point out that this rāgaḥ-dvēsaḥ based life is OK in the beginning stages. But once a particular stage comes, that is once we are capable of discrimination and thinking, this rāgaḥ-dvēsaḥ based life should be changed; and a new value system should replace the old value system; and the new value system that is prescribed by our scriptures is the spiritual value system. And we do not know the importance of spiritual goals, because we are immature people at that time. And therefore, we should be guided by the scriptures which we look upon as Vēdā mātha.

Just as a baby does not know what is good for it and what is bad, a baby surrenders to the mother, and the mother decides what is good for the child; and what age liquid food should be withdrawn; at what stage semi solid food should be given, and at what solid food should be given; what all injections, in 15th day, 30 days, in 90 days, the child does not know anything, the mother decides what is good. And as long as the child goes by the mother's decision, it is ultimately for the good of the baby only. Just as mother decides what is good and bad for us, because we are immature; similarly, Vēdā is the mother, which decides what is ultimately good for us and the ultimate goal of human life has to be spiritual goal only.

Therefore the ṣṛuti says: You do not know what is good for you. I am deciding what is good for you. And what is good for you is Self-knowledge. You will know the value of self-knowledge later and if you want to start your sādhanā in your later stage, you will be 90 years old and therefore follow what I tell you. And the Ṣṛuti replaces the materialistic-value-system by a spiritual-value-system. It tells what is good and should be done by us which is called vidhi. Vidhi means what? A thing which is good for me and niṣēda means that which is not good for me. Vidhi means kartavyam; niṣēda means akarthavyam or varjanīyam and the Śruti asks us to replace the rāgaḥ-dvēsaḥ based life by vidhi-niṣēda based life.

And this transformation from the materialistic-value-system to spiritual-value-system is considered the second birth of the human being. This transformation is from the prākṛta to the samskṛta puruṣa. And this is generally symbolised by the sacred thread ceremony; whether a person wears the sacred thread or not. This transformation, this second birth has to take place and Kṛṣṇa says that the āsura puruṣas are those people who do not go through this transformation of life. Because they do not want to follow the spiritual value system prescribed by the scriptures.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa says āsuraḥ na viduḥ. This āsūri people who are materialistic people, who are governed by rāgaḥ-dvēsaḥ s, likes and dislikes, they do not know educate themselves scripturally. They are literate materialistically, because they know physics or chemists or economics, they have M.Sc or P.hd. all the degrees they have got, spiritually they are illiterate. And therefore this transformation does not take place. They continue to be prākṛta janāḥ, even though they are literate otherwise.

And therefore what is their problem? Pravṛttiṁ na viduḥ. They do not know what is to be done, the kartṛtvaṁ as enjoined as prescribed by the scriptures, what is to be done for spiritual growth, they do not know. Similarly Nivṛttiṁ; means what? Akartṛtvaṁ or to be avoided; what is not good for my spiritual growth; and therefore to be avoided by me; that also they do not know. They do not have dharma adharma vivēkaḥ. And therefore what do they do; whatever they like they do, and what do they avoid; whatever they dislike, they avoid.

And therefore, na śaucaṁ nāpi cācāraḥ na satyaṁ tēṣu vidyatē. So the vēdic scriptures give us a daily routine to be followed for spiritual growth. Every minute details the scriptures give, for spiritual growth, right from getting up onwards; everything is given.

So the first advice the scriptures give is to get up before Sunrise. That itself is in mess these days. The whole system is late to bed; we had early to bed and early to rise, they come from office late, 7 o'clock or 9 o'clock and therefore late dinner, all TV starts at 10 p.m. or Clubs and other things start, they go to bed at 1 o'clock and wake up at 10 or 11 o'clock.

So Śāstra says; ācāra means wake up before sunrise. Sūrya Bhagavān is a prathyakṣa dēvathā and Sūrya bhagavān is rising to bless us, and we should be ready to welcome Sūrya Bhagavān, therefore get up early; this is the first spiritual value. Ācāraḥ.

And after getting up what should you do? Start the day with spirituality, so that you will be reminded of the spiritual goal, earning, getting married, getting children, educating them, they are all OK, but none of them is 'the goal of life'. Therefore you have to give an auto suggestion in the morning, I am born for some other purpose. I should remind myself and therefore they say start with bath, go through ablutions and thereafter start the day with lighting the lamp and then doing some prayers, apply some tilakam, and this is supposed to be the greatest protection against materialism. The onslaught of materialism is so powerful that if you have to protect, they say put some kumkum or chandan or vibhūthi, if you do not to apply something. When they prepare vibhūthi, lot of mantras are chanted during the preparation of vibhūthi. Vibhūthi preparation is not an ordinary thing; it is a very very elaborate ritualistic process, and therefore it is not an ordinary ash, it is an ash with lot of mantra. And not only it has mantras spiritual values, even when a person is applying that he is asked to chant the nāmas of the Lord. And that is why in vaiṣṇava sampradhāya it is called nāma. Why do you call it nāma? Why it is called nāmam? When they are applying that, they have to chant the n ā ma of the Lord; therefore it is called nāmaḥ. And the ash is called Vibhūthi, because when the vibūthi is applied, we have to chant the glory of the Lord. Vibhūthi means Bhagavān mahima. When you are wearing the Vibhūthi, one has to chant the trayāmbaka mantra. Trayāmbakam yajāmahē sugandhiṃ puṣṭi vardhanam. Urvāruka bandhanāth, mṛthōr mukṣīya ma mṛthāt.

This mantra talks about what Vibhūthi, means glory of the Lord. Since you remember the glory of the Lord, the ash itself got the name Vibhuthi and since this tilakam is associated with Īśvara, it is supposed to protect us from the onslaught of materialism. Therefore get up early in the morning; do snānam, light up the lamp, chant the prayers, and remember the Lord and remember the goal of life also. And until you complete all these things, even a drop of water should not be drunk. What about bed copy, bed tea? No, it is all anācāra. Not allowed; whether you follow or not, I am telling what is to be told. Nothing should go, only after completion of this reminder of the spiritual goal.

Then you can take up Hindu newspaper, express newspaper, where you will see so many people dead because of militant attack, all those terrible news may be read later. Start your day with ācāra.

What is materialistic life? None of them will be followed. Therefore na anācāra, na śaucam, there is no sense of religious purity at all for materialistic people. So they walk with the night dress all over the world, with the half cleaned teeth, with the brush in the mouth, with toothpaste, walking all over with a newspaper. It is certainly not a vēdic lifestyle. So śaucam religious purity is not there; anācāra is not there for us. Even brushing the teeth is a religious rite and there is a prayer mantra addressed to vanaspathi dēvathā, because in the olden days, they used the twigs of the trees for cleaning the teeth and therefore prayer to the twig (ஏதாவது கள்சரில் கேள்விப்பட்டிருக்கிறீர்களா? (have you heard about this in any other culture?), prayer to the twig: Hey Vanaspathē, I am brushing my teeth to remove my danta malaḥ, the impurities of the teeth; along with that, Oh Dēvathē, cleanse my mind also". And for what purpose? For ātma jñānam. All these are wonderfully designed by the Vēdā right from the very young age to be followed; materialistic people do not believe in any one of them.

So na ca ācāraḥ na śaucam; they do not have the religious discipline, what about values? na satyam tēṣu vidyatē. They do not believe in the values also. Their argument is, whatever is convenient is value; I will speak truth also; எப்படி; how's this? I will speak truth also when it is convenient. You will get pāpam; If you speak untruth. I do not believe in pāpam, you will go to narakam; I do not believe in narakam. You will not get mōkṣa; Who wants mōkṣa? Nothing; absolute materialism. So na sathyam; values also they do not believe. This is the beginning of materialism. Now we can imagine the details.

असत्यमप्रतिष्ठं ते जगदाहुरनीश्वरम् ।
अपरस्परसम्भूतं किमन्यत्कामहैतुकम् ॥ १६.८ ॥

asatyamapratīṣṭham tē jagadāhuraniśvaram |
aparaspasambhūtam kimanyatkāmahaitukam ||16.8||

ते आहुः tē āhuḥ they say जगद् असत्यम् jagad asatyam this world is without truth अप्रतिष्ठम् apratiṣṭam without dharma अनिश्वरम् aniśvaram without God अपरस्परसम्भूतम् aparaspasambhūtam and born out of the union of the male and female कामहैतुकम् kāmahaitukam The world is caused by desire alone; किम् अन्यत् kim anyat what else.

8. They say --- The world is without truth, without dharma, without God, born out of the union of the male and female. The world is caused by desire; what else.

They are totally irreligious people. They do not believe in anything connected with religion or spirituality, which is based on the vēdic scriptures. First they do not believe in the Vēdās. Asthayam. Sathyam here means Vēdā pramāṇam, Asathyam means that they do not believe in Vēdā pramāṇam, even though Vēdā is like thousand mothers; Śankarācārya tells elsewhere that the Vēdās are like. Matru pitru sahaśrēbhyaḥ abhihitēṣiṇi. Superior to thousand mothers and fathers; it is interested only in our well-being but in spite of that; they do not believe in Vēdā pramāṇam. They are utterly nastika people. And if they do not accept Vēdā pramāṇam, apratiṣṭantē, they do not believe in Dharma. pratiṣṭa means dharma; dharmāḥ means moral or ethical order of the universe. Vēdās say Dharma or morality alone sustains the creation.

धर्मं विश्वस्य जगतः प्रतिष्ठा लोके धर्मिष्ठं प्रजा उपसर्पन्ति । धर्मेण पापमपनुदन्ति धर्मं सर्वं प्रतिष्ठितम् ॥ तस्तमाद् धर्मं परमं वदन्तिः - नारायणोपनिषद्

dharmē viśvasya jagataḥ pratiṣṭhā lōkē dharmiṣṭam prajā upasarpanti | dharmēṇa pāpamapanudanti dharmē sarvaṁ pratiṣṭhitam || tastamād dharma paramaṁ vadanti: - nārāyaṇopaniṣad

Dharma means that which sustains the universe. Dhṛ means to sustain. Dhāranāt dharmah. Moral order alone sustains. Once the morality goes from the society, there will be utter distress and confusion and a society cannot survive for long. And therefore scriptures talk about Dharmas and these people do not believe in dharma because dharma is not visible to our eyes. They believe in the physical order of the universe, because it is scientifically provable. They believe in the scientific laws of the creation; like the law of gravitation; like the ecological laws, etc. but the laws of dharma they do not believe because it cannot be scientifically proved. And therefore they say there is no dharma or adharma; there is no puṇyam or pāpam and therefore there is neither previous birth or next birth. Enjoy this life; following whatever you feel like doing. Therefore, Vēdāḥ nāsthi, dharmah nāsthi.

And then who is the creator of this universe? We do not believe in all these things. Who is the creator of the universe? They do not believe in God also. Jagat Anīśvaram āahu. They say creation can come by itself; the scientists have proved that the big bang took place at such and such time, thereafter the world has evolved by itself with the help of chemical and physical laws; we do not see any intelligent principle behind; and therefore we do not require a God. He does not have any other job and therefore Īśvaraḥ abhi nāsthi.

Īśvaraḥ nāsthi, Vēdāḥ nāsthi. Dharmah nāsthi. Religion nāsthi; everything they reject; they believe in only two things; money and entertainment. Therefore five days of a week, earn; and two days of a week, go all out. Kāvō, piō, maja maja karō. And again start Monday to earn. And enjoy. Earning means arta puruṣartha; enjoyment means kāma-puruṣartha. Continue that till death. This is the philosophy of materialistic people. And therefore jagat anīśvaram āahu.

Whereas what is the belief of the traditional people. We say God is the creator of the world; and along with the world God has created the Vēdās also. And Vēdās are the manuals which are meant to guide our life; so that we can extract the best out of this human life. And the best we can extract is mōkṣa itself. Even though all these are all there, they do not accept; however much you try to convince them, you cannot change. On the other hand, they will change us. If we talk to them for 10 minutes, we will also get doubts. However, do not have materialistic friends; until you clearly understand the Vēdās. Until you understand the Vēdās clearly after study, and understand the value of dharma. Until you understand the concept of pramāṇam, avoid materialistic people. Therefore this people argue; no Īśvara; no Vēdās; no dharma.

Then how did this creation come? Very simple. Aparasparasambhūtaṁ. If God has not created us, how are we created? Very simple; we are created by our parents; இதுக்கு God என்னத்துக்கு தேவை. Why is God necessary for that? Very simple. Therefore, because of the male-female union, which is caused by kāmaḥ or passion, we are born.

And how are our parents born? Because of their parents; and how are their parents born; because of their parents. Why do we require a God at all unnecessarily? And they will also argue, spending money on temples useless; spending money for abhiṣēka etc. useless, and can't that money be given to the poor and why should we waste on the temples.

And when we listen to those arguments, we also start having doubts, perhaps they are correct; whereas Vēdās says spending money on God or dharma or pūja etc. can never be a waste; it is like pouring water at the root of the tree; when you pour water at the root of the tree; water directly goes to the root; but in an invisible manner the water goes to all the branches; I do not see; but every cell of the tree gets the benefit.

Similarly, Bhagavān is the root of this creation; where did we see? In Bhagavat Gīta; In which chapter? Fifteenth chapter. ūrdhvamūlamadhaḥśākhamāśvattham prāhuravyayam; abhiṣēka you do, naivaidyam you do, nothing goes waste, ultimately it is for the benefit of humanity. But a materialistic person will not accept that. And therefore they argue aparaspara sambhūtaṁ, are beings are born out of the union of their parents; aparāḥ means male, parāḥ means female, aparaspara means male-female, means parents, sambhūtaṁ means born. All because of what? Kāmahaitukam, which union is caused by kāma, desire for children.

एतां दृष्टीमवष्टभ्य नष्टात्मानोऽल्पबुद्धयः ।
प्रभवन्त्युग्रकर्माणः क्षयाय जगतोऽहिताः ॥ १६.९ ॥

Ētām dr̥ṣṭimavaṣṭabhya naṣṭātmānō'lpabuddhayaḥ |
prabhavantiyugrakarmāṇaḥ kṣayāya jagatō'hitāḥ || 16.9 ||

अवष्टभ्य avaṣṭabhya holding एतां दृष्टिम् ētām dr̥ṣṭim such a view, अल्पबुद्धयः alpabuddhayaḥ these indiscriminate (people), नष्टात्मानः naṣṭātmānaḥ are lost spiritually उग्रकर्माणः ugrakarmāṇaḥ taking to cruel actions, प्रभवन्ति prabhavanti they become अहिताः ahitāḥ the enemies of the world जगतः क्षयाय jagataḥ kṣayāya for (its) destructions.

9. Holding such views, these indiscriminate people are lost spiritually. Taking to cruel actions, they become the enemies of the world for (its) destruction.

Ētām dṛṣṭim avaṣṭabhya. These āsūric people entertain or hold on to the materialistic philosophy. Their philosophy is whatever sense organs can see that alone exists. That there can be things, beyond our sense organs and which can be known through other means of knowledge, they do not accept.

It is like a person with four sense organs. Imagine a person has only four sense organs by birth. He does not have eyes. He has got ears, tongue, nose and skin. And I talk about the field of sight, world of colours, I say that there is a world of colours. He says I do not believe in that; I do not accept that; because I am not able to appreciate the colours with my four sense organs. And I say No. that you cannot know that, because the available four sense organs do not have access to the colours. It has to be known through the fifth sense organs, eyes, I tell. And this person argues that No, I do not believe the fifth sense organ. I want to prove the colours with the help of the 4 sense organs; he wants the proof for the colour through the ears, or prove the colour through the nose, through the tongue, skin, through the available four pramāṇas. He is not interested in the fifth sense organ which reveals a field not available for these four.

Similarly our culture talks about a sixth sense organ. What is the sixth sense organ? That is called Vēdāh. And we want to prove that with the help of the available five sense organs, we can only say that the available sense organs do not have access to that; you have to use the sixth. And if a person refuses to use the eyes, which is the fifth sense organ, who is the loser. I will not use the eyes and will not use it, he is only going to be the loser, neither the eye nor the world of colours. If I should benefit from the world of colours, I should be willing accept a fifth sense organ called the eye; which sense organ can never be proved by the other four sense organs.

Vēdā is the sixth sense organ which can never be proved or disproved by the available five sense organs. You use the Vēdā pramāṇa and study with faith, you will be opened to a new wonderful field, which is not accessible to science; which is not acceptable to the sense organs. We are going to get an aparūṣeya prapañcaḥ, which is beneficial to us only.

By rejecting the Vēdā, Vēdā is not the loser; not the new aparūṣeya prapañcaḥ, I am going to be the loser. But this materialistic people will never understand the significance of the sixth sense organ. They claim that they are rational people, they will believe in only those things which can be proved through five sense organs. Like the other fool. What does he want? He wants the proof for the colour with the help of the other 4 sense organs; how can I prove it? It is not possible.

And therefore the materialistic people will never understand and why are going to be the losers. naṣṭātmānaḥ. They are lost souls, because they are losing a huge chunk of the creation which is accessible to only Vēdā pramāṇa. The very definition of the Vēdā is what:

प्रत्क्षेणानुमित्या वा यस्तूपायो न बुध्यते।
एनं विदन्ति वेदेन तस्माद् वेदस्य वेदता॥

pratksēṇānumityā vā yastūpāyō na budhyatē|
ēnaṁ vidanti vēdēna tasmād vēdasya vēdatā||

Vēdā is a sixth sense organ as it were; which will reveal a new world which is not accessible to these regular five sense organs. How can you define the fifth sense organ the eye; eye is a fifth sense organ, which reveals the colours, which are not accessible to the other four sense organs. Similarly, Vēdās reveals a completely new field. It is for you to operate or make use of the Vēdās; otherwise you are going to be the loser.

So naṣṭātmānaḥ; they are lost souls. All because of what? Alpabuddhayaḥ. They do not understand the concept of pramāṇa. What the eyes reveal, the ears can never prove, the ears can never disprove; what the ears reveal, the eyes can never prove or disprove.

Suppose I say this is orange colour revealed by eyes; suppose the eyes wants to verify the orange colour. No, the ears are great; but the ears can never prove or disprove, because their field is different. Vēdic field is different; scientific field is different. Science has got access only to a particular field; therefore science has no right to prove or disprove the Vedic teaching. This is the significance of pramāṇam. இந்த பிரமாணத்தை அவம் புரிஞிக்கறதிலை (This pramāṇam they do not understand). Therefore they try to prove the Vēdās scientifically. That is the greatest foolishness.

It is like trying to prove the colours with the help of the ears. They will never succeed; and when they do not succeed, instead of understanding their foolishness, they reject the Vēdās. Vēdās are unscientific and therefore I won't believe. That is the greatest foolishness to have. Therefore Kṛṣṇa says: alpabuddhayaḥ; அசடுகள் idiots; they try to prove Vēdās through science; alpabuddhayaḥ. Therefore Ētām dṛṣṭimavaṣṭabhya naṣṭātmānō'lpabuddhayaḥ. They hold on to a materialistic philosophy.

And once artha and kāma becomes dominant in life; when dharma is not valued, then compromise with values become natural. Violation of values become natural. Telling a lie will become very very comfortable; first it will prick, second lie it does not matter, the third lie we are comfortable; thereafter lying become natural, cheating becomes natural, hiṁsa becomes natural; therefore they will be hurting the moral order of the universe. ugrakarmānaḥ, they are people of violence. Violating what? The ethical or moral order of the creation; violating dharma which is the health of the universe. It is like violating the rules of health; by following the rules of health; I keep my body fit. If I violate those rules, the body dharma is disturbed; which becomes sickness physically, similarly when dharma is violated, the society becomes sick. Adharma is the sickness of the society. A sick body cannot survive; a sick society cannot also survive.

And therefore ugrakarmāṇaḥ, they hurt dharma; and the society indirectly prabhavanthi.

And jagataḥ kṣayāya; they become the cause of the destruction of the humanity. And the tragedy is when the scientific knowledge increases, and value for dharma decreases, when scientific knowledge increases, and value for dharma decreases, the scientific knowledge also will be used for adharmic purposes. And science gives enormous power and the increased power will be used for consistent akramaḥ. If medical science increases and kidneys can be replaced; kidney racket comes. Here all kinds of racket going on.

Knowledge without wisdom becomes dangerous. Knowledge is material knowledge, wisdom is dharmic knowledge. When material knowledge increases, without dharmic knowledge, that society will have problems. And therefore jagata kṣayāya. They will cause destruction of universe. Militants will increase; terrorists will increase, train accidents will increase; naxals will increase. They will have even atom bombs and chemical weapons. Science will become a curse of humanity. Science will be blessing only when it goes along with dharma. Therefore, these people will become a curse to the society.

Therefore ahitāḥ; ahitaḥ means they become enemies of humanity. Educated people without dharma will become enemies. Somewhere it is nicely said: sākṣarā rākṣasāḥ bhavanti. Sākṣarā means literate people. Akṣaraiḥ, man of letters; akṣaram mean letter. sākṣarāḥ means literate. They do not know what is dharma, they were reversed. Sā kṣa rā, if you reverse, rā kṣa sā. போருமா? Enough.

More is going to come.

Hari Om

202 Chapter 16, Verses 10-14

ॐ

In our scriptures, they talk about four goals of human life, known as puruṣārtaḥ; puruṣa meaning human being, artaḥ means goal; arthātē ithi artaḥ. Therefore puruṣārtaḥ means human goals. They are called human goals; because human-beings alone can fix a goal and work consistently to accomplish that. Because fixing the goal and working for that requires a freewill and human-beings alone are endowed with this freewill and therefore they alone can have short-term and long-term goals and consistently work for the accomplishment. And since freewill and these goals are unique to human beings, they are called puruṣārtaḥ. Of these four puruṣārtaḥ, the first one is well-known and every human being naturally goes after that; and it is called artaḥ; artaḥ means material possession; artaḥ means material possessions to make sure that the life is secure.

I saw an advertisement in some bus stand; "Life is beautiful, make it secure"; means what? Take our policy or something like that; so material possessions for the sake of my security is very natural for even animals and certainly it is instinctive and natural for human-beings and all material possessions are called artaḥ. It may be in the form of money, in the form of shares; in the form of landed property; in the form of real estate, that means others are unreal. Why this should only be said real estate? Whatever it is I do not why, and all of them come under artha,

And the second is kāmaḥ, kāmaḥ means all forms of sense pleasures or entertainment. This is a season of entertainment and therefore people know what entertainment is: sense pleasures. This artha and kāmaḥ are called materialistic pursuits and this is very natural to human beings. One need not have any special training; we do not require gurus; we do not require scriptures to train people in these two pursuits.

But Vēdās say that these two are human goals; but do not stop with these two; there are two more human goals; uniquely human, not available for other animals and the third in that list is called dharmāḥ, by which we mean inner refinement; refinement of the mind. In Sānskrīt we call saṁskāraḥ; citta saṁskāraḥ. In fact we have got several ceremonies from conception to death; 41 such ceremonies are mentioned. Each ceremony is called a saṁskāra. Garbhādhāraṇa, pumsavana saṁskāraḥ, seemanthōnanyana, jāthakarma, nāma karma, choula, annaprāsana, upanayana, vēda vrathini, vivāha; 41 saṁskāras are mentioned; the culmination being obsequies, the rituals done at the time and immediately after death. All of them are saṁskārās, because they are supposed contribute to the inner refinement.

And not only the rituals contribute to the inner saṁskāra, even a life of values contribute to this inner refinement. All the ethical values are part of the inner saṁskārā and not only a rituals and values, even healthy attitudes contribute to the inner refinement; our attitude towards the parents; matru dēvō bhava; pitru dēvō bhava; Our attitude towards elders; which is unique to our culture, we are asked to do namaskāra. Namaskāra indicates our reverence for age; our reference for experience; experience we respect, because certain type of refinement can come only through experience. Therefore attitude towards wealth; attitude towards people, attitude towards the environment; attitude towards the world in general, they also form part of the lifestyle; contributing to inner refinement. This chitta saṁskārā is called dharmah.

Thus the third unique human goal is mental refinement; In Vēdānta it is called sūkṣma buddhi. Dṛśyatē tu agrayā buddhyā, sukṣmaya sukṣma darśibhiḥ. But unfortunately, this inner refinement is not a gross tangible goal. Money is a tangible goal, people can understand; I can show dollars or rupees; this is goal. And entertainment is tangible; I can switch on and show what is entertainment. But dharma is an intangible goal. Therefore it takes time for the human-beings even to know the value of this goal. Why dharma is very very important as a human goal? Even to appreciate that it requires a sensitivity. Thus dharma is inner refinement, attained through religious life clubbed with values; Not mere values; but mere religious life; a lifestyle which combines religious life as well as ethics or morality. And this will lead to inner refinement. This is called dharma puruṣārtaḥ or in the language of sixteenth chapter; daivi sampath, inner wealth; invisible wealth.

And then the fourth puruṣārtaḥ, which is the culmination of these three is mōkṣa, otherwise called spiritual enlightenment; spiritual knowledge. Spiritual wisdom is the fourth puruṣārtaḥ, which is called mōkṣa. It is called mōkṣa means it is freedom from ignorance. Knowledge will give me freedom from what? Knowledge will give me freedom from ignorance. And freedom from ignorance means freedom from problems created by ignorance and according to our scriptures; all human problems are caused by ignorance. And this spiritual knowledge or wisdom is also an intangible goal; I cannot show what is mōkṣa. In one class, to show sample mōkṣa, "you all come in queue and see and go", I cannot do it.

Dharma is intangible inner goal; mōkṣa is non-tangible inner goal; but the scriptures say they also must be included. And vēdās says, even if you do not the know worth of these two higher goals, even if you do not understand what is dharma; even if you do not understand what is mōkṣa; does not matter, you follow the lifestyle that I prescribe; then if you follow that; in due course you will know the value of dharma and mōkṣa.

Like a mother, cannot teach everything to the child; because child is too young to understand what is hygiene? Child cannot understand; therefore mother blindly commands: wash your hands before eating; the child does not understand what is the significance of washing, what is infection; what is hygiene; what is bacteria; what is disease; mother cannot teach a small baby; therefore the mother says you will understand what is hygiene later; now you just listen to what I say; wash your hand. And if the child does not do that; the mother pulls and mother herself washes. Even though the child may be unhappy because the mother is forcing too many things; but mother does not feel bad, the motive of the mother is the well-being of the child. Therefore what the vēdās say is: You may not understand the significance of inner growth; you may not understand the significance of a value based life; you may not understand the significance of religious life itself; even if you do not understand, follow with faith in the vēdās; with the attitude that vēda is my mother; whatever it tells will be for my good. And even if I do not understand the significance now; as I grow I will understand. Thus dharma and mōkṣa puruṣārtaḥ also should be included when a person is pursuing artha kāma. Such a person is a religious person; a person given to daivi sampath.

And Kṛṣṇa says the problem with the materialist people is they will value only artha kāma puruṣārtaḥ. A materialistic person is defined as that person, who looks upon only two goals in life; ārtha and kāma puruṣārtaḥ alone. He will not understand what is dharma; he does not want to understand what is dharma. He will not understand what is mōkṣa; he does not want to understand. At least if he blindly follows the vēdās, it will be fine; but he does not have faith in the Vēdās? So no faith in god; no faith in vēdās; no faith in gurus; and himself cannot understand also. நம்மாத்து மாப்பிளையை ஞாபகம் வெச்சுக்குவோ; தனக்காகவும் தெரியாது; பிறர் சொன்னாலும் புரியாது) just remember our son-in-law, he does not know and if someone advices, also he does not understand). These people, artha kāma pradhāna, are called materialistic people.

Kṛṣṇa is very strongly criticizing these materialistic people; he said; Yētham dṛṣṭi avaṣṭabhya; What is their dṛṣṭi? Two puruṣārtaḥ; earn and enjoy; five day earn, two day enjoy; and then die. That is life for them. Naṣṭa ātmanaḥ; they do not know the higher possibilities of human life, the wonderful ānanda born out of dharma and mōkṣa; they do not understand; naṣṭa ātmanaḥ; spiritually lost; they do not understand what is inner growth.

Alpha buddhayaḥ; they are short sighted people. And when I try to talk about dharma, they only argue. They say I do not value dharma or ethics, morality or devotion; there are many dharmic religious people going through all types of problem. Devotees are suffering; ethical people are suffering; and all those adharmic people are enjoying. This argument they give. பக்தத்தனாயிருந்து என்னதை கண்டான், என்ன வாழ்ந்தான். What is the use of being a bhaktha? What life he is leading?

This is the silliest argument, because, if you look at this way, you cannot accept any law of life. There are so many health rules prescribed in health magazine. They tell these are not good for health; and these are all good for health; they talk about these do and don'ts with regard to health.

But if you observe, you will certainly find that there are many people who follow all the health rules and they fall sick. They do not smoke; they do not drink; they do not eat non-veg. they do regularly do the exercises and yet they suffer heart attack. There are others who violate all the health rules and yet enjoy without any diseases. குண்டா நன்னா ஸௌக்கியாமா இருக்கா. Now can I argue therefore all the health rules are meaningless. They say cigarette smoking is injurious to health; and it is not a casual statement; after a long research it has been said. There are people who smoke, and who are healthy. And there are people who do not even touch a cigarette and have cancer. Therefore can you say that rules of health are meaningless. We can never give such an argument.

Similarly we say dharma is good; adharma is bad. This is based on śāstric total vision; to argue that dhārmic people suffer; adhārmic people enjoy is the silliest approach like saying that smoking people are health; slum people are healthy; they drink unprotected water and healthier; and this man who boils bisleri water and drinks. Bisleri he buys and he boils it 200% for 3 hours and he gets stomach ache when he drinks that. Therefore would you say that I do not believe in healthy water; protected water, I will drink any water; coovam water. You do not do that; you are concerned about your health; therefore the laws of hygiene you follow; even the rules are never seen; there are violations both ways.

Similarly here also, we should not argue, dhārmic suffer and adhārmic people enjoy; adharma is not good for our spiritual health. And Dharma alone protects our spiritual health. And this āsūric people will not accept and they argue. What to say to these people? We can only pray for them.

Therefore Kṛṣṇa says: Nāstāthmana. விதனடா வாதிகள்; They are alpa buddhayaḥ. They are short sighted. What will happen to them? Prabhavanti ugrakarmāṇaḥ. Up to this we saw in the last class.

Ugrakarmāṇaḥ Prabhavanti, they will take to violent lifestyle; ugra karma, means himsa karmāṇa, because even though himsa is adharma, they do not believe in adharma, whatever is an obstacle to them, they want to destroy; ugrakarmāṇaḥ and jagataḥ ahitāḥ; and they are enemies of the world. As I said in the last class; violation of dharma will create an imbalance in the cosmic order; imbalance in the cosmic order will cause the destruction of the universe. And therefore they are enemies of the world and they cause destruction.

काममाश्रित्य दुष्पूरं दम्भमानमदान्विताः ।
मोहाद् गृहीत्वासद् ग्राहान् प्रवर्तन्तेऽशुचिब्रताः ॥ १६.१० ॥

kāmamāsritya duṣpūraṁ dambhamānamadānvitāḥ
mōhādgrhītvā'sadgrāhān pravartantē'sucivratāḥ || 16.10 ||

10. Taking to insatiable desire, they are full of pretensions, vanity, and haughtiness. Holding wrong views due to delusion, they act with impure resolve.

Duṣpūraṁ kāmam āsritya; there is no limit materialistic desires. Fulfilment of worldly desires can never give total satisfaction. So it is like mirage water; from distance there seems to be water; when I go near, it recedes further. And similarly we have a false hope that the fulfilment of materialistic desires will give us satisfaction, but we find once one set of desires are fulfilled; the next set is ready. Swami Chinmayānanda nicely says: Happiness is that the number of desires you have, divided by the number of desires you fulfil. Number of desires you fulfil divided by the number of desires you have. Suppose you have got 10 desires. You fulfil the first desire and get 1/10 happiness. Fulfill second desire 2/10, third desire 3/10. happiness is increasing..... 6/10 and when you fulfil the 10th desire, the fraction of happiness will become 10/10 is equal to one whole happiness and therefore what is our attempt, keep on fulfilling the desire, so that one day we will reach 10/10.

But the problem is we only study the increase in the numerator; we are assuming that the denominator, the number of desires will remain stationary. The problem is your fulfilment is one, two, three, four, but the increase of desires is 10, 100, 1000, 10000 millions. Therefore by the time you fulfil the 10th desire, you discover the denominator has become 10 millions. Therefore you started from 1/10; and at the end you find you 10 by one million. You will find that you have fulfilled so many desires; but instead of increasing, the happiness decreases, because there is no end to the fulfilment of desires.

Therefore Kṛṣṇa says; duṣpūraṁ; nobody is satiated; and they say it is like pouring ghee into the fire; you want to subside; you want to quench, the fire by offering ghee it will never be extinguished; it only increases; so duṣpūraṁ kāmam asrithya.

Dambhamāna madānvitāḥ; so having fulfilled their petty desires; they have got dambha; dambha means what; we have seen before; pomp and show; ostentation; and māna means pride and madā; means haughtiness or arrogance; they are full of these negative traits. All because of what? Mōhādgrhītvā'sadgrāhān; all because of delusion. What is the delusion? Finite plus finite is equal to finite only. By effort whatever I achieve in life; that will be limited both in time and in size. Any karma-phalam is paricinnam only. I start as a finite being; by adding any number of finite goals, I only go from finitude to finitude; infinitude will not come. This they do not understand, because of delusion.

So mōhādgrhītvā'sadgrāhān, asadgrāhā means false values; that the external objects will give me security is a false value; because the external object itself is insecure. Money is insecure; inflation problem and interest is coming down. And the expenditure is increasing; cost of living increases, and the interest decreases. What security we have? Therefore money is insecure, property is insecure, people around are insecure; job is maha insecure. So by holding on to other insecure things, how can I find security. But the human-beings never thinks. He has got a security outside the house; I told you outside the house; the security itself is thin and fly and this security is going to give security to this house. And that is our sense of security; and asat grahan; thoughtless values people have.

Pravartantē'śucivratāḥ; they have got all kinds of vratāms; which are all aśuci. Evil resolves. So instead of taking the religious vṛatāms, Śabarimala vratāms, etc. in the olden days 41 days, now no vratham, everything in one day. So the idea is under some pretext or other, why can't we follow certain disciplines. They are śuci vratāms, but these people have got aśuci vratāms. What is resolve? I will finish that competitor. But all negative. Aśuci vritāḥ; like the vrithams of the rākṣasās. They also followed religious discipline but for the destruction of the world.

चिन्तामपरिमेयां च प्रलयान्तामुपाश्रिताः ।
कामोपभोगपरमाः एतावदिति निश्चिताः ॥ १६.११ ॥

cintāmaparimēyām ca pralayāntāmupāśritāḥ|
kāmōpabhōgaparamā ētāvaditi niścītāḥ || 16.11 ||

उपाश्रिताः upāśritāḥ Given to अपरिमेयाम् aparimēyām deep च प्रलयान्ताम् ca pralayāntām and lifelong, चिन्ताम् cintām anxiety कामोपभोगपरमाः kāmōpabhōgaparamāḥ and holding enjoyment of sense objects as the highest goal, निश्चिताः niścītāḥ they are convinced इति एतावत् iti ētāvat that (life is) this much (alone)

11. Given to deep and lifelong anxiety, and holding enjoyment of sense objects as the highest goal, they are convinced in their belief that this is the highest limit of joy.

These materialistic people learn only to depend more and more; depend on more and more external factors; their very acquisition indicate they want happiness and security; depending on external factors. Therefore the number of external factors they depend upon increases gradually. Whereas the vēdānta tells, reduce dependences. The fundamental motto of Vēdānta is what; sarvam paravaśam duḥkham. Dependence on external factors is sorrow. External factors may be person; may be things; may be situation; sarvam ātma vaśam sukham. Non-dependence on external factors or self-dependence or independence is joy. Whereas materialistic society will by repeated advertisements, they will make you buy so many gadgets. and therefore we learn to depend upon so many things. Even soap; one for the hand, for the legs, head, five different soaps, everything different; that is consumerist society. And the more the number of external factors are, the more unpredictable my life will be. Because which factor will fail when I do not know; so therefore, hidden variables will increase, unpredictability increases. Therefore I do not know what will breakdown tomorrow and therefore whether I am happy or unhappy will depend upon perfect functioning of so many gadgets from telephone, for computer, so many things. And therefore the problem is the more the life becomes unpredictable, the more the stress will be. Unpredictability leads to stress and strain; And the materialistic person depends upon more unpredictable external factors for his comfort and happiness; whereas the spiritual person requires only one thing; ātmni ēva ātmana tuṣṭā. Fortunately, ātma will not break down; and therefore, these materialistic people are full of stress and strain. Cintām aparimēyām; cintā means worry, anxiety; tension, stress; and globalisation means what anything happens anywhere; if America decides to start a war with Iraq, the whole global economy will get affected, the indexes, etc. all of them that will go up and down; along with this graph going up and down, my happiness also will depend. Bush decides my happiness. Can you imagine? Isn't true; because the shares going up and down; the price of oil increase and decrease; all in the hands of Bush; we are all bushmen only.

So chintham aparimēyamca, limitless worry; to worry about what? No sleep in the night; that is another worry; What is that insomnia? Aparimēyām ca. whereas a devotee who is a karma-yōgi, a man of daivi sampath, he says,

यद्यत् भव्यम् भवतु भगवन् पूर्वा जन्मानुरूपम् |
येतद् प्रर्त्य मम बहुमताम् जन्म जन्मान्दरेपि |
त्वत् पदांभोरुह युगगता निश्चला भक्ति अस्तु ॥ yadyat bhavyam bhavatu bhagavan pūrva janmānurūpam, yētaḍ prartyaṁ mama bahumatām janma janmāndarēpi,

tvat padāmbhōruha yugagatā niścalā bhakti astu |

Let whatever happen what has to happen. Let not my peace depend upon these unpredictable factors, Oh Lord. Because I do not have control over Bush. I do not have control over Bush. Therefore Oh Lord give me the inner strength, is the spiritual approach, but this devotion, this materialistic person does not have. Swallow tablets for sleeping. So cintām aparimēyāmca and how many days he worries? Pralayāntām. That means what? Worry does not have an end at all.

Upāsritāḥ kāmōpabhōgaparamāḥ; and when I ask him to surrender to the Lord, he would not believe, he would not accept God, he would not accept karma-yōga; he would not accept daily prayers; So he is committed to what; kamau upabhōga paramāḥ; all the time, money dhyānam, entertainment dhyānam. So paramāḥ means the highest goal; iti ētāvat niścītāḥ; they think life is only this much. All upaniṣads strongly criticise such people.

अविद्यायामन्तरे वर्तमानाः स्वयं धीराः पण्डितं मन्यमानाः । जड्घन्यमानाः परियन्ति मूढा अन्धेनैव नीयमाना यथान्धाः ॥

pariyanti mūḍhā andhēnaiva nīyamānā yathāndhāḥ ॥ I.2.8 ॥

These materialistic people are miserable and unfortunately they convert other people also to materialism; because that is the most tempting philosophy and therefore ētavadi iti niscithaḥ. They think life is only this much.

आशापाशशतैर्बद्धाः कामक्रोधपरायणाः ।
ईहन्ते कामभोगार्थम् अन्यायेनार्थसञ्चयान् ॥ १६.१२ ॥ āśāpāśaśatairbaddhāḥ kāmakrōdhaparāyaṇāḥ ।

īhantē kāmabhōgārtham anyāyēnārthasañcayān ॥ 16.12 ॥

बद्धाः baddhāḥ bound आशापाशशतैः āśāpāśaśataiḥ by the strings of hundreds of expectations कामक्रोधपरायणाः kāmakrōdhaparāyaṇāḥ and given to desire and anger, ईहन्ते īhantē they seek, अर्थसञ्चयान् arthasañcayān hoards of wealth अन्यायेन anyāyēna by unrighteous means कामभोगार्थम् kāmabhōgārtham for the enjoyment of sense objects.

12. Bound by the strings of hundreds of expectations, and given to desire and anger, they seek hoards of wealth by unrighteous means for the enjoyment of sense objects.

So these materialistic people are shackled by countless attachments; āśāpāśa; pāśa means strings or shackles; not physical ropes; but ropes of attachment; so āśāpāśaśataiḥ, in hundreds; whereas the daivi sampath approach is what, I do not own anything; this is the approach of daivi sampath person. His attitude is everything belongs to the Lord; I use them with the grace of the Lord; that is why when I build a house, I do not enter without placing the picture of the Lord. The idea is this house also not my house, this is a temple; and I am using that house with the grace of the Lord.

Therefore a sāvīc person disowns everything; whereas the rājasic, tāmasic materialistic people; they hold on to things. So they are shackled by attachment, and kāmakrōdhaparāyaṇāḥ; they are rich in kāma and krōdha.

And unfortunately, a materialistic society praises only these rich people. When there is a humble person who has value for dharma; society does not honour; but when a person gets down from Mercedes or whatever the valuable car, that means what? A society itself can mislead the people; vēdic society always valued renunciation. If Buddha was valued not because he was a king; but he renounced everything; value is for na karmanā na prajayā dhanēna, tyagē naikē amṛtatva mānaśuḥ whereas a materialistic society will value possession and we also get confused; which is more important; inner wealth or external wealth/ This is crucial question; so these people kāmakrōdhaparāyaṇāḥ; given to kāma and krōdha; as the ultimate thing.

Īhantē; they are busy; they work overtime, 16 hours a day; 18 hours a day; they slog with cell phone running all over, no time for pañca mahā yajña. Do you remember, no time for remembering even what are the pañca mahā yajña, let alone doing that. Seems having heard somewhere; because no time; so Īhantē; they are busy workaholics; new word workaholics;

Arthasañcayān; they work for amassing wealth; heaps of wealth; they want to hoard; they want to possess, and they want to own in two colours, wealth in two colours, do you understand; black and white; and in north call it Ram aur Śyām. OK. Therefore nyāyēna and anyāyēna. Nyāyēna means Ram. Anyāyēna means Śyām. Kṛṣṇa was black and therefore Śyām.

So all for what purpose; kāmabhōgārtham; for entertainment. Earning money itself is not bad; I have told about this before. You earn more and own less; you become a blessing to the society. In fact, a karma-yōgi is one who earns more and owns less. A karmi is one who earns more and owns more; because when I earn more and own everything I earn, I have no money to share with others; Rs.1000 I earn and Rs.1000 I own; where is the question of sharing. There is another person who does not earn also and own also. Therefore another extreme is neither earning nor owning. One extreme, earning and owning. So one is karmi, who earns and owns; Therefore he cannot do go work; another is sanyasi neither earns nor owns; what charity a sanyāsi can give, when he himself is on charity of others? Karma yōgi is the most important person because he earns plenty and owns less; that means he has a big buffer which is available for pañca mahā yajñaḥ. Therefore, we are not against earning, but what we are against is earning and owning all. These are the people arthasañcayān. They earn wealth and they do not give to others. No dānam. Īhantē.

इदमद्य मया लब्धमिमं प्राप्स्ये मनोरथम् ।
इदमस्तीदमपि मे भविष्यति पुनर्धनम् ॥ १६.१३ ॥

idamadya mayā labdhamimam prāpsyē manōratham|
idamastīdamapi mē bhaviṣyati punardhanam || 16.13 ||

इदं लब्धम् idaṁ labdham “this has been obtained मया अद्य mayā adhya by me today प्राप्स्ये prāpsyē I shall attain इमं मनोरथम् idaṁ manōratham – this desired wealth (shortly) मे अस्ति me asti I have, इदं धनम् idaṁ dhanam this much wealth (now) भविष्यति bhaviṣyati there will be इदम् अपि पुनः idam api punaḥ this much more later”

13. “This has been obtained by me to-day. I shall attain this desired object (shortly). I have this much wealth (now). There will be this much more later”.

So generally these people are busy and their philosophy is: Time is money. I told you, one person's table I saw; this is the motto. Time is Money. Therefore do not waste time, utilise all the time to convert into money. This is the philosophy; therefore generally they do not have free time; and even if they have some free-time, what do they think; Is it Gīta or Hare Rāma, No. Their thinking is like this.

In three verses, Kṛṣṇa talks about the thought pattern of the materialistic person. And what is a thought pattern? Calculation of the money that he possesses; which bank, what things; and what are the interest rates; and the next year, how much it will increase. And just go on projecting and day-dreaming; he does not have anything else to think of other than arta and kāmah.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa says, idaṁ adhya mayā labdham. So they person this person is worth 20 million; just talking; മനോരാജ്യത്തിലെത്തിനാ ഒരു അർദ്ധരാജ്യം (in manōrajyam why a half rājyam) Always calculate the worth of a person; not in terms of dharma or mōkṣah or jñānam, you calculate the worth of a person in terms of his property; and this person also is constantly calculating what? The self-worth.

Kṛṣṇa says idaṁ, means this much wealth mayā labdham, has been earned by me, adhya today or now; whereas a karma-yōgi has to ask, he takes his worth in terms of how much he has given. In fact, Bhagavān also measures the worth of a person not in terms of taking but in terms of giving; and our value increases not in proportion to earning; but in proportion to sharing; but this materialistic person does not know. Therefore he says this much I have earned and next year how much I will get, calculation using the computer, same calculation again and again; imam manōratham prāpyasē; in future I will be able to fulfill these many desires of mine.

idaṁ dhanam asti, idaṁ dhanam bhaviṣyati. This much money I own now; this much money I will own in future;

In short the idea is: he also meditates; so meditation is very regularly followed; only difference is the object of meditation is slightly different; instead of Viṣṇu, he meditates upon Lakṣmi. He ought to meditate on Lakṣmi along with Viṣṇu, but he is doing on Lakṣmi alone. If he does that, even Lakṣmi won't accept; she is a great women, she says I will come only if you invite me with Narāyaṇa. Therefore money dhyanam.

असौ मया हतः शत्रुर्हनिष्ये चापरानपि ।
ईश्वरोऽहमहं भोगी सिद्धोऽहं बलवान् सुखी ॥ १६.१४ ॥

asau mayā hataḥ śatrurhaniṣyē cāparānapi |
īśvarō'hamahaṁ bhōgī siddhō'haṁ balavān sukhī || 16.14 ||

असौ शत्रुः asau śatruḥ “this rival, हतः मया hataḥ mayā has been destroyed by me हनिष्ये haniṣyē I shall destroy अपरान् अपि च aparān api ca the others also अहम् ईश्वरः aham īśvaraḥ I am the Lord, अहं भोगी ahaṁ bhōgī I am the enjoyer अहं सिद्धः ahaṁ siddhaḥ I am successful बलवान् सुखी balavān sukhī powerful and happy”.

14. This rival has been destroyed by me. I shall destroy the others also. I am the Lord; I am the enjoyer; I am successful, powerful, and happy”.

And once there is inordinate greed, naturally I will see all other people as my competitors. So greed means I see enemies everywhere; as obstructing my goals; and therefore śatrūs increase; And in business field, liquidation of the competition is part of the programme, and therefore different normal and abnormal methods are used to finish off the other people. So big-big companies swallow the small ones. And there is the cola-cola wars; the language is what? Not business, it is called 'wars'. Kṛṣṇa has seen all these earlier it is; asau śatruḥ mayā hataḥ; this rival company, my competitor has been finished; some time it is figurative destruction, sometimes it is literal destruction. They use goondas and even physically liquidate the people, because of inordinate greed; asau mayā hataḥ śatrurhaniṣyē cāparānapi; initially there may be some guilt; after sometime, the heart gets benumbed that there will be no regret or guilt also. Therefore aparānapi, the others also I shall destroy. One I have destroyed all the competitors, I have got the monopoly in that field, I will be number No.1; nobody can come in front of me. aham īśvaraḥ; a jñāni also says; jñāni is not an asura, aham īśvaraḥ, I am the Lord; the king, I am the No.1, ahaṁ bhōgī, I am the one who will enjoy all the wealth; and the siddha; I am the most successful person, but how he attained success is a big question.

Over how many dead bodies; he has attained success; he is glorified all those happens; siddhaḥ ahaṁ. Siddhaḥ means what; successful.

And balavān; I am the strongest person, even the law cannot do anything because police are in my hands, because I know what is their rate; once I know the rate, everybody can be fixed. And politicians no problem. So therefore I hear that all the politicians are in the hands of big big business groups. So therefore, aham balavān, all are in my hands.

And sukhī; and I am the happiest person in the world; thus these people dream their future. More in the next class.

Hari Om

203 Chapter 16, Verses 15-19

ॐ

From the 7th verse of the 16th chapter, Lord Kṛṣṇa is talking about āsūri saṁpath, which we have to know as an obstacle to spiritual growth; and therefore we should take all pains to avoid these trait. And āsūri saṁpath includes, rākṣasi saṁpath also; āsūri saṁpath means rāgaḥ pradhāna life; a life in which rāgaḥ or attachment is dominant; rājasic rāgaḥ is dominant and rākṣasi saṁpath is that in which dvēsaḥ-pradhāna behaviour, tāmasic behaviour is dominant.

In rāgaḥ pradhāna life, one is utterly selfish and dvēsaḥ pradhāna life, a person harms other people. Only difference is when I am selfish, I do not directly and immediately harm the people, but in the long run, a selfish person affects the society because he takes more and gives less to the society. And therefore this behaviour will create a disharmony in the society in due course, and it will hurt the society and also the very selfish person himself. But this disturbance is not immediately felt, it is a gradually poisoning of the society.

Thus a rāgaḥ pradhāna person hurts the society very gradually, whereas dvēsaḥ pradhāna person hurts the society immediately, directly. But both of them harm the harmony of the society and both of them harm themselves ultimately. And here Kṛṣṇa is describing both āsūri people as well as the rākṣasic people; both are included. And we generally call them materialistic people; or arta kāma pradhāna people who do not value dharma and mōkṣa.

And we should remember when we criticize the materialistic people or materialism, we are not against the materialism totally. Criticism of materialism must be carefully understood. We are not against materials, because we need them for our living; we require money for food, we require money for shelter. So we are not against money and materials; we do not want to hate money and materials; but we are criticising is over-emphasis of arta kāma to such an extent, that this person has no time for dharma and mōkṣa. And therefore if we are not careful from attachment to money; we may go to the other extreme of hatred of money. If attachment to money is an evil; hatred of money is also equally an evil.

And that is why in our culture money is seen as Lakṣmidēvi. Please give respect to money; even sanyāsis has to respect money, because money alone fetches the food that he eats; money alone fetches the dress that he is wearing; and if he has an āśram, money alone runs the āśram not Gīta and upaniṣads.

Therefore if attachment is an evil; hatred is an equal evil. A balanced attitude towards money is what we are recommending and what is balanced attitude? Use the money for spiritual growth; earn the wealth and use it for spiritual growth of yourselves as well as the other people. And these materialistic people do not have this balanced vision and therefore they are obsessed with materialistic thing, they do not understand that behind the matter, there is spirit. Behind the body, there is ātma, respect the body, respect the ātma also. This is the balanced approach which the āsūric people are missing.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa is describing their thought pattern; what preoccupies their mind most of the time; they are obsessed with what type of thinking most of the time. Our scriptures point out start the day with thought of the Lord as I said; think of Lakṣmi, but have some time to think of Nārayaṇa also. How can you be so selective concentrating on Lakṣmi only and miss Nārayaṇa? These people do not have the balance.

And therefore what happens we were seeing from verse No.13, the pattern of their thinking all the time they are calculative, what all things they have acquired in life, and what all things they plan to acquire and how they want to implement those desires; And not only they are interested in things, they are interested in wealth also, only for their well-being and anybody who obstructs this they consider as a competitor; a rival and they do not have any scruples at all. They want to finish off all those obstacles without any compunction.

So Kṛṣṇa said; "asau mayā hataḥ śatru" is within quotation, 13th verse, this is the thought pattern of materialistic people, the 14th verse is also within quotation; asau śatru mayā hataḥ; this rival has been finished; liquidated; exterminated; and 'hāniṣyē ca aparān api' and all others also I will finish off and once I have destroyed all of them, I am unrivalled master, I have the monopoly in everything.

Just as big companies swallow the small companies. They say in globalisation, at the end, there will be only a few international giant companies and they can adjust the market itself in such a way; because they can afford that all this small people will be swallowed and they will be so powerful that they can even change the government. These are the materialistic people; therefore Īśvaraḥ, I am the most powerful person; I alone enjoy, power and money; ahaṁ siddhaḥ; the most successful person and ahaṁ balavān; the strongest and ahaṁ sukhī, given to all types of enjoyment. Up to this we saw.

आढ्योऽभिजनवानस्मि कोऽन्योऽस्ति सदृशो मया ।
यक्ष्ये दास्यामि मोदिष्ये इत्यज्ञानविमोहिताः ॥ १६.१५ ॥

āḍhyō'bhijanavānasmi kō'nyōsti sadṛśō mayā |
yakṣyē dāsyāmi mōdiṣya ityajñānavimōhitāḥ || 16.15 ||

15. “I am rich and of noble birth. Who else is there equal to me? I shall perform Yajñās; I shall give charity; (and) I shall rejoice” -- thus (these people) are completely deluded by ignorance.

The quotation continues. These are the thoughts of the materialistic people. Ahaṁ āḍhyaḥ asmi; I am the richest person and my name occurs in Forbes magazine list. In that magazine my name comes; as one of the richest 20 people in the world; how many heads have rolled, Bhagavān only knows to come to this status; āḍhyaḥ asmi, I am the richest person.

Abhijanavān asmi; and I belong a noble family, a noble birth; so therefore he talks about his great grandfather; great great grandfather. He will say one is ganapādi, another is jaṭa vallabha; another is sōmayāji, he will name all those people, and YOU ask him what do you know? gāyathri doubtful; so he only talks about the paraṁpara strongly, abhivādaye is forgotten, he only talks about the great paraṁpara, he has not done anything to preserve this wonderful culture, What a culture which has started from millennia before, all of them have been surrendered at the altar of money-hunt.

prāptaḥ kāṇavarāṭakō:'pi na mayā trṣṇē sakāmā bhava || 3||

(The earth I have dug into in quest of precious minerals; and metals from rocks have I smelted; the ocean have I crossed; and the favour of kings have I diligently sought; nights have I spent on burning grounds with my mind occupied with mantras and worship (as this forms a part of the mysterious rites to be gone through by those who invoke supernatural agencies for obtaining riches); and not even a broken cowrie have I obtained; be satisfied, therefore, oh Desire!)

Bhṛthari in his Vairāgya ṣaṭakam looks back: Oh Lord in search money what all I did; I dug all part of earth, hoping to get some wealth from ground; utkhātaṃ nidhiśaṅkayā kṣititalaṃ dhmatā girerdhātavo; I went in search of all types of ores, to extract the metals, gold, silver, etc. I went in search of. nistīrṇaḥ saritaṃ poatinṇpatayo yannena saṃtōṣitāḥ; I went all round the globe in search of the wealth and for this travel, I have to please so many bureaucrats and politicians and counsels and all types of people; I did not propitiate the devathas and gods; I propitiated all these arrogant human beings. pradakṣina, namaskarā, and dakṣiṇā, take them to the hotels and gave them all kinds of treats. What all should not have eaten, I eat, all for the purpose of business promotion; mantrārādhanaatparena manasā nītāḥ śmaśānē niśāḥ, I went to even the black money people to destroy, eat all kinds of things which are banned in the religion, what all should not be drunk, eaten, everything I did contrarily in concentrated form. At least am I happy now; at the fag end of my life; I have not improved anything at all; only losing the culture and tradition; is only the thing that happens. You read Bhṛthari, you will feel like running away; so powerful is his writing.

So he says; abhijanavān asmi, I belong to wonderful family but I did not make use of the advantage that I had; like the fifth set; already I had the 2 sets, and now advantage; I have to hit the last shot properly, win the set and game and match and the cup. That is manuṣya janma upon this wonderful land; I squandered the advantage and rival won and I lost the match and cup, what is the cup? Mōkṣa cup. I lost; Bhṛthari says; abhijanavān asmi, he claims but does not make use of the advantage.

kaḥ anyaḥ asti sadṛśaḥ mayā; he asks everyone who is there in the world equal to me; indicating the height of arrogance; in our tradition, everyone was embodiment of humility and here we find the embodiment of arrogance; he asks who is equal to me; and yakṣyē; even though he does not believe in God or religion; he does not believe in the scriptural study or pūja, but still he wants to conduct certain rituals, not for inner growth; but for the publicity. And therefore he says; I will do big big rituals and make sure that it is captured in the photos and videos so that my name will spread. Even pūja is done only to pump his arrogance. yakṣyē; means yāgaṃ kariṣyē; I shall do big pūjas, just to show off.

dāsyāmi. and I will give charity but I will make sure that my name appears in the appropriate newspaper in the appropriate magazine; If nothing else, at least on the tubelight; you might have seen in the tubelight in temples. Why cant' we give some clean light; there also I want to make sure that my name prominently appears; Therefore dāsyāmi for publicity. Mōdiṣyē. When person after person comes and glorifies, because the other institutions will glorify me, because they need my money, therefore there will be programme, felicitation programme, and they will glorify and all adding to the ego which is the cause of spiritual destruction. More bloated the ego is, less the chances of spiritual growth. Iti. Up to this is the quotation.

And Kṛṣṇa says, vimōhitāḥ, thus all these people are utterly deluded and confused. They do know, they are digging their spiritual grave, they do not know எது நல்லது; எது கெட்டது என்று தெரியாமல் கஷ்டபெடறா; what is good and what is bad; and they are suffering. In fact Lord is angry with those people and only feels pity for them. And Lord has provided methods of avoiding these traps. We have got mahātmas to guide us; we have got the scriptures to guide us; from these traps; but the problem is the only guiding factor he does not make use of his arrogance does not allow him to go to a Mahātma; his arrogance to allow him to read a few Geeta verses; And therefore Bhagavān says, medicine is there; but he does not make use of. And Bhagavān cannot come and force the medicine down his throat. Bhagavān has given something called grey matter.

Therefore Kṛṣṇa says: ajñānavimōhitāḥ, deluded by utter ignorance. And as I have often said, ignorance itself is not a sin; because all of us are born with ignorance. In fact, that is our capital; that is the only wealth we all uniformly brought. Therefore ignorance is itself is not sin; but perpetuation of ignorance is the greatest sin; because Bhagavān has provided methods for the removal of ignorance, he has provided wonderful pramāṇams, but these people do not expose themselves.

Mundakōpaniṣad strongly criticises these people. And therefore ajñānavimōhitāḥ; deluded by ignorance.

Verse 16.16

अनेकचित्तविभ्रान्ताः मोहजालसमावृताः ।
प्रसक्ताः कामभोगेषु पतन्ति नरकेऽशुचौ ॥ १६.१६ ॥

anēkacittavibhrāntā mōhajālasamāvṛtāḥ |
prasaktāḥ kāmabhōgēṣu patanti narakē'sucau || 16.16 ||

अनेकचित्तविभ्रान्ताः anēkacittavibhrāntā thoroughly confused by (such) innumerable fancies, मोहजालसमावृताः mōhajālasamāvṛtāḥ encircled by the net of delusion, प्रसक्ताः prasaktāḥ and deeply engaged, कामभोगेषु kāmabhōgēṣu in the enjoyment of sense objects पतन्ति patanti they fall, अशुचौ नरके aśucau narakē into a foul hell.

16. Thoroughly confused by such innumerable fancies, encircled by the net of delusion, and deeply engaged in the enjoyment of sense objects, they fall into a foul hell.

Anēkacittavibhrāntā. Lost in, carried away by the abovementioned thought patterns; cittam means thinking pattern, anēka means varieties, and what are those patterns? Given in the previous three slōkās, 13, 14, and 15, in these thought patterns, they are immersed; our śāstra says சரண கமலாலயத்தில் அரை நிமிஷமேனும். Caraṇa kamalālayattil arai niṁṣamēnum; at least half a second in your lotus feet. Can you think of the Lord for half a minute; but this person does not have even half a minute.

So vibhrāntā, so lost in, mōhajālasamāvṛtāḥ, they are encircled by, a network of mōha or delusion, or misconception, the misconception being that money and possessions will give the ultimate goal, will give the ultimate security, will give everything that I want; as we have a set of beautiful saying.

They say money can buy a house, but it cannot buy a home; money can buy bed, but money cannot buy sleep; money can buy people; but money cannot buy love. In fact money can buy many things; but all important things in life, like peace, like knowledge, like love, all these things money cannot buy; But that these people do not understand that is what is called mōha; so mōhajālasamāvṛtāḥ

And prasaktāḥ kāmabhōgēṣu, a materialistic society will use all its resources only to improve methods of entertainment. That is the indication of a materialist society; whether there is material resources or scientific advancement, all of them will be used to improve what, sense pleasures improvement; and they think that is the growth of the society; and that is why, you can find in India, any scientific improvement comes, first it will be used in religious field; TV, Rāmayaṇa and Mahābhāratha serials. All swamis will start appearing in TVs. that is our culture; any scientific advancement, we imagine, we think of using for spiritual purpose. That is called a healthy society; a materialistic society will think of improving sense pleasures; and these materialistic people prasaktāḥ; lost in entertainment; kāmabhōgēṣu; in the enjoyment of sense pleasures; kāma means sense objects, bhōga means enjoyment, kāma bhōga means the enjoyment of sense objects, prasaktāḥ, they are lost in.

And even medical advancement, they want to use the body younger and younger so that again that the body can be used for what; not for spiritual sādhana ; how I can be young at the 90th year? Again for what? I can use my sense organs for sensory pleasures; Even medical advancement is directed towards that; that is the typical materialistic society. Therefore, prasaktāḥ kāmabhōgēṣu, what will happen to them?

Kṛṣṇa gets so wild; he says; narakē patanti; animals are the only living beings which have got only two puruṣārtaḥ, artha and kāma, After-all animals work for their security; animals work for their enjoyment; animals do not know what is dharma; animals do not know what is mōkṣa; animals do not require vēda pūrva; animals do not require vēda antha. Catch a buffalo and say: Sathyam Vadha, Dharmam cara; svadyaya ma pramādaḥ... all these to the buffalo; It will just say ēnnge. It does not have four pursuits; it has only two; artha kāma; if I am going to dedicate my life at the altar of artha kāma; I am telling the Lord, that am as good of the animal and therefore Bhagavān notes in the diary, that I have committed a mistake of giving human birth to this jīva, therefore I will correct the mistake, how? Make him an animal, so that no guilt or regret or anything; no vēda, dharma śāstra, no prayers, no satyam vadha, dharma cara, and one can safely wallow, This inferior life is called narakam. Aśucau narakē. Spiritually inferior life called naraka, which are spiritually backward. He falls.

आत्मसम्भाविताः स्तब्धाः धनमानमदान्विताः ।
यजन्ते नामयज्ञैस्ते दम्भेनाविधिपूर्वकम् ॥ १६.१७ ॥

ātmasambhāvitāḥ stabdhā dhanamānamadānvitāḥ |
yajantē nāmayajñāistē dambhēnāvidhipūrvakam || 16.17 ||

आत्मसम्भाविताः ātmasambhāvitāḥ honoured by themselves, स्तब्धाः stabdhāḥ arrogant धनमानमदान्विताः dhanamānamadānvitāḥ and full of vanity and haughtiness due to wealth, ते दम्भेन् यजन्ते tē dambhēnā yajantē they pretentiously worship, नामयज्ञैः nāmayajñaiḥ through normal yajñās अविधिपूर्वकम् avidhipūrvakam disregarding the scriptural rules.

17. Honoured by themselves, arrogant, and full of vanity and haughtiness due to wealth, they pretentiously worship through nominal yajñās, disregarding the scriptural rules.

When our dharma śāstrās talk about a dharmic way of life, it is a way of life in which I maintain harmony at all levels. It starts with internal harmony; harmony between my thought, word and deed, is internal harmony. Even my eating, sleeping, etc. should have an harmony, if the remember 6th chapter,

युक्ताहारविहारस्य युक्तचेष्टस्य कर्मसु ।
युक्तस्वप्नावबोधस्य योगे भवति दुःखहा ॥ ६.१७ ॥

yuktāhāravihārasya yuktacēṣṭasya karmasu |
yuktasvapnāvabōdhasya yōgō bhavati duḥkhahā || 6.17 ||

Even among the various organs of the body, there should be harmony. It starts with internal harmony; then I lead a lifestyle in which there is harmony in the family; among the various members. There is no stress; strain or tension, I am not uncomfortable I should feel at home. That is why it is called a home; inter-action should be smooth, well-oiled, there should not be any friction, there is a window which is not well-oiled, it makes a sound each time it is opened, there is a friction. Then you put oil.

Similarly, when in human interaction, there is no harmony, what happens? There will be unwanted sounds, i.e. fighting and the only interaction, is fighting. And similarly I should have harmony in the society; and therefore social customs, social manners, politeness, etiquets; all of them are also part of dharma. Dharma is not mere religious activity but even social interaction must be in keeping with harmony. And therefore every refined civilised society has its own manners and customs, all indicating what? My refined conduct and behaviour. Expressed in my body language; we have got rules, when they talk about etiquettes and manners, nowadays big thing they talk about is body language. The way you stand; the way you sit; the way you talk, the way you eat; because the body language communicates something and therefore in our culture, they say; we all have as children, we have experienced, when some mahātma or somebody comes, our parents will say sit properly, how you hold your hands, your head, your legs; therefore these are all body language, which should convey, respect, love, humility; and not only body language should convey my refinement; even my words should convey my refinement. That in a group, I do not dominate by talking all the time. You will find that in any group, there would be one, who would never allow others to speak; and if I start something interrupting talking so aloud that you can hear a km away; all those things also disturbs the harmony of the set-up. Open contradiction, telling a person is wrong in front of all others; all these things also come under behaviour.

And Lord Kṛṣṇa says when a materialistic person grows in money and power, chances are he becomes more and more puffed up with power and pride. He becomes more and more gross. He becomes more and more desensitized and he does not bother about his behaviour; his conduct, his manners, his language. And the first causality is humility; and the unfortunate thing is when I become a man of power and wealth, there will be always a coterie of sycophants around. They want to take advantage of my power and money; and therefore they will come and they will glorify me; you are great, you are wonderful; they will do arcana.

यस्यस्ति वित्तम् स नर कुलीनः
स पण्डिताः श्रुतवान्, विधिज्जाः ।
तये च वक्ता स दर्शनीयः, सर्वे गुणा कान्चनम् अश्रयन्ति ॥ yasyasti vittam sa nara kulīnaḥ sa paṇḍitāḥ, śrutavān, vidhijnāḥ । tayē ca vaktā sa darśanīyaḥ, sarvē guṇā kāncanam aśrayanti ॥

It is a very oft quoted ślōkā. Once you have got money and power, everybody would come and say, that you are beautiful, you are cultured; and your language is wonderful, you are educated, they will do namaskāra; already arrogant, these people already pumped and their ego gets bloated and bloated. First humility goes and then devotion to God disappears. Arrogance and Īśvaraḥ bhakthi cannot go together. You study the life of all our rakṣasās, whether it is Rāvaṇa or Kāmsa, or Hiraṇyakasipu, or Hiraṇyākṣa, as money and power comes, arrogance comes, humility goes, next devotion goes.

Once humility and devotion goes, the mahātmas will begin to avoid me; because where there is ego, the great people do not go because there ego is there, God is absent; and therefore mahātmas avoid. Therefore my few chances of correcting myself is also gone; if I have at least some great people around; they will tell, satsaṅgatve nissaṅgatvam.

Today it is coming out as Bhṛṭhari:

पापान् निवरयति योजयते हिताय
गुह्यं निगुहति गुणान् प्रकटीकरोति ।
अपत्यातम् न च जहाति ददाति काले सन्मित्र लक्षणं इदम् प्रवदन्ति सन्तः ॥ pāpān nivarayati yōjayatē hitāya guhyaṁ niguhati guṇān prakāṭhīkaroti । apatgatam na ca jahāti dadāti kālē sanmitra lakṣaṇaṁ idam pravadanti santaḥ ॥

A few cultured and refined people you associate with; they will guide me; but in the case of this person, Mahātmas go away gradually; and sycophants surround me, and they will further they will see that all my culture, manner, politeness, all of them goes away. As we have read in purāṇa, Kāmsa refused to even to get up, when Lord Kṛṣṇa came. So these are all the problems.

Therefore, Kṛṣṇa says, ahamkāram, every namaskāra I receive from others, can blot my ahamkāra. That is why that there are people do not take namaskāra from others; there are some swamis who do not allow; or if at all they do, they say that you do not receive the namaskāra, quietly hand over to your guru; let it handle it; and what will your guru do? he will give his guru; and ultimately it will go to God, no problem, because God deserves all the namaskāra.

Therefore, glorification, namaskāras etc, are deadly and these people, ahamkāra m, they are egoistic; balam, they are power hungry, lot of power they have, darpam, arrogance, kāmam, you know desire, materialistic desires; krōdham, full of anger, because they can get away with any form of behaviour; because money and power compensates. Therefore nobody will criticize me, nobody will correct me; ātmasambhavithaḥ, they will be dominating any group.

First thing is they would not allow others to talk and if they talk about something noble, it is fine; but all their talks are dominated by self-glorification. Ātmasambhavithaḥ means, they glorify themselves either directly or indirectly. Self-publicity.

Stabdhāḥ, their body will never bend in namaskāra to others; stiff bodies and stiff necked; like the person who has got the stiff collar which is used for spondylosis; these people have got a different inner spondylosis called arrogance; it is impossible for them to do namaskāra to anyone including God. Stabdhāḥ.

Dhanamānamadānvitāḥ; full of madam means arrogance; mānam, pride, the difference madā, māna and madā is mānam is at the thought level; I consider I am the greatest; whereas the madam is verbal and action level; all because of danam. பண சேறுக்கு; paṇa cherukku; because of wealth, they have these weaknesses; yajantē nāmayajñāistē; they do lot of pūja alright, but the pūja should give them more humility; but if pūja is not approached properly, instead of giving humility, that pūja itself will add to arrogance; he will say that I have done this, I have done that.

Nāmayajñaihi, means pūjas for names sake; there is no heart in the pūja. Dambhēna, with pomp and show, in any ritual the most important part is the vaidika part, the mantra part and you will find that in the case of these people, they will miss that. So the priest is given least importance, mantras are given least importance, all the social aspect, crucially when they are going to tie the tali, the video fellow will come and say stop; in the most auspicious moment it is stopped, and when these days when the marriages are already in danger; so somehow we see the muhurtham and all and somehow you want to stop at the crucial moment, because somebody is obstructing. So all the other aspects are given importance, what is important, they ignore.

That is why it is called dambhēna yajantē; pomp and show, and avidhipūrvakam; without following any rules and regulations; so there is a mantra in which they have to see the Dhṛuva nakṣatram and Arundathi nakṣatram; so that their bond will be strong; Dhṛuva means strong and faithful, and Arundathi nakṣatra is just to remind Vasistha-Arundathi, how they are the first made-for-each other couple; and this Dhṛuva-Arundathi they see at 12 noon; how is this?

Avidhi pūrvakam; and this person does not have time to chant the mantra, because the other visitors are coming and shaking hands and giving gifts; and therefore, the priest chants all the mantras, holding the hand of the bride-groom and all the mantras are what; Oh Girl you should be nice to me; who should chant; everything is going false; So therefore the girl will be nice to the priest and horrible to the husband. So avidhipūrvakam; violating all the rules and regulations.

अहङ्कारं बलं दर्पं कामं क्रोधं च संश्रिताः ।
मामात्मपरदेहेषु प्रद्विषन्तोऽभ्यसूयकाः ॥ १६.१८ ॥

ahaṅkāraṁ balaṁ darpaṁ kāmaṁ krōdhaṁ ca saṁśritāḥ |
māmātmaparadēḥeṣu pradviṣantaḥ | 16.18 |

संश्रिताः saṁśritāḥ given to अहङ्कारम् ahaṅkāraṁ egoism बलम् balaṁ power दर्पम् darpaṁ arrogance कामम् kāmaṁ desire च क्रोधम् ca krōdhaṁ and anger, अभ्यसूयकाः abhyasūyakāḥ these slanderers प्रद्विषन्तः माम् pradviṣantaḥ mām hate Me आत्मपरदेहेषु ātmaparadēḥeṣu (who am) in the body of themselves and others.

18. Given to egoism, power, arrogance, desire and anger, these slanderers hate Me (who is) in the body of themselves and others.

So all the refinement in his behaviour is the causality; all the social etiquettes, humility, politeness in manners everything goes away, because nobody to correct; and he can get away with all those things. Therefore what all things happen? Ahamkāraṁ, full of bloated ego, balaṁ, means power; born out of status; then darpaṁ, means arrogance; and kāmaṁ, desire, krōdhaḥ, anger, saṁśritāḥ, all of these will begin to dominate his life. And gradually this will lead to a nāsthika svabhāva also; because it is un conducive to devotion and therefore devotion will gradually get eroded.

That is why Hiraṇyakaśipu, Hiraṇyākṣya; etc. said do not say Om Namō Nārayanāya; you cant Hiraṇyaya namaḥ. So mām pradviṣantaḥ; they begin to hate me; and where am I, ātmaparadēḥeṣu; who am the very life in every one including himself; ātma dēhē, para dēhē ca; I am there occupying his own body and blessing him with life; and I am in every beings' body and that Lord pradviṣantaḥ; this person begins to hate; and not only he begins to hate the Lord, he begins to hate the scriptures also; he becomes highly critical of the scriptures, which are supposed to be the gifts from the Lord himself.

So abhyasūyakāḥ means criticizers, slanderers, degraders, is called abhyasūyakāḥ.

Verse 16.19

तानहं द्विषतः क्रूरान् संसारेषु नराधमान् ।
क्षिपाम्यजस्रमशुभान् आसुरीष्वेव योनिषु ॥ १६.१९ ॥

tānaḥm̐ dviṣataḥ krūrān saṁsārēṣu narādhamān |
kṣipāmyajasramaśubhān āsuriṣvēva yōniṣu || 16.19 ||

अहं क्षिपामि ahaṁ kṣipāmi I throw तान् द्विषतः tān dviṣataḥ those haters (of Me), अशुभान् aśubhān (who are) impure (not pious), नराधमान् narādhamān (and) the lowliest among human beings, अजस्रम् ajasram perpetually आसुरिषु āsuriṣu into asura wombs एव योनिषु संसारेषु ēva yōniṣu saṁsārēṣu which leads to further saṁsāra.

19. I throw those haters (of Me, who are) not pious, cruel, (and) the lowliest among human beings, perpetually into āsura wombs which lead to further saṁsāra.

So thus religious life disappears from them; and you can see at home also, traditional homes you can feel the presence of the Lord, whether it is the pictures are hanging; or the pūja room, all those things you can feel, but you will find nowadays that the pictures are secular pictures; they do not want even to show their religion, So therefore I do not want to go to the details; so religion goes away, religious life goes away; religious practices goes away; and of course spirituality also disappears.

Therefore Kṛṣṇa says; viṣathāḥ; they dislike all these things; we can see in India also, in the modern society that is coming; as I said the other day, they do not want even to put the tilakam, because that is again declaring their religion. that I am a devotee; I am a Hindu; why I feel bad to declare that I am a vaidhika; I heard that the Sikh religious people, (not sick!) they are all over world, some of them are also in the army of other countries and they have fought with the Government and said that we will keep our turban, our hair and we will keep our kirpan and they fought and won the case; they feel so proud to declare that I belong to Sikhism; All people proud; the only people who do not feel pride, we the miserable Hindus. We do not want to declare to anyone, and even the names are chosen in such a way, and you do not know what they are? Original name is meenākṣi, kāmākṣi,..they keep pinky, chinky, etc. but they do not want to reveal their identity. Materialism is overwhelming. Only the Lord should save you. Viṣathāḥ; they are haters of God, temple, etc.

And they are krūrān; and they are very very rude in their behaviour, lacking politeness, culture, refinement; and narādhaman; they are the meanest among the human beings; and aśūbhān. So they are all representative of aśūbha; aśūbha means what deterioration in spirituality; amaṅgalam, means dharma and mōkṣa deterioration, they are representatives of amaṅgala.

And Kṛṣṇa says what can I do? I have to throw them into naraka;

परित्राणाय साधूनां विनाशाय च दुष्कृताम् |
धर्मसंस्थापनार्थाय सम्भवामि युगे युगे || ४- ८ ||

paritrāṇāya sādḥūnām vināśāya ca duṣkṛtām |
dharmasamsthāpanārthāya sambhavāmi yugē yugē || 4.8 ||

First I try through scriptures and mahātmas; hoping that the scriptures and mahātmas will change the society; and when the society is so corrupted, that even the mahātmas and scriptures cannot change, I will take avathāra and I will annihilate them.

Hari Om

ॐ

In these verses of the 16th chapter, beginning from the 7th verse onwards, Lord Kṛṣṇa is dealing with āsūri sampath, which includes rākṣasi sampath also. Āsūri sampath means that character or lifestyle in which tamō-guṇa is dominant. And Rākṣasi sampath is that character and lifestyle in which rajō-guṇa is dominant. And when tamō-guṇa is dominant, a person will become dvēsaḥ pradhāna; overpowered by hatred and anger towards others; and therefore such a person will harm the society and it will spiritually bring him down.

And therefore tamasic lifestyle is that which will bring a person down spiritually. Whereas rajasic lifestyle is that in which a person is rāgaḥ pradhāna, more selfish, he does not directly harm the society and therefore, there is no spiritual downfall, but because of his selfish and materialist desires, there is no scope for spiritual progress. And therefore a rājasic person does not spiritually fall down; but he has no scope for spiritual growth, which means there is spiritual stagnation. And spiritual stagnation in human life is a very big loss because human birth is the most precious birth and thereto we have got a very very short productive life.

वैरग्य शतकम् of Bhṛthari

The life of man (as ordained) is limited to one hundred years; half of its is spent in night; and out of the other half one half again is passed in childhood and old age, and the rest which has its illness, bereavements, and troubles is spent in serving (others). What happiness can there be for such mortals in a life (again) which is even more uncertain than the ripples (on the surface) of water?

Out of the hundred possible years, 50 years gone in the night; of the rest 50 years, 25 years gone in childhood state which we do not know what is good and bad, and another part gone in old age, we may know what is good but we cannot implement what we want to. So 50 gone, half of 12-1/2 years gone, and we have got another 12-1/2 years, most of the time, cold, cough, stomach upset, of course sevadibhir niyathe, varieties of service. Nowadays we have to add; queue adibir niyathe; standing in queue for various things. Bhṛthari says that our productive precious part of life is very short; and if we are in spiritual stagnation, this is a very very huge waste.

So rājasic people will waste their life, tamasic people will destroy their life; And therefore Kṛṣṇa strongly criticises those people and He said in the 19th verse, which we completed in the last class, Kṛṣṇa said that since these people did not make use of this wonderful human life properly, I decide to give them an inferior śarīram in the next janma. குரங்கு கையில் பூ மாலை குடுத்த மாதிரி; Kuraṅgu kayyil, pūmalai kuduthamathiri; I do not know whether it is prevalent here. If you give a beautiful well arranged garment, flower garment to a monkey, what will it do? It does not know how to utilise it properly, therefore it will only tear of, or eat it. Similarly these people like monkeys, they have abused this wonderful human body, and therefore next birth, I will give them āsūri yōni. āsūri yōniḥ means a body in which dharma puruṣārtaḥ and mōkṣa puruṣārtaḥ are not possible. It may be a inferior human birth or it may be an animal birth; or it may be a plant birth or it may be a birth in the lower lōkas, atala, vitala, suthala, rasatala, mahatala, tala tala, patala. So, therefore Arjuna do not take this life for granted. Up to this we saw:

आसुरीं योनिमापन्ना मुढा जन्मनि जन्मनि ।
मामप्राप्यैव कौन्तेय ततो यान्त्यधमां गतिम् ॥ १६.२०॥

Āsurīm yōnimāpannā mūḍhā janmani janmani |
māmāprāpyaiva kauntēya tatō yāntyadhamām gatim || 16.20 ||

आपन्नः āpannaḥ entering, आसुरी. योनिम् āsurī. Yōnim the āsuri womb जन्मनि जन्मनि
janmani janmani birth after birth मूढाः mūḍhāḥ the indiscriminate people, stupid people अप्राप्य aprāpya do not reach, माम् एव mām ēva Me at all यान्ति yānti they fall into ततः अधमां गतिम् tataḥ adhamām gatim still lower condition, कौन्तेय kauntēya Oh Arjuna !

20. Entering the āsura wombs birth after birth, these stupid, indiscriminate people do not reach Me at all. They fall into still lower condition, Oh Arjuna!

And Kṛṣṇa feels pity for these people; these materialistic āsūric people; once they get into the downward slide, they get into a vicious cycle and getting out of that becomes extremely difficult; because when I do not use my freewill properly, when I abuse my freewill and take to a wrong action, two things happen.

First thing is the wrong action itself will produce a pāpam. That is one negative point; and another worse thing is every action that I do, creates a vāsana, an inclination in my mind, because the mind has the capacity to form addiction in whatever it does; the mind has the capacity to form a habit of whatever we do. Anything you do for a few days, you form a habit. As I often say, if you sit in a particular place in the class for a few days, later you begin to say that it is 'my place' and ask others to get up; you get addicted to that particular place, that particular pillar, then only you will understand Gīta.

Thus the mind has the capacity to develop śubha vāsana also; it has the capacity to develop a śubha vāsana also. You eat a particular type of food, you form a habit; you drink a particular type of drink, you form a habit; you come to Gīta classes regularly, you form a wonderful habit. I have to tell that wonderful, or else, you will not come, I have to make sure that you come.

So thus we have got the capacity to develop śubha vāsana and aśubha vāsana; and once I form a vāsana; these vāsanās will begin to govern my life more than my will. And especially, as I grow, vāsanās take over, and If I am going to develop aśubha vāsanās they are going to become so powerful that they conquer my freewill. My intelligence; my power of discrimination. All of them are overpowered by these vāsanās; that even if I want to change I will not be able to. Do not we say that? I want to do that Swamiji. New year decisions are all there in the diary; but they are only in the diary. Why we are not able to do what what we want to do; even we have a willpower given by the Lord. If we are not able to do, the responsibility is ours, we ourselves have developed certain vāsanās, which become a Frankenstein; our Frankenstein.

And Kṛṣṇa says that āsūric people have developed asura vāsanas and because of the karma, vāsanas develop, because of the vāsanas, I repeat the same karma. Like any addiction; first cigarette is smoked because of the will; and then a vāsana smoking vāsana comes; not vāsana is smoking. Vāsana for smoking and the second time there is a vāsana which is pulling more; freewill's contribution is lesser and if he has smoked a few hundreds of cigarette in few months or few years, with regard to cigarette, his will power is zero. Simply he will not be able to get out of it even though I tell him he is all powerful Brahman; in front of cigarette he is brahman only and not Brahman; he is wonderful in all other places, in this place he will not be able to do anything; it may be drug, it may be liquor, it may be smoke, cigarette, in fact, even our activities are capable of forming addiction; and this can be favorably used, the addiction forming capacity can be favorably used by us; how, by developing śubha vāsana.

पौरुषेन प्रयत्नेन योजनिय शुभे भाति ॥

[śubhāśubhābyām mārgābhyām vahanti vāsana sarit
pauruṣēna prayatnēna yōjaniya śubhē bhāti ||](#)

Develop addictions, but let it be noble addictions; Kṛṣṇa says this āsūric people have developed what; āsūric addictions. Therefore he says; āsurīm yōnimāpannā; these āsūric people not only they form additions which enslave them in this janma, the vāsanas are carried forward in the next janma also. That is why all human-beings remaining the same, some human-beings are naturally dragged towards noble thing. How do you account for that? spiritual inclination in young life is because of what? Śubha vāsana, developed in purva janma. We saw this before in a particular chapter, I do not know whether you remember, tatra taṃ buddhisamyōgaṃ labhatē paurvadēhikam. Not only we are bringing puṇyams and pāpams, we are bringing our vāsanas also. Brihadaraṇya upaniṣad says: Tam vidya karmani samanvāra bhēdē, purva prajñā cha. Purva prajñā means vāsana. and therefore these unfortunate āsūric people, āsurīm yōnimāpannā, born in inferior wombs, yoni means womb, here it represents body; for having taken to inferior śarīrams, Mūdhāḥ, they continue to be enslaved by their own thinking; mūdhāḥ, they are deluded and not in one janma, Janmani janmani, because karma is responsible for vāsana, vāsana is responsible for further karma, further karma is responsible for further vāsana. Thus janma after janma they come more and more down.

And the more they come down spiritually, the more away I am. Body is away; scriptures are away; sādhus or mahatmas far far away. And therefore Kṛṣṇa says mām aprāpya ēva; they get farther and farther from me. The chances of coming to religion and spirituality become more and more rare. And thereafter adhamam gatim yānti, they go to adōgathi. Up to patala, they go; they do not further down because, that is the down most possible, but it is not possible, what a tragedy? And therefore, use your freewill in the beginning itself.

That is why they say, saying No to any addiction is easier in the beginning. The first No is the easiest. Second No is more difficult; and therefore they say do not go near, even friendship you keep only with those people, who are dhārmic, satsaṅgha sarvata kārya; Narada tells in Bhakthi sūtra; satsaṅgha sarvadā kāryaḥ, dusaṅgātā sarvadā tyājya.

Otherwise I feel like experimenting; they write in the books, a little bit of liquor is good. As such it is bad; they say that social drinking is Ok and all those things; Kṛṣṇa says remain far far away from such things. So therefore, prevention is better than cure.

त्रिविधं नरकस्येदं द्वारं नाशन मात्मनः ।

कामः क्रोधस्तथा लोभः तस्मादेतत्रयं त्यजेत् ॥ १६.२१ ॥

trividham narakasyēdam dvāram nāśanamātmanah |
kāmaḥ krōdhastathā lōbhastasmādētatrāyam tyajēt || 16.21 ||

कामः kāmaḥ desire, क्रोधः krōdhaḥ anger तथा लोभः tathā lōbhaḥ and greed इदं त्रिविधं द्वारम् idam trividham dvāram this three fold gateway नरकस्य narakasya to hell आत्मनः नाशनम् ātmanah nāśanam is the cause of one's own destruction तस्मात् tasmāt therefore त्यजेत् tyajēt one should give up एतत् त्रयम् ētat trayam these three.

21. Desire, anger and greed --- this threefold gateway to hell is the cause of one's own destruction. Therefore one should give up these three.

Now the entire āsūri sampath Kṛṣṇa is condensing into basic three problems. So if a human being learns to tackle these three fundamental problems intelligently, then he is safe.

So what are the three fundamental traits; āsūri traits? he says; trividham narakasyēdam dvāram. There are three roads, highways to what? naraka; there are three roads which take a human being to narakam. So dvāram; dvāram means gateway, or roads, they are three fold, and what is narakam? whether narakam as a place exists or not, we need not bother; he defines Narakam as anything that obstructs spiritual growth or anything that takes a person spiritually downwards is narakam. Therefore Kṛṣṇa defines narakam as ātmana nāśanam which destroy a person spiritually; which blocks the gateway to mōkṣa. Ātmana nāśanam, self destruction, spiritual destruction.

And what are those three basic things? Kāmaḥ, krōdhaḥ, and lōbhaḥ; kāmaḥ means desire, krōdhaḥ, you know, we have seen krōdhaḥ means anger, and lōbhaḥ has two meanings, one meaning is greed; another meaning is miserliness; not sharing one's resources with others; this non-sharing tendency, this miserliness is also called lōbhaḥ, or greed also is called lōbhaḥ; both are essentially the same; because in miserliness also, I want to possess everything; In greed also, I want to possess everything. That possessor hood is called lōbhaḥ; and these three are gateways to hell.

And therefore Arjuna what do you do? Tasmāt, therefore, ētat trayam tyajēth; learn to give up these three things; these three roads you avoid. What do you mean by that? Give up kāmaḥ, krōdhaḥ and lōbhaḥ, and when Kṛṣṇa says give up kāma, we should very very carefully understand; śāstra itself clearly says total giving up of kāma is neither possible nor necessary. We are not talking about total physical renunciation of kāma. That is neither possible nor necessary.

Then what do you mean by kāma tyāgaḥ? Kāma tyāgaḥ means refinement or transmutation or qualitative change of kāma; by qualitative change of kāma is mentioned here.

And what do you mean by qualitative change? Convert tāmasic kāmas into rājasic kāmas, convert rajasic kāmas into rajasic kāmas. Remember, to come to the class, you require what, you should have what desire; desire for what? Coming to class; desire for what; learning Gīta. Suppose I say, give up all desires; next lass, I will be Advaitin. Nobody will be there. Swamiji we gave up the desire to attend the class; what will happen to me?

We should understand convert tamasic kāma into rajasic kāma. What do you mean by tamasic kāma? Any desire which is illegal; which is immoral, which harms other people, or in short, which will take you spiritually downwards. They are all tāmasic kāmas. Destroying other people, cheating other people, all those things will come under tāmasic kāmas; give them up straightway.

What is rājasic kāma? Apply the same principle, there are so many dhārmic kāmas, legitimate desires, but they are all materialistic desires, which will help in the enjoyment of life; like desires for artha and kāma; I have desires for artha and kāma, artha and kāma means money and entertainment, and I may desire them in a dhārmic way, without cheating others; they all will come under rājasic desires; which means legitimate enjoyment of sense pleasures. But in these, in fulfilment of these desires, a person will thoroughly enjoy his life, but there is no scope for spiritual growth. We will be materialistically well off, he will enjoy all the worldly desires; he does not harm a single person, but the problem is what; he does not work for dharma and mōkṣa; Therefore rājasic kāma is a kāma which will not bring down spiritual, but there will be spiritual stagnation.

But it is better than tamasic kāma; want to enjoy, dance and music and all kinds of entertainments are there; and you legitimately enjoy, it is not immoral; it is not illegal; and you spend the whole life in that. Certainly, it is harmless; it is dhārmic only, but the problem is, if the person spends his entire life in dance, drama, music, etc. when will he study Gīta; when do you think of higher pursuits. Therefore, rājasic kāma is better than tāmasic kāma; Therefore first is convert tāmasic into rājasic.

Then what is the next change of kāma? From rajasic kāma to sātvic kāma; in which desire for arta kāma will gradually recede and in that place, I have got desire for dharma and mōkṣa. I have a desire for citta śuddhi; it is a desire but it will come under sātvic kāma; I want to guru prāp̥thi, it is a desire, but it is a satvic kāma; in fact, I want a healthy body to study the scriptures; that desire for health would come under what? Sātvic desire; śarīram may vicarṣaṇam; gihva mē madhumattma.

Oh Give me healthy body, whether other things are healthy or not, let me have a good ears, so that I will listen to the śāstrās; what purpose, for citta śuddhi, guru prāp̥thi, sṛavaṇa prāp̥thi, manana prāp̥thi, nidhidhyāsana prāp̥thi, they are all what desires; sātvic desires. So convert tāmasic kāmaḥ into rājasic kāmaḥ, convert rājasic kāmaḥ into sātvic kāma.

And remember all these three kāmās are bondages, because if it is not fulfilled, you will be upset; exactly at 5 o'clock a guest comes, in-laws, difficult to manage; You cannot say anything, your mind is in the class, you cannot come, you are upset, even sātvic kāma is, as we saw in the 14th chapter, a binding one. It is also a bondage only, through self-knowledge, the sātvic kāma is converted into bāditha kāmaḥ, non-binding desire. Sātvic kāma will continue but it will become a preference, a non-binding desire. Once your desires have become non-binding, it is as good as no desire; non-binding, dharmic desire, is as good as no desire.

All the ācāryas in our tradition had a desire to promote our religion. Without desire, Śankarācārya would not have written commentaries, on Gīta, prakaraṇa granthas, brahma sūtra, upaniṣads, sthōra granthās, etc. Without desires how can he do that? He established maths, because of desire. What desire? Vaidhic dharma should spread; but what is the type of desire; if those desires are fulfilled by the grace of the Lord, wonderful; if they are not fulfilled also, Īśvaraprasada. Such desire you can have any amount; when bhagavān has such desires. paritrāṇāya sād̥hūnām, Sānskrīt 4th case is desire, for the protection of sād̥hus. This is whose desire? Bhagavān's desire, vināśāya ca duṣkṛtām, again desire, for what? Duṣkṛtām vināśāya, dharma dharmasamsthāpanārthāya, again what desire? For dharma samsthāpanam, and for that what does Bhagavān do, sambhavāmi, what is that, desire. Desire to appear on the earth and Taittiriya upaniṣad says: So kāmayatha, bahuśyam prajayēyēthi.

Therefore giving up desire means what; convert tāmasic into rājasic, rājasic into sātvic, and sātvic into baditha; it is a technical word, bhad, third bha, not in Tamil everything is advaita. In Sānskrīt, third ब ba, and fourth ध dha, badhitam means non-binding, noble desires. Have any amount; and therefore tyajēth; and what about krōdha and lōbha. Once you handle kāma, the other two are handled; because krōdha and lōbha are only another version of kāma. How do you know?

Kṛṣṇa himself said in this third chapter,

श्रीभगवानुवाच |
काम एष क्रोध एष रजोगुणसमुद्भवः |
महाशनो महापाप्मा विद्ध्येनमिह वैरिणम् || ३- ३७ ||

[kāma ēṣa krōdha ēṣa rajōguṇasamudbhavaḥ |
mahāśanō mahāpāpmā viddhyēnamihā vairiṇam || 3.37 ||](#)

He enumerates kāma and krōdha, he says they are born out of rajōguṇa; and grammatically he uses singular number. When he has used kāma and krōdha, what should be the number? One plus one two and in Sānskrīt there is a dual number; rajōguṇasamudbhavaḥ, he says and uses a singular number; If kāma obstructed is krōdha; obstructed desire transforms into anger; and therefore if you learn to handle kāma, krōdha also will be changed from tāmasa anger to rājasa anger to sātvisa anger to badhitha anger. Similarly, lōbhaḥ; therefore Arjuna, refine these three.

एतैर्विमुक्तः कौन्तेय तमोद्वारैस्त्रिभिर्नरः ।
आचरत्यात्मनः श्रेयः ततो याति परां गतिम् ॥ १६.२२ ॥

[ētaivimuktaḥ kauntēya tamōdvāraistribhīrnaraḥ |
ācaratyātmanaḥ śrēyastatō yāti parāṁ gatim || 16.22 ||](#)

22. Oh Arjuna! Freed from these three gates of hell, a man pursues what is good for himself (and) thus attain the supreme goal.

So this conversion of kāma, krōdha and lōbha is conversion from āsuri sampath to daivi sampath. And a person of daivi sampath also has desire. What is the desire? My vivēka must be very strong; my vairagyam must be very strong; śamādi śadka sampathi, mumukṣtavam is in trouble, it should be adjust; I should enjoy amply; Thus he wants these qualifications in what you call in abundance, but that is a noble desire; therefore daivi sampath will come.

And how to do these things? Kṛṣṇa does not say, how to accomplish this conversion. He only says; you have to change from āsūri sampath to daivi sampath; he does not say how to do that; the religious way of life prescribed in our tradition is meant for that; pañca mahā yajñās prescribed and I do not expect you to ask me what are the pañca mahā yajñās. So therefore, a religious way of life, which is the vēdic-teaching; entire vēda purva bhāga only talks about that life style, which will bring about this conversion.

And therefore, ētairvimuktaḥ having been freed from the tyranny of kāma krōdha and lōbha; what are they? Tamōdvāraistribhir, which are the three gateways, which are the roads to naraka, you turn away from them very carefully.

And once you have turned, you can start the spiritual pursuit; ātmanaḥ srēyaḥ ācārati. You can concentrate more and more on citta śuddhi. So you begin to give importance to internal growth, rather than external growth; even though society values the external possession and status only, you are not carried away by the society; they may say, they may not respect me, if I do not have that status, I do not develop my inferiority complex also. Just because society does not respect me, because my values are different from the common values they are prevalent; I value inner growth, not external possession. Not that they are not required; but they are always subservient to the inner growth. And therefore karma-yōga becomes more dominant in his life; that is called ātmanaḥ srēyaḥ; srēyaḥ here means mōkṣa marga. srēyascha prēyascha manuṣya mētha. Previously he was in preyō mārگا; now the track has been changed. Now he is in the srēyō mārگاḥ; and tataḥ; once he has got into this spiritual guru, citta śuddhi is faster and his desire is for leaning the scriptures more and more. His desire is for getting a guru to guide.

And once this sincere desire is nourished more and more, Bhagavān tells that it is my responsibility to provide him a proper guru. Because that person does not know how is proper guru. Therefore I have got a guru agency. Local security agencies, like that, the Bhagavān says. Similarly, a Bhagavān is running a guru agency, he will send. And if no gurus are available around, he will himself come, as in the case of Arjuna, Bhagavān himself take the role; you need not worry about all that; you do what you have to do; things will happen. It is the law of the universe.

Therefore tataḥ means what; before long, he will get chitta śuddhi, he will get guru prāp̥thi, and thereafter s̥ravaṇa prāp̥thi, because guru cannot give mōkṣa by touching; there is no touch mōkṣa. So that is s̥ravaṇam; s̥ravaṇam means what consistent and systematic study of the v̥dāntic scriptures for a length of time, under the guidance of a competent ācārya. Tatō parāṁ gatim yānti; so he will very very smoothly land in mōkṣa; even before he knows, he discovers aham brahmāsmi. Like the eating of the peeled banana. உரிச்ச வாழ்பழம் முழுங்கறமாதிரி.

यः शास्त्रविधिमुत्सृज्य वर्तते कामकारतः ।
न स सिद्धिमवाप्नोति न सुखं न परां गतिम् ॥ १६.२३ ॥

yaḥ śāstravidhimutsrjya vartatē kāmakārataḥ |
na sa siddhimavāpnōti na sukhaṁ na parāṁ gatim || 16.23 ||

उत्सृज्य utsrjya having given up शास्त्रविधिम् śāstravidhim the scriptural injunctions सः यः वर्तते saḥ yaḥ vartatē he who lives कामकारतः kāmakārataḥ according to the impulse of desire, अवाप्नोति avāpnōti attains न सिद्धम् na siddhm neither purity, न सुखम् na sukham nor happiness न परां गतिम् na parāṁ gatim – (he) does not (attain) the supreme goal. (also).

23. Having given up the scriptural injunctions, he who lives according to the impulse of desire attains neither purity, nor happiness. He does not attain the supreme goal also.

On the other hand, these verses from 22nd onwards, this is the conclusion of the teaching, 21st verse āsūri sampath topic is over. It started from the 7th verse; and now from the 22nd verse onwards, Lord Kṛṣṇa is talking about the further stages; So mere change from āsūri sampath to daivi sampath alone is not enough. A good character does not guarantee liberation. A moral or ethical life by itself will not lead to liberation because an ethical life does not remove ignorance. Only difference is that he is an ethically ignorant person. Therefore if ignorance has to go away, he has to pursue spiritual sādhana. And that he said tatō parāṁ gatim yānti. He will attain paraṁ gatim, mōkṣa.

And on the other hand, if a person does not change the direction of life, what will happen to him? Statutory warning; one side they will say, every puff (cigarette smoking) is a promise, in big letters, or something, what all slogans are there, and down below they write, cigarette smoking is injurious to your health; Kṛṣṇa is doing exactly the same thing. The best thing is to follow my teaching; and if you do not follow, the statutory warning.

What is that? yaḥ śāstravidhimutsrjya, one who does not make use of this wonderful traditional teaching, it has been coming down from time immemorial, thousands and thousands of years, just being born in the Society, it is available freely. Śankarācārya never asked for intellectual property rights. How much he could have made; Śankarācārya does not ask, Vyāsa does not ask, all are freely available; you have only to be born in the society and keep your ears open. You do not have to do any other thing; if you do not make use of this wonderful opportunity, utsṛjya; then what does he do? vartatē kāmākāratāḥ, lives a life according to his own rāga dvēṣa, he takes to a prakṛta life style instead of a saṃskṛta lifestyle; instead of dharma adharma based lifestyle, he takes to rāga dvēṣa based lifestyle; கண் போன போக்கிலெ கால பொகலாமா? மனம் போன போக்கிலெ மனிதன் போகலாமா? (kan pona pokkile, kal pogalaama, manam pona pokkile, manithan pogalaama)

Like that, going as you please, the one who leads a licentious life, saha siddhim na avapnōti. He has no chance of getting citta śuddhiḥ. He has no chance of getting jñāna yōgyatha. And jñāna yōgyatha itself is not possible, na param gathim, where is the question of jñāna prāp̥thi. And jñāna yōgyatha itself is not there, there is no possibility of jñānam. When sādhanā catuṣṭaya sampathi is not possible; no jñānam is possible.

And then Kṛṣṇa makes another startling statement; not only he will not get spiritual joy, really speaking, these materialistic people in due course, even lose the capacity to enjoy worldly pleasures.

So the nature of world pleasures are such that they will be appealing and attractive for a short period of time, and thereafter, this person will be incapable of enjoying even viṣaya sukham. Therefore Kṛṣṇa says: na sukham, because he will take to over indulgence; and will lose the health and mind and everything. Therefore this also gone and that also gone; as they say, first you squander your health in search of wealth; and later you squander your wealth in search of health; and ultimately lose, both. This will be lot of that person; Arjuna do you want such a tragedy? And now Kṛṣṇa concludes.

तस्माच्छास्त्रं प्रमाणं ते कार्याकार्यव्यवस्थितौ ।
ज्ञात्वा शास्त्रविधानोक्तं कर्म कर्तुमिहार्हसि ॥ १६.२४ ॥

jñātvā śāstravidhānōktaṃ karma kartumihārhasi || 16.24 ||](#)

तस्मात् tasmāt therefore शास्त्रं प्रमाणम् śāstram pramāṇam the scriptures are the source of knowledge ते tē for you कार्याकार्यव्यवस्थितौ kāryākāryavyavasthitau in determining the do's and don't's, ज्ञात्वा jñātvā having known, शास्त्रविधानोक्तम् śāstravidhānōktaṃ the teaching of the scriptural injunctions, अर्हसि arhasi you should कर्तुं कर्म kartum karma do your duty इह iha here

tasmāt, therefore. Therefore means wherefore? Because of the idea given in the previous verse, and what was the idea given? If you do not make use of the śāstric guidance, if you do not make use of the śāstric manual like using any gadgets, you have got a manual to use that particular instrument, it may be television, it may be anything, along with the manual comes, if you use the manual and use the equipment, you will get optimum benefit, if you do not follow that, it will be waste of money. Similarly, here also, if you give up the śāstric guidance, you will lose this wonderful opportunity. Therefore, you have to connect like that. Therefore, make use of the vēdic-teaching. Tasmāt śāstram; śāstram originally is vēda śāstram and all other secondary literature also smṛthi, ithihāsa, purāṇās, suthrams, prakaraṇa grantha. All these literatures are there, which are based on the vēdās; śāstram alone is pramāṇam, means what the guidance for you.

With regard to what? Kāryakāryavyavasthitau; with regard to the norms of what to do and what not to do; vyavasthithi; means the norms, the standard, with regard to what? The do's and don'ts. Karyam means do's, akaryam means don'ts. It is called vidhi and niṣēda. And here we are talking about vidhi niṣēda or dharma adharma and therefore the word śāstram must be translated as vēda purva śāstram or dharma śāstram.

With regard to vidhi niṣēda, we do not go to Vedānta. Vedānta does not deal with dharma and adharma, vēda pūrva bhāga deals with that. And therefore may you first follow the vēda pūrvādhi dharma śāstra and prepare the mind; jñātva and with regard to dharma śāstram, mere knowledge is not enough, you have to implement what you know. So I know all the yōgāsānās, suppose, I know what is mayurāsanam, I know what is śirāsanam, sarvaṅgāsanam, there are so many āsanās; I know all of them; how many hours you practice, I know but I do not practice. Knowledge will not bless you, you have to do.

In jñāna-kāṇḍam knowledge itself will bless. In karma kāṇḍa jñānam should be followed karma and anuṣṭāna. Therefore Kṛṣṇa says: jñātva śāstra vidhanōktam; first learn what is right and wrong; don't stop with learning; Then you have to implement that; kartumihārhasi; you should do, what you know. So thus, Lord Kṛṣṇa tells how to change yourselves from āsuri/rākṣāsi sampath to daivi sampath and then pursue vēdānta, attain jñānam and mōkṣa.

With this 16th chapter is over.

205 Chapter 16, Summary

Today I will give you a summary of the 16th chapter. The two chapters, 16th and 17th chapter do not deal with Self-knowledge at all; even though Self-knowledge is the central theme of Bhagavat Gīta, Kṛṣṇa deals with a different topic in chapters 16 and 17. The reason is that the scriptures point out and Kṛṣṇa also feels that self-knowledge can be useful only for a prepared person. For an unprepared person, self-knowledge will not be beneficial at all; or sometimes it can be even counter-productive. And this being very very important; all the scriptures uniformly talk about the preparatory steps before talking about self-knowledge. If you take the vēdās themselves, self-knowledge is never given in the beginning; self-knowledge occurs only in Vēdā Antha; the final very very small portion; the bulky beginning portion of vēda purva deals with only preparation, which is technically called saṃskāḥ.

And if you take the human life itself, of the four āśramās that are envisaged, Brahmācarya, Gṛhastha, Vānaprastha and Sanyāsa; three āśramās are dedicated for preparation. 75% of life, 75 years of life; assuming that we are going to live for 100 years; 75% is allocated for saṃskāraḥ, refinement; only the last sanyāsa āśramā is designed for self-knowledge. From all these things, it becomes very very clear that we should not take the preparation for granted; we should give extreme importance to the refinement of the person.

Without refinement, knowledge will not be received. Even if the knowledge is received, it will not retained; even if the knowledge is retained; it will not bring about a transformation; if the individual has not refined himself or herself. Before sowing the seeds, the farmer has to prepare the ground a lot and only after that the seed can be sown. Without the preparation of the ground, even the best seed cannot sprout and produce the phalam. Therefore Kṛṣṇa feels that he has to dedicate two exclusive chapters; 16 and 17th; for manuṣya saṁskāra. Saṁskāra anathara ēva jñānam mōkṣam dadāti.

And Kṛṣṇa has elaborately talked about the saṁskāra by enumerating those things which are to be very deliberately avoided, and those practices which are to be deliberately resorted to: vidhi and niṣēda; Daivi and āsūri saṁpat; Kṛṣṇa enumerated. I do not want to go into each value once again; because we have seen them elaborately.

But as a summary, I would like to present the saṁskāra; the refinement, in a different format; I am only going to change the format, but the ultimate purpose is what? Human saṁskāra, saṁskāra means what refinement.

And this refinement of the individual as a preparation for self-knowledge can be dealt with from four different angles; refinement of myself, as I, am individual human being; different from animal. I am a human being, and as a human being, what type of refinement I should bring about. Manuṣya dṛṣṭyā.

And then the second dṛṣṭi is, as a human being endowed with a freewill and choice, I become a kartā, a doer of action. Unlike an animal, which leaves an instinctive and programmed life; a human being is capable of taking to deliberate actions by which he becomes a kartā. Therefore, as a kartā, a doer or a performer, how can I refine myself? This is the second approach; manuṣya dṛṣṭi, kartā dṛṣṭi; in English, performer or doer. And as a kartā, I influence the surrounding, not as a manuṣya.

And the third angle from which we can look at ourselves; you can guess, once I am a kartā, helplessly I am going to become a bhōktā; a receiver of experiences; I have to face the onslaught of situations, which all the time bang me; I have to face the brunt. This is as a bhōktā, how can I refine, improve myself.

And finally and most importantly, as a mumukṣu, a spiritual-seeker; what type of refinement improvement, I can bring out in me.

As a manuṣya, as a kartā, as a bhōktā; as a mumukṣu. The first three are common to the entire humanity. In fact every human being requires the first three. First three means what manuṣya, kartā, bhōktā refinement. The fourth one is extremely important for the spiritual-seeker s like us; I hope we all come under this spiritual-seeker variety. So we have an extra responsibility; extra duty, extra discipline. The local person on the road is not a mumukṣu. Mumukṣu means seeker of mōkṣa, he is not.

We will briefly discuss each one of them.

Let us take the first one. What are the refinements I should and I can have? The first one is my health; the scriptures repeatedly warn never take your health for granted; without health nothing can be accomplished in life. And therefore in all prayers, before every upaniṣad, even though we are interested in the highest mōkṣa, the scriptures repeatedly say Oh Lord, let me enjoy health, so that I can come to the class, and sit for an hour, without back pain for front pain; without top pain or bottom pain, without knee (நீ) pain or (நான்) nān pain. Nothing can be accomplished without health; As somebody said, one of the greatest wealth is health; நோயற்ற வாழ்வு நான் வாழவேண்டும். nōyṛra vālvu nān vālvēṇṭum. Have you heard this prayer: மதி வேண்டும்; நின் கருணை நிதி வேண்டும். mati vēṇṭum; niṅ karuṇai niti vēṇṭum, (earlier there was a karunanidhi viruttam ~ now only dabba music) and therefore health refinement is No.1.

And when we talk about the refinement of health, we only think of physical health; but the scriptures strongly warn, health means physical, emotional and intellectual health; of which physical health is known to us all; all magazines talk about health; how to practice yōga; how you should be walking, what should be the diet you should be taking; what all you should be avoiding; all magazines talk about health; physical health, everybody knows.

Next one is emotional health; which is nothing but enjoying a mind which is calm, which is peaceful, which is poised. When the physical body enjoys health, the body is my friend, Kṛṣṇa tells in the 6th chapter, when the physical body suffers from ill-health the very same body becomes a burden, the very same body becomes an obstacle, the very same body becomes an enemy to me.

Similarly, Kṛṣṇa warns, a mind which does not enjoy śānti and samatvam is a mind which is a bhāram. Aśāntasya manōbhāram; my own mind is a burden to me; and the mind becomes an enemy to me and the mind becomes the biggest obstacle to me and therefore health means emotional health also.

In fact the entire list of daivi saṁpat and āsuri saṁpath is given only to enjoy emotional health. All the thoughts which are in alignment with daivi saṁpath, will contribute to mental health; and all the thoughts which are in not in alignment, they will only cause mental ill-health. And therefore emotional health is nothing but enjoying śānṭhi, freedom from stress (if we tell this everyone understands) because stress management is the biggest topic nowadays. Emotional health means managed stress; and then comes the next layer of health which is intellectual health. Intellectual health is nothing but enjoying an intellect which is capable of learning; which is capable of thinking with clarity; clear thinking; and which is capable of communicating clearly. Clear communication is also a virtue of the intellect; because if thoughts are muddled and messed up, then the words also will be muddled and messed up. You can see many people, I suffer regularly; who come and talk for hours and I do not know what they want to tell; beating about bush; whether about the family, whether about the government, there is no focusing; there is no crystallisation; what exactly they want to communicate, and after one hour I have to abstract then I know it could have been communicated in one minute; they would have taken one and half hours. It is all lack of clarity in thinking, which will create problem throughout life because, in life, all the time we are communicating, communicating. And that is why in the olden days, they designed a special śāstram to train the intellect to clearly think.

Tarka śāstram is specially designed to train the intellect to think with clarity and focus. We find all the traditional Sānskrīt vēdāntic works, certain great people write the footnotes, that the first part is writing footnote, they will present the thought of the original author in one sentence. Whatever you want to communicate, very interesting exercise, even after every class; you can practice and try; what I have spoken in one hour, you must be able to abstract. In fact, in our school, we had something called precise writing; I do not know whether it is there or not; and what do we generally do, four sentences we choose, one from each paragraph; precise writing is 15 sentences into 3. The teacher does not have time, and therefore he also does not read; and somehow we also got the marks and somehow finished the degree also. The teacher is also saved; we are also saved; the capacity to abstract and present a thing in a saṅkṣēpa form. So clarity, capacity to learn, capacity to think clearly, tarka śāstram is beautifully designed.

And we have a beautiful vyākaraṇa śāstram of Pāṇini in sūtra form, he tells, he communicates, whatever I think I should be able to communicate, without communication gap.

If we communicate, gaps are more, than what is communicated and I have talked about donkey and that person has understood about a monkey. So therefore, not only physical health, a vēdāntic student. In fact every person, because we have to communicate with children, with wife, with husband, with husband; otherwise all the time, people around are hurt. And they say I am hurt and you say I did not mean it. It is a constant factor; hurting/consoling; hurting/consoling; because I am not careful about the language.

So physical, emotional, and intellectual health is a form of refinement. And not only health of all the layers of my personality; most importantly, all the organs have to function in integration. This is another important form of refinement; whenever I am in a particular task, whether all my organs are converting to that particular task; or body is doing something, sense organs are elsewhere; mind is elsewhere; if they are distracted, then the actions are not efficient and therefore integration of this thought, jñānēndriyam, karmēndriyam, the antakaraṇam; because when all the organs converge into focused field, the power that I enjoy is infinitely higher; like the sunlight which is converged on to a point with the help of a magnifying glass; Unconverged sun beam cannot burn; but when I use a magnifying glass, it is capable of burning things.

So integration, which Kṛṣṇa calls ārjavam. In fact the entire Aṣṭāṅga yōga is designed for integration; Aṣṭāṅga yōga cannot give self-knowledge; many people are not clear about the role of aṣṭāṅga -yōga; it should be very clear. Aṣṭāṅga yōga is extremely important for the integration but they cannot give knowledge. After integration, one has to come to vēdānta sṛavaṇa, manana, nidhidhyāsana. But from integration angle, aṣṭāṅga -yōga, do not ask me, what is aṣṭāṅga -yōga, in my sixth chapter introduction I have talked about; in fact the yōga śāstram. Thus, health and integration are very very important for me, as a human being. This is manuṣya dṛṣṭya saṁskāra.

Next we will go the next aspect of my personality, as a kartā; as a doer of action; whether it is mundane worldly actions or whether they are religious action; sacred or secular, as a kartā what do you mean by refinement?

The scriptures point out that the first step in refinement is the reduction in the number of impulsive action; as a kartā, refinement is impulsive actions; thoughtless actions; mechanical actions; instinctive actions should come down. Because instinctive and impulsive action belongs to animals; animals can do what they feel like doing. Dog feels like barking, it barks; donkey feels like kicking; it kicks; that it is in the domain of animals. As a human being, my progress is reduction in the number of impulsive actions; and replacement them with the deliberate thoughtful actions. And when I say thoughtful actions, we should include our speaking also; because speech also comes under a form of vācikaṁ karma only.

And that means whatever actions come out of me at the word level or at the body level; all of them are done by me; deliberately, thoughtfully, after taking into account, all the factors that are to be taken into account. Our past experiences have to be taken into account; because past experiences will be useful in doing the present action; and the present condition should be taken into account and of course, the future should be taken into account; short-term future, long-term future; and I should take into account; my own conditions as an individual and I should take into account, the surrounding, the family, the community, the environment; past factors, present factors, future factors, subjective factors, surrounding factors. In fact, if you plan to take into account all the factors, you can never impulsively act, it will take lot of time to do every action. In fact, we cannot even talk. And if I train myself to act deliberately and thoughtfully, initially it will take long time;

But Bhṛthari tells in his Kirātārjunīyam, very oft quoted verse.

sahasa vidāthi tha na kripam avikēkaḥ |
paramapadam padam; vṛnathē hi vimṛṣya kāriṇam |
guṇa lubthaḥ svayam ēva saṁpataḥ ||

Never act impulsively. That is your worst enemy. And initially, it will take lot of time and if I practice that, even in small things, thereafter I will be able to do them quickly. Even if I have to decide within one minute, the intellect gets the capacity to quickly scan through the past, present, future, my benefit, others' benefit, after seeing all the time, like the computers, you can do; but it requires tremendous training initially. Initially, if you want to learn a rāga, they will teach you the arōhaṇam, and avarōhaṇa svaraḥ; sā rī ga mā pā da nī sa, sā ni da pa mā ga rī sa; then they ask you to say sā, rī, etc. what type of sā, what type of rī, what type of ma, etc. etc. and I have to very carefully and deliberately say, that this is not śuddha madhyamam, this is not andhara gandhāram, this is not prathi madhyamam andhara gandharam, I have to be very very careful; first I will make thoughtless mistakes; then I will make thoughtful mistakes; and before that I have to learn to say sā pā sa; And then I learn then arōhaṇam, and avarōhaṇa, and learn to say quickly, they teach me varṇams, learn to sing śiṣṭa svārās very carefully, not citta svarams, śiṣṭa means designed by the gurus, the acāryās. And later I have to go to kalpanā svaram, and you can see musicians singing the kalpana svarams very fast, but even when they sing very fast, their sā will fall in sā; rī will be exactly rī; even though they are singing in TN express, the fastest version; how? because of sheer training; similarly, if I train my intellect, to go through past, present, future, myself and other, initially it will take time, later even within a minute, I can go through them and my actions will be very very deliberate. And therefore refinement of kartā is replacement of impulsive actions with deliberate action. And the next thing refinement is the wise or noble or sātvic action. Replace the indiscriminate unintelligent actions or replaced by sātvic and wise actions.

And how do you differentiate unintelligent and intelligent actions? According to the scriptures, wise actions are those, which are beneficial to more and more number of people. An action done keeping in mind the larger good; and an unintelligent action is that in which the beneficiaries or lesser and lesser and the worst action is that in which there is only one beneficiary. Who, should I tell? I am the only beneficiary, not even the family members; even they are neglected.

And still worse, not only the other people are not the beneficiaries, they are even affected adversely. So wise actions are those, in which the other people are not affected and the other people also benefit; sātвика-karmāṇi. So thus saṁskāra of the kartā is, deliberate and wise action. The more it increases, the more saṁkritha I become. This is the refinement of the kartā.

Now we have to go to the refinement of the bhoktā. Very important; because constantly we are bhōktās; bhōktās does not mean just eating only; bhoktā mean constantly experiences like the waves in an ocean; experiences are constantly lashing us right from the first moment of waking, until we go to bed, after experience after experience. How can I refine myself as a bhoktā; Bhoktā requires a tremendous refinement.

The first refinement is wisdom; I should be wise enough to know as a bhoktā, that the experienter of life, what all I have to experience I never know; my future experiences are unpredictable; and even among many predictable experiences, most of them are uncontrollable. And therefore choiceless. As a bhoktā, I will have to go through choiceless experiences. Growing old is choiceless; our children's behavior is choiceless. What they will do, we do not know?

I should clearly know that I can only contribute to the future; I have got only a contributory role, I do not have control over the future. This must be very very clear; Choiceless situations are inevitable in life. This awareness is the first step. Kṛṣṇa tells in the Gīta; tasmāt aparihāryartē, na tvam sōcitur arhasi. Arjuna, that choiceless situations are inevitable in life. And once this wisdom has come to the bhoktā.

Now what is the next step? If the situations are choiceless, I can have only one choice, what is that I have to strengthen myself to go through the choiceless situations, with minimum damage or no damage. If I cannot stop the rain; I should know how to put on a rain coat; or how to use an umbrella; that is called strengthen; immunising myself.

And therefore the second refinement of bhōktā is strengthening the mind to go through choiceless situations with minimum damage; so that I can continue with my life; I would not get frustrated; I would not get suicidal thoughts; I would not curse God and the world; I can withstand. So strength is the second refinement; which can be done either by auto suggestion: that I can face, I can face, I can face, you have to go on telling, and also with the help of devotion: Lord is there with me; even if others are cooperative or not; I have the Lord with me; therefore I can go through even guraṇa api dukḥēna; and the greatest strengthening factor is self-knowledge. Self-knowledge is the one single factor, which strengthens the bhōktā infinitely. So this is the second refinement. What is that? Strengthening.

And the third refinement is: Being skillful; I should become a skillful bhoktā; Wise bhoktā; Strong bhoktā; skillful bhoktā. What do you mean by skillful bhoktā? Suppose I go through some painful experiences. And naturally it is going to affect me; at least to some extent; there is some bitterness, there is some frustration, there is some anger.

And what happens is? The disturbance of the bhōktā gets carried to the kartā; the disturbance of the bhōktā gets carried to the kartā; and the kartā's performance is affected when the bhōktā transfers this to the kartā. Imagine a boy has to go to the examination; and the boy has learnt very well, he has to write as a kartā. Some event happens at home in the morning and it disturbs the mind as a bhoktā, the child is disturbed. And imagine the disturbance is carried to the kartā, what happens? That day's examination gone; one day; there are many children, after the examination, they answer very well.

The intelligence is I should be able to keep the bhoktā separate from the kartā, I do not allow the bhoktā to adversely affect the kartā. If the bhōktā affects the kartā, what will happen? I will get into a vicious cycle; bhoktā affects the kartā. Therefore kartā's performance is poor and if the kartā performs poorly what will happen, it will affect the bhoktā adversely and the adversely affected bhōktā will affect the kartā again; I will get into a vicious cycle; therefore a skillful bhōktā is one, who does not adversely affect the kartā, the doer. This is the third refinement of the bhoktā; wise, strong, skillful.

And fourthly and finally, and very importantly, if the bhōktā is a receptive bhoktā, every experience has a capacity to teach me. In fact, Bhagavān has kept experiences only to teach me. And good experiences also can teach me; bad experiences also can teach me. In fact bad experiences can teach more than good experiences. Every adverse experience has got a hidden lesson in it. If the bhōktā is a receptive to that; he can learn and grow. In fact, sādhanā catuṣṭaya saṃpati, is attained only by learning through life's experiences: parikṣya lōkān karmacitān brahmanō nirvēdā māyat.

An intelligent bhōktā converts a painful experiences into educative experiences. This I call a receptive bhōktā; learning bhōktā and I am not receptive, I will only curse the world; all the time murmuring, grumbling, and say that God is giving problems only to me. I will have time only to grumble, I have only time pass on my gloom to other people. One dānam what we do clearly is our gloom and worries, we freely distribute to others; and because of that, bitterness of the mind, I lose the wonderful chance of learning. Therefore refinement of a bhoktā is making him a learning bhōktā.

And therefore what are the four things? Wise, strong; skillful; receptive bhoktā I have to become.

What type of kartā I should become; thoughtful and wise kartā;

What type of manuṣya I have to become; healthy and integrated manuṣya; healthy integrated manuṣya, thoughtful and wise kartā, wise, strong, skillful, and receptive bhōktā.

And what is the fourth angle I said? As a mumukṣu; spiritual-seeker, what type of refinement I need? As a spiritual-seeker; I require faith and association with three factors; faith and association with three factors. What are they? No.1. God; No.2 Guru and No.3 Śāstram. Faith in God is a must for a spiritual-seeker; without Īśvarakripa, spiritual journey is impossible. Kṛṣṇa himself will tell in the 18th chapter.

मच्चित्तः सर्वदुर्गाणि मत्प्रसादात्तरिष्यसि |
अथ चेत्त्वमहंकारान्न श्रोष्यसि विनङ्क्ष्यसि || १८- ५८ ||

maccittaḥ sarvadurgāṇi matprasādāt tariṣyasi |
atha cēttvamahaṅkāraṇna śrōṣyasi vinaṅkṣyasi || 18.58 ||

Arjuna with my grace and blessing, for you the spiritual journey will be a walkover, and therefore faith in God, even though I am not able to give a clear explanation to what God is; even though I do not clearly understand what God is; it is better that I have a faith in God in some form or the other.

One great philosopher said that even if God does not exist; it is worth having faith; because faith is useful even if God is not there. Faith is very very useful to life; even if God is there. I do not say God is not there; even if God is not there, faith is useful for physical health; faith is useful for emotional health; faith is useful for intellectual health. Faith in God and association; Not mere faith; I should spend some time with God; either in the form of prayer or in the form of pūja, I have to allocate some time for some devotional exercises. Swamiji can I tell the prayers while I am travelling in the car, in the train, while I am walking, etc. early morning walk, etc. They are all bonus; but we should be able to exclusively devote some time, may be 10 minutes, may be 15 minutes; doing nothing else, exclusively for that. Then during your walking and bus-ride, and other things; in bed also, if you want, you can do, but exclusively time has to be allocated that I will call as faith and association. Prayer is a form of association with God, which will do immense good for all; especially for a spiritual-seeker.

Then the next one is faith and association with a guru; faith in the guru; that the guru will do only good to me and this faith and association with Guru means learning from the guru. Association means not just sitting along with the guru; it will be a problem. So it is impractical and problematic to everyone; association, sat saṅga; guru saṅga is learning from the guru; guru upadēśa sṛavaṇam; with faith that it will only do good to me; this is the second part;

And finally faith and association; faith in and association with the scriptures that the scriptures will not mislead me; நம்பிநார் கெடுவதில்லை. nampinār keṭuvatillai. If I feel the scriptures are misleading; it is only I do not know how to study the scriptures properly; there is no problem with the scriptures. And association with the scriptures means regular svādhayaḥ; not that I touch the Bhagavat Gīta only on Sunday evening; between 7 and 8 p.m.

In fact regular association with the scriptures is more useful because guru association will not be available at all time; whereas scriptural association it is in your hands; you can take and try to read your notes; I said try to read, because you might have just scribbled; therefore mananam, and nidhidhyāsanam will come under faith in and association with the scriptures. So the faith in and association with the Īśvara, guru, and śāstram is the refinement of myself as a mumukṣu; and if I take care of these four fold refinement; as a manuṣya, as a kartā, as a bhoktā; and as a mumukṣu; mōkṣa will come to me; even if I do not want; mōkṣa will come. And therefore, one has to give importance to saṁskāra. Refinement.

This is the essence of the 16th chapter. If I have to classify verse wise, I will tell quickly. Verse No.1 to 3, Kṛṣṇa talks about daivi sampath; which will positively contribute to spiritual or refinement; refinement of manuṣya, kartā, bhoktā and mumukṣu. So Daivi sampat or saṁskāra friendly, they contribute to saṁskāra.

Then from verse No.4 to 21, Kṛṣṇa talks about all those traits AND activities, behaviour and conduct which will adversely affect a human being; not only saṁskāra will not take place, the person will go down spiritually. 4 to 21 āsūri sampath.

Then from verse No.22 to 24, Kṛṣṇa talks about importance of śāstram or scriptural study. And in the olden days, in our tradition, scriptural study was given extreme importance; And in gurukula, in during education, compulsorily they had to study the scriptures. Not only priest or brahmins only, everybody has to study the scriptures in the olden days. If you remember, śikṣa valli of Taittiriya upaniṣad:

ऋतं च स्वाध्यायप्रवचने च | सत्यं च स्वाध्यायप्रवचने च | तपश्च स्वाध्यायप्रवचने च | दमश्च स्वाध्यायप्रवचने च | शमश्च

svādhyāya is repeated and then that upaniṣad says: svādhyāyapracāṇē ēvēti nākō maudgalyah | taddhi tapastaddhi tapaḥ.. 57.

The greatest spiritual-sādhana is systematic-scriptural-study; and after our educational system changed from gurukula sampradhāya to Macaulay sampradhāya, it seems Macaulay wrote to somebody in England after introducing, he said if the Indians follow my system that I have envisaged; there will not be a single idol worshipper in India. So the hidden agenda was destruction of vēdic or Hindu culture; which he himself writes.

And that is what is happening. In this modern educational system, there is no scope for scriptural study and elsewhere also people do not emphasise, people think that this is only an intellectual exercise, dhyānam yōga etc. are only scriptural study is not emphasised but Kṛṣṇa gives a warning. Tasmāt Śāstram pramāṇam tē. Arjuna never under emphasise the role of scriptural study. You study of course with the help of guru, with the backing of īśvara anugraha; You will certainly succeed in your spiritual pursuit; thus importance of śāstram in the last three verses and since the main topic is daiva and āsura saṁpath, the chapter is called daivasura saṁpat vibhāga yōga. With this, the 16th chapter is over.

॥सप्तदशोऽध्यायः - श्रद्धात्रय-विभाग योगः॥

||saptadaśo'dhyāyaḥ - śraddhātraya-vibhāga yōgaḥ||

In the last portion of the Bhagavad-Gīta, consisting of the last six chapters, known as carama śatkam, Lord Kṛṣṇa initially dealt with Self-knowledge. In the 13th, 14th and 15th chapters, Kṛṣṇa dealt with Self-knowledge; which is the only means of liberation.

And having dealt with ātma vidya in three chapters, in the next two chapters, viz., the 16th and 17th chapters, Lord Kṛṣṇa wants to convey a very important idea. That is a person's lifestyle should be adjusted in such a way that self-knowledge can be received by the person without any obstacle. Because according to our Vēdas, and according to Lord Kṛṣṇa, the very lifestyle has got influence on our capacity to receive the knowledge and also our capacity to retain the knowledge.

Just as a particular type of plant, can grow only in a particular type of earth; and particular type of weather; only in a particular type of lifestyle, vēdānta friendly lifestyle, the knowledge can take place. And therefore the way of life is important as the committed study of the scriptures. Whereas when you study the other material sciences, like physics or chemistry, your result has nothing to do with your way of life. A person can be absolutely immoral and he can get No.1 rank in his University. So there is no connection between lifestyle and the knowledge of material sciences but when it comes to spiritual knowledge, the very way of life, plays a very very important role, we cannot ignore that aspect. And that is why we have got a vēdic lifestyle itself prescribed in the Vēda purva bhāga.

The Vēda purva deals with the lifestyle that you lead, Vēda antha deals with philosophy or the knowledge that you work for. One is called dharma śāstra, another is called Brahma śāstra and in the two chapters, 16 and 17th, Lord Kṛṣṇa is concentrating on way of life.

In the 16th chapter, that we completed just now, Kṛṣṇa pointed out Daivi sampath has to be there in the life that a person follows. Daivi sampath vimōkṣāya, that alone will help in receiving and retaining and absorbing the teaching; whereas if āsūri sampath a person has, he might be academically brilliant and therefore he might be able to understand the logic of the Upaniṣads. Perhaps Māṇḍūkya he can brilliantly grasp and perhaps he can give even a brilliant discourse. So academically he may be sound; but it Āsūri sampath goes along with Upaniṣadic study, the knowledge will remain as an information; it can never bring about a transformation in his life. He will be an educated rākṣasaḥ.

Sakṣaraḥ rākṣasaḥ bhavathi. Sākṣara means educated person. Akṣara means letter, sākṣaraḥ means an man of letters; man of letters, not postman, a man of letters means an educated person. And if a person has education without daivi sampath, sakṣaras will be reversed; sākṣara, reverse it and it comes rākṣasaḥ. In fact they will become worse rākṣasaḥ, than the illiterate one, because they know how to mask or cover their rākṣasatvam also. Therefore Upaniṣadic study will be meaningful only if the lifestyle is Upaniṣadic friendly lifestyle; and that is called daivi sampath and the opposite is called āsūri sampath.

And this topic being very very important, Lord Kṛṣṇa deals with the same topic in the 17th chapter also. This stress on the way of life, what you know Kṛṣṇa asks us to keep aside அதை அந்த பக்கம் வை; what you practice, what type of lifestyle you lead; how do you treat the people; what type of language you use in your communication. That way of life is being focused in the 16th and also in the 17th chapter and this chapter is triggered by a question coming from Arjuna. So Arjuna asks a question based on the 16th chapter, and by way of answering that question, Kṛṣṇa deals with a little bit more on the way of life. This is the background of the 17th chapter. With this background, we will enter.

अर्जुन उवाच --

ये शास्त्रविधिमुत्सृज्य यजन्ते श्रद्धयान्विताः ।

Arjuna uvāca

yē śāstravidhimutsrjya yajantē śraddhayā'nvitāḥ|

tēṣāṃ niṣṭhā tu kā kṛṣṇa sattvamāhō rajastamaḥ||17.1||

अर्जुनः उवाच arjunaḥ uvāca Arjuna asked – का तु निष्ठा kā tu niṣṭha what is the status तेषाम् tēṣāṃ of those people ये उत्सृज्य yē utsrjya who ignore, सास्त्रविधिम् sāstravidhim the rules of the sastras यजन्ते yajantē and worship अन्विताः श्रद्धया anvitāḥ śradhdayā with faith? सत्त्वम् satvam is it sattva रजः rajaḥ rajas आहो तमः āhō tamaḥ or tamas? कृष्णा kṛṣṇā Oh ! Kṛṣṇa.

1. Arjuna asked --- What is the status of those people who ignore the Scriptural rules and worship with faith? Is it Sattva, rajas, or tamas, Oh! Kṛṣṇa?

Arjuna uvāca. Arjuna asked a question based on the 16th chapter. In the 16th chapter, towards the end, Lord Kṛṣṇa said that

तस्माच्छास्त्रं प्रमाणं ते कार्याकार्यवस्थितौ ।
ज्ञात्वा शास्त्रविधानोक्तं कर्म कर्तुमिहार्हसि ॥ १६.२४ ॥

jñātvā śāstravidhānōktaṁ karma kartumihārhasi || 16.24 ||](#)

In the last verse that is the 24th verse; therein Kṛṣṇa said, if you want to know what is a spiritual way of life; what is a dhārmic way of life, what is daivi sampath, and if you want to diligently avoid āsūri sampath, the best guide is the scriptures. So śāstra pramāṇam. Śāstra is the guiding manual. As I have often said, before you operate any costly machine or gadget, it may be a TV, a Radio, or CD player, before you start operating that, first you take the manual or ask a person who has studied the manual, and you know what is to be done and what is not to be done. The do's and dont's with regard to the operation so that you will get maximum benefit out of the machine. So just as we have a manual with regard to every gadget, with regard to our life also, how to handle the costliest machines, every value in our body, if it has to be replaced, you have to spend 50,000 to 60,000 or kidney transplant costs 3 or 4 lakhs; a bone marrow transplant costs 7 lakhs or 10 lakhs, I do not know what is the present rate. We have got the costliest machine, called the human body, if I do not know how to handle, I will only totally destroy the whole equipment by my misuse நன்தவனத்தில் ஓராண்டி; கூத்தாடி கூத்தாடி போட்டுடைதாண்டி கதையாயிடும். Similarly we have a wonderful world in front of us, and we can use the body and the world to accomplish the highest puruṣārtha; or we can make our life a குட்டிசெவரு; a spoilt one; a total destruction. And what is the manual that will guide me, make the best use of my life? Kṛṣṇa says; śāstra pramāṇam, because śāstra is given out by the Lord himself; Yo Brahmanam vidadathi pūrvaṁ, yo vai Vēdamscha prahinidōthi tasmai, tadugam dēvam, etc.

Vēdās has come from the Lord; and the Gītā has also come from the Lord only and therefore Kṛṣṇa says use the śāstra manual; pramāṇam means guidelines with regard to kārya akārya vyavastitā; with regard to what is to be done and what is not to be done. This was Kṛṣṇa's instruction in the 24th verse of the 16th chapter.

Now Arjuna's worry is this. Even then itself; 5,000 years before. Hey Kṛṣṇa most of our scriptures or all of our scriptures are in the inaccessible sanskrit language; Vēda is in Vēdic sanskrit, classical Sānskrīt; and all our commentaries are in Sānskrīt, Bhagavad-Gītā has many bhāṣyas; all best bhāṣyas are written in Sānskrīt; and you want to know more about Śankarācārya, Śankarācārya's bhāṣya, there is a sub-commentary in Sānskrīt. We also have a sub-sub-commentary of the Bhāṣyam in Sānskrīt.

And therefore Arjuna says, it is not accessible to all the people. There are many people who have the best intentions, who want to learn the scriptures, but they do not have the facilities to learn, because of one obstacle or the other; and they have got faith in God. Arjuna says, śraddhayā'nvitāḥ, they have got faith in God; they have faith in prayer; they have got faith in pūja and therefore they want to do the pūja but they do not know what is the right method of doing the pūja. Therefore Arjuna says śraddhayā'nvitāḥ yē.

Suppose there are some people who are scripturally illiterate; that we have to supply; suppose there are some people who are scripturally illiterate and they have not studied the purva mimāmsa, the karma kāṇḍa and the kalpa, you know what is kalpa, people do not even know what is kalpa, kalpa is that book which gives the method of doing the rituals and pūja; āṣanam samarpayāmi; pādyam samarpayāmi, ācamanam samarpayāmi, etc. Whether when I say ācamanam samarpayāmi, should I take it or offer it to the Lord, etc. and which comes first and also they talk about varieties of offerings for varieties of deities. Viṣṇu should not given this, Śiva should not be given that; I do not all these things, and even in which direction the deity should face, whether east or west; or look at the sky; I do not know, I have not studied; but I have sṛaddhā.

Arjuna says suppose there are such scripturally illiterate but faithful people, devotees, and what do they do? yajantē, because of their enthusiasm and love, suppose they practice regular pūja, to which deity they know of, whichever deity is available; whichever deity they love, whichever deity they choose, the deity and they do the pūja; yajantē; what is their problem?

Śāstravidhim utsṛjya, because they are scripturally illiterate, they do not know what is the right method and what is the wrong method; they do not know how they should sit in front of the deity facing it; or to sit on the left and offer the things on the right; or to sit on the right and offer the things on the left; etc. Even that they do not know and therefore what do they do; every step, they violate the śāstric rule; śāstra vidhi means śāstric injunctions; utsṛjya means they violate, they do not follow.

Why they do not follow? Because they are scripturally illiterate; but they have got something else, very important, what is that something else they have in plenty? Śraddhayā'nvitāḥ; emotions is intense; and now hey Kṛṣṇa, what type of devotees they are; tēṣāṃ niṣṭhā kā; niṣṭha means their status, their standing, their level, their classification, will be what? How will you classify them? Because they have a got a powerful plus point, what is the plus point, sṛaddhā; they have got a powerful minus point, what is that? Illiteracy and therefore violation of the scriptures.

So what will be their standing? Hey Kṛṣṇa, please do tell me; sattvamāhō rajastamaḥ; will you classify them under sātvika bhaktha or sātvika devotee or sātvic worshippers or will you classify them under rājasik worshippers or tāmasik or what type of sṛaddhā will be their sṛaddhā? Sṛaddhā backed by what? Illiteracy. So he asks; kā tēṣāṁ niṣṭa; niṣṭa here refers to sṛaddhā, is it sātvic, rājasic or tāmasic sṛaddhā.

And because the question is regarding sṛaddhā, the very chapter is called sṛaddhā traya vibhāga yōgaḥ; an analysis of the faith of the devotee. This is the Arjuna's question; for which Lord Kṛṣṇa gives the answer in the following verses.

श्री भगवानुवाच ---

त्रिविधा भवति श्रद्धा देहिनां सा स्वभावजा ।

सात्त्विकी राजसी चैव तामसी चेति तां शृणु ॥ १७.२ ॥

Śrī Bhāgavān uvāca

trividhā bhavati śraddhā dēhināṁ sā svabhāvajā |

sāttvikī rājasī caiva tāmasī cēti tāṁ śṛṇu || 17. 2 ||

2. Lord Kṛṣṇa said --- For all human-beings faith is threefold as sattvic, rajasic and tāmasik. It is born of one's nature. Hear about it.

Sri Bhagavān uvāca. The Lord answers. Lord Kṛṣṇa says I cannot give you a one liner answer; I cannot tell you they have sātvic sṛaddhā or rājasic sṛaddhā; I cannot say; Why? Because if a person's sṛaddhā or pūja is governed by scriptural injunctions, I can uniformly say that all of them will come under sātvic variety. Because scriptures guide a person towards satva predominance; therefore any action which is scripture-governed action; that would be invariably sātvic, because scriptures take a person gradually to satva-guṇa. Therefore the rule is: any scripture-governed action will be sātvic. But in the case of these devotees; what is the problem? Their pūja or their activities, are not governed by the scriptures; why it is not governed by the scriptures? Because they are scripturally illiterate and if the scriptures do not guide their activity, the question would be what will be guiding their activity? What will determine the type of pūja they do? The type of motive they have; the type of deity they will worship; what will determine the pūja of an illiterate person? Certainly not scriptures; then what?

Kṛṣṇa says that if the scriptures do not determine, it is going to my own character that is going to determine the type of pūja. Because a person's activities can be governed either by an external guideline or it is going to be guided by what? His own likes and dislikes, his own vāsanās, his own svabhāvaḥ, his own characters. These are the only two possibilities; scripture governed or character governed; scripture governed or character governed. And in the case of this particular devotee, it is not scripture governed, because he is illiterate. Therefore Kṛṣṇa says it will be governed by their character.

Therefore first Kṛṣṇa says dēhinām sṛaddhā; the sṛaddhā or the faith of the scripturally illiterate people, dēhi means here: ajñāni bhaktha; here dēhi refers to a devotee who is not scripturally literate is dēhi; and sṛaddhā and his type of pūja, his attitude, his motive, everything will be svabhāvaja; governed by his personality; his mind set; his inclination; his pūrva janma vāsanā.

And now the next question is what will be character of a devotee? If the action is governed by character, the next question is what? What will be the character of a devotee? Kṛṣṇa says character of a devotee will not be same in the case of all human beings; because human character varies from individual to individual. I cannot say uniformly all are sātvic. I cannot uniformly say all are rājasic or tāmasic; therefore Kṛṣṇa says; the devotees character is three fold; what are the threefold? The three characters; sātvic svabhāvaḥ; sātvika svabhāvaḥ; rājasa svabhāvaḥ; and tāmasa svabhāvaḥ. Devotees themselves are sātvic, rājasic and tāmasic and since the character is threefold, the character based faith also will be three fold; character is three fold, the character based faith also will be three-fold. And therefore Kṛṣṇa says Sṛaddhā trividha bhavathi; the faith will be of three types.

And what are they? Sātvikī ca ēva; sātvika sṛaddhā and what is sātvika sṛaddhā, Kṛṣṇa will explain later, therefore we will note this much; a sātvic person will have sātvic faith. What is sātvic faith, have faith in Kṛṣṇa, he will answer. And what is the second one; rājasi; rājasic devotee with rājasic faith. And what is the third one, tāmasi sṛaddhā; a tāmasic devotee with tāmasic sṛaddhā; and there pūja will be governed by what? The sātvika, rājasa, tāmasa sṛaddhā; it is never governed by the scriptural injunctions.

Kṛṣṇa himself says tām śṛṇu; do not be in a hurry; śṛṇu, I will systematically step by step I will tell you; only patiently listen.

सत्त्वानुरूपा सर्वस्य श्रद्धा भवति भारत ।
श्रद्धामयोऽयं पुरुषः यो यच्छ्रद्धः स एव सः ॥ १७.३ ॥

sattvānurūpā sarvasya śraddhā bhavati bhārata |
śraddhāmāyō'yam puruṣō yō yacchraddhaḥ sa ēva saḥ || 17.3 ||

भारत bhārata Oh Arjuna ! सर्वस्य sarvasya for everyone श्रद्धा śraddhā faith is भवति सत्वानुरूपा bhavati satvānurūpā according to (his) temperament अयं पुरुषः ayaṁ puruṣaḥ a person, श्रद्धामयः śraddhāmāyaḥ consists of (his) faith सः एव सः sa: ēva saḥ He is verily यः यच्छ्रद्धः yaḥ yacchraddhaḥ what his faith is.

3. Oh! Arjuna For everyone, faith is according to (his) temperament. A person consists of (his) faith. He is verily what his faith is.

So Kṛṣṇa says: Arjuna! The śraddhā of a person, the faith of a person depends upon his mind or his character; Satvam here means mind, very careful; here satva, anthakaranam, mind, not satva-guṇa, but refers to satva-guṇa kārya bhūtha antakaraṇam. And depending upon the type of mind, mind is not the same for all; for one parent, if there are three children; trividam duṣṭa lakṣaṇam they say. If there are different children, they have different characters. So śraddhā, bhavati satvānurūpā, the faith will depend upon the character or the mind of a person.

The next question is, is the mind of the children, controlled by the parents or not?; or controlled by the genes of the parents or not; genetic study are there nowadays; there is a genetic study of all the criminals. And Hitler's genes they are making special study, to find out what exactly causes this particular type of thinking. Therefore what determines if you ask, certainly parents do contribute to the children's character; the parents' life style does contribute; the parents genes do contribute, but they are all contributory factors, they do not totally determine, because every child comes with a pūrva vāsana also.

A Hiraṇyakaśipu can have Prahlāda; a brāhmaṇa Viśravas ṛṣi can have a rākṣasā Rāvaṇa; Ṛṣi can have a rākṣasā Rāvaṇa; Rāvaṇa is a brāhmaṇa putraḥ, Rāvaṇō nāma rākṣasā, it is not nāma rākṣasā; it is rāvaṇō nama rākṣasā. Therefore parentage do not totally determine; the pūrva janma also has a say; dependent on innumerable factors, every individual is born with a certain inherited character; dependent on that character. Śraddhā bhavathi; hey Bhāratha; hey Arjuna.

And by addressing Arjuna as Bhāratha, Kṛṣṇa says that Arjuna you are lucky that you are born in the Bharatha vaṁśa; and you all belong to Bhāratha; we are all Bhāratha. I have told you the meaning of Bhāratha; Bhā means brahma vidya; prakaśatmika brahma vidya, bhāḥ, rathāḥ means those who revel; those who value spiritual knowledge; more than anything else. So we are all supposed to value spirituality; India is supposed to be the land of spirituality; even though we are getting doubts nowadays; but we are supposed to be inheritors of that. Therefore Hey Bhāratha; śraddhā bhavathi.

And then Lord Kṛṣṇa makes a warning: Do not take this sṛaddhā for granted; because this rudimentary sṛaddhā, the faith of a person which gradually manifests in his younger age, that alone determines his future. Because as a person thinks, as a person believes, so he becomes in future. Therefore Sṛaddhā alone moulds a person.

Therefore Kṛṣṇa says; ayam puruṣaḥ; every adult human being is a product of his childhood values; his childhood heroes. His childhood models; when I say models, do not think of somebody else. It is heroes whom we worship. As children we all have heroes and that determines the direction of our journey; they say, the child is the father of man. That means what? Your childhood sṛaddhā will determine what type of adult you are going to be; Child is the father of man has come just now; but this was said by Kṛṣṇa then itself.

He says it here; a beautiful statement; ayam puruṣaḥ śraddāmayāḥ; mayāḥ means product; puruṣaḥ means the adult human being. So any adult human being is a product of the childhood sṛaddhā; the childhood value. That is why we always say, catch them young; like a plant, when a tree is in a plant condition; it is pliable, it is plastic, it is flexible; you can direct it in any way you want. And if you neglect the plant; and it grows wildly, thereafter once it becomes a tree, you cannot change it; you have only two choices; either you allow it as it is; or you have to uproot; you cannot change the direction of the hardened trunk of the tree. Similarly changing an adult is almost impossible, whereas changing a child is possible; therefore Kṛṣṇa says a human being is a product of his childhood values; and that is why I said a well-known saying which goes:

watch your thoughts, they become your words;
watch your words, they become your actions;
watch your actions, they become your habit;
watch your habit, it becomes your character;
and watch your character, it becomes your future personality.

There is no use of regretting later; better take care in the beginning. Therefore Kṛṣṇa says; yaha yat sṛaddhā; whatever a person values in his early stages of life; That is why parents have to give good values; that is why purāṇic stories were taught; when we were children; yaḥ yacchraddhaḥ; whatever a person values in his earlier days; सः एव sa: ēva saḥ; tad anurūpā ēva saḥ; sa: ēva saḥ means tad anurūpā, in keeping with those childhood values, his personality will develop.

And that alone is: As a person thinks, so he becomes. Thought is pliable and changeable and once it has become crystallised into character, they say Swamiji I want to stop that bad habit; but it is not possible. I want to stop that particular trend; I am not able to;

even though he tries to use his will power; all the will power fails because I have allowed that thought and that character to grow to such an extent; that it has become a Frankenstein, destroying myself. And therefore Arjuna, śṛaddhā is important; yaḥ yad śṛaddhā sa ēva saḥ.

यजन्ते सात्त्विका देवान् यक्षरक्षांसि राजसाः ।
प्रतान्भूतगणांश्चान्ये यजन्ते तामसा जनाः ॥ १७.४ ॥

yajantē sāttvikā dēvān yakṣarakṣāṁsi rājasāḥ |
prētān bhūtagaṇāṁścānyē yajantē tāmasā janāḥ || 17.4 ||

सात्त्विकाः sāttvikāḥ sattvic (people) यजन्ते yajantē worship देवान् dēvān the gods राजसाः rājasāḥ Rajasic (people) worship यक्षरक्षांसि yakṣarakṣāṁsi the yakṣas and rakṣāṁ अन्ये तामसाः जनाः anyē tāmasāḥ janāḥ Tāmasik people यजन्ते yajantē worship प्रेतान् च prētān ca the ghosts भूतगणान् bhūtagaṇān and the spirits.

4. Satvic (people) worship the gods. Rajasic (people) worship the yakṣas and rakṣasās. Tāmasic people worship the ghosts and the spirits.

Therefore an illiterate (means scripturally-illiterate) person can be either sātvic, rājasic or tāmasic, depending upon the character I have come with; I am born with; Now the question, of these three, which one is the best; which one is conducive to spiritual knowledge; sātвика śṛaddhā alone is a healthy śṛaddhā which is conducive to spiritual growth.

And therefore my question is how do I know, whether I have sātvic śṛaddhā, rajasic śṛaddhā or tāmasic śṛaddhā; so that if I have sātvic śṛaddhā i can nourish it; if I have rājasic śṛaddhā, I can gradually change it; if I have tāmasic śṛaddhā, I can immediately drop it; how do I know what type of śṛaddhā a person has?

Kṛṣṇa says, śṛaddhā or faith is an invisible thing; because it is a mental state; it is not physically perceptible. And since Śṛaddhā cannot be perceived; it has to be inferred through some other thing; whatever is not pratyakṣa gōcaram, we have to know through anumānam. If a person falls sick, doctor cannot know the sickness by seeing the body; because it is not physically visible and therefore he infers by taking the blood sample, etc. which is pratyakṣa; blood is pratyakṣa, he takes the sample and he has got some parameters; and if such a such things are there, it must be typhoid, jaundice, kidney problem, pressure, etc. Therefore, śṛaddhā will have to be inferred from the type of activity a person takes to. Śṛaddhā will have to be inferred from the type of activity. Any activity, we can take, where does he go on holidays; what types of books he reads; what type of friends he has; what type of foods he likes; that also he says; what type of movies, he goes to, what type of serials; that is important, அதை விட்டுப்பாயிட்டேனே! I forgot!! Everything can be used as a hētu to derive the sādyaṃ. But Kṛṣṇa here takes the type of pūja that he takes to; even from pūja we can find out what type of sṛaddhā he has;

How will the pūja help in knowing the sṛaddhā of a person? Every pūja or worship has three factors, Every pūja has three factors; and the three factors are:

No.1, the object of worship; what type of deity I worship. Dēvathā or object and

The second is mode of worship. Pūja can be done in several ways; what method of worship I am attracted to naturally; mode, in Sānskrīt, prakāraḥ; first one is Dēvathā; which dēvathai is attracted, which method is attracted

And the third one is the motive or bhāvana; through this pūja what do I expect to get; what do I say after māmōpatha; very important; mamōpatha samastha durita kṣyadvāra, sri paramēśvara prithartham; he will do it and add a list, that list will know what type of motive I have got.

These three things will determine whether the pūja is sātvic, rājasic or tāmasic; and whether the sṛaddhā is sātvic, rājasic or tāmasic; which Kṛṣṇa is enumerating in these verses.

In the fourth verse, Kṛṣṇa talks about the object of worship. The three types of deities. In our Vēdic pantheon, in Hindu pantheon of Gods, all other religion has got only one God, we have got innumerable deities. People say it is disadvantageous they say; it is a minus point in Hinduism, the other religion, they have got one God, which is not confusing; they say. But I would say Hinduism is great; Suppose you want to purchase a dress; which shop you will choose; one shop which sells only kavi vastram will only be available; but there is another shop, huge shop, all varieties of clothes, from Rs.100 to 10000, different colours, designer clothes, etc. which one you will vote for; you say Swamiji here there are so many choices; human-beings wants choice in everything; human being is choosy. Therefore whatever provides maximum choice is the best one; and in Hinduism, there is no problem, one has 33.3 crores dēvathās; you have to chose from; so animal god, man god, woman god, mixed god, animal-man, man-woman mixture; and all these deities are divided into three groups, sātvic dēvathāḥ, rājasa dēvathāḥ; and tāmasa dēvathāḥ.

Sātvic deities are those which will bless the devotee with spiritual growth; with values; with character; tad ātmani nirathē upadēśa sudharma tē mayi santhu; they bless me with values; with inner strength; they are called sātvic deities; They contribute to inner growth; in fact generally the deities that we worship. Rāma, Kṛṣṇa, Ayyappa, Devi, which our forefathers have chosen for us, are all sātvic deities.

And we have a second group of dēvathā called rājasic deities; who are supposed to bless the devotees with materialistic well-being. Yakṣa, kinnara, gandharva, siddha, uraga, all those dēvathās; yakṣa rakṣādi gaṇās, like Kubēra; many people like Kubēra, why you know!

I have told you when we were going to Badrinath; இது மறக்கவே மறக்காது!! I will not forget; somebody gave a coin; I thought he is giving gurudakṣiṇa but he said Swamiji in Badrinath, there is a Kubera; and you have to keep that coin there; and I thought he will give it to me; no, no, no, you have to bring it back, and hand over to me; that money will multiply. So Kubera is more popular than even poor Badrinath. So therefore kubērathi dēvathas are called rājasic deities.

And then we have got tamasic deities which are called prēta, bhūtha, piśaca, dākini, sākini, sarpa svapatha, vriścika, taskara drupradava, drupagathat; the list is there; they are used by the black magic people; all ghosts and spirits; which represents evil forces; negative forces, they all represent tāmasic deities, they are not used for my spiritual growth; they are not used even for my material growth; they are used for destroying other people.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa says sātvikāḥ dēvān yajantē; people with sātvic śṛaddhā, they worship the Lord and ask for

annapūrṇē sadāpūrṇē śamkaraprāṇa vallabhē, jnāna vairāgya sidhyartham bhikṣām dēhi ca pārvati.

What a beautiful prayer? Therefore sātvikāḥ, dēvān means sātвика dēvān yajantē; who will give amānitvam, adambitvam, or who will give daivi sampath;

Then rājasāḥ yakṣarakṣāṃsi yajantē; yajantē you have to supply; the rājasic people means people with rājasic values, they are religiously- materialistic people. Remember religious people themselves can be religiously-spiritual people or religious-materialistic people. What is the difference? Religious spiritual people use religion for spiritual growth; whereas religious-materialistic people will use religion for material growth and therefore rājasāḥ yakṣarakṣāṃsi yajantē.

And anyē tāmasāḥ janāḥ, the tāmasic people yajantē, they worship anyē, all other deities, who are they; prētāns, all the prētams, spirits, bhūthas, ghosts, all of them they worship, sprit, ghost etc. represent negative forces. They yajantē, which will come under black magic pūja; they are called in our tradition, abhicārika karmaṇi; or abhicāra karmaṇi. And they do that; and that is tāmasic śraddhā; based on what, the object of worship.

Similarly you can decide the type of śraddhā based on the motive as well as the mode of worship which will be explained in the next two verses, which we will see in the next class.

Hari Om

ॐ

The 17th chapter begins with a question from Arjuna. Arjuna imagines that a bhaktha a devotee who has got faith, who has got faith in pūja as an important religious sādhana, and therefore he performs pūja with śraddhā. Śraddhā sahitha pūjakāḥ. But the problem is even though he has got faith in the Lord and the pūja, he does not know the method of doing the pūja, because he has not studied the scriptures; So he is scripturally-illiterate person; so ajñā-śradhhālu-pūjakāḥ; a rare combination, scripturally illiterate, but full of faith and he performs the pūja in any way that he likes. And now Arjuna's question is: under what category will his Śraddhā come? It is a śraddhā which is mixed with mistaken pūja; even though Śraddhā is proper, the mode of pūja is improper, under what category will his śraddhā come? Because from one angle it should be sātvik, it is śraddhā; from another angle it cannot be sātvik, because it is full of mistakes. So what will be the categorization?

This is Arjuna's question for which Kṛṣṇa gave the answer; when a faithful devotee worships the Lord, the type of śraddhā that he enjoys will depend upon the type of mind that he has; the type of character that he has and since the mind will vary from individual to individual, the śraddhā will also vary. And therefore Kṛṣṇa said the illiterate (scripturally illiterate) person's śraddhā will come under three categories; it can be either sātvic, rājasic or tāmasic.

Now the question is; how will I know whether it is sātvic, rājasic or tāmasic śraddhā, because first śraddhā itself is an invisible faculty? Faith is an attribute of the mind; mind itself being invisible, faith which is the attribute of the mind is also apratyakṣam; dharṁiṇa ēva apratyakṣatvē katham dharmasya apratyakṣatvam syat. And therefore śraddhā is invisible, and if śraddhā itself is invisible; whether it is sātvic, rājasic or tāmasic, I have no way of knowing.

And therefore, Kṛṣṇa presents an alternative method by which we can infer this śraddhā; because what is not perceptibility available, can be known through inference. That you have got a great great grandfather, how do I know? Certainly not through perception; I know through the inference. If you are there solidly sitting, you must have parents; and your parents should have parents. How do I know? Through inference and for any inference I require data; and the data for your grandparents is what? You. So your physical presence that I see you and that becomes the clue for the existence of your grandfather.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa says that the type of śraddhā can be inferred based on three observations. And what are the three observations which will help in inferring the quality of faith. I told you in the last class.

One is the type of deity this devotee is attracted to. Because in vēdic pantheon of deity; in other religion it is not possible; only one is there; but in Hinduism we have got sātāvika dēvathāḥ; rājasa dēvathāḥ and tāmasa dēvathāḥ; or durdēvathā. Sātāvika dēvathās contributing to spiritual growth; rājasic dēvathās contributing to material growth and tāmasic dēvathā contributing to destruction, violence; as I said black magic, etc. And depending upon which deity attracts me; which deity becomes my īṣṭa dēvathā; I can know what type of śraddhā I have.

So one factor is the object of worship.

And second factor is the motive of worship, which I called saṅkalpa or uddēśyam; what is the motive of my worship; if the motive is spiritual growth; it is sātāvika, if it is material growth, it is rājasic, and if it is destruction of others, it is tāmasic. So the second is motive.

And the third one is what? The mode of worship and Kṛṣṇa is going to point out later. If the mode of worship involves torture of the body; hurting oneself or others; all such worship will come under tāmasic worship. And therefore the śraddhā will come under tāmasic śraddhā; the mode of worship will be violent.

And if it is a rājasic mode of worship, it will be a type of worship, in which lot of extrovert activities are there, It is heavily ritualistic. It is heavily extrovert; noisy; not only disturbing me, but even disturbing the neighborhood; that is rājasic worship; highly physically oriented; highly verbally oriented is rājasic.

And sātāvika worship is a worship which is more turned inwards; it is not highly physical and verbal but mostly it is mental; and it turns my mind inward. So thus depending upon the mode of worship, I can find out the type of śraddhā I have.

Of these three factors, Kṛṣṇa has enumerated the first factor in the fourth verse, which we completed in the last class; sātvik people love sātvik deities. In fact most of the popular deities we have are all sātvik; Rāma, Kṛṣṇa, Śiva, Viṣṇu, etc. are all sātvik. Yakṣarakṣamsi Kinnara gandharva etc.; they are all rājasic deities.

And spirits and ghosts who are invoked by going to the burial ground, cremation ground and oblations involve blood, etc. and generally the time pūja is midnight; everything is wrong; such types of worship invoking the deity in the skull, (recently they caught someone) all kinds of those dēvathās will come under tāmasic deities; Up to this we saw.

अशास्त्रविहितं घोरं तप्यन्ते ये तपो जनाः ।
दम्भाहङ्कारसंयुक्ताः कामरागबलान्विताः ॥ १७.५ ॥

[Aśāstravihitam ghōraṃ tapyantē yē tapō janāḥ |
dambhāhaṅkārasamyuktāḥ kāmarāgabalanvitāḥ || 17.5 ||](#)

ये जनाः yē janāḥ some people तप्यन्ते tapyantē practise घोरं तपः ghōraṃ tapaḥ severe austerity अशास्त्रविहितम् aśāstravihitam which is not prescribed by the scriptures दम्भाहङ्कारसंयुक्ताः dambhāhaṅkārasamyuktāḥ they are given to pretension and egoism कामरागबलान्विताः kāmarāgabalanvitāḥ and are possessed by the impulse of desire and attachment.

5. Some people practice severe austerity which is not prescribed in the scriptures. They are given to pretention and egoism, and are possessed by the impulse of desire and attachment.

In these two verses, Lord Kṛṣṇa talks about the rājasic and tāmasik forms of worship based on the mode and the motive. Kṛṣṇa does not segregate them; you have to classify appropriately.

Aśāstravihitam, rājasic and tāmasic worship involve violation of all the śāstric injunctions; violations of all the scriptural rules and regulations.

And ghōraṃ, ghōraṃ means terrible, frightening even to hear, you would have seen people in which they torture the body, putting hooks all over the body, and śulam through the tongue and all kinds of things, you cannot even see, how can you imagine doing that; and in the purāṇās, we hear people cutting their own body parts and cutting the head, cutting the tongue, etc. (if there are many!) and if you go to Himalayas and all, you can see all kinds of terrible things; one Swami we saw, on the way of Badrinath, he never sits or lies down; all the time standing; and he has got a wooden plank hanging from a tree branch; and how he is standing; everything he does sleeping also, he has to keep over that wooden plank and he has been standing there for days and months together, and his legs have swollen; and he is doing tapas. யாருக்கு என்ன ப்ரயோஜனம்; who is benefitted. All ignorance and illiteracy regarding religion and spirituality; and people also are illiterate, If anyone does anything extra ordinary, they consider it is very great and of course in front a cloth has been spread, you know for what purpose, every puts Rs.5, 10, Re.1, etc. this is clean torturing of the body and staying there up in the Himalayas, without proper clothing; and remaining in the cold Ganges waters. All these things many people mistake as tapas, but they are all ghōraṁ and tāmasic; and ghōraṁ tapas, janāḥ tapyantē.

And all these do for what purpose? Dambhāhaṅkārasaṁyuktāḥ, because of their publicity seeking, for pomp and show; to tell the public that I am a great tapasvi; so dambhā and ahaṅkāra, pride and vanity; saṁyuktāḥ.

And kāmarāgabalanvitāḥ; there desire is not mōkṣa at all; there desire is worldly name or fame or money; so kāma means desire for worldly things, rāga means attachment; and balām means power. You will see in the purāṇās most of the rākṣasās begin with tapas only and if you read the tapas, it will be ghōraṁ; and after several centuries or thousands of years, Brahma or, Viṣṇu or Śiva will come; and they will say: in TVs also you can see such things and they will say: I am pleased what do you want; and invariably they ask for certain powers; I should not die, they will say, the deity will say not possible; and they will ask for something and the moment they get the power, the first thing they do is go to heaven, dethrone Indra and take all Raṁbhā Ūrvaśi and kidnap them. For this tapas. So they are devotees; they are all religious people and so great devotees that Bhagavān they saw pratyakṣa. So seeing the Lord pratyakṣa does not make a person spiritual; a person can have Īśvara darśanam and still he can be a mahā materialistic or he can use even god to threaten other people and there are some rākṣasās who threaten the very Lord who gives them the boon. Like Bhasmāsura. On whosoever person's head I put my hand, he should die.

And Śiva, aśuthōṣi, we do not want to say, Idiot, because that is not correct. He is aśuthōṣi, therefore he just gives; recklessly, he fulfils the desire of the devotee; and Bhasmāsura, and I want to try to somewhere; nobody around, therefore I will keep it on your head itself, he said.

Therefore, remember, religion need not make a person spiritual. Materialistic religious people are also there; rākṣasic religious people are also; Vēdantic religious people also are there; therefore here these people are full of kāmarāgabalam; brutal strength Rāvaṇā had, Hiraṇyakaṣipu had Śiśupāla had. They were all worshippers of the Lord. This will come under what? Rājasic and tāmasic variety. And not only that.

कर्शयन्तः शरीरस्थं भूतग्राममचेतसः ।
मां चैवान्तः शरीरस्थं तान्विद्ध यासुरनिश्चयान् ॥ १७.६ ॥

karṣayantaḥ śarīrasthaṁ bhūtagrāmamacētaḥ|
mām caivāntaḥśarīrasthaṁ tān viddhyāsuraniścayān || 17.6 ||

6. These indiscriminate people torment the organs in the body as well as Me who reside in the body. Know them to be of āsura resolve.

Continuation of rājasic and tāmasic form of worship. Karṣayantaḥ, tormenting their body, starving their body too much, depriving the organs of the body of the required nutrition. Body is a gift from the Lord; I should not pamper the body alright; but I should not torture the body. Therefore both extremes are equally dangerous. One pampers and the other tortures. And therefore karṣayantaḥ means making the body weak, by over-fasting, never good for the system. Initially he can do all these, but later his health is shattered and with a shattered health, what type of religious or spiritual sādhana, he can do? Therefore destroying the body is never the aim of any type of pūja or vṛtham or tapas. It is a controlled austerity that is talked about so that I am not a slave to the body.

Torture is not the intention; mastery is the intention. Once in a while, monthly once Ēkādaśi upavāsam very good; but for days together; I do not eat; it is dangerous; Similarly, one day mounam good; avoid noise pollution; and others also will get peace of mind; but there are people who have not talked for 10 years.

And then you have to struggle to communicate, make gestures, write notes, etc. etc. all artificially done; Bhagavān has given us the mouth for communication; if I do not use that properly, Bhagavān will think, human birth is not what you require. One person went to the doctor and he said I have problem, the doctor said what is the problem, the man said that I will not tell it; and you are the doctor and you have to find it out; then the doctor gave a letter and asked him to go and see the other doctor; and the other doctor was a veterinary doctor. Naturally! Is it not? When you have mouth, why can't you clearly use it for communication. Once in a while maunam is very good. In fact, if you do not abuse our organ of speech, that is the best maunam. Anyway, we are going to deal with vāk tapas later.

So karśayantaḥ, over austerity, what? Bhūtha grāmam, means all the organs, each organ requires a particular nutrition, calcium, potassium, sodium, etc. If I do not give the food properly. In Rishikesh you will find all the Swamis take food from kṣētram; kṣētram means there are certain places, where they give food to sādhus and there are only two types of food; roti and dal and only variety is what; dal and rotti; this is the only change. Only order is change and there also dal will be floating here and there little bit and they live on that for a few years; initial stages it will be fine. Thereafter all sādhus have got varieties of health problems.

And that is how Swami Śivānanda went and served those sādhus. Before Swami Śivānanda went, they did not have even treatment; they all suffered and died of sickness. With a sick body, what type of sādhana one can practice. That's how he went and served. Therefore the body needs nutrition. The body need not be pampered but body has to be taken care of. So this person in the name of tapas, what does he do; bhūtha gramam; grama means group, bhūtha means organs, bhūtha grāmam, the group of organs, like heart, lungs, kidney, pancreas, brain, etc. All of them they torment; acētaṣaḥ. All because of what; they do not know the importance of the body; if the wall is not there, one cannot draw pictures. Without body nothing can be done; Śārīram ādhyam khalu dharma sādhanam. When Parvathi does tapas, to get Lord Śiva as husband, in one of her avatharās, she is doing tapas, and Lord Śiva himself and comes and he talks to Parvathi, and Kalidāsa in that particular portion says:

अभिक्रियार्थम् सुलभं शमित्कुशं, जलान्यपि स्तान विधि क्षामानि ते ।
अभि स्वशक्त्या तपसि प्रवर्त्यसे, शरीरं अध्यम् खलु धर्म साधनम् ॥

abhikriyārtham sulabhaṁ śamitkuśaṁ, jalānyapi stāna vidhi kṣāmāni tē |
abhi svaśktyā tapasi pravartyasē, śārīraṁ adhyam khalu dharma sādhanam |

Do you have good water? மெட்ராஸில் தபஸ் பண்ணினானோ திரியலை! Śiva asks do you have good water; do you get all the things needed; abhi svaśktyā, do you have enough health and strength to practice your sādhana. And why? There he says śārīraṁ adhyam khalu dharma sādhanam. Body is the first instrument of dharma;

Therefore acētaṣaḥ, unintelligent people, they neglect the physical health; and by doing that, मां चैवा māṁ caivā karśayantaḥ; karśayantaḥ, you have to repeat again. Not only they are tormenting themselves, they are tormenting, wounding the Lord also. Insult to the body, is insult shown towards the Lord. Therefore Kṛṣṇa says they are indirectly hurting me. Why do we say; they are hurting the Lord? Two reasons, once when the temple is ill-treated; it is as good as ill-treating the Lord. Dēhō dēvalaya prōktha, jīvō dēva sanātana. It is ill treatment of the Lord and the second reason is ill-treating the body is violation of the duty given by the Lord in the scriptures. Lord has given in the scriptures our duty, and one of the duties is taking care of the body. Insult of the Lord; therefore mān caivāntaḥ śarīrasthaṁ who is seated in their own body.

They are hurting, tān, all such devotees are āsuraniścayān. They are devotees of āsuric resolve, negative resolve, violent resolve, it will come under rājasic and tāmasic śraddhā.

So with this the three types of śraddhā topic is over; and you have to add the motive also; Kṛṣṇa has not said here; we have to add. Any type of pūja for spiritual growth is sātvik, for material benefit is rājasic, for harming others is tāmasic.

Verse 17.7

आहारस्त्वपि सर्वस्य त्रिविधो भवति प्रियः ।
यज्ञस्तपस्तथा दानम् तेषां भेदमिमं शृणु ॥ १७.७ ॥

āhārastvapi sarvasya trividhō bhavati priyaḥ |
yajñastapastathā dānam tēṣāṁ bhēdamimam śṛṇu || 17.7 ||

आहारः āhāraḥ food प्रियः priyaḥ liked by, सर्वस्य sarvasya by every one भवति तु अपि bhavati tu api is also त्रिविधः trividhaḥ threefold तथा यज्ञः tathā yajñaḥ so also are yajñāha तपः tapaḥ austerity दानम् dānam and charity ऋणु ṛṇu hear तेषाम् इमं भेदम् tēṣām imam bhēdam about their division.

7. Food liked by everyone, is also threefold. So also are Yajñā, austerity and charity. Hear about their division.

With the previous verse, Lord Kṛṣṇa has answered Arjuna's question; and therefore really speaking, the 17th chapter must be over; even the title is śraddhā traya vibhāga. Arjuna asked about śraddhā; Kṛṣṇa has answered, Om tat sat must have come.

But Kṛṣṇa himself voluntarily chooses to add some more items; some more topic he chooses to discuss, for which Kṛṣṇa gives an introduction in this verses; Hey Arjuna, I will talk about four more topics, which are very very relevant for a spiritual-seeker. What are those four items?

Āhāraḥ; the food that a person consumes; is also of three types; trividhā bhavathi. Trividhā means sātvik, rājasic and tāmasic categories are there; in the type of food that we eat; sarvasya, a person eats.

And the yajñāḥ; the type of pūja that a person performs. Even though Kṛṣṇa has talked about pūja before, it is from the stand point of śraddhā that is talked about before. Here Kṛṣṇa wants to directly talk about pūja, therefore yajñāḥ, worship is also trividha, three types, sātvik, rājasic and tāmasic.

Then tapaḥ, means austerity; penance, is also of three types.

Then finally, dānam.

All these four are very very important for a spiritual-seeker. Dānam means charity. Charity is very good; even in charity there are three types, sātvika, rājasa, tāmasa dānam and tēṣaṁ bhēdam śṛṇu; may you know their classification; their category.

And the general rule is a sātvik person will be naturally attracted to sātvik food; and a sātvik yajña; and sātvik tapas, and sātvik dāna; because as your mind is, so will be your desire; Therefore what is sātvik food, very easy definition is whatever food a sātvik person is attracted to. Problem is who is a sātvik person?

Similarly what is sātvik yajña? Whatever be the yajña, a sātvik person is attracted, Therefore Kṛṣṇa says trividhā priyaḥ bhavathi. A person depending upon the temperament is attracted towards one of the three types of food. And from that description, I will be able to know where I stand; and also I can regulate my life; And therefore Kṛṣṇa introduces them.

Śṛṇu; may you carefully listen to them. So hereafter, we will get three types of āhāra. Same order He will say; three types of yajñās; three types of dānam, and three types of tapas. This is to going to be topic of the following verses. We will see

आयुःसत्त्वबलारोग्य-सुखप्रीतिविवर्धनाः

रस्याः स्निग्धाः स्थिरा हृद्याः आहाराः सात्त्विकप्रियाः ॥ १७.८ ॥

rasyāḥ snigdḥāḥ sthirā hr̥dyā āhārāḥ sātṭvikapriyāḥ || 17.8 ||

आहाराः āhārāḥ those foods which आयुः सत्त्वबलायोग्य सुखप्रीतिविवर्धनाः āyuh satvabalāyōgya sukhaprītivivardhanāḥ - which increase longevity, mental strength, physical strength, health, comfort and pleasure, रस्याः rasyāḥ which are delicious स्निग्धाः snigdḥāḥ not dry स्थिराः sthirāḥ nourishing हृद्याः hr̥dyāḥ and pleasing सात्त्विकप्रियाः sātṭvikapriyāḥ are liked by sātṭvic (people)

8. Those food which increase longevity, mental strength, physical strength, health, comfort and pleasure, which are delicious, not dry, nourishing and pleasing are liked by sātṭvic (people).

So in these three verses: 8, 9 and 10, Lord Kṛṣṇa deals with sātvik rājasic and tāmasic foods respectively. One of the greatness of our vēdic tradition is, in this tradition, even our natural and instinctive activities are elevated to the level of spiritual sādhanā. In addition to the special spiritual sādhanas, there are many special spiritual sādhanas, but one uniqueness is even our natural activities, even our instinctive mundane worldly activities, our scriptures elevate into spiritual sādhana, by appropriate modification.

One of the most instinctive activity is what? Most fundamental and instinctive activity is an activity which starts at the time of birth; and an activity which will continue up to death, and which is an activity maintained throughout the life; can you guess what is that activity; even sleep, you continue. That is breathing; and it is not only an instinctive activity of the human being, in fact, it is the most fundamental activity of all the living beings; that is why they are all called prāṇi. Means what? Prāṇithi iti prāṇin. And the glory of our scriptures is they point out that if you deliberately practice this instinctive operation, you deliberately practice in a regulated manner; and with a proper attitude, even the breathing can become a spiritual sādhana.

Can you think of it anywhere else; if you deliberately in a regulated manner, with a proper attitude, you do the most fundamental action of breathing, even that becomes an sādhana; which is called prāṇāyāmaḥ? Prāṇāyāma is transmutation of instinctive activity into spiritual sādhana. You deliberately breath in; and hold it for some time; and you deliberately breathe out. In fact only when you start prāṇāyāma, you are doing something called breathing; nobody knows that they are breathing; And when it stops also, only others will know. There is no chance.

So this deliberate regulated breathing is one of the most beautiful disciplines invented by the vēdic tradition; and they say it is one of the most wonderful disciplines for health. In readers digest there was an article a few months before, the title of the article was "Health under your nose" and he has talked about the glory of prāṇāyāma; and then at the end he has written this wonderful discipline has been (written by an American, if they say only we listen) and he has said that he has been invented by the Indians centuries before; and there also they prescribe prāṇāyāma only for physical health; whereas in our tradition, prāṇāyāma is converted into an religious and spiritual sādhana. In the fourth chapter, while Kṛṣṇa enumerates the varieties of yajñās or pūjas, one of the pūja is

प्राणापानगती रुद्ध्वा प्राणायामपरायणाः || ४- २९ ||

[apānē juhvati prāṇaṁ prāṇē'pānaṁ tathā'parē |
prāṇāpānagatī ruddhvā prāṇāyāmaparāyaṇāḥ || 29 ||](#)

It is converted into a yajña called prāṇāyāma yajña and if you change your attitude by chanting the name of the Lord; which is called sagarbha prāṇāyāma; fourth chapter I have told, Om̐ bhu, Om̐ Bhuva,... or Rāma, Rāma, Kṛṣṇa or Nāma śivāya, Nārāyaṇa, something then that becomes a type of pūja and in our scriptures for some types of pāpas or sins, prāṇāyāma itself is prescribed as a type of prayāścittam. Especially for sanyasis; they do not have to money to do prayāścitta karmas; And the sanyasi cannot do rituals also, So ritualistic prayāścittams are not possible. For many of the violation of the sanyāsa-āśrama dharma, (he has no other job and he can sit catching the nose), So therefore, the prayāścittam prescribed for some of the slips from sanyāsa-āśrama dharma is prāṇāyāma; three times, eleven times, 108 times, etc. What I want to say is that the most natural karma is converted.

What is the next most natural activity, after breathing? Eating is the next most natural and universal activity; of all living beings; the glory of our tradition is they have converted even eating into a form of spiritual sādhana, if it is practiced deliberately with proper attitude. Eating becomes a yajña and in the fifteenth chapter we saw aham Vaiśvānarō bhūthva prāṇinām dēha māsrithā. Lord is in my stomach as Vaiśvānarā; and whatever I am eating is an offering, then the eating is called praṇāgnihōtram. Breathing becomes prāṇāyāma deliberately done; eating becomes praṇāgnihōtram.

And even bathing which is the next natural activity, which not only human-beings practice; even many animals have the habit of bathing; that bathing also is converted into an yajña in our tradition; it is abhiṣēkam of the Lord who is seated inside; that is why we chant.

गंगे च यमुने चैव गोदावरि सरस्वति
नर्मदे सिन्दु कावेरि, जलेस्मिन् सन्निदिम् कुरु ॥

[gaṅgē ca yamunē caiva godāvāri sarasvati
narmadē sindu kāvēri, jalēsmin sannidim kuru ||](#)

Deliberately take bath and look upon the water, gaṅga or Yamuna and we pour water uttering the name of the Lord, sthāna is one of the nithya pūja karma, because it purifies not only the physical body, but it also purifies the mind.

So thus vēda converts our natural activities into yajña and āhara yajña is one of the important types of spiritual sādhana. And therefore Kṛṣṇa divides them into three categories. This categorisation of the food can be from different angles. We can take four factors into account to determine the type;

one is the source of food; our tradition gave lot of importance to the very source of food from where it comes, and who cooks the food, and what is the attitude, is it for commercial purposes, or it is done out of love and compassion, who cooks, what is the attitude with which it is cooked; and who serves the food and what is the attitude, etc. what attitude, all these things we give importance because according to śāstra, when the food is received, depending upon the source, we are receiving the invisible vibrations or puṇya-pāpam also. We are not only receiving the physical nourishment, we are receiving the spiritual nourishment also, depending upon the source. And if the source is negative, it is going to add pāpam to me, and that pāpam is called asat prathigraha pāpaḥ; pāpam; asat prathigraham means, asat means what? A person or a source, which is impure is asat prathigraha means receiving or taking food from an impure source.

And that is why in those days, they generally avoided taking food from outside. Nowadays eating out is a big thing; everything considers it as very important; and that is why any number of hotels come and all are full; and they generally avoid it, because you do not know how it is cooked, who is cooking, and the attitude will be not 'service' and done with a grumbling attitude and out of commercial interests; not cooked with love and respect, the very owner has only a commercial motive; and therefore they said parānnam prāṇasamkatam. Therefore avoid eating out, if you can; but if that is possible, from angle they say, asat prathigraha can pollute. So therefore one factor is what? Source.

And therefore in the next day bathing, they say if you utter the name of the Lord; not only the water will wash your body, asat prathigraha pāpam is washed, if you chant the nama of the Lord; There is an agamarṣaṇa sūktha;

अद्याशना दति पाना, यच्च उग्रात् प्रतिग्रहात् ।
तन्नो वरुणो राजा पाणिनायाह्य अघमर्षतु ॥

adyāśanā dati pānā, yacca ugrāt pratigrahāt |
tannō varuṇo rājā pāṇināyāhya aghamarṣatu ||

ugrāt pratigrahāt, all junk food from all sources, soft and hard drinks, all things, Let Varuṇa wash off all the pāpams; so that I can take fresh things today (not in that meaning), Anything you can abuse, be careful; and in the daily sandhyā vandanam also, asataha prathigraha svahaha; asat prathigraha is considered to be a pāpa. So therefore source.

The second factor is the quality of food, the quality of food first is the source, the second is the quality of food. There also they talk about sātvic, rājasic and tāmasic; Kṛṣṇa is going to elaborate on that; but generally we consider the type of food that has been coming down in our tradition is well designed. Therefore normal regular vegetarian food comes under sātvic.

Therefore any serious spiritual-seeker should be a vegetarian according to our śāstra. And not only that; any food that is offered to the Lord will be sātvic in quality. These are the two general rules; vegetarian food, which comes after offering to the Lord; the qualities. The other details Kṛṣṇa will tell and we will see that later.

The third one is the quantity; very important. Quantity of the food, this I have discussed in the 6th chapter, and I do not want to again go into the details; so the first rule is, eat only when you are hungry, food is not a sense pleasure, food is meant for removing the hunger. And suppose you ask, Swamiji if I am not hungry, how much I should eat; இது எப்படி இருக்கு? How is this?! Like that person; the doctor said, in the night eat only two chappathis; then this person asked after dinner or before dinner. The doctor said during dinner. Therefore, if you are not hungry, to save yourselves and the society, do not eat; and if you are hungry, how much to eat; sufficient to remove the hunger; in fact, according to śāstra, a little bit hunger should be there; One more dōṣa if you can eat, stop at that time; பசித்திரு; தனித்திரு; விழித்திரு. Paṣittiru; taṇittiru; viḷittiru; three sādhanas they tell in Tamil. பசித்திரு paṣittiru, a little bit of hunger should be there constantly; தனித்திரு taṇittiru, learn to be alone for sometime daily; விழித்திரு viḷittiru, means what: be alert; or otherwise I will be sleepy or sleeping. Only two avasttas will be there; So therefore, the next one is quantity.

Then the last one is mode of eating; mode or manner of eating, we will use appropriate manner; if we remember that eating is a form of yajña. It is a form of pūja; therefore I reverentially approach the process of eating.

first rule is I do the pūja sitting; It is started there; I do the pūja sitting; therefore I am supposed to eat sitting and not running; not standing; buffet, one has to stand and walk, all those things; because that is not the method in which I do the pūja, and also the attitude. So thus the mode of eating, that is the attitude is what? What it is an offering going to the Lord inside.

And therefore; annam na nindyāt; annam na paricakṣītā; reverentially approach, at the time of eating also, I am not supposed to indulge in any other activity. Imagine you doing the pūja while talking on the phone or to the neighbor, etc. How will it be; what is more insulting than this. Therefore during pūja we are not supposed to do anything simultaneously. Similarly, I do not say that you should not talk at all; at least the content of the talk, like scolding someone, etc. it is not supposed to be good; reverentially approach. Details in the next class.

Hari Om

Lord Kṛṣṇa answered Arjuna's question regarding śraddhā by categorising śraddhā into three types; sātvic, rājasic and tāmasic, based on the mental make-up of a person. When a person uses his śraddhā to the Lord and scriptures for spiritual progress, then it is called sātāvika śraddhā; when a person uses his faith in the scriptures and God for material benefits, it is called rājasa śraddhā, and when a person uses the faith in the Lord and scriptures for the negative result or harming other people, then it is called tāmasa śraddhā. And there are differences also in the mode of worship, these people resort to and also the type of dēvathās these people are attracted towards.

And with this Kṛṣṇa concludes his śraddhā analysis and without Arjuna's asking, Kṛṣṇa himself voluntarily promises to discuss four more topics for which he gave the introduction in the seventh verse and the four topics are āhāraḥ food; yajña worship; tapaḥ austerity; and dānam charity. And Kṛṣṇa himself divides them into three types, sātāvika, rājasa and tāmasa, and Kṛṣṇa discusses them in the same order as he has introduced in the seventh verse and in that order, the first topic is āhāraḥ, or food and in the three verses, 8th, 9th and 10th, Lord Kṛṣṇa talks about sātāvika, rājasic and tāmasic food respectively.

And we should remember that according to our scriptures, the food that we eat has got a great influence in the individuality. As I said, they talk about the source of food and its influence in the person and the second is the quantity of food and its influence and the third is the mode of eating and its influence and finally the quality of food and its influence.

I talked about the source; if it is a sātāvika source, then it will influence us positively; and therefore they generally avoid taking food from unknown sources as much as possible; of course it may not be possible for all, because of the type of profession; but if there is a choice; they say, they take food from a known source. And when it is cooked at home itself, there is no risk at all and also we have a tradition when the ladies cook the food, if they cook (I do not know!) when they cook the food, they have the habit of chanting the slōkās; I do not know whether you have experienced or whether it is continued nowadays; many slōkās they know by heart. While cooking they chant; twofold benefit, one is they know it; and they can keep in their memory, and the other is with the Lord's nama, food is cooked; then it is the most sātāvika food imaginable; because the person is a well-wisher, after all the mother, the heart is clean, the motive is good, and with Lord's nama in the mouth, it is cooked, the children can be but sātāvika only; it will have a tremendous influence. So therefore source of food they ingested; asāt prathigraḥ, they generally criticise.

And the second is quantity I said; moderation in the amount of intake, and also in the frequency, how many times; if at all there is a gap given; if there is no gap, you cannot say, how many times. So moderation in quantity and frequency is the second rule we saw in the 6th chapter.

The third aspect is the mode in which we eat, and the scriptures point out the approach should be such that the very eating should be taken as a form of ritual; a ritual in which the food is offered to the Vaiśvanarā Lord who is inside our stomach:

अयम् अग्निर् वैश्वानरः, योयम् अन्तपुरुषे, येनातम् अन्नम् पच्यते, इति अन्तर् विद्यते, तस्यै व घोषो भवति ।

ayam agnir vaiśvanaraḥ yōyam antapuruṣē, yēnātam annam pacyatē, iti antar vidyatē, tasyai va ghōṣō bhavati |

In Bṛhadarāṇya upaniṣad a special upāsana is prescribed upon the Vaiśvanāra Lord who is seated in our stomach, digesting the food; and therefore eating is looked upon as prāṇāgni hōtram; and if eating is a form of ritual; it is reverentially approached, beginning of eating is prayerful and the process of eating is prayerful and the conclusion of eating is also prayerful. It starts with amṛtham upastharaṇamasi. I spread with amṛtham. And then after the food is covered with amṛtham, amṛtham abidhānam asi. First you spread with amrutham, then again you close it with amṛtham with such a prayerful attitude, food is taken; and not only the mode is sacred, whatever is served in the leaf or plate; that is also looked upon as the Lord himself.

सो अन्नम् ब्रह्मेति व्यजानात्; अन्नात् देव कल्मिमानि भूतानि जायन्ते, अन्नेन जाथानि जीवन्ति; अन्नम् प्रयन्तत् अभिसंविशन्तीती;

अन्नम् ब्रह्म; रसो विष्णुः, भोक्ता देवो महेश्वरः । इति सन्चिन्त्य भुञ्जानः अन्नम् दोषै न लिप्यते ॥

sō annam brahmēti vyajānāt; annāt dēva kalmimāni bhūtāni jāyantē, annēna jāthāni jīvanti; annam prayantāt abhisamviśantīti;

annam brahma; rasō viṣṇuḥ, bhoktā dēvō mahēśvaraḥ | iti sancintya bhujñānaḥ annam dōṣai na lipyatē ||

There will neither be spiritually poisoning, nor there will be physically poisoning, if a person approaches eating in a prayerful manner. The source is important, the quantity is important, frequency is important, the mode of eating is important; and above all; more importantly the very quality of food Kṛṣṇa wants to highlight in these verses. Because according to the scriptures, āhāra śuddhau, sātva śuddhiḥ.

Chandōgya upaniṣad, 7th chapter, bhūma vidya, at the end of the brahma vidya teaching, the Upaniṣad says that āhāra śuddhau, sātva śuddhi; if the food is pure, it will make the mind pure; sātva śuddhau, dhṛuva smṛti, if the mind is pure, a person will be able to receive the knowledge, self-knowledge and also retain it; dhṛuva smṛti; and smṛti labdē, sarva granthinām, vipra mōkṣaḥ. When a person gets a steady knowledge, that is liberation. And thus there is a connection between the food and liberation; and therefore do not take it for granted. We do not say food itself will give liberation, then you won't come to the next class; food also is an important contributory factor in spiritual pursuit.

And then in the 6th chapter of Chandōgya upaniṣad, the teacher says; the food that we consume has got three layers; stūla bhāga; madhyama bhāgaḥ and sūkṣma bhāgaḥ. The stūla bhāgaḥ, the gross part of the food will only cater to the taste and it will be evacuated as a waste; that is called stūla bhāgaḥ, the gross part; then there is a madhyama bhāga, the middle portion, which is supposed to cater to the physical nourishment, in the form of carbohydrates, fats, minerals, salts, etc. The madhyama bhāga does not contribute to the taste; but they contribute to the physical nourishment. And then the śāstra says, there is a sūkṣma bhāgaḥ and the sūkṣma bhāga, subtle part of the food, will contribute the nourishment of the sūkṣma śarīram; the type of mind that we enjoy; whether we have a calm, a spiritual- friendly mind, or whether we have a highly restless extrovert mind, and similarly our sense organs are alert or dull, all the subtle 17 organs of sūkṣma śarīram, are nourished by the sūkṣma bhāgaḥ;

annamaśitam trēdhā vidhīyatē tasya yaḥ sthaviṣṭhō dhātustatpurīṣam bhavati yō madhyamastanmāmsam yō:'ṇiṣṭhastanmanah || Chandogya 6. 5. 1 ||

So whatever you consume; stūla, madhyama and sūkṣma bhāgaḥ cater; and if a person is interested in the nourishment of the sūkṣma śarīram also, which is very very important for spiritual sādhana.

He should choose sātvic diet which will be good for sūkṣma śarīra growth; if he consumes or tāmasic food, it may nourish the physical body, but it will be working against the subtle bodies, spiritual growth. And therefore sātvic diet is supposed to be conducive to spiritual growth;

And then the next question is what is sātvic? What is rājasic? And what is tāmasic diet? And as I said we can have a general rule, generally the vegetarian diet is sātvic, which is in our vēdic tradition. Parāmpara food is sātvic; non-veg food and drinks like alcohol etc. They are considered to be highly rājasic and tāmasic and therefore a serious spiritual-seeker should avoid them and confine to vegetarianism. And of course within vegetarian food itself, there are sātvic, rājasic, tāmasic, etc; we need not go to that, because now the vegetarianism itself is in problem; I do not go into further details; if people become vegetarians, especially spiritual-seeker s and that too serious spiritual-seeker s, if they give up meat and alcohol it is a very very important in spirituality.

And thereafter Kṛṣṇa gives certain general rules regarding the diet. In the 8th verse, sātvik diet is defined. What is that? He says, āyuhṣattvabalārōgya-sukhaprītivardhanāḥ; sātvik diet will nourish all these; What are they?

Āyuh, means longevity; sātvic diet will increase the longevity.

Then sātvam, means manō balam, the strength of the mind; is called sātvam, mental strength, mental resistance, mental immunity to violent emotions is called sātvam.

Then balam is physical strength.

Then arōgyam, health, so generally vegetarians are more healthy; the chances of diseases are very very very low in vegetarianism. Of course vegetarian congress people are there; books and books are written on vegetarianism; I do not want get into that; we can read books. They have clearly scientifically and statistically proved that all organs are generally healthy in vegetarianism. Therefore arōgyam.

Then sukham means what, the internal relaxation; comfort; physical and mental comfort; freedom from tension, stress and strain, etc. are called here sukham; long-term comfort in life,

Then prīti; prīti means comfort and happiness, even at the time of eating. So prīti stands for the comfort at the time of eating; sukham refers to the comfort after.

Because in rājasic and tāmasic variety, one may enjoy the food at the time of eating; kāra śāram, next day you will understand in the bathroom; so later, problems will be more. They will eat then, but suffer later; therefore, sātvik diet means while eating and later also, there is a lightness in the body and lightness in the mind also.

So sukhaprītivardhanāḥ; all these things increase if it is a sātvik diet.

And rasyāḥ, means delicious, it is only we have to develop the habit, a person who is not used to that, he will say, what is in vegetarian diet; but if a person develops a taste, it is very very delicious and also rasa stands for sweet. Sweet is generally considered to be sātvic in a limited quantity; very careful; one kg sugar do not consume in the home, saying it is sātvic. Sweet in limited quantity is called sātvic; rasyāḥ, means sweet and delicious.

Then snigdḥāḥ, food which are not very dry; that is sufficient oil or ghee is there, ghee is also supposed to be a sātvic dish. Again be careful, within moderation, according to śāstra, ghee is very good in moderation. So snigdḥāḥ, which is not too dry.

Then sthirāḥ, which are nourishing physically also. Not only it should help me in nourishing my sūkṣma śarīram, it should take care of my physical need, there is a very big misconception that the vegetarian food will not give all the required nourishment. And they have medically and scientifically proved that all the nourishment we can happily and comfortably get through vegetarianism. Therefore vēda prescribes that only; sthirāḥ; physically nourishing.

And ḥṛdhyāḥ; means what? even visually pleasing; therefore sātvik food not only it should be good for the tongue; according to śāstra, even to see that one should feel that one should consume when seen. Therefore ḥṛdhyāḥ, even pleasing to the sight; sight foods are sātvik foods and if a person is sātvik person, he will be naturally attracted to such foods. And therefore Kṛṣṇa says sātвика priyā. All sātvic people naturally like this food; this is sātविका āhārah.

Then what about rājasic diet; Kṛṣṇa gives:

कट्वम्ललवणात्युष्णतीक्ष्णरूक्षविदाहिनः |
आहारा राजसस्येष्टा दुःखशोकामयप्रदाः || १७- ९ ||

kaṭvamlalavaṇātyuṣṇatīkṣṇarūkṣavidāhinaḥ |
āhārā rājasasyeṣṭā duḥkhaśōkāmāyapradāḥ || 17.9 ||

आहाराः āhārāḥ Those foods, कट्वम्ललवणात्युष्ण तीक्ष्णरूक्षविदाहिनः kaṭvamlalavaṇātyuṣṇa tīkṣṇarūkṣavidāhinaḥ which are very bitter, sour, saltish, hot pungent, dry, and burning दुःखशोकामयप्रदाः duḥkhaśōkāmāyapradāḥ and which cause pain, sorrow and disease, इष्टाः iṣṭāḥ are liked राजसस्य rājasasya by the Rājasic (people)

9. Those foods which are very bitter, sour, saltish, hot, pungent, dry and burning, which cause pain, sorrow and disease are liked by Rājasic people.

So rājasic food Kṛṣṇa defines here; he says; other than the sweet, because sweet is considered sātvik, other than the sweet, all the other tastes, of ṣad rasam, all the other five rasās in excess is considered rājasic. What are they, athi katu, in the slōkā, it is difficult to read; it should be split like this; kaṭu, aṁla, lavaṇa, ati uṣṇa, tīkṣṇa, rūkṣa, vidāhinaḥ, in the ati uṣṇa, that ati should be added to every one; ati kaṭu, ati aṁla, ati lavaṇa, ati uṣṇa, ati tīkṣṇa, ati rūkṣa, ati vidāhinaḥ.

Even as you pronounce you can see it is kada bada; see the reading of the sātविका, even the reading is sātविक; so ati katu means what extremely bitter; ati aṁla, very sour, ati lavaṇa, too much saltish; And ati uṣṇa, very hot; hot is here temperature; very very hot and they do not talk about very cold, because perhaps in India, we do not have that problem. We should add extremely sub-zero ice-cream, problem. Therefore extreme cold and extreme heat also is not good; the food should be closer to the body temperature.

And therefore ati uṣṇa, then ati tīkṣṇa, here tīkṣṇa very hot in the sense of chilli hot; kāram; ati tīkṣṇa too much chilli; too much avakāi, too much chutneys, if you do not know, take any Andhra chutney, you will know what is the 7th heaven, immediate experience and water will come out of all the holes, nose, ears, and eyes; I am talking from experience; Somebody gave some chutney and I only touched with the tip of my finger; and touched and immediately I was affected; they say generally they neutralise it with lot of ghee; generally they say it is not good, ati tīkṣṇa, kāram makes you angry; therefore you become, that is why angry person, hot tempered we say.

Tīkṣṇa, then rūkṣa, means very very dry; with no oil, no ghee, nothing, very dry food.

And vidāhinaḥ; any type of food which burns or eats up corrodes the inner tender organs; certain types of food are supposed to corrode the inner lining of the stomach, like the mustard etc. some people like the mustard, as they pick and eat it with interest. They say too much of mustard is also not good; it will come under vidāhi, that which it eats inner tender organs; all these come under rājasic food and a rājasic person generally like that food only.

If you give him sātvik food, he will say: this is only bland; give me some chillis and they will eat chilli directly. Somebody I saw chilli, garlic and mustard oil combination, they will enjoy; anyway rājasasya iṣṭaḥ; they are liked by rājasic people, and they cause duḥkhaśokakāmayapradāḥ. These types of food will have adverse effect, short term as well as long-term.

Duḥkham stands for short term adverse effect, like what: the eyes' tears coming

And śoka is long-term, the system also will get spoiled, so long-term adverse effect and also āmayapradāḥ; it will cause varieties of diseases like ulcer, etc.

But these people will be highly active; so if it has got an advantage or plus point, they are so dynamic, it will make the person highly active, he can work 20 hours a day. That is the plus point; but the minus point, highly un-conducive for spirituality; because that person cannot sit an hour for vēdānta śravaṇam. Or he cannot sit for 15 minutes for japa or pūja; and therefore spiritually disadvantageous, materially may be advantageous; duḥkhaśokakāmayapradāḥ; this is rājasic food.

Then comes the tāmasic one in the next verse:

Verse 17.10

यातयामं गतरसं पूति पर्युषितं च यत् ।
उच्छिष्टमपि चामेध्यं भोजनं तामसप्रियम् ॥ १७.१० ॥

Yātayāmaṁ gatarasaṁ pūti paryuṣitaṁ ca yat |
ucchiṣṭamapi cāmēdhyāṁ bhōjanaṁ tāmasapriyam || 17.10 ||

भोजनम् bhōjanam That food यद् यातयामम् yad yātayāmam which is not properly cooked
गतरसम् gatarasam which lacks nourishments पूति pūti which is putrid पर्युषितं च अपि paryuṣitaṁ ca api stale उच्छिष्टम् ucchiṣṭam or left over च अमेध्यम् ca amēdhyāṁ and which is impure तामसप्रियम् tāmasapriyam is liked by tāmasic people.

10. That food which is not properly cooked, which lacks nourishments, which is putrid, stale or leftover, and which is impure is liked by tāmasic (people).

So tāmasic food is defined here. Yātayāmam; means undercooked or uncooked food. Tradition says cooking is important, Agni sambanda is important; because Agni also is looked upon as a deity and therefore that brings about a taste; not only it removes all the bacteria and other things, they say water also has to be boiled, milk has to be boiled; cooking will remove not only physical toxins; it is supposed to remove spiritual toxins also; therefore salad and all in trouble now. Therefore, it is cooking is considered important. So yātayāmam means under cooked or uncooked food will come under tāmasic variety;

Then gatarasam; over cooked food; it is cooked so much that all the nourishment has evaporated; or it got mixed with water and the water they throw away the vegetable they keep; it has no nourishment at all; and therefore over cooked food also comes under tāmasic variety. Gatarasam; nutrient-less, nourishment less food.

Then pūti means the food which has become foul smelling by keeping for a long time; so pūti means durgandha yuktam, foul smelling.

Paryuṣitaṁ, food that is kept overnight; outside the fridge; or inside the fridge; any food which is kept overnight is considered to be tāmasic food. Ladies will get angry, if I tell all these, because I hear that nowadays they cook for 7 days at one go; I do not know; therefore even dates are marked and then it is kept, micro oven, heat and eat, heat and eat, every time.

And the primary reason that is not accepted is it is said that the food is cooked not only for our eating; the food is cooked for offering to the deity at home; we may say the food is not spoiled and I like it and I can eat; but they said that should not be done because you cannot give the old micro-ovened food to Bhagavān. The sorry Lord!!

Since the Lord at home cannot be yesterday and last week's or last month's or last year's; last year's things also they can keep, they say. I do not want to dwell on that; therefore paryūṣitaṃ is kept overnight, daily something has to be cooked to offer to the Lord, because we look upon the Lord as the live Lord and therefore that Lord has to be worshipped only then, the home will be a temple. And minus that cooking, it is no more a temple, it become some kind of lodge or building and you have to convert home into a temple, these things are important; but nowadays I do not how far such things are feasible; because everybody is working; cooking is not there at all; fast food has taken over.

As somebody said the best wife is one who knows the best foods liked by her husband and also the hotels which supply them. Can you understand; therefore fast foods have come; if I talk, they will say that I am still in the 17th century, etc. therefore at least out of academic interest; it is nice to know the v̄edic concept of daily cooking; supposed to be important. And therefore paryūṣitaṃ cha yat;

ucchiṣṭam means what, the left over half dōśai I ate in the morning, other half I keep for the night; that is called ucchiṣṭam,

And amēdhyam. Amēdhyam means a food which is not offered to the Lord. because in our tradition, food has to be offered to the Lord; when I am eating yesterday's or last week's food, I will never be able to offer it to the Lord; and if it is not offered to the Lord, food is no more a prasāda; yajñāśiṣṭāśinaḥ santō mucyantē sarvakilbiṣaiḥ.

In the third chapter, Kṛṣṇa said that when the food is offered to the Lord, and eaten, that food is called yajña śiṣṭām or yajña prasāda. Yajña prasāda purifies the mind; but when it is not offered to the Lord, it is called amēdhyam. Mēdhaḥ means yajñāḥ; So mēdhyam means sacred, which is fit for yajña.

Amēdhyam means unsacred food; which is not fit for offering and that which has not been offered to the Lord. Amēdhyam is also considered to be tāmasic food, and you can find generally, wherever such habits, whichever family, such habits grow up, generally religion will go away from that family. Spirituality will go away from that family. It will become an embodiment of materialism. You can watch these things, these are all materialism will become predominant. God will disappear, religion will disappear, because if you have to offer to the Lord, you have to get up early in the morning; early morning getting up is itself disappearing; and early morning bath, is a big question; early morning waking up, is going; early morning snānaṃ is going; early morning cooking is going; early morning prayers are going; you will find a typical house will be an embodiment of materialism in play.

If we want to make it a religious spiritual centre, all these things are inevitable. We have to change our very way of life; if it requires going to bed early, we have to change that habit also. But everything is changing, people come from office at 10 p.m. and therefore relaxed eating is only in the night. In office only stuffing; generally cooking is done in the night and eating is done at 11 p.m. and generally night show in TV is at 11 p.m. Then see that and sleep, then when you get up, it will only be suryāsthānam what you will be seeing. Somebody said when the sun light falls on my face, I wake up. Wonderful it was said; but his room was on the western side; that is it; OK.

ucchiṣṭamapi cāmēdhyam; vēdic lifestyle is unfortunately disappearing; something very unfortunate; but it is happening.

bhōjanam tāmasapriyam; this is generally liked by tāmasik people; these are three types of food.

And Śankarācārya adds a note; if you want to change your character, you have to change so many things; which includes in change in food habits also. We do not say the change in food habits alone will make all the things, that is one important factor to be taken into account; along with so many other factors also. Thus change your character by changing your food habits. Thus trivida āhāra topic is over.

Now Kṛṣṇa enters into three types of yajña.

अफलाकाङ्क्षिभिर्यज्ञः विधिदृष्टो य इज्यते ।
यष्टव्यमेवेति मनः समाधय स सात्त्विकः ॥ १७.११ ॥

aphalāṅkṣibhiryajñō vidhidṛṣṭō ya ijjatē |
yaṣṭavyamēvēti manaḥ samādhāya sa sāttvikaḥ || 17.11 ||

सात्त्विकः यज्ञः sātvikaḥ yajñaḥ Sāttvic Yajña सः saḥ – is that यः इज्यते yaḥ ijjatē which is performed मनः समाधय manaḥ samādhāya wholeheartedly विधिदृष्टः vidhidṛṣṭaḥ according to scriptural injunctions अफलाकाङ्क्षि भिः aphaḷākāṅkṣibhiḥ by those who are not desirous of the result, इति iti (with the resolve) एव यष्टव्यम् ēva yaṣṭavyam it should be performed.

11. Sātvic yajña is that which is performed wholeheartedly according to scriptural injunctions by those who are not desirous of the result (with the resolve) that it should be performed.

So three types of yajña are being talked about; the 11th verse defines sātvik yajña; 12 rājasa yajña; 13th tāmasa yajña. What is sātvika yajña? According to vēda, we are involved in varieties of activities; physical, verbal, mental activities galore; and the more advanced the society is; the more the number of activities are. And a spiritual-seeker should do certain activities which are meant for the inner spiritual growth also, We do require lot of activities for physical nourishment. In fact right from LKG onwards our education is meant for what?

Nowadays nobody thinks of inner growth; the very purpose of education is what? Where do you get the best job; and job is meant for what? Maximum money; money is meant for what? For taking care of the physical and other material needs; it is required; Vēda is not against that; but Vēda asks what type of education and activities do you have for the sake of your inner growth for your spiritual growth? For sādhana catuṣṭaya sampathi, what are you doing?

And the scriptures say; you have to allot, you have to dedicate a part of the day exclusively for this inner growth, which alone we saw in the 3rd chapter as pañca-mahā-yajña; which are called niṣkāma karmāṇi. They would not contribute to our material growth; they will not give me, they will not give me name and fame, they will not give me status in society, they will not improve my material environment; they purely contribute to my inner growth; for that I should definitely do some karmas, beginning from dēva yajña in the early morning, before we start our earning work; Let the day start with those activities which are meant for spiritual growth. Because morning time is supposed to sātvic time.

And as the sun rises, and the heat of the sun increases, the body becomes more and more rājasic. Therefore the later time is ideal for rājasic activities; brahma muhurtha is fit for vēda pradhāna; spiritual activities.

And then as the evening set, the sun sets, the sātva goes away, rājas goes away and along with the setting of the sun, tāmas takes over. So the body clock, is sātva to rājas to tāmas and therefore the scriptures prescribe spiritual activities in the morning and for what purposes, i.e. meant for only inner growth

And therefore Kṛṣṇa says, yajñaḥ, that yajña or karma or activity, which vidhidṛṣṭaḥ, which has been prescribed by the scriptures for your inner growth; morning prayers; morning japa, morning pūja, morning temple visit; All those have been prescribed in our culture for what, if you ask, meant for inner growth; vidhidṛṣṭaḥ. Just as they prescribe morning walk is the vidhi given by the modern medical people, you can now find beach walkers association, or park walkers, even if you do not want to walk, you would like to walk, because health requires that. Just as a person forces himself in the physical walking because, it is good for my physical health. Similarly the scriptures prescribe certain inner exercises, which are meant for the spiritual health of the person. And therefore vidhidṛṣṭaḥ; prescribed by the spiritual doctor, called the ṛṣi. Ṛṣis were the spiritual doctors taking care of our spiritual health; vidhidṛṣṭaḥ.

And aphaḷākān-kṣibhiḥ; and when they do the morning walk, what money do they get? They are not getting any money because they are not working anywhere. Even though they do not get any money or increase in salary or position or name or fame, still they allot that time. Busiest executives are walking, even they do not get any money, because they know the value of the physical health. Similarly, the spiritual people who know the value of the spiritual health; they follow these rites, without expecting any material benefit. No money, no promotion in job, they do not expect anything, aphaḷākān-kṣibhiḥ, phalam means material benefit, akān-kṣibhi means desirous, aphaḷākān-kṣibhi means without desiring any material benefit, they follow these rituals like sandhya vandana or morning japa, purely for what? Spiritual benefit; they are called niṣkāma karmāṇi; they are called sātvika-karmāṇi, they are called nithya naimittika karmāṇi.

And the world, the materialistic people will tease them, they do not feel bad, they do not have any complex, because they know the value of spiritual health. Just as the walkers know the value of physical health, you can see in the beach, they do the exercise, they do not bother about what the other people think, wearing the half pant and they are coming to the class with the same half-pant, because only place where dress code is not there, is the class. After the beach walk, they take the arikampullu extract and directly come to the class. Anyway it is OK, if they come to the class. Therefore, they do not bother about their dress, or anything else, because they have a value for physical health; they do not bother about what others' think. Similarly those people do not bother about what the society thinks, they do what they value. So therefore how do they do.

Yaṣṭavyam ēva. I have to necessarily practice these things; for my own benefit; whatever the society says or thinks. It is not done for others' sake; it is done because I value this. Yaṣṭavyam it has to be done under all circumstances.

And how it is done? Manaḥ samādhāya; with concentration; with application. So any pūja; any japa, any dhyānam, anything practiced with total commitment for inner growth is called sātvika yajñāḥ.

In short the karma-yōga of the third chapter is called the sātvika yajña. Niyataṁ kuru karma tvaṁ karma jyāyō hyakarmaṇaḥ. That is sātvika karma.

More we will see in the next class. Hari Om

209 Chapter 17, Verses 11-14

By way of answering Arjuna's question, Lord Kṛṣṇa first dealt with three types of śraddhā, three types of faith. Thereafter the Lord himself voluntarily promised to talk about four more topics, viz., āhāraḥ, yajñāḥ, tapaḥ and dānam. Food, worship austerity and charity. And then the Lord himself explains each one of them, by dividing them into three varieties; sātvika, rājasa, tāmasa āhāra; similarly sātvika, rājasa, tāmasa yajñāḥ, etc. Of these four topics, we have completed the first topic, viz., the three types of āhāra, which was dealt with in verse No.8, 9 and 10. And now we have entered into three types of yajñāḥ in the three verses, 11, 12, and 13.

I introduced 11th verse, in the previous class, in which sātvika yajñāḥ is being talked about. The scriptures prescribe varieties of karmas for human benefit, and all these karmas are called yajña, because in all these karmas, indirectly or directly, worship of the Lord is involved.

In the vēdic tradition, there is no secular karmas separate from sacred karma; even secular karma are converted into sacred karma by entertaining the bhāvana of dedicating the action to the Lord and once we develop that bhāvana; all the karmas are called yajñāḥ. As I said in the other day, even the most mundane activity of eating becomes a yajñāḥ, bathing becomes a yajñāḥ, walking becomes a yajñāḥ. And these yajñas are scriptural karmas, divided into several types, and there are certain types of karmas, which are meant exclusively for spiritual growth; there are certain karmas which are meant primarily, I would not say, exclusively, primarily meant for spiritual growth. And these primary karmas meant primarily for spiritual growth are called nitya and naimithika karma; or vihitha karma or niyata karma or pañca-mahā-yajña. And all these karmas are in the form of some form of contribution to the others' in the society; contribution to the Lord; contribution to the nature, fellow human beings, other living beings, contributory karmas are called nitya naimithika karmas. They are primarily meant for spiritual growth; and separate from these nitya naimithika karmas, they are many other karmas which are meant for material benefit. They are all called sakāma or kāmya karmāṇi.

And as far as kāmya karmas are concerned, Lord need not give publicity to them; because all the people will naturally go after kāmya karma. Because human-beings are riddled with desires and they have got umpteen desires, they will go to different people, they will read different books and they themselves will found, what karma will lead to health; what karma will lead to wealth, what karma will give admission for my son, and what karma will get my son married. So these karmas, Bhagavān need not publicize; people themselves will go after that karma.

But the karmas which are meant for spiritual growth, people will never give importance. Because if I have to do karmas for spiritual growth, I should know first what is spiritual growth; and I should develop a value for spiritual growth and generally people never develop value for spiritual growth throughout the life, or if at all they develop the value, it is at the fag end of the life, or 90th or 95th year. By the time, they are unfit for that.

And therefore vēdās are worried, Bhagavān is worried, how can they make the human being perform the karmas for spiritual growth and what is the best method? Vēda tells these karmas are compulsory. If they are given as optional karmas, nobody will do that karma, and therefore vēda commands, "You have to do these karmas". Like certain traffic rules meant for our own safety; they are meant for our safety; but still we are so immature; that we do not want to follow those rules, even it is going to hurt ourselves. So what should the government do? Even though the government is not going to lose anything by our violation; government has to make those rules compulsory and not only compulsory, government has threaten, if you do not follow the rules, there will be aparādham-fine they have; and the government has to do for what purpose, not for their benefit, but because of the consideration for our own health.

Similarly, the scriptures want all of us to grow spiritually also; and spiritual growth takes lot of time, and therefore the journey should start from the earliest period. And therefore what do these scriptures do; they make the pañca-mahā-yajñahs compulsory. And not only they make them compulsory, they warn, if you do not do these karmas, you will have pāpam. Fine. What is the fine given by the scriptures? Special pāpam and the fine pāpam is called pratyavāya pāpam and the vēdās threaten this pratyavāya will take you to special health; pratyavāya narakam. The idea is at least out of fear the person will do that karma and unknowingly, that person is reaping the spiritual benefit. Therefore the first method the scriptures use is what? Frightening, you have to do this karma.

Then the next method the scriptures use is this. The scriptures point out all these compulsory actions have got twofold benefit. All these compulsory actions like daily morning prayer, etc. are karma for pithṛus, like śraddhām, etc. or daily pārāyaṇam, etc. for all these compulsory karmas, twofold benefits are prescribed. And what is that? They can be used for material benefits also, If you want; the very same sandhya vandhanam, if it is not performed, it will produce pāpam, If you do not do pitru śraddhām, it will produce pāpam, which is called pitṛ śāpam; it is not pitṛus do śāpam, but the idea is the pāpam born out of omission of the duty. So if you do not do them, it will produce pāpam.

On the other hand, if you do them, you will get the benefit and the benefit is of two types, which benefit you want you can choose. And one benefit is material benefit, it will give you lot of money, promotion, name, fame and after death, svarga lōkā also. Sandhya vandanam gives you svarga definitely they said. This is the material benefit.

On the other hand, a person is mature enough and he has understood the value of spiritual growth, then the vēda points out you do those compulsory action without seeking material benefit, then those very compulsory karmas will produce spiritual benefit called amānitvam, adāmbitvam, ahim̐sa, śānti. All the daivi sampath mentioned in the 16th chapter will automatically come to you, if you perform those compulsory actions.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa talks about them, in this 11th verse, yaṣṭavyam ēva; you look upon those actions as compulsory and also be afraid of prathyavāya pāpam and narakam and at least avoid pāpam and narakam, and at least to avoid the fine from the policeman, obey the traffic rule. If you are not mature enough to understand the principle of traffic rules, at least follow them out of fear. Therefore yaṣṭavyam means I have to compulsory do them. May you develop that attitude; and once you have decided to do that like daily prayers.

Once you have decided to do that, you have two options; what are those options; you can use those prayers, or you can use those prayers for spiritual growth, but you cannot choose both of them.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa says: aphaḷāṅkṣibhi, if you refuse to use those karmas for material benefit, and if you are interested in spiritual growth, use those daily karmas for what: citta śuddhi. Therefore aphaḷāṅkṣibhi; it should be done by those people who are not interested in material benefit; Here palam means material benefit, but they have a desire for phalam; But what type of desire? desire for jñāna yōgyatā, desire for sādhana catuṣṭaya sampathi. Oh Lord, I should develop jñāna yōgyatā; so that Māṇḍukya Upaniṣad can be understood; I heard somebody was telling; Swāmiji, two people were talking; at the end of the class; nothing is understood; so this is the conversation; the whole Māṇḍukya seems to go above the head, so I require a lot of jñāna yōgyatā, and this is only vaithathya prakaraṇam; the third chapter is still tougher; be ready. If we have to understand such subtle teaching, we require a special type of mind; Oh; Mandukya Jñāna yōgyatā dēhi; do sandhya vandhana, do daily prayer. Mamōpātha samatha durita kṣaya dvara, Sri Paramēśvara prityartham.

Therefore, aphaḷāṅkṣibhi; these people want only spiritual growth.

and vidhidṛṣṭaḥ; and they follow all the instructions given in the scriptures. vidhi means rules and regulations given in the scriptures, with regard to time, etc. and when they do that, what is their attitude? It is not, just a compulsory duty.

But with manaḥ samādhāya, with sincerity, the time is not wasted; even though I spend time for my daily prayer, I won't get any money out of it, but I should know a subtle benefit is accrued to me. Even one second is not a waste. If I have that conviction, I will put my heart and soul in those activities. Therefore, manaḥ samādhāya means sincerely, whole heartedly.

Manaḥ samādhāya ya iyyatē; when those pañcamahā yajñas are done. I am not spending my time on pañcamahā yajna. If you do not remember, go back to the 3rd chapter, and revise. Generally, it is activity in the form of contribution to others. We are very good in activities which will benefit us; selfish activities, nobody need prescribe, that is natural, but activities of contribution, scriptures have to tell that; and they are called pañcamaha yajñahs, and such a yajña is called sātāvika yajñah.

Then what is rājasa yajñah? That those activities, which are most common and natural to us. The scriptures need not ask us to do, we will naturally do it; because they are selfish activity. Kṛṣṇa defines them:

अभिसन्धाय तु फलं दम्भार्थमपि चैव यत् ।
इज्यते भरतश्रेष्ठ तं यज्ञं विद्धि राजसम् ॥ १७.१२ ॥

abhisandhāya tu phalaṃ dambhārthamapi caiva yat |
ijyatē bharataśreṣṭha taṃ yajñam viddhi rājasam || 17.12 ||

भरतश्रेष्ठ bharataśreṣṭha Oh Arjuna, best of bharatas विद्धि viddhi taṃ know तं यज्ञम् yajñam that yajña यद् इज्यते yad iyyate which is performed अभिसन्धाय तु abhisandhāya tu expecting फलम् phalam a result अपि च एव api ca ēva and also दम्भार्थम् dambhārtham for the sake of show राजसम् rājasam to be rajasic

12. Oh Arjuna ! Know that yajña which is performed expecting a result, and also for the sake of 'show', to be rajasic.

So rājasic yajña all these sakāma karmāṇi. All the activities done for external growth. Therefore phalam abhisandhāya; phalam means external benefits, gross benefits, tangible benefits like name, fame, money, status, position, possession, power, influence, pull, all kinds of benefits here are all called phalam, abhisandhāya, that these are kept in mind all the time. What will I get out of these activities? With that meditation all the time. If I do not expect any money out of it, the next thing I expect out of it, is acknowledgement in the souvenir book and preferably in the front page and in the vote of thanks, my name should be mentioned; i.e. dambhā; name and fame; abi yat karma kriyatē; whatever action is done, iyyatē, tat rājasam viddhi. So the main difference between sātāvika and rājasam is: in sātāvika karma, I concentrate on what I give?; in rājasa karma, I concentrate on what I get. Give-oriented karma is sātvikam, get-oriented karma is rājasam.

And when I take the balance sheet at the end of my life; suppose I think that I have got more and given less, from materialistic angle, it is called success. What is success from materialistic angle? I should have got more in life and I should have spend less. This is material success whereas spiritual success has got a totally different balance sheet. What is that? In life, if I have taken less, and if I have given more to the society, that is the measure of success. This is the basic difference between a satvik karma and rājasic karma. Sātvik and rājasic person; hey bhārataśrēṣṭha Arjuna, when it is done with this attitude, tham yajñam rājasam viddhi. Selfish activity is rājasic activity.

Then what is tāmasic activity?

विधिहीनमसृष्टान्नं मन्त्रहीनमदक्षिणम् ।
श्रद्धाविरहितं यज्ञं तामसं परिचक्षते ॥ १७.१३ ॥

Vidhihīnamasṛṣṭānnaṁ mantrahīnamadakṣiṇam |
śraddhāviraḥitaṁ yajñaṁ tāmasaṁ paricakṣatē || 17.13 ||

परिचक्षते paricakṣatē they call, यज्ञम् yajñam that yajña तामसम् tāmasam to be tamasic
विधिहीनम् vidhihīnam which is contrary to scriptural injunctions, असृष्टान्नम् asṛṣṭānnaṁ which is without food cooked (for distribution), मन्त्रहीनम् mantrahīnam without proper mantras, अदक्षिणम् adakṣiṇam without proper dakṣiṇa, श्रद्धाविरहितम् śraddhāviraḥitam and without faith.

13. They call that yajña to be tamasic which is contrary to the scriptural injunctions, which is without food cooked (for distribution) without proper mantras, without proper dakṣiṇa, without faith.

So tāmasic yajñaḥ is a pūja or rite or worship, in which everything is a negative; what is that; vidhihīnam, all the scriptural injunctions are violated to our convenience; so vidhihīnam, violating all the rules;

Asṛṣṭānnaṁ, all the yajñas are an opportunity to share my possessions with the other people. It is a natural socialism, voluntary socialism. The very purpose of the yajñam is I take it as an opportunity to share my possessions with others; because at the end of every yajña, dānam is an integral part; vastra dānam, anna dānam, Dana dānam, gō dānam, kṣētra dānam. Dānam is kept as an integral part, so that I get an opportunity to share. And in this tāmasic yajña, this person does not give any dānam, or this person gives minimum dānam, because śāstra has given various options; they say if you want to give a cow; and if you cannot give a cow, give a coconut; If you cannot give a coconut, you can give Rs.1.25 (what is the calculation, the Lord alone knows!) and three options are given and this person chooses this 1.25. But śāstra has given this option, not for all; but for those people who cannot afford. But the person who can afford, does not give, and he thinks, he is smarter, do you know what Bhagavān does; Bhagavān is smarter; when I can afford and I do not give, Bhagavān makes my position such that in due course, I will not be able to afford that. He will make me like that.

And therefore, asṛṣṭānnam, there is no dānam; I have told you before, for everything akṣathān samarpayāmi; vasthartam Akṣathān samarpayāmi, upavithārtam, akṣathān samarpayāmi, and in the end dakṣiṇārtam akṣathān samarpayāmi; if you say, the priest will not agree. Does not want. Akṣathā is only in extra ordinary cases, if you use the excuse in a wrong way, you will get the negative result; so asṛṣṭānnam; mantrahīnam, without chanting the mantras properly, so it is said

Sri Rāma Rāma Rāmethi, Ramē Rāmē manōramē |
sahasranama tat thulyam, Rāma nāma varānanē ||

What does that this mantra mean? That three times you chant Rāma; and it is equal to Shri Viṣṇu Sahasranama; wonderful; from tomorrow onwards I will just chant Rāma, Rāma, Rāma and I will run away. Śāstra is very considerate, but we should not abuse the option given in the Śāstra. Mantrahīnam, violating the mantras.

Adakṣiṇām. Nothing should be taken free; nothing should be taken free; that is the rule; as they say, there is no free lunch. So whether the other person gives you free or not is the question, I cannot take anything free; whatever I get free, I compensate proportionately and here also dakṣiṇā is important for the priest. Even if the priest does not ask. He is not supposed to ask; He is not supposed to fix the dakṣiṇā; a brāhmaṇa is supposed to be satisfied with whatever dakṣiṇā comes.

Asanttuṣṭhō dvijō naṣṭaḥ; a discontented brāhmaṇa is spiritually-lost. This is the law of the Śāstra. Therefore a brāhmaṇa should not fix the dakṣiṇā; he should receive whatever dakṣiṇā is offered; but what do these people do; because brahmaṇa does not fix, He says that my great grandfather gave Rs.2-1/2 and I will also give the same; that is the tradition. After-all a very obedient follower of the great great great grandfather! Then what will the poor brāhmaṇa do.

Therefore nowadays he fixes contract; A type, B type, C type, for everything A,B, C and depending upon that he does; but we complain; but he is forced to do that; because when a person does not voluntarily give, the other person becomes commercial; they are driven to become commercial. If everybody voluntarily gives, this will not be required. Vēdic society is based on voluntary growth; there should be no rule at all; they say a perfect society is one in which rules are minimum. If we require more and more rules, it means that we are more and more gross. Vēdic society had minimum rules; but now rules are required. This much dakṣiṇā. Gīta course dakṣiṇā; Rs.7000. Do not worry, I am not going to ask. That is not supposed to be done; that the Vēdic society rule. What a beautiful society? Adakṣiṇā, in tāmasic yajña, this person does not do that.

Like the King wanted to do the Rudrabhisēkam; and he wanted one glass of milk from every member in the village; and a huge Anda was built. So many villagers, they have to come and so you cannot see, because it is a huge container and therefore a ladder was kept, and everybody had to climb and pour his contribution of glass of milk and first person came, he was very intelligent, when everybody is pouring milk, if I pour one glass of water, nothing will be noticed. Therefore we went and poured a glass of water; the second, the third, and everyone thought like that, and the next day, the whole Anda was full of water only!!.

So thus everybody think, let somebody else contribute, then that society cannot survive; I should know that I am the part and I should contribute my part voluntarily; Tāmasa yajña is in which voluntary contributions are not there. Adakṣiṇām.

And śraddhāviraḥitam and there is no śraddhā. What is the guarantee that these pūja will benefit? How do you know that the śraddhā will go to the forefathers? You say that punarjanma is there and therefore they would have been reborn already!!

So why should I do śraddhā, primary mistake we commit, We think that the śraddhā is meant for the forefathers, we should remember, Śraddhā is not primarily meant for the forefathers; this must be clearly grasped. The primary benefit of the śraddhā is for the performer; the forefather might not be there; He might have been even liberated; but we are not given to him, that karma gives me citta śuddhi, like offering naivēdyam to the Lord. Lord does not depend our miserable banana. Is he going to fill his stomach by eating this small banana you give? Depending on our banana, he would have become emaciated long before. So remember, we are offering to the Lord not because the Lord wants; our offering is going to give us citta śuddhi. Similarly whether your offering goes to your grandfather or not; we do not care. Even if it goes, it is only a bye product or secondary benefit.

Śraddhā is one of the pañca-maha-yajña, pañca-maha-yajña is meant for my citta śuddha. And if I value citta śuddhi, I have to do that; And how the citta śuddhi will come, I should have śraddhā; if that śraddhā is not there, that yajña will become tāmasa yajña, that is why ritual itself is called śraddhām; śraddhāya kritham, śraddhām. It benefits me, Full stop. Spiritually. So śraddhā virahitam yajñam tāmasam paricakṣatē. That is tāmasic yajña.

And what are we supposed to learn from these three verses; the lesson that we should learn is tāmasa yajñas should be given up straightaway; If you are a spiritual-seeker, tāmasa yajñas you give up straight away, rājasa yajñas. Let the proportion become gradually lesser; let the selfish activity become lesser and lesser gradually; and let the selfless activity meant for the benefit of others increase gradually. And that is called karma-yōgaḥ. Karma-yōgi is one who gives more to the society and take less from the society. They give the example; we have seen in the third chapter of the tree.

चायाम् अन्यस्य कुर्वन्ति
तिष्ठन्ति स्वयम् आतपे ।
फलान्यापि परार्थाया
व्रिक्षाहः सत्पुरुषा इवा ॥

cāyām anyasya kurvanti
tiṣṭanti svayam ātapē | phalānyāpi parārhāyā
vriṁṣāhaḥ satpuruṣā ivā ||

They stand under the hot sun and they give shade to others; and whatever fruits also they generate; they are also meant for others; the trees are like karma-yōgis; and therefore we say that there should be more and more trees and I should live such a life. That the society must be interested in my survival; now it is the other way round. I want to survive and the society is praying for my death; society is praying for my quit. We should become other way round; I should not mind quitting and the society must do its best to keep me going; because the society considers my existence to be useful to the World. vṛkṣāhaḥ satpuruṣā ivā. That is the definition of karma-yōga. So karma-yōga is sātṛvika yajñaḥ.

देवद्विजगुरुप्राज्ञ-पूजनं शौचमार्जवम् ।
ब्रह्मचर्यमहिंसा च शारीरं तप उच्यते ॥ १७.१४ ॥

Dēvadviṁguruprāṁṁpūjanam śaucamārjavam|
brahmacaryamahimsā ca śārīram tapa ucyatē || 17.14 ||

देवद्विजगुरुप्राज्ञपूजनम् dēvadviṁguruprāṁṁpūjanam worship of the gods, the brahmins, the teachers, and the wise men शौचम् śaucam purity आर्जवम् ārjavam straightforwardness, ब्रह्मचर्यम् brahmacaryam chastity, च अहिंसा ca ahimsā and nonviolence उच्यते ucyatē are said शारीरं तपः śārīram tapaḥ to be physical austerity.

14. Worship of the Gods, the brāhmins, the teachers, and the wise men, purity, straightforwardness, chastity, and nonviolence are said to be physical austerity.

With the previous verse, three types of yajña topic is over. Of the four promised topic, āhāra and yajña are over; now we have to see tapaḥ and dānam. Tapas means austerity. And with regard to tapas, Kṛṣṇa makes a division of tapas, based on two different angles; In previous case, āhāra, śraddhā, yajña etc. all these three were divided based on the three guṇas; sātvika, rājasa and tāmasa; but with regard to tapas, Kṛṣṇa is going to divide, based on two different norms.

One is three types of tapas, based on the instrument of tapas; based on the organ with which you practice the tapas. organ-based classification: and this classification is three; what are they: kāyikam, vācikam, and mānasam.

Kāyikam means physical austerity; austerities undertaken by the physical body.

Next one is vācikam tapa; austerities undertaken at the verbal or oral level; vāk indriya dṛṣṭya; vāk tapas.

And the third one is mānasam tapaḥ, the austerities based on the mind or the thought level.

And after dividing tapas, based on these three, Kṛṣṇa will later talk about sātvika, rājasa and tāmasa. So first karaṇa dṛṣṭya trividam tapaḥ. And in the 14th verse, kāyikam tapas is talked about; 15th talks about vācikam and 16th mānasam.

What is physical austerity? Kṛṣṇa says: pūjanam, all types of rituals will come under physical tapas, all types of rituals come under physical tapas; they are wonderful set of disciplines. We should know the importance of rituals; many people strongly criticise rituals unfortunately; but we should know the importance of rituals; Firstly rituals are important to remove the tamō-guṇa or laziness from the body. The greatest problem is laziness. Ālasyam hi manuṣyāṇam śarīrastō mahān ripuḥ. The greatest enemy for an individual, especially at the body level, is laziness and the modern scientific developments promote laziness; You need not get up at all; for everything switches are there. Earlier we had to get up and walk to the TV set to change the channels; now that is not required; everything is remote-based. And that is causing of varieties of problem like cholesterol, obesity etc. and you know what is the latest given; readers digest says; Hide your remote. First they give you the remote; and they tell you hide the remote; because let at least the minimum activity be walking from the chair to the TV. So rituals are wonderful because, all the rituals pradhakṣiṇams are there. In the olden days, temples are really huge; one pradhakṣiṇams would be 3 kms; and all our namaskārās are satsaṅga namaskārās and if one does that itself, all the cholesterol, everything will go away, therefore it is a beautiful medicine against tamō-guṇa. That is No.1.

And the second thing is the rituals are most beautiful method of reviving our relationship with the Lord. One of the beautiful and important relationship in our life, is our relationship with the Lord. We are primarily related to God, because we are born of, sustained by and ultimately go back to the Lord only. And that is the primary relationship because that is the universal relationship.

All of us are uniformly related to the Lord in the form of kārya kāraṇa sambhanda. So it is universal; and not only it is universal; it is eternal also; because in every janma, I am related to the Lord. So therefore it is eternal relationship, and it is universal relationship and therefore that is the primary relationship; whereas all the other relationship with the other people and other pets and other things, they are all only temporary.

Any relationship that you have with any other human being, how long it will last? 50 years, 60 years, 70 or 80 years and in the next janma, where are we going to go and where are they going to go; who knows; we may not be even human beings, one may be a cockroach and the other may be an octopus; What is the relationship between the cockroach and the octopus. Is it बुद्धिबलवत्? Uncle? No.

So we are over obsessed with the incidental relationship and we are carried by the incidental relationship and we are forgetting and missing the primary relationship and according to Vēdanta, all the human problems are because, the fundamental relationship being overshadowed by incidental relationship.

So we have to find out some method, by which we can invoke the fundamental relationship and any relationship is invoked only by physicalisation. Because relationship is an invisible thing and how do you express your feeling to the other person; feelings or thoughts, thoughts are invisible and therefore you have to express through some physicalised action; so you have to smile. That is a physical action; or you have to shake hands; or you have to do namasthē. Or you have to say honey, honey, etc. etc.; you have to give valentine card; or else pralaya will come in the house; you forgot my/our wedding day. He says in his mind; I am trying to forget that bad day! This is only a joke. You have to keep on telling; how to tell that; give the card regularly.

What are these things; these are all rituals. If you give up traditional rituals you will have to replace them with new rituals; rituals cannot be replaced or avoided; and the complaint they give, all our rituals are meaningless; the complaint all the rituals are meaningless; no ritual is meaningless; every ritual has a meaning; every mantra has a meaning; see the wonderful mantras of the vivāha mantra; I put a book, sanyasi should not have put that book; anyway; so Vivāha mantra artha. See that how beautiful mantras are: so anything will be meaningless; if I do not learn the meaning. Even Valentine day is meaningless, if I do not know the meaning. I do not know whether it is good or bad, I am not saying anything on that; I have not enquired on that; any ritual is meaningless, if I do not attempt to know it. So the deficiency is not in the ritual, deficiency is in me. So if you take all the varieties of offerings, they all mean it.

ॐ अकाशात्मने पुष्पाणि समर्पयामि; यं वायुवात्मने दूपम् आग्रापयामि; रं अग्न्यात्मने दीपम् दर्शयामि; वं अमृतात्मने अमृतोपहारम् समर्पयामि; सं सर्वात्मने सर्वोपचारान् समर्पयामि ॥

ॐ akāśātmanē puṣpāṇi samarpayāmi; yaṁ vāyuvātmanē dūpam āgrāpayāmi; raṁ agnyātmanē dīpam darśayāmi; vaṁ amṛtātmanē amṛtōpahāram samarpayāmi; saṁ sarvātamanē sarvōpacārān samarpayāmi ||

Everything that we offer in rituals represents one one element; ākāśa, vāyu, Agni , āpaha, pṛthvi. And I am telling the Lord, Oh Lord, you have given me all these wonderful give elements. And of course I am polluting them and spoiling them, that is a different issue; but you have blessed me with all these things; for that I am giving my thanks; I acknowledge your contribution; and when I do the namaskāra; it is total ātma nivēdanam; in which I want to tell even my body I cannot claim, because very cell of the body is taken from the Annē rasē naivabhūtvā, annē rasē naiva vṛddim prāpya; it has come from the five elements only. Therefore, even my physical body, is not mine, it is your gift, I want to remind myself and acknowledge. Thus the rituals is a very very meaningful thing to revive my relationship with the Lord; And therefore the first kāyikam tapas is what; pūjanam.

So pūja is a very very important part of spiritual religious discipline and also ritual helps for the family members to join together. Now family life is disintegrating, because every member has got his own or her own activities, they come at different times; and they take everything from the fridge, heat it, eat it, and go; and thus every member does and walks off, they enter the house at different times, they do not even meet in the house, just say hello and go. Nowadays to keep the family together, modern psychologists are suggesting invent rituals; and invent such rituals in which all the family members will be together; so that there will be togetherness; and if you cannot invent any rituals, at least make it a point, you eat at least one time a day, all together.

Now we had wonderful rituals and ceremonies and rites. It is an opportunity to bring the family members together; and in bigger rituals, we can bring even other people; remote relations also and if there is so strain in relationship, it becomes an opportunity to forget all misunderstanding, let us have a fresh beginning; it is a wonderful social unification method. And once in a while they will have mahārudram, athirudram, etc. where all the members of the community will join together. Thus you can write pages and pages on the glory of the pūja; micro as well as macro; therefore pūjanam.

Worship of whom, dēva, dvija, guru, prajña, dēvaḥ means God; God in any form; God is really formless; God is all pervading; but you cannot offer worship to the all-pervading Lord, because where will you offer flowers; it is not possible, so we create an alter. Not because Vēdās think that God is this height; Vēdā knows it is formless; Knowing well, Vēdās have invented idols. As Swami Dayānanda beautifully says; We are not idol worshippers; we are worshippers of the Lord represented by the idol; We do not worship the idol; we worship the Lord, represented by the Iṣṭa Dēvatha, any form you like, then dvija, means those people who know the scriptures and follow the scriptures; dvija represents śāstram. So dvija, those people who know the śāstra; and follow the śāstra and the values mentioned. Dvija literally means twice born. So the first birth is before the study of the śāstra and the second birth after the study of the śāstra, from a wild life to a refined life; whoever follows a refined way of living, worship them; if you see a respectable person, do namaskāram; it is a beautiful tradition; thus you do not develop an ego. Therefore dvija pūjanam.

And then guru pujanam; worship all your gurus; whether they are teachers in the L.kg. or whether they are teaching you music or mathematics, any guru; of course including brahma vidya guru; so therefore guru pūjanam.

And finally prajñaḥ; prajñaḥ means a jñāni. So previously dvija means one who is a dhārmic person; may not be a jñāni; whereas prajña means not only he is a dhārmic person, he has got the brahma vidya also. All these pūjanam; that is kāyikam tapaḥ No.1. Minimum benefit is cholesterol reduction. Hari Om

Of the four topics that Lord Kṛṣṇa promised to discuss, two topics have been completed, trividha āhāraḥ and trividha yajñāḥ; āhāraḥ means food, yajñāḥ means worship.

And now Kṛṣṇa has come to the third topic viz., tapas. The word tapas has two meanings one is a general meaning another is a specific meaning; Here it is used in a general meaning; the specific meaning of the word tapas, is willful self-denial to establish my mastery over my own organs of the body. Willful self-denial. Whatever I have been giving to my organs, whatever comfort I have been giving to my organs and to the body; once in a while I say No. To find out whether I am the master of my sense organs or whether the sense organs are my master. Initially I might have been the master, and I would have allowed the sense organs to enjoy some thing, but in due course, the sense organs become addicted to them; and after some time, they begin to demand those things. And I would have thought I am the master, capable of saying no to the sense organs and often I discover that is not the fact, the sense organs have become so powerful, that when I say No to the sense organ, they begin to protest. And the protest of the sense organs is in the form of creating mental turbulence. The eyes will say I want that or otherwise I will not allow you to do that work. Tongue will say that I need that cup of coffee, and if I do not provide it, it will not allow you to do anything; and if you sit on meditation, you will be meditating on!, coffee. Once the sense organs are capable of creating mental turbulence, it means they have become my master. To find out whether this conversion is taking place, what conversion? Instead of I being the master of sense organs, whether the sense organs are becoming my master, to find out, once in a while, I say No to whatever the sense organs have been doing regularly.

And this voluntary self-denial is a tapas. A forced self-denial is a suffering; it is a suppression; it is bad to mental health. Therefore tapas should never be enforced by other people; but I should myself decide on Śivarāthri, I will not eat, suppose I say; it should be my own decision, and based on my volition, when I say No. certainly I will go through certain discomfort. If I do not eat on an Ekādaśi or a Śivarāthri day, hunger is certainly a discomfort, but I willfully go through the discomfort to establish my willpower; My dṛṣṭi; and this willful sense denial will give me this inner strength and therefore tapas becomes a spiritual-sādhana.

And therefore Śankarācārya defines tapas as śarīra pīḍanam, voluntarily giving discomfort to the body. One day there is no fan; see what happens? Let me see what happens if AC is not there; one day pillow is not, one day chappal is not there; In fact all our vows associated with various ceremonies, all the vows are different forms of tapas only. So this willful self-denial is the first specific meaning of the word tapas.

Then there is another general meaning for the word tapas and that is the meaning to be taken in this context, and that general meaning is any form of discipline. Any form of discipline, especially religious or spiritual discipline that I practice can be called tapas.

Mahānārāyana Upaniṣad gives:

ऋतं तपः सत्यं तपः श्रुतं तपः शान्तं तपो दमस्तपः
शमस्तपो दानं तपो यज्ञं तपो भूर्भुवः
सुवर्ब्रह्मैतदुपास्वैतत्तपः ॥१०.१॥

ṛtam tapaḥ satyam tapaḥ śrutam tapaḥ śāntam tapō damastapaḥ śamastapō dānam tapō yajñam tapō bhūrbhuvah sugarbrahmaitadupāsvaitattapaḥ ||10.1||

Can you follow? Ritam tapaḥ, Satyam tapaḥ, srutam tapaḥ; śantam tapa, dhama kṣama tapa, dānam tapō, any sādhana that you practice can be called tapas. Sense control; is a tapas. Regularly attending the class. அடிக்கடி நான் சொல்லிண்டிருக்கணம். I have to tell this regularly. It is a tapas. Thus satyam. Speaking truth is tapas. Pārāyaṇam is tapas. Getting up regularly at a particular time is a tapas.

Thus the second meaning of the word is what? Any discipline; and it is in this meaning the word tapas is used in this 17th chapter. And this tapas, Kṛṣṇa divides in two different ways, i.e. one is tapas based on the instrument with which I practice the discipline, viz., physical discipline; verbal or oral discipline and the third is mental discipline; kāyika, mānasa tapas, this is kāraṇa dṛṣṭya, trividham tapaḥ.

And Kṛṣṇa will later talk about tapas from another angle and this is guṇa dṛṣṭya trividam tapa: satvika, rajasa, and tamasa tapaḥ. Of these two, first we are seeing kāraṇa dṛṣṭya tapas, kāraṇam means instrument, and later, guṇa dṛṣṭya, division will come, the 14th verse is kāyika tapas, 15th vācikaḥ, 16th mānasam, 17th will be sātvikam, 18th rājasam, 19th tāmasam.

This is how the development is going to be, of which we have completed half of the 14th verse, in which physical discipline is talked about. And what is first physical discipline? Any type of ritual, that I regularly practice, any type of physical ritual that I practice, is kāyika tapaḥ; dēva, dvija, guru, prājñāh pūjanam. So in our tradition, people take up one type of pūja or another type regularly. So that for the sake of pūja, he will have to get up early in the morning. Therefore, getting up will become automatic, because pūja has to be done and pūja you cannot do with night dress; you will have to take at least a kaka snānam; some kind of snānam. So thus, you will be forced to get up early, which is a wonderful discipline or you decide to go to a few temples or at least one temple, you have to walk, they say walking is the best exercise, and you do pradakṣina, you do namaskāra, you have surya namaskāra; all these things will come under physical pūjanam.

So dēva, dvija, guru, prājñāh pūjanam. And I make sure that all the namaskārās are not the shorter ones, we have several namaskāra, just bowing the head, instead of taking to the shorter versions, take to the longer, sāṣṭāṅga namaskārāms, so that tummy will go inside; So pūjanam. Up to this we saw in the last class.

Next one is śoucam. Physical purity or physical cleanliness is a form of kāyikam tapaḥ; taking regular bath. Even though in Madras, it may be little bit difficult, taking regular bath, and make sure that the hands are clean, the legs are clean, the nails are cut properly, (many people are not even aware of the nail cutter's existence) and hand nails they cut, legs nails they do not cut, all those things are there; things are kept clean; and not only the physical body, the clothes that I wear and the place that I live and the surroundings, they are clean and hygienic.

Kṛṣṇa has to teach us even hygiene. See that. These are all supposed to be normal things, but Kṛṣṇa, out of compassion chooses to talk about even these basic discipline; and the tragedy is that we have got all these scriptures talking about hygiene and what I hear is in the entire world, one of the most unhygienic countries is ours. That is what I hear. Gīta we have got; but in practice we are zero. Anyway what to do; Therefore śoucham. And in many countries, for Indians, separate place; Even to get out of the airport for them, separate door. Not because of greatness, separate door not VIP, It is IP and certainly in some countries, Even if you see the street, you can identify as Indian street, Very very tragic, unfortunate thing we hear; with wonderful gītā, which has been written 5000 years before; and we have successfully managed not to practice. அதுவும் ஒரு மஹிமை தான்!! That is a great thing!! Therefore śoucham.

Then ārjavam. Ārjavam means making sure that all the physical actions are in alignment with my thought and word. All my physical actions are in keeping with my thought and word. This alignment is called ārjavam and I consider the most important alignment is punctuality. When we plan to go to a place at a particular time, or when we tell someone that we will come at a particular time, if we keep up that, it is ārjavam. And often because of reasons, various unavoidable reasons, we may not be able to keep up our timing; but the tragedy that I see is, if a person is not able to come at a particular time, the next best thing that he can do is inform the person concerned. I consider that as more important than punctuality. If I am not able to be punctual, there can be reasons unavoidable; but I see greater tragedy is, nobody thinks of informing, I have told you I will come at such and such, I am not able to come, they will not tell. It is my experience. I am only talking about. A person says I will come on Tuesday and such and such time; and he does not come at all and does not inform he is not able to come.

And even next day, there is no information; and then again when he meets me he tells, I could not come, next week I will come, and again next week same thing happens and that person does not even feel something grave is happening in his behavior. This awareness itself is not there; which is still tragic I feel. We may not be able to keep up the timings; but at least more importantly I should be able to tell. Nowadays everyone has cell phones and even in traffic jams one can use it to inform about the delay. Or at least after going home, one can call and inform that I got caught up in the traffic jam, etc. That discipline is lacking in our culture; neither punctuality nor informing the other person nor regret or apology, nothing exists; this is a very very serious problem, serious spiritual problem, I consider. And therefore Kṛṣṇa says ārjavam.

Spirituality is not doing great things, but spirituality is doing small things in a great way. Small things are spirituality; you need not climb the Everest. Even climbing the bus is difficult for us; where is Everest. We need not climb. The small things go a long way towards spiritual progress; Ārjavam.

Brahmacaryam. In the case of a gṛhastha means chastity is brahmacaryam. And in the case of the other three āśramas, brahmacāri, vanāprastha and sanyāsi, brahmacaryam means celibacy. This brahmacaryam or celibacy or chastity is the physical discipline.

Then Ahimsa; Ahimsa we have seen often. Non-violence. Of course non-violence at all the three levels. But in this context, since we are talking about physical discipline. Ahimsa means physical non-violence. Physical non-violence of not only of people, even of things, even the way we handle the books. How one handles the books, one can understand if we see the books அக்கு வேற; ஆணி வேற. Remember, non-violent handling of even any book, and particularly, the spiritual books; if you go and Risikeṣh and watch those sanyāsis. They have got a special cloth, kāsaya vasthram, to Gīta, upaniṣad, etc. and they very carefully tie it and carry. They never keep the book on the ground.

And before we study, before we start the brahma sutra class, the student has to carry the brahma sutra book on the head; and go around the āśrama and a special pūja is done, and in certain āśrama, every day the class starts after pūja to that particular page; if it is 38th page, you start doing pūja to that page; that means I learn to handle even the books properly. Now, if one of the legs of the table is shorter, if the upaniṣads and Gīta book is available, we keep it as a height adjuster; I have seen it and therefore I am saying this; otherwise how do I know that such things happen; because Gōrakpur Īśāvāsya upaniṣad book is only twenty paise and we can buy another copy.!! Or if you have coffee and there is no cover for the coffee, and after getting no plate, I use the Gīta book lying nearby as a coffee cup cover. Even one's things are to be handled properly. Therefore ahimsa. All these things will come under śarīram tapaḥ ucyatē.

अनुद्वेगकरं वाक्यं सत्यं प्रियहितं च यत् ।
स्वाध्यायाभ्यसनं चैव वाङ् मयं तप उच्यते ॥ १७.१५ ॥

[Anudvēgakaram vākyaṁ satyaṁ priyahitaṁ ca yat |
svādhyāyābhyasanam caiva vāṅmāyāṁ tapa ucyatē || 17.15 ||](#)

वाक्यम् vākyaṃ that speech, यद् अनुद्वेगकरम् yad anudvēgakaram which is not hurtful, सत्यम् satyam which is truthful च प्रियहितम् ca priyahitam pleasant and beneficial, च एव ca ēva and स्वाध्यायाभ्यसनम् svādhyāyābhyasanam ucyatē the regular study of scriptures उच्यते वाङ्मयं तपः vāṅmayam tapaḥ are said to be verbal austerity

15. That speech which is not harmful, which is truthful, pleasant, and beneficial, and the regular study of scriptures are said to be verbal austerity.

So now comes vāk tapas, verbal discipline; or oral discipline; first we have to understand the importance of vāk indriyam. There are 10 sense organs for us. Five jñānēndriyas are there; sōthram, tvak, cakṣu, rasana, grāna; eyes, ears, nose, tongue and skin; and we have got five karmēndriyas, vāk, pāṇi, pada and upathasu; of these ten sense organs, Kṛṣṇa is specifically choosing one Karmēndriya. He does not talk about the other karmēndriyas. He does not talk about the other five jñānēndriyas. Why should the scriptures choose the vāk indriyam only for separately dealing with its tapas. From that itself, it is clear, from out of the ten indriyāṇi, the most powerful indriyam is vāk indriyam. First we have to assimilate this fact; and then alone we can appreciate the significance of vāk tapas.

Generally when we talk of superiority of human beings, how the human-beings is superior to all other animals, generally we enumerate or mention only the intelligence or buddhi as the main faculty, which differentiates, distinguishes the human being from all others. Animals do not have great intelligence; of course they have got some intelligence, especially some of the animals like gorilla, or dolphins may have some intelligence, but compared to human intelligences, animals have got very very very inferior intelligence, human-beings have a very very great superior intelligence.

So generally we talk about the intelligence faculty only, but we should remember, as important is the intelligence faculty is the importance of the organ of speech, which makes the human vastly different from all animals, and especially the speaking organ, the animals can produce maximum certain sounds, but human specie can have highly developed language; highly developed grammar and to understand the superiority of vāk indriyam, you imagine that we do not have the organ of speech. Imagine. Imagine only. We have. But let us imagine. We have got this same superior intellect. But imagine only the organ of speech is not there; it is very good to think of the consequence.

What will be the type of world, if we have got the same level of intelligence, but no organ of speech. In fact, you can ask your children to write down the consequences. The first things would be, all the schools and colleges will have to be abolished, because they are all based in written words and spoken words; BOTH written and spoken words are possible only because of organ of speech; You may wonder for written words, why organ of speech is required. For written words, you require only hand and book. Remember, written words are only symbols of spoken words. Written words are only visual symbols of, representative of spoken words; If I cannot use the words table, you cannot write t a b l e; it will not mean anything. Therefore, all the written and spoken words would go away, all the schools are gone, all the colleges are gone, all the books are gone, all the radio programme will disappear and the television programs would be like the old dump movie; all the postal services, courier services gone and all the phones useless; and the greatest tragedy will be what? Every human being will have to discover the scientific laws independently.

Now we need not discover the same scientific laws independently; and what the scientists have discovered is transferred to me through words. Therefore I need not separately work for it; therefore I can stand on the shoulders of another scientist and progress further; now the progress will be completely gone, because every will have to gain the knowledge for himself or herself; all developments or science, music, economic, in all fields will disappear.

And the piece of mind that we derive by sharing our problems with others will go away. All the counselling, etc. will become meaningless. In fact, we can go on and on and on. In fact, if you wonder, whether intellect is more important or speech is more important, you will know that both of them are equally important, we can benefit from the superior intelligence only if we have the organ of speech. We can benefit from the superior intelligence, only if we have the organ of speech. In fact, ultimately, mōkṣa itself is possible through sṛavaṇam, mananam, and nidhidyāsanam. Where is sṛavaṇam, without the organ of speech? If you say that I will do the mananam, even if sṛavaṇam is not there, what will you do mananam on. Therefore the more you study, you will find that the organ is speech is an extremely powerful instrument; this I have to analyse first and assimilate.

Then once I understand the power of speech, then I have to understand the power of words which come of my mouth. We generally take the words for granted, because it is easily manufactured and let out and there is no tax also, and we have got in our constitution, freedom of expression. Swamiji says: if you go to some Gulf countries, you will know. Swamiji says if you have got dental problem, they have to reach through your ears, because you cannot open your mouth. Only then we will know the importance of freedom of speech. So the words that are coming out of my mouth are extremely powerful. They can spread like the smoke; they can spread and the words are capable of destroying the people; destroying the families; destroying the society; destroying the country; the words can do. At the same time, words which are spoken properly and intelligently, the words can give even immortality and peace of mind. So my words can be like the smoke of the agarbatthi, which spreads and gives happiness to others; or my words can be like the cigarette smoke, making all the other people passive smokers; the words can harm others also.

Since the words are capable of harming others also, I should be a very very responsible speaker. This is the second thing I have to assimilate.

Recently, you saw in the newspaper how all the bottled waters are polluted, with insecticide or pesticide. So much furore was created; even in other countries, this news spread, because foreigners are very very particular. It has become a very very issue, the water that comes out of the factory can affect the people, and we consider it as very very important, but we do not think. Similarly the words which are manufactured in my brain, and which are let loose in the society, can damage, cause havoc to other people. Therefore, being a responsible speaker means, before letting out the words outside, I have to make sure that it has the quality check. Now the government is putting condition that so many parameters should be checked. Here we have got King Institute; the water has to be checked before it is allowed. Similarly, shouldn't I be responsible, before letting the words outside; because these words can cause greater destruction than even the water. Water may not kill, but words can even kill a person. A sensitive person insulted through words may even commit suicide, we are seeing.

And therefore, the second lesson I have to think and assimilate is that I have to be a responsible speaker, which means I have no right to allow loose words to go out. Before every words come out, it should go through my intellect and the ISI certificate must be there. The stamp must be there. This is the second lesson that I have to learn and assimilate, before thinking of vāk tapas.

First lesson is that the speech is the most powerful organ and the second lesson is I have to be a responsible speaker, because my words can destroy. I may not contribute positively, but I have no write to contribute negatively. Every gossip is a destruction. Every rumour is a destruction. Every sentence made based on incomplete information is a destruction, because it spreads from person to person to person.

Then the third lesson I have to understand and assimilative is if I have to produce quality words, if I have to produce quality words out of my mouth; the quantity must be limited. So when the quantity is unwieldy; quality check becomes poorer. Any company, any organisation, you can see, quality will be good initially; and the demand increases; because the news spread; quality is good; quality is good; and their customers increases, and gradually you will find that the quality comes down. It is a natural law and it is very difficult to maintain the quality, when the quantity become unwieldy.

Therefore if I want to be a responsible speaker, I have to reduce the quantity of my speech. Without quantity control, quality control is impossible. Now the question is, how to control the quantity? There are several methods, but we have to follow only, one rule, the easiest method of quantity control: I will talk to only those people, who are interested in listening to me; one small law; I will talk to only those people, who are interested in listening to me and once I decide to apply this law, I discover a startling fact. Why are you laughing? You seems to have already discovered. The truth is nobody is interested in listening to us. Nobody is interested in listening to us. If you have not discovered this fact yet, you can try.

Whenever you are in conversation, you study the body language of the person, we can see his rejection, restlessness, etc. he will look this side, that side, see the watch, and will be thinking that if only this man leaves me alone, etc. The body language will show the restlessness and you can see that that person wants to either go away and he is not interested in talking to you. He has come not for listening; but for talking. How do I know? From experience. People come to listen to me, and they declare Swamiji I want your valuable advice; they talk for one hour, and say thank you for your advice. I have not opened the mouth and they go away. Because of observing this principle, I never found an opportunity to talk. In fact, my head would have burst, but it does not because I have some classes, where I can talk without interruption.

And if you are still not able to understand from the body language, do not give long talk, after two minutes talk, wait for a moment and see; you will see the other person was waiting for the break, the moment you give a break after two minutes, you watch; either he will go, or he will start talking endlessly. In fact, the only occasion when the other person will listen to you is, when you have juicy gossip about the neighbours. That is the only condition. You can try that.

So tell that person, I have to tell you something important; and look around here and ask, I hope others are not there here and say then kindly do not tell anyone and then see the attention of the person, Nirvikalpaka samādhi. Who says nivikalpaka samādhi is difficult? And the best way is after giving such an introduction, you try telling, 'Why gossip and all, why should I say, forget it, etc. I am not saying". I tell you that person would die on that spot. Other than that, any other topic, nobody is interested in listening.

And therefore, have this one principle, I will talk only to a listener; quantity will come down. This is the third lesson, we have to learn. Reduce the quantity. Know the value of speech. And be responsible and understand that quantity has to be reduced.

And fourth lesson is what are the parameters to check the quality of the words; just as for water, they have the parameters, good water means what all should be the chemicals present, and what all should be the chemicals absent; and so in so many ppm,.. particle per... Similarly for air quality, for food quality, parameters are prescribed, based on those parameters, I check the quality, norms in industry they talk about TQM, Total Quality Management.

But we never think of TQM at the level of speech. They are four parameters which have to be observed before allowing the words to come out of the mouth; and Kṛṣṇa gives us those four parameters. So if you are a responsible speaker and if you check these four parameters, before speaking out, you are observing vāk tapas. And society will be far better. Any quarrels in the family can be avoided; many problems in the companies can be avoided; many problems can be avoided.

Kṛṣṇa gives in this slōkā; the first parameter is Anudēvagakaram. First understand that the words are capable of hurting other people. Words can hurt other people, words can do himsa to others; and the verbal himsa is generally deeper than physical violence. What is that Kural that you know. எட்டினால் இட்ட புண் ஆறாம்; நாவினால் இட்ட புண் ஆறாதுள்; Ethinal itta pun aarum, navinnal ittam pun aarathul;... you know better, just note it, enough. The scar, the physical scar may go away, but the deep scar caused in the heart through loose words can never go away; And we should remember, himsa is a pāpam. Himsa is a pāpa karma, and himsa will bring me down spiritually; pāpa karma means what? For a spiritual-seeker, pāpa karma, he spiritually falls down; every time he commits a himsa. Therefore anudēvagakaram means make sure that the words won't hurt or injure the other person.

And of course, people ask, sometime we have to use strong words, in vyavahāra, in transaction, we have to use words, Swamiji, you have to come to our house and see. And if you are going to use goodie, goodie words, with the servants and other people, they will sit on our heads; and squeeze, etc. you may say. We do accept that the value of ahimsa is not absolute; himsa may be required, but śāstra gives a warning, himsa must be only as a last resort, after exhausting non-violent methods of speaking. So now that Iraq issue is going. America is feeling the itch to attack Iraq. And all the world countries are warning strongly, that war must be last resort; This is not in politics, even in śāstram, sāma, dhāna, bhēda, and after that only danḍam. We can use verbal violence only after making sure that non-violent methods have been exhausted. That means what. I should be very very deliberate. My conscience should be clear that I have tried all other methods; so anudvēgakaram. The words should be non-hurtful.

Then the next parameter is Satyam. Satyam means truthfulness, truthfulness is defined as the alignment of the speech with the thought or the mind. Harmony of speech and mind; harmony of thought and word is called satyam, avoidance of a divided personality. So what do you mean by harmony. The thinker-I, and the speaker-I, should be in harmony. What I know and what I speak should not have a division, because the universal rule is that divided we become weak, united we become strong. Haven't you read this slogan or the proverb? Divided we fall; united we stand; a divided family will perish soon. A divided country will perish soon. A divided political party will perish soon. Anything divided will perish; anything united will be strong. This is not only empirical truth. Even in Vēdanta, dvaitam makes me suffer from saṁsāra; advaitam is ānanda. If it is true at all those levels; that is true at the level of my personality also. All my organs must be united, then I am strong enough to attempt mōkṣa. If I have a split personality, if I have a multiple personality syndrome, and if I am a doctor Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde, if I know something and say something else, I am weakening myself at all levels. Therefore asatyam is the greatest obstacle to spiritual growth. Untruth is the greatest obstacle. Not only it is obstacle, every untruth brings me down spiritually. Every truth supports me spiritually. Therefore, satyam is the second parameter to be checked; we have a special vēdic prayer for that:

A beautifully śantipatah; Oh. Lord, When I talk, let my mouth be rooted in the intellect. Let their not be any disparity in my thinking and speaking. And manōmē vāci prathiṣṭitham. Let my thoughts be in harmony with the words. This is another very very important value. And how to practice this value. Swamiji, in this age, in Kali yūga, is it possible?

So the implementation of this value is first, we take a list of our lies; we need not tell others; you need not show me also; take the list of untruth. So many pages you may require in the beginning. Then divide them by looking at them into your conscience into avoidable untruths and unavoidable untruths; and to your surprise you will find, there are many avoidable untruths. And first I start attacking the avoidable lies which itself is big and then it will come down. And if I am sincere, you will find the list-number changes; and even the unavoidable untruth will come down. But for that I should start with what? Avoidable untruths. It is a very interesting experiment, which every seeker can practice with advantage. Satyam, and for every unavoidable untruth, we utter, prayascittam is a must. For every unavoidable untruth I utter, prayascittam is a must; prayascittam, either verbal or physical or mental; I have to do.

More in the next class.

211 Chapter 17, Verses 15-16

ॐ

In this 17th chapter, after completing the topic of śṛaddhā, āhāraḥ and yajñaḥ topics, now Lord Kṛṣṇa has come to the topic of tapas and as we saw before, tapas is viewed from two different angles, one is from the standpoint of the instrument, and the other is from the standpoint of the guṇa; and from instrumental angle, kāyikam, vācīkam and mānasam tapa, He deals with.

Of these kāyika tapas or physical discipline, topic is over in the 14th verse; now in the 15th verse, which we are seeing Kṛṣṇa is dealing with vācīkam tapaḥ, over or verbal discipline and as I said in our tradition, the organ of speech is highly respected, because the more you think of organ of speech, the more you will understand its power, and it is as great as the intellect itself.

And that is why for the intellect, the presiding deity is Brahma, and for the organ of speech, the presiding deity is Sarasvati. Just as Brahma and Sarasvati are together, contributing to the growth of the universe, my buddhi and vāk should be together, contributing to my growth; therefore in the vēda, there are several suktams glorifying Brahma and Sarasvati. Sarasvati is given a very very high ranking position in vēdic literature; in fact when the child is born and when the mother gives milk to the baby, immediately after the birth, the baby's father is supposed to chant a mantra; when first time the baby sucks milk from the mother:

यस् ते स्तनः शशयो यो मयोभूर् यो रत्नधा वसुविद् यः सुदत्रः ।
येन विश्वा पुष्यसि वार्याणि सरस्वति तम् इह धातवे ऽकः ।
उर्व् अन्तरिक्षम् अन्व् एमि ॥ शुक्लयजुर्वेदः/अध्यायः ३८.५

yas tē stanah śāśayō yō mayōbhūr yō ratnadhā vasuvid yaḥ sudatraḥ |
yēna viśvā puṣyasi vāryāṇi sarasvati tam iha dhātavē :'kaḥ |
urv antarikṣam anv ēmi || śuklayajur vēdah/adhyāyaḥ 38.5

The first when the baby is taking the milk, Sarasvati dēvi is invoked, and the prayer is: that both the speech, nourished by the milk of the mother, and also the brain nourished by the milk of the mother, both of them should contribute to the well-being of the baby as well as others. And Sarasvati is invoked; Sarasvati is requested to occupy the mother's body when the milk is given.

Thus the more you think of the organ of speech, the more we will understand its importance, along with the intellect; and any powerful organ can function both ways; it can be a great blessing also and being powerful it can be a great curse also. And because it can create a hell in a family, a man of uncontrolled speech can create hell in a family. Therefore vāk tapas is considered very important.

And as I said, first we should know the importance of vāk tapas. And later we should know that the quality of speech can be improved only when the quantity is decreased; and once I have decreased the quantity, and decided to improve the quality, Kṛṣṇa says you have to take into account, four parameters; four factors to determine the superiority in the quality and those four parameters are enumerated in the first line of the verse.

So the first parameter to be taken into account is anudvēgakaram; make sure that you do not cause verbal violence; verbal violence is a powerful hiṃsa and hiṃsa is a maha pāpam, and therefore make sure that the words do not hurt other people; which means I should be sensitive enough to know what are the words which will hurt others; general norm, and this we can easily find out, whatever words used by others, hurt me, I should note those words. Such a language the other person speaks; hurts me. Therefore, I should carefully avoid those words.

Thus I should have a general knowledge of the sāmānya hurting words and thereafter there are particular words which will hurt particular people, viśēṣa hurting words; and if we are regularly interacting with family members, or office members, I should know what are the sensitive issues which can hurt. Every married person should know that criticising his spouses' family will create a very very big turmoil in the family. Don't drag my father into this. Whatever you say, you tell anything about me, but don't criticise the parents. Thus I should know what are the taboo area; Similarly for everyone I have to note and be alert and of course there may be occasions when we will have to use strong words; violence cannot be absolutely avoided; śāstra allows strong words, firm words when they are necessary but the warning is before using them, make sure that all non-violent methods have been exhausted. That means what, I cannot afford to be impulsive, before I use hurting words, I should have scanned and made sure that the other words have failed; and only after the failure of non-violent words, then alone I have a right to use stronger hurting words and that too, to the limited extent required. Therefore the first norm, non-violent words.

Then the second norm is satyam; satyam means truth and I was talking about truth in the last class; that truth is a condition in which my organ of speech, i.e. I, the speaker and I the knower, there is no disparity. The thinker-I and the speaker-I must be in harmony, everytime I am telling a lie, I am creating a rift, I am creating a friction, I am creating a division in my personality. And division is disintegration; when they are in harmony, it is called integrity, when they are not in harmony, it is called disintegration; and in English language itself, disintegration means destruction. Disintegration literally means when the parts are separating; that is called disintegration and it is a synonym of destruction. Therefore, everytime I am lying, I am causing a rift; a disintegration in my personality, that means spiritual disintegration is taking place; spiritual destruction is taking place, invisibly I am slipping down spiritually. This awareness must be intensely there, I must make my mind sensitive enough to intensively feel the spiritual hurt that I am causing to myself. And I should become so sensitive that I should feel the hurt everytime I am telling a lie. And it should be so sensitive, that I should lose sleep for days together, for every life. How my life is now? Better not said. Therefore, the mind should become so sensitive, that I should feel the hurt. Therefore satyam means integrity; non-divisiveness and that is advaitam in vyāvahārika plane. Advaitam in vyāvahāra is harmony among the members; At the pāramārthika level, advaitam means absence of a second thing; in vyāvahārika plane, advaitam is not absence of a second thing, but in vyāvahārika plane, advaitam means harmony of things.

And when many things are in harmony, I am in advaitam. When my whole system is functioning in harmony, even though organs are many, people take me as one individual. Why they are taking me as one individual, when I have got several parts? It is only because it is a system in which there is an organisation, integration; and if there is no harmony, there is no advaitam, it is a broken system. When there is no harmony in the family; it is called a broken family; and psychologists call it non-functional family. Similarly when the buddhi and speech, buddhi is husband and speech is wife; or the other way round also, when there is disharmony, between buddhi and v ā k, it is a non-functional system. In non-functional family, the children will not grow well. In a non-functional individual, there will not be the growth of spirituality. Therefore satyam is considered a very very important thing. In Muṇḍaka upaniṣad, we have the word satyam ēva jāyathē; Satyam alone wins. Wins what? That is not said; Wins mōkṣa. There may be material failures, by speaking the truth; there may be material disadvantages, but the upaniṣad declares spiritual victory depends upon satyam. Therefore Satyam is important.

Then the next one priyam. When we are using our organ of speech, certainly it is meant for communication; communication means what transferring information from one head to another. Like copying the cassette from one cassette to another. Similarly it is transference of information from one brain to another. But communication is mere transference of information. There are so many other factors involved; when I am speaking with another person. First there is a body language, which is now becoming so important; they are studying that so much. Even in management sciences they have included, when Vajpayee and Musharaff met in Agra or somewhere, they were interpreting even their body language. Lot of study going. Therefore my body language communicates pleasantness or unpleasantness; love or hatred; my facial expressions convey things. They are all called non-verbal communication. Along with every verbal communication I am communicating a lot, non-verbally, through my body language. Through my facial expression, through my eye contact, or absence of it. In communication science, they say, eye contact is very important and the communication becomes powerful when there is eye contact.

That is why Dayānanda Swami always says, never listen with closed eye; eye contact would be there; and not only that, the teacher would not know, whether the student is in meditation or asleep. Nowadays they give a very great importance to eye contact. That is why a live guru becomes more important than a non-live guru.

In theosophy they talk about invisible masters; we do not recommend invisible masters floating in the sky. We do not give importance to distance communication, i.e. physics, chemistry, economics, OK. But it is always said that spiritual communication should have a live guru. Then alone the role of eye contact can be materialised. And therefore body language, facial expression, eye contact, then the pitch, then the choice of words, the manners like politeness, etc. they always write the power of 'Thank you' and the power of 'Please', two words, they say, they are very important, in western culture, what you call, children, they are taught; everytime you receive something, say thank you. Please. Even when they get a banana from a Swamiji, they say thank you. Otherwise the parents scold; therefore pleasant manners; so many other non-verbal communications are there.

And here Kṛṣṇa says the non-verbal communication should be such that the other person must feel comfortable. Therefore, priyam means, the receiver of the communication must feel comfortable. In English, they say pleasing manners.

Whatever be the content of the verbal communication; irrespective of the content of the verbal communication, the non-verbal communication should be pleasing. And if that is kept pleasing, the beauty is even when the content is unfavourable, an unfavourable content can be communicated pleasantly and when it is pleasantly communicated, the sting of the unfavourable content will come down. And therefore Priyam means once a person talks to me, he must feel like talking to me again, whereas we know some other people, whom we would not like to meet in life for the second time. The people feel should feel comfortable. And that is called priyam.

I remember, I was in Bangalore giving a series of talk. Giving the talk in one school and the school is founded by one great śāstri, and he is a learned person, respected person, very powerful person; and very philanthropic also; he has a set of institutions, and he is very old also and he also gives his school for any good cause, without any charge, and he also cooperates and the whole staff is available for that. And at the end of my talks, we had a get together and that person could not attend the lectures, even though he loves it; as he had gone out of station, or something, and for the last day get-together he came; and they had told me that he wants to meet you and he has come and then I met him; very old 94, 95 years. He came straight in front of me, staring at me; I thought I had violated something and was little afraid.

Then he said: Swami, and he was showing the finger also; Swami, you are doing a great work; you should never take this as my school; it is your school; and you should not come here only once every year; you should come very often; content is wonderful; but no priyam. It is not that he had negative motive or something; for he has been the head therefore, all the time commands, he got used to it; What I am telling is, good content you can convey in an unpleasant manner, a negative content can be conveyed in a pleasant manner also, and that is also an equally important, priyam.

Then the fourth one is hitam. Whenever you are communicating, there are two people involved; the speaker and the listener. Sometime people speak without a listener also. That we are not taking into account normally. There is a speaker and a listener. And we should remember the best communication is that in which both the speaker and the listener are beneficiaries. When the speaker also benefit; of course the speaker will benefit; or else he would not speak, the speaker benefits and the listener also benefits, it is a twice blessed gift, in which the giver and receiver are beneficiaries; that is uttama communication.

And the madhyama communication is that speaker bothers about only his benefit; he does not bother about the listeners', even time availability of the listeners, especially when you call a person on phone, our general tendency is call and bombard. Shouldn't we ask, in what condition the other person is; on phone, I do not know whether he is busy or not. Therefore should not I consider the other person's condition. If I do not take that into account, if I am only an utterly selfish person, only telling what I want to say, that is madhyama communication.

And adhama communication is what? Where neither the speaker, nor the receiver gets any benefit. All the gossips spreading the rumour, all these will come under ahitaṁ for both the speaker and listener. Useless for both, after wasting one or two hours, if I ask what did I get after talking about different family people, neighbours, people, etc. Only I have spread rumors; unconfirmed information I have spread which only causes havoc in the society.

Therefore Kṛṣṇa says, when I speak, I should ask the question? Will it benefit the listener also? I may benefit that is not enough. Will it benefit the listener also? And such a speech is called hitaṁ; anudvēgakaraṁ, satyam, priyaṁ, hitaṁ; all the four factors must be taken care of.

And Śankarācārya in his commentary says that they are not optional conditions. Not any four, any three, any two, any one; like in school. Like that person that would be son-in-law was interviewed; Would be father-in-law asked the question. Do you smoke, do you drink, etc. Various questions he asked to find out the character of that youngster. For everything he said, No No No No. He was so happy that my daughter is going to get the best husband in the world. Then he was curious; any bad habit I asked, you said Not there. Now you tell me do you have any bad habit; Then the youngster said; Only one bad habit; that is I only tell lies!

Therefore all the four are equally important, Śankarācārya emphasises. Then sometimes people ask, Swamiji, when we speak truths, they are truths alright; and it may be even for the wellbeing of another person; we talk about constructive criticism also, it may be satyam, it may be hitaṁ; but it will not be priyaṁ. In English we use the expression, unpalatable truth.

So when satyam is apriyaṁ, what am I to do; when telling the truth is going to be unpleasant; my motive may be good, my intention may be good, I want the other person to learn and grow, like the opposition criticism in the Parliament; intention is supposed to be good; constructive criticism should be done; but nowadays the problem is whatever the other people do, you have to criticise. Now what are we to do; when satyam and hitaṁ are apriyaṁ. What is the solution? There is only one solution; when we talk about unpalatable truth; we should remember that there are many palatable truths also. We only talk about unpalatable truth; we should remember, that there are palatable truths also.

So before talking about unpalatable truth. I ask a question, do I ever speak a palatable truth. If a person has a good virtue, do I talk about that and congratulate and praise and glorify. Our general problem is we want to talk about only the unpalatable truth. When a person speaks of only unpalatable truth, then it becomes a problem. So a person should develop a habit of speaking palatable truths first. Whether it is with regard to children; if they do some good thing, we should practice praising that and if I generally speak palatable truth; which the other person likes and enjoy, when I am speaking unpalatable truth, it will be taken in a proper spirit.

Unpalatable truths hurts only when unpalatable truths alone are spoken. Develop the habit of speaking palatable truths also, then unpalatable truths will not hurt; or the hurt will be far far less; motive will be misunderstood; and therefore bad unpalatable truths with palatable truths; so to praise in the beginning, then one criticism, followed by two praises; even three or four, minimum two praises, before and after, in between one criticism. In that also we do like this. Two praises we finish in half a minute; and criticism we dwell upon.

Another important law is do not dwell upon the unpalatable truth. If you love dwelling upon, dwelling upon palatable truth, virtue, which is truth. So, therefore, it is possible to communicate unpalatable truths also. All these four parameters should be taken into account; before I open my mouth. Then you will say; Swamiji, if that be the case, we cannot speak at all! I think you will have to observe maunam only; And that too when there is a conversation, when there is an exchange, quarrel, etc. where is the question of time to think, because I have to immediately answer in exchange; where is the time to take into account, all these four factors, it appears impossible. But remember, it is possible, because śāstram will never teach what is impossible; Ṛṣis are never impractical, they are practical.

How it becomes practical? If a person trains himself, to look into these factors, sincerely, because of sheer training, he gets a faculty and he would be able to do these things quickly. Initially it will take time; but in due course, a person can do all those things quickly; like operating a machine; driving a cycle; driving a car; initially, you have to take into account so many accessories, to see this, to see that, to see the left, to see the right, etc. it looks impossible, but you go on operating a machine; then you get the facility that even in the nick of a moment, you are able to do several things. Otherwise when there is a car coming in front; how does a driver put a brake; he does not think which is the clutch, which is the brake, etc. It is automatic, it becomes instinctive. While learning to drive, he often gets confused, which is which. But by sheer practice, in a nick of moment, he is able to do, I give the example of the divers' the sports; when in the Olympic games or Asian games and all, you would have seen the diving, if you have not seen, better you see it; he jumps from a few meters and before entering the pool of water, how much time he has? May be a few seconds; but within that seconds, he is able to do so many somersaults in perfect harmony, and they show it in slow motion; slow motion, even in slow motion, it would not be one minute. How is he able to control the body and do all these things; within a few seconds; it is sheer practice.

If that is possible; in our case, if we fall, before we know we are falling, we are on the ground. So if I ask you to do all these things, you will ask whether all these are possible; but it is possible. Similarly, observing all these factors, when we are conversing, appears to be an impossible task. It only requires sincerity and practice.

And when in music, they have the kalpāna svarams; initially singing the citta svaram itself is difficult; but the musician within the talam, range, he is able to sing that svaram and the throat has to produce that ri, that ga, that ma, how does he do? Sheer practice. And therefore, it requires practice and which means it requires a value for that.

And if a person values spiritual growth is not easy. All these are part of spiritual growth. Anudvēgakaram, satyam, priyam, hitam vākyam. Vākyam is the fifth factor. Vākyam means the speech; the other four words are the adjectives. Anudvēgakaram vākyam, satyam vākyam, priyam vākyam, hitam vākyam yat. That is called vāk tapas. And that is one subāṣitam nicely tells: Sorry I forgot.

That subāṣitam tells whatever a wise person speaks casually, even those casual words are golden words. A wise person's casual words are golden words, which means what? There are no casual words. They appear to be casual words, but even they are thoughtfully uttered; whereas in the case of an unrefined person, even thoughtful words are worthless words. What a beautiful subāṣitam! Therefore anudvēgakaram, satyam, priyam, hitam cha yat vākyam is sātvikam vākyam. And svadyāya abhyasanam caiva; scriptural study; that subāṣitam I got it.

असत् भिः सपते नास्ती जले लिखिता अक्षरं ॥

sadbhistu līlayā prōktam śilā likhitam akṣaram |
asat bhi sapatē nābī jalē likhitā akṣaram ||

Sadbhistu līlayā prōktam. Can you understand? When great people talk casually, you can walk with a tape recorder and record and you can learn; līlayā prōktam, casually spoken prōktam are śilā likhitam akṣaram, they are so valuable words; whereas asat asat bhi sapatē nābī, an unrefined person, when he speaks sapatē strongly swearing, that is also jalē likhitā akṣaram, like the words written in water; they are valueless words.

Svādhyāyābhyasanam means study of scriptures or reading of scriptures, svādhyā means śāstram; so pārayaṇam is also called svādhyā; but in this context, svādhyā is śāstram, and abyanam means pāraṇam. So svādhyā abyanam means śāstra pāraṇam, is also considered to be a vāk tapas; वाङ् मयं तप उच्यते vāṅmayam tapa ucyatē.

Verse 17.16

मनः प्रसादः सौम्यत्वं मौनमात्मविनिग्रहः
भावसंशुद्धिरित्येतत् तपो मानसमुच्यते ॥ १७.१६ ॥

manaḥ prasādaḥ saumyatvaṁ maunamātmavinigrahaḥ |
bhāvasaṁśuddhirityētat tapō mānasamucyatē || 17.16 ||

मनः प्रसादः manaḥ prasādaḥ mental quietude, tranquility सौम्यत्वम् saumyatvam gentleness मौनम् maunam silence आत्मविनिग्रहः ātmavinigrahaḥ mind control, भावसंशुद्धिः bhāvasaṁśuddhiḥ purity of motive इति एतत् iti ētat all this उच्यते ucyatē is said मानसं तपः mānasam tapaḥ to be mental austerity

16. Mental quietude gentleness, silence, mind control, purity of motive, - all these are said to be mental austerity.

So now comes mānasam tapas. This is the toughest; because kāyikam, the physical body is the grossest instrument, and therefore physical discipline is easier; because it belongs to the stūla śārīram, vācikaṁ tapas is more difficult, because vāk indriyam is a subtle organ; belonging to the subtle body; therefore it is more difficult and still more difficult is mānasam tapaḥ; mental austerity, because mind is an internal instrument, whereas vāk is an external instrument; vāk is bāhya indriyam; manas is anthar indriyam; therefore it is more difficult.

And what are the mental disciplines? The first one is manaḥ prasādaḥ; manaḥ prasādaḥ means a mind which is free from stress and strain; freedom from mental stress is the first mental discipline; freedom from mental stress; aśanti, restlessness of the mind; is called manaḥ prasādaḥ; because of worry about the future; what will happen tomorrow; Bhṛthari tells in his Nīti śatkam, addressing the mind, once in a while addressing the mind, your own mind,

परिभ्रमसि किं व्यर्थं क्वचन चित्त विश्राम्यतां
स्वयं भवति यद्यथा तत्तथा नान्यथा।
अतीतमपि न स्मरन्नपि च भाव्यसङ्कल्पय-न्नतर्कितगमनाननुभवस्व भोगानिह॥ paribhramasi kiṁ vyartham kvacana citta viśramyatām svayaṁ bhavati yadyathā tattathā nānyathā | atītamapi na smarannapi ca bhāvyaśaṅkalpayā-nnatarkitagamanānanubhavasva bhōgāniha ||

Oh Mind! Why are you wandering all over; and by your wandering is the future going to be influenced. Planning for the future is a deliberate action; it is great, it is wonderful. But wandering, worrying, concerned, anxious mind is not doing a deliberate action. It is a reaction to the future. Planning for the future is action. Worrying about the future is reaction. Therefore he asks by such reaction, is tomorrow going to change. So why are you unnecessarily going round and round; not only it is not going to improve the future; your efficiency in the present is affected.

Planning improves efficiency; worrying decreases efficiency. Worrying causes deficiency; planning causes efficiency. We are not against planning, but we are against the அலட்டல் allattal business. Why are you worrying too much? Svayaṁ bhavati yadyathā tattathā nānyathā; what has to happen tomorrow, let it happen. We have entered the super six; one good news is shared; cup may come or not; what are they going to do, therefore why are you worrying too much about that; atītamapi na smarannapi ca bhāvyasaṅkalpaya. Do not brood over the past.

Similarly, brooding is different from learning from the past, Recollecting the past, and learning adds to my present efficiency; nothing wrong. But brooding the past and learning valuable lessons; but brooding over the past, reduces my efficiency. Remember the past for learning; think of the future for planning, that is healthy; remembering the past for brooding and thinking of the future for worrying, both are unhealthy; and therefore [atītamapi na smarannapi ca bhāvyasaṅkalpaya,

natarakitagamanānanubhavasva bhōgāniha||](#)

So face the present, which alone is available in the present. This relaxed condition of the mind, is called manaḥ prasādaḥ, Stress free mind.

Then saumyatvam; gentleness of the thought; gentleness of the thoughts is called saumyatvam; you may ask what do you mean by gentleness of thought; thoughts gentleness means what, we should remember, thoughts alone gets crystalised into words. Thoughts alone get crystalised into action; and therefore rude words and rude actions originate in the mind alone. And therefore rude thoughts are those thoughts which lead to rude words and actions. Gentle thoughts are those thoughts which will lead to gentle words and actions. Therefore, kāyika, vāchikam tapas is really possible only if the mind is also handled properly. Therefore Soumyatvam. So let your thoughts be gentle. Then maunam; learn to remain silent for a few minutes, at least daily, it may not be possible for long time, but daily for a few minutes, when you do your prayer at the end of the prayer, learn to be free from deliberate thinking. Thoughts may occur, because of the vāsanās and habits, thoughts may occur; but just remaining without judging the thoughts; without labeling the thoughts as good or bad, just being aware of the thought. If good thoughts come, you need not congratulate; if unhealthy thoughts come, you need not feel guilty and reject; you need not do; just learn to have. This is called sākṣi bhava; it is a wonderful experience. There is a group called Vipassana group. They have a meditation. It is a Buddhistic meditation and they have camps for 10 days or so; you are not supposed to speak, you are not supposed to read; you are not supposed to write; you are not supposed to listen; doing nothing, you are just asked to watch; 10 days. I am not asking you to do such rigorous thing; not even one day; I am suggesting the simplest version; five minutes just being the sākṣi of the mind. That is called maunam. It is not thoughtlessness; freedom from deliberate thinking or joining the thought pattern; maunam.

Then ātmavinigrahaḥ; means the direction of the thoughts. So directing the thoughts in such a way, that positive thoughts are encouraged, unhealthy thoughts are discouraged. Daivi sampath is encouraged; āsuri sampath is discouraged; that is called ātma vinigrahaḥ. Here ātma means mind; vinigrahaḥ means what disciplining. Disciplining the mind is disciplining the thoughts; disciplining the thoughts is non-cooperation movement with regard to unhealthy thought. Unhealthy thoughts will come; hatred will come. But I refuse to cooperate; that is called ātma vinigrahaḥ.

More in the next class.

Hari Om

212 Chapter 17, Verses 16-20

ॐ

Lord Kṛṣṇa is dealing with the topic of tapas, which in this context means any form of discipline; and this tapas he divides into three types. First from the angle of instrument and later from the angle of the three guṇas; now we are seeing the kāraṇa dṛṣṭya topic, of these physical discipline, i.e. kāyika tapas has been talked about in the 14th verse, then vāk tapas has been talked about in the 15th, and now mānasam tapaḥ; mental discipline is being talked about in the 16th verse, which we were seeing in the last class.

The first mental discipline that Kṛṣṇa mentions is mana prasādaḥ; enjoying a relaxed mind, enjoying an equanimous mind, enjoying mana śānti. That means developing a capacity to retain the poise of mind, in and through the ups and downs of life, Kṛṣṇa does not mention here how to achieve that; because Kṛṣṇa has already talked about it in the third chapter, in the form of karma-yōga, he defined karma-yōga, as samathvam yōga ucyatē.

And there we have talked about how to develop an appropriate attitude towards action and appropriate attitude towards the results of action; if we have a healthy attitude towards these two; equanimity is a natural consequence. Thus mana prasādaḥ essentially means, follow karma-yōga; read third chapter once again; and practice; that is mana prasādaḥ.

Then Saumyatvaṃ, gentleness at the thought level; so that it will reflect in both the words as well deeds; if the thoughts are not gentle; words and actions cannot be gentle, because the character of thought alone, flows down to the words and action. Thought is like a seed, word is like plant and action is like a tree. If you take care of, at the thought level, at the seed level, the tree will take care of itself; and that is saumyatvaṃ, gentleness.

Then maunam; maunam means silence, generally the word maunam refers to verbal silence. Naturally the question will come, maunam is a discipline at the vāk level; how come Kṛṣṇa is using maunam in mānasam tapaḥ? Is it the tongue of the slip; or the slip of the tongue, that maunam is put in this verse; the doubt may come.

So therefore Śankarācārya gives a particular meaning in this context; primarily maunam means vāk tapas or verbal silence only but to practice that verbal silence, a mental control is required because vāk is controlled by the mind. And therefore Śankarācārya says maunam means that mental control by which one is able to silence the vāk; that mental control by which one is able to silence the vāk. That is the meaning of maunam; according to Śankarācārya. Or you can take another meaning also, maunam means mental silence, freedom from mental noise; noisy mind is a disturbed mind and therefore maunam can be taken as freedom unwanted thoughts. It is not freedom from thoughts totally, freedom from unwanted thoughts, because unwanted thoughts alone become noise of the mind. So when it is a deliberate healthy thought, we do not look upon it as a disturbance. You do not say one hour mental disturbance between 7 and 8 caused by Swamiji. Do you? Even though you are supposed to receive thoughts from me, I hope you are receiving, and certainly your mind is entertaining thoughts in keeping with my words, but we do not look upon it as disturbance. So thought itself is not a disturbance. A thought which is unhealthy that alone is disturbance and therefore maunam means freedom from unhealthy thoughts; like jealousy, etc.

So maunam, then, ātmavinigrahaḥ; ātmavinigrahaḥ means management or mastery of the mind. So that mind will be my instrument, rather than I being the instrument of the mind. Here the word ātma means mind; not sat cidānanda ātma, here ātma means mind; ātmavinigrahaḥ means directing the mind properly, in the healthy field; is ātmavinigrahaḥ. Up to this we saw in the last class.

Now coming to the 2nd line, bhāvasaṁsuddhi. Bhāvaḥ means motive; saṁsuddhi means purity. So bhāvasaṁsuddhi means purity of motive; freedom from hidden motive; expressing one motive outwardly, but having a hidden agenda, in newspaper, we constantly hear of hidden agenda. So not having a hidden agenda; my heart must be available to openly see by any one. That open heartedness is called bhāvasaṁsuddhi; all these things will come under tapaḥ; mānasam uchyatē; all of them is mānasam tapaḥ; mental discipline.

So with this division of tapas, based on instrument, i.e. the organ based division is over.

From the next verse, Kṛṣṇa is going to divide tapas once again based on the guṇas. That is sātvika; rājasa and tāmasa. 17th deals with sātvikam, 18th rājasam, and 19th tāmasam. We will read:

Verse 17.17

श्रद्धया परया तप्तं तपस्तत्रिविधं नरैः ।
अफलाकाङ्क्षिभिर्युक्तैः सात्त्विकं परिचक्षते ॥ १७.१७ ॥

śraddhayā parayā taptam tapastat trividham naraiḥ |
aphalākāṅṣibhiryuktaiḥ sāttvikam paricakṣatē || 17.17 ||

परिचक्षते paricakṣatē they declare तत् त्रिविधं तपः tat trividham tapaḥ that threefold austerity तप्तम् taptam – which is practiced परया श्रद्धया parayā śraddhayā with great faith, नरैः naraiḥ by those people युक्तैः yuktaiḥ who are disciplined अफलाकाङ्क्षिभिः aphalākāṅṣibhiḥ (and) are not desirous of the result सात्त्विकम् sāttvikam to be Sātvic

17. (They) declare that threefold austerity which is practised with great faith by those people who are disciplined and are not desirous of the result to be sātvic.

So what is sātvika tapas? Kṛṣṇa defines; trividham tapaḥ naraiḥ taptam; When these three fold discipline is practiced by people, three fold means kāyika, vāchika, manasa tapas, mentioned in the previous three verses, when a person practices any one of them; how does he practice. What is his attitude towards this tapas? And what is the value that he has?

Based on the mode of practice, Kṛṣṇa wants to name it; Kṛṣṇa says parayā śraddhayā taptam; this is practiced not for the sake of others; not because of pressure from the scriptures; not because of pressure from some Swamis or gurus, not because of some threat of health; it is not because of any of those reasons, parayā śraddhayā; because of great reverence, value for this discipline. When they are voluntarily practiced, out of value and regard: parayā śraddhayā taptam.

And aphalākāṅkṣibhiḥ, without expecting any result for this tapas, akāṁṣa means expectation, phalam means reward or benefit; phala kāmṣi means one who expects a reward, aphalākāṅkṣi means expectation of any reward; i.e., without asking if I follow this tapas, what will I get; will I get money, will I get promotion; will my business run in a better profit; what will I get out of it; because human being is always a utilitarian.

Therefore whatever I prescribe, the first question asked will I get, if nothing, I should at least say, puṇyam you will get; or I should say svargam; or some result or the other, a person asks, Kṛṣṇa says: aphalākāṅkṣi, without expectation of any result. This is repeatedly said in the Geetha, right from 2nd chapter you will find Kṛṣṇa uses this word repeatedly; yōgastha kuru karmāṇi, saṅgam tvāktva Dhanamjaya; Do not expect result; do not expect result; is oft-quoted expression; this is confusing thing; People will ask: If I do not expect any result, what will be my motive to practice that? The very motivation is I should be promised of some reward. So what is the significance we should understand. When we ask what is the benefit I get out of this tapas or any sādhana for that matter, I want to look upon this tapas as a means; and through this means I am asking for some end. Therefore when I am asking for some benefit out of these values, actually it means I am looking upon all these values as a means; and I look upon something else as an end; means what profit in business; profit name, or fame, or Padma Bhushan or Bharata Ratna or Magsasay award, or I do not know; some award.

So what the śāstra says, as long as you love something, or you follow something as a means, your love is never true love; when you follow anything, as a means for some other goal, your love is never true love, because love for the means is never true; because a person loves the means, not for the sake of the means, a person loves a means, only for the sake of the end. And that means what? Love for the means is nothing but love for the end transferred to the means, it is a borrowed love; it is a fake love; When I say, I love, because you are rich, it is very clear that I do not love you. I love your riches. My love for you is fake; it is my love for the money transferred to you. That means I will love you as long as you have the riches; the moment you lose the wealth, I will drop you like a hot potato. Similarly, if you are going to follow satyam, tapas, etc. for the sake of business success or money or credibility or name or fame, that means you really do not have a value for them; because you look upon them as a means; and therefore Kṛṣṇa says, never ask what will be the benefit out of it; that means do not look upon it as a means for some other end; therefore, without looking for some other benefit, you practice this.

Then the question comes; if I am not promised any benefit, I will not have a motive to follow that; what will be the motivation to tell the truth? Kṛṣṇa says that you should follow them; at the same time, it should not a means for some other end; you should follow them. Follow them means tapas, dharma, satyam, tapas, but you should not treat as a means for any other end. How is it possible? This is a quiz; you have to follow them, you should not treat them as a means for some other end; what does it mean? It means you should value them so much that they themselves should become an end in itself; dharma should not be a means for money; dharma should not be a means for profit; dharma should not be a means for material success; dharma should not be a means for name and fame; you should value dharma so much, that it should become an end in itself. And dharma will become an end in itself only when you know its value.

This Dayānanda Swami repeatedly says; you have to know the value of every value and you will know the value of dharma only when the mind becomes mature; and therefore Kṛṣṇa is asking us to become more sensitive; more mature; so that you will follow dharma as an end in itself and you will never treat dharma as a means for some worldly benefit. And even if some worldly benefit comes for you, you should look upon them as the benefit, it should become an incidental bye-product. Money should become not an end achieved through dharma. Money if at all it comes, it should be a bye product of dharma, that even if that bye-product money does not come, I should not feel I have failed. I should become so happy, that I have been able to follow dharma, because following dharma itself I value as an end. In fact, for a mature person, dharma makes a person a human being; a human being enjoys human status; only when dharma becomes a naturally valued thing; he does not ask the question, what will I get if I follow values? Or a person complains, Swamiji, I followed all of them, I only suffer as a consequence of that.

As long as a person complains dharma does not pay, as long as a person asks what will be the result of dharma? It means he is an immature person; prākṛta puruṣa. Kṛṣṇa says: You grow up from animal-man to man-man; prākṛta puruṣa to samskṛta puruṣa. That means Dharma must be an end in itself. That is why in the four puruṣārtās, dharma is given not as a means for artha; dharma is never given as a means of kāma; dharma is given as an end in itself. Therefore, when Kṛṣṇa says do not expect any result: Kṛṣṇa says: Kindly go down to the level of treating dharma as a means, seeking an end. Raise your emotional maturity level and treat all these tapas as an end in itself. And once it is an end in itself, you do not ask what is the benefit, because for an end there is no benefit. For a means alone, there is benefit. And therefore, aphalākāṅkṣibhiḥ means that for mature people who value this tapas as an end in itself and when they practice and they enjoy the very practice itself.

Somebody said: "The problem of being punctual is that there is no one to appreciate your punctuality". Can you understand what it is? Everybody comes late and when you are punctual, there is nobody to acknowledge and reward you. That means what? Even for punctuality you want somebody to reward you. Attendance in schools they want reward. I should enjoy my very attempt to practice all of them. That means that I am a satvik person;

Aphalākāṅkṣibhiḥ; by mature person, who has converted this as an end in itself.

And yuktaiḥ, those who are integrated; that means that who do not externally follow; intellectually they have a value for that. It is practiced out of conviction, not because of any compelling factors; therefore yuktaiḥ, people of integrity, taptam yat tapaḥ, taptam, that tapas which is practiced, that is sāttvikam paricakṣatē. That is called sātvika tapas.

And Śankarācārya tells elsewhere that you should not practice dharma even for the sake of mōkṣa; that itself is wrong. even though for sometimes we say, that if you follow dharma, you will get cittaśuddhi, and it will give you enough puṇyam and that you puṇyam will give you guru, puṇyam will give you śāstram, even those carrots that we dangle; the carrots of mōkṣa, the carrots of guru, the carrot of śāstra, Śankarācārya says in his commentary, you should not follow dharma even for the sake of mōkṣa; you should value dharma for the sake of dharma itself. That is maturity. Sāttvikam paricakṣatē.

सत्कारमानपूजार्थं तपो दम्भेन चैव यत् ।
क्रियते तदिह प्रोक्तं राजसं चलमध्रुवम् ॥ १७.१८ ॥

[satkāramānapūjārthaṃ tapō dambhēna caiva yat |
kriyatē tadiha prōktaṃ rājasam calamadhruvam || 17.18 ||](#)

तत् तपः tat tapaḥ that austerity यत् क्रियते yat kriyatē which is practised, दम्भेन dambhēna with pretence सत्कारमानपूजार्थम् satkāramānapūjārtham for the sake of praise, honour and worship, प्रोक्तम् इह च एव prōktaṃ iha ca ēva is said here राजसम् rājasam to be Rājasic चलम् calam whose result is temporary अध्रुवम् adhravam and uncertain

18. That austerity which is performed with pretence for the sake of praise, honour and worship is said to be Rājasic, whose result is temporary and uncertain.

So this is the tapas practiced by the immature people. They are interested in the reward that will come through satyam. They say if you speak truth, you will have credibility in Society. People will have trust in you; then naturally, they will give more and more orders; that means you will get plenty of profit; therefore tell truth. So that you will get such and such result, you have reduced Satyam to a means, which again means the value of Satyam is made lesser than the value of something else.

Because, remember means-love is always lover love; it is a fake love; it is a temporary love; that means what? If I can get the profit without telling the truth, I will profit for that; why struggle? So therefore, an emotionally immature person practices all these values, but he says if I practice I will get either arta, arta means what, profit, or kāma, that is worldly pleasures, which is the result of wealth again, or I will get puṇyam, so that after death I will go to svarga. With some motive of other, because of the emotional immaturity; he practices, but one thing is there, he practices them;

Yat kriyatē, tapas done by those immature people who do not look upon tapas as an end in itself, they look upon as it as a means.

Means for what? Satkāraḥ; satkāraḥ means praise or glorification; they want to be known in the society as a dhārmika puruṣaḥ. So they want that VIP treatment in the elite circle and therefore satkāraḥ means stutiḥ or praśamśa. Or mānam; mānam means what, honour. Honour means front seat even if you are late; if you are a VIP, you have to go late. That is one of the qualifications required; I did not know, I was caught up many times by going early. So if you are VIP, you are supposed to go late, and that late VIP will be brought through the middle of the crowd, and front they will bring him and clean the chair and will ask him to shit. For Mānam for VIP treatment.

Then pūja, worship like pāda pūja etc. for getting the elevations; a person practices dharmāḥ; Puṇyārtam, iha amuṅtha phala bhōgartham, a person practices, such and also done with dambhaḥ. Since he wants a recognition from the society, he wants to make sure that whatever he follows is known by the Society. So if it is done without others' knowledge, how will I get that recognition? And therefore, publicity becomes very very important; therefore dambhēna; with all form of publicity; pomp and show; whatever tapas is practiced; that is called rājasam tapaḥ. And which will certainly produce worldly result; but the problem is the materialistic or worldly result for tapas has got two disadvantages; one is adhruvam; it is indefinite; sometimes recognition comes; often recognition does not come. How many people complaining; I have been doing; working, but the other person applied maska to the boss and he was promoted; I do all the job and that person only does some extra curricular services to bosses' wife. Therefore he something for the home and therefore he is promoted; and I feel cheated, because I want to do my job properly for the sake of promotion; and you are never guaranteed of promotion even if you work well. Therefore he says, adhruvam; reward and recognition and promotion is indefinite.

And not only that even if it comes, calam, even if you are elevated, even if you are getting some other benefit, some extra money you get, that is calam, calam means fleeting; it is perishable; it is subject to end. So such a tapas is rājasam tapaḥ.

Thus in sāvika tapaḥ, tapas is an end. In rājasam tapaḥ, tāpas is a means for selfish, materialistic benefit. Then what is tāmasam tapaḥ? Kṛṣṇa says:

मूढग्राहेणात्मनो यत् पीडया क्रियते तपः ।
परस्योत्सादनार्थं वा तत्तामसमुदाहृतम् ॥ १७.१९ ॥

mūḍhagrāhēṇa"tmanō yat pīḍayā kriyatē tapaḥ |
parasyōtsādanārtham vā tattāmasamudāhṛtam || 17.19 ||

तत् तपः tat tapaḥ that austerity यत् क्रियते yat kriyatē which is practised पीडया आत्मनः pīḍayā ātmanaḥ for the torture of the body मूढग्राहेण mūḍhagrāhēṇa out of an erroneous notion, वा उत्सादनार्थम् vā utsādanārtham for the destruction परस्य parasya of others उदाहृतम् udāhṛtam is said तामसम् tāmasam to be Tāmasic

19. That austerity which is practiced by the torture of the body out of an erroneous notion or for the destruction of others is said to be Tāmasic.

For a tāmasic person also, tapas is only a means. Here does not know the value of tapas and therefore he uses far inferior ends, just as a person using the sandalwood as a fuel. Sandalwood as a fuel who will use because he does not know its value.

Here this person mūḍhagrāhēṇa yat tapaḥ kriyatē; that tapas which is practiced with false notion; false resolve, unhealthy resolve, inferior resolve for revenge, etc. you will find in purāṇās, many people practice tapas to get power for the sake of revenge. In fact, the whole Mahābhāratha is a series of tit for tat. Somebody does a huge yāga to get a child; Dhṛṣṭadhumna is born, just for the sake of destroying Drōṇa; Can you imagine; and for that tapas is practiced. Amba practiced tapas to be reborn to take revenge on Bhīṣma. And such false, and mean and resolve, that is also resolve, there is also will power, but the will power is negative.

Therefore grāhaḥ means resolve or vow, mūḍha, born out of delusion; delusion based false resolve, is behind this tapas.

And ātmanaḥ pīḍayā; and invariably such tapas will involve torturing the body, etc. which śāstra never recommends, because body is a sacred gift from the Lord, we should not pamper the body, but we cannot injure the body; but these people take to extreme torture. Here ātmanaḥ, here ātma is not sat cid ānanda; satcidānada ātma cannot be tortured; here it is śarīram. śarīrasya pīḍayā; how one word has so many meanings; two verses before we saw. ātmavinigrahaḥ, there we said ātma is mind; and here we say ātma is body; according to context we have to take; ātmanaḥ pīḍayā kriyatē.

Not only that, the motive is also negative, parasya utsādanārtham, it is for the destruction of other people; destruction of the competitor in the business; destruction of the enemy; like black magic, etc. all of them come under tāmasic tapaḥ; parasya means a śatru; whom I look upon as an enemy, utsādanam, means destruction; whatever tapas is practiced, in our puraṇās, all the rākṣasās performed tapas, and Lord came, and Lord asked, What is your requirement? Invariable regular routine. First they will ask for non-death. Lord will say No and grant some powers and the first thing they do is to go to svarga lōkā, arrest Indra and kidnap all the Apsaras women. This is the next step. Here also tapas is involved; but what a motive; So parasya utsādanārtham vā whatever tapas is done, tat tāmasam udāhṛtam. That is tāmasic tapas. Thus with that verse, three types of tapas, based on guṇa is also over. Karaṇa dṛṣṭya trividam tapaḥ, guṇa dṛṣṭya trividam tapaḥ.

So now how many topics Kṛṣṇa has covered; Kṛṣṇa promised four topics; what are the four topics.

आहारस्त्वपि सर्वस्य त्रिविधो भवति प्रियः ।
यज्ञस्तपस्तथा दानम् तेषां भेदमिमं शृणु ॥ १७.७ ॥

[āhārastvapi sarvasya trividhō bhavati priyaḥ |
yajñastapastathā dānam tēṣāṃ bhēdamimam śṛṇu || 17.7 ||](#)

That is what he said before. āhāra, yajña, tapas and dānam; Of the four, āhāra, yajña, tapas are over; what is left out is dānam. Now the topic of dānam comes from the next verse; we will read.

Verse 17.20

दातव्यमिति यद्दानं दीयतेऽनुपकारिणे ।
देशे काले च पात्रे च तद्दानं सात्त्विकं स्मृतम् ॥ १७.२० ॥

[dātavyamiti yaddānaṃ dīyatē'nupakāriṇē |
dēśē kālē ca pātrē ca taddānaṃ sāttvikam smṛtam || 17.20 ||](#)

तद् दानम् tad dānam that charity यद् दीयते yad dīyatē which is given इति iti with an attitude of that दातव्यम् dātavyam giving is a duty अनुपकारिणे anupakāriṇē to a person who may not reciprocate देशे dēśē (and which is given) at the proper place, काले kālē at the proper time च पात्रे ca pātrē and to a proper person स्मृतम् smṛtam is considered सात्त्विकं दानम् sāttvikam dānam to be sāttvic charity

20. That charity which is given (with an attitude) that giving is a duty, to a person who may not reciprocate (and which is given) at the proper place, at the proper time and to a proper person is considered to be sattvic charity.

I had pointed out before that among all the spiritual sādhanas, the scriptures consider three sādhanas as very important and significant; and they are specially mentioned in the upaniṣads, in Bṛhadāraṇya upaniṣad, there is a very famous statement: Taṃ ēdam vēdānu vacanēna brāhmaṇa vividhiṣanṭhi, yajñēna dānēna tapasa anasakēna.

A person spiritually progress through three significant disciplines and Bṛhadāraṇya upaniṣad enumerates yajñāḥ, dānaḥ and tapaḥ. And Kṛṣṇa borrows these three from the Upaniṣads; after all Bhagavad-Gīta is upaniṣad sāram. Sarva upaniṣad ghāva, dhōgdā gōpōla nandāna (do you seem familiar? this is not in tune, Gīta dhyāna slōkā), if upaniṣad is the cow, Gīta is the milk extracted from the upaniṣadic cow, and three sādhanās are highlighted in the upaniṣads and they are yajña, dāna and tapas. Kṛṣṇa repeats them often. In the 18th chapter also he repeats:

यज्ञो दानं तपश्चैव पावनानि मनीषिणाम् ॥ १८.५ ॥

[yañādānatapaḥkarma na tyājyaṃ kāryamēva ta
yajñō dānaṃ tapaścaiva pāvanāni manīṣiṇām || 18.5 ||](#)

Thus these three are very significant. Of them two we have seen. The third significant sādhana is dānam; dānam is very much highlighted in our scriptures; dānam has got several multi facets are there to dānam.

Firstly dānam is a very very powerful medicine to remove certain unhealthy traits in our personality. We have got certain unhealthy traits which are great obstacles to spiritual growth; which are all born out of ignorance, self-ignorance born problems. What is that problem? Right from birth, we feel that we are insecure by ourselves; a sense of insecurity is inborn in every human being, because of self-ignorance and this insecurity is expressed right from birth, the child clings on to the mother; even within a few weeks the baby is able to differentiate mother's face from others. And somebody else comes, the baby turns to the mother strongly. The sense of insecurity is an instinctive problem and because I feel insecure, I seek security from external factors; either in the form of things or in the form of possessions or in the form of wealth or in the form of relationship. So I turn outwards, and I expect security from the external world. Thus my fundamental conclusion is I am insecure and world has to give me security.

And vedānta says this is the greatest delusion of the human being; It is basic mōhaḥ; why it is mōhaḥ? Because both these ideas are wrong; both these ideas, which ideas? I am insecure by myself is basically wrong, because according to vēdānta, my real nature is ātma, which does not require any security, because ātma can never be affected by anything.

नित्यः सर्वगतः स्थाणुः अचलोऽयं सनातनः ॥ २.२४॥

acchedyo'yamadāhyo'yam akledyo'śoṣya ēva ca
nityaḥ sarvagataḥ sthāṇuḥ acalo'yaṁ sanātanaḥ || 2.24 ||

That I am insecure is delusion no.1. And the greater delusion is, I will get security from the external world. This is a greater delusion because no object outside is secure in itself. No object outside is secure in itself; because everything outside is perishable. And when that object itself is insecure, how can an insecure thing give me security. But unfortunately, I never question this assumption. I take this assumption for granted, I am insecure by nature; and I have to get security from outside. This is first unhealthy trait called mōhaḥ.

And this mōha will further unhealthy trait. The next unhealthy trait is what: Since I think security should come from outside, I go on a spree of acquisition. There is a greed in acquisition; because it is based on the delusion: "I am insecure and acquisition is required for my security", and this is called lōbhaḥ. The hoarding tendency. The accumulating tendency; greed is the result of mōhaḥ. And not only I go on acquiring more and more, I never like to part with anything. I want to cling to everything. Even an empty match box. You can see all the disposable coffee cups, people wash and bring home after the train journey; we do not want to dispose of even the disposables. I do not want to part with anything. This stinginess of the mind is called kārpaṇyam. I cling on to everything; because according to my calculation, giving means becoming insecure. Because possession, I have equated with security. This possession I have equated to insecurity; since I do not want insecurity, I have to cling on to everything until death; Remember, அவியை விட்டாலும்; சாவியை விடேன்; aviyai viṭṭālum; cāviyai viṭēṇ. We will not leave. So that is called miserliness; called kārpaṇyam.

So mōhaḥ is unhealthy trait one. Lōbhaḥ is unhealthy trait No.2. Miserliness, kārpaṇyam, is unhealthy trait No.3; and above all, constant fear of losing. Because all these have to give me security; I am worried about their loss about their insecurity; so by possessions, what have I achieved, if you ask. Previously I was worried about my security and for the sake of my security, I have a few people and possession around. Now I am worried about their security.

And you look at the security guard in houses; generally, 75 years, only kākī shirt, who will fly in the wind and keep him as the security, and that person will sleep in the night. How are you going to feel secure with the insecure security? Therefore the fourth unhealthy treat is constant fear of losing people, losing things. All these four are based on delusion.

What is the delusion? I am insecure by myself and I need security from others, and therefore I hold on to. Vēdānta says as long as you hold to things, your insecurity will only increase, learn to part with things and see for yourselves. Thus dānam is the first powerful spiritual discipline to break these four-fold unhealthy traits. The mōhaḥ, the lōbhaḥ, the kārpaṇyam, and bhayam, I have and that I get only by dropping my hold; like a child, who is holding on to mothers' hand, will never discover independence. If the child wants to be independent, the child has to drop mother's hand, and mother also should allow the child to walk, the child will fall a few times, then the child will find strength and security, on its own feet.

Similarly, if I have to discover security and strength in myself, I should try sharing or giving; at least initially what I do not want. What I do not want, I can't give, thinking my great grandson may require to play. Therefore, first start parting with the unwanted thing; then gradually try to share other things also. Thus dānam is a very very powerful and significant sādhanā to break the unhealthy trait. This is significance No.1. Then some more significances are there, which we will see in the next class.

Hari Om

ॐ

In these verses, viz., the 20th, 21st and 22nd verses, of the 17th chapter, Lord Kṛṣṇa is dealing with the final topic, that he had promised before, viz., the significance of dānam, and Kṛṣṇa divides dānam into three types; sātāvika, rājasa and tāmasa dānam and in the last class, I was pointing out that dānam is considered to be a very very important spiritual sādhanā. In addition to various worldly and social benefits, there is a great spiritual benefit also.

I was discussing, the first benefit of dānam is removing our erroneous pattern of thinking. We are in a grip of an erroneous pattern of thinking, which is the cause of all saṁsāra; and the pattern is I have concluded that I am insecure by myself. Because of the sheer ignorance of my nature, ātma svarūpam abhaya svarūpam, I have wrongly concluded that I am insecure by myself.

And this wrong conclusion is called mōha, and because of this wrong conclusion, naturally I am forced to seek security from external sources, even though the fact is that no external factor can give me security; because they themselves are perishable and therefore insecure in themselves; an insecure object cannot give security. Therefore because of ignorance I have got into this mōhaḥ or delusion, and because of this delusion, I am in a spree of acquiring more and more, accumulating more and more, amazing more and more, however much I amaze, I never feel secure in myself.

This lōbhaḥ or greed for acquisition is the third pattern of thinking, and finally, however much I accumulate and amaze, I do not feel like sharing anything with other people, even with my own brothers and sisters. In many families there is a big problem, whether daughters can inherit of the parents? In the olden days, the daughters are not given anything. I do not want to say whether it is right or wrong, but the fact that it is the custom. Now they have legal inheritance rights. Now the Son wants to go by the present law by everything, but when it comes to sharing the wealth, they do not want to include their sisters; and the sisters are in very big dilemma, should I fight with my brother for money. It is a big problem, and they come ask. Swamiji, that's why I know. How do you think the story is coming? Should I pretend magnanimity and forgo or should I claim my legitimate rights, these are all the issues. Should not the brothers feel nice enough, after all they are not sharing with anybody else, but even sharing with their own direct sisters, they feel the pinch and pain. All because of what? Again insecurity; miserliness reaches such an extent; thus ajñānam, mōhaḥ, lōbhaḥ, and karpaṇyam, means miserliness. This is the vicious pattern of human thinking; and this itself is saṁsāra; the constant continuous sense of insecurity is saṁsāra. And if this pattern of thinking should be shaken a little bit, it cannot be removed totally, ātma jñānam alone will remove it totally, but if this erroneous thinking should be shaken; Dānam will help a little bit. For the first benefit is what; shaking wrong and deluded pattern of thinking.

And second pattern of second benefit or significance of dānam is: in dānam alone, I am in harmony with nature. If I study nature, I find everything in nature functions in the form of give and take. Everything functions in the form of give and take; which means everything is a cyclic process. Will see how the carbon dioxide or oxygen or nitrogen or anything is maintained in the creation, it is because of the cyclic process, because of receiving and giving. That means nothing in the creation, whether it is a plant or animal or inert thing, nothing in the creation keeps anything with itself; it receives and immediately it gives. It is a constant flow of receiving and giving; the rivers get water from the mountains and they give to the ocean. Ocean receives the water, and during summer, and it goes to the sky. The clouds do not keep the water to themselves; in the form of rains, it gives to the mountains; mountain again gives to the river. There is a beautiful water-cycle; It is possible only because of give and take. Since I am an integrated part of the creation, I can never think of holding on to anything. What I receive, I should pay back to the creation. Only then, I will be maintaining the cyclic pattern; otherwise there will be stagnation. If there is a stagnant pool of water and if there is a flowing river; which water is healthy water; we always say, take bath in the flowing water, we know anything stagnant is unhealthy.

Even the food that we take, is an input I receive from the world; and suppose I only eat which is called input and there is no output at all. Just sitting is called couch potato. Haven't you heard; all the time lying in the sofa, you have called stretching called the lazy boy, it seems. OK. It is coming from US. And you sit there and go on eating and watching what, cricket; I do not say that you should not watch. There is input; but there is no output. And you go to the doctor and say there is a problem of obesity or cholesterol and therefore you have to spend your energy. Spending energy means what? Whatever you are taking, you have to give out; Otherwise, what is the definition of obesity, you remember. Excess food gone to waste. The waste has two spelling. One minute it will take to understand; excess food gone to w... a.... s... t... e... and excess food gone to w... a... i... s... t....; then all kinds of diseases come; that means you have to give out proportionately to what you take in; and when I do that, whether it is energy that I am consuming; or water I drink excess water I drink, again nature itself balances, the water has to go out also; bathroom you will go; so that the balance is maintained or in the form of sweat, it is removed; and in the same way, possession or money or knowledge, anything when it is flows through me, rather than remains with me, then I am in harmony with nature; that is health. In dānam, I am in harmony, therefore I have physical health and I have mental health also. Therefore dānam is very very important.

Then the third benefit is social benefit; only when the rich people voluntarily share their wealth; should not be forced, but because of sheer maturity, when the rich people voluntarily share their wealth, only in that society, the gap between the rich and poor is lesser. When the rich refuses to share, the rich becomes the richer; and the poor becomes the poorer. In that society, all forms of crime increases; daylight robbery; all forms of crime increase, when there is such a gap between rich and poor and therefore they said instead of forcibly parting, voluntarily part. When it is forced there is pain, when it is voluntary, there is joy and therefore dānam is important, from the stand point of social order.

And finally and most importantly, dānam is a rehearsal for ultimate sanyāsa; the fourth and the most important significance of dānam is that it is the rehearsal for the ultimate sanyāsa. Sanyāsa is not a physical action, of giving up your family and going to another place. Sanyāsa is a mental stage, in which I do not own anything. Sanyāsa is a mental state, in which I relinquish the idea of ownership with regard to everything I use. I look upon everything that I possess as only things that I use, but I do not own anything; there is only one owner of everything; and that is the Lord and I only use the things and when

I do not own anything, there is no question of losing anything. And since there is no question of losing anything, there is no question of fear of loss.

In fact, saṁsāra is nothing but the fear of losing things; and the sanyasi alone can totally get out of all forms of fear, because he is not going to lose anything; because in his mind he does not own anything to lose. And even his own physical body, he does not claim as his possession, it is a gift from the Lord; for me to use for some time, and attain mōkṣa. And once I have utilised it properly; I have to give it back to the Lord. If I have to relinquish the ownership of everything; I should initially start relinquishing the ownership of a few small things. At least a few rupees, a few minutes of my time; if I learn to relinquish the ownership of a few, small, little things, later I can hope to relinquish the ownership of everything.

And Bhṛthari tells in his Vairāgya ṣatkam, only a sanyāsi can be totally fearless; because he cannot lose anything; because he does not own anything. As long as you have ownership in anything, bhayam can never be avoided. He writes a beautiful ślōkā:

भोगे रोगभयं कुले च्युतिभयं वित्ते नृपालाद्भयं
माने दैन्यभयं बले रिपुभयं रूपे जराया भयम् ।
शास्त्रे वादिभयं गुणे खलभयं काये कृतान्ताद्भयं
सर्वं वस्तु भयान्वितं भुवि नृणां वैराग्यमेवाभयम् ॥ ३१ ॥

bhōgē rōgabhayam kulē cyutibhayam vittē nṛpālādbhayam mānē dainyabhayam balē ripubhayam rūpē jarāyā bhayam | śāstrē vādibhayam guṇē khalabhayam kāyē kṛtāntādbhayam sarvaṁ vastu bhayānvitam bhuvī nṛṇām vairāgyamēvābhayam || 31 ||

In enjoyment, there is the fear of disease, in social position, the fear of falling-off, in wealth, the fear of (hostile) kings; in honour, the fear of humiliation; in power, the fear of enemies, in beauty, the fear of old age; in scriptural erudition; the fear of opponents; in virtue, the fear of traducers, in body, the fear of death. All the things of the world pertaining to man are attended with fear; renunciation alone stands for fearlessness.

You can understand bhōgē rōgabhayam; when you want to have bhōgē, there is a constant fear of rōga. Any bhōgē can lead to indulgence; and any indulgence can lead to ill-health; any intelligence including eating; bhōgē rōgabhayam.

Kulē cyutibhayam, if you have got an abhimāna in your kulam or family, that I belong to Ghanapadigal family or Deekṣithar family, this family that family, and you want to preserve the glory of your family, and you want to preserve the kula santhathi, you are always afraid of your children; because you want to choose your son-in-law or daughter in law, in keeping with your kulam. And the son or daughter is in America; and you plan the spouse, after jātakam, which family, etc. and the son is coming on 21 day leave and you have fixed a few girls and he has to see all the girls, select one and marry and like a hawk he will swoop and take the girl and go to America, this is the arrangement. And son comes and tells, I did not want to give that trouble to you and I have fixed my own; because the present generation considers that choosing the spouse is not the job of the parents; because parents are not marrying; but I am going to marry, and therefore ridiculous that somebody else choose and I have to live life long and it is my right. In the West, marriage is an individual's activity or decision, in Indian culture, marriage is between families and their aim is preserve the kulam; and when such a news comes, the parents are shattered. How do you know? Come to Swamiji. He has fixed a Chinese American, Swamiji. I have nothing against Chinese American, but what I am saying is as long as you have children of marriageable age, be always prepared for this news to come; if it does not come, you are a puṇyaśali, and if it comes, it is the natural thing nowadays; Every parent should be forewarned now. kulē cyutibhayaṃ; cyuti means what, fall from the kula parāmpara; and then you are worried whether your son can do srāddham for you; You are still alive; but you are worried about post-death scenario. Whether he will do it or not, is a different matter.

Kulē cyutibhayaṃ, kāyē kṛtāntādbhayaṃ. If you are attached to the body, Yamadharmarāja is the greatest source of fear; mānē dainyabhayaṃ. If you are a man or women of reputation; you are always afraid of your reputation being tarnished. Anybody can spread any rumour, which is not in your hand, and my name and fame get tarnished. When there is mānam, there is dainam. Dainam means helplessness with regard to the preservation of my reputation; mānē dainyabhayaṃ.

Balē ripubhayaṃ. If you are a country, the king of a country with a powerful army, you are always worried of another country, which has got a more powerful army; Example America. America is always afraid of Iraq, Iraq, this is only worry; balē ripubhayaṃ; we do not have, because he has army, power, etc.

Rūpē jarāyā bhayaṃ. If you are proud of physical beauty, (whether it is there or not), wonderful hair, shining teeth, as advertised, then you are frightened of growing age. So the tooth losing, the wrinkles attacking, rūpē jarāyā bhayaṃ, the industry, youthful looking industry, industry which deal with youthful look is growing; Why? People are so conscious of their rūpam. They want to cover up their age. That is why you cannot cheat every one, except a staircase; because when you use it, you will know the age; rūpē jarāyā bhayaṃ.

Śāstrē vādibhayaṃ. If you are a scholar, you are always afraid of another scholar, who will question you; who will argue with you. Guṇē khalabhayaṃ, if you are a guṇavān, who values religion and scriptures, all of them, you are always afraid of the materialistic people, who will make fun of you; You are going to Gīta class!, therefore guṇē khalabhayaṃ; noble people are always afraid of the wicked ones, who criticise, make fun. That is why our children nowadays do not want to apply tilakams, why because other people will make fun. They remove before they got, because others will make fun. Guṇē khalabhayaṃ. Even bhakti I have to keep secret; I cannot say that I am a Hindu. Dayānanda Swami says Hindus feel what you call inferior to claim that I am a Hindu, in India. That is the tragedy of our country; you do not want to show that we are proud vaidika or Hindu; Anyway, guṇē khalabhayaṃ.

And vittē nṛpālādbhayaṃ; when there is lot of wealth, I am always afraid of tax; nṛpāla means king or the government. Whatever you possess, there is a threat; therefore, he concludes, sarvaṃ vastu bhayānvitaṃ bhuvī nṛṇāṃ. Therefore, anything you possess is a source of fear. Then what is the source of fearlessness, possession of one thing; only possession of one thing, is the source of fearlessness, what is that: vairāgyamevābhayaṃ; vairāgyam means detachment; detachment means, I use everything; everything belongs to the Lord only. That is the ultimate state; but before that, I start with small dānam; so that I can discover sarva saṅga parityāga; spiritual sādhanā.

Now Kṛṣṇa is going to talk about three types of sādhanā. First one is sātvika dānam in the first verse.

Yad dānam dīyatē, when charity is made; dātavyam iti, with the understanding of the importance of dānam, its spiritual relevance; its importance in social harmony, with that understanding, when I give as a value, voluntarily, without any external force or threat, and anupakāriṇē, even to a person, who may not reciprocate my dānam, who may not express gratitude, who may not be grateful to me in future; even the children when we take care of the children, and give everything, how to we know what we are going to do in old age, and parents are not doing all these things in expectation of things in return, then parents are not true parents at all; And not therefore that which is done without expecting anything in return, that means, I do not use dānam as a means for some future benefit. If I look upon dānam as a means that indicates that I am not mature enough. For mature satvik person, dānam itself is an end in itself. and if I am mature enough, to see it as an end itself, the very dānam gives me joy; it is not a means for future joy; but the very practice of dānam is ānandaḥ; And that means this person has understood the value of dānam and therefore his mind is sātvika and mature mind and anupakāriṇē, for a non-reciprocating person.

Dēśe kālē pātrē ca, a gift given at the right place. If you want to gift a shawl, in Madras, in summer, when the temperature is 44. You give shawl; in Badri, Kēdar, it is OK. So dēśa, at the at the right place, and kāla, and at the right time, and pātram, to the right and deserving person. Pātram here means a deserving person, yat dānam dīyatē, tat sātṭvikam smṛtam. People ask, many people come and ask for charity. How do I know whether that person is deserving or not; and now Police/Government has also given a warning also; when unknown people come, do not even open the door, let alone give anything. How do I know whether it is a deserving person or not. Certainly we have a right to enquire, whether that person is deserving or not; and if we do not know the credentials, there is nothing wrong if we do not give dānam, and that means I think that is I am not giving dānam, because I find nobody deserves. No No No. Dānam is important, if the people who are coming to you, you have no method of finding out, you go out and find out some appropriate institution, which is making use of the money for good and noble causes. There are so many wonderful institutions, which are doing service work, charitable work, if I do not have time to enquire, I can always make it a point to give to some institutions; they will take care of it properly. The idea is I should include dānam as a part of my sādḥāna. If I do not have money for dānam, I can have time dānam, service dānam, knowledge dānam; if nothing, smile dānam. And according to the people who know about the anatomy of the body, they say, in smile you have to use lesser number of muscles, than frowning. Thus, even smile is economically better than frown; minimum you can do that; therefore, dēśē kālē ca pātrē ca taddānam sātṭvikam smṛtam.

यत्तु प्रत्युपकारार्थं फलमुद्दिश्य वा पुनः ।
दीयते च परिक्लिष्टं तद्दानं राजसं स्मृतम् ॥ १७.२१ ॥

yattu pratyupakārātham phalamuddiśya vā punaḥ |
dīyatē ca parikliṣṭam taddānam rājasam smṛtam || 17.21 ||

तद् दानम् tad dānam that charity यत् तु च yat tu ca which is परिक्लिष्टं दीयते parikliṣṭam dīyatē reluctantly given, प्रत्युपकारार्थम् pratyupakārātham for the sake of getting something in return वा पुनः vā punaḥ or उद्दिश्य फलम् uddiśya phalam expecting a result स्मृतम् smṛtam is considered राजसम् rājasam to be rajasic

21. That charity which is reluctantly given for the sake of something in return, or expecting a result, is considered to be rajasic.

In the previous verse we saw sātṭvik dānam is a dānam in which the giver looks upon dānam as an end in itself. Therefore the very dānam gives him joy. And therefore if there is acknowledgement or gratitude from others, that is only a bonus. Gratitude is not an expectation; it is only a bonus. Because already I have benefitted in the very process of dānam, because of my value for it. Whereas in the case of rājasic dānam, the person is not mature enough to see the dānam as an end in itself; he looks upon dānam, as a means for some other worldly benefit. Kṛṣṇa says, does not matter, at least he looks upon as a means. It is better he looks upon it as a means, and therefore he always expects something in return. prattyupakārārtham, he says; if I do something now to the neighbour, he will always do something later, that is always behind my mind; this is called prathi upakārah, expectation or phalam uddiśya, or he expects puṇyam for this dānam, because according to śāstra, when you give dānam, even though your material possession is getting depleted, your puṇyam bank balance is increasing. So externally you are losing, but your puṇyam balance is increasing; and because of the puṇyam in your next birth; you are going to get in return for whatever you have given. Anything you give, by the same law of cyclic process, whatever you deposit in the world, world is like a bank. At the right time in the next janma, you will get the return from world bank; the world itself is like bank; and that is why it is said.

अदान दोषेण भवेत् दरिद्रः दरिद्र दोषेण करोति पापाम्
पापात् अवश्यम् नरकं प्रयाति, पुनर् दरिद्रः पुनरेव पापी ॥

[adāna dōṣeṇa bhavēt daridrah, daridra dōṣeṇa karōti pāpām
pāpāt avaśyam narakaṁ prayāti, punar daridrah, punarēva pāpī |](#)

A frightening slōkā. Adāna dōṣeṇa bhavēt daridrah; If you do not give anything in this janma; in the next janma, you would not get anything; because whatever you have deposited alone, you can draw later. Only Dena Bank; there is a bank called Dena bank. If I just ask Rs.1000, I will only get beating. Remember, every dena bank, is first lena bank; But they would write only lena; they would only dena; that is marketing strategy. If I do not give to the world bank in this janma, I would not get anything in the next janma, I would be born a daridra; adāna dōṣeṇa bhavēt daridrah.

And dāridra dōṣeṇa karōti pāpām, when there is poverty, the tendency to violate dharma is more. It requires tremendous self-restraint to avoid corruption in poverty. Therefore the chance of the darida does pāpam. daridra dōṣeṇa karōti pāpām. Pāpāt avaśyam narakaṁ prayāti. Pāpa leads to narakaṁ and again he becomes a daridrah; punar daridrah, punarēva pāpī.

If you want to get out of this cycle, you start dānam at least a little. So therefore, phalamuddiśya vā, at least for the sake of puṇyam and better birth in the next janma. You do that dānam, even though it is rājasic and inferior dānam, and it parikliṣṭam dīyatē a dānam which is given with reluctance. Because he does not know its value. In the case of a sātvik person, he knows the value, therefore he enjoys the gift; but this person has not fully appreciated the value, he gives out of fear rather than maturity; and therefore inside there is a pain. When dānam is given with reluctance, taddānam rājasam smṛtam; it is called rājasic dānam.

So in satva dānam is the end. In rājasic dānam, dānam is a means. Sātvik dānam is a niṣkāma dānam. Rājasic dānam is sakāma dānam.

Then what is tāmasic dānam.

Verse 17.22

अदेशकाले यद्दानं अपात्रेभ्यश्च दीयते ।
असत्कृतमवज्ञातं तत्तामसमुदाहृतम् ॥ १७.२२ ॥

adēśakālē yaddānam apātrēbhyaśca dīyatē |
asatkṛtamavajñātaṁ tattāmasamudāhṛtam || 17.22 ||

तद् दानम् tad dānam That charity यद् दीयते yad dīyatē which is given अदेशकाले adēśakālē at the wrong place and time, अपात्रेभ्यः apātrēbhyaḥ to unworthy people असत्कृतम् asatkṛtam without honouring च अवज्ञातम् ca avajñātam and with contempt अदाहृतम् adāhṛtam is said to be तामसम् tāmasam Tāmasam.

22. That charity which is given at the wrong place and time to unworthy people, without honoring, and with contempt is said to be Tāmasic.

You can understand. yad dānam dīyatē, that charity which is given, adēśakālē, at the wrong place, at the wrong time.

and apātrēbhyaḥ, to a wrong person, all in the traffic signals they come, they are all apātra people, first of all, it is illegal; secondly it is risky; and also there is a news that the children are maimed for the sake of money; they are borrowed, they are inflicted injury etc. and therefore if some such people come, there is nothing wrong in saying no and not encouraging such wrong dānam. So apātrēbhyaḥ, traffic signal beggarabyaha, apātrēbhyaśca dīyatē, which is given, and asatkṛtam, even when it is given to a deserving person, when the gift is given by ill-treating or not respecting the person properly; that deserving person may be a poor person, does not mean that I have to look down upon him. That is why, look upon the person as Nārāyaṇa and it is an opportunity for me, I am in a position to share. And that person needs; therefore without looking down upon the receiver, without insulting the receiver, without harassing him, means come tomorrow, tomorrow he comes and you are not there at all. Then he comes another day, you are busy etc. and ask him to come another day, like that, like that it goes on; then for his travel itself he has spent what you are going to give. Therefore without avajñā, without insulting and without disrespecting, it should be given; when there is insult and disrespect done to the receiver. Because the receiver naturally feels small; this is always a bad feeling; when I have to beg, I have to stretch my hands in front of someone, is always a smallness. That is why Bhagavān himself when he had to beg for something from Mahābali, even he had to become small; that smallness is the smallness that we feel in the mind; already the receiver is feeling bad, how can I add insult to injury? Apply salt to the wound. In fact, I should make the receiver comfortable; and when the receiver is insulted; tattāmasamudāhṛtam; such a dānam is a tāmasic dānam.

And what Kṛṣṇa wants to say is; sātvic dānam is the best; rājasic dānam is intermediary; tāmasic dānam is the lowest one. And the people who are at the tāmasa dāna level, they have to gradually improve themselves to rājasa dānam level. Once I am at that level, I have to raise myself to sātvic dānam level and remember, even tāmasa dānam is better than... fill up the blanks, no dānam. When we criticise tāmasa dānam, the aim is not to stop the dānam, because tāmasa to adānam is sliding down. When we criticise tāmasa dānam, the aim of the criticism is to elevate the person from tāmasa to rājasa; not bring down from tāmasa to adānam. Like if I criticise mechanical sandhyāvandanam is bad. This fellow says Swamiji I have stopped sandhyāvandanam, because why do mechanically? Mechanical sandhyāvandanam is bad, if someone says, it means that we have to do it consciously. So therefore, tāmasa dānam is better than adānam.

With this all the four topics Kṛṣṇa has concluded. āhāra, Yajñā, tapa and dānam. And naturally Om Tat Sat should have come, but Kṛṣṇa is introducing one more topic, and that topic is the significance of Om tat Sat. That is going to come, in the next few verses, which we will see in the next class.

Hari Om

214 Chapter 17, Verses 23-28

ॐ

With the 22nd verse, of the 17th chapter, which we completed in the last class, Lord Kṛṣṇa has dealt with all the four topics that he promised in the beginning. After answering Arjuna's question regarding srāddha; Kṛṣṇa himself promised four topics; āhāraḥ, Yajñāḥ, Tapaḥ, and dānam and all those topics are completed with the 22nd verse.

Now in the following verses, 23rd up to the end, Lord Kṛṣṇa is dealing with the significance of the famous mantra Om̐ tat Sat. This Om̐ tat Sat mantra is a very famous mantra; because it is associated with all religious activities; and especially at the time of conclusion; there is an expression, Om̐ Tat Sat Brahmārpaṇamastu, or Krishnarpaṇamastu, Ramarpaṇamastu, the expression Om̐ Tat Sat is used. Even in the Bhagavat Gīta, at the end of every chapter, we say, Om̐ Tat Sat Iti Srimad Bhagavad-Gīta su.

So Kṛṣṇa wants to deal with the significance of this mantra; in the following verses, which we will see now. Verse No.23.

ओं तत्सदिति निर्देशः ब्रह्मणस्त्रिविधः स्मृतः ।
ब्राह्मणास्ते वेदाश्च यज्ञाश्च विहिताः पुरा ॥ १७.२३ ॥

Om̐ tatsaditi nirdēśō brahmaṇastrividhaḥ smṛtaḥ |
brāhmaṇāstēna vēdāśca yajñāśca vihitāḥ purā || 17.23 ||

ओं तत् सत् om tat sat “Om̐ Tat Sat” स्मृतः smṛtaḥ is considered इति त्रिविधः निर्देशः iti trividhaḥ nirdēśaḥ to be threefold designation, ब्रह्मणः brahmaṇaḥ of Brahman तेन tēna by (uttering) this ब्राह्मणाः brāhmaṇāḥ the brahmins वेदाः च Vēdāḥ ca the Vēdas च यज्ञाः ca yajñāḥ and the Yajñās विहिताः vihitāḥ were created पुरा purā long ago

23. “Om̐ TAT SAT” is considered to be the threefold designation of Brahman. By uttering this the brahmins, the Vēdās and the Yajñās were created long ago.

Dealing with the significance of the mantra, Om̐ Tat Sat Kṛṣṇa gives certain important points in these verses; first I will enumerate those points independently; then we can see the verses.

The first point that Kṛṣṇa mentions is that Om̐ Tat Sat is a powerful made up of three names of God. It is a powerful mantra made up of three names of God. viz., Om̐ is one name; Tat is another name; Sat is the third name.

And the meaning of the word Om̐, is the protector of the World. The word Om̐ is derived from the root Auv, Avathi Rakṣayathi, Pālayathi and Om̐ means Rakṣaṇa Kartā, Pālana Kartā, the protector of everything, especially the devotee. This is the meaning of the word Om̐.

The meaning of the word Tat is that Lord who is beyond all the instruments of knowledge; the Lord who is sarva pramāṇa agōcaraḥ; one who is incomprehensible; one who is unobjectifiable, one who is not available for all the six pramāṇas. In simple language, apremēyaḥ, is the meaning of the word Tat.

And the meaning of the word Sat is the eternal principle, the one who ever exists in the form of the very existence itself. Literally the word sat means the existence and by extension it means the eternal principle, because existence exists always. Why? Existence. Therefore Om Tat Sat meaning, the eternal incomprehensible protector of the universe. And this Mantra is here said as brahmaṇaḥ nirdeśaḥ; the three names of Brahma, Brahma means God. This is the first point Kṛṣṇa highlights.

The next point he gives here is this powerful Mantra, has been used by the creator Brahmāji himself, when he undertook his job of creation. This powerful mantra, Om Tat Sat has been employed by Sākṣāt, Brahmāji the creator himself, when he undertook the most important job of his; what is that, the creation of the world; because of which alone, he could successfully bring out a wonderful universe.

Therefore second significance is mantra Om Tat Sat has been utilised by Brahmāji, the founder of the universe. This is the second point and the third point Kṛṣṇa highlights is because Brahmāji uttered this powerful mantra, this has become convention later. Among all the spiritual-seekers to chant the same mantra during their spiritual sādhanā. Because Brahmāji used the mantra, during his activity; it became the convention of all the later spiritual-seekers to chant the very same mantra; when they take to their spiritual activity.

Like the inventor or the discoverer of the telephone, you might have known this; when the telephone was invented, first time, when the inventor wanted to test whether it worked or not, you know what the word he used; he used the word hello; There is no derivation or meaning for that; that word came to his mind at that time and he used that. Once the founder used that word, that become the convention of all the people all over the world even now to use the expression, whether learned or unlearned, everybody says Hello. But it is the tradition.

Similarly, Brahmāji the founder used the word Om Tat Sat; thereafter Hello, hello has no meaning; Om Tat Sat became a meaningful and conventional expression, especially among the spiritual-seekers in their spiritual activity. Either they use in the beginning of their activity or they use the Mantra at the end of their activity, Om Tat Sat Brahmārpaṇamastu. This is the third point Kṛṣṇa highlights.

The fourth point Kṛṣṇa highlights is, since this Mantra is a very powerful mantra, by its utterance, one can convert all the rājasic and tāmasic activities into satvic activities. This Mantra is so powerful, that even a tāmasic karma or rājasic karma will get converted into sātvic and spiritual karma and if it is already a sātvic karma, then this mantra will make it more sāvīc. And therefore this mantra can be used with advantage by all spiritual-seekers. This is the fourth point Kṛṣṇa mentions.

The fifth incidental point we find here is, with the help of this mantra, Brahmāji has created a very very beautiful wonderful orderly rhythmic, glorious, vast rule-abiding universe. And Lord Kṛṣṇa says: even in this wonderful creations; there are three creations which are the greatest by the Brahmāji. Whole creation is wonderful; but even within this creation, there are three products or three creations of Brahmāji which are very very significant. And what are the three? Kṛṣṇa enumerates. Brāhmaṇaḥ and Yajñāḥ and Vēda. These are very very significant creations of Brahma.

Now the question is why do we say these three are significant? The reason is the word Yajñāḥ means that intelligent lifestyle by employing which or with the help of which, the humanity will use all the superior knowledge and power constructively. Thus yajñāḥ means that lifestyle in which the humanity wisely uses or employs the superior knowledge and power for constructive purposes. If this yajñāḥ way of life is absent, the superior knowledge and superior power will cause only human destruction. You know that now we have enough weapons which can destroy the earth several times. We have got, we means humanity, and not the Indians, we the humanity have got enough weapons, some of them we can see in Iraq now, we have got enough weapons to destroy the earth several times; that means what? The superior knowledge of humanity and the superior power of humanity can become constructive or destructive. Yajñāḥ is that wisdom by which the humanity converts the knowledge and power to ensure the peace, the prosperity and all round progress of life.

Therefore yajñāḥ alone can sustain the universe. And when I say yajñāḥ, I mean the pañca mahā yajñāḥ, which is the wise way of living; which we saw in the third chapter. I do not use the word yajñāḥ in the limited sense of Vēdic ritual, here the word yajñā means the pañca mahā yajñāḥ, a constructive, healthy and intelligent way of life. So yajñāḥ alone can sustain the creation and therefore yajñāḥ is very very important.

Then why do we say Vēdaḥ is important? Vēdaḥ is important because from the Vēda alone, we learn the yajñāḥ way of life. That yajñāḥ way of life, the harmonious way of living, we learn from the Vēdas, and therefore, Vēdas become important to understand what wisdom is. And therefore Vēdaḥ alone promotes yajñāḥ; yajñāḥ alone can sustain the creation. So yajñāḥ is significant; and Vēda is significant.

Then why do we say Brāhmaṇaḥ is important. Here the word Brāhmaṇaḥ means any human being, irrespective of the caste; we are not referring to Brahmin caste here, any human being who preserves and promotes the Vēdic teaching. Any human being, whether he is a Brāhmaṇaḥ, kṣatriya, vaiśya or śūdra by birth, whether the human being is male or female, whatever be the profession, any human being who preserves and promotes the Vēdic teaching.

How does he preserve and promote? Both by his teaching and by his living. Through precept and practice, whoever preserves the Vēda is called Brāhmaṇaḥ. The very word Brāhmaṇa is derived from the word Brahma, and Brahma means Vēdaḥ. Brahma, Vēdam, janathi iti Brāhmaṇa. The one who learns, the one who lives, and the one who shares the Vēdic wisdom is called Brāhmaṇa.

Thus Brahmaṇaḥ sustains the Vēdas; Vēda sustains the yajñāḥ way of life, and yajñāḥ sustains the creation; therefore ultimately, the sustenance of the creation requires three factors. If there are no Brāhmaṇaḥ, the Vēdas will die. Brāhmaṇa, again I mean, not the jāti Brāhmaṇa. Brāhmaṇa means the promoter of the Vēda; Brāhmaṇa is not there. Vēda will die; if Vēdas dies, yajña Brāhmaṇaḥ would die; and if yajña Brāhmaṇa is dead, the harmonious way of life would be extinct. And there will be only wars and wars. Imagine a powerful country, which has got all the weapons in the world, attacks another country, even though three-fourth of the humanity is not in favour. Even the United Nations is not able to do anything. All the scientific advancement, all the technological advancement are used for the systematic destruction of an area of the earth, even though it is not endorsed by significant part of the humanity.

Now we can imagine, what can happen if such a thing continues. If science is not advanced, we can only fight with stick. The damage would not be that much; when there is scientific knowledge, but without dharma, i.e. called yajñāḥ. So scientific knowledge minus yajñāḥ will mean selfishness. One country will become selfish and will be interested only in their survival. They would not bother about the humanity; and even humanity cannot do anything; except giving certain protest statements. France will give its statement. Germany would give its statement; Russia would give its statement; and of course India would also give its statement; we would become utterly helpless. This is the result of knowledge and power; without yajñāḥ. And therefore, this wonderful creation including Brāhmaṇa, yajñāḥ and Vēdaḥ has emerged from Brahmāji only after the utterance of Om Tat Sat mantra. Therefore it is significant. This is the essence of the following portion.

Now look at the slōkā. Ōṃ tatsaditi nirdēśaḥ. So the word Om, Tat and Sat, these three are trividhaḥ nirdēśaḥ, the three fold nāma; nirdēśaḥ means nāma of Brahman. Here Brahman means Īśvara. These are the three-fold Īśvara nāmaḥ and Īśvara has got several nāma; why should Kṛṣṇa mention only these three nāmaḥ? Because he says:

tēna, with the help of these three nāmas or names, i.e. chanting these three nāmas, vihitas, these wonderful creations have been made. These three wonderful creations called yajñāḥ, means the wise way of life; constructive way of using knowledge and power is called yajñāḥ, i.e. one beautiful creation; Vēdaḥ; the Vēdic scriptures, which teach us the yajñāḥ way of life, we saw this in the third chapter.

सहयज्ञाःप्रजा सृष्ट्वा पुरोवाच प्रजापतिः ।
अनेन प्रसविष्यध्वमेष वोऽस्त्विष्टकामधुक् ॥ ३.१० ॥

sahayajñāḥprajā sṛṣṭvā purovāca prajāpatiḥ |
anēna prasaviṣyadhvamēṣa vo'stviṣṭakāmadhuk || 3. 10 ||

So Vēdas were created by Brahmāji and Brāhmaṇa; so the preservers and promoters of the Vēda are called Brāhmaṇa, guṇa Brāhmaṇa, karma Brāhmaṇa, whose who are dedicated and promotion of Vēdas; all these have been created by Brāhmaṇa; by Lord Brahmāji, all these three have been created pura, long before; and therefore Om Tat Sat is a sacred mantra.

तस्मादोमित्युदाहृत्य यज्ञदानतपः क्रियाः ।
प्रवर्तन्ते विधानोक्ताः सततं ब्रह्मवादिनाम् ॥ १७.२४ ॥

tasmādōmityudāhṛtya yajñadānatapaḥkriyāḥ |
pravartantē vidhānōktāḥ satataṁ brahmavādinām || 17.24 ||

तस्मात् tasmāt therefore ब्रह्मवादिनाम् brahmavādinam for those who are well-versed in the Vēdas यज्ञदानतपःक्रियाः yajñadānatapaḥkriyāḥ the activities in the form of yajñās, charities and austerities, विधानोक्तः vidhānōktaḥ which are mentioned by the scriptural injunctions प्रवर्तन्ते सततम् satatam pravartantē take place always उदाहृत्य udāhṛtya after the utterance इति ओम् iti Om of 'Om'.

24. Therefore for those who are well-versed in the Vēdās the activities in the form of yajñās, charities and austerities which are mentioned by the scriptural injunctions take place after the utterance of 'Om'.

So since Brahmāji initiated this tradition. What tradition? Utterance of Om Tat Sat, like the hello tradition; Om Tat Sat tradition was initiated by the founder of the very universe itself, and therefore all the brahmavādinam, brahmavādi means the Vēdic followers, especially the spiritual-seeker s, satatam, Iti udāhṛtya, they also utter this mantra, Om Tat Sat, fully, or partially, by uttering the word Om. Either all the three names, any one of the nama, like Om, Om iti udāhṛtya, brahmavādina satatam, always, their activities pravarthantē, proceed.

And what all activities? Vidhānōktaḥ, all the activities prescribed in the scriptures meant for spiritual growth. I do not know, which activities will contribute to spiritual growth, my activities are decided based on material growth; all are activities when we judge. As I said before, the very education is based on what, which degree will get me good salary, so our line of thinking is what will help me in material growth; what will help in spiritual growth. We will know from the scriptures; therefore, vidhānōktaḥ; so the activities prescribed in the Vēda vidhi, Vēdic teaching.

Like what yajñāḥ, dāna, tapah kriyāḥ; which we saw in the 17th chapter, all the yajñāḥ like pañca-mahā-yajña, all types of dānam, and all types of tapas, you remember, kāyika, vācika, mānasa tapas, all of them the spiritual-seekers perform, uttering Om Tat Sat or merely Om.

तदित्यनभिसन्धाय फलं यज्ञतपः क्रियाः ।
दानक्रियाश्च विविधाः क्रियन्ते मोक्षकाङ्क्षिभिः ॥ १७.२५ ॥

tadityanabhisandhāya phalaṁ yajñatapaḥkriyāḥ |
dānakriyāśca vividhāḥ kriyantē mōkṣakāṅkṣibhiḥ || 17.25 ||

25. After uttering the word TAT, various activities in the form of Yajñas, austerities, and charities are undertaken by the seekers of liberation without expecting the result.

So mōkṣa kāṅkṣibhiḥ kriyantē. Some other spiritual-seekers, use the mantra, tat only; as I said all the three words can be used, or any of the three nāma also can be used. In the previous verse, Om was highlighted, the word Tat is highlighted but nowadays, we do not choose anyone, we generally chant all the three. What is the difference, between Om and Om Tat Sat. Nowadays we chant all three. So some spiritual-seekers, use the name Tat of the Lord, in Viṣṇu sahasranāma also Tasmai Namaḥ, Yasmai namaḥ, all these come. Means what the Lord who is Tat.

Mōkṣa kāṅkṣibhiḥ some spiritual-seekers utter Tat and practice yajña dānam and tapaḥ. This was described in the 17th chapter before, some other seekers use this word and when practice these activities; their primary goal is mōkṣa, material benefit, they look upon only as a by-product.

Therefore, phalam anabhisandhāya; they look upon the internal growth as primary, the material benefit as required and incidental; they are called satvik people, they are spiritual-seekers; not that they neglect money, but for them, money is subservient to inner purity and spiritual growth. They can never think of money at the cost of spiritual growth; because it is a bad bargain according to them.

That is why they are called mōkṣa kānṣibhiḥ; they are so mature; therefore they consider dharma mōkṣa as superior to arta kama. Therefore phalam anabhisandhāya; without being obsessed with material results. Here phalam means arta kama, anabhisandhāya, without being obsessed with, if at all they have an obsession, that is with their inner growth, rather than external paraphernalia;

सद्भावे साधुभावे च सदित्येतत्प्रयुज्यते ।
प्रशस्ते कर्माणि तथा सच्छब्दः पार्थ युज्यते ॥ १७.२६ ॥

sadbhāvē sādhubhāvē ca sadyētāt prayujyatē |
praśastē karmaṇi tathā sacchabdaḥ pārtha yujyatē || 17.26 ||

सद् इति एतत् sad iti ētat the word 'sat' प्रयुज्यते prayujyatē is used सद्भावे sadbhāvē in the sense of existence च साधुभावे ca sādhubhāvē, and goodness तथा tathā further सच्छब्दः sacchabdaḥ the word 'sat' युज्यते yujyatē is used प्रशस्ते कर्माणि praśastē karmaṇi in the sense of good actions पार्थ pārtha Oh Arjuna !

26. The word 'SAT' is used in the sense of existence and goodness. Further, the word 'SAT' is used in the sense of good actions, Oh Arjuna !

So some spiritual-seeker s use the nama Om̐, which was said in verse No.24; some said spiritual-seeker s, the use the name, that is said in the 25th verse, Now we have supply, there are some spiritual-seeker s, who use the nama tat along with their yajña, dāna, tapaḥ. Of course, it is not these along, along with all the activities, but Kṛṣṇa enumerates these three; because they are considered to be important activities of a human being.

And when Kṛṣṇa comes to the word Sat, suddenly Kṛṣṇa remembers that I have introduced the word but not given the meaning of the three words; only I gave you the meaning. Kṛṣṇa never said, what is the meaning of Om̐? He did not give the meaning of tat; (he might have forgotten, whatever be the reason, or Vyasācārya did not know), Kṛṣṇa gives here the meaning of the word Sat. And I gave you the meaning of a Sat as eternal, So here Kṛṣṇa gives five meanings for the word Sat. Compensation for leaving the other two words! The third word he gives five meanings. What are the five meanings of the word Sat?

First meaning is sadbhāvē sadityētatprayujyatē. The word Sat is employed, is used, sat bhāvē, in the meaning of Nobility; goodness; good conduct, good behaviour, is called sat bhavaḥ, that is why noble people are called sat puruṣa or santaḥ; in the North India also they use the word, Sant Tukaram, Sant Namadev, their the word Sant means the dhārmica puruṣaḥ. Therefore one meaning is good conduct.

Sadhu bhāva, not sad bhāvē; sad bhāva, means good conduct. Sadhutvam means goodness. That is why in North India, in Sadhu, in Tamil sādhu means appāvi. Asādu. In North a sanyāsi is called sadhu. Therefore any noble one is called sādhu. Sadhu bhāve means good conduct; dharmitkatvam.

The second meaning is the word Sat bhāvaḥ means existence. In the philosophical context, the word Sat means eternal existence; that is why in Chandōgya upaniṣad, tad ēva souma idam agra asit, ēka ēva asit. Sat bhava means pure existence. Sādhu bhāvaḥ means good conduct.

Then the third meaning is praśastē karmāṇi. Any good karma is also called Sat. Sat karma. This also we use often. Praśastē karmāṇi, any great noble action is also called Sat. What is the difference between sādhu bhāva and praśastē karma. Sadhu bhāva refers to noble behaviour or conduct; it is in the context of character; here it is in the meaning of action; three meanings have been given. sacchabdaḥ pārtha yujyatē. The word is used in these three meaning. Then two more meanings Kṛṣṇa gives:

यज्ञे तपसि दाने च स्थितिः सदिति चोच्यते । कर्म चैव तदर्थीयं सदित्येवाभिधीयते ॥ ७१.२७ ॥

yajñē tapasi dānē ca sthitiḥ saditi cōcyatē |
karma caiva tadarthīyaṁ sadityēvābhidhiyatē || 17.27 ||

स्थितिः sthitiḥ steadfastness यज्ञे yajñē in yajña, sacrifice तपसि austerity tapasi च दाने ca dānē and charity च उच्यते ca ucyatē is also termed इति सत् iti sat as 'sat', च एव ca ēva again कर्म karma any action तदर्थीयम् tadarthīyam for the sake of Lord एव अभिधीयते ēva abhidhiyatē is indeed said इति सत् iti sat to be 'sat'

27. Steadfastness in yajña, austerity, and charity is also termed as 'sat'. Again any action for the sake of the Lord is indeed said to be 'sat'.

The fourth meaning of the word Sat means perseverance, or commitment or will power; sthitiḥ. With regard to what? yajñē, tapasi danē ca, with regard to the practice of these three spiritual disciplines. Commitment to yajña, commitment to tapas, and commitment to dānam. This niṣṭa is also called sannīṣṭa; so sad-bhavāna, character, sat karma, good action, sat niṣṭa, good commitment. In all these context the word Sat is used, in addition to eternal existence. Four meanings are over.

The fifth meaning is: karma caiva tadarthīyaṁ. Any other activity, any other secondary activity; satellite activity, which will promote yajñāḥ, dānam, and tapas. So previously we said yajñāḥ, dānaḥ, tapas; the primary activities are called sat; now all the other activities also, even mundane activity also, which is meant to promote, yajñāḥ, dāna, tapa. Suppose I do a business, and I earn lot of money, it is a pucca commercial activity. But suppose I earn money, and use the money for any noble purpose, yajñāḥ, dānam or tapas, then that business activity will become sat. Similarly before a noble karma or pūja is going to take place, I am cleaning that room, cleaning is the grossest activity, but even that activity will become or before the class you are spreading the carpet, or at the end of the class, you are removing the carpet, removing the chair, some students do the voluntary activity. That is not yajñāḥ, dānam or tapas. Even though it is mundane simply activity of removing the chairs or carpet, even that is a sat karma because, it is meant to promote what? Gīta class; therefore even that is sat kama only.

Therefore karma caiva tadarthīyaṁ; any karma, even the meanest karma, not the negative sense, the grossest karma, which is a satellite of supportive karma, for yajña, dāna, tapas; that is also called sat karma. iti abhidhīyatē. These are the five meanings of the word Sat and you have to add one extra sentence. There are some spiritual-seekers who use the word Sat when they are doing their activities.

Thus you can use Om, or Tat or Sat, by which all your activities will be transmuted to sātāvika, spiritual karma. And that is why in our tradition at the end of all rituals, that Om Tat Sat is there. That is why they jokingly say about the cricket match, when the result is gone; as Om Tat Sat. Even we say jokingly, which means what, even the defeat becomes a spiritual activity, for vairāgya prāp̥thi. Ok.

Concluding Kṛṣṇa says:

Verse 17.28

अश्रद्धया हुतं दत्तं तपस्तप्तं कृतं च यत् ।
असदित्युच्यते पार्थ न च तत्प्रेत्य नो इह ॥ १७.२८ ॥

aśraddhayā hutam dattam tapastaptam kṛtam ca yat|
asadityucyatē pārtha na ca tat prētya nō iha || 17.28 ||

यत् yat whatever is हुतम् hutam offered (as oblation), दत्तम् dattam given as charity तप्तम् taptam practised तपः tapaḥ as austerity च कृतम् ca kṛtam and done (as worship), अश्रद्धया aśraddhayā without faith, उच्यते ucyatē is said इति असत् iti asat to be 'asat,' तत्

tat it fructifies न उ इह na u iha neither here न च प्रेत्य na ca prētya nor hereafter पार्थ pārtha Oh Arjuna !

28. Whatever is offered as oblation, given as charity, practised as austerity and done as worship without faith is said to be 'asat', It fructifies neither here nor hereafter, Oh Arjuna!

So with the previous verse, Kṛṣṇa has concluded the topic of the significance of Om Tat Sat mantra; the significance is that it can convert any karma into sātāvika karma. And not only that, while performing the karma, if inadvertently I have committed mistake, suppose I have not chanted the mantra properly; because I do not know Sānskrīt and I have written all the mantra in Tamil script. Is anything more required? In Tamil, there is only Ka, for kha, gha, ngha, ng; for four words only one letter; Tamil is advaitam. cha, chha, ja, nja. the rest of the four is not there; like that only pa.... So imagine I have written down everything in Tamil and the most interesting thing is at the end of ritual, they have got a beautiful prayer which says:

mantra lōpe, tantra lōpe, kriya lōpe, śraddha lōpe, niyama lōpe, kala lōpe, naivēdyadi vihita lōpe ca, satyam satvam yada prōktam, yada śāstra anuṣītham pūrṇam bhavathu.

That is a prayer. This prayer means whatever lōpa has happened, lōpa means deficiency, in naivēdyam or in chanting or in using the right time, right place, etc. whatever lōpa has happened Oh Lord, you make it complete. This they have written in Tamil. lōpa means what; deficiency.

And they read; mantra lōbhe, tantra lōbhe, kriya lōbhe. So we are asking, for deficiency there should be rectification. but in the prayer itself there is deficiency; deficiency-rectification-prayer itself is chanted deficiently; for that you require another deficiency-rectification-prayer. So therefore it happens. Suppose such mistakes happen, if you chant, Om tat Sat; all those deficiencies are rectified by the Lord because Lord Knows Sānskrīt. Thank God, Therefore he will make the appropriate correction. This is the significance of Om Tat Sat.

Now in this 28th verse, Kṛṣṇa wants to conclude and in this conclusion, He wants to remind the beginning of the 17th chapter, which we might have forgotten. What is it; śraddha. Therefore Kṛṣṇa reminds us of śraddhā also here. He says; Aśraddhā hutam; any spiritual activity or religious activity done without śraddhā. Without sincerity; hutam means offered into the fire; any oblation made without śraddhā, then dattam; any charity made without śraddhā; without sincerity; and tapaḥ taptam; and any austerity practiced without śraddhā; devotion and faith, are yat cha tatam, or any other, even worldly activities, if we do without sincerity, especially the profession that we take to, imagine I have a job I do not like; I have to be in the office for 10-12 hours and not one day or 5 or 6 day a week. That means what; more than 50% of my waking hours, I am doing that; and imagine I do not like that; that means Friday comes I am happy and Sunday night, I am so unhappy, because Monday is coming. If there is no sincerely, there is a split personality that in the long run, it will adversely affect, the physical and mental health; that is called stress and strain, doing a job without love. Therefore Kṛṣṇa gives a warning; anything done without any heart in it; aśraddhayā hutam dattam, tapas, taptam kṛtam and all such karmas are called asat dharma.

Even if it is a noble karma, it becomes asat because there is no heart in it. Therefore Kṛṣṇa says, asadityucyatē. Oh Partha! Opposite of Sat. and by practicing such asat karma, you will not get material benefit also, spiritual benefit also; you would not get any benefit in this life also and you would not get any benefit in the hereafter also.

So prētya nō iha. Will not give any worldly benefit, because with a stressed mind, you cannot enjoy even material pleasures. And therefore iha lōka sukham abhi nāsthi and nō prētya, there is no para lōka sukham also. Para lōka phalam also. And therefore the most important thing is let there be śraddaḥ. If you cannot get a job that you like, because of employment problem, if you cannot get a job that you do not like: Learn, train yourselves to like any job that you have got. That is the only remedy and therefore śraddhā is very very important. So with the significance of śraddhā, Kṛṣṇa concludes the 17th chapter.

ॐ तत्सत् । इति श्रीमद्भगवद्गीतासू उपनिषत्सु ब्रह्मविद्यायां योगशास्त्रे श्रीकृष्णार्जुनसंवादे श्रद्धात्रयविभागयोगो नाम सप्तदशोऽध्यायः ॥

||ōṃ tatsaditi śrīmadbhagavadgītāsūpaniṣatsu brahmavidyāyāṃ yōgāśāstrē śrīkṛṣṇārjunasaṃvādē śraddhātrayavibhāgayōgō nāma saptadaśo'dhyāyaḥ||

Thus is concluded the seventeenth chapter named 'Sradhatrayavibhaga-yōga ' (The Yōga of the Division of the Threefold faith) in Srimad Bhagavad Gita which is the essence of the Upaniṣads, which deals with Brahman-knowledge as well as the preparatory disciplines, and which is in the form of a dialogue between Lord Kṛṣṇa and Arjuna.

Hari Om

215 Chapter 17, Summary

Today I will give you a summary of the 17th chapter of the Gīta. We had seen before that Lord Kṛṣṇa concentrated on the topic of self-knowledge in the three chapters, 13th, 14th and 15th and this self-knowledge is capable of giving liberation and this self-knowledge alone is capable of giving freedom from saṁsāra; saṁsāra being dissatisfaction with oneself. Self-inadequacy; the tendency to become different from what I am now. Because I am not satisfied with myself as I am, I want to change myself, either financially or educationally or physically or cosmetically, or emotionally or intellectually, some 'ly'; at one level or the other, I go on struggling to change so that I will be comfortable as I am; I will be at home with myself. The struggle to be different is called saṁsāra and this struggle will go away only by knowledge and that knowledge Kṛṣṇa dealt with in the chapters, 13th, 14th and 15th.

But Kṛṣṇa wants to convey an important idea that even though self-knowledge is powerful enough to destroy saṁsāra, the self-knowledge requires lot of preparation; it requires a prepared mind. In fact preparation is more difficult than the actual acquisition of knowledge. And therefore Kṛṣṇa wants to deal with a prepared mind, in the next two chapters, viz., 16th and 17th.

Therefore in these two chapters, the topic is: What is a prepared mind and what are the preparations required? In Sānskrīt, we give different names; sādhana catuṣṭaya sampathi is one name; jñāna yōgyathā is another name; guṇa brāhmaṇatvam is another name; or a sātvic mental make up; a sātvic state of mind. So I will use the word sātvic state of mind is alone a prepared mind.

And Kṛṣṇa wants to point out that a sātvic state of mind is that which naturally follows the values of life. It is naturally dhārmic; it is naturally ethical; it is naturally free from stress and strain; it is naturally relaxed; it is naturally open; it is naturally receptive; such a receptive, open, ethical, stress-free, relaxed, wonderful, quite mind will lap up the knowledge; absorb the knowledge, like sponge absorbing water. If such a sātvic state of mind is not there; one will not be able to absorb the knowledge, there will be a tremendous resistance.

And this knowledge will not be even appealing to oneself. It will not attract oneself, and it will not look relevant for our life. In fact, if you feel Vēdānta is relevant for life, a person has got a reasonably sātvic mind. And if an unprepared mind exposes to the teaching, it will not receive the knowledge, and even if by some mistake, or by the grace of the guru, or by the power of communication or the skill of transference, even if somehow the knowledge is given, the unprepared mind cannot retain the knowledge and an unprepared mind cannot assimilate the knowledge, the knowledge will become, non-functional; it will not deliver the expected results.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa wants to give a very very strong warning, as much importance you give to v̄dāntic study or more than the importance that you give to v̄dāntic study, give for a s̄atvic state of mind. And therefore Kṛṣṇa dedicates two chapters. In the 16th chapter, the differentiated, the prepared and unprepared mind in the form of daivi sampath and āsuri sampath.

And the same differentiation he is doing in the 17th chapter also with a different name, a prepared mind is called a s̄atvic mind and an unprepared mind is called a r̄ajasic and t̄amasic mind.

And therefore, Arjuna if you are interested in liberation and if you interested in knowledge, better look into your mind; study your mental biography. Instead of being aware of what your lifestyle is physically, study your mental biography? If required, have an inventory of your emotional thought pattern.

Therefore these two chapters are very important, and if a person concentrates on a s̄atvic mind; developing a s̄atvic mind; the beauty is even without self-knowledge, a s̄atvic mind can enjoy 90% liberation. Even if one does not get self-knowledge by sheerly enjoying a s̄atvic state of mind, a person can have 90% peace.

On the other hand, if a person has studied v̄dānta 100%, and if the mind is either t̄amasic or r̄ajasic, then the v̄dāntic study does not guarantee much benefit other than the claim that you can make, I have finished Gīta. He has finished Gīta. 😊 I have finished Upaniṣads 😊. Swami Chinmayānanda nicely says. You have gone through 10 upaniṣads. Fine. But how many Upaniṣads have gone through you.

And therefore these two chapters extremely important, even if 13th, 14th, 15th are forgotten, does not matter. These two chapters are important not for mere study but for implementation in life; the gap between the 16th and 17th chapters and my life should become lesser and lesser. And therefore both these chapters are important and we will just see the essence of this chapter.

The chapter begins with a question from Arjuna, based on Kṛṣṇa's statement in the 16th chapter. In the 16th chapter, Kṛṣṇa said that the scriptures are the guidelines in directing your life. Because scriptures alone ingeniously take care of your spiritual growth and material need parallely. Without the scriptural guidance, there will be a lopsided development; either a person concentrates on spirituality and neglects the family or a person takes care of the material growth but spiritually becomes a failure; but the scriptural guidance is so balanced, that it will take care of the material needs as well as spiritual need. Lakṣmidēvi is important; Sarasvati also is important. You cannot neglect either of them and also Pārvathi. Pārvathi stands for health and fitness. Lakṣmidēvi stands for the material well-being and Saraswati is required ultimately for mōkṣa. The balanced pursuit of Saraswati, Lakṣmi and Pārvathi is the scriptural approach.

Therefore Kṛṣṇa said: Tasmāt śāstrām pramāṇam tē, kārya akārya vyavasthithau, in the 16th chapter. Therefore Arjuna asked a question; Suppose there are people who are scripturally illiterate and they take to spiritual life of pūja, japa, etc. because of faith in religion, because of faith in God. In India, even now, millions of people are religious and faithfully and they are illiterate about the scriptures. So Arjuna's question was what would be the nature of such people and Kṛṣṇa answers that; that is the trigger for the 17th chapter.

Now the chapter can be divided into three portions:

The first portion is from No.1 to 6, wherein Kṛṣṇa answers Arjuna's question, regarding faith. Srāddhatraya vibhāgaḥ. And based on this alone, the chapter itself is called srāddha traya vibhāgaḥ; and this is the first topic. First I will enumerate and summarise.

Then the next topic is from verse No.7 to 22. Here we have four bonus topics. Even without Arjuna's request, Kṛṣṇa himself voluntarily offers to deal with four topics; āhāra, yajñāḥ, tapaḥ, dānam; food, worship, discipline and charity. These four fold āhārathi catuṣṭāyam, is the second portion, 7 to 22.

Then the third topic is 23 to 28 which deals with the significance of the famous mantra; Om Tat Sat. Om Tat Sat significance. This is the third and final topic.

Now going back to the first topic, Kṛṣṇa says that srāddha, faith of every person can be divided into sātvic, rājasic and tāmasic, based on the type of worship that he undertakes; based on the deity, based on the method and based on the motive; deity, method and motive, will determine the type of faith. If a person has sātvic faith, he will be attracted to sātvic deities; if he has got rājasic faith, rājasic deities; materialistic; and if he has tāmasic faith, he will be attracted to tāmasic deities. So depending on the deity of worship, you can know the faith.

Then depending upon the method of worship. If it is a satvik faith, the method of worship will be satvik. That means it will be quite, and turned inward. Manapradhānaḥ. It is more mentally oriented; and it is less physical and extrovert in satvik.

And in the case of rājasic faith, the worship will be more physical and extrovert. Want to have to lot of things; lot of activities; lot of running about; more physical and extrovert is rājasic

And tāmasic is all forms of violent type of worship, in which there is violence to one's own body and violence towards the other's; outside also.

Thus the method of worship determines the type.

And finally the motive. A sātvic type, will have a satvic motive, which means one is interested more in the inner growth rather than external. So when the motive is internal growth, it is sātvic state.

When the motive is external growth, in terms of possession and money and other paraphernalia, it is rājasic.

When the motive is harming other people, like black magic, etc. that will come under tāmasic phase; thus the deity, method and motive of worship will indicate whether one has sātvic, rājasic or tāmasic srāddha. This is the discussion from No.1 to 6.

Then Kṛṣṇa introduced 4 topics. He said that āhāra, the food that one consumes, is also a contributory factor, towards your spiritual growth. He did not say that it is the only factor. We do not say that it is the prime factor, but is one of the factors, which will determine your mental state. And Kṛṣṇa divided the food into Sātvic, rājasic and tāmasic. I do not think one should go into too much details, because then the whole day you would be thinking of what is satvik, rājasic and tāmasic; and there would be no time for Gīta. Therefore over obsession with choice of diet or sometime or often times become an obsession. Therefore for all practical purposes, we can follow certain simple rules, regards to āhāra. Simple rules I would suggest is:

- Avoid non-vegetarian diet, rule no.1;
- Avoid all forms of intoxicant; rule No.2;
- Avoid of all forms of tobacco products; rule no 3;
- Avoid over-eating, rule No.4.
- Avoid in-between eatings; in-between breakfast and lunch, and between lunch and evening snack, and between evening tea and dinner; and thereafter! So therefore breakfast, lunch, snack and dinner, and in-between also.

So therefore five rules; avoid non-vegetarian food; avoid all forms of toxicants; avoid all forms of tobacco products; avoid over-eating; avoid in-between eating. Then you are taking sātvic āhāra; because in our culture, what is traditionally prescribed is sātvic only. Stick to that, that is enough, this is with regard to āhāra.

Then with regard to yajña. Our activities are also divided into sāvīc, rājasic and tāmasīc. With regard to religious activities, the division is:

- any religious activity used for internal growth is sāvīc;
- any religious activity used for external material growth is rājasic;
- any religious activity used for harming others, is tāmasīc.

This is the rule with regard to religious activity. With regard to secular worldly activities, how to divide?

Any worldly activity, in which the beneficiaries are more in number is sāvīc.

Any worldly activity in which the beneficiaries are less; less and less, and ultimately one, and who is that one? Whether one should ask, it is myself! Lesser the beneficiaries, more rājasic it is; greater or more the beneficiaries, the sāvīc is the activity.

And any activity, which harms others, hurts others; all those activities are tāmasīc activities.

We can take this as the general norms to divide our secular and sacred activities, called yajñaḥ by Kṛṣṇa.

Then the next one is tapas. Tapas means discipline. Kṛṣṇa talks about the discipline at the organ level, i.e. kāyika, vācika or at the manasa level, and also discipline at the guṇa level, sāvīka, rājasa and tāmasa tapas. I do not want to go to the details; I want you to only remember this significance of a disciplined life. So that if you do not understand the significance, discipline will be misunderstood as curtailment of our freedom. It will be misunderstood as suppression. But when I voluntarily follow, it becomes a discipline, when the very same thing is enforced by guru or śāstra, it become suppression. And it is significant to understand, we have to remember the portion which occurs in Kathōpaniṣad, wherein the teacher Yamadharmā Rāja gives a beautiful analogy or example, in which life is compared to a journey; and in this journey, we are using a vehicle called our own body;

आत्मानँ रथितं विद्धि शरीरँ रथमेव तु ।
बुद्धिं तु सारथिं विद्धि मनः प्रग्रहमेव च ॥ ३ ॥
इन्द्रियाणि हयानाहुर्विषयाँ स्तेषु गोचरान् ।
आत्मेन्द्रियमनोयुक्तं भोक्त्याहुर्मनीषिणः ॥ ४ ॥

[ātmanāṁ rathitaṁ viddhi śarīraṁ rathamēva tu |
buddhiṁ tu sārathiṁ viddhi manaḥ pragrahamēva ca || 3||](#)

indriyāṇi hayānāhurviṣayāṃ stēṣu gōcarān |
ātmēndriyamanōyuktaṃ bhōktētyāhurmaniṣiṇaḥ || 4|| Kathōpaniṣad Part I Canto III

The body is like a vehicle. And all the sense organs are like the wheels or the horses which draws and the mind is the reins controlling the horses, or the steering (modern example) controlling the wheels; and the intellect is like the chariot driver, who controls the horses, through the reins; or the driver who controls the wheels through the steering.

So car is like the body; senses are like the wheels; mind is like the steering; driver is like the intellect; and the yajamāna, the owner who wants to travel and he is seated, not on the self-driven car, chauffeur driven car, and the yajamāna behind is the jīvātma, we have started our journey long back and right from the moment from the birth, the journey is there.

And if the life's journey should be successful; what are the conditions one should remember. The car must be in good condition; the wheels or the tyres must be in proper condition. The steering must be in proper condition. Imagine I turn into the right, and the wheels go to the left; what will happen? And imagine either does not know the destination or he knows but only drunk. அவளவு தான்! அவளவு தானா? That is it!

So if you have to reach the destination, the vehicle must be travel worthy. So before you start your spiritual journey, ask the question: Is my personality spiritual-travel-worthy? And what we find generally is that we have started our journey even without checking up. Check up so many parameters, whether it is the aircraft or the car. Most of the accidents happen because the checkup is not done properly. And therefore what are the conditions required. Body must be healthy. Are you taking care of your health; and then the sense organs must be healthy; and the mind should be emotionally calm and sound; though the EQ, the emotional quotient must be healthy.

And then the intellect should be capable of learning. Because our approach to mōkṣa involves a systematic study of scriptures.

There are many other groups following scriptures, but for them mōkṣa is through some other methods; they say bhakthi gives mōkṣa; they say kuṇḍalini rising gives mōkṣa; study is not involved.

And there are some other people who accept jñānam, but they say knowledge comes through intuition in meditation.

Thus most of the group in spirituality, they do not believe in systematic study; they believe in meditation, they believe in intuition; they believe in devotion; but our approach involves, vēdānta śṛavaṇa manana. Therefore emotional health is not enough, one should have a sound thinking capacity also. If you come to Māṇḍukya class, you know how it is; lot of thinking is involved, knowledge means understanding; and understanding means, doubts are bound to come, therefore you have to lot of reasoning; lot of logic and therefore intellect also must be sound, which means informed and capable of rational thinking. Requires an educated intellect; a sharp intellect. Thus body, sense organs, the mind, the intellect, all the four must be fit and not only they must be fit; they all also must function in coordination.

Like a music programme, I have told before, there is the best vocal musician is there; violinist is the top one, mridangist is top one, but each one is doing his own favourite. He is singing Sankarabharaṇam, and violinist likes Tōdi, and the song is in ādi tālam, and the mridangist doing in Rūpaka tālam, tani avarathanam. What kind of music concert you will have? Even though all the three are great; individual greatness is not enough; there must consonance.

Similarly, physical fitness alone is not enough; devotional fitness is also not enough; intellectual fitness alone is not enough. they all must have the concerted effort; otherwise I will be able to sit here for one hour; he would be a great yōgi; practiced the yōga āsanas very well; therefore he sat in the padma āsana at 6 a.m. and he keeps the body straight and for one hour physically he is here and but only thing is mind is all over; what is the use? Therefore āsana takes care of only the body. And therefore fitness plus integration is equal to tapas. Fitness plus integration of the physical, the emotional and the intellectual personality. In fact, we include even the prāṇic personality, even the prana maya kōśa must be healthy. All should be fit; this is discussed in tapas. Āhāra yajña tapas.

And finally dānam is the fourth bonus topic. And dānam we saw, I do not want to go into the details, and dānam we saw as sharing whatever I have. Dānam, we generally we think, only in terms of money, we are not taking only money only, money wise also it is required, if our religion has to survive; if our religious institutions have to survive. This is all because of the contribution of the people only. Previously, there was no threat to our religion because, it was the only religion available; others have come later, but now all the other religions are striving with concerted effort to propagate and there is push from all over. One side Christianity is pushing and the other side Islam is pushing, and we cannot go down; because ocean is there only. We only have to jump.

So therefore we should be aware of our responsibility to our community, our temples, our religion, our culture, our scriptural books, all of them. And therefore dānam is also important. With this the second portion is over, from 7 to 22. four bonus topics. OK. Do not ask whether in Kṛṣṇa's time bonus was there. It is voluntarily offered.

Then comes the last portion. 23 to 28. Significance of Om Tat Sat. This mantra consists the three mantras of the Lord and even though all the names of the Lord are equally sacred; these three are considered significant, because these three are supposed to be used by Brahmāji in the beginning of the creation; do not ask how do you know. Lord Kṛṣṇa says Brahmāji started his activities with this mantra. Therefore it has got a conventional sanctity. Remember the example, like the Hello. At least Hello has no religious or spiritual significance, this has got spiritual significance also.

And the primary significance of this mantra is very important it is capable of converting rājasic and even tāmasic actions into sātvic. And that is why vēda said even if there are people who are used to eating non-vegetarian, liquor consuming, etc. even to bring them to our fold; what did the vēda do? They said first preference is that you should not use it; but if you cannot give it up immediately, you consume them, but before consumption, offer to the Lord. Even liquor, does not matter. Do not use, the first advice. But if it is going to take time to give up, whether it is meat or liquor, the śāstra said does not matter, even that you offer and Bhagavān will manage it. Gradually, you aim to reduce and get out of it; That is why animal sacrifices were permitted, because there is a group which consumes, how to bring to our fold. Allow them to do what they do and request them to offer that to the Lord and when their trust. Once we win their trust; gradually, reduce this, reduce this, etc. and we can take them out slowly. Therefore, Om Tat Sat can convert even rājasic and tāmasic karmas into sātvic karma.

Śankarācārya calls it satguṇya sampadanam. Sadgunyam means satva-guṇatvam. Sampādanam. Transformation from tamas and rajas to Satva transformation and therefore Om Tat Sat is important. You can chant any of them or you can chant all the three words, you can chant in the beginning or you can chant at the end also and that is why we have the convention, even at the end of every chapter, we have Om tat Sat, and whatever ritual we do, we conclude, with Om tat Sat, Kṛṣṇārpaṇam, and Brahmārpaṇam, etc. This is the last topic, 23 to 28.

And I would like to discuss one more topic, which is outside the 16 and 17th chapters; but I would like to add that topic in this context. If you study these two chapters, Kṛṣṇa enumerates healthy virtues. What is daivy sampath, He gives the list. Abhayam, satva samsuddhini, jñāna-yōga vyavastidhi, etc. He gives a list, and He says: You cultivate, nurture and nourish the healthy virtues.

And He gives a list of unhealthy non-spiritual-friendly virtues also or vices also He gives, and He says eschew them. But peculiarly enough Kṛṣṇa does not say how to cultivate the virtues. He only dumps the responsibility on us and leave us to ourselves on how to cultivate it and we have to do it.

So naturally the question will come I want to develop virtues. But tell me how? This is not discussed in both the chapters, and therefore I thought I will briefly include that topic. How to develop virtues and how to gradually grow out of this unhealthy tendencies? And this is not my invention; these are all discussed in the scriptures in various places, these methods are strewn all over the scriptures. And these strewn methods, I have collected and classified into five methods. Therefore I will briefly discuss the five methods to develop daivi sampath. Five methods to make the mind sātvic. I will go from easy method to difficult method.

1. Prarthana

The first method is prarthana, or prayer. Prayer is one of the efficacious method of acquiring the virtues. Prayer works in two fold ways, one is I ask the Lord: Oh, Lord! give me healthy virtues. Even when we were children, the parents would tell: நமஸ்காரம் பண்ணி நல்ல புத்தியை கேளு (Do Namaskara; pray for Nalla buddhi); Nalli buddhi means satvik mind. So all the upaniṣadic prayers if you take.

Bhadram Karṇēbhi sṛṇu ...

Vāk Mē Mansi prathiṣṭita ...

all the prayers in śikṣavalli.

śarīram mē vicarṣnam; gihvāmē madhu mathama.

Vāk tapas is beautifully mentioned here. May my tongue be honey coated. Not that you take honey daily and coat your tongue. May my words be such that whoever interacts with me verbally should feel like coming to me again and again. Now if anyone meets once, they will never come near me; and sharp like and sword tongue I have. Jihva me madhu mathama. Wonderful prayer. In prayer since I ask for virtue, I can ask and Bhagavan will give.

And the second method the prayer works is Bhagavān is the embodiment of virtues. And by the law of association, when the mind is in contact with Bhagavān: Ramō vighrahavān dharmah, if you read the Rāmāyaṇā, in the beginning you get a huge list of virtues enjoyed by Rāma. Vālmiki asks, is there a person with these virtues; he gives a list; and then Nārada tells that not only these, some more I will add, Rāma is embodiment of that:

कः नु अस्मिन् सांप्रतम् लोके गुणवान् कः च वीर्यवान् |
धर्मज्ञः च कृतज्ञः च सत्य वाक्यो धृढ व्रतः || १-१-२ ||

चारित्र्येण च को युक्तः सर्व भूतेषु को हितः |
विद्वान् कः कः समर्थः च कः च एक प्रिय दर्शनः || १-१-३ ||

kah nu asmin sāmpratam lōkē gunavān kah ca vīrvavān dharmajñāḥ ca kṛtajñāḥ ca satya vākyaō dhṛḍha vrataḥ || 1-1-2 ||

cāritrēna ca kō vuktah sarva bhūtēsu kō hitah |
vidvān kaḥ kaḥ samarthaḥ ca kaḥ ca ēka priya darśanaḥ || 1-1-3 ||

When I dwell upon some principles which is embodiment, unknowingly, my mind also assumes that thought; and therefore, prayer is one method of developing virtues, wherein I look upon Lord as the embodiment of virtues. In Vaiṣṇava Sampradhāya, Sarva Kalyāṇa guṇa gaṇaika nilaya; Bhagavan's name. Kalyāṇa means positive, maṅgalam. Maṅgala guṇa eka nilayaḥ; Therefore method no.1. prayer. Then when you do prayers daily, ask for money, Ok, it is not a mistake, but ask for satbuddhi. Add that also in the list. Method one.

2. Satsaṅga

The second method is association with the virtuous. Association with the virtuous, because by the law of association, I develop the virtues of the person that I move with; a materialistic person I move with, I will also develop that. So therefore sat saṅga is considered to be very very important; sat sangatvē, nissaṅgatvam. And that is why, they said, sanyāsi should live on bhikṣa. It is a beautiful method; If Sanyasis have to live on Bhikṣa, they should live in the Society only. Bhikṣa is not got in the forest. When I move with such people, at least I know that we can be happy without possession. So every time I see a simple person having nothing, but all ānanda; at least my delusion goes, happiness requires money, that delusion goes. Survival may require money, that is a different thing; Happiness does not require money. Comfort may require money; but happiness does not require money. Comfort is external; happiness is internal. This important values I learn by observing the lifestyle of mahatmas. Therefore Satsaṅgha is another one; in the morning class, Uddhava Gīta, we are seeing the significance of sat saṅgha. This is the second.

3. Saṅkalpa

Then the third method is saṅgalpaḥ, which is especially a method you develop positive virtue. I pick up any positive virtue, which I feel I am lacking. Suppose I do have the habit of talking about the good virtues of other people; or good actions of other people, I do not talk about. Normally we love to talk about the weakness of others; their mistakes. we analyse that. Many good actions, we are silent. Suppose I want to develop, I make it a point, every day if there are people with whom I am regularly associating I tell a nice point about another person. One nice point about another person. Even if you eat, tell them this item was excellent; (whether it is good or bad), in Western countries, they are telling us to tell Thank you. Here we silently eat and go but in the end we say that there was no salt or less salt in a particular item. So anything, tell if it is a subordinate, his mistakes we point out, but do I balance by talking about at least one thing well done; so it is one virtue, if I want, I can take a sankalpa, I will do that for sometime until it becomes natural; Like that any number of virtues, Sankalpa means auto suggestion. This is with regard to virtue I want to nurture, cultivate. This is the third method.

4. Prathipakṣa Bhāvana.

The fourth method is a method especially important to give up the unhealthy tendency. The third one is to nourish healthy one, the fourth one is to gradually eliminate the negative one; that is called prathi pakṣa bhāvana; prathi pakṣa bhāvana; So any cynical, negative thinking, I deliberately neutralise by the corresponding thought pattern. Suppose my tendency is to tell everything is bad in the society. Society is deteriorating. Values are coming down. There are people with utterly cynical, five minutes you give, they comment negatively about anything. Just say Television. They will talk about the negativities of television. Say Newspaper, they will talk about talk the negativities of the paper. So negative. Science. They talk about negative. Why can't we think of the positive side of science? Positive side of television. Good things are also there in it. If my tendency is criticise, if the tendency is to criticise, I deliberately practice, glorification. This is called prathi pakṣa bhāvana. And similarly, if I do not know the motive of a particular person, and if a person said that he would come and did not come; I do not the reason; therefore I have got a free hand to imagine any reason; but what will we imagine; everyone is like that. No one will keep up their words; we will only attach negative motive to the person, after all we do not know; why can't we think positively; maybe some important work came; or somebody came and any positive reason can be there; thus whenever there is a tendency to negatively think, I deliberately neutralise it; it must be a genuine reason. Until it is proved otherwise, why can't we at least develop a positive thinking? Thus, if there is hatred, neutralise by love; if there is criticism, neutralise by praise. If there is selfishness, neutralise by selflessness; this is called pratipakṣa bhāvana. This is the fourth.

5. Vivēkaḥ.

Fifth and final and the toughest is educating the mind; vivēkaḥ; emotional education; I should have a knowledge about emotions. What are the various emotions in my mind; what is the nature of anger; what is the nature of jealousy; what is the nature of generosity. So many wonderful books are coming, on each emotion; a big book on anger. Similarly hatred; similarly jealousy. I understand the cause of emotion; nature of emotion and the consequence of every emotion. The cause, the nature and the consequence, I have to understand because I am interested in emotional health. Just as I am educating myself for retaining my physical health. Magazine contain it, if there is blood pressure, what is the cause, what is its nature, what is the consequence, diabetics, what is the cause, what is the nature, what is the consequence; newspaper, magazines are coming. Why are we studying, because I am interested in my physical health. Similarly I should educate myself regarding emotional health, which is called vivēkaḥ. That is cognitive therapy; and I should have knowledge about my mind and my emotions. And if I know I will follow healthy emotions and try to avoid the unhealthy ones. This is called vivēkaḥ.

If I follow prārthana, satsaṅga, sankalpa, prathi-pakṣa bhāvana, and vivēka, then I can become sātvic and make vēdānta work for me.

Hari Om

216 Chapter 18, Verses 01-03

Having completed the 17th chapter of the Gītā, now we will enter into the 18th chapter, this is the final chapter of the Gītā, and the biggest chapter, consisting of 78 verses. Lord Kṛṣṇa started his teaching to Arjuna from the 2nd chapter onwards, the entire first chapter was devoted to prepare the ground in which Arjuna, the soldier was converted into Arjuna the disciple; and Kṛṣṇa, the driver was converted into Kṛṣṇa, the Gītācārya. The entire first chapter was devoted for this conversion and the actual teaching began from the 2nd chapter and that too from the 11th verse onwards. Thus we have seventeen chapters of the Gītā teaching.

And here Lord Kṛṣṇa uses the well-known method of teaching, which I had often referred to, and the method of teaching is saṅkṣēpa vistharābhya bōdhanam. First give a bird's eye-view, first give a capsule of the whole teaching, so that the student will know what he or she is in for. This initial summarisation of the teaching is called upakrama saṅkṣēpa; or upakrama saṅgrahaḥ; nutshell teaching in the beginning and this Lord Kṛṣṇa did in the 2nd chapter of the Gītā. The 2nd chapter contains the essence of the entire Gītā teaching and thereafter this summary, this capsule version was magnified in the chapters from the 3rd up to the 17th; 15 chapters, 3rd to 17, 15 chapters, are the magnification, the elaboration, the visthara of the summary given in the 2nd chapter.

And after elaborating in 15 chapters, from the third to the 17th, Kṛṣṇa summarises the whole teaching once again. This is the 2nd summarisation done at the end; we call it upasamhāra saṅkṣepah. Thus mini version, maxi version, and again mini version; mini-maxi-mini. Do not think of anything else? I am talking of the teaching. So mini-maxi-mini teaching is the method that is to be adopted and I have given you the example of the news also. They start reading the news by giving the headlines and then it is elaborated, and then it is concluded again, with the main news, saṅkṣēpa visthara saṅkṣēpa.

Now the 18th chapter happens to be the final summary of the elaborate teaching given in the fifteen chapters of the Gītā, from the third to 17th. And in these fifteen chapters, Lord has dealt with mainly 9 topics, about which also I have mentioned, but I would like to remind the first three important topics are: sādhanā traya vicāraḥ; the three-fold spiritual disciplines which are to be compulsorily followed by every seeker, to attain spiritual freedom; the three-fold sādhanās beings

- karma-yōga sādhanā; for purification of mind;
- upāsana yōga sādhanā for the integration of the mind;

- and jñāna-yōga sādhanā for the enlightenment or for the removal of ignorance.

Thus sādhanā trayam in the form of karma, upāsana, bhakthi yōga; these are the three main topics, that Kṛṣṇa discusses. And thereto the first chapters concentrate on karma-yōga; and the second six chapters from the 7th to 12th chapter, it is upāsana yōga pradhāna, and from the 13th to the 17th is jñāna-yōga pradhāna. These spiritual disciplines were discussed.

Then we get another three important topics. We will call it, pada thraya vicāraḥ; analysis of the three significant words occurring in the mahāvākyam; the central teaching of the vēdānta; the mahāvākyam known as the great equation; tat, tvam, asi. It is called mahāvākyam, because it is the central teaching and this mahā vākyam has got three words, Tat referring to Īśvara Svarūpam, Tvam referring to the Jīva Svarūpam and Asi referring to the Aikyam or oneness.

Thus Tat Tvam Asi declares the essential oneness of God, the macrocosmic self and the individual, the microcosmic self; the individual self and the universal self-identity. And the first six chapters of the Gītā focus on the Jīva Svarūpam, Tvam Pada vicāraḥ, the next six chapters, 7 to 12th is tat pada vicāraḥ, Īśvara Svarūpam and the last six chapters Asi pada vicāraḥ, the aikyam or oneness. Thus pada thraya vicāraḥ, vicāraḥ means analysis, is contained in the Gītā Teaching.

Then we have got another three important topics, which deal with the factors which are required for any success in life; especially spiritual success. Three factors play prominent role for attaining any success, especially spiritual success, I will call them ghataka traya vicāraḥ. Ghataka-traya means three important factors contributing to success. And those important factors are:

No.1 individual effort, prayathnaḥ, one's own application of the mind; prayathnaḥ is factor No.1, we can call it effort or appropriate employment of the freewill that is given to us, which means I should accept that I have a freewill. There are many people who do not accept freewill at all. Kṛṣṇa says spiritual success requires first the acceptance of freewill; and having accepted the freewill I should employ it appropriately; that is factor No.1 contributing to success.

Then the second prominent factor is prasādaḥ. Prasādaḥ means the grace of the Lord. You may call it poorva janma puṇyam; but we generally call it Īśvara Prasādaḥ; Īśvara anugrahaḥ, or daivam. Thus prasādaḥ is a second important ghataka, means factor.

And the third and equally important factor is the character. Unless a human being has a healthy character, consisting of healthy values and healthy attitudes, success is impossible; especially spiritual success.

Now new analysis is showing that even material success requires character. New management studies and new books which are arriving, they are coming to the conclusion that even huge corporations require character for long-term success. If an institution compromises with values, they may get short term success, but long-term success requires character and it is coming from the west; if it comes from the West, we will accept. Gīta if it says, we will not accept. But if Stephen Covey says, 7 steps for the successful business; and he comes to the conclusion, after making the statistical study of all the big companies, that character is very important. Whether it is material or spiritual success, character is the third factor.

Prayathna, prasāda and sadguṇaḥ. And in the Bhagāvat Gīta, the first six chapters focus on the prayathna part, and the next six chapters focus on prasada part, the last six chapters focus on sadguṇaḥ. That is why the 16th chapter, and the 17th chapter, two full chapters, were exclusively dedicated for character building. In the name of daivi sampath or in the name of satva-guṇaḥ, character is technically called satva-guṇa or daivi sampath.

Thus sādhanā trayam, then pada trayam, and ghataka trayam. These are the nine topics which are covered in the fifteen chapters of the Gīta, viz., from the 3rd to 17th. Second and 18th chapters are the summary of this teaching.

And therefore when we are studying the 18th chapter, Kṛṣṇa will assume that we have gone through the previous chapters, and he will only remind us the topics discussed before and therefore it will not be elaborated. So I will also assume that you are in touch with the previous chapters we studied; I will not take too much for granted. I will explain a little bit also. I will have a balanced approach.

With this background, we will enter into the 18th chapter.

Verse 18.1

Arjuna uvāca –
saṁnyāsasya mahābāhō tattvamicchāmi vēditum |
tyāgasya ca hr̥ṣīkeśa pṛethakkeśiniṣūdana || 18.1 ||

अर्जुनः उवाच arjunaḥ uvāca – Arjuna asked: महाबाहो ह्रषीकेश mahābāhō hr̥ṣīkeśa – Oh mighty-armed Kṛṣṇa, केशिनिषूदन kēśiniṣūdana – and destroyer of Kēśi, इच्छामि icchāmi – I desire, वेदितुम् vēditum– to know, तत्त्वम् tattvam – the true nature, संन्यासस्य saṁnyāsasya – of sannyāsa, च त्यागस्य ca tyāgasya – and of Tyāga पृथक् pṛthak,- distinctly.

1. Arjunaḥ asked – Oh mighty-armed Kṛṣṇāḥ, the destroyer of Keśi, I desire to know the true nature of sannyasa and of tyāga distinctly.

In spite of so many chapters of clear teaching, and that too coming from the Sākṣāt Nārāyaṇa himself, Arjuna manages to have questions and doubts. So you can imagine how knowledge is not that easy. It involves elaborates dialogue, one cannot give knowledge just like that; it is a material to be handed over; it requires consistent teaching for a length of time. And every statement needs your and your questions, called anupraśna and the teacher will have to clarify; it will remove the doubt, but will produce another. That is why we said knowledge takes place through consistent and systematic dialogue. And in spite of this elaborate dialogue, at least in the version we get, Arjuna manages to have a doubt and now this is the last question raised by Arjuna, which is the seed for the entire 18th chapter and the Arjuna question is regarding sanyāsa or renunciation.

Renunciation is one topic which has been bugging Arjuna's mind and Arjuna has special interest in sanyāsa in this context. In fact, everybody will get interest in sanyāsa at certain moment; what moments? When there are problems. When everything is fine, nobody talks about renunciation, no kāch mooch, but when there are problems around, people think of R̥ṣīkeś, people think of āśramās and Arjuna also when he was actually in the forests, he never talked about sanyāsa. In fact that was the ideal place, he should have stayed there. So at that time, he very badly wanted to get back his kingdom; but now in the battlefield, when his duty happens to be a bitter duty, wherein he has to kill his own kith and kin, with whom he has got intense attachment; the duty is very very unpalatable; and he wants to escape from the duty and he wants some justification for that and the ideal justification is what? Sanyāsa.

Therefore even at the end of the first chapter, we saw Arjuna dropped his bow and arrow and he even said a life of sanyāsa is better. And then because of some puṇyam, he surrendered to Lord Kṛṣṇa and asked for the teaching; hoping that Kṛṣṇa will prescribe Sanyāsa. Many times we go to Swamis with questions; but we do not Swamis' answer;

we want a particular answer coming from Swami, so that my answer is validated; most people come for validation rather than clarification;

And until you give the answer that they want, they will be repeating the question. They will present in this way and that way and the moment they get an answer which they want, they will say that Swamiji you are absolutely correct; they give certificate to Swamiji. So therefore Arjuna wanted sanyāsa and he was waiting for Kṛṣṇa to endorse sanyāsa; and Arjuna was smart and Kṛṣṇa was smarter; because Kṛṣṇa new Arjuna is thinking of escapist sanyāsa. Escapist Sanyāsa will never work, if you have problems. Never take sanyāsa when there is problem, solve the problem, and when everything is fine, then take sanyāsa; if you want to. So therefore, Kṛṣṇa never wanted to talk about sanyāsa.

Therefore Kṛṣṇa gave a new definition to sanyāsa; which is totally different from the traditional conventional definition. What is the conventional definition of sanyāsa? A monastic life, in which a person gives up everything, and leaves home and snaps ties with everyone and everything. This monastic lifestyle is the conventional sanyāsa. And it is talked about in the scriptures, and it is an elaborate ritualistic procedure and it is called vaidā sanyāsaḥ, it is called āśramā sanyāsaḥ. This is the conventional meaning. And it is this sanyāsa that Arjuna wanted. So that he can get out of this war. Because Sanyāsi should not fight.

But what does Kṛṣṇa do; instead of giving this traditional conventional definition, Kṛṣṇa gives a new definition and that definition is what? Karma-yōga itself is the real sanyāsa. Thus the karma-yōga way of life, followed by a gṛhastha, is sanyāsa.

अनाश्रितः कर्मफलं कार्यं कर्म करोति यः |

स संन्यासी च योगी च न निरग्निर्न चाक्रियः || ६- १ ||

Śrī Bhagavān uvāca

nāśritaḥ karmaphalaṁ kāryaṁ karma karōti yaḥ |

sa sannyāsī ca yōgī ca na niragnirna cākriyaḥ || 6.1 ||

यं संन्यासमिति प्राहुर्योगं तं विद्धि पाण्डव |

न ह्यसंन्यस्तसङ्कल्पो योगी भवति कश्चन || ६- २ ||

yaṁ sannyāsamiti prāhuryōgaṁ taṁ viddhi pāṇḍava |

na hyasannyastasaṅkalpō yōgī bhavati kaścana || 6.2 ||

In the sixth chapter, in the first two verses, Kṛṣṇa said that monastic person is not a real sanyāsi. Mere Kavi-wearer is not sanyāsi. Then he said that a gṛhastha who gives up strong rāgaḥ dvēsaḥ. A gṛhastha has a tendency to develop strong attachment and aversion to things and people around; avoidance of this rāgaḥ and dvēsaḥ is sanyāsa.

So sanyāsa is what? Rāgaḥ dvēsaḥ renunciation, remaining in gr̥hastha āśramā is sanyāsa. Thus what is sanyāsa, karma-yōga in which rāgaḥ dvēsaḥ are renounced is sanyāsa.

And even though it is an ingenious wonderful definition, Arjuna is not happy because this definition does not suit him; because he cannot escape and take to monastic order. And therefore Arjuna is repeatedly asking about this only. He questions Kṛṣṇa again and again, assuming that at least one time Kṛṣṇa will prescribe the monastic sanyāsa. The life of a monk.

And in the 18th chapter beginning is the last desperate attempt of Arjuna and once again he asks Lord Kṛṣṇa: "Kṛṣṇa please tell me what is sanyāsa"; as though Kṛṣṇa has not talked about this; Kṛṣṇa has talked about several times, as I said in the 6th chapter itself, he has talked about it; but Arjuna wants to get his definition from Kṛṣṇa's mouth. Like reporters want to take out statements from politicians. Like that Arjuna wants to take out and he asks the final question.

So hey Mahābhāhō, Arjuna, addresses Lord Kṛṣṇa, Oh Lord, with powerful arms, samnyāsasya tattvam vēditum icchāmi. I would like to know the true meaning or significance of the word Sanyāsa. And the literal meaning of the word Sanyāsa is giving up. 'Sam' plus 'ni' plus 'us' is the root from which the word has come; the root is अस् us, asyathi is to throw away; Sam plus ni are prefixes; two prefixes are there; sam plus ni. 'sam nas' means total and appropriate renunciation. Not partial renunciation of inconvenient things. Total renunciation of all possessions, all relationships, all bank balances, all the titles, Swami so and so MA, somebody had put, he had left everything but not MA. Padmasri Swami. Very difficult to give up title; So, therefore, sam means total and permanent, not for one month and coming back after that. It is total and ni as, ni means proper, there is a ritualistic method just as joining a company is done in a formal manner; and you resign from the company also in a formal manner; one month or two month's notice, and you have to make sure that somebody else takes over; there is a formal method; therefore when I take up duty, it is formally done, when I give up, that also must be formally done; this formal and complete renunciation is called 'sam ni us', formal complete renunciation. This is the dictionary meaning of the word. Arjuna wants to know the significance of this term. Aham vēditum icchāmi.

Then hr̥ṣīkeśa, he addresses the Lord Again, Oh lord, the Lord of Senses, hr̥ṣīkam means indriyāṇi, īsa means the Lord, who blesses the sense organs because Lord is the caitanyam, śrōtrasya śrōtraṁ manasō manō yad, he alone enlivens all our organs, therefore called hr̥ṣīkeśaḥ, and another sambōdhana, kēśiniṣūdana, Oh Lord who is the destroyer of the Rakṣasā named kēśi. Kēśi is the name of the Rakṣasā who appeared with the false face; false faced asura. And that asura, Lord killed, and therefore called kēśiniṣūdana; Oh Lord, tyāgasya ca tattvam vēditum icchāmi. Second time you have to read. I would like to know the meaning of the word Tyāga also; which is another significant word used in the scriptures. So sanyāsa is one word, Tyāga is another word.

Na Karmaṇa prajaya danēna, tyāgē naikē amṛtatva manasuḥ. That is used.

Vēdānta Vijñāna sunischitharthāḥ, sanyāsa yōgāt, yada yat śuddha satvāt.

So sanyāsa is one word and Tyāga is another word. And what is the meaning of the word. From the dictionary, word Tyāga also we know is derived from the root 'tyaj', to give up, the other is derived from the root, 'us', usyathi to give up and here tyaj, tyajati to give up, Tyāgaḥ means what, again renunciation. Do both the words convey the same meaning or is there a shade of difference in these two words?

And therefore, I would like the meaning of these two words? How? पृथक् pṛthak, means distinctly, I would like to know; so Arjuna's last ditch attempt. So if Kṛṣṇa says Tyāga is monastic life or sanyāsa is monastic life, take to kavi and run away and also ṛṣikēśh is near Delhi, near Kurukṣētra, (not near Madras,) so it is very close by from Kurukṣētra. This is Arjuna's question. Kṛṣṇa is going to answer.

श्रीभगवानुवाच

काम्यानां कर्मणां न्यासं संन्यासं कवयः विदुः ।

सर्वकर्मफलत्यागं प्राहुस्त्यागं विचक्षणाः ॥ १८.२ ॥

Śrī Bhagavān uvāca

kāmyānām karmaṇām nyāsam sannnyāsam kavayō viduḥ

sarvakarmaphalatyāgam prāhustyāgam vicakṣaṇāḥ || 18.2 ||

श्रीभगवानुवाच śrībhagavānuvāca- The Lord said कवयः विदुः kavayō viduḥ – sages regard, न्यासं nyāsam- the renunciation, काम्यानां कर्मणां kāmyānām karmaṇām – of desire-born actions, संन्यासं samnyāsam- as sanyāsa. विचक्षणाः vicakṣaṇāḥ – the learned (people), प्राहुः prāhuḥ- declare that, सर्वकर्मफलत्यागं sarvakarmaphalatyāgam – the renunciation of the results of all actions, त्यागम् tyāgam – is Tyāgam.

2. The Lord said --- Sages regard the renunciation of desire-born actions as samnyāsa. The learned (people) declare that the renunciation of the results of all actions is tyāga.

Bhagavān begins to give his answer from this verse. In the second and third verses, Lord Kṛṣṇa gives the opinion of some sages or some scholars. These two verses are within quotation. These are not the views of the Lord, but these are the view of some scholars and Lord Kṛṣṇa is going to disagree with them, at least partially; Therefore from the 4th verse, we will know the clear answer, but Kṛṣṇa gives the answer according to some other scholars.

Renunciation is primarily associated with karma or action. Even though renunciation is associated with all things, including possessions and relationship, generally renunciation is associated with karma or activity. In fact, that is the toughest job also, because not to do anything is the toughest thing. An idle mind is a devil's worship, Kṛṣṇa himself said before: na hi kaścit kṣaṇamapi jātu tiṣṭhatyakarmakṛt.

Something or the other we have to do; that is why retirement becomes a very very big headache, not only for the retiring fellow, but for the other family members also and therefore they also suggest take up another job; suits everyone, Very difficult to remain quiet. When to get sukham by keeping quiet and doing nothing. கும்ம இருந்து ஸுகம் பெறுவது எப்போது. Very difficult. Therefore, renunciation is associated with karma and in the śāstra, karmas are divided into five types; which I have talked about before, but you can briefly note here:

No.1 is called vihita karma, compulsory duties;

No.2, kāmya karma or sakāma karma, optional activities, to be taken to, if you want to; optional activities;

No.3 Niṣidha karma, prohibited activity.

No.4 is prāyascitta karma, prāyascitta karma, i.e. remedial activities; an action done to remedy a Niṣidha karmaḥ, karma when Niṣidha karma is done; and

No.5. finally naimithika karma; occasional duties when the situation arises.

So the when children are born, what are the duties, which will not be relevant, if the children are not there. If the children are grown up, what are the duties? Which will not be relevant when they are babies. If grandchildren are there, what are the duties? Thus they come under occasional duties, so vihita karma, kāmya karma, Niṣidha karma, prāyascitta karma, naimithika karma.

Five types of karmas are there. Based on that, some people differentiate sanyāsa and Tyāga. What is the differentiation?

Some scholars say kāmyānāṁ karmaṇāṁ nyāsaṁ samnyāsaṁ, renunciation is giving up of four types of karma, other than the first type.

What is the first type? Vihita karma, compulsory duties; keeping that only and giving up of all other karmas, what are they, kāmya karma, prāyascitta karma, Niṣidha karma. So giving up of kāmya karma, and the other etc. is understood, is called sanyāsaḥ according to some scholars. That means what? One should retain the nitya karma and even naimithika karma is considered to be compulsory. So two has to be kept. One and five are compulsory, 2,3,4 can be given up. Giving up of 2,3 and 4, is called sanyāsa, retaining one and 5. Vihita and naimithika; Vihitha is sometime called nithya also; nithya and naimithika karmas are returned; Kāmya, Niṣidhaḥ and prāyaschitta karmas are given up. This karma renunciation is called sanyāsa.

Then what is Tyāga? According to those scholars, sarvakarmaphalatyāgaḥ; after giving up 2,3,and 4, I hope you know, this person, retains 1 and 5, viz., nitya and naimithika; occasional duties and compulsory regular duties, and they say when these duties are performed they can be done for material benefit or with a motive of spiritual growth. When we do our compulsory duties, like raising children, with may do our duty with two different motive; one motive is that those children will compensate when I am old; just keeping account, some people keep a contract also; I have paid this much for the capitation fee, and that much for that, and you should return that when you start earning. So when I do my duty towards my children, expecting material benefits, that is materialistic motive, when I do my duties, without expecting anything, other than my inner growth, I do not expect anything. If they do their duty towards me, I am lucky. If they do not do their duty towards me, that is my prārabdhā; என்ன பண்ணறது. What to do? They may send me to old age home.

So when a person does nithya, naimithika karma, without expecting even acknowledgement or compensation, that renunciation of materialistic result, karma phala Tyāgaḥ. Karma phalam of what? One and five; one and five karma should done and the result of that karma, one should not expect; that is Tyāgaḥ, according to some.

So karma tyāga is sanyāsa and karma phala Tyāgaḥ is Tyāgaḥ. Sarva karma; here sarva means, sarva 1 and 5 karmas are done, without expecting any award or reward; that is called Tyāgaḥ.

According to whom? Kavayaḥ vicakṣaṇāḥ. kavayaḥ means learned people, vicakṣaṇāḥ means enlightened people or śāstra kuśalā, experts in the śāstras. So this is not Kṛṣṇa's view but this is the view of some scholars. What is Kṛṣṇa's view? We will see from the 4th verse onwards.

Verse 18.3

त्याज्यं दोषवदित्येके कर्म प्राहुर्मनीषिणः । यज्ञदानतपःकर्म न त्याज्यमिति चापरे ॥ १८.३ ॥

tyājyaṃ dōṣavadityēkē karma prāhurmanīṣiṇaḥ |
yajñādānatapaḥkarma na tyājyamiti cāparē || 18.3 ||

एके मनीषिणः ēkē manīṣiṇaḥ – Some thinkers, प्राहुः prāhuḥ– declare, इति iti– that, कर्म त्याज्यम् karma tyājyam – action to be renounced, दोषवत् dōṣavat– as evil; च अपरे ca aparē– whereas others, इति iti– (declare) that, यज्ञदानतपः कर्म yajyadānatapaḥ karma – activity in the form of yajña, charity and austerity, न त्याज्यम् na tyājyam– should not be given up.

3. Some thinkers declare that action is to be renounced as evil, whereas some others (declare) that activity in the form of yajña, charity and austerity should not be given up.

Another two opinions are brought in here. In the previous verse, it was pointed that three types of karma are to be renounced; kāmya, Niṣidha and prāyaschitta, and with regard to the renunciation of those three, there is no controversy. But there is a controversy, regarding the first and fifth type of karma, compulsory regular duty, and compulsory occasional duties, compulsory regular duties are called vihita or nitya karma, compulsory occasional duties are called naimithika karma. With regard to nitya and naimithika, there is a debate. What is the debate?

Whether a spiritual-seeker can give up nithya, naimithika karma at all? Whether a spiritual-seeker can give up karma No.1 and 5 at all? 2,3,4 no controversy. One and five, விடலாமா? கூடாதா? Whether one can drop? And Kṛṣṇa says, there is also difference of opinion. There are two groups of people; one for and one against. Just like in America, Pro-Life and Anti-Life. So what are the two debates?

One group of people say, karma tyājyam; all karmas should be given up, which means No.1 and No.5 also; not only kama, Niṣidha, prāyascitta, but even nithya and naimithika karma should be given up. Only when you give up all the karmas, you can pursue spirituality totally; thus some scholars say.

Therefore Kṛṣṇa says ēkē manīṣiṇaḥ. Some scholars, learned people who say, karma tyājyam; any karma is to be given up; Why? Dōṣavat. because karmas or duties come, there will be stress and strain in the mind; Duty means first of all conflict; and secondly tension; and we do not whether we will be able to completely it or whatever we have taken, you complete and better get out of it; otherwise when you take up vēdānta, the other duties will be an obstruction. You will be trying to meditate, cidānanda rūpa śivōham,.... but only all the other things will hover around. You will never get a relaxed mind at all. Who says? Some scholars. You may agree or disagree; I am not asking your opinion. some scholars say that. Duty means worry. dōṣavat. It is full of dōṣa; dōṣa means stress and strain and tension.

And therefore what should you do; give up whatever you have taken up, you complete, not in the middle; and later do not take any fresh one; Generally we take first generation duties, i.e. first baby sitting; thereafter we have second generation duties, grandchildren baby-sitting; and thereafter, third generation duties, great grandchildren baby-sitting, Where is the end for all these? Can one take bath in the sea, after the waves have subsided? This is one group's argument. Ēkē manīṣiṇaḥ prāhuḥ; therefore what is their conclusion; even nithya naimithika karma should be given up. This is their view.

Whereas there is another group which says, yajña, dāna, tapa karma, na tyājyam. The first and the fifth one, first and fifth means vihita karma and naimithika karma, generally called nithya, naimithika karmas, your family duties, your personal duties, your social duties, they should never be given up. And especially they are called yajñaḥ, dānam, tapaḥ; so activities which are meant in the form of service to others; so your service to family, service to society. In short pañca maha yajñās are compulsory; and then dānam, first thing we would like to renounce is what? Dānam. So therefore this group says dānam, then tapaha, tapaha means what? we have seen before discipline or moderation. These three karmas, nithya naimithika karmas or pañca mahā yajñās, you should never give up. In the name of vādānta, do not give up your pūja, especially Māṇḍukya kārīka, we are criticising upāsana; you have to continue any pūja because that alone takes care of Īśvara prasāda factor; I said prayathna, prasāda and character. Lord's grace flow must be there; until we get the knowledge somehow; and if your duties are creating tension; find out methods of neutralising the tension; never give up the duties, neutralise the tension caused by duties. How to neutralise tension? All these we have seen in the Gīta.

तेषां नित्याभियुक्तानां योगक्षेमं वहाम्यहम् || ९- २२ ||

ananyāścintayantō māṃ yē janāḥ paryupāsatē |
tēṣāṃ nityābhiyuktānāṃ yōgākṣēmam vahāmyaham || 9.22 ||

Therefore this group says, you continue in Grihasthāśramā, and continue to do your duties, and if you get tension, you learn how to neutralise that; and remaining in duty, attend Sunday classes. That is the right method. This is the opinion of another group. So what are the two opinions?

Duties should be given up is one. Duties should never be given up is the second opinion. Iti dōṣavat karma tyājyam ēkē iti manīṣiṇaḥ; learned people declare, and aparē some other scholars say that these should never be given up. Therefore consolidating, what are the views we have got?

Previous verse we said, giving up of karma is sanyāsa; giving up of karma-phalam is Tyāga. And in the giving up of karma also, partial giving up is sanyāsa, according to some people. Total giving up of karma is sanyāsa, according to second group. These are the various opinions, but even if it is not understood, it does not matter, because it is the opinion of other people. What is important here is to understand Kṛṣṇa's view.

And what is Kṛṣṇa's view that is given from the 4th verse, which we will see in the next class.

Hari Om

217 Chapter 18, Verses 04-07

ॐ

The 18th chapter of the Gītā begins with a question from Arjuna dealing with topic of renunciation, which is sometimes called sanyāsaḥ, which is sometimes called tyāgaḥ; and Arjuna wants clarification with regard to this term, because throughout the Bhagavat Gītā, Kṛṣṇa has avoided giving the real meaning of the word sanyāsa or tyāga. In the v̄edic tradition, there is a traditional sanyāsa; which every Hindu knows, the moment I use the word sanyāsi, you will get that idea very clearly, even an illiterate person on the road knows what is or who is a sanyāsi.

And that traditional meaning of sanyāsa is physically giving up everything, by going through a religious ritual and taking to monastic life or becoming a monk. And by taking to such a lifestyle, a person is free from all the worldly duties. No more family duties, no more community duties; social duties; the scriptures give him a special exemption.

And the scriptures give him the special exemption, for the sake of one purpose, and the purpose is that person is going to exclusively pursue v̄edānta śravaṇa manana nidhidhyāsa. Only under that condition; what condition? He should spend rest of his life, only in the spiritual pursuit. And if he has attained spiritual enlightenment; thereafter also he dedicates his life for the spread of the spiritual knowledge. So for the sake of study, or for the sake of teaching. Study of the spiritual teaching or spreading the spiritual teaching; an exclusive lifestyle, śāstra allows; and it is this sanyāsa, a monastic order, called āśrama sanyāsa; this is the popular and correct meaning also.

But this sanyāsa is allowed for those people who have initially performed the duties and purified the mind. Performance of duties, plays a very important role in spiritual purification; discharging my duties to my family; it is called riṇam; dēva riṇam, piṭṛ riṇam, ṛṣi riṇam, etc. we have duties to family, forefathers, the society, scriptures, the Gods. And initially a person has to discharge the duties which will purify the mind. After the purification of the mind and only after the purification of the mind, such a monastic lifestyle is allowed in the tradition.

And if a person does not have the purified mind, our scriptures conclude that a monastic life style will become disastrous. Without the purification of mind, if a person becomes a sanyāsi, it will be harmful to himself; it will be harmful to the society; and it will be harmful to the very order and sanctity of sanyāsa and it will be harmful to the very kāṣāya vasthram.

And therefore, the scriptures' approach is: Do the duty, purify the mind and after the purification of the mind, if you want, you can take to monastic lifestyle. But before the purification of the mind, one should not talk about sanyāsa.

And Kṛṣṇa views Arjuna as an unfit person for the monastic order; because Kṛṣṇa feels Arjuna requires the performance of the duty for some more time and thereafter only if at all he can even think, and therefore Kṛṣṇa does not want to talk about the regular sanyāsa in the form of monastic order and therefore he gives a figurative, compromised definition of sanyāsa. And compromised definition is doing the duties, giving up the rāgaḥ-dvēsaḥ.

So the new definition of sanyāsa is not the renunciation of the duty, but the renunciation of rāgaḥ-dvēsaḥ; attachment and aversion. And this Kṛṣṇa has been doing all the time, but Arjuna is not able to swallow this new definition; because the traditional definition he has heard. And therefore Arjuna once again makes a final attempt and asks for the definition of these two words; and first Kṛṣṇa gives the definition according to some other scholars; and that definition was given in verse No.2 and 3, which we saw in the last class.

And according to those scholars, sanyāsa is renunciation of karma is sanyāsa. Renunciation of action is sanyāsa and renunciation of karma-phalam is tyāga. So the definition and the differentiation according to some other scholars is karma renunciation is equal to sanyāsa; karma phala renunciation is equal to tyāgaḥ.

And having agreed with this differentiation, they make a further study on sanyāsa. What is sanyāsa? Karma renunciation; What is tyāga? Karma phala renunciation; and when they debate further; they are able to agree with the definition of tyāga, there is consensus, but with regard to sanyāsa, there are two groups.

Even though they agree that karma renunciation is sanyāsa, their further debate is whether karma renunciation should be total or partial. They agree karma renunciation is sanyāsa, but their internal debate is whether karma renunciation should be total or partial; and there they have two groups.

And the first group says, total karma renunciation is sanyāsa. And the second group says, No No no, not total karma renunciation, but only partial karma renunciation is sanyāsa.

There is no problem with regard to tyāga; What is karma? Karma phala tyāga; karma renunciation they have an issue; partial according to one group; total according to another group. And when the second groups says that partial karma renunciation is sanyāsa, the question comes which part? Renouncing something else.

So they say spiritual karma should not be renounced; non-spiritual karma renunciation is sanyāsa; spiritual and non-spiritual karma renunciation is sanyāsa; that is the definition according to the total group.

The partial group says spiritual karma you keep; non-spiritual karma renunciation is sanyāsa; karma phala renunciation is tyāga. Thus there is lot of debate going on.

And having introduced the opinions of others, now Kṛṣṇa comes forward and gives his verdict; the supreme verdict; previous one, being local. Now Kṛṣṇa gives his verdict, in the following verses.

Verse 18.4

निश्चयं शृणु मे तत्र त्यागे भरतसत्तम ।
त्यागो हि पुरुषव्याघ्र त्रिविधः सम्प्रकीर्तितः ॥ १८.४ ॥

Niścayaṁ śṛṇu mē tatra tyāgē bharatasattama |
tyāgō hi puruṣavyāghra trividhaḥ samprakīrtitaḥ || 18.4 ||

भरतसत्तम bharatasattama – Oh Arjuna शृणु ! śṛṇu listen मे निश्चयम् mē niścayam to My verdict, तत्र त्यागे tatra tyāgē regarding renunciation, त्यागः हि tyāgaḥ hi Renunciation is indeed सम्प्रकीर्तितः samprakīrtitaḥ said to be त्रिविधः trividhaḥ threefold पुरुषव्याघ्र puruṣavyāghra Oh Arjuna! (tiger among men).

4. Oh Arjuna ! Listen to My verdict regarding renunciation. Renunciation is indeed said to be threefold, Oh Arjuna !

Hey Bharatasattama, Kṛṣṇa is addressing Arjuna, sath means a noble person; sathama is the superlative degree; tat tatthara, tattamaḥ; and what is the superlative degree of noble; nobler, the noblest and the noblest among whom, Bharatasattama, Oh Arjuna who is the noblest among the descendants of Bharatha varṁśa. śṛṇu. May you carefully listen to. What? Mē niścayam; my verdict with regard to sanyāsa and tyāga.

And the first verdict that Kṛṣṇa wants to give is an implied verdict. The most important verdict is implied in this verse. Śankarācārya brings out the implication; we have to supply. What is that implied verdict?

There is no difference at all between sanyāsa and tyāga. According to Kṛṣṇa, sanyāsa and tyāga are synonymous; and therefore, Kṛṣṇa disagrees from the previous group of people, because the previous group differentiated these two.

How they did differentiate? Renunciation of karma is sanyāsa; renunciation of karma phala is tyāga; such a shade of difference they made. According to Kṛṣṇa there is no shade of difference. Sanyāsa is equal to tyāga; tyāga is equal to sanyāsa; both mean renunciation.

Then the next question what is the definition of this renunciation, which is also called tyāga? What is the definition of that renunciation? Kṛṣṇa says, this renunciation is three-fold.

Hey puruṣavyāghra; so puruṣa vyāghra, the greatest among human beings. vyāghra means what? புலி in Tamil. Puli, tiger. He is Puli in Mathematics. Like that vyāghra, a gem, a great one, puruṣa vyāghra, a great one among the human beings.

So Hey Arjuna!, the greatest one, tyāgaḥ trividhaḥ samprakīrtitaḥ; renunciation is three fold; and here tyāga you should equate to sanyāsa also, because according to Kṛṣṇa tyāga and sanyāsa are synonymous. Tyāgaḥ trivida, which means sanyāsaḥ trivida; three-fold.

Now it has become complicated. He wanted to know only the difference between these two. Now Kṛṣṇa has replaced the two by three. There are three types of renunciation.

Now Arjuna is curious to know what are the three types of tyāga, otherwise called sanyāsa.

And before defining these three types of renunciation, Kṛṣṇa wants to make a general important remark. Based on that only he is going to build his opinion on renunciation. Therefore, Arjuna, before understanding renunciation, you should know one basic principle. What is the basic principle? That he gives in the next verses.

Next two verses 5 and 6 a very very important general principles, worth remembering, which is one of the corner-stones of vēdic-teaching. We will read:

यज्ञदानतपःकर्म न त्याज्यं कार्यमेव तत् ।
यज्ञो दानं तपश्चैव पावनानि मनीषिणाम् ॥ १८.५ ॥

yajñadānatapaḥkarma na tyājyaṃ kāryamēva tat |
yajñō dānaṃ tapaścaiva pāvanāni manīṣiṇām || 18.5 ||

यज्ञदानतपःकर्म yajñadānatapaḥ – Activity in the form of yajna, charity and austerity, न त्याज्यम् na tyājyam should not be given up तत् कार्यम् एव tat kāryam ēva it has to be performed necessarily यज्ञः yajñah yajna दानं dānaṃ charity च एव तपः and austerity, ca ēva tapaḥ पावनानि pāvanāni and purifiers, मनीषिणाम् manīṣiṇām to the devout (people).

5. Activity in the form of Yajña, charity and austerity should not be given up. It has to be performed necessarily. Yajña, charity and austerity are purifiers to the devout (people).

Before talking about renunciation, the first thing we have to observe is who is listening to the definition, so that teaching of sanyāsa will depend upon the audience. So the Vēda itself approaches this topic in two fold ways, depending upon the level of the student.

And scriptures divide the entire humanity into two types, broadly: one type is those people who have got jñāna-yōgyatha. You may call it a mature mind; a purified mind; a prepared mind, which can take to a life without any relationship. A human mind; an emotional mind generally looks for relationship. And the health of the emotional mind is heavily dependent on the relationship. If certain healthy relationships are absent, then the human mind can go crazy. It wants companionship. It wants to claim some people as mine; you belong to me; and it wants some people to claim that I belong to you. So it wants relationship, companionship. Without that the mind feels lonely and it will get into several type of psychiatric problem. In fact, generally the psychiatric people will say that several psychiatric problem. Talk to a psychiatric privately and he would say that all Sanyāsis would have psychological problems, because human mind requires companionship, relationship. A mind which does not have a strong bonding with someone or the other; that mind will face lot of problems; And therefore the scriptures say you should talk about sanyāsa only to those people whose minds are ready. This Kṛṣṇa has said in the fifth chapter itself.

योगयुक्तो मुनिर्ब्रह्म निचिरेणाधिगच्छति ॥ ५.६ ॥

sannyāsastu mahābāhō duḥkhamāptumayōgataḥ |
yōgayuktō munirbrahma nacirēṇādhigacchati || 5.6 ||

Taking kāvi is easier. Running away from house is easier. Dayānanda Swami always says; before he took Sanyāsa he went to Himalayas and met so many sanyāsis; and he expressed his desire to become sanyāsi and most of the sanyāsis there, they were strongly advising Swamiji against taking sanyāsa. We did mistake and we are like the monkey who lost the tail; kindly do not commit that mistake. And the unfortunate thing, any other āśrama you can enter and if it does not suit you, you can come out. From Brahmacharya āśrama you can go to grihasthāśrama; from Grihastha āśrama to sanyāsa-āśrama. From Sanyāsa Āśrama, you cannot come back, because it is a one way traffic; and there are many many miserable sanyāsis not happy with the life they lead, because mind wants change; wants to talk to four people; if you go to Badri or Kedar, and if you want to meet any sanyāsi, you are the rare audience for them; and you will find they will never leave you; and they will go on talking, and you will be observing the watch on and off, as you have a train to catch, etc. but they will go on talking, because they do not have even somebody to talk. There is no variety in dress; morning kavi, evening kāvi, next day kāvi, no designer cloth; no different hairstyle; what style in a shaven head; and regular bikṣa what is there; rice and dāl; or dāl and rōti; this is the only bikṣa. To accept this, you require a type of mind; and therefore the tradition will talk about sanyāsa only after making sure that person is ready. That is why in the Upaniṣads alone, the real sanyāsa is talked about.

But if the person is not ready and majority of humanity is not ready then the definition will change. And Kṛṣṇa is addressing the majority. Therefore the following definition of sanyāsa is in keeping with the majority of humanity, which is not mature in mind.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa addresses the aśuddha anthakaraṇa people; aśuddha anthakaraṇa people means what people who are not yet ready. And what should they remember. Kṛṣṇa says yajñadānatapaḥkarma na tyājyaṃ. Never think of renouncing the religious way of life; it is a very important support for the emotional mind. If you want to avoid drugs, if you want to avoid liquor, if you want to avoid all these other practices, and if you want to enjoy a sane mind, a religious life style is useful. In fact, in India, if majority of people is reasonably sane, it is only because of religion, because in all other respects, we are big zero. Poverty is so high; no water; nothing is available.

According to the principles of sociology, either we should have gone crazy, or there must have been a revolution in India. There is no revolution in India and we are reasonably sane; But even in slums, people are smiling, that is their religion is keeping their sanity of Indians.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa says here yajña dāna tapaḥ karma; there are three basic religious disciplines; never give them up. What are those three? religious disciplines, yajña, worship of the Lord in some form or the other; even now you go to temples and especially pradōṣam, you will find people forget all their problems, water problem, that problem, this problem, corruption problem, etc. and they will blissfully pray forgetting everything.

Then dānam, sharing, even now India is a country which has got a high level of charity; in spite of poverty; there was an article recently. They have calculated the amount of money given in charity in India. It runs 2,200 crores or something, even a villager who has got Rs.100. If a sanyāsi goes, he has an idea, he has to give dakṣiṇa. One Swami was telling that he went to a slum area; where people are extremely poor; they do not have any possession; by the time he went around in front of many huts, he had received 5 paise and 10 paise coin; they do not have money; but even out of that meager amount, they want to give. A rich man giving Rs.100 is not a great thing; but a slum person giving 5 paise that is because of dānabuddhi. That Swami says I felt like shedding tears; they do not know from where the next meal comes; Still they value ochre robed person.

And if that Swamiji had said I will not receive that money, because you are poor, they would have felt offended. And in fact they will curse themselves that they are not lucky enough to even donate அந்த குடுப்பினை கூட இல்லை; he did not take our money and they will feel bad, and therefore I received it all. And the interesting truth is of the 2,200 crores dānam or so, 60 or 70% is from the village. Richest people are in the city; but the poorest charity is in the city. But they are giving it is a vēdic value. If you have Re.5 income, Re.1 paise has to go to charity. This is the vēdic injunction; thamēdam vēdanu vacanēna brahmāṇa vividiṣanti yajñēna dānēna tapasa. And therefore Kṛṣṇa reinforces the Bṛhadāraṇyaka injunction dānam. Whatever little you share with others.

And the next one is tapas. We have seen tapas in the previous chapter, three types of yajñah. In the 17th chapter, three types of dānam we saw, and tapas also karaṇa dṛṣṭya and guṇa dṛṣṭya, austerity and three religious practices you should never give up. You may decide to settle in New York for work; but never give up these three practices.

So yajñadānatapaḥ. Karma is not the fourth item; karma is the common factor to be added to all these three; yajña karma, dāna karma, the practice of dānam, tapa karma, the practice of austerity, the practice of simplicity, न त्याज्यम् na tyājyam, never give up.

On the other hand, kāryam ēva. It has to be done, whichever part of the world you live. Why you should do them? Because these are the three prominent disciplines which will prepare you for spiritual knowledge. If you value spiritual knowledge, you should value the preparation also, and if you value the preparation, you have to value these three.

Therefore Kṛṣṇa says yajñō dānam tapaścaiva; these three fundamental religious practices are pāvanāni. Pāvanāni means purifiers of the mind; purifiers of the mind and

What do you mean by purification, removal of all the emotional obstacles to v̥dāntic study.

And the first and foremost obstacle is what? Whether v̥dānta is required or not, is the basic obstacle. Is there any relevance to v̥dānta?' When there are impurities in the mind, our conclusion will be v̥dānta is not required. For what purpose?

We are going to jobs, we are salaried, we are able to have children, we are able to educate them; and we have got food; why religion, why temple, why scriptural study; and there are some people who argue people have got fear, they require God. Therefore religion is for the weak-mind; this is the conclusion of many people.

We say religion is not for a weak mind. Religion is for a mature mind. When the mind becomes mature, we know the importance of God, we know the importance of spiritual knowledge and if we do not feel the relevance, it is a very very unfortunate obstacle; we call it a type of pāpam. Even though a person is very rich, people will say he is puṇyavān, because money is there; but v̥dānta calls, v̥dānta tells that he has pāpam, because he has not yet understood the relevance of spiritual pursuit. And therefore yajñō dānam tapaścaiva; all these three are purifiers. For whom? Manīṣiṇām, for the intelligent human being, they are all very valid.

And therefore Śankarācārya adds a note, which Kṛṣṇa wants to avoid, but Śankarācārya adds as a footnote, you are allowed to renounce all these three. Kṛṣṇa does not want to say that, but Śankarācārya adds a note, you are allowed to renounce all these three, after jñāna-yōgyatha prāp̥thi.

And this Lord Kṛṣṇa also agrees in the 66th verse of this chapter, sarvan dharmān api parithyajya; dharmān, yajna, dāna, tapa karmāni; you can renounce, after acquiring the eligibility. Till that, kāch-mūch, no opening the mouth; be religious, start from the applying the vibhūthi. Not necessary for big and big practices, applying the religious mark is itself is a big thing. Now it is very very bad to show our religiosity.

एतान्यपि तु कर्माणि सङ्गं त्यक्त्वा फलानि च।
कर्तव्यानीति मे पार्थ निश्चितं मतमुत्तमम् ॥ १८.६ ॥

ētānyapi tu karmāṇi saṅgam tyaktvā phalāni ca |
kartavyānīti mē pārtha niścitaṁ matamuttamam || 18.6 ||

त्यक्त्वा tyaktvā renouncing, सङ्गम् saṅgam attachment च फलानि ca phalāni – and the results, एतानि ētāni these कर्माणि अपि तु karmāṇi api tu action alone, कर्तव्यानि kartavyāni are to be performed इति iti this is me niścitam मे निश्चितम् My considered उत्तमम् uttamam – and the best मतम् matam teaching, पार्थ pārtha Oh Arjuna !

6. Renouncing attachment and the results, these actions alone are to be performed --- This is My considered and the best teaching, Oh Arjuna!

Therefore, Arjuna remember, basic religious activity, one has to do. ētāni karmāṇi; these three important religious disciplines. What are they? Yajña dāna tapaḥ; kartavyāni, you have to necessarily practice, and when you practice them, what should be your attitude? Saṅgam tyaktva; do not get attached to even the religious karma. Because later after purification, you have to renounce them; that is important, you should get attached and follow them initially, but after sometime, there are people attached to rituals, they would not come to vēdānta. Two extremes. One group never enter yajña dāna tapaḥ, the other group which enters, but they never come out of them. What is intelligence? Enter, purify and get out; and after getting out what should you do? Vēdānta śravaṇa, manana, nidhidhyāsana.

Therefore religious activities are important; but do not get attached even to them. Treat them as a sādhana ; not an end in itself. Therefore saṅgam tvaktva; without attachment; and phalani cha. According to the scriptures, yajña dānam and tapaḥ, these three religious disciplines can produce two types of puṇyam; yajña, dānam and tapaḥ, they can produce two types of puṇyam; One puṇyam is called spiritual puṇyam, another puṇyam is called material puṇyam.

What do you mean material puṇyam? You can understand; material puṇyam is that which will provide you with all material things. Big house, 24 hours running water, (this is important), and all electricity, A/c, car, and all those things, if you have to enjoy the material comforts, you require some puṇyam. So yajña, dānam and tapaḥ can produce material puṇyam, and the other is what? Spiritual puṇyam.

What do you mean by spiritual puṇyam? Spiritual puṇyam will not give you material benefit; on the other hand, it will produce internal benefit like amānitvam, adambitvam, ahimsa, śānti, (in which chapter? 13th chapter) and in the 16th Chapter, Abhayam satva saṁśuddhi, which we call daivi sampath. Thus yajña, dānam tapaḥ can give you inner transformation.

And not only it will give you puṇyam, in the form of sādhanā catuṣṭaya sampathi, and it will give you another type of spiritual puṇyam, which will provide you with a competent Guru. For that you need puṇyam.

So the puṇyam that gives you a bungalow is different from the puṇyam that gives you a vādānta guru; both need puṇyam, but the quality of puṇyam is different. And it is not enough that you get a guru; you should have the facility to come to the class regularly. For that also you need puṇyam. Without any obstacle, Sunday after Sunday, if you have to come, health must co-operate, traffic, family must cooperate. So many things are there; they all require puṇyam, remember; if you are attending these classes, do not take it as a joke, in your puṇyam bank, you have a got a very big bank balance. Or else you will not be able to come. Something will stop you. Therefore, when you do these yajñah, dana, tapaḥ, you can choose which type of puṇyam you want? Bungalow-car giving puṇyam or guru śāstra śravaṇam; you have to choose; because one of the two will be given, you can't ask for both. Kṛṣṇa says you have to choose between the two; and therefore Kṛṣṇa advises: Do not choose material puṇyam. Phalāni ca tyaktvā. phalāni means material puṇyam, you do not ask for. Do not encash for the worldly benefit; that will come and go; and you can earn; and so you encash yajña, dānam and tapaḥ for what; these spiritual puṇyam; saṅgam tyaktvā phalāni ca; kartavyāni.

मनुष्यत्वं मुमुक्षुत्वं महापुरुषसंश्रयः ॥३॥

durlabham trayamēvaitaddēvānugrahaḥētukam |
manuṣyatvaṁ mumukṣutvaṁ mahāpuruṣasaṁśrayaḥ ||3||

Śankarācārya tells in Vivēkachūdamaṇi. Being born a human being requires a puṇyam. Also developing interest in spirituality requires till greater puṇyam; and having a conducive atmosphere to fulfill your spiritual urge requires tremendous puṇyam. You may be in a city where roads are fine, everything is well provided, but everywhere you do not give an opportunity to study śāstra. And therefore, may you do, yajña, dānam and tapaḥ karma; iti niścitam matam uttamam. This is my considered verdict. Niścitam matam.

What is my considered verdict? One should not give up these three. Not only he should follow these three, he should utilise these three, for spiritual purposes, rather than material. It is like a piece of sandalwood; can be used for burning, or cooking the food, or you can use the same sandal wood for rubbing and applying. Chandana taru kāṣṭanam kurute. Who will use the sandal log for burning and cooking? Similarly, yajña, dānam and tapaḥ should be used for spiritual benefit. So having made this general observation, Kṛṣṇa is now going to talk about three types of renunciation.

नियतस्य तु संन्यासः कर्मणो नोपपद्यते ।
मोहात्तस्य परित्यागः तामसः परिकीर्तितः ॥ १८.७ ॥

niyatasya tu sannyāsaḥ karmaṇō nōpapadyatē |
mōhāttasya parityāgastāmasaḥ parikīrtitaḥ || 18.7 ||

सन्यासः sanyāsaḥ – Renunciation, नियतस्य कर्मणः niyatasya karmaṇaḥ – of obligatory action, न तु उपपद्यते na tu upapadyatē – is not proper. तस्य tasya – its, परित्यागः parityāgaḥ – renunciation, मोहात् mōhāt – out of delusion, परिकीर्तितः parikīrtitaḥ – is said to be, तामसः tāmasaḥ – to be tāmasic.

7. Renunciation of obligatory action is not proper. Its renunciation out of delusion is said to be tamasic.

Thus three types of sanyāsa Kṛṣṇa is talking about or sātāvika, rājasa, tāmasa sanyāsa; and all these three are from the standpoint of a person who is not yet ready. Kṛṣṇa is keeping in mind an unprepared person and giving this teaching;

And the order in which he treats these three is tāmasa sanyāsa first, then rājasa sanyāsaḥ and sātāvika sanyāsaḥ. Normally, in the 17th chapter, we saw the order is sātāvika, rājasa, tāmasa. Now he reverses the order. And when I talk about sātāvika sanyāsa, you should understand Kṛṣṇa does not make a difference sanyāsa and tyāga; therefore, sātāvika sanyāsa is the same as sātāvika tyāga. Similarly rājasa sanyāsa is rājasa tyāga. So in this seventh verse, tāmasa sanyāsa is defined. 8th deals with rājasa, and 9th sātāvika.

So Kṛṣṇa says here first. Arjuna remember: karmaṇaḥ sanyāsaḥ na upapadyatē; never renounce these three basic spiritual disciplines. Under no circumstances, you should renounce or you should never renounce these three; which three?; yajña, dānam and tapaḥ. And whenever I say yajñāḥ, the pañca-mahā-yajña s of the third chapter you should remember; I am not going to those details.

Those three together Kṛṣṇa calls in niyata karma; Niyatam means compulsory; Just as nowadays they say physical exercise is compulsory, for every human being, for maintaining physical health. Therefore, you see people walk in the morning wearing the shoe. Because every other magazine is writing, you may diet, you may not diet, you may do anything, one thing inevitable for physical health is physical exercise. Aerobic exercise.

And they also show in the breakfast TV, but the problem is we regularly watch that; watching is not doing; you put on more weight. Just as physical health requires physical exercise compulsorily, Kṛṣṇa says spiritual health requires these three compulsorily, and therefore they are called niyata karma; niyatam means compulsory.

And if somebody argues, what will happen if I give up my regular exercise? So the consequences will not be suffered by the doctor; not by the newspaper; not by the magazine, if I do not do the consequences will be suffered by me. Similarly, I give up yajña, dānam and tapaḥ, Kṛṣṇa will not suffer; Vēdaḥ will not suffer; Gīta will not suffer, Swamis will not suffer; I will have to pay very dearly. And therefore Kṛṣṇa says niyatasya. Niyatasya karmaṇaḥ is equal to yajña, dānam and tapaḥ karmaṇaḥ, sannyāsaḥ nōpapadyatē.

And there are some people who give up these compulsory religious activities, like people not doing physical exercise, giving one excuse or the other; we also are doing the same thing, i.e. the gurus, that is we end up becoming Gurus. குரு; ரண்டு அர்தம். Heavier. Guru means guru, other is heavy. We all face this problem. One side, only sweet in bhikṣa, other side, no exercise. Get into problem. So therefore, if a person does not do the compulsory exercise, it can be because of any reason; due to several reasons.

Kṛṣṇa says some people do not practice them because they do not know their value. Just there are many illiterate people who do not understand the importance of exercise. That is why awareness is to be created; teaching is to be done; what happens if you do not move your muscles; they have to teach you.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa says there are some people who renounce them due to ignorance; ignorance of what; Ignorance of their value? So mōhāttasya parityāgaḥ. There are some people who leave them out of delusion, out of ignorance; ignorance of their value; and ignorance is caused by which guṇa. Tamō-guṇa, and therefore such a renunciation, which is caused by ignorance, i.e. called tāmasa sanyāsaḥ. So what is tamasic renunciation? Renunciation of basic religious activity, out of the sheer ignorance of their importance in maintaining my spiritual health, That is called tāmasa sanyāsa. The details we will see in the next class. Hari Om

In the beginning of the 18th chapter, Arjuna asked a question to Lord Kṛṣṇa, requesting the Lord to clarify the meaning of the two words, sanyāsa and tyāga; both of them literally mean renunciation. And Kṛṣṇa gave the opinions of different scholars and thereafter Kṛṣṇa has started giving his own verdict or opinion. And according to Kṛṣṇa, sanyāsa and tyāga are both synonym. There is no shade of difference in the meaning, sanyāsa is equal to tyāga; tyāga is equal to sanyāsa; both mean renunciation.

Thereafter He divided this renunciation into three categories, sātvika, rājasa and tāmasa and He has started defining each one of the three. And instead of going in the normal order, Kṛṣṇa has taken the reverse order. In the 7th verse, which we completed in the last class, Kṛṣṇa has defined tāmasa sanyāsa; later He will define rājasa and sātvika.

And before giving a definition, Kṛṣṇa wants to make the context very clear. When the scriptures address an audience, what type of audience is kept in mind should be clearly known? Because the advice of the scriptures will depend upon the spiritual maturity of the audience. If this is not kept in mind, our scriptures will appear to be full of contradictions.

In one place, scriptures will encourage the seeker to do actions, and the very scriptures will encourage the student to renounce action elsewhere. In one place the scriptures will say get married; in another place, the very same scriptures will say, get out of the house. In one place, the scriptures will say pūja is very glorious; in another place, as we are seeing in Māṇḍūkya, it says that every worshipper is an unfortunate person. Therefore, the scriptures will appear to be full of contradictions, if the level of the student is not kept in mind.

Broadly the students are classified into two levels; those students who have already purified the mind; the pure-minded-ones and in Sānskrīt, we use the word, jñāna yōgyaḥ, or sādhanā catuṣṭaya saṁpannaḥ, I will use the simple expression, the prepared-student.

And another set of students, the scriptures keep in mind, is the unprepared-student; and the advice will depend upon whether the student is prepared or not.

And Kṛṣṇa wants to make it very clear, that now He is going to define sanyāsa, keeping in mind the unprepared-student. If He is addressing the prepared-student, his definition of Sanyāsa would have been totally different. So now He is keeping in mind those students who are full of rāgaḥ, dvēsaḥ, kāmaḥ, krōdhaḥ, lōbhaḥ, mōhaḥ, madaḥ, mātsaryaḥ, etc. (it is not finished, therefore etc. ~ my breath will last only up to that limit!); etc.

And this He made very clear by making one statement; Arjuna, you should remember all the unprepared students should remember that karma is extremely important, for spiritual progress. An isolated, secluded, withdrawn life should not be thought about by an unprepared student. That person must be in the society and He should lead a busy life of karma. And the only thing he has to take care of is the karma should be chosen in such a way that they will promote spiritual growth. And the karmas are divided into sātvika-karmāṇi, rājasa-karmāṇi and tāmasa-karmāṇi; we saw in the 17th chapter.

Para Upakāra karmāṇi, is sātāvika-karmāṇi; those activities which will benefit more number of people. They are called parōpakāra karmāṇi or sātāvika-karmāṇi; they will contribute to spiritual growth predominantly; material growth they may contribute or not, spiritual growth is definite.

The medium karmās, the rājasa-karmāṇi s are those which are called para udāsina karmāṇi, those activities in which do not take into account others' at all. He lives only his personal blinkered life; he does not bother about even the existence of the society; he ignores the society; he neither does good to the society, nor does he do any harm also. This is para udāsina karmāṇi, udāsina means ignoring, and these are called rājasa-karmāṇi; they will not contribute to spiritual growth also, they will not lead to spiritual downfall also, because he does not do no good, no bad, therefore, neither spiritual growth or regression; spiritual stagnation takes place. மேலெயும் போகமாட்டான்; கீழேயும் போகமாட்டான்; த்ரிஸன்க்குமாதிரி அங்யே இருப்பான். He will not go up nor down, he will be like Triśanku. They are called para udāsina karmāṇi.

Then the third lowest type of karma is para apakāra karmāṇi; tāmasa-karmāṇi, which are harmful to others, and these are the lowest because, they lead to spiritual regression or downfall.

Thus spiritual progression, spiritual stagnation, spiritual regression. Sātāvika karmāṇi elevates, rājasa-karmāṇi maintains; tāmasa-karmāṇi pulls you down.

And a spiritual student's aim is to increase the proportion of sātāvika-karmāṇi; to reduce the proportion of rājasa-karmāṇi, and to eliminate tāmasika karmāṇi. If one were to give a percentage basis, if he does 60% sātāvika karmas, he will rise faster and faster up; and 35% rājasa-karmāṇi, tāmasa-karmāṇi should become minimum; if possible zero. This changing the proportion is going towards karma-yōga level. And therefore, Kṛṣṇa wants every unprepared student to remember the significance of sātāvika-karmāṇi, in spiritual growth, and those karmas alone Kṛṣṇa calls, yajña, dānam and tapaḥ karma.

Now in the 7th verse, Kṛṣṇa says supposes an unprepared student renounces the karma. What karma? Even sātāvika karma (if he renounces tāmasa, it is good, if he renounces rājasa karma, is also good). Suppose an unprepared student (that idea is very important) renounces sātāvika karmas also, by taking to sanyāsa, giving up the society, family, whatever little good he was going, he gives up, and goes to an āśrama or a secluded place; because the mind is not totally prepared, he is unfit for vēdānta. And therefore he will not be able to grasp the vēdāntic teaching; and the only purifying possibility of karma-yōga also he has left behind. That person will be in a disastrous situation, and Kṛṣṇa says suppose an unprepared student renounces sātāvika-karmāṇi.

And this renunciation can happen due to two reasons: one reason is sheerly because of ignorance regarding the importance of sātāvika karma; how sātāvika karma will contribute to my purification; or my daily pūja, sandhyā vandanam, or japa, or temple visit, or some dānam, or some service to the society, how significant they are, this person does not understand, because the benefit of the sātāvika-karmāṇi is non-tangible and abstract. Spiritual benefit is not quantifiable in terms of money, name or fame. Citta śuddhi, is not a concrete thing, and therefore some unprepared student, out of ignorance, they renounce sātāvika karmas and take to even sanyāsa without qualification.

And Dayānanda Swami says; the danger is not only for the person, the danger is for Sanyāsa itself. ஸன்யாஸதுக்கே ஆபத்து. The sanyāsa institution gets contaminated, the kāṣaya vastram gets contaminated; when it is taken by someone who does not deserve that; and this wrong misplaced renunciation of sātāvika karmas by an unprepared student, due to ignorance, is called tāmasa sanyāsa.

So Mōhāt; mōha here means what, ajñānam, தெரியலை, பாவம். Sorry he does not unfortunately understand, that is why it is generally said that whether I am fit for sanyāsa or not, it is better my Guru decides. Because we will not know whether we are mature enough or not; or we may choose to take sanyāsa, because situations are not favourable. Problems are there, so I have taken sanyāsa. Therefore I can cheat myself, as Arjuna was asking for sanyāsa, because the duty is very very bitter; and therefore, they say, even if you want sanyāsa, go to a Mahatma, live under him for some time, and let that mahatma decide, whether this person is ready or not. Invariably Guru alone decides. And śiṣya must be willing to accept. Or else when the guru talks of sanyāsa, the śiṣya runs away and think that let me change the guru. Guru must suggest and the śiṣya must be willing to accept and then alone, it will work; otherwise, tāmasaḥ parikirthithaḥ; it is tāmasic sanyāsa;

And there can be a second reason also for the renunciation of sātāvika karma by an unprepared (you should remember the context of the unprepared) student. What is the second reason? That is said in the next verse No.8.

Verse 18.8

दुःखमित्येव यत्कर्म कायक्लेशभयात्त्यजेत् ।
स कृत्वा राजसं त्यागं नैव त्यागफलं लभेत् ॥ १८.८ ॥

duḥkhamityēva yatkarma kāyāklēśabhayāt tyajēt |
sa kṛtvā rājasam tyāgam naiva tyāgaphalam labhēt || 18.8 ||

कायक्लेशभयात् kāyāklēśabhayāt out of fear of physical strain, यत् त्यजेत् yat tyajēt suppose one gives up कर्म karma the duty, इति दुःखम् एव duḥkham ēva (considering it) to be troublesome कृत्वा kṛtvā having taken to, राजसं त्यागम् rājasam tyāgam rajasic renunciation, सः न एव लभेत् saḥ na ēva labhēt he never gets, त्यागफलम् tyāgaphalam the results of renunciation.

8. Out of fear of physical strain, one gives up the duty (considering it) to be troublesome. Having taken to Rājasic renunciation, he never gets the results of renunciation.

So the second type of person. This person is also an unprepared student. He really requires sātvika karma; but what does he do; he renounces sātvika karma; what is the reason for renunciation? It is not ignorance. This person knows the significance of sātvika karma; he has heard the Bhagavad-Gīta; and he also tells everyone sātvika karmas are important; and they are required to purify the mind; he knows well, and he can give lectures also. But the problem is he would not do. Like many people who knows the significance of exercise. Not because of ignorance, they know, and they do not do. What can be the reason? Kṛṣṇa says the reason is because of their attachment to the body, and the bodily comfort, they do not want to strain the body; they want to lead a comfortable life; if I have to go for a morning walk; No doubt, morning walk is very great, it will reduce cholesterol, he says I know, but I have to get up and I have to walk; thus he does not want discomfort to the body, which means he has got attachment to the body.

Attachment is rajō-guṇa; ignorance is tamō-guṇa; here this person does not have ignorance problem, the problem is bodily attachment; Therefore he does not want to take any pains. Even the namaskāra also he does not want to do properly; you know there are different namaskāras, satsaṅga namaskāra, pañcaṅga namaskāra, and we have got the shortest cut namaskāra; and we always choose the shortest. Why? One has to bend, and the back will pain, etc.

Therefore Kṛṣṇa says, kāyakleśabhayāt tyajēt, because of his concern for the body; and because of his discomfort caused to the body, because of the fear of physical strain; kāya means body, klēśa, means strain, because the fear of the physical strain. And unfortunately or fortunately, all our religious activities involve physical strain; pradikṣiṇa, satsaṅga namaskāram, then get up, then again namaskāra, etc. etc. they have voluntarily kept so that you would not have dēha abhimāna; the very aim of ritual is dēha abhimāna tyāga; your laziness and attachment to the body should go away. Therefore kāyakleśabhayāt tyajēt.

And what is his attitude towards karma? Duḥkham ityēva; with the notion that every karma is a strain. Every karma, every small karma, and you ask him to go Sabarimala, then he will say, that I will go to the Ayyappa temple at Santhome. If you ask him to go to Tiruvannamalai giri valam; he will say that I will do it as a mānasika giri valam. So any physical activity he has got wonderful excuse. When tummy becomes bigger, excuses become more, as in the Vināyaka, Subramaniya stories. When there was a competition to go round the world, to get the mango, Subramanian, immediately he went round the world. For the Vināyaka, round the world is impossible. Therefore his buddhi worked and what is that? He said that parents are the world and he did their pradakṣinam; as they are equal to the whole world. Therefore mind gives excuses; duḥkha iti karma tyajēt; sa kṛtva rājasam tyāgam; such a misplaced renunciation of sātāvika karma, because of physical attachment is called rājasa sanyāsa.

By doing such a renunciation, Kṛṣṇa gives a warning that this person will not get any benefit, because even if he goes to an āśrama, he will not be able to study as the mind is not yet prepared. Therefore tyāga phalam naiva labēt. He will never get the benefit of renunciation. This is a rājasa sanyāsa. And both of them Kṛṣṇa does not want people to take. So never renounce the sātāvika activities. Then what is sātāvika sanyāsa? That is the one Kṛṣṇa wants the people to take. That is defined in the 9th verse.

Verse 18.9

कार्यमित्येव यत्कर्म नियतं क्रियतेऽर्जुन ।
सङ्गं त्यक्त्वा फलं चैव स त्यागः सात्त्विको मतः ॥ १८.९ ॥

kāryamityēva yatkarma niyataṁ kriyatē'arjuna |
saṅgam tyaktvā phalaṁ caiva sa tyāgaḥ sāttvikō mataḥ || 19.9 ||

त्यक्त्वा tyaktvā renouncing, सङ्गम् saṅgam attachment च एव फलम् ca ēva phalam and the result यत् yat suppose नियतं कर्म niyataṁ karma the obligatory action क्रियते kriyatē is performed इति एव iti ēva with the attitude that कार्यम् kāryam “it should be done”, सः त्यागः saḥ tyāgaḥ that renunciation, मतः mataḥ is considered, सात्त्विकः sāttvikaḥ Sattvic, अर्जुन Arjuna Oh ! Arjuna

9. Renouncing attachment and the result, suppose the obligatory action is performed with the attitude that “it should be done”. That renunciation is considered Sātāvika, Oh! Arjuna.

Whereas a sātāvika person is one, who knows that I am not yet prepared. This is very important. I should very clearly know whether I stand, because the scriptures talk about various sādhanās, for students of different levels. Therefore it is for me to decide where I stand. And this sātāvika person knows what I want is mōkṣa, mōkṣa requires jñānam, jñānam requires citta śuddhi, citta śuddhi requires sātāvika-karmāṇi. See clarity. I want mōkṣa; mōkṣa requires self-knowledge; self-knowledge requires purity of mind; purity of mind requires sātāvika-karmāṇi. This clarity he has got. He does not suffer from the problem of ignorance. He has knowledge. Even if he has got knowledge, if he is attached to the body problem, he will know that I know, but I would not do. But this sātāvika person does not have the problem of bodily attachment; he knows physical karmas involve physical strain. He would not call it a strain because he sees it as a necessity. And he sees the positive benefit coming out of that strenuous action and therefore this strain will not appear as strain; like the people who stand in Tirupati queue for 14 hours; 16 hours, 24 hours, it may be a strain, but they value the darśanam, this strain will not appear strain.

Any means will appear as strain, if the end is lost sight of. Any means will appear as a pain when the end is lost sight of. When the end is kept in mind, the means will never be seen as a pain. And therefore this sātvik person, how does he think? Kāryam iti ēva; I have to do karma; pañca mahā yajñāḥ. I have to resort, not for pleasing the gurus, or Gods or scriptures, for my own spiritual growth, I require. That is why we say awareness is very very important. Action governed by awareness will only stand. Any other amount of other people telling you to exercise, one would not; but I should be educated and I should know the value of it.

And therefore, kāryam; I have to do; iti niyatam karma kriyatē; this person takes to activity; and his aim is what; increasing the proportion of sātvika karmas, and certainly he has got so many selfish desires; he wants to buy a house, he wants to do this, he wants to do that. There are rājasic selfish karmas also, not that they come to zero, but the thing is, they are lesser, compared to sātvika karmas; and the tāmasa karmas, harmful activities, he deliberately reduces. Even in the business that he takes to. When such a person gets lot of profits, there are so many industrial houses, every sanyasi will pray for the success of the those industrial houses; you know why, their profit are utilised for the benefit of the society. It is not they want to use the whole thing for their luxurious things. Fund is used for schools, hospitals, āśramās, vēda padaṣala. Society will pray for the profit; even sanyāsīs will pray for their profit. So doing business is not a materialistic action; if the business also contributes to para upakāram. And therefore, niyatam karma means, sātvikam karma, yajña, dāna, tapaḥ karma. Pañca mahā yajña karma, here is called niyatam. Spiritually elevating activities this person does.

Then if he is performing the karma, how can you categorise that into a type of sanyāsa at all? We are talking about what? Sātvika sanyāsa and sātvika sanyāsa is not renouncing karmas; he is performing the karma, he has not renounced anything; then how can you call it as sanyāsa. Kṛṣṇa says this person renounces something else; he does not renounce the sātvika-karmāṇi; but he renounces something else. What is that? Saṅgam tyaktva; he renounces his attachment to those karmas; so saṅga means attachment to those karmas; because remember, even the sātvika karmas are valid only until citta śuddhi is attained.

Because sātvika karmas are meant for citta śuddhi or jñānam. These are fundamentals, one should not forget. Sātvik karmas will never produce jñānam. They will produce citta śuddhi; therefore until the purification of the mind, sātvika karmas are valid; after purification I should be ready to either renounce or reduce the sātāvika karmas. And therefore do not get attached to even karma; even sātāvika karma.

Later Kṛṣṇa will say; Sarva dharman api paritajya; Therefore never get attached to anything; And one great Tamil saint says; ஆசை அறுமின்கள்; ஆசை அறுமின்கள்; ஈசனோடாகிலும்; ācai aṛumiṅka!; ācai aṛumiṅka!; īcaṇōṭākilum. That we do not say; because first one has to have asai to the Easan! First let the āsai come. The idea is that ultimately I should not depend upon any external factor. Therefore, use the sātāvika karma, as a means, do not get attached to them, as an end.

Similarly, phalam chaiva; these sātāvika karmas have got two fold benefit; the primary benefit is the spiritual benefit; the inner growth. That is the primary benefit for sātāvika karma. And there is a secondary benefit, a bye product; a spin-off, that is the material name and fame. The society will say he is a great parōpakāri; he has done good works; he should be given Padmashri; one reward should be given; one ponnadai will be given; name and fame will come, when a person does para upakāra karmāṇi; but the one who practices the sātāvika karma, he should not be aiming at those bye-products. If you are going to aim at bye-product; if you are aiming at the bye-product, they are no-more bye-product; a bye-product is a bye-product only when you do not aim it; as a bonus let it come; let it not come; I am doing it; for my own inner spiritual growth.

Thus, for sātāvika karmas, there is one mukya phalam and there is avāntara phalam. The example given is when you plant a mango tree; for the sake of mangos, mango fruit is primary benefit; and there are so many secondary benefit for a mango tree. First water harvesting it will retain the water; the temperature will come down; because one tree retains so much ground water; cooling is a bye-product; shade you get is a bye-product; mango leaves, if you want to invite a Swami, pūrṇa kumbha, readily available, twigs are there; earlier it was fuel. All those things are called avānthara phalam; sātāvika karmas have got spiritual growth as primary benefit; material spin offs as the secondary benefit; a karma-yōgis should not focus on the avānthara phalam; that is called phalam tyaktva. Do not work for name, fame, recognition and climbing the corporate ladder; at least this year I should get the promotion; and the other person who joined the company after me, he has got; Why? Because he applies maska; he knows what are the real qualifications; working is a secondary qualification; for promotion, you require other qualifications that he takes to; do not do that; therefore saṅgam phalam chaiva tyaktvā; phalam means avānthara phalam; the material spin off, do not aim at.

And such a renunciation, sat tyāga; where I do noble karmas the beauty is when I do it with understanding the very karma gives me joy; the very performance is the phalam; like a good musician or like a good teacher even, a good teacher enjoys the teaching; and if the student understands, it is their puṇyam; if they do not understand, some obstacles maybe there; the very teaching gives him the joy; for a musician, the very singing gives him the joy; a karma-yōgi enjoys as a kartā itself; he does not want to enjoy as a future bhoktā. And if he enjoys as a future bhoktā, it is a bonus for him because he has already enjoyed as a kartā; enjoying as a kartā is karma-yōga; doing karma for the sake of enjoyment as a future bhoktā is called karma. Karma-yōga phalam is instantaneous. For phalam there is an unpredictable future phalam. Therefore Kṛṣṇa says saṅgaṃ phalaṃ caiva tyaktvā, yat karma kriyatē, sa sāttvikō tyāga. This is called sātvika sanyāsa.

OK. From this slōkā; we get a very important corollary. Kṛṣṇa has defined sātvika sanyāsa as performing the karma, without being concerned about the material benefit; if it comes, good, if it does not come, OK. I am growing spiritually. And if by chance you remember the 3rd chapter; difficult I now, this is 18th chapter, in which jambhavān time, we learned it. If by chance you remember, the third chapter or 2nd chapter Kṛṣṇa has given the same definition for karma-yōga.

सिद्धसिद्धोः समो भूत्वा समत्वं योग उच्यते || २- ४८ ||

yōgasthaḥ kuru karmāṇi saṅgaṃ tyaktvā dhanañjaya |
siddhasiddhyoḥ samō bhūtvā samatvaṃ yōga ucyatē || 2.48 ||

मयि सर्वाणि कर्माणि संन्यस्याध्यात्मचेतसा |
निराशीर्निर्ममो भूत्वा युध्यस्व विगतज्वरः || ३- ३० ||

mayi sarvāṇi karmāṇi sannyasyādhyātmacētasā |
nirāśīrnirmamō bhūtvā yudhyasva vigatajvaraḥ || 3.30 ||

The peculiar thing that we find is karma-yōga of the 2nd and 3rd chapter, Kṛṣṇa has presented now as sātvika sanyāsa. See the mischief; old wine in new bottle. May not be a nice example in a Gīta class; but that is also 'spiritual' example!

OK. So Kṛṣṇa wants Arjuna to take to karma-yōga. Arjuna is refusing; therefore now Kṛṣṇa is presenting the same karma-yōga as sātvika sanyāsa; and therefore a karma-yōgi, is as good as a sanyasi. Figuratively he is a sanyāsi; that alone in śāstra we call gauna sanyāsa. Figuratively he is a sanyāsi only; because whatever piece of mind a monk enjoys; whatever a piece of a mind a monk enjoys; a monastic person enjoys; the very same piece of mind, this karma-yōgi will enjoy because even though he has so many responsibilities, he is willing to accept the future, as Īśvaraprasāda. So why should he worry; let it come; I will accept; therefore he enjoys sanyāsi's piece of mind. Therefore sātvika sanyāsa is equal to karma-yōga is the most important corollary that we have to learn.

So with this Kṛṣṇa has defined all the three sanyāsa. And we should also note; sātvika, rājasa, tāmasa sanyāsa is the same as sātvika, rājasa, tāmasa tyāga, because in Kṛṣṇa's vocabulary, sanyāsa and tyāga are synonymous.

न द्वेष्यकुशलं कर्म कुशले नानुषज्जते ।
त्यागी सत्त्वसमाविष्टः मेधावी छिन्नसंशयः ॥ १८.१० ॥

na dvēṣṭyakuśalaṁ karma kuśalē nānuṣajjatē |
tyāgī sattvasamāviṣṭo mēdhāvī chinnaśaṁśayaḥ || 18.10 ||

सत्त्वसमाविष्टः satvasamaviṣṭaḥ Established in sattva त्यागी tyāgī a renouncer मेधावी mēdhāvī becomes wise, छिन्नसंशयः chinnaśaṁśayaḥ – free from all doubts, न द्वेषि na dvēṣṭhi he does not hate, अकुशलं कर्म akuśalaṁ karma a disagreeable work न अनुषज्जते na anuṣajjatē nor is he attached कुशले kuśalē to an agreeable one.

10. Established in Satva, a renouncer (becomes) wise, free from all doubts. He does not hate a disagreeable work nor is he attached to an agreeable one.

So in these verses; 10, 11 and 12, Kṛṣṇa is talking about the glory of karma-yōga, which he has named presently as sātvika sanyāsa. So sātvika sanyāsa mahima or karma-yōga mahima is talked about. A karma-yōgi is one, who understands that he has duties in life; duty is the tax that one has to pay for living. For mere living, we have got certain duties, duty to myself. What is duty to myself? To eat; we cannot say I do not like eating; once you regularly, excretion becomes natural, you cannot stop that, pūja, dining, and toilet all are important; and you have to bath the body, exercise the body. These are all duties to myself; if I fail in these duties, I have to pay the price in the form of physical sickness. There is no escape. You cannot cheat god; cheat the natural law; Similarly I have duties to the family, in which I am. So if there is a setup, children are them, for them examination are there, parents have also examination at that time! We do not know, children's lesson we have no learned at all. Therefore you have to study Hindi; and you have to keep awake; and regularly you have to give tea; for all those things work for admission, Nowadays, every husband has to share the domestic work also. It is the new law, equality; gender equality; men have to cut vegetables; once in a while, dish-washing, baby nappy changing, etc. whether you like or not. If you are married; meditate for 7 days on these things and say I will accept. Or else only quarrels between the husband-wife.

Similarly, if I am in a country, I have to pay taxes. You cannot say that you forgot. Once a minister said that for 10 years he was busy serving the country that he forgot to pay the taxes. One minister claimed it seems; I cannot do. Living means, doing duties. Certain duties are pleasant; and many are there which are not that pleasant. Karma-yōgi means the first job he does is that he removes this division Never call a duty as pleasant or unpleasant; tagging your duty pleasant or unpleasant makes your life miserable; because you cannot escape from the duty; Physically you do, mentally you reject. Internal rejection, external performance; there is a strain in the personality. I do not want to do, but I have to do.

A karma-yōgi, what does he do? He cannot renounce the duty, only way of avoiding this strain, I accept this as part of life. If I become a sanyasi, visitors will come. I cannot say, visitors cannot come. Why because that is occupational hazard. Every occupation has its hazards; they will gate crash. No appointment seeking habit. You cannot complain and say I want privacy. Sanyāsi and privacy will never go together. So thus every āśrama has got its own duties; therefore Kṛṣṇa says, tyāgi; tyāgi means sātvika sanyāsi, karma-yōgi; Kṛṣṇa has quietly changed the word sanyasi to tyāgi. From that it is very clear that from Kṛṣṇa's vision, Sanyāsi and tyāgi are synonymous.

Here he is talking about a sātvika sanyāsi, alias karma-yōgi; akuśalam karma, na dvēṣṭi. He does not hate any duty that comes in his way; he never complains; either internally or externally, because he knows that will cause stress and strain; it will affect the health in the long run. Even the job that I have taken, if I have joined a work which I do not like, purely for the sake of salary.

I had this example, anyway just as an aside, in one school, the principal wanted all the teachers to know our culture. The intention of the founders and the principal is that if the teachers know the value, they will impart to the children, so that the future of India will be wonderful because teachers have influence. Therefore they called and they said that I should teach the teachers Bhagavad-Gīta, and they had kept after the school hours, because the regular classes should not be disturbed, from 4-5 or from 5-6 p.m. And that was one of the worst experiences of my life. All the teachers were waiting for me to finish. Because many of the teachers had taken the job only to add to their income of their husband and both have to earn and now I can only become a teacher sheerly for the sake of salary; and thus I have become the teacher; purely for the sake of salary; I do not say all teachers; but many have done that; and therefore, their body language; their facial expressions. One poet sang a song;

śirasi malika malika malika;

Oh Lord, I am ready to accept any kind of śirasi likitam. But one thing I do not want, I have to share something with the people; who are not interested in receiving. He is a poet, I have to share my poetry with those people who are not interested; arasikeṣu kavithvya nivēda nam. Do not make me a victim of such a situation. Similarly, I had to pump Bhagavad-Gīta and even Russian iron wall would have been thinner. This people had such powerful resistance. Anyway I managed somehow; and because of that puṇyam only I got wonderful students! Like you!

Akuśalam karma na dvēṣṭi. He does not hate unpleasant duties. kuśalē na anuṣajjatē; when there are pleasant duties, he does not get attached to them also. This is a sātvika sanyāsi and what will happen to him; in due course, after the vacation, he will be sufficiently grown up to receive the knowledge.

Details in the next class.

Hari Om

219 Chapter 18, Verses 10-13

We are seeing the 18th chapter of the Gīta, which begins with a question from Arjuna, regarding the words sanyāsa and tyāga. Arjuna wants to know the significance of these two words and also whether there is any difference in these two words. And Lord Kṛṣṇa answers this question and that is the topic in the first twelve verses of the 18th chapter. Verse No.1 to 12 dealt with the topic of renunciation.

Lord Kṛṣṇa first gave different opinions of other Ṛṣis and later He gave His own teaching and according to Lord Kṛṣṇa, sanyāsa and tyāga are synonymous; there is no difference at all in these two words; both mean renunciation. Thereafter He talks about three types of renunciation, named sātvika, rājasa and tāmasa sanyāsa, which are the same as sātvika, rājasa, tāmasa tyāgaḥ.

And while defining these three types of sanyāsās, Lord Kṛṣṇa deviates from the conventional definition. Because in this context Lord Kṛṣṇa is dealing with a spiritual-seeker, who is not yet refined. The definition of sanyāsa will depend upon the person who is asking the question. Suppose a person has followed a religious life, taking to yajña, dāna and tapaḥ, and by following them for quite some time, if the person has refined the mind, to that person, the definition of sanyāsa will be different. What will be definition of sanyāsa? We will address him: Oh Seeker, you have followed the rituals enough; you have gone to pilgrimage; you have done dānam; and you have lead a religious life; and you have got the full benefit of those religious rituals, which is in the form of mental purification.

And after the purification of the mind, spending time in rituals is redundant; it is like eating food after one has eaten and filled his stomach. For a person of purified mind, religious rituals are redundant and they become even an obstacle. And therefore for such a purified person, the definition of renunciation will be what? Giving up all the conventional religious activity and totally dedicating to vēdānta śraṇam, mananam and nidhidhyāsanam. Sarvadharmān parityajya māmēkaṁ śaraṇam vraja. Such a religious person does not require religious activities. For him renunciation will be what? yajña, dānam and tapaḥ, giving up of these. This is the definition given in the upaniṣad.

Suppose a person is not yet refined; which is the case of 95% of humanity. A mind is saturated with rāgaḥ, dvēsaḥ, kāma, krōdhaḥ, lōbhaḥ, and for such an impure mind, a religious lifestyle is inevitable. Because pūjas will alone purify the mind. Rituals are required. Japa is very much required; service to the society is inevitable.

So for such a unrefined mind, the definition of renunciation will be different. Kṛṣṇa says, if an impure person, renounces religious rituals, if an impure person renounces religious rituals, that renunciation is inferior renunciation. And Kṛṣṇa calls such a renunciation a tāmasa sanyāsaḥ. So what is tāmasa sanyāsa? Renunciation of rituals by an impure person; or it will be called rājasa sanyāsaḥ, which also means improper renunciation, and therefore Arjuna, you are also of inferior variety; majority of humanity is unrefined; therefore if they give up religion, such a renunciation will be dangerous; and therefore, do not give them up, because it is tāmasa and rājasa sanyāsa.

Then what is sātṛvika sanyāsa for an unrefined person? What is sātṛvika sanyāsa for an unrefined person? For an unrefined person, sātṛvika sanyāsa is karma-yōgaḥ; and therefore in the 9th verse, which is a very important verse, Kṛṣṇa says for an impure person, sātṛvika sanyāsa is in the form of karma-yōga; which means he should not renounce a religious way of life; yajñāḥ is very important in the form of pañcamahā yajñāḥ. நான் வேதாந்தம் படிக்கிறேன் என்று சொல்லி, பூஜையும், ஜபத்தையும் விட்டுவிடாதேயோ! Kṛṣṇa is warning. (One should not discard the temple visits or pūjas or japas, just because one has taken up study of vēdānta, saying "I am akartā, I am abhōkta ; I am beyond all these things"). This is what He says; He is warning; it is a fake renunciation.

But next crisis come, this so-called jñāni is flat on the ground; as long as the world experiences continue to disturb me, as long as strong rāgaḥ-dvēsaḥ s sway my mind, I should know I am not a ripe; therefore let me be a good person and continue my devotion to iṣṭa dēvatā, yajñāḥ is important, dānam is maha important, very important; tapas is also required. And what do you mean yajña, dāna, tapas? In the last 17th chapter, which we are supposed to have completed, and we are supposed to have revised during the vacation.

Then the next question is if sāvika sanyāsa is called karma-yōga, what is the basis for calling it a sanyāsa? Because in karma-yōga, a person is not renouncing yajñāḥ; not renouncing dānam or tapas, he is performing all these three; and if he is performing all these three, how do you call it renunciation? Because to name it renunciation, one has to renounce something.

And Kṛṣṇa gives a reason, and the reason is what? A karma-yōgi renounces anxiety regarding future. A karma-yōgi renounces anxiety regarding future. In fact, one who renounces anxiety is called a karma-yōgi. Then what does he do? According to his designation in family, according to his designation in the company, working place, according to his designation in the society, he keeps on doing what is to be done. As a father what I have to do, I do. I can contribute to the future of my children; but I can never control the future of my children. It is very very important; we can only contribute to the future of the children; but we can never control their future, we cannot control even their thoughts. We can create an atmosphere at home and hope that such a spiritual atmosphere will spiritually influence the children; that we can hope only; we all do not know what all MTV programs are going to the children. And in schools and colleges, what all things are happening; and how many classes they are cutting and going to cinemas, and restaurants, etc.

This is only with regard to children. Similarly with regard to our own health, in future; financial conditions, I do the best; as a kartā, I enthusiastically, deliberately, discriminatingly act; as a Bhōktā I am ready to accept.. yētat prārthyam yat yat bhavyam, purva janmānurūpam.

Oh Lord, according to the present karma and the past karma, what all have to happen in future, where is the question of controlling?

I may get a limited idea; when the śani peyarchi may go some idea, what is in store; only a rough idea; only śani Bhagavān is in the know. So therefore, karma-yōgis renounces anxiety. And second thing he renounces the attachment to even religious activity. Religious activities are wonderful, he must sincerely do them; even to them, he should be not have attachment in the sense, they are also a means; not an end in itself.

So any means we should take to the means, but over attachment to the means is also not correct. Imagine, the children say the school, the teachers are wonderful, and therefore they should not say that I will stay in the school itself; no parent will allow that; it is nice to love the school and the teachers; but a time should come when one has to transcend them. So this is called saṅgha tyāgaḥ and phala tyāgaḥ. In simple English giving up a concern for the future; that is called karma-yōga otherwise called sāvika sanyāsa. In the case of which person? An unrefined person; context should be clearly understood, in the case of an unrefined person, sāvika sanyāsa is karma-yōga.

And then in the 10th verse, which we completed, before vacation, Kṛṣṇa said what will happen to such a karma-yōgi? Or called sāvika sanyāsi; what will happen to him. That was said, na dvēṣṭyakuśalaṃ karma kuśalē nānuṣajjatē... ॥१८.१०॥, karma-yōgi is one who keeps on doing whatever has to be done; without grumbling; without கடனே kadanē thought; without murmuring. So in family life, we will have to do stand in queue for several hours, for school admission and for college admission, if we have to send them abroad, we have to do so many things, then you get them married, lot of things are involved, for having got married and having got children, we should not complain that those responsibilities are burdensome; who asked you to marry. So therefore வேதாளத்துக்கு வாக்குபட்டா, முருங்க மரத்தில் ஏறணம். vētāḷattukku vākkupaṭṭā, muruṅka marattil ēraṇam. So think before marrying; but once you marry, you have to go along with every āśrama; do not think that sanyāsa āśrama is wonderful. (அது எனக்கு தானே தெரியும்!!) only I will know. So therefore sanyāsa-āśrama, has its own problems. No ashrama is wonderful. So they said, there is peace only in the graveyard. Life means plus and minus will be there; therefore, he does not categorise the duties as pleasant and unpleasant duties. Stop this categorisation; then duties are duties. Never add an adjective; adding adjective is inviting stress and strain.

And therefore akuśalaṃ karma na dvēṣṭi; he does not hate an unpleasant duty and kuśalē nānuṣajjatē; he does not get attached to a pleasant duty. He just does what he has to do; Who? Tyāgi; Tyāgi means karma-yōgi, who is in this context, sāvika tyāgi. So Tyāgi means the sāvika tyāgi; otherwise called karma-yōgi.

And to enjoy such an attitude, what type of mind he should have? Satva samāviśtaḥ. If my mind is predominantly rājasic, I will develop attachment to the duties, and if my mind is predominantly tāmasic, I shirk or give up my duty. So neither attachment, nor hatred; that balanced attitude is called sāvika antakaraṇam; Kṛṣṇa said in 2.45:

त्रैगुण्यविषया वेदाः निस्त्रैगुण्यो भवार्जुन ।
निर्द्वन्द्वो नित्यसत्त्वस्थो....

traiguṇyaviṣayā vēda nistraiguṇyō bhavārjuna|
nirdvandvō nityasattvasthō...

Remaining in satva-guṇa means, avoidance of both hatred and attachment with regard to the duties, and therefore satva samāviśtaḥ. What will happen to him? Soon he will get all the vēdāntic qualification; the unrefined mind through karma-yōga will become refined mind; unrefined mind through sāvika sanyāsa; karma-yōga and sāvika sanyāsa are synonymous; through karma or sāvika sanyāsa, unrefined mind will become refined mind. And after the refinement of the mind, he can reduce yajña, dānam, and tapas. Until refinement, these three must be performed; after the refinement is the mind; not necessary. The question is how do you know? Refinement is a test. Refinement meter. You keep on the head, red light unrefined, green light, refined, and third umpire or yellow, means in the middle; How do you know? The indication of refinement is two things.

First we see the relevance of vēdānta in our life. Only if the mind is refined, vēdānta will appear to be relevant; otherwise vēdānta will appear to be mere intellectual gymnastics; mere scholarship only, it will appear, especially Māṇḍukya, when we are doing the third chapter, you will find. Why all these in Madras with 45°. So what is the connection between Brahman, the creation and our water problem? So an unrefined mind will never see connection between self-knowledge and our day-to-day life. As mind gets refined, that mind will understand self-ignorance is the problem.

So first indication is what? Seeing the relevance of vēdānta. The second consequence indication is what? When I see the relevance, vēdānta will become an interesting subject. Otherwise vēdānta will be an example for any dry subject; normally if we do not understand, we say why are you taking vēdānta. Normally vēdānta is used as a synonym for a dry subject.

For a refined mind will be relevant; for a refined mind, vēdānta will be appealing, and consequently, for a refined mind, vēdānta can be understood. So therefore see how vēdānta appeals to you. That is an indication of where we stand; and that is called sādhana catuṣṭaya saṁpannaḥ. In the 6th chapter, Kṛṣṇa calls that person yōgārūda:

येदा हि नेन्द्रियार्थेषु न कर्मस्वनुषज्जते
सर्वसङ्कल्पसंन्यासी योगारूढस्तदोच्यते ॥ ६.४ ॥

[yadā hi nēndriyārthēṣu na karmasvanuṣajjatē |
sarvasaṅkalpasannyāsī yōgārūḍhastadōcyatē || 6.4 ||](#)

Other pursuits in life, there is an appeal, but vēdānta appeals better than, more than every other thing in life; that is the acid test for sādhana catuṣṭaya sampathi.

And once a person has got such a refined mind, as I said, karma can be reduced, japa can be reduced, I am using the word reduced, not given up, and then after reducing them we save some time and that saved time should be used for what? watch TV? No. And in the saved time you do more of śravaṇam, manana and more of nidhidyasanam. And when a person spends more time, he need not even become a sanyāsi. Physical sanyāsa is not compulsory; with a refined and detachment mind, when a person studies the upaniṣads, he will become what? A mēdhāvi; not படிக்காத்த மேதாவி; But படிச்ச

மேதாவி. padikkatha mēdhāvi; padiccha mēdhāvi; one who has done śravaṇam. And one who understands Aham Brahmāsmi; for him it is not some upaniṣadic statement, For him Aham Brahmāsmi, is as much a fact as Madras summer is; it is a clear fact for him and he becomes a medhāvi through śravaṇam and cinna śamśayaḥ; free from all doubts through mananam; it means he will get doubtful knowledge, through jñāna-yōga.

So through karma-yōgaḥ he gets the yōgyatha and through jñāna-yōga, he gets jñānam. So thus karma-yōga does not directly lead to liberation; karma-yōga leads to jñāna-yōga; jñāna-yōga leads to liberation.

Verse 18.11

न हि देहभृता शक्यं त्यक्तुम् कर्माण्यशेषतः ।
यस्तु कर्मफलत्यागी स त्यागीत्यभिधीयते ॥ १८.११ ॥

na hi dēhabhṛtā śakyam tyaktum karmāṇyaśēṣataḥ |
yastu karmaphalatyāgī sa tyāgītyabhidhīyatē || 18.11 ||

देहभृता dēhabhṛtā by one who is identified with the body, नहि शक्यम् nahi śakyam it is not at all possible, त्यक्तुम् tyaktum to renounce, कर्माणि karmāṇi actions, अशेषतः aśēṣataḥ completely, तु tu but, सः saḥ he यः कर्मफलत्यागी ya: karmaphalatyāgī who renounces the results of actions, अभीधीयते इति abhidhīyatē iti is said to be त्यागी tyāgī a renouncer.

11. By one who is identified with the body, it is not at all possible to renounce actions completely. But he who renounces the results of actions is said to be a renouncer.

Previously we said that a impure person should not give up religious activity; spiritually purifying activities in the form of yajña dāna tapa. In this verse, Kṛṣṇa says one cannot renounce. Earlier it was, one should not; now one cannot also; because as long as one is alive, karma are activities are inevitable. No human being can totally renounce karma, because even survival requires karma. So one requires food, for biḡṣa, he has to work. Go and ask, bhavathi biḡṣam dēhi; and then he has to keep the body fit; as long as the body is there; therefore snānam etc. are also required. Therefore nobody can renounce the karmas totally. So the body will become free from karmas only under one condition; can you guess? Death. When a particular body becomes free from all the karmas including breathing, then karma will start for the people around, to dispose of the body. If we do, they will not do karma for me; or they have to start doing karma for me!

Therefore Kṛṣṇa gives a warning: karmāṇyaśēṣataḥ tyaktum na śakyam perhaps you can change the type of karma or you can reduce certain karmas, but total renunciation of karmas is not possible. Swami Chinmayānanda beautifully puts, as long as I am living, for every moment of my life, I am getting benefit from my surrounding; I am taking oxygen from the world; I am taking food from the earth; I am taking water and not only that, so many people have contributed for the food that I am eating. For the cloth that I am wearing, that means for every moment of life, I am indebted to so many. Not only human beings, even animals and plants contribute. So if I am taking benefit from the world, I have a duty to pay back to the world. I have a ṛṇam, a kadan for every moment of breathing. So I should ask a question. what am I doing in return to my very survival? And therefore I should be aware of my dēva ṛṇam, Ṛṣi ṛṇam, pitṛu ṛṇam, every person who is alive is a ṛṇi. And you can remove the ṛṇam only by doing something according to your capacity.

If I am benefitting by the Gīta, we are indebted to Vyāsācārya; because he wrote with great difficulty, we are studying now; we are indebted to Arjuna, because Arjuna cried, Gīta came, and Lord Kṛṣṇa talked. Not only that our forefathers preserved this system of teaching. What am I doing in return for that? Everybody need not become a teacher and propagate; I have to do something to the society in return. Therefore Kṛṣṇa says: aśēṣataḥ tyaktum na śakyam; it is impossible. Therefore what is the best way? Do karma.

But when I do karma, I get anxiety about the result. Therefore Kṛṣṇa says: Do the karma, give up the anxiety regarding the result. So karma phala tyāgi bhava; do the karma but renounce the anxiety; How to renounce? Swamiji you can tell, only I know my anxiety. All these Kṛṣṇa assumes that we remember, because in the second, third chapter and the ninth chapter, Kṛṣṇa has given that method. What is that method?

What is the solution? Whatever comes takes it as a prasāda from the Lord. And whatever Bhagavān gives is for my spiritual growth.

Materially I may come down; physically I may be a loser in life; but it will contribute to the inner growth. Bhagavan will give only what is required for my inner growth; even the worst suffering, is meant for my inner growth.

துன்ப புடத்தில் இட்டு, தூயவானாக்கி வைத்தாய். Tuṅpa puṭattil iṭṭu tūyavāṇākki vaitatāy. Therefore this prasāda bhāvana is the only solution.

So yastu karmaphalatyāgī; the one who gives up the anxiety regarding the fruits of karma, saḥ tyāgi. He alone is a sāvika tyāgi; otherwise called karma-yōgi.

Verse 18.12

अनिष्टमिष्टं मिश्रं च त्रिविधं कर्मणः फलम् ।
भवत्यत्यागिनां प्रेत्य न तु संन्यासिनां क्वचित् ॥ १८.१२ ॥

[aniṣṭamiṣṭaṃ miśraṃ ca trividhaṃ karmaṇaḥ phalam |
bhavatyatyāgināṃ prētya na tu sannyāsināṃ kvacit || 18.12 ||](#)

अनिष्टम् aniṣṭam disagreeable, इष्टम् iṣṭam agreeable च मिश्रम् ca miśram and mixed त्रिविधं फलम् trividhaṃ phalam threefold result, कर्मणः karmaṇaḥ of action, भवति bhavati it accrues, अत्यागिनाम् atyāginām to non-renouncers, प्रेत्य prētya after death; तु न क्वचित् tu na kvacit but never संन्यासिनाम् samnyāsinām to the renouncers.

12. Disagreeable, agreeable and mixed --- this is the threefold result of action. It accrues to non-renouncers after death; but never to the renouncers.

If a person refuses to become a karma-yōgi, what will be the adverse consequences? If a person does not become a karma-yōgi, what will be the adverse consequence? Kṛṣṇa tells; one who is not a karma-yōgi is called a karmi; and all the regular people of the world, who do not know this karma-yōga, Īśvarārpaṇa and prasāda bhāvana, they are all going to be concerned about the future; the very fear make them compromise with values.

Why does a person compromise with values and follows adharmā? Only because in the future, he does not want unfavourable situations; by following dhārmic and therefore compromises with the values. A karmi will have stress and strain; he will be worried about his future security and this very fear and worry will make him compromise with values, and therefore all his karmas will produce threefold results; What are the three fold result this karmi will have? Aniṣṭam; means pāpa phalam, because he compromises and he justifies the comprise as a necessary evil in Kaliyuga. And we are very intelligent in justifying any akramam.

So therefore, aniṣṭam means pāpa-phalam. Iṣṭam means puṇya phalam; and miśram means miśram, puṇya-pāpa miśram. So these are the three types of results which are responsible for three types of punar janmas; aniṣṭam, the pāpa phalam will give inferior janmas; iṣṭam; puṇya phalam will give superior janma and miśram will give manuṣya janma. We all fall in miśram. And all the three types of janmas will come under saṁsārah. So karmi will have puṇya, pāpa, miśra phalam and therefore he will have punarapi jananam, punarapi maraṇam.

ऊर्ध्वं गच्छन्ति सत्त्वस्था मध्ये तिष्ठन्ति राजसाः |
जघन्यगुणवृत्तिस्था अधो गच्छन्ति तामसाः || १४- १८ ||

ūrdhvaṁ gacchanti sattvasthā madhyē tiṣṭhanti rājasāḥ |
jaghanyaguṇavṛttisthā adhō gacchanti tāmasāḥ || 14.18 ||

All these saṁsāra are for whom? Trividham karmaṇaḥ phalam; these are the three types of saṁsāra and all these three will come, for whom? atyāginam bhavathi; Tyāgi means karma-yōgi; atyāgi means what? One who is not a karma-yōgi; not a karma-yōgi; in this context, what does it mean? In this context, a karmi; so a karmi; atyāginam karminam, akarma-yōgi ṇam, trividam phalam bhavathi; three types of punarjanma cannot be avoided. When? prētya, means, after maraṇam. So he will get the three fold result in this janma also; in the form of sukham, duḥkham, and miśram; I have you given you example for miśram; in the cricket match, one fellow hits a century; which he had been missing 98 out, 99 out, hits a century and therefore very happy; but in the match he got defeated in spite of century; now you ask him happy or unhappy; what will be his answer? சிலர் அழுவார்; சிலர் சிரிப்பார்; சிலர் அழுதுகொண்டே சிரிப்பார். cilar aḷuvār; cilar cirippār; cilar aḷutukoṇṭē cirippār; but he is happy that he hit a century and unhappy that his team lost.

So in this janma also, sukha-dukha misram will come; but after prētya, maraṇa anantharam, also he will have three fold result, upper travel of downward travel or horizontal travel. Whereas sanyāsinām na bhavathi; Sanyāsi means sātṅika sanyāsi, otherwise called karma-yōgi. So karma-yōgi nam, quachit na bhavathi; punarjanma will not come, he will not get higher janma, lower janma or middle janma, why, because karma-yōgi will get citta śuddhi. So karma will not produce puṇyam or papam. karma-yōgi's karma will produce citta śuddhi and citta śuddhi will lead to what; guru prāpṭhi. Guru prāpṭhi will lead to what: jñāna prāpṭhi. Jñāna prāpṭhi will lead to what? mōkṣa prāpṭhi. I am using Sānskrīt words, I hope you know. Karma-yōgi will get purity of mind, mental purity will bring him to a guru at the appropriate time, and guru, means the one who gives knowledge, the Guru who gives opportunity for śravaṇam, śravaṇam will give mōkṣa. Therefore karma-yōgi nam, paramparaya mōkṣam bhavathi. Karma-yōga will not give liberation directly; through purity, guru, śravaṇam, jñānam, mōkṣa.

So thus, with this 12th verse, Kṛṣṇa concludes his answer to Arjuna's doubt regarding sanyāsa. And what is Kṛṣṇa's answer; sanyāsa is equal to tyāga, is equal to karma-yōgaḥ.

In this context, for an unrefined person; and by taking to such a sanyāsa, Arjuna, if you want to become a sanyāsi, it is not going away to Rishikesh; because for you, sanyāsa is karma-yōgaḥ. And for you, karma-yōga is doing your duty; and for you, doing the duty happens to be what? Mahābhāratha war; Therefore, take your bow which you dropped in the first chapter, take back and start your Mahābhāratha war. So with this one topic is over.

Now hereafter from the 13th verse, Kṛṣṇa is going to explain jñāna-yōga up to the 17th verse. So first 1 to 12 is karma-yōgaḥ; in the name of sātāvika sanyāsa; 1 to 12 to karma-yōga, in the name of sātāvika sanyāsa; From 13 to 17, jñāna-yōga is being highlighted; which we will see in the next class.

Hari Om

ॐ

In the first 12 verses of the 18th chapter, Lord Kṛṣṇa answered Arjuna's question regarding sanyāsa, and while answering that, He divided sanyāsa into three categories; tāmasa, rājasa and sātāvika sanyāsa, and He pointed out that sātāvika sanyāsa is nothing but karma-yōga itself; for the majority of people who are immature, who are spiritually immature; sātāvika sanyāsa in the form of karma-yōga is a compulsory sādhanā. And this sātāvika sanyāsa; otherwise called karma-yōga will take a seeker to the next stage of spiritual sādhanā, namely jñāna-yōga.

Thus karma-yōga becomes a means and jñāna-yōga becomes the end of karma-yōga; and thereafter one has to seriously pursue jñāna-yōga; which will lead a person to liberation. Thus the entire spiritual journey consists of two stages; first stage is karma-yōga; which makes me fit for jñāna-yōga; then I go to jñāna-yōga, which gives me liberation.

Of these two stages, the karma-yōga part is over with the 12th verse, but the karma-yōgaḥ as been named as sātāvika sanyāsa. Packet is different; the content is the same only. Having dealt with karma-yōga up to 12th verse, now from the 13th verse, Kṛṣṇa is going to deal with jñāna-yōgaḥ; the spiritual discipline of the pursuit of jñānam; the second and final stage of spiritual sādhanā, this will be dealt with from the 13th verse up to the 17th verse.

So now we are entering jñāna-yōga from 13th to the 17th verse. This is of course a condensed version of jñāna-yōga, because we should remember, 18th chapter is only a condensation of the entire Gīta. Jñāna-yōga has been elaborately dealt with in the 2nd chapter from verse No. 12 to 25. In the second-chapter, jñāna-yōga was dealt with; in the 4th chapter from verse No.18 to 25; in the 5th chapter, from 13 to 31, jñāna-yōga has been dealt with. In short, jñāna-yōga has been analysed in several occasions, and Kṛṣṇa is giving a sāra in these five verses, 13 to 17. Now we will enter into that.

पञ्चैतानि महाबाहो कारणानि निबोध मे ।

साङ्ख्ये ये कृतान्ते प्रोक्तानि सिद्धये सर्वकर्मणाम् ॥ १८.१३ ॥

pañcāitāni mahābāhō kāraṇāni nibōdha mē |

sāṅkhyē kṛtāntē prōktāni siddhayē sarvakarmaṇām || 18.13 ||

महाबाहो mahābāhō O! Arjuna, निबोध मे nibōdha mē know from Me, एतानि ētāni the following, पञ्च pañca five factors, कारणानि सिद्धये kāraṇāni siddhayē (required) for the accomplishment सर्वकर्मणाम् sarvakarmaṇām they are mentioned, प्रोक्तानि prōktāni of all actions. साङ्ख्ये sāṅkhyē in the vēdānta कृतान्ते kṛtāntē which is the culmination of actions.

13. Oh Arjuna! Know from Me the following five factors (required) for the accomplishment of all actions. They are mentioned in the Vēdānta which is the culmination of actions.

As we have seen before, by jñāna-yōga what we mean is gaining the knowledge of oneself. Even though the word jñānam, generally means any knowledge, whether it is physics or chemistry knowledge, any knowledge is generally called jñānam, but in the Bhagavad-Gīta context, the word jñānam means ātma jñānam, the knowledge of oneself.

And dealing with this topic, Kṛṣṇa had pointed out before, that every individual consists of two portions; one is called the inert acētana aṁsa, and the other is the cētana aṁsa; the sentient or consciousness part; every individual is a mixture of cit-acit aṁsa, cētana = a cētana aṁsa. So every individual is a mixture. But generally we do not recognise the mixture, because the inert part alone is visible, tangible, the cētana aṁsa, the consciousness-principle is invisible and therefore we do not acknowledge its presence. Just as the bulb is burning here, if the bulb is illuminating this room, you know that there are two portions in the bulb; one is the visible bulb portion and you know other than the bulb, there is an invisible principle, because of which alone the bulb is an illuminator. And what is that invisible principle, you know the electricity. Therefore whenever I say the bulb, the illuminator, there is electricity invisible aṁsa, and bulb visible aṁsa; both together alone is called a lamp. Thus every lamp has a visible and invisible portion. Similarly every individual is like a lamp; consisting of the visible body and also the invisible portion, which makes the body alive and sentient. Just as the electricity makes the bulb bright; this body is alive and kicking; live and active; because of another invisible principle, that invisible principle is called ātma-amśa; and the visible part is called anātma. So self-knowledge involves first the recognition of these two parts known as ātma-anātma vivēkaḥ.

And thereafter we should understand the nature of the consciousness, which also we had elaborately seen before. Do you remember? So the five features of consciousness, (do you remember) consciousness is not a part; a property, or a product of the body; No.2 consciousness is an independent principle which pervades and enlivens the body; thirdly consciousness is not limited by the boundaries of the body; therefore it is all pervading and the invisible like ākaśa; this is the third feature; fourth feature is consciousness continues to survive even after the death of the body; parallelly remember, invisible electricity survives even if you break the bulb; fifth and final point is the surviving consciousness is not available for transaction, because for transaction consciousness requires a medium. And this consciousness-principle is called ātma, and self-knowledge is understanding that I am a mixture of ātma and anātma.

And once I have understood this part, the next stage is gradually identifying more and more with the ātma part; and gradually dis-identifying with the anātma part, the inert material aspect. Why should we do that? Why can't I identify with the body more; why do you say that you should dis-identify with the body. The reason is: we know that the body is not the permanent part of me. Just as a dress, I can use only for some time, and thereafter I will have to discard. Similarly the body also I am allowed to use only for a few years or few decades, depending on the prārabhda, thereafterwards I will have to hand over the body to the source, the Lord himself. Therefore, if I am attached to the body too much, it will lead to lot of sufferings later, and therefore as a precaution, I learn to look at the body as a temporary medium which is a gift from the Lord and parallelly, I learn to own up the ātma part as myself.

This is the second stage of spiritual sādhana. First stage is recognising the two parts; the second stage is what; changing the loyalty from the perishable part to the imperishable part.

And for this purpose, I have to practice sṛavaṇam, sṛavaṇam means what? Listening to the scriptures more and more, because the scriptures focus on the imperishable You. And not only I have to do sṛavaṇam, which is possible only once a week or twice a week. I have to continue it with mananam, and nidhidhyāsanam. Nidhidhyāsanam, means owning up meditation and in this meditation, whatever be the feature of consciousness, I should claim as my nature. Until now we have been claiming I am a mortal individual, identifying with the body. We have developed this habit. I am born on such and such a date; and I am growing old; and I am greying and I am going. Growing, graying and going. And the more I think of that, the more fear overwhelms me, and therefore I have to kick the habit of claiming the mortality; I should develop the new habit of claiming the immortality nature.

And therefore I should daily practice "I am the consciousness principle, which is not confined to the body, but I am the all-pervading consciousness principle". I am not the body, but I pervade the body. I pervade the body, but not confined to the body. And even after the death of the body, I will continue to survive, blessing other bodies. And thus the various features of ātma, I have to own up. And among the various features of ātma, the most important one is considered to be akartā, abōktha. This Kṛṣṇa has talked about in the second-chapter:

वेदाविनाशिनं नित्यं य एनमजमव्ययम् ।
कथं स पुरुषः पार्थ कं घातयति हन्ति कम् ॥२.२१॥

[vedāvināśinaṁ nityaṁ ya enamajamavyayam |
kathaṁ sa puruṣaḥ pārtha kaṁ ghātayati hanti kam ||2.21||](#)

In the 2nd chapter and third chapter also he talks about.

प्रकृतेः क्रियमाणानि गुणैः कर्माणि सर्वशः ।
अहंकारविमूढात्मा कर्ताहमिति मन्यते ॥३.२७॥

[prakṛteḥ kriyamāṇāni guṇaiḥ karmāṇi sarvaśaḥ|
ahaṅkāravimūḍhātmā kartāhamiti manyatē||3.27||](#)

तत्त्ववित्तु महाबाहो गुणकर्मविभागयोः ।
गुणा गुणेषु वर्तन्त इति मत्वा न सज्जते ॥३.२८॥

[tattvavit tu mahābāhō guṇakarmavibhāgayōḥ|
guṇa guṇēṣu vartanta iti matvā na sajjatē||3.28||](#)

In the 4th chapter also,

कर्मण्यकर्म यः पश्येदकर्मणि च् कर्म यः ।
स बुद्धिमान्मनुष्येषु स युक्तः कृत्स्नकर्मकृत् ॥ ४.१८ ॥

[karmaṇyakarma yaḥ paśyēdakarmaṇi ca karma yaḥ |
sa buddhimān manuṣyēṣu sa yuktaḥ kṛtsnakarmakṛt || 4.18 ||](#)

In the 5th chapter also,

.....
पश्यञ्शृण्वन्स्पृशज्जिघ्रन्नश्ननाच्छन्स्वपञ्श्वसन् || ५- ८ ||

paśyañśṛṅvanspṛśañjighrannaśnanaṅgacchansvapansvasan || 5.8 ||

Almost in every chapter Kṛṣṇa has emphasised that you are the consciousness principle, which is neither a kartā, nor a bhōktā. What is the meaning of the word kartā? I am taking for granted; kartā means what? Doer of action. Bhōktā means what? The reaper of the results. Experiencer of the karma-phalam. So the performer of karma and the receiver of the karma-phalam. And according to Kṛṣṇa, as long as I am kartā and bhōktā, I am going to be a saṁsāri. Because as a kartā, I can never be totally satisfied with myself. Why I will not be totally satisfied; as a kartā, kartā means what, doer, I can never be a perfect doer of actions and therefore I will always have guilt. This could have been done better; right from the school stages; I have done better but left the question meant for 2 marks.

A kartā consequently feels guilty; guilt is one of the overpowering emotions. In fact as we grow older and older, our past life, not the previous, in this life itself, the past 50-60-70 years, whatever have we done, all of them, the recorded messages go on. Taittiriya Upaniṣad says this: Himahaggum saduna karavam; himagam pāpam karavamithi.

Why I treated my parents like that? Why I treated my spouse like that? Why I brought up my children like that? Different worries and anxieties. Why I chose such a son-in-law or daughter-in-law? Another worry. And if you come to Gīta -Upaniṣad class, why I did not learn Sānskrīt? That also.

So thus older we grew, the guilt overpowers. Kartā cannot avoid guilt because, no human being is perfect; Bhagavān alone can be free from guilt, because whatever he does it is perfection because, Bhagavān is omniscient; whereas our problem, even for omniscient we do not know the spelling properly; whether it is 'tient' or 'cient' or 'scient' or all the three!; So it is with this limited knowledge, you are acting, we do not know which action is in the right direction; at least you have to get married, at least you have to get married, it is digil, digil, especially nowadays, and how they are going to come; how long they are going to be together, etc. etc. is a big question mark. Therefore Kṛṣṇa says saṁsāra means kartā.

And what is the second saṁsāra? Bhōktā; Bhōktā means what? Reaping the result of the action; as a Bhōktā also, I can never be relaxed because which karma-phalam is going to hit me when I do not do. I know my life is governed by the prarabdha karma to a great extent; no doubt, I do have a freewill and choice, and it is not purely freewill, my life is governed by fate also; fate being my prārabhda karma; and the unfortunate truth is prārabhda karma is invisible. So which prārabhda is going to strike me, when, I do not know. How I am going to get up tomorrow and whom I am going to face tomorrow morning when I get up, no one knows. Whether I am going to get up itself is a big question!

Thus we are living in utter darkness as it were and therefore as a bhōktā also, anxiety, concern, fear, cannot be avoided, and therefore Kṛṣṇa says, bhōktā means saṁsāra. Kartā means guilt, bhōktā means anxiety. Kartā produces guilt, bhōktā produces anxiety; our life is a series of guilt and anxiety. And all other emotions are the products of these two only.

And therefore if I have to be liberated, there is only one way, that is I should not be a kartā or bhōktā. Only by negating the kartṛtvam and bhōktṛtvam, I can be a free person, and I can negate my kartṛtvam and bhōktṛtvam, (kartṛtvam means doership, bhōktṛtvam means enjoyership) and these two I can get rid of only when I own up my higher-nature; that Ātma, akartā, abhōktā. Therefore in these five important verses. Kṛṣṇa points out that ātma is akartā and abōktha; neither a doer nor a enjoyer.

And to establish that ātma is akartā or abōktha, Kṛṣṇa points out that all the actions are done by anātma only. What does he want to establish, ātma is akartā, abōktha. And how does he wants to establish? By showing that all the actions are done by anātma only, which means, ātma does not do anything. Like the light in the hall. The light does not do any job. I am doing lot of jobs; speaking, moving my legs and hands, etc. So actions are done here at the body level, the light illumines the actions, but light does not do any action. Similarly the consciousness does not do anything; only anātma performs. This Kṛṣṇa has said in the third chapter.

prakṛteḥ kriyamāṇāni guṇaiḥ karmāṇi sarvaśaḥ | 3.27

And this anātma, anātma means what?, the material part of the individual, the inert part of the individual, anātma, Kṛṣṇa divides into five portions; anātma consisting of five portions or five aspects; pañcātmaka anātma, pañcātmaka prakṛti, that alone does everything; ātma does not do. This is the essence of the five verses.

Now look at the 13th verse.

Hey Mahabhāhō; Mahabhāhō is addressing Arjuna, Oh. Arjuna, the strong armed one, powerful warrior Arjuna, mē nibōdha, may you learn from me; nibōdha, learn, understand, ascertain, mē means from me; me is 6th case, normally 6th case is translated 'of', in this context it should be translated as pañcami vibhakthi 'from'.

And what should you learn from me? pañca ētāni kāraṇāni; the five factors which are responsible for action; karanam means factors, ingredients; accessories are called kāraṇāni; pañca. And what are those five? ētāni, which are going to be enumerated hereafter. So the following: May you know the following 5 factors, which do the actions; and all the five factors are what? Anātma only.

Then where are these factors enumerated? Kṛṣṇa says: Arjuna I have got all this information from the upaniṣad. So Kṛṣṇa wants to acknowledge the source of this knowledge. So in magazine and all, such and such magazine; otherwise it will be called, plagiarism; and research somebody said; aside thing; when you borrow from one book it is plagiarism; when you borrow from many it is called research. OK. Here Kṛṣṇa does not want to do the plagiarism. Therefore, Arjuna, this is not my invention, even before I was born, Kṛṣṇa belongs to which yuga; dvapara yuga, vēda has been existing, and in the Vēda, Vēdānta has been existing and in the Vēdānta, this information is there; I am borrowing from Vēdānta.

Therefore he says; yē kṛtāntē prōktāni; this has been enumerated prōkthani means enumerated where; saṅkyē, saṅkyam means vēdāntaḥ.

What is vēdānta? the final portion of the vēda; and this final portion vēdānta has another name also; what is it; upaniṣads; do not say I want to learn vēdānta and upaniṣads. So I want both vēdānta and upaniṣads, we cannot say; vēdānta is upaniṣads; so saṅkyē, vēdāntē, and where does vēdānta come? kṛta antē, at the end portion of karma kāṇḍa; kṛtam means karma kāṇḍa, antham means at the end, at the end means immediately after karma kāṇḍa; karma kāṇḍa means the first portion of the vēda; And what do you mean karma kāṇḍa? The ritualistic portion; therefore, kṛtāntē means immediately after the ritualistic portion; comes the philosophical vēdāntic portion, and in that vēdāntic portion; all these five factors are enumerated.

And all are meant for what? Sarva karmanam siddhyē; siddhyē means accomplishment; performance; implementation; siddhyē means for the sake of performance of what, sarva karmaṇa, all the activities. For the performance of all the activities, these five factors are necessary, inevitable; that is the introduction. Now we are curious to know what are the five factors; that Kṛṣṇa himself will tell later.

अधिष्ठानं तथा कर्ता करणं च पृथग्विधम् ।
विविधाश्च पृथक् चेष्टाः देवं चैवात्र पञ्चमम् ॥ १८.१४ ॥

Adhiṣṭhānam tathā kartā karaṇam ca pṛthagvidham |
vividhāśca pṛthakcēṣṭā daivam caivātra pañcamam || 18.14 ||

अधिष्ठानम् adhiṣṭhānam – (they are) the body विविधाः vividhāḥ are many, च पृथक् चेष्टाः ca pṛthak cēṣṭāḥ and varied functions, पृथग्विधं च करणम् pṛthagvidham ca karaṇam various instruments तथा कर्ता tathā kartā the doer, च एव दैवम् ca ēva daivam and presiding divinity, पञ्चमम् pañcamam which is the fifth, अत्र atra among these.

14. (They are --) the body, the varied functions, various instruments, the doer, and the presiding divinity which is the fifth among these.

What are the five factors? Kṛṣṇa first enumerates; the four factors in the form of the four kōśas, known as annamaya kōśa, prāṇamaya kōśa, manō maya kōśa, and vijñāmayā kōśa. And I hope that you all remember; the kōśas, which we saw in our introduction in the Tatva Bōdha.

Annamaya kōśa corresponds to the anatomical part of the personality; annamaya, the anatomical part, the physical, visible part is called annamaya.

Then prāṇamaya kōśa means the physiology part consisting of the bodily functions, mere anatomy does not make a living being; dead body also has got all the anatomy; the physical part is there; but the physiological functions have ended; you keep your hands in front of the nostrils to find out whether breathing is functioning, that is the physiological thing and similarly, pulse and digestion, circulation, they all come under physiology, for prāṇamaya kōśa, means the physiological part. If physiological function is there, without anatomy, one cannot function; if anatomical parts are there, without the physiological functions, then also it will not be. And therefore imagine a person has got asthma; though his only activity is breathing; for that he is struggling; therefore only breathing is normal, you can think of doing something else; Otherwise if someone asks what are you doing, and you have to just reply: breathing; life requires physiology; prāṇamaya.

And then manōmaya kōśa, corresponds psychological or emotional personality, consisting of love, compassion, jealousy, hatred, anger. In fact it is these emotions which are driving us into a lot of activity. Therefore manōmaya kōśa is the third factor.

The fourth factor is the vijñānamaya kōśa, the rational faculty; the thinking faculty; which we all supposed to have, sometimes doubtful, which are supposed to have! So when our boss is criticising us, or getting angry with us, unnecessarily, then the manōmaya gets wild and angry, I feel like shouting at my boss; then vijñānamaya kōśa tells, if you shout, job out!. So therefore you feel and then quietly swallow. Manōmaya kōśa, overpowered by vijñānamaya kōśa; because I have to retain my job; I have a family. Therefore we curse in the mind, let him go to hell, etc. So in the mind you tell, but you swallow the whole thing. In fact, we have got so much internal pressure, because of that only. That is why it seems in Japan the directors' statue is kept in one of the rooms, it seems; and whenever the employees is unhappy, he can go to that room, and he can do whatever he wants to the statue. Anything. At least some relief; like effigy burning.

Anyway, that is all aside; let us come to our topic. Annamaya, prāṇamaya, vijñānamaya, anatomical, psychological, emotional and rational. These are the four kōśas required for every action.

What is the fifth one? Not ānandamaya kōśa; do not say ānandamaya kōśa, once I have said four, immediately without asking you will say ānandamaya kōśa is the fifth one, ānandamaya kōśa should not be included because when ānandamaya kōśa is active, kāraṇa śarīram is active, we become passive, go to sleep.

Therefore the fifth factor is daivam; known as the adhiṣṭānā dēvatha; according to the scriptures, every organ has got a presiding deity; which also we saw in Tatva Bōdha, for the eye the presiding deity is surya; for the mind, the presiding deity is moon; for the hand the presiding deity is? (monthly test is required!) hasthayor Indra. All the presiding deities put together is called daivam. So without the blessing of God, no organ can function. Therefore, four kōśas plus the presiding principle, known as Hiraṇyagarba tatvam.

Now look at the slōka; adhiṣṭānam, means annamaya kōśa; the anatomical personality. Then in the 2nd line, prathak cēṣṭaḥ functions, known as prāṇamaya kōśa;

Then prathak vitham kāraṇam means manōmaya kōśa; consisting of the mind and the sense organs. So prathak vitham, different types of organs, the eyes, the ears, the nose, the skin, all of them; So manōmaya kōśa. Then kartā, means, vijñānamaya kōśa, the thinking, rational, deciding authority; intellect alone has to decide what I should do and what I should not do. Therefore kartā represents vijñānamaya kōśa; which we saw in Taitariya Upaniṣad;

Vijñānam yajñām tanutē, karmani tanutē vija; in Brahmananda valli, we saw;

Four kōśas are the four factors, what is the fifth one; daivam cha, daivam cha pañcamam; daivam the divine principle without whose grace these organs cannot function. That factor; so these are the five factors in this context.

Verse 18.15

शरीरवाङ् मनोभिर्यत् कर्म प्रारभते नरः ।
न्याय्यं वा विपरीतं वा पञ्चैते तस्य हेतवः ॥ १८.१५ ॥

śarīravāṅmanōbhiryat karma prārabhatē naraḥ |
nyāyam vā viparītam vā pañcāitē tasya hētavaḥ || 18.15 ||

एते पञ्च ētē pañca these five हेतवः hētavaḥ are the causes, तस्य tasya of any (action) --- यत् कर्म yat karma whatever action, नरः प्रारभते naraḥ prārabhatē undertakes, शरीरवाङ्मनोभिः śarīravāṅmanōbhiḥ with the body, the speech, or the mind, वा न्याय्यम् vā nyāyam whether it is righteous, वा विपरीतम् vā viparītam – or otherwise.

So these five factors are compulsorily required for all human activities, why human activities? Of all living beings; all the activities require these five factors; whether they are noble activities, sacred activities or whether they are secular activities, or even whether they are evil activities; every action requires that.

Therefore śarīravāṅmanōbhīryat karma prārabhatē naraḥ, whether they are physical activities, śarīram karma means physical activities generally called kāyika karmāni or vāg karmāni; the verbal or oral activities known as vācika karmāni; like japa, pārayaṇam, etc.; they are all sacred verbal activities; but even when we are transacting in our business, that is also what? Vācika karma alone, kāyika, vācika, manōbhihi karma; or whether it is an activity done with the mind, mental activity, all types of meditation or upāsanas will come under mental activity, and even planning your day to day activities, that also involves, mental, thinking, yat karma prarabyatē; whether it is kāyikam, vācikam or mānasam karma done by Naraḥ, human beings. Even though animals also a do lot of activities, we generally do not call them karma.

In the scriptures, the activities of the animals are not called karma, they are only called cēsta; only human activities are called karma; just an incidental but important information. Why! Because the activities of the animals are not deliberately thought over, planned and implemented. When a dog is running across the road, suppose a tv person goes and interviews the dog. Where are you going; do you have any important meeting; dog meeting; What is your future plans if you ask, it will only bark. They are all programmed activities; instinctive activities; they are not deliberate and thoughtful and therefore they do not incur karma-phalam. Animals do not get puṇyam also; animals also do not get pāpam also. Suppose a buffalo crosses the red signal; if the policeman goes and fines, we will call policeman also another buffalo. So we do not fine the buffalo; if you want charge, we will charge the owner of the buffalo, assuming he is a human being.

So therefore animals' activities are not called karma, they never acquire āgāmi puṇyam or āgāmi pāpam; whereas when human-beings does that, even when he violates a rule, and claims that I do not know the rule, he will not be let off, because we are supposed to know the rule, as a citizen of the country; ignorance cannot be an excuse; and that is why Kṛṣṇa says Naraḥ. So whether naraḥ here means a human being in general; which includes both male and female. When you say naraḥ, it is not male nari, not male only, both male and female; and nyāyamaṃ vā viparītaṃ vā, whether the activities are dhārmic, nyāyamaṃ vā righteous or legitimate, legal, or viparītaṃ vā, viparītaṃ means the opposite. the opposite of legal is what illegal; illegitimate, improper, unrighteous. Adhārmicam vā. In all those activities, the involved factors are the same five factors only. Therefore Kṛṣṇa says pañca ētē, tasya hētavaḥ; tasya means for that karma. For that karma, kāyikam, vācīkam, mānasam, dhārmica, adhārmica, any karma for that, yētē pañca, the five factors enumerated in the previous verse; yētē means these five factors, mentioned in the previous ślōkā, alone are hētavaḥ, they are the contributory factors.

And what is Kṛṣṇa's intention in enumerating them? And what is Kṛṣṇa's intention in mentioning them? His intention is all these will come under anātma only; they are all made up of matter only; consciousness is one of the factors. Consciousness has to be present; the presence of consciousness is required; but consciousness does not do any action. So if an important programme is going on in the hall, the presence of light is required; but the light does not perform any action; therefore light is neither kartā, nor bhōktā; and therefore consciousness is neither kartā, nor bhōktā. And Arjuna you are that consciousness; therefore learn to claim that akartā abhōktā ātma as yourselves; instead of identifying with the miserable body. It does not mean you should neglect the body, utilise the body, well maintain the body; but do not identify with that; like the car or scooter or your screw driver, they are all instruments to be maintained but remember, you are not the screw driver; a big revelation; I am not a screw driver; But when I talk of screw driver, we are all wise; but when it comes to the body-mind-complex, we are otherwise! Therefore Kṛṣṇa tells body mind complex are finer screwdrivers; Use but do not identify. This crucial idea Kṛṣṇa will tell in the next ślōka which will see in the next class. I am deliberating stopping a few minutes early.

In the first 12 verses of the 18th chapter of the Gīta, Lord Kṛṣṇa presented the karma-yōga sādhanā, by way of answering Arjuna's question. The only difference here is that karma sādhanā is presented here with a new name, and the new name given to karma-yōga, in this context is sātvika sanyāsaḥ. And this karma-yōga sādhanā is extremely important for all the spiritual-seekers, because this alone prepares the mind, for spiritual knowledge to take place; karma-yōga alone gives jñāna-yōgyatha; yōgyatha means eligibility, fitness, preparation to use a technical word, sādhanā catuṣṭaya sampathi.

Once a person has attained the qualifications, reasonably, then he has to gradually increase his focus on jñāna-yōga sādhanā. It is not a water tight compartment. Not that initially hundred percent karma-yōga; and later hundred percent jñāna-yōga it is not; it is a gradual shift in the focus and also the time spent. In the initial stages also, one has to expose oneself to jñāna-yōga Vēdānta, otherwise we will not even know what Vēdānta is. So in the initial stages life is karma-yōga pradhāna, but the Vēdāntic study is there; but gradually, the importance percentage is shifted, and more and more time and attention is given to jñāna-yōga sādhanā.

And what is that jñāna-yōga sādhanā is given from Verse No.13 to 17. And of these five verses, 13 to 17, we saw up to the 15th verse, and in this portion Lord Kṛṣṇa wants to point out that knowing one's own real nature is jñāna-yōga sādhanā.

And we saw that while analysing one's own nature, one discovers the fact that one is a mixture of two principles, the acētana śarīra tatvam and cētana śarīri or ātma tatvam; the inert body principle is there; and the pure consciousness-principle is there; every individual is a mixture of these two.

And thereafter Lord Kṛṣṇa points out that all the actions that an individual performs belong to only the body-part, the inert material part alone is involved in karma, and therefore the karma-phalam also will come to the inert-material-part alone. The consciousness-principle is neither involved in karma nor is it connected to karma phala. And therefore the essence of this portion is dēhaḥ kartā, ātma akartā.

And to convey this idea, Kṛṣṇa divided the inert-material part into five portions; annamaya; prāṇamaya; manōmaya, vijñānamaya and (do not say ānandamaya!), daivam; If you have revised the portion, you will remember. So annamaya, prāṇamaya, manōmaya, vijñānamaya and daivam; daivam means the cosmic set up or environment. That also comes acētana amśa only; daivam does not refer to consciousness here; but it refers to samaṣṭi, environment. Even for this class to take place, we require air in the atmosphere.

Suppose I conduct a sādhanā camp in this moon; it will not happen; but let us imagine, not only we have to carry everything we have to carry air also, because in the moon, atmosphere is not there; therefore all individual actions require the cooperation of the totality of environment, which is indicated by the daiva tatvam, hiraṇyagarbha tatvam; you may call it cosmic force.

These five factors are involved in every action; and what Kṛṣṇa wants to highlight is all the five principles are acētana jaḍa tatvam. And as far as the caitanyam, Consciousness is concerned, by its mere presence, it makes all the activities possible; but itself is not involved in any activity. I gave you to example of the light pervading the hall, and imagine some tennis match or volleyball match is going, lot of movement and activity, I am not the taking the class, not much activity; imagine some game is going, all the people are violently moving and this game is possible because of the light, but the light itself does not do anything. In Sānskrīt, it is called sānnidhya mātram. Can you understand this word? Sānnidhya mātram means mere presence.

And because of this reason only, when one team wins the game, and other team is defeated, the credit goes to the winning team, and the credit or discredit goes to the defeated team; as far as the light is concerned, it does not have either; you do not congratulate the light or criticise the light, it does not play any role, but at the same time, its presence is inevitable.

And Kṛṣṇa says a spiritual-sādhāna is learning to shift our identification from the changing material vesture to the changeless-consciousness principle, the shift of the identification is spiritual training. Naturally now we are identified with the growing, graying, going. So we are now instinctively naturally identified with mortal body; and therefore we have a constant sense of insecurity; spiritual sādhāna is shifting the identification from the mortal physical body to the immortal non-physical spirit. And instead of saying I am the mortal-body-with-consciousness; I have to train myself saying I-am-the-immortal-consciousness-functioning-through-the-temporary-mortal-body. The body has to arrive and the body has to depart, one day, but its arrivals and departures have nothing to do as far as I am concerned. And during its presence and survival, the body has to do lot of action, body has to be kartā and bhōktā; but I am akartā, abhōkta. So this spiritual training is jñāna-yōga sādhāna; this is the idea Kṛṣṇa emphasises; looking at the verse No. 16.

तत्रैवं सति कर्तारम् आत्मानं केवलं तु यः ।
पश्यत्यकृतबुद्धित्वाद् न स पश्यति दुर्मतिः ॥ १८.१६ ॥

tatraivaṃ sati kartāramātmānaṃ kēvalaṃ tu yaḥ |
paśyatyakṛtabuddhitvāna sa paśyati durmatih || 18.16 ||

तत्र एवम् सति tatra ēvaṃ sati this being so तु य पश्यति tu ya paśyati he who looks upon केवलम् आत्मानम् kēvalam ātmānam the pure Self कर्तारम् kartāram as the doer, अकृतबुद्धित्वात् akṛtabuddhitvāt due to the lack of a refined intellect न पश्यति na paśyati does not see, सः दुर्मतिः saḥ durmatih he has a distorted vision.

16. This being so, he who looks upon the pure self as the doer due to the lack of a refined intellect does not see. He has a distorted vision.

So every one of us is a mixture of acētana aṁśa and cētana aṁśa; a jñāni is also a mixture of both of them; an ajñāni also is a mixture of both of them; the difference is only in the perspective. And the ajñāni's perspective is given in the 16th verse and jñāni's perspective, perceptive of whom?; Himself, how he looks at himself; and ultimately the way you interpret the world, depends upon the way you look at yourselves.

That is why somebody said; ultimately, the world is a mirror; what you see in front is only your own personality; if you are a strong physically oriented personality; all the time bothered about the height, weight and figure and the complexion, if you are a physical personality, whenever you look out; you look for the physical personality of others; that alone registers. On the other hand, if I am a thinker or a scientist, or a philosopher, I look for that personality in others. If I am too much dress-conscious, I look at what are the different dresses a person has put; so as I look at myself, so I look at the world.

And ajñāni's unfortunate perspective is given in the 16th verse by Kṛṣṇa. He says durmatiḥ; so durmatiḥ means what? an ignorant person whose mind is polluted by ignorance and because of ignorance, wrong notion, and the wrong notion being I-am-annayamaya-kōśa is wrong notion No.1, I-am-praṇamaya-kōśa is wrong notion No.2, I-am-manōmaya-kōśa No.3, each kōśa identification gives me one one wrong-limited-individuality; different colored egos are born through that abhimāna; therefore durmatiḥ means ajñāna adhyāsa yukta matiḥ. To remember, the Māṇḍūkya expression: agrahaṇa, anyatā grahaṇa yukta matiḥ; means durmatiḥ, an ignorant person.

What does he do? पश्यति paśyati; he wrongly looks at himself at what does he look at; how does he look at; kēvalam ātmānam; even though his real nature is pure ātma, he is not perishable incidental body, his real higher-nature is kēvala ātma; kēvala ātma careful, not Tamil kēvalamāna ātma. In Sānskrīṭ, kēvalam means śuddham. Śuddham means kartṛtva, bhōktṛtva rahitam. An ātma which is not polluted by kartṛtvaṁ and bhōktṛtvaṁ; that ātma this ordinary person does not recognise.

So he is afflicted by self-ignorance and because of self-ignorance he has got a misconception; what is the self-misconception; kartāram paśyati. He looks at himself as a kartā; kartā means what, a doer. And why does He look upon himself as a doer? Because of the strong well entrenched identification with the kōśas or the anātma. Tatra evaṁ sati. The fact being so, the fact being so means what? Only the five-fold anātma is the kartā, ātma is not the kartā, is the fact, but this durmatiḥ, the confused person, is ignorant of akartā ātma, and mistakes himself as kartā. And all because of what? Akṛta buddhitvat; because he has not spiritually refined himself; through spiritual learning.

Because scriptures alone rectify this mistaken notion; the study of chemistry does not bring about a correction in self-knowledge; the study of economics does not make a self-correction. I do not say that you do not study economics; very careful; they are useful in its own way; self-ignorance and self-misconception can go by only self-knowledge; which has to be done, assisted by guru and śāstra; and this durmatih has not exposed himself or herself to the systematic spiritual training. He says: I do not have time; and he thinks Vēdāntic study is time pass; like eating popcorn is called time-pass.

When I was travelling in train, they were telling, time pass, time pass, etc. I did not know what it is; I see only various eatables; that means what? When time is not passing, you have to eat. Similarly many people think that Vēdānta and life has no connection at all. When you are busy with your family duties, you need not study Vēdānta they think; and only when you have completed all the so-called duties; I do not know whether it will be complete at any time; only when you are completed all of them, and all the organs are dilapidated; and nothing functions, then கீதைக்கு வேண்போகலாமே ~ அநேபோயி தூங்கலாமே! Gīta, thinking that I can sleep there. Because at home TV is playing and I have to get out somewhere; No No No. Kṛṣṇa says Vēdāntic study brings out a self-correction.

Self-correction brings about the correction in the way you look at the world. And if there is a change, in the way you look at the world, there is a change in your response to life's situation.

In fact, saṁsāra is wrong response to life's situations. Response is calling the situations problems. In fact, most of the problems, we call problems are what? Situations; summer is hot; is it a problem or situation. Would summer be cool. Summer would be hot only. Winter would be cold. When you become old, all the joints will speak. So most of the complaint that we give are simple natural situations in life. Why this wrong response? Again, correction is not there; and therefore akṛtabuddhitvāt; the one who does not find time for self-knowledge. So akṛtabuddhi, means asaṁskṛta buddhi, unrefined intellect; spiritually uneducated person, spiritually illiterate is called akṛta buddhi; materially he has got many doctorates; but what Kṛṣṇa says he is a spiritual illiterate; because of that Na paśyati; he does not see the fact. Śankarācārya tells in his Bhaja Govindam,

पश्यन्नपि च न पश्यति मूढः
उदरनिमित्तं बहुकृतवेषः || १४ ||

...

paśyannapi cana paśyati mūḍhaḥ
udaranimittam bahukṛtavēṣaḥ ||14||

The eyes are open, but he does not see, what is to be seen. And the same thing Kṛṣṇa tell here. Not that Kṛṣṇa tells the same thing; saḥ durmatih na paśyati; such a spiritually illiterate person is a blind person because he has not rectified his vision; and since he has got only a wrong perception, wrong perception is as well as no perception. தம்பா பாற்கிறதும்; பாற்காம இருக்கறதும் ஒன்னுதான். (Seeing mistakingly and not seeing; both are the same. And therefore Kṛṣṇa says: sa ha durmatih, na paśyati. And Muṇḍakōpaniṣad goes one step further; even though he is blind and seeing wrong things; and the scriptures are willing to rectify the vision; this person does not want to come.

Their arrogance does not allow them to come to the scriptures and guru. What a tragedy? Kṛṣṇa wails. On the other hand, there are some humble discriminate people, who come to the Gīta class. They are really great. Who says?: Kṛṣṇa. Look at the ślōkā.

hatvā'pi sa imāṁllokān hanti na nibadhyatē || 18.17 ||](#)

सहः sahaḥ He, यस्य न yasya na who does not have, भावः अहङ्कृतः bhāvaḥ ahaṅkṛtaḥ the notion "I am the doer", यस्य बुद्धिः yasya buddhiḥ and whose intellect, न लिप्यते na lipyatē is not affected, न हन्ति na hanti does not kill (anyone), अपि हत्वा api hatvā in spite of killing, इमान् लोकान् imān lōkān these people, न निबध्यते na nibadhyatē – nor is he bound.

17. He who does not have the notion "I am the doer" and whose intellect is not affected does not kill anyone in spite of killing these people, nor is he bound.

Contrasting the wise person with the ignorant person, this 17th verse talks about a jñāni. Who is a jñāni? First the one who has exposed to the systematic spiritual teaching which clearly divides the individual into anātma aṁśa and ātma aṁśa, acētana aṁśa and cētana aṁśa; the body-consciousness discrimination he has done through śravaṇam and mananam. And not only he has done this discrimination, he has practiced long nidhidhyāsanam.

And what is long nidhidhyāsanam? Training the mind to identify with the ātma part, the higher part, and not being obsessed with the perishable material part. Body is important alright; as long as we live, Body has to be taken care of alright; but jñāni knows after all, body is born out of pañca bhūtās, I will have to give back the body to pañcabhūtās. It is a means but it is not an end in itself. This right perspective of the body is called freedom from ahaṁkāra.

Therefore yasya, yasya means what? For the jñāni; for the saṁskṛta buddhiḥ. In the previous verse, akṛta buddhi was mentioned, now the opposite of akṛta buddhi is kṛta buddhi; kṛta buddhi means saṁskṛta buddhi, saṁskṛta buddhi means spiritually refined and trained person.

And what does he do? Yasya, for him, ahaṁ kṛta bhāvaḥ nāsti; he does not have too strong an identification with the body; he gives sufficient importance to the body, but he does not give over importance to the body. We have seen this topic before: guṇāḥ guṇēṣu vartantē, indriyāḥ, indriyārtēṣu vartantē. He knows the physical body is part of this creation. It is not an isolated entity. And therefore the body is influenced by dēśa, and kāla. Even if Kṛṣṇa has a body, even Kṛṣṇa's body has to grow older in time; and therefore he knows body is part of the universe, therefore bound by dēśa and kāla, and therefore as the changes take place, I cannot resist; I have to accept. As Kṛṣṇa said: tasmādaparihāryē'rthē na tvaṁ śōcitumarhasi. Do not resist choiceless to situations. Corresponding bodily change also, in summer sweat will be there; Sho sho saying will not help bringing sweat down. In fact, if you look at it, sweating system is the most wonderful system created by Bhagavān to maintain the temperature of the body. Therefore everytime sweat comes, meditate upon Īśvara vibhūthi, upon the trickling water; beautiful meditation. So jñāni views the situation with the right perspective.

Therefore, ahaṁkṛtaḥ bhāvaḥ. I am the body notion is not there; Extending that ahaṁkṛtaḥ iti bhāvam nāsti. Ahaṁkṛtaḥ bhāvaḥ means kartṛtva bhāvana. And similarly, yasya buddhihi na lipyatē. If kartṛtva bhāvana, bhāvana means misconception or notion, if kartṛtva bhāvana is not there, naturally the bhōkṛtva bhāvana will also go away, Therefore Kṛṣṇa says buddhihi, jñāni's mind na lipyatē. Is not tainted by, not polluted by, not tormented by what? The wrong notions ahaṁ bhōktā. He does not ask the question why Bhagavān is giving me சோதனை śōdanai after சோதனை. He does not complain to Bhagavān because he knows that prārabdhā karma which I have done in the past; that prarabdha has to be exhausted and for the exhaustion of the prārabdhā karma, Bhagavān has to find some medium.

Because karma cannot directly give you pleasure and pain; therefore karma has to function through some medium; it may be mosquito; so everything that we go through is what? Our own prārabdhā karma being exhausted through pipelines. Even family members' if they are giving trouble, do not complain; the family members are pipelines only, my own karma comes through the pipeline through the spouse. If the spouse is wonderful, it is your punya karma coming through. If she is terrible, it is a pāpa karma coming through. So prārabdhā has to be accepted.

Therefore there is no Why Me? He calls a every śōdana as a sādānāi. Small change. Śōdanai should be made sādānāi. Sādānā means a spiritual discipline to develop titikṣa. Therefore India is ideal country to develop titikṣa. In other countries, there is no scope for developing titikṣa because, the moment one problem comes, they immediately rectify. If it is in the road, the pit will be there for 6 months; then only we get titikṣa. They say in Singapore and all, if they dig, immediately they have to complete it and close by evening, by evening if the work is not over, they close and go, and the next day, they open and rectify. It is all good to hear in India and we all have to take a lengthy breath! So how to look at the situation. Bhagavān has given a beautiful ground for developing titikṣa. Like that, yasya na lipyatē, you have to supply the word bhōktṛtva bhāvana na lipyatē.

Saḥ, such a jñāni, imān lōkān hatvā api, he will perform his duties as long as he is in the world. Jñāni also has got the duties, as long as he is in the world, depending upon his social designation. If he is a sanyāsi, sanyāsi āśrama dharma is there; if he is a householder, he or she, then family duties are there, children are there, they are to be educated, old people are to be taken care of, duties are there; and if one is a kshatriya, then he will have the duties of fighting a war also; and as in the case of Arjuna, duty may involve even killing one's own kith and kin. But when a jñāni performs such duties, whether it is pleasant duty or unpleasant duty, he does not identify with that.

And for the better performance of duties, if the society praises him; extols him, that praise also he does not take. If you take praise, bhōktṛtvaṁ has come, then kartṛtvaṁ will also come; therefore he neither takes karma as his own nor does he take the phalam as his own. So Saḥ, such a person api hatvā, even though he kills the people, इमान् लोकान् imān lōkān; all the people Kṛṣṇa must be showing the hand, in front of the army there. Here killing represents what? Performance of duties; it does not mean jñāni goes on killing everyone.

In this context, it is killing, performing the duty. And that means what? Where punishment is the only method of rectification, where sāma, dāna, bhēda all non-violent methods have failed, and only violent method is there available as remedy, jñāni will not hesitate to use hiṁsa also. Just as Kṛṣṇa is asking Arjuna to kill Bhīṣma. Remember, jñāni has compassion, jñāni does not have misplaced compassion; He is very objective and balanced, he will not unnecessarily use violence; but if himsa is the only way, (adiyatha mādu padiyathu), if that is the only method, that also he will use appropriately, and when he does that, na hanti; he does not become a killer; that means he does not become a kartā.

and na nibadhyatē, he is not bound by the karma-phalam; he does not become a bhōktā also.

And it is this shift-in-identification which is called jñāna-yōga. And if and when a person makes the shift, will he get liberation or not is the question? When I make the shift, will I get liberation? After making the shift, I do not get liberation; but after making the shift, I discover the fact that I have been, I am, and I ever will be free. Thus jñāna-yōga gives mōkṣa.

Verse 18.18

ज्ञानं ज्ञेयं परिज्ञाता त्रिविधा कर्मचोदना ।
करणं कर्म कर्तेति त्रिविधः कर्मसंग्रहः ॥ १८.१८ ॥

[jñānaṃ jñēyaṃ parijñātā trividhā karmacōdanā |
karaṇaṃ karma kartēti trividhaḥ karmasaṅgrahaḥ || 18.18 ||](#)

परिज्ञाता parijñātā the knower, ज्ञेयम् jñēyam the knowable, ज्ञानम् jñānam and knowledge
त्रिविधा trividhā – this is the threefold, कर्मचोदना karmacōdanā cause of action, कर्ता kartā – the doer, कर्म karma the object, करणम् karaṇam – and the instrument इति iti this is त्रिविधः trividhaḥ the threefold, कर्मसङ्ग्रहः karmasaṅgrahaḥ frame of action.

18. The Knower, the knowable, and knowledge --- this is the threefold cause of action. The doer, the object, and the instrument --- this is the threefold actions.

With the previous verse, the jñāna-yōga topic is also over. So from Verse 1 to 12 karma-yōga topic; from verse 13 to 17, jñāna-yōga topic.

In fact these are the only two main sādhanās of a human being; any sādhanā that you do, to purify the mind is called karma-yōga; it may be japa, it may be pūja, it may be yōga, it may be social service, it may be pilgrimage, it may be dānam, it may be bhajan, whatever you do to purify the mind is called karma-yōga. And whatever you do to understand that I am free, whatever intellectual exercise you take up to understand that I am ever free, that process is called jñāna-yōga. If you are listening to the class, it is jñāna-yōga. And after the class, you try to summarise what has been taught, that is jñāna-yōga; any exercise you do, which is intellectual, and which is trying to receive the knowledge, what knowledge, I am ever free, that is called jñāna-yōga. The entire spiritual sādhāna consists of only these two. Purify, know and be free. Thus Gīta has been beautifully summarised in 17 verses.

Now from the 18th verse, Kṛṣṇa summarises Bhagavad-Gīta once again in a different pattern. The previous 17 verses are one type of summary; and this portion from 18th verse up to the 40th verse, 18th to 40th is once again summarisation. And in this Kṛṣṇa is going to take up seven topics; and then divide each topic into three categories. 7 topics are going to be taken; and each one is going to be divided into three varieties. The moment I say three, you must be able to imagine, what are those? Sātvika, rājasika, tāmasika;

And if you know these seven topics, with this three-fold sub-division, you have understood the essence of the Gīta. In the 7 topics, if you understand properly, you have understood Gīta well. For this approach Kṛṣṇa gives an introduction in this verse. And in this introduction, Kṛṣṇa makes an important and interesting observation.

All the human activities can be broadly classified into two; one is called knowing-process; another is called doing-process; In Sānskrīt, jñāna vyavahāraḥ; and karma vyavahāraḥ. So throughout life, you are doing only these two things; either learning or doing. And of these process, jñāna vyavahāraḥ is the first process. All the activities begin with knowing; So jānāti. Once you know an object, a person, a thing, anything for that matter, you develop either a like for the object, or a dislike; An unknown object you never like or dislike; so once you know an object you develop a like or dislike; once you develop a like, your activity begins to go after the object; pravṛtīḥ; that person is nice; I would like to meet that person regularly or all the time, like to talk to that person; that place is very nice; I would like to go; Kodaikanal is cold, in summer I would like to go. For jñānam produces either rāgaḥ or dvēsaḥ, when it is rāgaḥ, like, your activities is called pravṛtti, going after, and if you like that object or person, your attempt is what, when that person is coming here, here itself you change the route; Going after or going away, going after is called pravṛtti, going away is called nivṛtti. All born out of what, rāgaḥ-dvēsaḥ; rāgaḥ-dvēsaḥ is born out of what; the knowledge of the object. If you do not know, if you are bothered; hundred years before, two hundred years before, you could not have had gone after a television, because it was not there. You would not have gone for air conditioning; you would not have gone after the fan; because of lack of knowledge. Most of the things we now go after they did not go after, because they did not know.

Therefore, what is the mechanism; jānāti, iccāti, yatatē, I have talked about: Knows, Desires, Goes after. The whole life is what? Knows, (not nose), knows, desires, goes after. And that is why all the companies are spending lakhs and lakhs of money for commercial advertisement. Wherever you look, why advertisement? When the object is in front of your eyes, you come to know that and the moment you come to know that, their optimism is what. They are successful; that is why they spend so much crores; also you begin to desire; first you say I do not want it. I do not want it; then perhaps I will have it later you end up having; jānāti, iccāti, yatatē.

And then Kṛṣṇa here tells this jñāna vyavahārah involves three factors and karma vyavahārah involves three factors. What are those three factors? They are famously known as triputi; meaning the subject, object and the instrument. Any jñānam involves three factors; subject, object and instrument. And similarly, any action also involves; the subject, object, instrument.

Now look at the slōkā. Jñānam, means knowledge; jñēyam, the object of knowledge, parijñāta, the knower, the subject, knowledge, the object, and the subject, this trivida, three-fold group, or triad, is karma chōdana.

This group is the promoter of karma; these three, through knowledge will make a person more and more active. In village life, they did not know most of the thing, therefore they did not have any desire and therefore they had a very very leisurely life. I do not say that is better or this is better; My idea is not comparing; but what I say is that in those days, they did not know; summer holidays you can think of an European tour; because you know it is there; that tour and this tour and even now a moon tour is coming, the more you know, the more you desire; the more you desire, the more you are pushed into activity, not only you are active, for all these things you require what? Money. And therefore, you have to go on earning, and even if you are a Geetha student; and therefore you have vairāgyam, the children will ask for that, you have to provide and if you do not do these things, you become black sheep. Because when all the peers and friends, they are doing all these things, if I do not do to my children, they feel bad. Therefore what happens, karma, karma, karma; there is no time to stand and stare. This is life busier, busier, and even if you go to some place for resting, cell phone you have to carry. I heard in the class also; sometime cell phone rings. I am waiting for some more time and thereafter regularly we have to make the announcements to switch off. Better switch off your cell phones. That means what holiday cut short. Some activity.

Therefore he says, jñānam, jñēyam, parijñāta, this triad is the promoter of karma. But here we have to make a note when we say jñānam generates desire and action, we should understand it is the knowledge of everything in the world; except self-knowledge. We should not include self-knowledge here. All the other material knowledge, all the other āpara vidya creates desires; whereas parā vidya is not a creator of desire; on the other hand, it is the one which removes the desire because I find that I am happy as I am.

Even if I have some desires, they are not going to drive me crazy. And therefore, these three are karma cōdanā; cōdanā means what? Promoters, They push.

And then karaṇam karma kartēti; there is another triad consisting of three factors, which is required for karma vyavahārah; and what are those three factors; karaṇam, karaṇam means instrument; karma means object and kartā means the subject; subject-object-instrument, this trivida; this triad; group of three; is karma saṅgrahaḥ, is the framework within which all the actions take place. So when one triad required for jñāna vyavahārah; another triad required for karma vyavahārah. And Kṛṣṇa is going to select some of them from here and he will divide each into three types, the details of which, we will see in the next class.

Hari Om

ॐ

In the first 17 verses, of the 18th chapter, Lord Kṛṣṇa summarised karma-yōga and jñāna-yōga which are the main spiritual disciplines to be undertaken by all the spiritual-seekers. And there is no choice with regard to these disciplines. Everybody has to go through both of them compulsorily; of them the first discipline of karma-yōga is a preparation for jñāna-yōga; and the second discipline of jñāna-yōga will directly give freedom. This is whole teaching of the Gīta.

And these two stages of spiritual sādhanā are not invented by Lord Kṛṣṇa, but these two stages have been in the Vēdās themselves. The Vēdā pūrva bhāga focuses upon the karma-yōga part of the sādhanā, and the Vēdā anta bhāga focuses on jñāna-yōga part. Thus the entire Vēdā is dealing with the gradual pursuit of these two stages of sādhanā only.

And now from the 18th up to 40th verse of this chapter, Kṛṣṇa is taking up, seven topics, and in each topic he makes a classification of three, the sātvik, rājasic and the tāmasic variety; and if we can understand the classification of these seven topics, we have understood the essence of the whole Gīta.

And Kṛṣṇa is introducing those seven topics in the verses 18 and 19, of which the 18th verse we saw in the last class. In the 18th verse Kṛṣṇa pointed out that all human transactions can be divided into two one who is the knowing transaction and the other is the doing transaction. In fact, the first 20-25 years of our life, as children, as students, we do not accomplish anything. We do not do anything, even we do not contribute anything to the family. In fact, we are only an expenditure for the family; because those 20-25 years, we have only one form of transaction; what is that? Education. No implementation, but knowing. We call jñāna vyavahārah; and this transaction involves three factors, the knower, the known and the knowledge. Jñānam, jñēyam and jñāna.

Once we have got the education, we will get an idea of doing. That is why the moment you complete or you are about to complete, people ask: what are you going to do? So that is called karma vyavahārah; because that knowledge decides our ambition; our desires. Jñānam produces the desire; and once the desire has come, it is impossible to remain with a desire, because desire is a bug in everyone. Nobody can be comfortable with a desire. Therefore our aim is to fulfil the desire and the desires can be fulfilled only by one method, normally, and that method is what?

Fulfilment; how to fulfil; start working; start earning; get a credit card and go on purchasing; and then life-long instalment, I told you. So this person gave the last instalment for the cradle; cradle for the child, last instalment he paid; and the person who received the last instalment asked; How is the baby; just asked; then that the man said, I am that baby. Did you understand? So therefore, start working, get the credit card and go on and on and on. Why? Because jānāti, iccāti, yatatē; life is knowing, desiring and fulfilling; knowing, desiring and fulfilling and at the time of death, you ask the person, have you fulfilled all your desires; he will bring a 300 page notebook, I will write the unfulfilled items; and he dies with unfulfilled desires; in fact, these unfulfilled desires alone decide the next type of janma also. Muṇḍaka upaniṣad tells them:

कामान् यः कामयते मन्यमानः स कामभिर्जायते तत्र तत्र । पर्याप्तकामस्य कृतात्मनस्तु इहैव सर्वे प्रविलीयन्ति कामाः ॥
3.II.२ ॥

kāmān yaḥ kāmayatē manyamānaḥ sa kāmabhirjāyatē tatra tatra | paryāptakāmasya kṛtātmanastu ihaiva sarvē praviliyanti kāmāḥ |3.II.2 |

So this person dies with unfulfilled desires; and those desires determine the next janma and again the story continues.

So thus jñāna vyavahārah with triputi and karma vyavahārah with triputi; this is human life. And this cycle will be broken, only when he comes to spiritual knowledge; Any other knowledge can only produce desires; any other knowledge can only produce desires; and increase the karma flow. There is only one knowledge, which can destroy all the desires; and that is the ātma jñānam.

Careful, do not read duṣṭaḥ; ātmaiva ātmana tuṣṭaḥ. Therefore, except that self-knowledge, all others keep the cycle going. Of these six factors, six factors meaning, three belonging to jñānam, and three belonging to karma. And the three referring to subject, object and instrument. Kṛṣṇa is going to take up some of the factors for analysis. And what are those factors? They are enumerated in the 19th verse, which we will read now.

Verse 18.19

ज्ञानं कर्म च कर्ता च त्रिधैव गुणभेदतः ।

प्रोच्यते गुणसङ्ख्ये याने यथावच्छृणु तान्यपि ॥ १८.१९ ॥

jñānam karma ca kartā ca tridhaiva guṇabhēdataḥ |

prōcyatē guṇasaṅkhyānē yathāvacchṛṇu tānyapi || 18.19 ||

गुणसङ्ख्येयाने guṇasaṅkhyānē In the Sankhya philosophy, ज्ञानम् jñānam knowledge, कर्म च karma ca action, च कर्त ca kartā and the doer प्रोच्यते prōcyatē – are said to be, त्रिधा एव tridhā ēva – threefold गुणभेदतः guṇabhēdataḥ according to the distinction of the guṇas, शृणु śṛṇu listen, तानि अपि tāni api to them also, यथावत् yathāvat as they are.

19. In the Sankhya-philosophy knowledge, action and the doer are said to be threefold according to the distinction of the guṇas. Listen to them also as they are.

Of the six factors, Kṛṣṇa first takes up three factors for analysis. Therefore he says: He Arjuna, jñānam karma and kartā; jñānam means knowledge; karma means action. In this context, the word karma means action. In the previous verse, karma means an object; but in this context, the word karma means kriya or action. Then the third factor taken for study is kartā. Kartā means an actor, (do not think of somebody else,) a doer. So knowledge, action and the doer, these three factors tridhaiva; each one is subject to three fold classification; tridha means three types or three fold and classification on what basis? Guṇa bhēdataḥ; based on the difference of three guṇa, names, sātva, rājasik and tamas, which means we have sātвика jñānam, rājasika jñānam, and tāmāsa jñānam. Similarly, sātvika, rājasika and tamasa karma, and sātvika rājasika tāmasika action; totally nine items we have got.

We may wonder where do we get all these topics. Kṛṣṇa again takes Arjuna, they are all my inventions, they are discussed in Vēdānta śāstra and in the sāṅkya philosophy.

So He says: guṇa saṅkayanē prōcyatēē; Guṇa saṅkyaṃ, the saṅkyaṃ system of philosophy; which specialises on the study of the three guṇas. In Vēdānta also, we study the three guṇas; but the saṅkya philosophers are specialists in this analysis and therefore Kṛṣṇa says we will borrow from them.

So this is a very very interesting thing to be noted. We never refute any system of philosophy totally; we never reject any system of philosophy totally. Whatever is logical, whatever is in keeping with the Vēdā; sṛuti, yukti, anubhava anusmaranē; whatever is good; we are willing to take. So we are not fanatic, we do not blindly reject anyone, accept anything beautiful from anywhere.

Similarly, people who analyse the East and West. We can find people, there are some criticise everything that is Western. And they accept everything that is Indian or Eastern; and we have got another set of people, who glorify anything western; and criticise anything eastern. Our śāstras says: Never blindly accept or reject any system.

Then what should you do? Analyse, use your thinking; and wherever good things are there; follow them. If the Westerners have got certain wonderful disciplines, why can't we learn? Why should we blindly criticise them; they are materialistic; they are materialistic, etc. and spend more talking about their materialism; and we have no time to study our scriptures. So Kalidāsa tells

पुराण मित्येव साधु सर्वं न चापि काव्यं नवमित्यवधमा
सन्तः परिक्षान्पलद भजन्त मूढः पर प्रच्ययनेय बुद्धिः ॥

[purāṇa mityēva sādhu sarvaṃ na cāpi kāvyaṃ navamityavadhamā
santaḥ parikṣānpalada bhajanta mūḍhaḥ para pracyayanēya buddhiḥ ||](#)

Never be a blind judgmental person. Anything comes analyse.

युक्तियुक्तम् वचः ग्राह्यम् बालादपि शुकादपि |
युक्तिहीनम् वचः त्याज्यं वृद्धादपि शुकादपि ||

[yuktivyuktam vaca: grāhyam bālādapi śukādapi |
yuktihīnam vaca: tyājyaṃ vṛddhādapi śukādapi ||](#)

If an illogical statement is coming from a boy for even from Śuka Maḥarṣi, you reject it. Just because he is a maḥarṣi with a longer beard; Swami Chinmayānanda says, longer the beard, the greater must be your doubt. Do not blindly accept anyone because of the status or the āśrama or even popularity. That is our tradition. And yuktiyuktam vaca: grāhyam; what is reasonable you should accept, whether it is coming from a boy or Śuka; Śuka has two meanings; parrot and Śuka Maḥarṣi. Similarly, here Kṛṣṇa is borrowing ideas from Vyāsācārya. Borrowing ideas from the saṅkya. Guṇasaṅkhakyānē, prōcyatē. This idea is given tāni api śrṅṅu. May you listen to that also, yathāvat, as presented by me. So this is the introduction. We start with the three topics; jñānam, karma and kartā. Totally seven topics are there. First we are starting with these three topics.

सर्वभूतेषु येनैकं भावमव्ययमीक्षते ।
अविभक्तं विभक्तेषु तज्ज्ञानं विद्धि सात्त्विकं ॥ १८.२० ॥

sarvabhūtēṣu yēnaikam bhāvamavyayamīkṣatē |
avibhaktam vibhaktēṣu tajjñānam viddhi sāttvikam || 18.20 ||

विद्धि viddhi know सात्त्विकं ज्ञानम् sātvikam jñānam sāttvic knowledge तत् tat to be that, येन yē na – by which, ईक्षते īkṣatē - one sees ऐकम् ēkam the nondual, अव्ययम् imperishable, avyayam अविभक्तम् avibhaktam and undivided, भावम् bhāvam Self, विभक्तेषु सर्वभूतेषु vibhaktēṣu sarvabhūtēṣu in all divided beings.

20. Know sātvic knowledge to be that by which one sees the non-dual, imperishable and undivided Self in all divided beings.

Of these three topics, knowledge, action and doer, Kṛṣṇa is taking up the first topic, viz., jñānam or knowledge; and he divides knowledge into three; the 20th verse defines sātvic knowledge; 21st verse deals with rājasic knowledge and 22nd verse deals with tāmasic knowledge.

And that too knowledge about oneself? How do I understand myself? Who is a jīvā? Who am I? So based on the way I look at myself, I can I say I have tāmasic, rājasic or sātvic. First I will summarise these three types of knowledge independently. Then we will go to the verses.

Initially when a person looks at himself, he sees only the physical body. I experience my physical body alone. Other than the physical body, I do not see anything; therefore I take myself to be the mortal body. And the date of birth of the body, I take as my date of birth. And the parents of this body I take as my parents, and the children born out of this body, I look upon as my children. And when the body is growing old, I say I am growing old; and when body will die, I consider that is the end of myself. So this typical perspective is called dēha-ātma buddhi. Looking upon oneself as the mortal body.

And this notion is further reinforced by the scientists also. The scientists who analyses the individual, he looks upon the individual only as the body. And you ask a scientists, is there anything other than the body. Is there a soul? He will say that he believes only in one soul, that is s... o... l...e. Maximum 2 sole. Or Maximum four, because the shoe also has got sole. Other than a s..o..l..e., he does not believe in anything. Nothing other than the body, which can survive the death of the body.

You ask him what is the mind, he will say mind is nothing but the brain with its neuronal connection. This is called Chārvāka philosophy; materialistic philosophy; I am the body; body's birth is my birth; body's death is my death; and therefore I am a mortal jīvā. Not only I look upon myself as a mortal jīvā, I say there are many mortal jīvās. This is how I look at myself and Kṛṣṇa says this wonderful knowledge; which is so widely accepted, this is called tāmasa jñāna. What we consider most rational brilliant scientific knowledge, śāstra says tāmasa jñānam. This is delusion.

And then what is rājasika jñānam? A person having entertained such a notion, he begins to study the scriptures. He himself gets a doubt, whether I am the body only, or whether there is something more than the body. Whether this is the only birth or do I have a future birth, and did I have a past birth; this doubt begins to come and even he reads in the newspapers, some people remembering the past birth, many books are coming. Some child recollecting the past birth. In the śāstra, they are called jāti smara. Because that is a rare case. Normally we do not remember past birth. Why past birth, last Sunday class is our problem; that is our problem. And not only that, if we do not remember the last birth, it is good also. But there are some who remember and there are people who explore and they go to that village to find out whether it is true also.

And again we find prodigy. In the 5th year, they have knowledge of music; they sing well, I have been studying for 15 years, sa pa sa is itself doubtful; but this child gets; how do you explain this phenomenon; and when I enquire, the śāstra, the Vēdā pūrva bhāga tells, I am not the body, but I am someone different from the body. From stūla śarīram, I go to identify with my sūkṣma śarīram, the astral body or the mind principle.

And now my knowledge about myself has changed. Now I look upon myself as a jīvā, different from the body. I have taken millions of past birth; and in normal course, I will take millions of future births. Why I said normal course, because we are jñānis; therefore we are all special case, means for the normal persons, there are millions of future births; the physical body is not me, but it is only a temporary house. And these parents are not my eternal parents; these are the parents only with regard to this particular body. In the past birth, I had a different set of parents; in its past birth, different set of parents; if I have a future birth, there will be another set of parents; need not be human parents even; may be buffalos.

Thus I have evolved myself to know that I am the owner or tenant of the body, I am not the body. And mind is not the brain, brain is only the hardware; brain is only the instrument, through which the mind is expressing. Just as the bulb is only a medium through which the electricity is expressing; so the bulb may break or get fused out; you may remove the bulb, but the electricity continues. Similarly, I am the sūkṣma śarīram; I am the mind, even after the body falls dead, I believe that the individual survives and not only survives that jīvā travels. We saw in the 15th chapter,

शरीरम् यदवाप्नोति यच्चाप्युत्क्रामतीश्वरः ।
गृहीत्वैतानि संयाति वायुर्गन्धानिवाशयात् ॥ १५.८ ॥

śarīram yadvāpnōti yaccāpyutkrāmatīśvaraḥ |
gṛhītvaitāni saṃyāti vāyurgandhānivāśayāt || 15.8 ||

I am the sūkṣma śarīra jīvā who travel from body to body, lōka to lōka; body is mortal; but the sūkṣma śarīram does not die. Mind does not die; the mind of my previous janma is the mind of the present janma. The same mind continues in the future janma also along with the vāsana; tam vidya karmāni samanvāra bhedē, pūrva prajñāh ca. We come along with the vāsana. That what we call as aptitude.

And Kṛṣṇa says, this knowledge that I am immortal as the mind, I am the immortal mind which survives the death of the body; which is invisible, and which travels from one body to another body, vāsāṃsi jīrṇāni yathā vihāya; like removing the dress; I keep on removing the body and travel. So I am immortal, sūkṣma śarīram is also many in number, because there are so many minds. So previously I am jīvā, the body, I was telling; now I am telling, the jīva the mind. In fact, in India, most of the people believe in the survival of all of us. That is why they are worried about srāddham, tarpanam, etc. because they strongly believe that they will survive and they go to different lōkās, and the children are giving oblations, offering and that will help my forefather. So this knowledge, Kṛṣṇa calls rājasika jñānam.

So mortal and many jīvās. Identified with the stūla-śarīram is tāmasa-jñānam. When I identified with the mind and claim that I am immortal and there are many immortal jīvās. From the stand point of the mind, this is called rājasika-jñānam. And this rājasika-jñānam comes from Vēdā pūrva bhāga; tāmasa jñānam comes from worldly books; rājasika jñānam comes from Vēdā pūrva bhāga.

And after remaining in this knowledge and having done lot of tarpaṇam, srāddham, karma, punarapi jananam and maraṇam, then he goes to Vēdā anta bhāga, and from Vēdānta he improves that knowledge further, and he knows that I am neither the body, nor am I the mind, the travelling mind; the mind which is kartā bhōktā, the mind which has got vāsanas; the mind which has got sañcita āgāmi prārabdhā, even that mind I am not.

Then who am I? I am the consciousness-principle which enlivens the body mind complex; and what type of consciousness? Remember the five; consciousness is not part, product, or property of the body; consciousness is an independent entity which enlivens the body mind complex, consciousness is not limited by the boundaries of the body-mind-complex, consciousness survives even after the fall of the body; and that surviving consciousness cannot be recognised; it is without transaction, but it exists. And how many such consciousnesses are there? That all pervading consciousness is one.

So when I come to Vēdānta, I claim I am not the body, I am not even the mind which travels after death, but I am the consciousness which blesses not only this mind in this body; I am the consciousness which is behind all the bodies and all the mind. And that consciousness is ēkaḥ, akartā, abhōktā; this is the culmination of self-knowledge.

Self-knowledge has to grow in three levels: I am body level - level one; I am the mind - level two; I am the consciousness - level three. The first level is called tāmasa jñānam; the second level is rājasa jñānam; and the third and final is sātāvika jñānam. Kṛṣṇa is starting from the sātāvika level. Now look at the slōkā.

Vibhaktēṣu sarvabhūtēṣu ēkam bhāvam īkṣatē; that knowledge by which one sees one consciousness-I; bhāvam means reality. Here the reality refers to the caitanyam tatvam, ātma tatvam, sat principle; and how many consciousness are there? ēkam bhāvam; and what type of consciousness it is? Avyayam; the body continuously changes, asthi, jāyatē, vardhātē, vipariṇamatē, vipakṣyatē; vinaśyati. The mind also continuously changes, and when the body is growing old, the mind also becomes weaker. That is why, we say, in those days, I used to remember everything. And now I am not able to remember anything.

So along with the body, mind also undergoes change; but this consciousness-principle is avyayam. Avyayam means nirvikaram. So that knowledge by which a person sees that one-consciousness which is present in sarva bhūtēṣu, present in all the bodies; bodies are many, minds are many, but consciousness is one" like bulbs are many, sthūla śarīram, filaments are many, sūkṣma-śarīram, fuse means all out, the filament is the sūkṣma-śarīram, get fused; and the bulbs are many; filaments are many; electricity is only one. So sarva bhūtēṣu, here bhūta means all the bodies, śarīram. What is the nature of the body? Vibhathēṣu, which are all divided, which are many and varied; here is one body, and another body is separated by space; therefore the bodies are divided, separated, but consciousness is not divided.

I have given the example before, light is upon this finger also, light is upon this finger also, in between the two fingers, light is there or not? What will we say; light is there; but you cannot see it. How do you know light is there? Put a finger in between; light is not bulb; I mean the light spreading; so just as the visible light is in finger No.1, visible light is on finger No.2, in between two fingers, light is, but in invisible manner. Similarly, consciousness is in your body, consciousness is in my body; consciousness is in between also; but we are not able to recognise.

In Sānskrīt we say, here it is vyaktha caitanyam; in the other body it is vyaktha caitanyam, vyaktha means manifest; in between it is avyaktha caitanyam. Therefore consciousness is not a separated entity; not a divided entity, not a pluralistic entity and that is why it is compared to ākāśa. Therefore, avibhaktam, indivisible like space.

And this I that I am that ātma, I am the space like consciousness, the one who knows, he alone has got sātvik knowledge; It is the toughest challenge to say that I am the space like consciousness. Easiest is to say I am the body; next tougher one is I am not the body; but I am the mind which survives the death of the body; which is tougher; but I am the consciousness is the toughest, and that is called sātvika jñānam. So Kṛṣṇa says tat jñānam, sātvikam viddhi. In short advaita jñānam is sātvika jñānam.

पृथक्त्वेन तु यज्ज्ञानं नानाभावान्पृथग्विधान् ।
वेत्ति सर्वेषु भूतेषु तज्ज्ञानं विद्धि राजसम् ॥ १८.२१ ॥

[pṛthaktvēna tu yajjñānam nānābhāvān pṛthagvidhān |
vētti sarvēṣu bhūtēṣu tajjñānam viddhi rājasam || 18.21 ||](#)

विद्धि viddhi know, राजसं ज्ञानम् rājasam jñānam rājasic knowledge, तत् tat – to be that यद् ज्ञानम् yad jñānam – by which, वेत्ति vētti one sees, पृथग्विधान् pṛthagvidhān the (apparently) different, नानाभावान् nānābhāvān – and many jīvās, सर्वेषु भूतेषु sarvēṣu bhūtēṣu – in all beings, तु पृथक्त्वेन tu pṛthaktvēna – to be (really) different.

21. Know Rājasic knowledge to be that by which one sees the apparently different and many jīvās in all beings to be (really) different.

Rājasic knowledge is the intermediary one; this person does not take the body as himself. So there is a slight progress, he is a not a chārvāka; chārvāka is the materialistic philosopher, who looks upon the body as himself; and such people will not believe in puṇyam; they will not believe in pāpam. So you cannot frighten them that if you do adharma, you will go to hell, you cannot say, because he will ask, who believes in hell. So it is very difficult to talk to a materialistic person, because he does not believe in puṇyam or pāpam; he does not believe in svarga or naraka, very difficult; whereas this person, believes in surviving mind. So therefore, he has progressed from body to mind.

And when he comes to the mind, he is going to claim that I am kartā and bhōktā; because mind has that capacity to do, it has got a will power and therefore it becomes a kartā and bhōktā. And once I identify with the mind, there are many minds and therefore I am in dvaitam only. Even though I have progressed but still I am in dvaitam. Previously I said there are many bodies, now I say there are many minds; that is the only difference.

Therefore, Kṛṣṇa says, yat jñānam, that knowledge by which pṛthagvidhān, nānābhāvān vētti, one knows or accepts many and varied jīvātmas. So bhāva here means the jīvās, nānābhāvāḥ, many jīvās, not based on the body, but based on the many minds; so nānā jīvān, and each jīvā is different from another, one has got more puṇyam, another jīvā has more pāpam, another jīvā has got 50:50; that he sees nānābhāvān, pṛthagvidhān vētti. Where? Sarvēṣu bhūtēṣu; behind every physical body.

So Saṅkya philosopher talks about the plurality of jīvās; the nyāya philosopher talks the plurality of the jīvās. It is because they have mistaken the mind as ourselves. And tat jñānam, such a knowledge is rājasam viddhi; rājasic knowledge.

Now what is tāmasic knowledge? Kṛṣṇa tells in the 22nd verse, we will read.

यत्तु कृत्स्नवदेकस्मिन् कार्ये सक्तमहैतुकम् ।
अतत्त्वार्थवदल्पं च तत्तामसमुदाहृतम् ॥ १८.२२ ॥

yattu kṛtsnavadēkasmin kāryē saktamahaitukam |
atattvārthavadalpam ca tattāmasamudāhṛtam || 18.22 ||

तामसम् tāmasam- tāmasic knowledge, उदाहृतं तत् udāhṛtam tat - is said to be that, यत् तु सक्तम् yat tu saktam- which is attached, एकस्मिन् कार्ये ēkasmin kāryē- to the individual body, कृत्स्नवत् kṛtsnavat as though it is whole, अहैतुकम् ahaitukam which is unreasonable, अतत्त्वार्थवात् atattvārthavāt - untruthful, च अल्पम् ca alpam - and petty.

22. Tāmasic knowledge is said to be that which is attached to the individual body as though it is the whole, which is unreasonable, untruthful and petty.

So the third type of knowledge is held by an utterly materialistic person, and therefore he accepts the physical body only; he does not believe even in a mind, other than the brain. And therefore in his vision, when the body dies, that is the end of the individual. And if you argue this is only the external vesture; behind the body there is some jīvā, you call it sūkṣma body, astral body, when we talk about jīvā's travelling, this person asks, what is the proof? Isn't it a blind-belief? And he says if I have to accept, you should show that to the sense organs.

So the conclusion of a materialist is he believes only in the sense organs. And whatever is not available to the sense organs, he does not believe. And we cannot do anything with those people; because the subtle body cannot be shown to the sense organs. That is why somebody wanted to know weight of the soul, and therefore they wanted to take the weight of the individual before death and weight of the individual after death; and whatever the reduction in the weight must be the weight of the soul; scientific experimentation. And they found weight increases after death; So what happens? The soul must have a negative weight! The śāstra very clearly says that there are things in the creation which are not available for sense organs.

As I have said before, imagine a person who has got only four sense organs; and he does not have the eye; suppose he is blind; I am telling that there are colours and forms in the world, which can be known only through the fifth sense organ called the eye, this person says: "No, I won't accept. If I have to accept colours and forms, you should prove it through the four sense organs I have got; I will use the ear, and you have to show colour. I will use the tongue, I will use my skin, etc". He accepts to use the available sense organs; he is asking me to prove the colour, I am saying your available four sense organs cannot prove the colour. If you want a proof for the colour, you have to accept the fifth sense organ, called the eye; and you have to operate.

Similarly the tradition says, there are things which are not available for the five sense organs, we have to go to the sixth sense organ called śāstram. Śāstra Cakṣu is the sixth sense organ; either you accept to operate it or I cannot help you. So therefore any amount of scientific experiment will not help, because those sense organs are incapable of objectifying. Vēdās itself makes it very clear, Vēdānta introduces itself; I am here to teach which are not available for sense organs. அதை நாம் காதிலயே போட்டுக்க மாட்டேவ்றோம். We never listen to it. Vēdās tells. I am here to teach you things, which are not available for sense organs and this fellow says, I will accept that if you show that to the sense organs. What to say?

प्रत्यक्षणानुमित्या वा यस्तूपायो न विद्यते
एवं विदन्ति वेदेन तस्मात् वेदस्य वेदता ॥

prat-yakṣhēṇānumit-yā vā yastūpāyō na vidyatē
ēvaṁ vidanti vēdēna tasmāt vēdasya vēdatā ||

The very definition of Vēdā is it is the sixth sense organ. And what is available for the Vēdā will not be available for the other five sense organs. In fact what is available for the eyes, will not be available for the other four; what is available for the ears, is not available for the other.

What is the definition of a sense organ; sense organ is that which reveals a unique thing; which is not available for the other sense organs. Without understanding this, a materialistic person argues, sūkṣma śarīram is not available for sense organs, not available for scientific experimentation. Therefore nobody survives; therefore our forefathers are going to different lōkās, they are all cock and bull stories, I do not believe in srāddham, I do not believe in tarpaṇam, they are all hotch-potch.

Kṛṣṇa says; Better do not argue with them; their problem is that they do not know is sense organ; this topic is called epistemology.

Therefore Vēdā says such persons does not know what is proof, what is knowledge, etc. he does not understand therefore he is called a tāmasic person; he wants to see something through their sense organs, for which is not available. What to tell him? He wants to see the sound through the eyes.

Therefore He says, yat jñānam that knowledge ēkasmin karyē saktam; which identifies with only the physical body; which identifies here kāryam means stūla śarīram. Very carefully note: In this slōkā, the word kāryam refers to the gross body; that materialistic knowledge which identifies with the gross body, kṛtsnvat as though that is the total eye.

Śāstra says body is the most superficial layer of your personality; and annamayam is the superficial layer; and the superficial layer is taken as the ultimate; he does not come to praṇamaya, manōmaya, vijñānamaya; to ānandamaya he comes in sleep. When he is going to come to ātma? Never argue with a materialistic person. We can only say: You be happy with what you consider, I will go by what I consider as the source of knowledge; kāryē saktamahaitukam; which does not have any logic. So the materialistic people are the most illogical person; they say pratyakṣam alone is pramāṇam, and if pratyakṣam alone is pramāṇam, means source of knowledge, they cannot believe even their back. We can say that உனக்கு முதுகே இல்லை; you do not have a back; because he has never seen his back.

Therefore, the silliest philosophy; ahaitukam, illogical, atattvārthavāt; it does not have the ultimate truth in it. It means that knowledge, tāmasic knowledge does not have the ultimate reality.

and alpam ca; and it is the meanest form of knowledge; alpa; means alpa prayōjanam; it does not take a person far and such a materialistic knowledge is called tāmasic knowledge; So I am the body; tāmasic knowledge; I am the mind; rājasic knowledge; I am consciousness is the sātvik knowledge.

Hari Om

After summarising the two principle sādhanas, viz., karma-yōga and jñāna-yōga in the first 17 verses, now from the 18th verse up to the 40th verse, Lord Kṛṣṇa is taking up seven topics and in each topic, He talks about three topics based on the three fold guṇas. And of those seven topics Kṛṣṇa has introduced the first three in the 19th verse, and those three topics are jñānam, karma and kartha. Jñānam meaning knowledge; karma meaning action and karta meaning a doer.

And then in the next three verses, 20, 21, and 22, Kṛṣṇa talked about sātvikā, rājasa and tāmasa jñānam and all these three fold knowledge is the knowledge about oneself. How does a person look at himself, and this is very important because, the way I look upon the world, heavily depends upon the way I look at myself.

And of these three, the tāmasic and the most natural knowledge, every living being instinctively have is the idea that I am the physical body. This is the universal conclusion of most of the thoughtless people and this is the conclusion of many materialistic philosophers also; I am the physical body.

And therefore they do not believe in rebirth also; they do not believe in past birth; they do not believe in future births also; and if you ask them, how do you account for various geniuses in different planes; how do you explain the child prodigy if you ask them, they will say that it is chance only. You cannot even say that it is genetics, because in the same family, one child is a music prodigy, another child is musically deaf. You know musically deaf; he does not understand even what is the śṛuti. Thus you cannot even give genetics as reason, they have to believe, all the differences in the human-beings are because of chance only. Thus these people are called lōkāyathikās or chārvākās, who say I am the body. And naturally they have to conclude, I am a mortal human being, the fear of mortality cannot be escaped by them.

And then after sometime, when a person comes to religion and scriptures, there is a revision with regard to the knowledge about oneself, one begins to accept the fact that I am not the body, but I am a tenant who is using this body as a temporary rented house; and I have been taking many rented houses. In the past, I have lived in several houses, and this happens to be another rented body and I will kick this body also, and I will take up another body; and I am something else, other than this body; I am the mind, I am the sūkṣma śarīram, different from the body. And when the person elevates himself to that knowledge, one advantage is the fear of death goes, because I know that I do not disappear from the world.

Because I believe in past birth and future births, I know that I am going to disappear, only the medium of transaction is going to change. In the past birth, I transacted through one type of body, and in this birth, I am transacting through this body; in the next birth, this body will not be available, the contact number is different; after all our phone numbers are changing very often; from six digits to seven digits to eight digits, add one two.,

Similarly, the phone numbers are changing, the change in phone number is not a change in the owner. The change in the phone number is not a change in the owner. Similarly vāsāmsi jīrṇāni yathā vihāya, navāni gṛhṇāti narō'parāṇi. For a religious person, fear of mortality is very very less.

And that is why, in those days, they could think of capital punishment, as a form of punishment. For a materialistic person, capital punishment is unthinkable because in capital punishment, you are not reforming the person; why because in materialistic philosophy, capital punishment is the end of the individual; where is the question of reforming? But if I believe in punarjanma, I can accept capital punishment, because in capital punishment, the jīvā does not die. The jīvā does not die because the body alone is hanged to death; not the jīvā. And therefore death is not an end of the individual; therefore death also can be a form of treatment, a form of reformation. It is possible in this philosophy. And therefore, I now know that I am a surviving individual and I look upon myself as a kartā and I am a bhōktā, and I have got sañcita, āgami and prārabhdā, and according to the karma, I will travel from body to body. Death is not my end. This gives a lot of relief.

But here also there is problem. The problem is I know that I will survive, even after death and I know that I will travel and go to different lōkās, but my fear is what will be the type of lōkā I will go to later? What type of body I will get? For a materialistic person that fear is not there, because death is the end of him. But for this person, there is a fear because I should not be born in unfavourable circumstances.

Therefore we enter into the third level of knowledge. What is that knowledge? I am not the body also which will die; I am not the mind also which will travel from lōkās to lōkās, but I am the consciousness which is akartā, abhōktā; which illumines everything but is not affected by anything. And when I get this ātma-jñānam, that alone is the highest knowledge, in which I am free from fear of mortality and I am also free from the fear of a wrong rebirth.

The fear of an unfavourable rebirth is a serious fear; and especially people want to avoid unfavourable rebirth by getting srāddham through their children; because it is said in the scriptures that if the srāddhams are not done; they won't get a favourable rebirth; or they will be hanging somewhere. Many people are afraid of hanging around or afraid of being reborn; some naraka or some place; and this special naraka is also said: puth narakam. Many parents are worried that I may go to puth narakam if my children do not do srāddham; serious fear.

So once I know I am akartā, abhōktā, the fear of naraka also goes away, whether I have children or not; whether the children are male or female or not, and whether the male children believe in srāddham or not, and whether the believing children will perform or not; or whether the priest will be available for that srāddham or not; That much fear. Because they Swamiji, we want to do, but the priest who has promised, he never came. Many people are getting vairāgyam towards srāddham because of the priest's behavior. All these are there.

When I know that I am akartā, abhōktā, I do not bother about mortality or rebirth; And therefore that is the highest knowledge, I am body, tāmasic knowledge, I am mind, rājasic knowledge, I am all-pervading consciousness sātvic knowledge. These are the three types of jñānam we saw.

1. KARMA

Now we are going to enter into three types of karma. We will read verse no.23.

Verse 18.23

नियतं सङ्गरहितमरागद्वेषतः कृतम् ।
अफलप्रेप्सुना कर्म यत्सात्त्विकमुच्यते ॥ १८.२३ ॥

niyatam saṅgarahitamarāgadvēṣataḥ kṛtam |
aphalaprēpsunā karma yattatsāttvikamucyatē || 18.23 ||

सात्त्विकं sātvikam sāttvic action कर्म उच्यते तत् karma ucyatē tat is said to be that यद् नियतम् yad niyatam which is obligatory, सङ्गरहितम् saṅgarahitam which is devoid of attachment कृतम् kṛtam and which is performed अरागद्वेषतः arāgadvēṣataḥ without likes and dislikes अफलप्रेप्सुना aphalaprēpsunā by one which is not desirous of result.

23. Sātvic action is said to be that which is obligatory, which is devoid of attachment, and which is performed without likes and dislikes by one who is not desirous of result.

Now begins the three types of karma; and here the word Karma means action. I am emphasizing this because sometimes the word karma refers to any object also and in that meaning that word was used in verse No.18; the word karma meant object, but here the karma should be taken as action; and in this verse 23, sātvikam karma is defined, then in 24, rājasam karma, and in 25 tāmasam karma.

What do you mean by sātvikam karma? Kṛṣṇa says, niyatam karma sātvikaṁ. Niyatam karma means, specially prescribed actions in the scriptures. Niyatam means specially prescribed. What do you mean by specially prescribed action? The scriptures prescribe certain special actions, exclusively for the sake of spiritual growth; exclusively for the sake of inner maturity; exclusively for the sake of developing value. We have seen in the 16th chapter, that self-knowledge is possible only in a mind which enjoys the values of life; and the values were enlisted as daivi sampath in the 16th chapter. So only when such values are there; the mind is fertile for the ātma jñānam crop. For different types of crop, different types of soils are conducive. Coffee or tea cannot be grown in Madras; in Madras nothing can be grown, that is a different matter. It requires a particular type of soil. Similarly the mind requires a particular type of condition, which was enumerated daivi sampath vimōkṣaya; all the values can be developed, if a person performs those specially prescribed karmas; they are all sātvika-karmāṇi, they are called niṣkāma karmāṇi or they are called vihita karmāṇi; or they are called ṣōdaka karmāṇi; ṣōdakam means purifier karma. They are not meant for giving any worldly, materialistic benefit; they are specially designed for inner growth.

If a person is interested in materialistic benefit, scriptures do prescribe special activities for those benefits also. We have got an āvahanti hōmam, which we studied in the Taittiriya upaniṣad Śikṣavalli, it is a special hōma for getting money. Thus scriptures do prescribe rituals and activities for materially benefits and scriptures do prescribe for inner growth and that inner growth oriented karmas are called niyata karmāṇi.

And what are they? We have elaborately studied them in the third chapter of the Gīta. This is supposed to be a summarizing chapter or reminder chapter. What are those karmas; I will only remind you; Pancha Maha Yajñās. They are all karma, in which I contribute to the well beings of the various segments of the society. They are such activities, my very living upon the earth will become beneficial to others; whether I was living beneficially to others or have I been a sheer burden on the mother earth and the society. So the greater my life is beneficial to others, greater will be the purity; and the society was divided into five segments and contributions to each segment, we call one yajña and pañca maha yajñās were mentioned; all of them will come under niyata karmāṇi and they will purify the mind quickly; therefore niyatam.

Then the next condition for sātāvika karma is saṅgarahitam. Even when a person does noble karmas, sātāvika karmas, service type of karma, contributory type of karma, one should remember that karma or action is not an end in itself. Our ultimate aim is systematic Vēdāntic study. One should not forget that; service to the society is wonderful; but that is not an end in itself; because when a person serves the society, no doubt he purifies the mind, but he does not have an opportunity to learn about the real nature of oneself. And therefore one has to come to systematic study of Vēdānta; Vēdānta sṛavaṇa, manana nidhidyāsanam; Saturday/Sunday classes are compulsory for all.

Therefore, if a person is service oriented, Kṛṣṇa says you serve serve and serve; in due course, you should learn to withdraw gradually, and learn to spend more time in self-enquiry. Therefore do not fall in love with karma; use the karma, purify yourselves; and gradually reduce the karma. Therefore saṅgam rahitam; not getting attached to rituals; there are many ritualistic people, they are great after all rituals are wonderful but they never come to Vēdānta; they die a ritualist only; Therefore Kṛṣṇa is warning; you should know how to transcend; that is called saṅgarahitam.

Then the next condition for sātāvika karma is arāgadvēṣataḥ kṛtam. These sātāvika karmas are performed without rāgaḥ-dvēṣaḥ; without rāgaḥ-dvēṣaḥ means without any worldly motive. These karmas are not done for changing the external world. The difference between sātāvika karmas and rājasa karmas is, in rājasa karma, I want to gain happiness by changing the set up. My philosophy is: "if I change the set up, I will be happier. If I change the family members, I will be happier". Many people invite Swamiji to give advice to their family members. They do not want to change; they are sure they are perfect. So if we tell, they will not listen; therefore Swamiji you advise them.

In fact that is the fundamental difficulty for Vēdānta. Therefore rāgaḥ-dvēṣaḥ oriented karma is rājasa karma. Rājasa karma is based on the fundamental misconception that my improvement is based on change of the surroundings.

Whereas sātāvika karma is based on the fundamental philosophy; happiness depends upon transforming myself; my knowledge; my attitude towards myself; my attitude towards the world, because the world cannot be changed by us. And in fact, when we are trying to change the world, the others are busy trying to change us!!

And therefore Kṛṣṇa says a karma-yōgi is interested in transforming himself; he does not have a complaint against the set-up. And if at all he has a complaint, the complaint is against whom? There is some problem is with me, problem lies in me. As Swami Dayānanda beautifully says. Problem is You; Solution is You. Karma-yōgi wants to transform inwardly.

Therefore arāgadveṣataḥ kṛtam; it is not based on the rāgaḥ-dvēsaḥ with regard to the set up. And therefore only aphaḷaprēpsunā kṛtam; it is done without the expectation of any external benefit. What he expects, if at all there is an expectation, is a self-transformation or jñāna-yōgayta prāp̥thi, but he does not have any external materialistic expectations; even though the scriptures promised karma-yōga will bring certain worldly benefits also, as a bye-product. Karma-yōga is supposed to bring worldly benefits also, as a bye-product, but a karma-yōgis should not aim at that bye-product. If you aim at bye-product, it will no more be a bye-product, it will become the main thing.

And therefore, aphaḷaprēpsu; the first bye-product is better health; the karma-yōgi will have better health. In fact all the doctors are prescribing karma-yōga for heart patients; without naming it karma-yōga; they say take life easily, do not have too much stress or strain; then it will increase your pressure; then you will require another bye-pass; you will have problem; therefore be relaxed.

What is that? Karma-yōga; it is another name, but they prescribe for what; preventing heart attack. Better health, reduction of chances of heart attack is a bye-product of karma-yōga; and therefore aphaḷaprēpsu, it is done by a person, aphaḷaprepsu, is the name of the person, sāt̥vika karmi is talked about. Sāt̥vika karma is done by a person, who is not desirous of material result.

And yad tat karma; such an action is called sāt̥vikam karma. And this is possible only when a person is sufficiently enlightened to understand that the problem is only with me. That requires to become a karma-yōgi itself, a person requires the fundamental understanding that the problem is not with the world, the problem is with me. Therefore the change required is not outside. Like a person repeatedly falling sick; later discovers the problem is my immunity is less. And therefore, immunize yourself is the solution that is required. Karma-yōgi is reasonable enlightened.

यत्तु कामेप्सुना कर्म साहंकारेण वा पुनः ।
क्रियते बहुलायासं तद्राजसमुदाहृतम् ॥ १८.२४ ॥

[yattu kāmēpsunā karma sāhaṅkāreṇa vā punaḥ
kriyatē bahulāyāsaṁ tadrājasamudāhṛtam || 18.24 ||](#)

राजसं कर्म rājasam karma Rājasic action उदाहृतं तत् udāhṛtam tat is said to be that बहुलायासम् bahulāyāsam which is full of pain, यत् तु क्रियते yat tu kriyatē which is undertaken कामेप्सुना kāmēpsunā by one who seeks result वा पुनः vā punaḥ and साहङ्कारेण sāhaṅkāreṇa who is egoistic.

24. Rājasic action is said to be that which is full of pain, and which is undertaken by one who seeks result and who is egoistic.

So in the previous verse, we saw sātvikam karma is karma-yōga only. Now Kṛṣṇa defines rājasam karma. Rājasam karma is a karma done with kriyatē bahulāyāsam. It is a karma, which involves tremendous stress and strain; The person is heavily stressed; heavily strained, there is tremendous tension, which tells upon his life in different ways.

There are some people who suppress the tension, because the business ethics and business etiquette requires certain external smile; some vēṣam is required. And therefore he suppresses his tension and externally pretends to be a relaxed and relieved person. Therefore one problem is; it tells upon the body in due course; varieties of psychosomatic diseases survive. So rājasam karma is that which increases tension and which surfaces in the form of varieties of diseases.

Or another problem is a person does not how to handle this tension and anxiety, and therefore he expresses the same in front of the other people. Therefore, he is a highly irritable person; short tempered. All the time irritable; and the victims are often the family members; the children will have to bear the brunt of that executive. The wife will have to face the scolding and anger. Therefore he becomes an angry person. This is another expression.

Or still verse problem, he does not know how to cope with stress and strain and therefore he tries to release through various other addictions like drinking; he has to go in the evening to release his tension; club, or smoke or he takes to varieties of habits and after some time, all of them would not work. He becomes a wreck, his family becomes a wreck, and even family breaks up.

And especially nowadays when the life is becoming faster and faster, this becomes the price that we have to pay. And when he cannot lead even an ordinary peaceful life, where is the question of studying the scriptures, a tension ridden mind, will not have the inner relaxation, either to pray or to spend sometime with family members, or attend a Gīta or upaniṣad class. இதெல்லாம் முடியவே முடியாமா போயிடும். All these are not possible at all; becomes a very very unfortunate the tragic life. In fact, he will be climbing the corporate ladder. He has become vice-president, president etc. He has climbed the corporate ladder earning Rs.2-3-4 lakhs per month; but he has money, but no peace. And not only he does not have peace, even the family members do not have peace. This is a typical rājasic karma.

So Kṛṣṇa says: bahula āyāsam, āyāsaḥ means stress and strain, tension, anxiety; inner volcano; எப்போ வெடிக்கும், தெரியாது. When will it burst is not known. Therefore Swamiji says when such a father comes home from the office, even the children runs to different rooms, and nobody wants to confront that father. Because they know that he will burst at any time and the poor wife cannot, because very life becomes a hell; family becomes a hell, money is there, status is there; position is there, but no life, no family, no religion, no spirituality.

Kṛṣṇa says are you interested in that? Wish you all the best. Therefore, bahula āyāsam kriyatē. Actions with tremendous strain.

And kāmēpsunā kriyatē; It is done by a person who has got materialist desires; like power, hankers after power, position, name and fame, status; so there is lot of competition in the corporate world. Therefore I want to have that status; therefore he is fighting for that; therefore even if he is not interested, the family members constantly taunt him, you see your brother, how smart he is; he has two cars, one house each in Kodaikanal and other in Chennai; and you are the foolish one, with an old ambassador. Even the family members taunt him as you tend to go higher and higher.

Therefore kāmēpsunā; what is the fundamental misconception? That all the status, name, fame and position will give peace of mind, this is the misconception. The do not know that peace of mind has no connection to any of these things. We can have enough example in which a person has all of them, without peace; and we have got equal number of examples in which a person does not have any one of them; but still he is contended person.

Kuchēla, if you read Bhāgatavam, he did not have any one of them, he was happy and contended; but only the other people sent him to Lord Kṛṣṇa to ask for money. And we have to read the dialogue in Bhāgavatham. Kuchēla, means what? The one who does not have designer clothes; that is the definition of Kuchēla; chēla means dress; Not chēla in Hindi, which is disciple in Sānskrīt. Kuchēla means who does not have any dress; but he does not consider himself to be inferior because of that; he is happy.

Therefore, kāmēpsunā karma kriyatē; action done by a person who is interested in all these externals.

and sāhānkārēṇa; one who is highly egoistic; he wants to value increases because of the position that he occupies and therefore he wants to stick to that position; stick to that status; because he values that; and he thinks that his glory is because of that particular status or position and therefore he holds on to that. So ahaṅkāreṇa; attached to the external insignias; external symbols of status and position. sāhaṅkāreṇa; and therefore he demands also.

So even in a spiritual discourse, he is very particular about the row he is allotted. Even though the Gīta is the same, whether you listen to from the 1st row or the 3rd row, he is very particular and not only that even if he comes, he wants to what the other person is allotted; if the other person in the front row and I am in the 3rd row, there will be big row. Big row he will create. Why did you give me like this; status conscious. all typical egoism case, rājasic case. And therefore, sāhaṅkāreṇa, action done by an egoistic person who is interested in external and who is always in tension, such a karma is rājasam udāhṛtaṃ. Is rājasic karma.

अनुबन्धं क्षयं हिंसामनवेक्ष्य च पौरुषम् ।
मोहादारभ्यते कर्म यत्तत्तामसमुच्यते ॥ १८.२५ ॥

[anubandham kṣayam hiṁsāmanavēkṣya ca pauruṣam |
mōhādārabhyatē karma yattattāmasamucyatē || 18.25 ||](#)

तामसं कर्म tāmasam karma Tāmasic action, उच्यते तत् ucyatē tat is said to be that यद् आरभ्यते yad ārabhyatē which is undertaken मोहात् mōhāt due to delusion अनवेक्ष्य anavēkṣya without considering अनुबन्धम् anubandham the consequences क्षयम् kṣayam loss हिंसाम् hiṁsām harm च पौरुषम् ca pauruṣam and capacity

25. Tāmasic action is said to be that which is undertaken due to delusion without considering the consequences, loss, harm and capacity.

Now Kṛṣṇa defines tāmasic karma and he points out any thoughtless action; any action done without proper thinking; proper planning is tāmasa karma. Vēdānta or karma-yōga insists upon proper planning.

Many people get confused regarding planning for the future and worrying about the future. This is a very big confusion. Planning is a deliberate action. If I am planning a pilgrimage, I have to decide when I am starting, which should be the first place I go, which should be the second place, and how I go; if I have to book the ticket, I do it in advance; if I have to book a hotel for staying that I have to do; planning makes a person efficient in the present. Planning with regard to the future, make me efficient in the present and planning is a deliberate action. And Vēdānta strongly recommends planning; that is sātāvika karma; that is intelligence.

Whereas worrying is a totally different thing. After booking the ticket, suppose you worry whether the train will run or not; after all India!, you do not know which strike will come, when, and which track will derailment, especially when you read the news item, every other day there is one derailment or the other. You can think of such things, and that worry is deliberate action; but it is something that happens, without our thinking.

How do you know the difference between planning and worrying? Since planning is a deliberate action, you can chose the time and fix. Suppose you want to undertake a pilgrimage in December, you can decide to plan next month or next to next month. You can allot the time, and you can even all others can sit together; planning is a deliberate action; therefore you can chose the time of planning.

What about worrying? Do you chose that I want to worry about my son someday. Therefore tomorrow between 5 and 6, I will worry about my son. And day after between 7 and 8, daughter; next week, Wednesday between 12-1, the daughter in law. And next to that between 2-3, the grandchild. Can you plan and worry? You can never do; it happens. So what happens without your permission at any time, even in the middle of the class sometimes, that is called worry.

Worry regarding the future; does not give you efficiency in the present; the worry saps up your efficiency. It weakens you. Plans strengthens you; worry weakens you; Plan is also with regard to future; worry is also with regard to future, one is healthy one because it strengthens one is unhealthy, because it weakens.

Sātvika karma involves planning, whereas tāmasa karma, there is no planning. I felt like doing and therefore I did. Therefore Kṛṣṇa says pauruṣam anavēkṣya. Pauruṣam means the human capacity, personal capacity; personal resources, physical capacity; intellectual capacity; financial capacity.

Even if I am using a particular course of study, I should whether I have the capacity to undertake that course. Intellectual resources, emotional resources, physical resources, financial resources; I have to take all of them into account. Otherwise, as in Tamil, காலை கொஞ்சம் ஆழமாய் வெச்சுட்டேன். I have over-stretched my leg. And in English there is a proverb; biting more than one can chew. You do not have place for munching; or you have to run to another room and take it out; and even while eating, you should know how big should be the morsel. A tāmasic person; a tāmasic karma; proper plans will be lacking. So anavēkṣya, without taking into consideration, individual capacity.

Then the next thing is anubandam. An action done without considering the consequences. Without considering the consequences, if an action is done; if in the office, the boss shouts at me, and I get angry, I feel it is illegitimate shouting and therefore I shout at him back. And next day I lost my job. I should know whether I am dependent on the company or the company is dependent on me. Without knowing that, if you act, we will be in trouble. So therefore, before verbally expressing, before physically expressing, before starting anything, I should know the consequences. Anubandam means consequences.

Then kṣayam means, the loss or the expenditure; nothing can be attained free. Whatever you have to accomplish in life; you have to proportionally spend or expend. It maybe expenditure of your physical energy; if I am taking up a job with requires 12 hours of slogging; or if I have to get involved night shift working, I should know whether my body can take it. So physical expenditure, financial expenditure, all types of loss or expenditure, I should calculate. So therefore kṣayam or loss.

And then himsām. I should know whether any damage will be caused by my action. Whether any damage will be caused; when we have got nuclear energy, there is a proportional damage; when there is an advancement in the city, roads and all of them, there is a damage in the form of pollution. Any action I do, there are favourable consequences and equal number of unfavourable consequences; generally we downplay the unfavourable consequences.

This is the general habit; because one problem in a particular, or particular job; the problem at present always looms large, it appears bigger. Therefore I want to jump out of it. And I look at the other situation and find that the other situation this problem is absent. Like from rented house to own house; but own house has got its own problem. It is not owned house; and ownership flat; there is ownership and you are flat; so in a new set up, this particular problem is absent and we want to get out this particular problem. And we see that this particular problem is absent; but we do not see it is replaced by some other problem. And we do not want to see it because we want to quickly get out of this, and we get into English proverb situation. What is that? From the frying pan I jumped out and fell into the fire, which is worse.

Therefore what I have, action I take, there are favourable, there are unfavourable situations also. There is no decision which is uniformly positive. Even sanyāsa taking also. I want tell you what are the minus points; anything the first thing that we have to do is: am I ready and prepared to face the unfavourable. To think favourable every done does. An intelligent person asks: Am I aware of, and am I prepared to face the unfavourable? First I am aware of and if I not prepared, better I prepare and jump into that and in tāmasic karma, I do not do that; so then what do I do; Now also I am crying; then also. So constant crying is there. Hari Om.

224 Chapter 18, Verses 26-28

After summing up the topics of karma-yōga and jñāna-yōga in the first 17 verses, Lord Kṛṣṇa from the 18th verse onwards takes up 7 topics for cryptic analysis and in each topic he deals with the sātvic, rājasic and tāmasic variety. This is the topic from 18 to 40th verse.

And seven topics taken up are jñānam, karma, kartā, jñānam means knowledge, karma means action and kartā means doer; then buddhiḥ and dhṛtiḥ; buddhiḥ meaning intellect or intelligence, dhṛtiḥ means willpower and then buddhiḥ dhṛtiḥ and then finally sukam. Sukam means happiness. Totally we have only 6 topics. You have to include the three types of sanyāsa which he has talked before. So excluding the three types of sanyāsa, we have six topics, from the 18th verse, jñānam, karma, kartā, buddhiḥ, dhṛtiḥ and sukham; and in each one, Kṛṣṇa talks about sātviḥ, rājasa and tāmasa variety.

And indirectly what Lord Kṛṣṇa wants to convey is the tāmasic variety should be given up at the earliest, because it is damaging to the spiritual personality. However, advantageous it may be materially, we should give up the tāmasic variety, whether it is tāmasa karma, tāmasa kartṛtvam, tāmasa sukham, tāmasa dhṛtiḥ, in all these seven, tāmasa variety should be given up; if you are a spiritual-seeker. Remember the entire Gīta is taught assuming that the student is ultimately interested in spiritual destination. If a person does not have spiritual destination, we should be careful to avoid introducing to Gīta to him.

Throughout you should remember that Gīta is a mōkṣa śāstram. And Śankarācārya specially tells this in the introduction itself; Gīta is mōkṣa śāstram, because Arjuna in the first and second-chapters pointed out that I am not able to get piece of mind in spite of materialist success. He said even the Svarga the heaven which is the height of materialist accomplishment, even that heaven will not remove my sorrow. So from that it is very clear; that the student of the Gīta has understood the limitations of materialistic accomplishments.

And therefore in and through all these discussions we should remember that mōkṣa is kept in mind; and if mōkṣa is my absolute goal; any pursuit which brings me down spiritually, I am to give up, even though it is materially beneficial and therefore all the tāmasic type should be given up at the earliest; including tāmasic āhāra or food; which was mentioned in the 17th chapter.

Then as far as rājasic variety is concerned, one has to slowly transcend the rājasic variety; we are not in a hurry to give up the rājasic variety; it cannot be given up immediately; and it need not be given up immediately also; because the rājasic variety will not pull me down spiritually. Greatest saving grace is the rājasic jñānam, rājasic karma, rājasic sukham; all of them will not pull me down spiritually, the problem with rājasic variety is it will keep me in spiritual stagnation. It will not full me down; but it will slow down the spiritual growth.

And since it will not pull me down spiritually, you can gradually transcend the rājasic variety; and also we should remember, any rājasic pursuit will also have its initial advantage. Even karma-yōga requires rajō-guṇa; therefore I should initially accept rajo guṇa and rājasic lifestyle because to perform karma-yōga, to serve the society, I need rajō-guṇa; and only after the purification of mind, I have to gradually withdraw from rājasic pursuit; therefore since rajō-guṇa is initially useful; we need not be too much antagonist to rajō-guṇa; little bit ok. konjam rajō-guṇa, konjam Gīta class; Therefore be in the world, earn money wealth, be active, contribute something to the Society also; because they are all useful for purification of the mind, but at least konjum Gīta class is required, at least once in a while, you have to devote.

And therefore tāmasic variety give up at the earliest; rājasic variety gradually transcend, sātvic variety is the one you should attempt to come to, because the sātvic jñānam, sātvik karma, sātvik dhṛtiḥ, sātvik sukham, sātvik variety is the stepping stone, which will take you to ultimately mōkṣa. And this indirect teaching you should remember throughout. Kṛṣṇa has talked about three types of jñānam, and Kṛṣṇa has talked about three types of karma, we have completed two topics, from verse No.20 to 22, we had three types of jñānam, from verse No.23 to 25; we had three types of karma.

Now we have to enter into three types of kartā; we will read verse No.26.

Verse 18.26

मुक्तसङ्गोऽनहंवादी धृत्युत्साहसमन्वितः।
सिद्धयसिद्धयोर्निर्विकारः, कर्ता सात्त्विक उच्यते ॥ १८.२६ ॥

muktasaṅgō'nahaṁvādī dhṛtyutsāhasamanvitaḥ|
siddhyasiddhyōrnirvikāraḥ kartā sāttvika ucyatē || 18.26 ||

सात्त्विकः sāttvikaḥ Satvic doer कर्ता उच्यते kartā ucyatē is said to be मुक्तसङ्गः muktasaṅgaḥ one who is free from attachment अनहंवादि anahaṁvādi who is free from egoism, धृत्युत्साहसमन्वितः dhṛtyutsāhasamanvitaḥ who is endowed with will and enthusiasm निर्विकारः nirvikāraḥ who is unaffected सिद्धयसिद्धयोः siddhyasiddhyōḥ in success and failure.

26. Sātvic doer is said to be one who is free from attachment, who is free from egoism, who is endowed with will and enthusiasm, and who is unaffected in success and failure

These three verses 26 to 28, Kṛṣṇa is dealing with three types of kartā; this verse defines sātvika kartā; 27th verse defines rājasa kartā and 28 tāmasa kartā. Really speaking; Kṛṣṇa need not talk about three types of kartā at all, because he has already talked about three types of karma; if you know the three types of karma, you yourself can define three types of kartā. If you know sātvik karma, you will know sātvik kartā. Who is sātvika kartā? The one who performs sātvika karma is sātvika kartā. The one who performs rājasa karma is rājasa karma. So we ourselves can know it, but still Kṛṣṇa feels there will be some brihaspathis who will not understand, and therefore separately He defines three fold kartā.

Who is an sātvika kartā? Muktasāṅgaḥ, the one who uses karma as a temporary means to transcend the karma. The one who uses karma or action only as a temporary means to transcend the karma; because karma is very very useful up to the attainment of citta śuddhi; karma is extremely useful up to the attainment of mental purity; after the attainment of mental purity; karma becomes an obstacle. Why karma is an obstacle? 2 reasons. The first reason is karma or activity makes you extrovert; and you will not have the type or mind to look within to study your real nature. So the first problem with karma is, it makes a person extrovert and even restless; and such a person cannot quietly study the śāstra; śāstric study requires a non-extrovert quiet mind. Therefore karma is an obstacle to vēdāntic study, after a certain level.

And the second reason is karma will only invoke my kartā nature. The more am I involved in karma, the more the kartṛtvaṁ, I am the doer notion is reinforced, whereas the ultimate truth is I am akartā. So since karma invokes the kartā, karma is an obstacle to the discovery of I am akartā truth; and therefore we should remember, I have to use karma for sometimes, purify the mind and thereafter sarvadharmān parityajya; That is why when a sanyāsi comes, the gṛhastha reminds him;

Na karmaṇā na prajayā dhanēna, tyagē naikē amṛtatva mānaśuḥ. And a karma-yōgi is one who knows this fact. And therefore, he does not get attached to any type of karma, because he remembers I have to do this and later, I have to drop this. Like entering into a college is not for becoming permanent student; you have to enter graduate yourself and you have to leave, because next generation of students require space. Therefore mukta saṅgaḥ, the one who is not attached to any profession; one who is not attached to even service activities, because he knows their limitation; such an enlightened person is a karma-yōgi; He is a sātvika kartā; So muktasāṅgaḥ.

Then the next definition of an sātāvika kartā is anahamvādi; the one who does not allow his karma and especially his successful karma to get into his head. Then I have a got a superior profession, when I am a vice president of a company, when I do certain noble activities, there is a chance that it causes ahaṅkāra in me; and I come to know that I have a status in society, as long as I have such a designation; I have a got a status in society; as long as I am a secretary of this Rotary, lions Club, this mission and that mission, the more I have got certain designation and status, there is a possibility that I begin to enjoy that status. And once I fall in love with that particular position and role, I will never like to leave this, because attachment; like the politicians who will not like to give up their position; I will refuse to give up my Presidentship/ Secretaryship that ship and this ship, and that will again become an obstacle; there are many people, who say I am involved in so many organisations Swamiji, President of this, Secretary of this, because of that Gīta class has no time.

Thus the very ego, and the very attachment to status and position will ultimately become an obstacle and therefore karma-yōgi avoids the aham vādaḥ; aham vādaḥ means ahaṅkāra; attachment to the position and the status. And even when somebody glorifies, he does not take the glory, he hands the glory over to the Bhagavān and says that everything happened because of the kṛpa of the Lord. It is not our accomplishment or our success; no doubt we did our might; but ultimately, the glory belongs to the Lord. Therefore karma-yōgi never claims success; karma-yōgi avoids mama kāra. Therefore anahamvādi.

One who has got amānitvam; and often we think we are humble, but arrogance unknowingly get into our head. How do we know that; how do we know? When the people do not acknowledge our contribution, when our name is not read in vote of thanks list, when our photo does not appear in that souvenir, when we do not get the garland on the stage; we feel hurt, and the hurt is the indication of ahaṅkāra coming up; karma-yōgi will never allow that to happen. Therefore anahamvādi. So in short sātāvika kartā is a karma-yōgi.

And at the same time, dhṛtyutsāhasamanvitaḥ. Whether people recognise or acknowledge, whether people reciprocate or not, whether the people have gratitude or not, this person is enthusiastic in his action, dhṛti utsāha samanvitaḥ. Dhṛti means one who has perseverance; one whose enthusiasm is not dampened by failure; if his attempt in any field fails, he will not withdraw, again he will do, again he will do; Kṛṣṇa himself will talk about this will power later; there we will see the details; dhṛtiḥ means will power, perseverance being like a rubber ball.

This example of a wet clay ball and a rubber ball. Put both of them down; what will be the difference; the wet clay ball, once it has fallen on the ground, never comes up; flat; whereas the rubber ball comes up again. Similarly a person who withdraws once there is a failure, he is lacking dhṛti. dhṛtimān is one who repeatedly attempts in spite of failures.

So therefore dhṛti samanvitaḥ, perseverance, utsāha samanvitaḥ; utsāha, enthusiasm, or cheerfulness; the one who is pessimistic; one who is not negative in his approach; the one who is not critical; one who is always positive and optimistic. That cheerful tendency is called utsāhaḥ. Not only he is cheerful; any gloomy person who comes around he converts even the gloomy person into cheerful person. But there are some powerful gloomy people, they will convert even a cheerful person and you will also see the whole world as negative, if they speak to you. You can always see there are some people you talk to them for fifteen minutes, they will say values have gone; people are not sensitive at all, this and that; cheating, they will only talk of negative things.

And a positive person is one who will talk about all positive things that are happening in the creation; creation has got positive events and negative events; your world depends upon what you think; the world remaining the same, mixture of positive and negative, you talk of positive events, you are surrounded by positiveness; if you talk of negative events; you are surrounded by negative things.

Therefore the world that you confront, depends on what you think and what you confront. And you can take a vow that I will talk of only positive things. And it makes a very big difference for you, as well as the people in the family; a Sātvika kartā has only positive views to talk about; dhṛtyutsāhasamanvitaḥ. In TV there are so many MTV programs; they always talk about the negative aspect of TV; but why can't you think that there are so many wonderful things are happening. So many Swamis are giving lectures; So many cultural programs are happening; otherwise on a Guru pūrṇima, seeing a Swami in an āśram is difficult; but you can see in your drawing room. And so many temple kumbabhiṣēkams which you cannot watch, and very nice see in TV and wonderful animals are shown; Kailas Manasover, you can see nicely sitting in the room; why can't you see the positive aspect of TV. You do not see all that; they still complain that TV has spoiled everything; this is called rājasic and tāmasic attitude. See the positive side in everything. Therefore dhṛtyutsāhasamanvitaḥ.

Then siddhyasiddhyōḥ nirvikārah; the one who enjoys a balanced mind; whatever be the consequence of his undertaking. Whether my activities are going to be fruitful or not, I cannot decide; because karmaṇyēvādhikārastē mā phalēṣu kadācana; I can undertake projects but how the consequence will be, I cannot decide; because there are innumerable unknowable and uncontrollable factors; therefore siddhi success and asiddhi failure, they are not in my hands; but how I should respond to them, the response is in my hands. And sātāvika kartā is one who has trained his mind to maintain the balance whatever be the consequence. Therefore nirvikārah means the one who maintains poise. The one who is not seriously affected by the one who is not overwhelmed by, positive result also, the one who is not overwhelmed by negative result.

Remember heart patients gets heart attack because of positive news also. 26 times failed in election; 27th election he won he himself could not believe; he was so happy that he got heart attack and died; elation is harmful for physical and mental health; we should know it well. Elation is also harmful to mental and physical health; depression is also equally harmful; sātāvika kartā is one who has nirvikārah, means what balanced mind. It does not mean that he is emotionless; vēdānta never says you should not have emotions; Vēdānta does not want to make you a rock, that is not the aim; Vēdānta does not want to abolish emotions; and vēdānta cannot abolish emotions also. What vēdānta says is emotions should not cloud your discriminative power. Discrimination is our real wealth; and that power should not be clouded; have emotions but do not allow it to overpower your discrimination. That alone is called nirvikāratvam, balanced mind; and how to maintain the balance Kṛṣṇa does not say that here; because this is 18th chapter, supposed to be summary; and therefore you are not supposed to ask such questions.

If you ask such questions, you have to go back to the third chapter, where Kṛṣṇa has given the answer. What is the answer? When you do the karma, offer your karma to the Lord with what bhāvana; Īṣvarapaṇa bhāvana and even when you offer, you tell your intellect, I have offered the karma to the Lord; karma-phalam is to be decided by the Lord and whatever karma-phalam Bhagavān gives, that is appropriate. Bhagavān is omniscient; he is never unjust, unfair, Therefore whatever experience comes to me, as a result of my action; is what is just and proper. And since it is coming from the Lord, I should not react to that I should accept that without resistance. This Īṣvarapaṇa bhāvana and prasāda bhāvana prepares the mind to face the world with equanimity.

And therefore sātāvika kartā is one who has got Īṣvarapaṇa prasāda bhāvana; that means a sātāvika kartā must be a bhaktaḥ; you can never be a sātāvika kartā, without devotion to God. Therefore karma-yōga presupposes faith in God. Karma-yōga presupposes surrender to God. And therefore such a nirvikārah sātāvikaḥ kartā uchyatē. So thus sātāvika kartā is another name for karma-yōgi.

Verse 18.27

रागी कर्मफलप्रेप्सुः, लुब्धो हिंसात्मकोऽशुचिः ।
हर्षशोकान्वितः कर्ता, राजसः परिकीर्तितः ॥ १८.२७ ॥

rāgī karmaphalaprēpsurlubdhō himsātmakō'suciḥ |
harṣaśōkānvitāḥ kartā rājasaḥ parikīrtitaḥ || 18.27 ||

राजसः कर्ता rājasaḥ kartā Rājasic doer परिकीर्तितः parikīrtitaḥ is said to be रागी rāgī one who has attachment, कर्मफलप्रेप्सुः karmaphalaprēpsuḥ who is desirous of the results of actions लुब्धः lubdhaḥ who is greedy हिंसात्मकः himsātmakaḥ harmful अशुचिः aśuciḥ impure हर्षशोकान्वितः harṣaśōkānvitāḥ and subject to elation and depression

27. Rājasic doer is said to be one who has attachment, who is desirous of the results of actions, who is greedy, harmful, impure and subject to elation and depression.

Sātvika kartā has an important attitude which rājasa kartā does not have. According to sātvika kartā, successes and failures in life are both capable of teaching me valuable lessons. Therefore we need not try to avoid failures in life; because of two reasons:

First reason is failures cannot be avoided. Failures cannot be avoided is one important thing; and the second important thing is failures need not be avoided; because failures are also useful for learning and growing. And therefore if I use failures for learning and growing; that inward growth is a real spiritual success. So if I use failure for inner growth; in the vision of Vēdānta; it is a success, it is a successful failure. If you can convert failures for learning and growing inwardly, because you have grown up inwardly, you have attained spiritual success. And therefore why should I try to avoid failures in life. No doubt, I will work for success; but I am not totally against failure.

Therefore according to vēdānta; the real success in life is using the external successes and failures for inner growth; meditate on this well. According to vēdānta; the real success in life is, converting external successes and external failures as inner growth or inner learning.

It is like a person playing a tennis game; for physical fitness; now imagine this example it is beautiful. When two people are playing tennis, there are twofold results. What are the two results? one result is out of the game, one person become victor and the other person is defeated, vanquished, he loses the game; This is one result; either I get victory or I fail and lose the cup Wimbledon, either I am Federer or Philopopuse, there are the two possibilities. Both cannot get the Wimbledon cup. Cup is the result No.1.

The second is: the very play gives me physical fitness; and therefore imagine, two people are playing game, and as far as the physical fitness or exercise is concerned, that benefit will come to whom, the successful person or failure; both people will get one benefit; what is that? They are getting exercise and physical fitness; if I am playing for physical fitness, I am going to get that benefit anyway; whether the cup comes or not; becomes what? Secondary. If I am playing the game for exercise.

Similarly in life, any karma can give twofold benefit. One benefit is success or failure; that is one thing. And the other is what? Whether I get success or failure, all the karmas help me for mental fitness; or mental purification. Successful action also will help in mental purity; and failure also will give mental purity. In fact, failure gives better purity, because you get toughened. In failure you get opportunity to toughen yourself.

Karma-yōgi is interested in inner growth; which is definite whether the karma is successful or failure; therefore karma-yōgi is ever successful. Just as the tennis play gives me physical fitness; whether the result is success or failure, a karma-yōgi is always successful because whether he is materialistically successful or failure, he is growing inwardly. Whereas a non-karma-yōgi, a karmī is one who does not know how to learn and grow inwardly.

Therefore he is attached to material successes in life; and once you are attached to external success, you have always problems because, external successes are not definite. Whether you will succeed or not is not definite, if you get success you are on the top of the world, and if you do not get you are shattered; you are going to face problems ultimately, even if you are going to get success, until success comes, tension cannot be avoided. Therefore, stress and strain are unavoidable for a karmī; And such a karmī who is always in stress and strain, Kṛṣṇa calls rājasa kartā.

Now look at the slōkā: rāgī, the one who is attached to material success; interested in external success; full of attachment, and karmaphalaprēpsuḥ, the one who values the external possessions more than the internal growth.

Because he does not know the fundamental principle, that peace happiness and security, do not depend upon on what I have, (I have told you earlier), peace security and happiness on what I have but they depend upon what I am. This difference this karmi does not know. Therefore he thinks the externals will determine his peace of mind. Therefore karmaphalaprēpsuḥ, the one who is after name, fame, possession, position, status, etc. karmaphalaprēpsuḥ;

then lubdhaḥ, extremely greedy; the one who has got tremendous mamakāra; and therefore he is committed to one way traffic, one way traffic means everything must come to me; and nothing must go from me. Money should go on coming; should not go at all; So such a greedy-cum-miserly person, lubdhaḥ, is the mixture of these two; greediness, he wants to get more and more and miserliness means what the one who wants to give less and less; such a person is called lubdhaḥ because of his misconception that possessions give security.

Then the next one himsātmaḥ; once greed comes, he will be a threat to the society; so he will start violating dharma; because by legitimate earning, you cannot amaze wealth, therefore initially you work for legitimate earning; but gradually we will go in for compromise also, as Kṛṣṇa said in the third chapter,

श्री भगवानुवाच --

काम एष क्रोध एष रजोगुणसमुद्भवः ।
महाशनो महापाप्मा विद्ध्येनमिह वैरिणम् ॥ ३.३७ ॥

Śrī Bhagavān Uvāca
kāma ēṣa krōdha ēṣa rajōguṇasamudbhavaḥ |
mahāśanō mahāpāpmā viddhyēnamiha vairiṇam || 3.37 ||

A greedy person will start compromising with dharma and that is himsa; himsa means harm to the society. Himsātmaḥ, and aśuciḥ; aśuciḥ means what? One whose thoughts are detrimental to himself; he will start losing faith in the other people. Everyone around, every partner he begins to doubt. What will I do, if he takes and go; he will not have trust on anyone; he will like to keep the money under the pillow; therefore jealousy comes and doubt comes. Thus the mind is always restless; therefore aśuciḥ, tension ridden; and harṣaśōkānviṭaḥ. So the one whose mind goes through violent ups and downs, harṣa means elation and śōkā means depreciation.

And therefore his mind is all the time restless and because of that also he becomes himsātmaḥ, he is terribly irritable person; he loses patience; and he becomes a volcano, as everybody he whips up all problems; living around him, not only he is tension ridden; people around also will become tensed up. Swamiji said; whenever he comes, the children runs inside; the wife cannot run in; because somebody has to receive him; or again he will get angry; so all the time irritable. Therefore harṣaśōkānviṭaḥ kartā rājasāḥ parikīrtitaḥ; he is rājasic person.

Verse 18.28

अयुक्तः प्राकृतः स्तब्धः शठो नैष्कृतिकोऽलसः ।
विषादी दीर्घसूत्री च कर्ता तामस उच्यते ॥ १८.२८ ॥

ayuktaḥ prākṛtaḥ stabdhaḥ śaṭhō naiṣkṛtikō'lasaḥ |
viṣādī dīrghasūtrī ca kartā tāmasa ucyatē || 18.28 ||

तामसः कर्ता tāmasaḥ kartā Tāmasic doer उच्यते ucyatē is said to be अयुक्तः ayuktaḥ one who is undisciplined प्राकृतः prākṛtaḥ uncultured, स्तब्धः stabdhaḥ arrogant शठः śaṭhaḥ deceptive नैष्कृतिकः naiṣkṛtikaḥ harmful अलसः alasaḥ indolent विषादि viṣādi depressed च दीर्घसूत्री ca dīrghasūtrī and procrastinating.

28. Tāmasīc doer is said to be one who is undisciplined, uncultured, arrogant, deceptive, harmful, indolent, depressed and procrastinating.

Tāmasa kartā is defined in this verse; ayuktaḥ, the one who does not have an integrated personality; yuktaḥ means a person whose personality; whose various layers of personality work in harmony; we have seen annamaya kōśa; prāṇamaya kōśa; manōmaya kōśa; vijñānamaya kōśa; five layers are there. When all the five layers work in uniformity; there is a reinforced effect. So when I look at the deity, and also when my mouth is chanting the nama of the Lord, and when the mind is also focused, the effect is much more. Like a lens converging the rays of the Sun and it becomes more powerful.

Whereas this tāmasīc person has never attempted to integrate the personality; because integration of the personality requires lot of effort. First starting with a symbol discipline; whatever I talk, I will think and talk; I will deliberately talk; I will not impulsively use words. Try this as a lesson, how it does not work. Thereafter we regret also. Very simple discipline that every word that comes out of my mouth will be deliberate; deliberate means the 17th chapter, anudvēgakaram vākyaṃ, satyaṃ, hitaṃ, priyaṃ. I will take into account before a word comes out of my mouth; practising this simple discipline is yōgaḥ; and thereafter at the sensory level, at the body level, when there is convergence; that discipline is called yōgaḥ; and the one who has practiced this successfully is called yuktaḥ.

And tāmasīc person is a ayuktaḥ; and why? Because he is lazy; because it requires effort; to talk uncontrolled is easy. I felt like talking, therefore I talked, is easy. I felt like saying this mind; but at the last moment, it has come up to the tongue tip, then I decided not to talk. It requires tremendous self-control; and especially when arguments begin. Disagreements begin. Differences of opinion begins; and it is getting heated up and my words are getting out of control; at that time I am able to note that things are going out of control, if I can say, that things are out of control; stop, we will take up this issue tomorrow. If I can do that, it indicates tremendous sense control. It requires tremendous sātva guṇa; and a tāmasīc person can never imagine such things; so he is ayuktaḥ.

And therefore only prākṛtaḥ; prākṛtaḥ means uncultured person; because he does not filter his words; therefore what is proper word? What is improper word? all those filtering he cannot do, he is a wild, uncultured and unrefined person; and I hear even those people who study Gīta for years, some members in the family say, that this person uses unutterable words when he is angry. And I am not able to imagine such words can come out of 22 year old, his age is 72 years; 22 year old means three times he has completed the course, if at all words come, unprintable, unutterable words come, that means what, no control. Remember Gītā study is not for writing notes; I should be able to monitor every moment of my life; that requires tremendous alertness; and this person does not have that alertness in life. Attending Gītā requires only one hour but alertness is not for one hour, not for two hours, not for three hours, it is throughout the waking period; it is throughout the waking period.

What a responsibility a Gītā student has; and tāmasic person cannot imagine, so he is not a saṁskṛta puruṣa; he is a prākṛtaḥ puruṣa; He is an animal man, not a man-man. When an animal feels like doing something, it does not think whether it is right time or wrong time. When the dog feels like barking, it is not going to think, Gītā class is running near, and I will bark after 7 p.m. No. Kanpona pokkile... whatever it feels like doing, whether it wants to go for No.1 or No.2, it goes. manuṣya is supposed to know; Roads are used for those things; we are supposed to know what is proper and what is improper; If I do not have that control; I am called a prākṛtaḥ puruṣa; In fact, mōkṣa can be seen later, first we have to convert ourselves from prākṛtaḥ puruṣa to saṁskṛta puruṣa; a self-restrained human being is the first growth; then Aham Brahmāsmi etc. are a long way; phir dēkheñēḥ.

Therefore prākṛtaḥ and sthbdaha and if even there is somebody willing to help the person refine, I will give exercise for refinement. In fact the entire religious exercise is for the conversion of prākṛtaḥ puruṣa to saṁskṛta puruṣa. Religion is to convert a prākṛtaḥ puruṣa to saṁskṛta puruṣa. Right from getting up in the morning, we should decide when to get up. Today 10 a.m. I feel like getting up and after coffee wants to go to bed again. Whenever I feel like getting up, I getting up, even sleeping and waking up, I have to have self-control.

And then, eating. Whenever you do not want, you eat, there is a right time, there is hunger. Many people do not know what is hunger; because there is no opportunity. because constantly time-pass. Whenever nothing else to do, go on keeping the mouth occupied. So you do not know what is hunger.

Therefore start discipline in three levels; kāma cāra, kama vādha, kama bhakṣa, you give up. When he takes the sacred thread, he has to do that. Now 7 O'clock and I have to restrain my tongue.

Hari Om

225 Chapter 18, Verses 28-31

After talking about three types of jñānam and three types of karma, now Lord Kṛṣṇa has come to the topic of three types of kartā; kartā means a doer. A sāvika, rājasika and tāmasika kartā are defined. Of them we have already seen the sāvika kartā, in the 26th verse, and we saw that a karma-yōgi is a sāvika kartā. One who makes use of his karma as a means for spiritual growth and thereafter in the 27th verse, rājasika kartā was talked about. He is one who does not know the importance of spiritual growth, and therefore the one who considers material accomplishments alone as the ultimate thing in life. This confused person, this person for whom the priorities are not clear, such a kartā is rājasika kartā.

And then in the 28th verse, the tāmasika kartā is defined which I introduced in the last class. We will see the meaning of this verse No.28. Tāmasaḥ kartā ucyatē. Tāmasic karma is of the above description and what is the description? Ayukthaḥ, Ayukthaḥ means the one whose different layers of personality are not integrated. Yōgaḥ means integration, harmonisation, and we have different layers of personality, viz., annamaya kōśa, the physical personality, prāṇamaya kōśa, the prāṇic personality, manōmaya kōśa, the emotional and sensory personality; vijñāmaya kōśa, the rational intellectual personality; these different personalities put together is the individual. If all these layers are functioning in harmony, I will be able to succeed in whatever I undertake; otherwise these different layers of personalities will work at cross-purposes. Whatever one personality plans and implements, the other personality will neutralise and therefore I will not progress anywhere; like riding a stationary horse. Lot of things will be done, but I am where I am.

And therefore the integration of personality is a very important thing and this integration does not take place automatically. Physical growth is an automatic consequence, if you survive and eat properly. The weight will increase gradually in spite of us; we will not be able to stop. The physical growth is a natural consequence; whereas the integration of personality is not a natural thing, we have to work hard to achieve this; the entire aṣṭāṅga-yōga prescribed by Patanjali is meant for the health and integration of personality; and aṣṭāṅga -yōga practice requires initiative; and a tāmasic person is one who lacks initiative, who lacks motivation; who is an embodiment of laziness.

And that is why Kṛṣṇa says later: alasaḥ. In fact one has to take the word alasaḥ first; which means lazy. And because of his laziness, there is no motivation, there is no initiative and therefore he does not work for the attunement of his personality, Therefore ayukthaḥ; not an integrated person; not a whole person; w h o l e; He is full of holes!. Because of that he cannot plan for his future; Life involves planning, we should be clear about the immediate goal as well as long term goal, this person either does not have goal, or he does not know how to work for the goal. So planning is zero, implementation is also zero; either planning is there, there is no implementation, or there is implementation without planning. Directionless work, He lacks both neither planning nor implementation. Such a directionless person is called ayuktaḥ; and you ask that person what do you want in life; he is not sure; and he has survived 70 years; and that is the great. Still he is not sure what he or she wants in life. Such a person is called ayuktaḥ; because of alasaṭvam.

Then prākṛtaḥ; prākṛtaḥ means one who is unrefined person; the one who does not have refinement in social interaction; social interaction requires refinement, in our tradition, we call it ācāra anuṣṭānam. In modern language, they call it etiquette and manners. If you say ācāra and anuṣṭānam, people will look down upon it; people will criticise, especially youngsters, they laugh at ācāra and anuṣṭānam. If we give up our ācāra and anuṣṭānam, we will have to learn the western etiquettes and manners and what is etiquettes and manners; ācāra and anuṣṭānam; and therefore you have to take a course; how to eat, what are the table manners; where to put the cloth, and when there is something struck in your mouth, and you cannot swallow and you have to bring out, what is the right manner; can you spit there; or what should I do? Books and books are written on table manners and all our youngsters who criticise ācāra anuṣṭānam, they are lapping up those manners. how to attend an interview; how to attend a business meeting; and if you want to address someone, how to address; should you call by the first name, second name, (what is the first name, what is the second name, what is the third name) should I say Mr. should I say Mrs. how to address, and if you want to introduce five people, who must be introduced first, rules are there.

And Indian ācāra anuṣṭānam, they will say pāpam will come, there they will say, you will lose your business; both are same. If you have to be successful business, you should learn all these things. I do not know whether you are reading the letters in the newspapers. How to take a phone, and if there is a person on the other side, senior, how to address, junior how to address, what is this? This is ācāra anuṣṭānam. Otherwise you are supposed to be a mannerless person; not only we talk about verbal language, body language also; how to sit in front of your boss; sitting manner, talking manners, sneezing manners; for every sneezing you have to say sorry; for everything ācāra anuṣṭānam; because it is supposed to be social lubrication.

Every society has got its own ācāra anuṣṭānam; some of them have logical basis, for many of them utterly there is no logic, it is a sheer custom. Similarly we also had our own customs and manners; man will have to learn and follow. A tāmasic person is one who does not know those manners. Those etiquettes and such a person is called uncultured, unrefined person, prākṛtaḥ. And one who knows is a saṁskṛta puruṣaḥ and tāmasic person is prākṛtaḥ.

And next is stabdhaḥ, means the one who is absolutely impolite. So in manners they talk about polite manners, how loud you are supposed to talk, there is politeness, how you are supposed to talk in front of elderly person; all those things they prescribe. In our dharma śāstra also, in front of our parents, what should be the body language? Exactly like western system; we have got our own system; whether to keep the hands in front or back, this is the big problem; and in front of your guru, what should be the right manner. And what is politeness, what is humility, what is reverential attitude; our dharma śāstra, elaborately talks about; manners and etiquettes. And this person is absolutely ignorant of it; and does not follow also. Therefore stabdhaḥ means, the one who does not have reverential attitude or polite manners. One who is arrogant or impolite.

Then śaṭhaḥ; śaṭhaḥ means one who has got two motives in all his activities; one is expressed motive, and the other is hidden motive; Parallely two motives; always expressed motive is one; and behind an expressed motive, there is a hidden motive also; a split personality, a hypocritical personality is called śatvatvam which is considered a great disadvantage for spiritual growth, because it weakens the individual; there is a tremendous strain in the person. Therefore śaṭhatvam. Mayāvithyam; vakratha is called śaṭhatvam.

Then naiṣkṛtikaḥ; naiṣkṛtikaḥ; one who is harmful, one who is a hindrance to others' pursuit of their goals. This person does not have any goals. This person does not have any direction. Therefore all the time he is available for rumours and gossips. Ok. He is wasting the time; but he will be a obstacle to other; he will just enter into another's room, when he is busy and especially in India, we do not have respect for another's time; I am a little free; so I thought that I should come and see; he does not ask whether you have time or not. He does not ask, even in phone, whenever you feel like talking, you just ring, and go on and go on without any full stop. Not only he wastes his time, he wastes another's time also. Thus one who is a hindrance to others' pursuit; one who obstructs another's pursuit. Naiṣkṛtikaḥ.

And then alasaḥ; alasaḥ I have already told the one who is lazy; the greatest enemy to spiritual growth is laziness; I have talked about this before; ālasyam hi manuṣyāṅām śārīrastō mahān ripuḥ.

In everybody's body, laziness is inbuilt; and that laziness comes to play right from getting up in the morning; there the struggle begins; the body tells sleep some more time; sleep some more time; only 8 a.m! Why should we get up now itself? Only 8 a.m.! So early in the morning, why are you getting up; whereas our culture says you have to welcome the sun God when he comes; therefore, Laziness is the biggest obstacle for spirituality and all rituals are kept for driving away laziness. All śāriram karma is meant for driving away tamōguṇa at the body level; Even though it is logically true that mānasa karma is more efficacious; mental pūja, mental japa, that is supposed to be efficacious, but still our scriptures say for some time, you will have to do physical pūja; you have to go to temple, because only then the tamō-guṇa will go away. And this tāmasic person is against rituals; rituals are extremely important to develop satva-guṇa. Therefore this person is alasaḥ.

Then the next one viṣādi; viṣādaḥ means gloom; despondency; depression, etc. work or an active life is considered to be antidote for depression; Psychologists or counselors also they say, if you get depression often, they say you take up some activity; even if you do not have to earn money, at least take up some service activity, work is supposed to be an antidote to depression; pessimism, negative attitude; a tāmasic person does not have work; or at least he does not work and therefore the mind often gets depressed; viṣādi means embodiment of gloom.

And the unfortunate thing is that not only he is gloomy, but he freely distributes that gloom to others also. Even a cheerful person talks to someone, you also pull a long way. So viṣāda is an attendant problem of tamō-guṇa; so viṣādi, then dhīrghasūtrī; and when you try to change the character of this tamō-guṇa, you ask him to take up some work, because tamō-guṇa has to be converted first into rajō-guṇa.

From tamō-guṇa you can never directly go to satva-guṇa. Therefore do not talk about sanyāsa to him; because already he is a sanyāsi, do not talk about meditation, in the name of meditation, he will lose further. Therefore, never talk about satva-guṇa; you talk about rajō-guṇa and whip him into activity. Leave him lot of worldly desires; do not talk of vairāgyam to tamō guṇi; you have to talk of kāmaḥ. Let him develop worldly desires; give him desires. In fact, vēdā pūrva bhāga, prescribes lot of desires for tamō-guṇa people. In fact, we start with tamō-guṇa. That is why vēdā pūrva bhāga is full of desires and action to fulfil them; and the problem with tāmasic person is what he will listen to you; and he will say wonderful plan, I will implement from January 1st, 2004. It is extremely difficult to push him into activity, he is the greatest procrastinator. Any work you give him to do now, he will say that it is rāhu kālam or guliha kālam, etc. or yamakandam or Tuesday or something or the other, he is the greatest procrastinator in the world. And by the time he implements somebody will come, he will pass it on to others. Very very difficult, therefore Kṛṣṇa says, Dhīrghasūtrī; procrastination is an indication of tamō-guṇa; and all these things who has got, he is called tāmasic kartā; so with this, three types of kartā is over.

Now Kṛṣṇa enters into the next topic, verse No.29.

Verse 18.29

बुद्धेर्भेदं धृतेश्चैव गुणतस्त्रिविधं शृणु ।
प्रोच्यमानमशेषेण पृथक्त्वेन धनञ्जय ॥ १८.२९ ॥

Buddhērbhēdam dhṛtēścaiva guṇatastrividham śṛṇu |
prōcyamānamaśēṣēṇa pṛthaktvēna dhanañjaya || 18.29 ||

धनञ्जय dhanañjaya Oh Arjuna शृणु śṛṇu listen to त्रिविधं भेदम् trividham bhēdam the threefold division बुद्धेः of buddhēḥ intellect च एव धृतेः ca ēva dhṛtēḥ and of will गुणतः guṇataḥ according to the Guṇas, प्रोच्यमानम् prōcyamānam taught by Me, अशेषेण aśēṣēṇa completely पृथक्त्वेन (pṛthaktvēna) and distinctly

29. Oh Arjuna Listen to the threefold division of intellect and of will according to the guṇas, taught (by Me) completely and distinctly.

In the 19th verse, Kṛṣṇa promised three topics. In the 19th verse Kṛṣṇa said jñānam jñēyam pariñātā trividhā karmacōdanā; Arjuna I will talk about three types of jñānam and three types of karma and three types of kartā, and all those 9 items Kṛṣṇa has completed with the 28th verse.

Now Kṛṣṇa introduces another two more topics. Totally how many topics we have seen; we started with three types of sanyāsa; that was topic No.1; then we talked about three types of jñānam, karma, and kartā; 4 topics we have seen.

Now Kṛṣṇa introduces two more topics, what are the, buddhērbhēdam means division or classification of buddhiḥ. Buddhiḥ means intellect or the intelligence; the intellect of a human or the intelligence of a human being can be classified into three. On what basis? guṇathaha trividam, based on the three guṇas; which means sātvika buddhiḥ, rājasa buddhiḥ and tāmasa buddhiḥ, I will talk about.

Not only three types of intellect; dhṛtēścaiva; dhṛti means Will power; perseverance. So Will power is an extremely important qualification to sustain any pursuit until the goal is accomplished; Because when we take to any pursuit to accomplish the goal, there are bound to be obstacles; there is no pursuit without obstacles; unless will power is there; obstacles will be too big for me; the moment, I see the slightest obstacle, three miles away, I withdraw here itself.

When we learn to ride cycles; when we have learned fresh; if there is a kuthira vandi, not even a bus, cycle rickshaw or cart, we get down here itself. Similarly a person without willpower will not succeed, until the will power is very strong. And Kṛṣṇa says that this will power is also threefold; sātvika, rājasa, tāmasa dhṛtiḥ; Even to come to the class regularly, in spite of obstacles, requires tremendous will power; otherwise slightest excuse class is dropped. One sneeze day-before-yesterday. Some excuse or the other;

first casualty is what? Gīta class. Food, there is no problem. Will power is required. You all have great will power.

So dhṛtēścaiva guṇatastrividhaṃ śṛṇu. This is also divided based on the three guṇas;

Prōcyamānamaśēṣēṇa; these six items, trividha buddhi, trividha dhṛti, these six items are going to be explained by me. Going to be explained by me. pra vach datu; present passive participle. They are going to be told by me; aśēṣēṇa; in totality. Not that I am going to tell two or three and leave the rest for your home work. No homework at all; all the six items I myself will teach you. What a compassion. Because Kṛṣṇa knows that you do not have time to do homework. So aśēṣēṇa prōcyamānam.

And that all also pṛthaktvēna, very distinctly very clearly they are going to be taught by me. Your job is giving your mind and ears to me. Give and mind and ears to me. I shall enlighten you. Hey dhanañjaya; he Arjuna. Thus this is an introduction to the next six topics.

That is the next two topics divided into six. We will see one by one.

Verse 18.30

प्रवृत्तिं च निवृत्तिं च कार्याकार्ये भयाभये ।
बन्धं मोक्षं च या वेत्ति बुद्धिः सा पार्थ सात्त्विकी ॥ १८.३० ॥

[pravṛttiṃ ca nivṛttiṃ ca kāryākāryē bhayābhayē |
bandhaṃ mōkṣaṃ ca yā vētti buddhiḥ sā pārtha sāttvikī || 18.30 ||](#)

पार्थ pārtha O Arjuna ! सात्त्विकी बुद्धिः sāttvikī buddhiḥ Sattvic intellect, सा sā is that, या वेत्ति yā vētti which knows प्रवृत्तिं च pravṛttiṃ ca action च निवृत्तिम् ca nivṛttiṃ and renunciation. कार्याकार्ये kāryākāryē the prescribed and the prohibited भयाभये bhayābhayē (the source of) fear and fearlessness च बन्धं मोक्षम् ca bandhaṃ mōkṣam – as well as bondage and liberation.

30. Oh Arjuna! Sātvic intellect is that which knows action and renunciation, the prescribed and the prohibited, (the source of) fear and fearlessness, as well as bondage and liberation.

First Kṛṣṇa takes up the topic of buddhi or intellect. And he classifies that into three; the first one is sātvika intellect; verse No.30 defines a sātvik intellect; 31 will deal with rājasic and the next tāmasic.

In our scriptures, intellect is given a very very important place; because intellect is the one which has to be very clear about what is the ultimate goal of life; and what are the incidental goals and what is the ultimate goal? Clarity regarding the destination must be there for the intellect; just as before taking your vehicle and driving; you should know where you want to go. Suppose you say I am taking the car; where are you going, if you do not know.

Before you start, whether the car should turn to the right or left; will depend upon what destination you have; not only destination must be very clear; the path also must be very clear. Clarity with regard to the means and the end is extremely important for success in life. And that is why in our tradition, not only they taught various occupations in life, they also discussed what is the ultimate goal of life; they discussed what is dharma, kāma, artā, and mōkṣa, the caturvida puruṣārthās; the four fold human goals are introduced in the brahmacharya āśrama itself; and when a student comes out of the education, he knew what is the immediate goal, and he also knew what is the ultimate goal. And that is why in the Kathōpaniṣad; buddhi is compared to the driver; the driver must be informed and also the driver must be sober. Sober, you know!

Informed drunken driver, information is useless; not only he must be informed, information is intellectual qualification, and he should not be drunken driver means, it is an emotional qualification; I should have a high IQ and I should have a high EQ also. Emotionally balanced and intellectually enlightened person with regard to the goals and the means is important.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa says, sā buddhiḥ sātṭvikī; sātṭvik intellect is that yā vētti; which is well informed regarding the following item; following factors: an intellect which is well informed with regard to the following factors.

What are those factors? No.1 pravṛttiṁ ca, pravṛtti means karma mārgaḥ; what can you accomplish through a life of activity; through a life of activity, you can accomplish many things; and through a life of activity, you cannot accomplish many things. What karma can achieve; what karma cannot achieve; this clarity must be there.

Otherwise, I will not intelligently utilise karma. After all, karma is a means, I will use a means properly, only if I know what this instrument can do and what this instrument can't do. That clarity should be there. Similarly, nivṛttiṁ means jñāna mārgaḥ; the path of knowledge. By knowledge, knowledge regarding the truth of oneself; regarding the truth of the world; and the truth of God. This jñāna mārga one should know the power of knowledge. While introducing Dayānada Swamiji's lecture series, I gave the example of the cat hoarding; one should know the power of knowledge. Therefore Nivṛthi means jñāna mārga; What jñāna can give; what karma cannot give; what jñānam can give; what jñānam cannot give; Clarity should be there.

Then the next one kāryākāryē; once I have chosen karma mārga, there also the scriptures talk about two types of karma. One type of karma or activity which will take you towards the spirituality more and more; spiritual-friendly karma. So karma which will take you towards spirituality more and more; a life style by following which you will gradually develop interest in the scriptures, gradually develop interest in the Gīta, gradually develop interest in sanyāsis; develop interest in sanyāsa; at least in sanyāsis, that karma which takes you towards spiritual knowledge, is one type of karma, there is another type of karma, which will take you more and more away from spirituality. You get and more and more steeped in materialism. So therefore, spiritual-unfriendly karma,

कृतिमहोदधौ पतनकारणम् ।
फलमशाश्वतं गतिनिरोधकम् ॥ २ ॥

[kṛtimahōdadhau patanakāraṇam |
phalamaśāśvataṁ gatinirōdhakam || 2 || Upadēśa Sāram or Rāmaṇa.](#)

That karma which takes you towards spirituality is called karma-yōgaḥ. That yōga suffix indicates you are involved in such activities which is making you more and more spiritually oriented and I should have a clear knowledge regarding what is spiritual-friendly-karma and what is spiritually-unfriendly-karma, I should know. So therefore, kāryākāryē; kāryam, that which is to be done, for spiritual growth and akāryam means that which should be avoided; if I am interested in spiritual growth.

There are many karmas which will help me earn a lot of money; there are many karmas which will help me earn a lot of money, which will give me status in society; which will give me power, name, respect and all of them, but they are unfriendly, they are obstacle to spiritual growth. I should be able to identify them; and avoid them, however tempting they may be; which requires knowledge and conviction. And therefore kāryākāryē.

And then bhayābhayē; one of the things that every human being instinctively seeks is security; there is a fundamental sense of insecurity right from birth; because of which alone we held on to the mother's sari. Whatever happens, we held on to it. There are some children, even when the mother is away, child keeps the bit of saree; or sucks the thump. That thump sucking is an indication of that; it feels the mother is around.

So this insecurity is one thing; and unfortunately or fortunately, what happens is we accomplish many things in life; but the insecurity continues. Previously I was worried about my security; Now I am worried about the security of my possessions; that is the only difference. In fact, I accomplished acquired those things, for the sake of my security. Now I am worried about the security of those possessions. Or security of those people who are supposed to give me security. That means what insecurity seems to be lingering thought. Even in old age that continues.

That means what? We are not clear regarding what is the source of security and what is the cause of insecurity. What will give me security, I do not know clearly. Many things I thought to be source of security; but I find it is not; and who is or what is satvik intellect, satvik intellect knows what is the source of security. And it also knows what cannot give security. So bhayābhayē; bhayam means that which is not source of security; that which is source of insecurity; and abhayam means what which is a source of security; these two sātvik intellect knows; the other one is not clear. Therefore, lifelong it is groping in darkness and experimentation.

Then the next question is what is source of security? Whatever is secure in itself, that alone can give me security. An insecure person can never give me security. ஒரு பயன்தாம் கொள்ளி வந்து பயப்படாதே பயப்படாதே என்று சொன்னால், நமது பயம் போகுமா? Oru bhayanthakulli, says do not be afraid, do not be afraid, etc. and that too his teeth are chattering; how will anyone have confidence in him.

How can an insecure person give security? Therefore the only source of security is the ever secure one, and the ever secure one is the immortal, infinite one alone; which we either call God in religious language, or Brahman in philosophical language. Brahman or God alone can give security; and other than that, any blessed thing can never give ābrahma bhuvanāt lōkāḥ.

Kṛṣṇa said in the 8th chapter, you go to Brahma lōka as Brahmāji, the creator himself; even that will not solve the problem of insecurity; because he also has to vacate his post one day; and once the retirement age comes, even before two-three years, something happens. What will happen to me after retirement? I will lose my respect, even in family respect will go.

यावद्वित्तोपार्जन सक्तः
स्तावन्निज परिवारो रक्तः |

yāvadvittōpārjana saktāḥ
stāvannija parivārō raktāḥ |
paścājjīvatī jarjara dēhē
vārtām kō:'pi na pṛcchati gēhē ||5||

I do not want to frighten you by going into the details. So let us remember God is the only source of security; world can never give security. This clarity the one who has got a satvik intellect and that is called bhayābhaya jñānam.

Then bandhaṁ mōkṣaṁ ca; banda means what? Cause of bondage. It is almost the same of bhayam. And mōkṣaṁ means the cause of liberation. So what is the cause of bondage? What is the cause of liberation? Our misconception is dependence on external factors will give me strength; happiness, freedom; therefore we travel from dependence to more dependence, attachment to more attachment. Dvaitam to more dvaitam, we think that is liberation; and the fact is dvaitam and dependence on external factors is bondage.

Therefore our aim in life is learning to reduce dependence. Therefore learning to drop things, not to hold on to more things. More the crutches, greater the bondage. Lesser the crutches, lesser the bondage, no crutch; no bondage; I should be able to say போனால் போகட்டும் போடாபொறன் தேன் நான் நம்பி யாரை; போங்கடா, போங்க. pōṇāḷ pōkaṭṭum pōṭā..... yārai nampi nāṇ poraṇṭēṇ; pōṅkaṭā, pōṅka. When the world blackmails me, I should not be victimised; you are around or not; I am free. Tyāga gives me freedom; not acquisition; lābha does not give freedom; tyāga gives freedom.

न कर्मणा न प्रजया धनेन, त्यगे नैके अमृतत्व मानशुः

na karmaṇā na prajāyā dhanēna, tyagē naikē amṛtatva mānaśuḥ

Materialistic people think, possessions give strength; spiritual teachings say that renunciation gives strength; I am not asking you to drop all these things; what I am saying psychologically I should be able to drop attachment; therefore bandham mōkṣam ca yā vētti buddhiḥ sā pārtha sātvikī. At least there is clarity regarding the goal.

Verse 18.31

यया धर्ममधर्मं च कार्यं चाकार्यमेव च ।
अयथावत्प्रजानाति बुद्धिः सा पार्थ राजसी ॥ १८.३१ ॥

[yayā dharmamadharmaṁ ca kāryaṁ cākāryamēva ca |
ayathāvat prajānāti buddhiḥ sā pārtha rājasī || 18.31 ||](#)

पार्थ pārtha Oh Arjuna! राजसि बुद्धिः rājasī buddhiḥ Rājasic knowledge सा यया sā yayā by which अयथावत् प्रजानाति ayathāvat prajānāti one wrongly understands, धर्मं च अधर्मम् dharma ca adharmam dharma (what is right) and adharmam (what is wrong), एव च कार्यम् ēva ca kāryam as well as the prescribed च अकार्यम् ca akāryam and the prohibited

31. Oh Arjuna! Rājasic intellect is that by which one wrongly understands dharma and adharmam as well as the prescribed and the prescribed and the prohibited.

Rājasic intellect is that, which is riddled with doubts. So which does not have clear knowledge about anything; it has got lot of information regarding lot of things. Even in spiritual life, the intellect is informed about lot of sādhanā, but there is no knowledge which sādhanā is meant for which sādhyam. We know a lot about japa sādhanā; meditation is a sādhanā; pilgrimage is sādhanā; study of scriptures is sādhanā, so many things are there; but what will lead me to what destination, there is no clarity or there is confusion.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa says a confused intellect, a doubting intellect, an intellect with doubt is rājasic intellect. And doubts with regard to what, dharma adharmam ca; dharma means a lifestyle which will lead to spiritual growth; dharma is a stepping stone to mōkṣa; and adharma is that which takes me away from spiritual growth; adharma may give me lot of money; adharma may give me position; power; but adharma takes me away from spiritual growth. Therefore, an intellect which does not know what is dharma and adharma; and kāryam and akāryam cha; kāryam means what is to be done, and akāryam means what is not to be done; the do's and don'ts.

Dharmam and adharmam are do's and don't from scriptural angle; kāryam and akāryam are do's and don'ts from the common sense angle. Even by using common sense we can know what is to be done and what is not to be done. And a rājasic intellect is confused with regard to śāstriya kāryam akārya and lōkika do's and don't. With regard to both, there are infinite doubts. Ayathāvat prajānāti.

Why there is doubt? Because there is half knowledge; total knowledge is also bliss; total ignorance is also bliss; total knowledge is also bliss; that is the bliss experienced by a jñāni. Because he has total knowledge; total ignorance is also bliss, it is the one which is experienced by whom? The one who sleeps; when I am in sleep; I have total ignorance; that is why sleep is bliss; but what is the problem? half knowledge and half ignorance is problem. And therefore ayathāvat means incompletely it knows everything. And such an intellect, sā buddhiḥ pārtha, hey Arjuna; is rājasi buddhiḥ.

And next comes the tāmasic intellect, which we will see in the next class.

Hari Om

226 Chapter 18, Verses 31-34

ॐ

Lord Kṛṣṇa talked about three types of jñānam or knowledge; three types of karma or action and three types of kartā; doers of action. And having classified them based on the three guṇas, now Kṛṣṇa has introduced two more topics for analysis; and they are buddhiḥ or intelligence; and dṛtiḥ will power and this human intelligence also can be divided into three; based on the guṇa and then the will power also can be divided into three; and these two topics Kṛṣṇa introduced in verse No.29.

And from the 30th verse, he has taken up the three-fold intelligence, in the 30th verse, he talked about sātvik intelligence; and He defined sātvik intelligence as that which has clarity about everything; clarity about human life; how the human being is different from all other animals; human-beings alone can have goals in life; and human-beings alone can work to fulfil those goals.

And therefore, I should be clear about what I want in life; and a person of sātvik intelligence knows what is the ultimate goal of life, and what are the intermediary goals with regard to that, he has clarity and he also knows what are the means by which one has to accomplish both the intermediary as well as ultimate goal.

And the scriptures do talk about varieties of sādhanā. Japa is talked about; service is talked about; pūja is talked about; meditation talked about, scriptural study is talked about. So many sādhanās are talked about; a sātvik intelligence knows which sādhanā is meant for which sādhyam or destination. Clarity regarding the means and ends. And not only there is clarity regarding the means and ends, what should be the chronological order in which the sādhanā should be followed. Should karma be the first sādhanā; or should we start with meditation; or should we start with scriptural study and we have to study the scriptures, karma kāṇḍa first or jñāna-kāṇḍa first; even the order must be clear.

And therefore the scriptures make it very clear; karma or an active life alone has to be the first stage of life. Nobody can start with vēdāntic study and nobody can start with meditation; one has to start with active life; and gradually progress to upāsana, by which time he would have contributed to the world sufficiently and by upāsana he can gradually turn the mind inwards; and then alone he can enter into serious self-enquiry. The order of the sādhanā also must be clear. Otherwise he will practice everything topsy turvy. Kṛṣṇa said in the 2nd chapter,

बहुशाखा ह्यनन्ताश्च बुद्धयोऽव्यवसायिनाम् || २- ४१ ||

vyavasāyātmikā buddhirēkēha kurunandana |
bahuśākhā hyanantāśca buddhayō'vyavasāyinām || 2.41 ||

A clear intellect knows what one wants. This was defined in verse No.30.

And in the 31st verse, which I introduced in the last class, Kṛṣṇa talked about the rājasic intellect, it is an embodiment of confusion. If I do not know anything about spirituality; ஏதாவது தெரிஞ்ஞாதானே confusion க்கு; no confusion. Ignorance is bliss; But this person has read so many books, written by so many masters, and so many religious books this book and that book and lots of ideas are floating in the mind, and therefore confused what should I do, when? And therefore when he reads a book, he is inspired by that book, which talks about meditation, and therefore he serially starts 5 hour meditation session. And then by that time, he sees another book which says, serving the society is spiritual sādhanā. Then the meditation is dropped; then he starts service activity and then somebody introduces kuṇḍalini rising; and therefore he goes into kuṇḍalini; and by that time, somebody says in kaliyuga nama japa is the only thing:

कलौ कलमषच्छित्तानाम् पापा द्रव्यौपजीवीनाम्, विधि क्रिया विहीनानाम् गधिर् गोविन्ध कीर्तनम्.

kalau kalamaṣachittānām pāpā dravyaupajīvīnām, vidhi kriyā vihīnānām gadhir gōvindha kīrtanam.

Vēdānta is confusing, Gīta is confusing, Gaudapada kārīka mahā confusing; and therefore keeping that aside:

हरेर् नामैव नामैव नामैव मम जीवनाम्, कलौ नास्यैव नास्यैव नास्यैव गधिर् अन्यथा

harē nāmaiva nāmaiva nāmaiva mama jīvanām, kalau nāsyaiḥ nāsyaiḥ nāsyaiḥ gadhir anyathā

very appealing; therefore he starts nāma japa. And then somebody says, Gīta class is going on. Then he starts. So there is confusion galore; he does not know what to do. And this intelligence is rājasic intelligence.

Therefore Kṛṣṇa defines dharmamadharmaṁ ca ayathāvat prajānāti; what is dharma, which is prescribed by the scriptures, and what is adharma, which is prohibited by the scriptures, with regard to that, there is confusion. Because in the scriptures themselves, because there is seemingly confusing statements. Because in one place, karma is glorified; in the other place, karma is criticised. In the Bhagavat Gīta itself Kṛṣṇa tells in the third chapter, svadharmē nidhanaṁ śrēyaḥ paradharmō bhayāvahaḥ.

Even death is OK when you are practising svadharmā; dharma is glorified and in the 18th chapter, the same Kṛṣṇa says: sarvadharmān parityajya. Confusion. Should I follow dharma, or renounce it; should I do karma or renounce karma; should I continue a gr̥hastha or become a Swami, everything he has got half knowledge; enough to get confused.

And not only with regard to scriptural action, kāryaṁ cākāryam ēva ca, even with regard to worldly activity, which has nothing to do with scriptures, even with regard to with lōkika karmāṇi; dharma means śāstriya karmāṇi; kāryam means lōkika karmāṇi; both with regard to scriptural activities as well as mundane worldly activities, everywhere he has got what? Half-cooked knowledge and therefore confusion. So kārya akāryam ēva ca ayathāvat prajānāti; ayathāvat means what incomplete knowledge.

That is in Māndūkya kārika, we saw the example when there is a rope lying down in front of me, if that place is very very brightly lit, I will have no problem, I will clearly know, there is a rope; total knowledge, there is no problem, it is bliss. And if it is total darkness, I do not see anything at all; then also no problem at all. In fact, even if there is a real cobra, I am not worried, because I do not see anything. In total knowledge, there is no problem; in total ignorance, there is no problem; but when there is partial lighting up and partial darkness; I know there is something lying down, but I do not what exactly it is. This is called half-knowledge or partial knowledge, partial knowledge creates a lot of problem. Therefore Kṛṣṇa says ayathāvat; partial knowledge he has got. That is because of the power of rajō-guṇa; tamō-guṇa is bliss; total ignorance; Satva guṇa is bliss; total knowledge; rajō-guṇa is problem. This is rājasic intellect.

Now Kṛṣṇa goes to tāmasic intellect.

Verse 18.32

अधर्मं धर्ममिति या मन्यते तमसावृता ।
सर्वार्थान्विपरीतान्श्च बुद्धिः सा पार्थ तामसी ॥ १८.३२ ॥

adharmam dharmamiti yā manyatē tamasā'vṛtā |
sarvārthān viparītāṁśca buddhiḥ sā pārtha tāmasī || 18.32 ||

पार्थ pārtha Oh Arjuna ! तामसि बुद्धि सा sā tāmasi buddhi Tāmasic intellect is that, या आवृता yā āvṛtā which is veiled तमसा tamasā by tamas, मन्यते manyatē which regards, अधर्मम् adharmam adharma इति धर्मम् iti dharmam as dharma च ca and (which views), सर्वार्थान् sarvārthān everything विपरीतान् viparītān perversely

32. Oh Arjuna! Tāmasic intellect is that which is veiled by tamas, which regards adharma as dharma, and (which view) everything perversely.

So Kṛṣṇa defines a tāmasic intellect, which does not have any doubt at all. Though it appears as though the tāmasic intellect is a wise intellect, because tāmasic intellect or intelligence does not have a doubt. Then why do you call it tāmasic intellect? It is very definite about the wrong conclusions it has made. So tāmasic intellect has got wrong knowledge or viparītha knowledge or viparyaya jñānam and in that wrong knowledge, the tāmasic intellect strongly holds on; assuming that this is the right thing.

And therefore adharmam dharmamiti; exactly as Arjuna had in the first chapter. Arjuna wrongly concluded that Mahābhārata war is adharma; at the end of the first chapter, Arjuna wrongly concluded that the Mahābhārata war is adharma; and he never had any doubt; he was very sure that he has got the right vision; even he thanks his stars, that at least in the battlefield he has got a good buddhi, he says: He thinks that he has got the right knowledge; Not only that, he so inspired by his wrong knowledge that he gives a long lecture to Lord Kṛṣṇa also; kulakṣayē praṇaśyanti kuladharmāḥ sanātanāḥ.

And this tāmasic intellect is firm, regarding its false knowledge and therefore the problem is what? You can never correct a tāmasic person; because a tāmasic person is very sure about his wrong knowledge as the right knowledge, he will never try to improve his knowledge, he will never try to learn from anyone; because as Muṇḍaka Upaniṣad says, avidhyāyāmantarē vartamānāḥ but svayaṁ dhīrāḥ paṇḍitaṁ manyamānāḥ. So they think they have the right knowledge, therefore adharmam dharmamiti manyatē; because of what? Tamasā'vṛtā; covered by the tamō guṇa.

And if it happens in one particular issue, we can call it an aberration, it is an exception; but in the case of a tāmasic person, in each and every case he has got wrong knowledge. So with regard to karma, he has got wrong knowledge; he will say karmaṇa ēva mōkṣa. Similarly with regard to worldly pursuit also. Therefore Kṛṣṇa says: sarvārthān viparītāmśca; Sarva ārthān can be taken as all the subjects in the world; with regard to every objective in the world; or we can take artha as the puruṣārtha; with regard to each puruṣārtha; there is a confusion; how much importance money must be given; confusion; either he does not give any importance at all; that is also wrong; that is without Lakṣmidēvi nothing happens; that is why we worship Lakṣmidēvi as goddess; one misconception is money is not at all important; and another misconception is what? Money can get everything including peace and happiness. Both are misconceptions; just with regard to knowledge, there are misconception; with regard to dharma, artā, kāma and even mōkṣa.

And many people think mōkṣa is only for old people; and therefore why should we attend Gīta class; when we are young? When we become old, we will attend; that is another misconception; with regard to everything they have misconception: sā buddhiḥ such an intellect is a tāmasic intellect. I had talked about the four types of people. Somebody nicely classified; do you remember;

He who knows not, and knows not, he knows not, knows, k...n...o... w... s, not nose! (he who knows not means does not know), he who knows that and knows not that he knows not; he is ignorant; and knows not that he is ignorant, is a fool; Shun him; Type No.1.

The second type is: He who knows not, and knows he knows not (better - I know that I do not know - தெரியாது; ஆனால் தெரியாது என்று தெரியும். that person is ignorant, teach him. Because he knows he is ignorant, and willing to learn. So what is the second type? He who knows not and knows that he knows not, he is ignorant, teach him.

The third type is; He who knows and knows not that he knows; he is a very learned person but he does not know his glory (Añjanēya had this problem; somebody had to tell him that he can achieve). He who knows and does not know that he knows, is asleep; wake him. Wake up the giant; This is the third type.

What is the fourth type? he who knows; YOU can fill up; he who knows and knows that he knows, he is wise, follow him.

He who knows not and knows not that he knows not, is a fool; shun him;
he who knows not and knows that he knows not, he is ignorant; teach him;
he who knows and knows not that he knows, he is asleep; wake him;
he who knows and knows that he knows; is wise; follow him.

These are the four types that person said. Vēda adds the fifth one; Munḍaka upaniṣad adds the fifth variety: He who knows not and thinks he knows, (I do not how to classify, viśēṣa variety). So the upaniṣad says: avidhyāyāmantarē vartamānāḥ, steeped in ignorance, but svayaṁ dhīrāḥ paṇḍitaṁ manyamānāḥ; what to do with these people?

So here the tāmasic intellect is the fifth variety; he does not know but thinks he knows and therefore he does not want to learn from the elders; he criticises the parents, he criticises the teachers; he criticises the sanyāsis, he criticises the scriptures, as though he has got sufficient wisdom to pass the comment on all these things; and we can never do anything with regard to such people, because even if you want to improve them, they must be available for listening to you. You can do only one thing with regard to those people. What to do? You cannot communicate, because they are not going to listen; like Rāvaṇa, how many people tried to correct him; never listen; when the last moment, Rāma said, Go back and come tomorrow; at least according to Kaṁba Rāmayaṇa, then also he did not change. Kaṁsa also did not change; therefore we can never do anything with regard to such people; and when such people are around in our family, lot of prārabdam will get exhausted; OK; lot of prārabdam will get exhausted if such people are there in the family, and you have got only one solution. Bhagavan, may I have the strength to tolerate this person who is around; other than prārthana, nothing can be done. One good thing is that our pāpa will quickly get exhausted. Therefore, that is a good news only; sarvārthān viparītāmśca buddhiḥ sā pārtha tāmasī.

With this the three types of intellect or buddhi are over. Now Kṛṣṇa wants to enter into the Will power topic from the next verse; we will read:

Verse 18.33

धृत्या यया धारयते मनःप्राणोन्द्रियक्रियाः ।
योगेनाव्यभिचारिण्या धृतिः सा पार्थ सात्त्विकी ॥ १८.३३ ॥

dhṛtyā yayā dhārayatē manaḥprāṇēndriyakriyāḥ |
yōgēnāvyaabhicāriṇyā dhṛtiḥ sā pārtha sāttvikī || 18.33 ||

पार्थ pārtha Oh Arjuna सात्त्विकी धृतिः sāttvikī dhṛtiḥ Sāttvic will, सा यया धृत्या sā yayā dhṛtyā is that by which will अव्यभिचारिण्या avyabhicāriṇyā (made) unswerving योगेन yōgēna through Yōga dhārayatē धारयते one sustains मनः प्राणेन्द्रियक्रियाः manaḥ prāṇēndriyakriyā: the activities of the mind Prāṇa and the sense organs

33. Oh Arjuna! Sāttvic will is that by which will, (made unswerving through yōga, one sustains the activities of the mind, prāṇa and the sense organs.

For spiritual success, clear intellect alone is not sufficient; one requires a strong will power also; and therefore Will is very important faculty; and also since Kṛṣṇa deals with the topic of Will power, it is very clear that the human-beings do have a freewill. Many people have got misconception that everything is predetermined by fate, and already things are written on our forehead; the śani peryarchi and guru peryarchi has already determined our future and we cannot do anything at all; we are only puppets in the hands of the fate. This is the unfortunate misconception of many people and they think that our scriptures are teaching fatalism.

Kṛṣṇa makes it very clear that we do not say fate is not there; fate is nothing but our own prārabdha karma which we have done in this life; as well as in the past life. So we do have fate; fate does influence our future; but what the scriptures say is fate is not the only factor. Fate is one of the factors determining, there are other factors also, and the most powerful second factor is our own Will. And with Will power we can do prāyascitta, we can do sādhanā and we have the capacity to deflect the change the course of the fate.

I have talked about this elaborately and if the fate is very very powerful, then the freewill may not be able to conquer it; but it can reduce the impact of the fate; when the fate is medium; nor too powerful nor too weak; by our fate, we can manage and we can keep the fate under check and when the fate is feeble, we do have the capacity to completely wipe out the effect of the fate.

I have the given the example of three types of diseases; in the case of certain diseases, the doctor will say; it is terminal, you can pray, nothing can be done. In the case of certain other diseases, doctor will say, you cannot cure it; but you can keep it under control; like pressure, sugar, etc. tablet eating, walking, you can keep them under control; and in the case of certain other diseases, we can take medicine and completely cure also.

Fate is not uniform; fate is graded, because fate consists of our own karmas. Since the karmas have different intensity, fate also have got different intensity, therefore by using willpower, we can change our course of life and therefore the basic assumption is a Gīta student believes in Will power. If a Gīta student does not believe in Will power, if a Gīta student does not believe in freewill, all these verses will be meaningless verses. You can choose your ultimate goal of life.

And if we are intelligent enough, our ultimate goal will be mōkṣa; and what is mōkṣa? Emotional independence. Emotionally I should not depend upon any external factor to feel comfortable. This emotional independence is mōkṣa. This must be the ultimate goal; and if I need that goal, I have to accomplish and I know that self-knowledge is the only means. I should have that clarity. If you want mōkṣa, you should have ātma jñānam; there is no choice.

Then the next clarity is ātma jñānam requires a prepared mind; a refined and subtle and focused mind is required; which we call yōgyatha. So for mōkṣam, jñānam is necessary, jñānam requires yōgyatha and yōgyatha can be attained only by leading a dhārmic lifestyle which is called a religious lifestyle by the scriptures; it is nothing but a dhārmic life. So I have to lead a life of karma, wherein my value for artha and kama, money and sense pleasures, they are always subservient to moral values. I will chose only those pleasures; I will chose only that material goal or even money, which is within the dhārmic field. So I have to follow that life; not for a year or two; but it is a long-life. It may require decades; that is why we have four āśramās; brahmacarya, gr̥hastha, vānaprastha and sanyāsa āśramās.

In short, what I want to say here is; Spiritual life is a long drawn life. There is no crash programme in spirituality and if you take to any crash programme; I have told you before, that will crash after a time; That is why it is called crash programme. There is no crash programme and it is a long drawn thing which means I require perseverance. I require focus; I require steadfastness; and there will be obstacles; and in spite of obstacles, I should have the necessary resilience to go forward. Even if I fall, I should be able to get up and again walk, instead of lying down permanently. And this Will power by which a person keeps mōkṣa as the goal and all his actions are directed towards that ultimate spiritual goal, that is called sātvik Will power.

So in this verse 33, Kṛṣṇa defines sātvik Will power. What is that? Dhārayatē; this person sustains the spiritual sādhanā, at which level? At the level of every sense organ. So the mind is aware of that manaḥ;; prāṇēndriyakriyāḥ; all the ten sense organs, sense organs of knowledge, sense organs of action. In short what all activities he undertakes; even the books that he reads are how he spends his spare time; all these are going to influence the mind. What type of TV programme what I watch, every small thing is influencing my mind. And therefore manaḥ, prāṇa, indriya kriyāḥ; prāṇa and indriya refers to manaḥ means mind, prāṇa means the pañcaprāṇas and indriya means the ten indriyās, sense organs, kriyās means their function.

That means what? A spiritual life is not a life, not something practiced for one hour a week. Spiritual life is not something that is practiced for one hour a week; Sunday and Sunday, between 6-7 I am spiritual and at other times, I am also spiritual (you can understand!). That will not work; every moment, every word, every thought, every action should be spiritual-friendly; Vēdānta friendly. Spiritual life is not a joke, it is not a time-pass, it is not a casual thing, it is a responsible and the serious decision that one has to take. And therefore manaḥ prāṇa indriya kriyāḥ, dhārayatē; which means there must be regular introspection; which direction I am going; I am going forward or I am stagnant or I am going backward.

Now we also do that; we do study; but the problem, we study another's person's progress. And we tell the other person, you are studying the Gīta and you are like this; you are like this, etc. we are not supposed to criticise others. If there are two students of Gīta in one house, gone; constantly they will criticise each other; in spite of being Gīta student you are doing that. Never do that; I have to look at myself and see whether there is progress or stagnation, or progression, which means regular introspection is required.

Swami Sivānanda used to talk about writing a spiritual diary; Daivi Sampath and Āsuri Sampath are talked about in the 16th chapter, and how does a daivi sampanna person behaves; How does asura behave, it is listed; I have to tally and watch; whether I am going to deva side or asura side; monitoring and regular introspection is required and if I have got certain pronounced weakness, everyone has got weakness; nobody is perfect except God and one good news is everybody has got imperfection and so we need not feel bad about it. Certain weakness are pronounced, but certain others are not that pronounced. So those weaknesses may require special attention. And therefore I look into them and I pay special attention to them; and perhaps in the early morning, I just sit for 5-10 minutes and focus on that weakness and take a decision. Today during the life, I will be during my transaction, I will be aware of that aspect of my personality. If it is weakness at the level of the language, (everyone has this in plenty), if that is the problem any particular problem. So early morning auto suggestion and night, introspection. This has to continuously go on; and if any adjustment is required, I have to do that necessary adjustment.

And therefore, Kṛṣṇa says: avyabhicāriṇyā; without deviating from the goal; without losing sight of the goal; without getting lost in the mundane worldly pursuits; because we have to go in search of money, as I said, money is very important; but my whole live cannot be dedicated for earning only. Human mind requires entertainments; nothing wrong, śāstras excepts that you cannot be all the time serious. You require, some recreation, relaxation, but the whole life cannot be dedicated for recreation; 5 days money; 2 days recreation; 5 days I earn money; and two days I thoroughly enjoy. Where is time for spirituality?

And by the time I retire, all faculties are gone. So what is the use? therefore I should ask do I give enough importance to spiritual activities also; at least for weekly Gīta class; and once you have achieved that; can I allot some time for revision; or else you will touch the Gīta book only next week; whether you will touch or search for the Gīta book is a big question! Either you search for the Gīta book or you take the take the Gīta book. In between, just half an hour see what it says; that is the next progress; I do not want to create too much guilt in you.

Therefore avyabhicāriṇi, undeviating focus; without deviation; and how to you do that? Yōgēna; by the practice of yōga; and especially the aṣṭāṅga-yōga; Patanjali's yōga is a wonderful system; for focusing the mind. In fact the very definition of yōga given there is citta vṛtti nirōdaḥ. Many people translate nirōdaḥ, as stopping the thought; but we do not believe in stopping the thoughts, citta vṛtti nirōdaḥ means directing the thought; if my thoughts are well directed; my words are well directed; if my words and thoughts are well directed; my actions are well directions, because actions and words are born out of thoughts only. Thus yōga directs the thoughts; it is a beautiful system; by the practice of yōga, this person has developed the capacity of keeping the life in the route of mōkṣa. So mōkṣa mārgē we have to supply. Mōkṣa mārgē, dhārayatē. and such a Will power is called sātvik Will power.

Then what is rājasic will power.

यया तु धर्मकामार्थान् धृत्या धारयतेऽर्जुन ।
प्रसङ्गेन फलाकाङ्क्षी धृतिः सा पार्थ राजसी ॥ १८.३४ ॥

yayā tu dharmakāmārthān dhṛtyā dhārayatē'rjuna |
prasaṅgēna phalākāṅkṣī dhṛtiḥ sā pārtha rājasī || 18.34 ||

अर्जुन Arjuna oh Arjuna ! राजसि धृतिः rājasi dhṛtiḥ Rājasic Will, सा sā is that यया तु धृत्या yayā tu dhṛtyā by which will, फलाकाङ्क्षी phalākāṅkṣī one who is desirous of results. प्रसङ्गेन prasaṅgēna because of attachment धारयते dhārayatē pursues दर्मकामार्थान् darmakāmārthān dharma, artha and kama पार्थ pārtha Oh Arjuna !

34. Oh Arjuna! Rājasic Will is that by which will one, who is desirous of results because of attachment pursues dharma, artha, and kama, Oh Arjuna.

Now comes the next Will power of a rājasic person. This person also has a tremendous will power. But the Will power is utilised for material success. Either he does not know about spiritual success or he does not believe in spiritual goals or he does not value spirituality. His philosophy is happiness depends upon material accomplishments, காசேதான் கடவுலடா! kācētāṅ kaṭavulaṭā. There was a cinema in the olden time; Money is God; கல்லரை வரை சில்லரை வேண்டும். kallarai varai cillarai vēṅṭum; In the back of auto; one slogan is the one; kallari means the cremation ground, that is until cremation you require chillari, money. They will constantly remind you money is important; money is important; etc. etc. we do not question that statement; it is very very true alright; but money alone is life; is a very very unfortunate conclusion; the rājasic person believes only in material success, climbing the corporate ladder. So many idioms, higher and higher position, more and more salary; on salary in dollars, all those things and he is so responsible and all the time walking with cell phone that there is no time, caraṇa kamalayathil arai nimidam, even a half-time he does not have to think of God. Whether full sandyā vandana is required or only Gāyathri is enough; and Gāyathri full or 3 is enough; time is there for everything; no time for pūja, no time for temple, no time for dhyanam, no time for Gīta study, no time for anything.

So this person is successful from the worldly angle; because majority of the world measures success only in terms of material gain; How big is the house, car is there or not; and if car is there, what brand it is? otai Ambassador or Benz? So many other things, which car he has, and how many of them; does he have an extra house in Mahābalipuram or preferably in Kokaikanal or Ooty; these are the parameters of success in life. And most of the people fall for this; And therefore, to show them as people of status and success; they run after the mirage water of material success.

Therefore he says, dhārayatē; they are busy; running, running, running, and they also maintain all their activities for what purpose? Not for mōkṣa but for dharma, artā, kāma; they are interested in more and more money, and material possessions; called artā, in the name of security. In fact, he has money for five generations; still not enough and if money is there enough, next is what, entertainment. for holidays you are not supposed to go Ooty but to Switzerland; world tour, then only you are a reasonably successful person; like that all these values are there; so kāma, entertainment oriented, money oriented.

And then karma, he does want puṇyam; he does want puṇyam; and he does take to religious activities also; but the problem is even the puṇyam that he acquires he wants to encash in the form of material gain. Because puṇyam is twofold; when you lead a religious life; do rituals, prayer, etc. you will get puṇyam and that puṇyam religious merit, translation is difficult; புண்யம் இல்லாத English; puṇyam illatha English; an English which do not exact translation for puṇyam, the nearest translation is religious merit.

Now he does get; this puṇyam can be encashed in two different way; One is you want to convert that into material pleasures; by puṇyam, I want to get a better house; by puṇyam I want svargam; by puṇyam I want to get this artha and karma; that is material puṇyam; there is another type of puṇyam by which I want opportunity for continuing my spiritual path. I should have sufficient health to come to the class regularly; I should not have any obstacles in the pursuit and I want to convert the puṇyam into citta śuddhi, guru prāp̥thi, śravaṇa prāp̥thi, etc. that is called spiritual puṇyam. So a sātvic person will seek spiritual puṇyam; a rājasic person will seek material puṇyam; therefore here dharma means material puṇyam; kāma and artā he pursues relentlessly.

And how? Prasaṅgēna, with intense attachment; because he knows that the society will respect only if he can maintain a certain standard of life. And he is interested in society's respect. And therefore I have to give that position; once the position is gone; respect is gone; stāna braṣṭā na śōbhantē; danta, kēśaḥ, nakhaḥ, naraḥ.

There are four things which are valued only when they are in a particular position. When the position is changed, their value will go. There are four such things; what are they?

No.1. tooth. As long as it is in the mouth, you give all the regularly brush, and go to the doctors and all kinds of things, spend thousand of rupees. Dentistry is very costly thing; the moment is fallen, you are not supposed to touch it; you have to take bath; tooth remaining the same, when it is in the appropriate position, respect.

No.2. What is the second item. Kēśaḥ. As long as it is in the top of the head, it will get respect; hairdo are there, beauty parlors are there, coloring, etc. etc. is there; spring, etc. I cannot do that! So therefore all kinds of treatments when it is on the head; the moment it has fallen, it is the most dangerous thing; if you find hair in the food, you have to throw it; kēśaḥ.

Next one is nakhaḥ. Nails; when the nail is on the hand, how much respect, manicure, pedicure, polishing, stick nail, etc. and therefore all useful for the class at least. All kinds of things you do, when it is here, the moment it has fallen, it is aśaucam. These three things have the value when they are in the proper position, you know what is the fourth item.

Human being. When a human being has got a position in life, status in life, job in life, everybody respects; once that is gone:

यावद्वित्तोपार्जन सक्तः
स्तावन्निज परिवारो रक्तः |
पश्चाज्जीवति जर्जर देहे
वार्ता कोऽपि न पृच्छति गेहे ||५||

yāvadvittōpārjana saktah stāvannija parivārō raktah | paścājjīvati jarjara dēhē
vārtāṁ kō:'pi na pṛcchati gēhē ||5||

Therefore for earning social respect, this rājasic person is conscious of his status in society. Whereas a sātvic person does not even bother about the status in society; and if the people in the society and family do not enquire about me, in fact, it is better, I can spend more time in Gīta.

They will not bother; He will take as advantageous but a rājasic person wants recognition and therefore prasaṅgēna; attached to the post like the ministers, with fevicol, he gets stuck.

phalākāṅkṣī and he is interested only in the materialistic result of his action, he works in the world not for inner growth. A spiritual person works in the world not for recognition, It is a bye-product, may or may not come, money is a bye-product, may or may not come; I work in the world, I contribute primarily for my own inner growth; but a rājasic person does not know that; therefore phala ākāṅkṣī is attached to the material result; such a person has rājasic will power. He also has will power but it is rājasic Will power. and what is tāmasic Will; in the next class we will see.

Hari Om

227 Chapter 18, Verses 35-38

ॐ

As a part of the summarisation of the entire Bhagavat Gīta, Lord Kṛṣṇa is taking up seven topics and he classifies them into three groups based on the three guṇās and if we understand seven topics and three fold classification, we will have a fairly good idea of the entire Gīta teaching. These seven topics are beautifully chosen; they are important topics and the classification also has been clearly done. If a person understands these seven topics with their classifications; the entire Bhagavat Gīta, even the entire vēdic-teaching is reasonably well-understood. And of those seven topics, we have seen five; first he talked about three topics of sanyāsa; by way of answering Arjuna's doubt.

- So the first topic is trividha sanyāsaḥ; sātвика, rājasa, tāmasa sanyāsa;

- then he talked about trividha jñānam, three types of knowledge, then he talked about trivida karma, three types of action,
- then he talked about trividha kartā; three types of workers; doers;
- and then he talked about trividha buddhiḥ; three types of intellect or intelligence;

Thus we have covered five topics. Sanyāsa, jñānam, karma, kartā, and buddhiḥ.

Now we are in this 6th topic, viz., three types of willpower; which are discussed in verse No.33, 34, and 35. In the 33, sātvic will power is discussed; in 34th which I have introduced in the last class, Kṛṣṇa is talking about rājasic will power.

Sātvic will power is that which keeps a person in spiritual path he attains success. So perseverance until spiritual success is sātvic will power. Whereas rājasic will power also involves perseverance, commitment, etc. but not for the sake of spiritual success, the same will power is used for the sake of material success. Both are will power only. And therefore, Kṛṣṇa said in the 34th verse, that Will power by which a person pursues dharma, artā and kāma. He is not very much interested in mōkṣa, but he is interested dharma artā kāma, dharma means puṇyam, even the puṇyam that he is interested in material puṇyam, as I said in the last class, material puṇyam is that puṇyam, which he wants to encash as material benefits. Sufficient puṇyam so that I will get lot of money; sufficient puṇyam so that I will get a big house; sufficient puṇyam so that I will have many cars; that is called materialist puṇyam.

Not puṇyam for vēdāntic study; not puṇyam guru prāp̥thi, or jñāna prāp̥thi, he wants to encash the puṇyam for worldly benefit, that is called rājasic will power; prasaṅgēna phalākāṅkṣī; prasaṅgēna with extreme attachment, yearning, craze, here prasaṅgēna means prakarṣēna saṅgēna; pra means intense, saṅgha means attachment; and phalākāṅkṣī, phalam means the material benefit, he craves for; and he continues that pursuit until he attains success. As I said the other day: he wants to climb the corporate ladder, and become the vice-president, of the world-wide organisation. Such a will power, by which he pursues that and attain that, is rājasic will.

And here we should make a note; we are not totally against rājasic will power. Because in the initial stages of life, a person has to follow karma and therefore, every seeker requires rājasic will initially. And everybody is born with worldly desires; everybody wants to enjoy sense pleasures, everybody seeks artā and kāma initially and vēda itself encourages that and prescribes many methods of acquiring them. Therefore we should never criticize rājasic will totally; because all have to earn and enjoy. But as time goes, the rājasic will should get more and more refined. I have talked about this before, initially my desire is to earn more; and also own more; earn and own. This is the philosophy of the rājasic will power in the initial stages, which means I will earn and own everything; I will not part with even a single paisa that I earn. Such a lifestyle is the lifestyle of a karmī. And this karmī has a rājasic will power, and this rājasic will power has to get refined more and more and the karmī should get converted into karma-yōgi. And this karma-yōgi has got a rājasic will, he wants to earn a lot; he wants to get lot of money; but the refinement is that he wants to earn, but he does not want to own everything he earns. He is rājasic enough to earn or acquire, but sātvic enough to share whatever he owns, with the society; he is ready to keep a part of his possession for the sake of Pañca maha yajña. Pañca mahā yajña requires lot of money, because if I do not earn money, how can I do dēvā yajña, how can I do pitru yajñaḥ, how can I do manuṣya yajña, how can I do bhūta yajña, all the Pañca mahā yajña, which are part of karma-yōga, require money, require earning, therefore require karma, therefore requires rājasic will.

A person who is extremely sātvic, he does not own anything, alright; because he does not have desire, but the problem is when a person is over-sātvic, he does not earn also. There are two extremes; three types of people; one person neither earns nor owns; he does not own and he does not earn, therefore, he cannot contribute, anything to the society; Where to donate? He is on charity.

Therefore he cannot do charity, which is an integral part of karma-yōga. A person who neither earns nor owns, can never practice karma-yōga; which involves dānam. And there is another extreme, who earns wealth; and owns everything; therefore he always does not give a single paise. He earns well and will not spare a mukkāl, (it was a coin in the olden days).

Therefore the one who neither earns or owns cannot help the society; the one who earns and owns also cannot help. The one who earns a lot; and owns a little, and is willing to spend a rest of the earning for the sake of the social upbringing; otherwise called Pañca mahā yajña, he also requires a rājasic willpower. Therefore, every karma-yōgi requires a rājasic will power, and he uses that will power for contribution to the society, and for getting citta śuddhi. So this is the second type of will. Now we have to go to the third will power; which is tāmasic will power. What is that? We will read verse No.35.

Verse 18.35

यया स्वप्नं भयं शोकम् विषादं मदमेव च ।
न विमुञ्चति दुर्मेधाः धृतिः सा पार्थ तामसी ॥ १८.३५ ॥

[yayā svapnaṁ bhayaṁ śōkaṁ viṣādaṁ madamēva ca |
na vimuñcati durmēdhāḥ dhṛtiḥ sā pārtha tāmasī || 18.35 ||](#)

पार्थ pārtha Oh Arjuna तामसी धृतिः tāmasī dhṛtiḥ Tāmasic will, सा यया sā yayā is that by which दुर्मेधाः durmēdhāḥ as indiscriminate (person) न विमुञ्चति na vimuñcati does not give up स्वप्नम् svapnam sleep भयम् bhayam fear शोकम् śōkam sorrow विषादम् viṣādam depression एव च मदम् ēva ca madam and indulgence

35. Oh Arjuna! Tāmasic will is that by which an indiscriminate (person) does not give up sleep, fear, sorrow, depression, and indulgence.

So the tāmasic will power is that by which a person fanatically avoids karma; that requires a will power. So therefore, yayā svapnam bhayam śōkam viṣādam madamēva ca na vimuñcati. He also holds on to certain things staunchly. What are the things he holds on to: svapnam, means what? day-dreaming; night dreaming everybody does, but this person, svapnam na vimuñcati, that means he does not act in the world, but he only knows how to dream; building castles in the air.

Therefore either he is sleeping or he is sleepy. Only these two avasthās, he does not know a state called jāgrat avasathā, he has only two avasathā; either sleeping or sleepy. Because of that others are in additional avasthā. அவளுக்கு நாலு அவஸ்தையாயிடும். Others get 'four' avasthais. OK. svapnam na vimuñcati and especially, if that person has inherited property; finished; because he will get food timely; or there is a earning parent, who out of sheer wrong attachment; misplaced attachment does not drive the son to activity; he will say pāpam pāpam and they spoil him; such parent are also there; svapnam na vimuñcati, does not work at all. If I have inherited wealth and I do not need money, it does not mean, I should not work. In fact, I can happily work for the benefit of the society, which will in turn benefit me, by giving citta śuddhi; but this person does not do that; svapnam na vimuñcati;

and bhayam na vimuñcati; he does not undertake anything, because of fear of failure; he does not want to fail in life; he wants only success; but unfortunately, nobody can get success straightaway the first time itself, if you get success the first-time, something is wrong. Anything we have to go through a few failures; and this person does not want; and therefore what does he do; only if I undertake something there will be failure, and therefore I would not undertake anything. And he tells everyone, I have never failed in life. Have you done anything? Nothing. Therefore bhayam. he avoids failure.

And śōkam; since kartā is not active, bhōktā is very very active. We have to personalities; one is the kartā personality, the one who does action in the world; the other is bhōktā personality, the one who faces experiences in the world, and the experiences often brings sorrows/problems. But many of our worries can be overcome if we have an active life, because activity is a wonderful medicine for sorrow; Activity is wonderful medicine for anxiety; Activity is wonderful medicine for depression; but this tāmasic person refuses to be active, therefore every experience will only cause sorrow for him; and therefore most of the time, he complains about someone of the other; because whole time is available for what? Eating, and make some complaints or other, till sleep comes; and if nothing is available, to complain about the food. Salt is less, puli is more, something or the other; therefore this tāmasic person never gives up sorrow. All the time sorrowful.

Then viṣādam; viṣādaḥ means depression; lack of motivation, all the time in low moods; anytime you ask, no mood; no mood to do that. So therefore this moody people, Dayānandā Swami calls them mūdaḥ, those who are always waiting for the mood to come; today they did not come to the Gītā class, because mood was not; and what logic you can give? Mood has no logic; therefore all the time there is no motive at all; sense organs are not active;

Śankarācārya calls it avasāna bhāvaḥ; all the time this person in a low. That is called viṣādaḥ; depression.

And madam; and if at all he takes to some activity; that is only sensory addiction; all these action-less people, it happens in the villages; those people who have landed property, who do not get educated also; many people went through that phase; no education. Because they were all brahmins, they were not getting regular education; at least vēda they should have learned; but the vēdic tradition also gone; and some landed property is there; and what do they do? There is a thinnai, sitting there, and eating வெற்றிலை பாக்கு போட்டுண்ணுடு, சீட்டு ஆடறது; vēttiali pāku, and speaking un-understandable words with the mouth full; and playing cards. All these things many brahmins, they just spoiled their life; because of that they lost everything; they had to sell their houses also; and all kinds of problems. Neither spiritual study, nor this study; neither did go to the school, nor the vēda pada śāla, and what did they do; ate vethala pākku and play cards and given to addiction; Kṛṣṇa calls it madam; mada means sensory addiction; may be smoking, may be drinking; may be tobacco; something or the other, they take to because there is no goal. Even if mōkṣa goal is not there, at least some material goal is there; at least some material goal is there; you can work for that; neither material goal nor spiritual goal.

Swami Chinmayānanda always said; Human beings should have at least some goal or the other to work for; even if mōkṣa goal is not there, at least have some relatively worldly goal. For the tāmasic person, no dharma, no arta, no kāma, no mōkṣa, No goal is there; and therefore madam; takes to addictions.

And na vimuñcati; and when you talk to him; and tries to create some enthusiasm; his intellect is such that it will argue in favour of his laziness; he will say how those companies survive. Intellect is such, it will always argue in favour of your addition; Any addiction becomes so powerful that intellect will start supporting.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa says durmēdhāḥ; this perverted intellect you can never convince them; and not only that; if you talk them for some time, they will begin to convince you; you will also say that I will also play a round of cards. So powerful they are; they are strong; they will pull you down; so their durmēdhāḥ, perverted intellect argues in favour of them; they will say why do you practice sense control, etc. all these things we have; we have only one life, and we can enjoy only when you are young. What is the use of all the self-denial; what is the use of sense control; make hay while the sun shines; cārvāka philosophy they will talk and establish and such a will power, hey Arjuna, hey Partha, tāmasi. That is tāmasic will power.

With this three types of will power is over; and what is the aim of a person? First give up tāmasic will power; straight away you did not go to sātvic will power; you cannot; have rājasic will power, have some material goal; to earn at least have that as a goal; start activity; once you have enough, have the goal of dānam, and gradually have the goal of jñānam and mōkṣa; this gradual shift from tāmasic to rājasic to sātvic will power should be the goal.

Now comes the seventh and final topic, in the following verses:

Verse 18.36

सुखं त्विदानीं त्रिविधं शृणु मे भरतर्षभ ।
अभ्यासाद्रमते यत्र दुःखान्तं च निगच्छति ॥ १८.३६ ॥

[Sukham tvīdānīm trividham śṛṇu mē bharatarṣabha|
abhyāsādramatē yatra duḥkhāntam ca nigacchati || 18.36 ||](#)

भरतर्षभ bharatarṣabha Oh Arjuna !, इदानीम् idānīm now शृणु मे śṛṇu me listen to me, त्रिविधं तु सुखम् trividham tu sukham to the threefold happiness यत्र रमते yatra ramatē in which one indulges अभ्यासात् abhyāsāt because of habit च ca and comes, निगच्छति दुःखान्तम् nigacchati duḥkhāntam to the end of pain

36. Oh Arjuna! Now, listen from Me to the threefold happiness in which one indulges because of habit and comes to the end of pain.

So Kṛṣṇa introduces the seventh topic in this verse, So hey bharatarṣabha, Arjuna, idānīm trividham sukham śṛṇu. Now may you listen to threefold happiness; sukham means happiness. Trividham; threefold; again based on three fold guṇas, sātāvika, rājasa and tāmasa sukham.

And we all know every human instinctively craves for happiness. Our craving for happiness is not a learned desire, it is an instinctive desire and here, what Kṛṣṇa says is everybody wants happiness; but there is a choice for human beings, with regard to which type of happiness he should choose. With regard to choosing the happiness, there is no choice. Everybody wants happiness; but there is a choice with regard to the type of happiness, an intelligent person chooses the right brand of happiness.

In food, that you have to eat food, there is no choice; everything has to eat food, because that is an instinctive desire. In desiring for food, there is no choice, but what type of food I should eat, vegetarian, non-vegetarian; vegetarian which variety, there I have a choice; ஸுகம் வேணமா வேண்டாமா என்ற choice இல்லை; எப்பேற்பட்ட ஸுகம் வேண்டும் என்ற choice இருக்கு. (there is no choice on whether you want sukham or not; but what kind of sukham one has to experience, we do have a choice).

And therefore Arjuna may you listen. And there is one truth. What is that? You can train your mind to enjoy any one type of pleasure; it is something from taste that you develop by practice. So you can develop a taste for a particular type of food, first time you may not like; chappathi for instance, you eat and slowly you develop a taste and you start liking; Even this movie music dabba, first it will be jarring; you keep on listening; you also slowly begin to murmur and then in the bathroom you start singing that song; Oh Podu Oh Podu!.. etc. So what you hated, you can train to love. It is sheer abhyāsa. Therefore by abhyasā by training you can learn to enjoy, sātāvica, rājasic or tāmasic. Anything, good or bad habit, dress, food, anything; it is a training. So since mind can be trained, why can't you train your mind for a good brand of happiness. Proper brand why cant' you have.

Therefore Kṛṣṇa says; abhyāsādramatē yatra; by sheer practice and training, the mind begins to revel in that; enjoy that; yatra ramatē. And once you start enjoying, the other people will start wondering, what is the rasa in this; like when the children enjoy the other music, you wonder what is there; but they have kuśi. While going you can see, the car doors are closed; but outside you can hear the blast; dum, dum, dum, that means what, in the closed car if you can hear outside, what is played inside, how much loud they would be playing it; Eardrum is suffering; but sheer training.

So therefore Kṛṣṇa says; abhyāsādramatē, and not only one revels; duḥkhāntam nigacchati. And one sees the end of sorrow; all the three sukham can put an end to sorrow; sātāvika sukham will also end in sorrow; rājasa sukham will also end in sorrow; tāmasa sukham also will end in sorrow; anyone you can train. Then what is the difference among these three sukhams.

Kṛṣṇa is going to define. So 37, 38 and 39 deal with sātāvika, rājasa and tāmasa sukhams, respectively. In that order; 37 is sātāvika sukham.

Sātāvika sukham

Verse 18.37

यत्तदग्रे विषमिव परिणामेऽमृतोपमम् ।
तत्सुखं सात्त्विकं प्रोक्तम् आत्मबुद्धिप्रसादजम् ॥ १८.३७ ॥

yattadagrē viṣamiva pariṇāmē'mṛtōpamam|
tatsukhaṁ sāttvikaṁ prōktam ātmabuddhiprasādajam || 18.37 ||

सात्त्विकं सुखम् sātāvikaṁ sukham sattvic happiness प्रोक्तम् prōktam is said to be तत् tat that यत् तद् इव विषम् yat tad iva viṣam which is like poison, अग्रे agrē in the beginning अमृतोपमम् amṛtōpamam which is like nectar परिणामे pariṇāmē in the end आत्मबुद्धिप्रसादजम् ātmabuddhiprasādajam and which is born out of the clarity of self-knowledge.

37. Sātāvika happiness is said to be that which is said to be like poison in the beginning, which is like nectar in the end, and which is born out of the clarity of Self-knowledge.

So here Kṛṣṇa defines sātāvika sukham as pure spiritual ānanda; and ānandā that you can derive from following a spiritual way of life; not at the end of the journey but even as you travel there is an ānandā. Right from the level of karma-yōga, there is an ānandā; at the level of upāsana there is ānanda. When sādhanā catuṣṭaya sampathī is developed, there is an ānandā. And the beauty is that ānanda comes from inside; he does not seem to derive ānandā from external sources. In fact, he does not go after the external source of joy. In fact, the other materialistic people think that the spiritual person is deprived of ānandā; not going to cinema, when someone says I do not go to movie, I do not go to this, I do not go to that, etc. I do not go to discotheque, clubs and party, etc. the others would wonder what ānandā this person would be experiencing. So the other people will sympathise with this person.

But this person only knows what is the unique inner ānandā; and the height of this ānandā is ātma-jñāna-janya-ānandā; which is called vidya ānandā; ānandā born out of sheer knowledge of my nature; the sheer knowledge of the nature of the world; and the knowledge of the nature of God. Jīva-jagat-Īśvara -svarūpa jñānēna; you do not require anything else; the sheer understanding generates a fullness; generates a peace, it is a peace that passeth all understanding, as they say in the Bible; it is a unique form of fullness.

And the glory of that ānandā is, knowledge is never subject to loss; everything else is subject to loss; money may be lost; position will be lost; and when money and position go away, respect from the society, not only from the society, even from the family, that will be lost; relationships will be lost; other than knowledge, name anything; it is subject to loss; knowledge is the only thing, which is neither lost, not only that it increases in due course; in terms of the clarity;

न चोरहार्यं न च राजहार्यं न भ्रातृभाज्यं न च भारकारि ।
व्यये कृते एव नित्यं विद्याधनं सर्वधनप्रधानम् ॥

[na corahāryam na ca rājahāryam na bhrātṛbhājyam na ca bhārakāri |
vyayē kṛtē ēva nityam vidyādhanam sarvadhanapradhānam ||](#)

A unique wealth which cannot be stolen by the robbers; na ca rājahāryam, it cannot be taken by the government through extra tax; na bhrātṛbhājyam, brothers will not come for share. Any other property they will ask. Knowledge nobody can ask for it; even if people ask and you give your knowledge, it will never get depleted. Suppose I teach one Gīta course; it is lost, as it is given to the students; so, in the next Gīta course, I have to sit there, and you will have to sit here; I have to earn. No, I would have taken 15 courses or 20 courses of Gīta perhaps, knowledge has never reduced; it only increases; vyayē kṛtē ēva nityam vidyādhanam sarvadhanapradhānam.

Since knowledge is not subject to loss, knowledge based ānandā, will be life-long. Knowledge based peace of mind, will be life-long. There is no anxiety; therefore Kṛṣṇa says, that is called sātvik pleasure. Spiritual joy is sātvik joy. So he says ātma buddhi prasādam. Ātma buddhi means ātma jñānam. Here the word buddhihi means jñānam; Ātma buddhi means ātma jñānam. Prasāda means tranquility; relaxed condition; a stress free state of mind; a de-stressed mind; Not distressed mind; previously it was distressed mind; now it has become de-stressed mind; that is called prasāda; and this prasāda is the result of what? ātma buddhi; thus ātma buddhi prasādam means the tranquility of mind born out of self-knowledge, and this tranquility generates an ānandā; the very tranquility generates an ānandā; you know the ānandā comes from where; it comes from ātma, because ātmanaḥ svarūpam is ānanūdāḥ; therefore atmānandā manifests in a calm mind; so therefore ātma buddhi prasādam; a joy which is born out of tranquility, which itself is born out of self-knowledge; that vidyānandāḥ is sātvic ānandā;

But Kṛṣṇa gives a warning; it is a great ānandā; not even great; the greatest ānandā; most wonderful ānandā; you need not make any insurance against that ānandā; for everything else you have to make insurance; you need not take at all; such a wonderful ānandā it is; but you have to work hard to gain it. It is not easily attainable; you have to go through a long winding spiritual sādhana. Start with karma-yōga; which is nothing but reduction of sakāma karma; and increase of nişkāma karma.

The headache begins there; thus karma-yōga, you have to start with purification of mind, then you have to go through upāsana, turn to extrovert mind inwards, and then you have to gain all the values, amānitvam, adambitvam, ahimsa, śānti (16th chapter), āsuri sampath has to be weeded out; daivi sampath has to be carefully nourished and nurtured; it requires a deliberate committed life. It is an uphill task, Therefore it will appear to be painful initially; It will appear to be painful initially. but if you remember the goal, it will not appear painful, like people going to Manasarovar; there the temperature is so slow; there is a risk involved, there can be land slide; and there can be oxygen deprivation; and all those things will be there; etc. But then why do you people go; and you have to spend how many thousands; why people go and take the pain, because they see what they are going to get at the end, that makes them forget the price that they are paying. Similarly if you see the advantage of this ānandā, you would not mind it; but you should be aware of that; and therefore Kṛṣṇa says agrē viṣam iva; this spiritual joy or the spiritual path appears to be poison in the beginning; poison means painful in the beginning, because it involves discipline; and any person who has succeeded in any field; it is because of hard work; whether it is tennis, cricket, music, or dance or violin, or anything; if a person is effortlessly doing that. You ask him, he will say got up in the morning, 5 hours I did sādhanā, 7 hours I did sādhanā; etc. you have to pay the price for anything; spiritual growth is not natural, it requires efforts; so it appears to be painful.

But what is the great thing? Pariṇāmē, means at the end of it; amṛtōpamam, you enjoy, it is like amrutham or nectar, once you have started seeing the benefit; so pariṇāmē amṛtōpamam. Tat sukham, such an ānandā, which is born out of sādhanā catuṣṭaya sampathi – first stage, sādhanā catuṣṭaya sampathi will itself give an ānandā; later the atmānandā, that ānandā is called sātvic pleasure. An intelligent person chooses sātvic ānandā.

Rājasic Ānanda

Then what is rājasic ānandā; Kṛṣṇa defines.

Verse 18.38

विषयेन्द्रियसंयोगाद् यत्तदग्रेऽमृतोपमम् । परिणामे विषमिव तत्सुखं राजसं स्मृतम् ॥ १८.३८ ॥

viṣayēndriyaśaṃyōgāt yattadagrē'mṛtōpamam |
pariṇāmē viṣamiva tatsukhaṃ rājasam smṛtam || 18.38 ||

राजसं सुखम् rājasam sukham Rājasic happiness स्मृतं तत् smṛtam tat is said to be that यत् तद् अमृतोपमम् yat tad amṛtōpamam which is like nectar अग्रे agrē in the beginning इव विषम् iva viṣam which is like poison परिणामे pariṇāmē in the end विषयेन्द्रियसंयोगात् viṣayēndriyaśaṃyōgāt and which is born out of the contact between sense-objects and sense organs.

38. Rājasic happiness is said to be that which is like nectar in the beginning, which is like the poison in the end, and which is born out of the contact between sense-objects and sense organs.

So rājasic pleasure Kṛṣṇa defines, as all those pleasures, which are born out of sensory contact. So we have got five sense organs and the world consists of sense objects, śabda, sparsa, rupa, rasa and gandha, and we have got the five sense organs and because of their association, like nice music, nice picture, nice form, nice smell, nice taste, nice touch; all of them will certainly give an ānandā; contact born ānandā called samsarjaḥ bhōgāḥ. And certainly they are wonderful. But Kṛṣṇa says you have to note the statutory warning; what is that? Any contact is not permanent. Any contact is not permanent; and therefore contact born pleasure is also not permanent.

And therefore it will go away and when it goes away, there are two problems; one is vacuum is generated, and the other is depression or sorrow is generated; vacuum and depreciation or sorrow, these are inevitable consequence of rājasic sukham. You can choose whether you want rājasic sukham or not; but you note the statutory warning.

Therefore he says; viṣayēndriyaśaṃyōgāt; viṣaya means sense organs, śabda, sparśa, rūpa, rasa, gandha, and indriya means sense organs, śaṃyōga means contact, the contact is not natural; we have to work for that contact; and create an atmosphere, in which there will be no disturbances around. I should enjoy that contact without disturbance. If you have that; you would have ānandā; amṛtōpamam, you get a job which is like amṛutham, the best food that you eat is certainly amṛutham; When you order and eat, but Kṛṣṇa adds a class, Agrē, means what, in the beginning; suppose you like ice-cream; you ate the first one; and I say eat the second one, and then I command him to eat the third; and force him, first it is request; force him to eat the fourth; five or six; let us assume twenty; a time comes when he has eaten to his fill, that the very sight of this create a nausea; he will run away. Law of diminishing return.

You buy a cassette; how many cassette you have at home, which are now lying full of dust; want to regularly listen; daily listen; then once in a week, once in a month, then you will forget that is there; whether it is music or anything; you take, sensory pleasures are wonderful only in the beginning.

Therefore agrē amṛtōpamam; and even if you enjoy them, all the time, you cannot hold any object permanently, kālam brings a separation. Whether you like or not; a time which brings things together, the very time, separates things. So samyōga is because of kala; viyōga also is because of kala. And when that viyōga comes, it is going to be painful and the pain will be directly proportional to the pleasure that input gives; we would not like to think about it; because the very thought is disturbing; as Arjuna in the first chapter thought of losing Bhīṣmā, Drōṇā, etc. that time itself, it was sīdanti mama gātrani, mukham ca pariśuśyathi; etc. the very thought gave pain then what to talk of event.

Therefore Kṛṣṇa says: pariṇāmē, the consequence of all the sensory pleasures is viṣam iva. It is like poison and when that pain comes, I need not have chosen this at all; now! pin buddhi; pin buddhi is for all, not for ladies only; pen buddhi, pin buddhi; எல்ல புத்தியும் பின்புத்திதான். Ella buddhiyum pinbuddhi than. Therefore pariṇāmē viṣam iva, it is like poison.

Tatsukham rājasam smṛtam; such a pleasure rājasic pleasure. Therefore you give up rājasic pleasure, and even if you do not want to give up rājasic pleasure, you have them, but keep sātvik ānandā as a back up. Rājasic pleasure is like our electricity broad; or corporation water; if you want to use corporation water, you can use, but have a back up; have a borewell; like that you can have sense pleasures, I mean, moral sense pleasures, if you want to have, at least have vidhyānandā; so that when the sense pleasures are there, you can enjoy, if that gone, nothing to worry, automatically ātmānandā; uninterrupted ānandā supply, UAS, not UPS, uninterrupted supply; therefore people around have money, have comfort, but also have ātmānandā.

So that there is no anxiety, power is there use it or automatically, ātman ēva ātmana thuṣṭa; but relying exclusively on rājasic pleasure is a risky thing; either exclusively rely on sātvic ānandā. Leave aside rājasic pleasure, or have rājasic pleasure, and at least have sātvic ānandā as back up.

This is the warning that Kṛṣṇa gives; I If you do not have back up and totally depend upon the world, that is called saṁsāra; is the riskiest proposal. This you will understand, if you think. An intelligent person will understand, even by projecting but otherwise, a person has to get thrashing.

Like you give the example of the monkey, when the monkey does lot of mischief, they want to punish; What do they do, it seems is; they have a vessel with a short neck which is fixed on a ground; the vessel is on the ground and there is a narrow neck and inside they put the groundnut. And the monkey what it does it do; it loves and takes one fist full of groundnut, once it is fistful, the hand has become big and you cannot take it out; then it tries to take the hand out; not able to; then this fellow who want to teach the lesson, gives left and right. What should the monkey do, if it were intelligent? How will the monkey know if you yourselves do not know; we are also monkeys! It has to drop attachment or get thrashing; drop and take out the hand nicely and get out; But the monkey does not have buddhi; why, that is why it is monkey; and therefore it holds on to it on the one side and gets thrashing on the back; Similarly all the people will get thrashing and when thrashing they get, little by little buddhi will come, and then alone they start seriously what is Bhagavat Gīta.

Come to the next class. Hari Om

Lord Kṛṣṇa talked about three types of jñānam, three types of karma, three types of karta, three types of buddhiḥ, and three types of dṛṭiḥ; jñānam, karma, kartā, buddhiḥ, dṛṭiḥ; all these five items he classified based on the three guṇas, and he has come to the final topic of sukham, even though happiness experienced is one and the same, based on the way that we gain our happiness, it is divided into three types, sātvika, rājasa and tāmasa sukham and there we have been sātvic and rājasic sukham in verse no.37 ad 38.

And of this satvik sukham is the best and ideal, even though it is difficult to sātvica ānanda. It is the ideal one because, in sātvica ānanda, I learn to gain ānanda and śānti from within myself. It is an ānanda, in which I do not depend upon external factors, having known the unpredictability of external factors, having known the uncontrollability of the external factors, I consider it wise to depend upon myself. Just as every country, works for self-sufficiency in every field, here the individual works for self-sufficiency in the field of peace and happiness.

And to discover that one has to refine oneself; both in terms of maturity as well as understanding. A lot of understanding is required with regard to the world and myself and therefore Lord Kṛṣṇa said tapping sātvica sukham is initially difficult, but once a person has to learned to be happy with himself or herself; thereafter there is no threat at all.

Then he defined the rājasa-sukham in the next verse, we completed in the last class; here a person gains ānanda from external conditions; he works hard to set up an appropriate condition; he works for an ideal infrastructure; and he works for even ordering the human-beings around and by creating those conditions, he derives happiness from the setup. And that happiness is also wonderful alright, but Kṛṣṇa said that there are inherent problems.

And what is the inherent problem? A set-up is not totally under my control. Any set up is highly fragile; highly fluid. What change will happen where and when I do not know. The weather changes, the economic conditions change, the political order changes. In business, one need not ask. In stock market the things are fragile, and the people's behaviour, it is highly unpredictable; and my own family members; how they will behave I do not know; previously we had at least a few trustworthy relationship; now the modern materialistic society is such that every relationship has become fragile. Whether it is brother-brother relationship; whether children-parent relationship; whether it is husband-wife relationship. One student was telling the other day, Swamiji, when I went to the Court for some purpose, I see everyday thousands of couple are coming. Big crowd it seems, You know: for what? Separation. Thousands and not per month or per year, per day. So there is no relationship which seems to be trustworthy, reliable or permanent. This is supposed to be in our tradition, the most sacred and also the prayer is until death; all the vivahā mantras you read, the prayer is we should grow old together. This is the prayer and by mind and thinking should be in keeping with your mind.

me hṛdyam tava hṛdayē, thava hridayam, me hridaye; (what is the use of I remembering these mantras!) இந்த மன்திரத்தை நான் ஞாபகம் வைத்துகொண்டு என்ன ப்ரயோஜனம்? Wonderful mantras are there; everything gone; and therefore no relationship is reliable, and no set up is reliable, no job is reliable and therefore peace and happiness which depends upon a fragile set up will be in trouble. This is the inherent disadvantage in rājasic sukham, because it is set up based.

And that is why I told you before, when set up is reversed, it becomes what? Upset. So whenever you say you say you are upset, what is your complaint? The set-up is not to my expectations. Therefore rājasic sukham, highly expectation based. And any expectation based ānanda; will have lot of problems.

Swami Chinmayānanda nicely said, a person who keeps appointments with future, will often face disappointment. Because the future is not in my hands.

And therefore we have only one way; either we have to relinquish rājasa sukham and go after sātṛvica sukham, that is one method; or the other method as I said is, go after rājasa sukham; nothing wrong; of course in a moral, legitimate way go after sense pleasures, nothing wrong; but always keep sātṛvica sukham as a back up like the UPS or generator, so that I am fine when the set-up is fine; and I am fine when the set-up is not fine also.

This development of self-adequacy is the solution. This is rājasic sukham which we saw in the last class.

Tāmasa sukham

Now we have to go to the tāmasa sukham. Verse No.39.

Verse 18.39

यदग्रे चानुबन्धे च सुखं मोहनमात्मनः ।
निद्रालस्यप्रमादोत्थं तत्तामसमुदाहृतम् ॥ १८.३९ ॥

yadagrē cānubandhē ca sukhaṁ mōhanamātmanaḥ |
nidrālasypmamādōttham tattāmasamudāhṛtam || 18.39 ||

तामसं सुखम् tāmasaṁ sukham Tāmasic happiness उदाहृतं तत् udāhṛtam tat is said to be that यद् मोहनम् आत्मनः yad mōhanam ātmanaḥ which deludes the mind, अग्रे च agrē ca in the beginning च अनुबन्धे ca anubandhē and in the end निद्रालस्यप्रमादोत्थम् nidrālasypmamādōttham and which is born out of sleep, indolence and negligence.

So tāmasic sukham is based on the philosophy, ignorance is bliss; and the sleep is bliss; and laziness is bliss; based on that philosophy, a person who continues to lazy and enjoys that ānanda, that is called tāmasa sukham.

So he says, yat sukham nidrālasypmamādōttham, nidrā means sleep, is a source of ānanda.

Ālasya means laziness or non-working, indolence; and pramāda, means negligence or carelessness; let anything happen, whatever happen, let anything happen; whether Rāma rules or Rāvaṇa rules, whether dharma is there or adharma is there; these people would be generally fatalistic people. Fatalism is an ideal argument which supports and promotes fatalism, because in fatalism I do not accept a freewill and I do not believe that I can take charge of my future. I have concluded that everything is predetermined. Bhagavān has already written everything on the forehead:

हरिणापि हरेणापि ब्रह्मणापि सुरैरपि
ललाट लिकीता रेखा, परिमार्जुम् न शक्यते ॥

hariṇāpi harēṇāpi brahmaṇāpi surairapi
lalāṭa likitā rekhā, parimārjum na śakyatē ||

he will quote this ślōkā readily from memory. What is already written on the forehead cannot be erased. Parihāram will not work; we do not have freewill at all; future is not in our hands; we are all puppets in the hands of the Lord; therefore whatever happens, let it happen. Fatalism is an ideal philosophy for this tāmasic person.

Whereas a rājasic person believes future prosperity is in my hand, and is an ambitious person, and at least materialistically works hard. because he wants to earn money and a sātvic person also puts forth efforts, because he is interested in sādhana chatustaya sampathi, citta śuddhi, guru prāp̥thi, jñāna prāp̥thi; sātvic person uses freewill, rājasic person uses freewill, and tāmasic person does not believe in freewill and even if he accepts he does not use it; and therefore his life is spent on nidra, ālasya, pramāda; another beautiful verse says:

काव्य शास्त्र विनोदेन, कलो गच्छति दीमता
व्यसनेन च मूर्काणाम्, निद्रया कलहेन व ॥

kāvyā śāstra vinodēna, kalo gacchati dīmatā vyasanena ca mūrkaṇām, nidrayā kalahēna va ॥

Noble people spend their life in the study of kāvyam, śāstram, etc. That is the ānanda they get; but the murkhas, the tāmasic people, vyasanēna; either they are addicted to something, or they are busy complaining about things; or they go on sleeping or they quarrel with people. This is how tāmasic people spend their time. Therefore nidrā ālasya, pramāda, uttam sukham.

And what is the nature of this happiness? This happiness being tāmasic happiness, it will dullen our intellect; no doubt sleep gives joy; because in sleep, we are free from our ego. Just as a jñāni is free from ahaṁkāra, in sleep also one is free from ahaṁkāra. Therefore there is joy; but the problem is the intellect becomes more and more dull. And therefore ātmana mōhanam; mōhanam means deluding, thinking power deteriorates; discriminating power deteriorates; ātmana, ātma here means the mind, or specifically intellect it deludes and when does it delude the intellect? agre cha, anubandē cha; before enjoying tāmasic pleasure, during the enjoyment of tāmasic pleasure, and after the enjoyment of the tāmasic pleasure; throughout it deludes a person; and such a deluding ānanda is tāmasic ānanda.

And in his case, he might have lead a happy life alright; but the greatest tragedy is the entire human life becomes a waste; animals also enjoy tāmasic pleasure, and they are forced to enjoy tāmasic pleasure; because they do not have a freewill; but when I am endowed with a freewill, and I do not use the freewill and enjoy a tāmasic life; the human life becomes equivalent to animal life. And Bhagavan decides that even after giving human body he is living like an animal, So next birth he is fit to be an animal only. He will not create such a conflict and directly he will give an animal body. So now he is like a buffalo; next janma, you will make a proper authenticated buffalo. So this is tāmasic sukam.

And what is the aim of a human being? From tāmasic sukham, gradually go to rājasic sukham; vēda allows sense pleasures; vēda never considers sense pleasures as pāpam. All sensory enjoyments like music or good food, everything you can enjoy; but vēda only puts a condition when you enjoy the worldly pleasures, let them be dharmic in nature. Dharma anusari rājasa sukham you enjoy; and when you enjoy rājasic pleasure in keeping with dharma, gradually we will be ready for sātvic sukham. Thus the journey is from tāmasic, to rājasic to sātvic and the height of sātvic sukham is ātma jñāna janya ānandaḥ; ātman ēva ātmana tuṣṭaḥ.

With this three types of sukham also are over. Now we will enter into next topic is in verse No.40.

Verse 18.40

न तदस्ति पृथिव्यां वा दिवि देवेषु वा पुनः ।
सत्त्वं प्रकृतिजैर्मुक्तं यदेभिः स्यात्त्रिभिर्गुणैः ॥ १८.४० ॥

na tadasti pṛthivyām vā divi dēvēṣu vā punaḥ |
sattvaṁ prakṛtijairmuktaṁ yadēbhiḥ syāt tribhirguṇaiḥ || 18.40 ||

देवेषु वा dēvēṣu vā among the gods दिवि divi in the heaven, वा पुनः vā punaḥ or (among the beings), पृथिव्याम् pṛthivyām on the earth अस्ति asti there is, न तत् सत्त्वम् na tat sattvam no such entity यत् स्यात् yat syāt which is मुक्तम् एभिः muktaṁ ēbhiḥ free from these त्रिभिः गुणैः tribhiḥ guṇaiḥ three guṇas.

In this verse, Lord Kṛṣṇa winds up the discussion of the sātvic, rājasic, tāmasic division. He had taken up six topics as I said in the beginning, jñānam, karma, kartā, buddhi and sukham. Now in this concluding verse, Lord Kṛṣṇa says I have taken these six topics as sample topics. Really speaking, anything in the creation can be divided into three types. Do not go with the conclusion that only these six items are three fold; anything you see, they divide even plants into sātvic, rājasic and tāmasic. Animals they divided into sātvic, rājasic and tāmasic; anything in the creation you can divide into three because the whole creation is born out of these three guṇas only.

If you remember the fourteenth chapter, there the Lord Kṛṣṇa said the entire material universe is born out of māya or prakṛti; which is the material aspect of the Lord; from that prakṛti or māya alone the creation has come; and maya is made up three guṇas and therefore all the products of māya also will be made up of three guṇas; because the law is whatever be the constituents of the cause, that will be the constituents of the effect also.

If everything is made up of these three guṇas; and how come there are so many differences in the creation if you ask; Kṛṣṇa answered in the fourteenth chapter, the differences are caused by the proportion of the three guṇas.

If you take an inert object, it also has got three guṇas; but the thing is, inert objects are tamō guṇa dominant; and therefore they are inert. And from the inert object you come to the plant kingdom; the plants are also almost like inert object, because plants do not move from one place to another. Imagine the road side plants starts walking; they do not move; So they are like rock or mountains, they are stationary, they are acala, therefore they are tamō guṇa predominant, but they have got a little bit more satva and rajas, that is why plants are live beings.

And from the plants when you come to the animals, you find tamō-guṇa is lesser, rajas and satva-guṇa becomes more dominant; they are more aware of the environment; and some of the animals are more intelligent also. Like gorillas, or dolphins, etc. they are more intelligent also;. And from animals you come to human beings, there satva and rajas still more dominant and among the human-beings themselves, there satva very dominant beings are there. And the whole creation is what? Three guṇas in different proportions; and therefore Kṛṣṇa concludes saying that this three-fold classification you can do with regard to everything, what I have done is a sample to show how to do that.

Therefore he says: tribhihi guṇaihi muktham satvam nāsthi. Satvam means an entity; living or non-living; sentient or insentient; here the word satvam in the second line does not mean satva-guṇa. The word satvam in the second line means any entity; thṛbihi guṇabi muktham nāsthi is not free from the three guṇas. Any entity in the creation, or no entity in the creation is free from three guṇas. That means what double negative; no entity is free from three guṇas; means every entity has got three guṇas; therefore even the inert clip is made up of three guṇas only; but only difference is here 99.9999% is tamas; therefore it is almost a tāmasic vasthu only; and that is why consciousness is not reflected in this matter.

So therefore from inert thing, to the highest human being. So thṛbihi guṇaihi muktham, satvam nāsthi. And what are the three guṇas? prakṛtijaihi guṇai; these three guṇas which are carried form the original cause of the creation called prakṛti.

So every entity has got three guṇas. If you analyse, the immediate cause is the pañca bhūtas. And the pañcabhūtas are the five elements also have got three guṇas; the sātṛvica, rājasā, tāmasā ākaśā; sātṛvica rājasā tāmasā vāyu; similarly triguṇatmaka Agni , jalam, pṛthvi; so the five elements have got three guṇas, and therefore their products also. And if you find out the five elements have got three guṇas, you find that their cause is maya or prakṛti, therefore the ultimate source of three guṇas is prakṛti or māya. Therefore Kṛṣṇa says prakṛtijaiḥ guṇai bhi muktham vasthu nāsti.

Then Kṛṣṇa says that this is only true with regard to the earthly beings; this is not only with regard to the earthly entities, it can be extended to all the fourteen lōkās; Therefore he says prithivyaṃ va; whether the entity belongs to the pṛthvi, that is the bhūlōka, or divi devaśu va; you take the heavenly beings in the upper lōkhās, consisting of six lōkas, bhūvar lōkās, suvar lōkā, mahar lōkā, jana lōkā, tapō lōkā, satya lōkā; all the upper lōkās and you can extend it to even the lower lōkās, everywhere. Moment you are in a world, there are also sātvic, rājasic tāmasic will be there; divi devēṣu va; thribihi guṇaibhi muktham tat satvam nāsthi.

And from this Kṛṣṇa says every human being is also governed by the three guṇas; and which means you as an individual sādakā also, your thoughts, your actions, your words, your activities, your behaviour, everything is governed by the three guṇas. So if you understand the three guṇas; you can guide your life appropriately. This knowledge is useful for spiritual sādhanā also.

Thus with the 40th verse, Kṛṣṇa concludes the classification of six items into three guṇas. Now Kṛṣṇa is going to enter another topic, we will see that verse No.41.

Verse 18.41

ब्राह्मणक्षत्रियविशां शूद्राणां च परन्तप ।
कर्माणी प्रविभक्तानी स्वभावप्रभवैर्गुणैः ॥ १८.४१ ॥

[Brāhmaṇakṣatriyaviśāṃ śūdrāṇāṃ ca parantapa |

गुणैः guṇaiḥ according to Guṇas स्वभावप्रभवैः svabhāvaprabhavaiḥ born of Prakriti कर्माणि karmāṇi duties प्रविभक्तानि pravibhaktāni are allotted ब्राह्मणक्षत्रियविशाम् brāhmaṇakṣatriyaviśāṃ to brahmanas, kṣatriyas, vaiśyas च शूद्राणाम् ca śūdrāṇām and sudras परन्तप parantapa oh Arjuna.

In the following verses, Lord Kṛṣṇa wants to summarise the two central themes of the Bhagavad-Gīta once again. He has talked about the two main themes of the Gīta already in the beginning of the 18th chapter; but since they are very important; he summarises them once again, in the light of our guṇa knowledge.

And what are the two important topics of the Gīta? I said karma-yōga and jñāna-yōga; karma-yōga is that life-style in which one dedicates his life to various contributory activities, to purify the mind. In simple terms, a religious lifestyle to prepare or purify the mind, for gaining jñāna-yōgyatha prapthiḥ. It is an extrovert life; active life, otherwise called, pravṛtti.

And everybody has to go through this lifestyle and everybody has to contribute to the creation because every moment I live, I am taking from the creation. Every moment I am breathing oxygen; I am drinking water; I am eating food, I am indebted to the creation; for every moment of my living. So I should ask a question what is my compensation or contribution. This is required. Only then we will feel that we have lead a purposeful life; in fact our self-esteem, which they are talking so much about now, our self-esteem and image will increase only when we feel I have done some purposeful contribution to the creation. Any time you do something to the creation; you will find that day a sense of fulfilment. Not big work necessary; even guiding a person to the appropriate address. Not guiding to the wrong address is itself a great help, even guiding a person, a nice thing you do, a sense of mission; I have lead purposefully. Therefore karma-yōga leading a purposeful useful life is required for the initial stage of growth. This involves an extrovert life.

And the second stage is jñāna-yōgaḥ; the second stage of growth is nivṛthi, where the karma is reduced, and even if you do not want to willfully reduce, your body will not allow you to do karma. You want to do a lot of karma and even get up and quickly get up and fall. then only you know, mind works faster, but the body does not work as faster as the mind; you will take a long time to understand this; therefore Bhagavan has kept the body also for nivṛtti after the first fifty-sixty years so that we will spend time in jñāna-yōga.

So the second stage of life is what, nivṛtti or jñāna-yōga pradhāna life; Kṛṣṇa has talked about this before, Kṛṣṇa wants to condense that once again; verse No.41 to verse No. 49 is summary of karma-yōga, emphasising svadharma.

And here Kṛṣṇa says we all have to contribute something to the creation; it is not enough that we measure our success in terms of what we have gained. Material growth is measured in terms of what we have gained; external growth is measured in terms of what we have gained, but spiritual growth or inner growth is measured in terms of what we have given. External growth depends upon your possession; internal growth depends upon your dispossession. External growth depends upon your bhōga and internal growth depends upon your tyāga. What you have renounced? Na karmaṇa na prajaya dānēēa, tyagē naikē amṛtatva manasu. That is why somebody said; What is the sara of Gīta? They said reverse the two letters and read; if you reverse what is that Gīta, Gīta, Gīta, thyā gi, means thyagi. Therefore becoming a tyāgi; from bhōgi to yōgi to tyāgi, that is the destination. If you are going to remain bhōgi, bhōgi, bhōgi, you will end up a rōgi; that is not the aim.

Now the next question is once I have decided to contribute something; in which field I will contribute, because there are so many fields. Kṛṣṇa says you cannot contribute in every field, because you do not have the capacity and if you try to contribute in every field, there will be only confusion; choose one field and contribute according to your capacity and let the field be chosen by your inclination and aptitude. Based on your guṇa, whether satva is dominant, rajō-guṇa is dominant or tamō guṇa is dominant, based on your guṇa or character or inclination or aptitude, choose any field of work and do something.

And Kṛṣṇa divides the entire humanity in four types as we have seen in the fourth chapter, I do not know whether you remember; SRT, RST, RTS, and TRS. எல்லாரும் என்னை முழிச்சு பார்க்கிறேள்! All of you are staring at me confused.

So SRT means satva-guṇa is dominant, rajō-guṇa is next, tamō guṇa is least, this is a person of one type; so he is relatively quiet, not highly active; contemplative minded person;

And the second one is rajō-guṇa pradhāna; satva-guṇa second, tamō-guṇa third, or RST, these are active people, but selfishly active people.

And third one is RTS, rajō-guṇa dominant, next is tamō-guṇa, least is satva-guṇa; there are also active; but selfishly active.

And the fourth one is TRS, tamō-guṇa pradhāna and therefore minimum active, because tamō-guṇa is dominant, they do not have discriminative power. Therefore they take up unskilled activity; and you can choose what type of field you would like to and based on these four guṇas, Kṛṣṇa talks about four types of karma also; and these four groups are called in the śāstra as guṇa brāhmaṇaḥ, guṇa kṣatriyaḥ, guṇa vaiśyaḥ or guṇa śudraḥ; guṇa brāhmaṇaḥ is the SRT variety; guṇa kṣatriya is the RST type; guṇa vaiśya is the RTS group, and guṇa śudra is the TRS, fourth chapter, I think the 13th verse, we have dealt with it.

चातुर्वर्ण्यं मया सृष्टं गुणकर्मविभागशः ।
तस्य कर्तारमपि मां विद्धु यकर्तारमव्ययम् ॥ ४.१३ ॥

[Cāturvarṇyam mayā sṛṣṭam guṇakarmavibhāgaśaḥ |
tasya kartāramapi māṁ viddhyakartāramavyayam || 4.13 ||](#)

There I dealt with it in two classes; therefore I do not want to deal with it again.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa introduces these four people, during his summary; and remember, here the division is based on character, and not based on birth, when the division is based on birth, it is called jāti brāhmaṇaḥ, jāti kshatriya, jāti vaiśya and jāti śudra, that is called the caste system. Caste system is birth based division. Kṛṣṇa is talking about guṇa based division; and he says it is better to choose a profession based on your aptitude.

So now look at the slōkā; brāhmaṇa kṣatriyaḥ viśaḥ śudraṇam cha. There are four categories of people, known as brāhmaṇa, kṣatriyaḥ, viśaḥ means vaiśyaḥ and śudraḥ, again not based on birth but on guṇa; a person may be a jāti brāhmaṇa, but he may be guṇa śudra, or guṇa vaiśya or guṇa kṣatriya or a guṇa brāhmaṇa, we are talking about jāti or character or aptitude.

And for these four groups of people, karmaṇi pravibhaktāni, four types of professions are allotted by the vādās themselves; four types of fields of activity, four types of fields of service, four slots are given. So that through that profession, I can contribute to the society and feel fulfilled. Therefore Kṛṣṇa says karma, means profession, pravibhaktāni, have been allotted; by whom, by the vādās; or since the vādās are given out by the Lord himself, this has been done by the Lord himself. Where is it said in the vādās? In the well known Puruṣa Sūktham.

ऊरू तदस्य यद्वैश्यः पद्भ्यां शूद्रो अजायत ॥१२॥

[brāhmaṇō:'sya mukhamāsīd bāhū rājanyaḥ kṛtaḥ |
ūrū tadasya yadvaiśyaḥ padbhyām śūdrō ajāyata ||12||](#)

There the Puruṣa Sūktham says: an individual himself has got four organs which can be equated to the four groups. So therefore the head is like the Brāhmaṇa, taking care of the knowledge activities, sātvic activity, and the hands are like kshatriya, taking care of the defence activity and other types of activities, and the thighs are like vaisya, which supports the individual to stand; economy has to grow well for the country to survive; and then the legs are there comparable to śudra; the legs carry the individual from one place to another place; and by this comparison, the vāda says; all the four activities are equally sacred. The activity of the head, the activity of the hands, the activity of the thigh, and the activity of the leg, all four professions are equally sacred; never say one profession is superior; and therefore karmani pravibhaktāni.

If all professions are equal, on what basis should I choose my profession; this is the basic issue; I have to choose some profession; profession is the field through which I contribute to the society. What profession I should choose is the biggest problem? after plus two in college, what to take, whether IT, whether medicine, whether engineering, whether CA etc. the parents discuss and the child says I want to be Tendulkar; I want to be a cricket; the parents want to compare, all kinds of problem, what should be basis of choosing the profession. There are three possibilities;

There are three possibilities or norms in choosing the profession.

One norm can be the profession that you love; that in which you have got an inclination; an aptitude; this is called guṇa based choice of karma or profession.

And the second norm is what? Birth based choice of profession, hereditary profession, if father is businessman, in many business it happens; the child also, they just get some education and they start going with the father and slowly he also learns the trick of the trade, to tell lies! Just joke, what to do and what not to do; learning the tricks of the trade, he moves with the father and takes father's profession. In India, even politicians take. The son becomes the leader of the party; or the wife becomes the leader of the party, even if she is a foreigner; the Congress is saying quit India to the foreigner and the very same Congress is inviting a foreigner also; I do not want to enter into political field. So what I am saying is you choose the hereditary profession.

And the third option is what? Go by money? which profession pays me well; in which one can earn more; this is the third option; According to our tradition, they say the best norm is guṇa norm; going by svabhava is the best; because the advantage is when I love what I do; I enjoy doing that; I put my heart and soul; I will not be even bothered about the salary very much; I won't even be bothered about other people's acknowledgement; please ask me. Swamiji you have been teaching Gīta again and again; are you not bored? I love teaching, whether you love or not; if you get bored, you do not come. So when you love the very very profession is fulfilment; as a karta, you get the phalam; you do not wait for the future consequence, you do not want to become a bhōktā to enjoy; as a karta itself, from the first moment of your action, maja maja maja. In fact, you look forward to Monday; otherwise you look forward to week-end. And by the time weakened comes you are weakened. And Sunday comes you do not enjoy. Imagine 25 years you are in a field which you do not enjoy; the personality is shattered.

Therefore ideal is what? Going by guṇa; but the problem is for many people they do not know how to determine their guṇa; they are confused. Swamiji, in the morning, it seems like satvik, in the afternoon, I am a rājasic a little bit; in the evening tāmasic; embodiment of tamas, day to day varies, like weather; therefore I am not able to determine; I am confused.

And therefore they say if you do not know how to go by your guṇa, the next best is what, go by hereditary. Because the advantage you are brought up in the environment of family profession; the environment helps you develop the capacity; therefore this is the second option; in both of them, competition is also not too much; because when brāhmaṇa takes only brāhmaṇa profession; hereditarily there is no competition; because kṣatriya will not come to brāhmaṇa profession; vaisya will not come brāhmaṇa profession. In the first two norms, the advantage is competition is very very less; therefore the śāstra grades in this manner. Go by guṇa or by jāti. And what is the third possibility; money money money; and śāstra says if it is money based, then there will be lot of problems because all the people will be running after one profession and for certain professions there will be no people at all, and especially for the preservation and propagation of the scriptures, nobody will come.

So there will be no one for the scriptural protection; all the brāhmaṇas will also take to kṣatriya, vaiśya, śūdra job; kṣatriya will also take to these jobs, and vaiśya will also take to these jobs, and śūdra will also take to these jobs; and the greatest tragedy will be what? The scriptural teaching will gradually be forgotten. This will be the problem; therefore money based profession is not healthy; guṇa based is the best.

Therefore Kṛṣṇa says svabhāva prabhavai hi guṇaiḥ; based on one's guṇa character; which is svabhāva prabhavai hi; which is born out of prakṛti. Here the word svabhāva is prakṛti; prabhava is born out of, based on your guṇa; which is born out of the prakṛti or maya; based on that guṇa; karmas are allotted; and do that karma and be proud of what ever profession you take up.

Do not compare with other person's profession. Be contented with that; and love that; and do your best, you can make your life and get fulfilment in any field. Even a traffic police gets prize sometimes; he does that with satisfaction; any profession you can excel; learn to excel in whatever you do and learn to enjoy the karma rather than waiting for karma-phalam. Karma phalam based enjoyment is risky, because karma-phalam is not in your hand; karma-phalam based enjoyment is risky because karma-phalam is not in your hand; promotion is not in your hand, another person may apply maska to the boss; without doing the work but by helping the boss's wife, he gets the promotion; தாயார் வழி tayar vazhi, in viśiṣṭa advaita; and this person who works well, he is disappointed as he is not considered for promotion, because it is risky. Karma based joy, no risk at all because, it is in my hands.

Hari Om

ॐ

In the first part of the 18th chapter, Lord Kṛṣṇa has summarised the entire Gīta teaching, consisting of the two primary spiritual sādhanas, viz., karma-yōga and jñāna-yōga and Kṛṣṇa has not presented them as two optional sādhanas, but Kṛṣṇa has presented them as two compulsory sādhanas for all the people; but to be practiced in two stages; like graduation and post graduation, they are to be followed in two stages; the first stage being karma-yōga pradhāna and the second stage is jñāna-yōga pradhāna. Karma-yōga sādhanā prepares the mind for jñāna-yōga gives the spiritual knowledge and liberation, this is the essence of the Gīta teaching.

Even though Kṛṣṇa has summarized this in the first part, being very important, Kṛṣṇa repeats these two topics once again in the following verses also but from a different angle.

From the 41st verse, which I introduced in the last class, Lord Kṛṣṇa introduces karma-yōga sādhanā again; giving importance to svadharma, and in this part, Lord Kṛṣṇa says every being has to take up some profession or the other and has to contribute to the creation. Initial growth of every human being takes place through contribution.

Even though through profession we may earn money, that earning money is only an incidental bye-product. Spiritually, from spiritual angle, we should look upon the first stage of life as a contribution to the society; through any profession in which you are adept; and through this contribution, this very giving should be looked upon as a worship of the Viśvarūpa Īśvara, because in Vēdic teaching Bhagavān and world are one and the same. As we have seen in the 11th chapter, Bhagavān alone appears as the world; therefore contribution to the creation is a form of offering to the Lord, as we are chanting the prayer verse.

यत् यत् कर्म करोमि तत् तत् अकिलम् शंभो तवाराधनम्

yat yat karma karōmi tat tat akilam śambhō tavārādhanam

जगतः ईशधीयुक्तसेवनम् । अष्टमूर्तिभृद्देवपूजनम् ॥ ५ ॥

jagataḥ īśadhīyuktasēvanam | aṣṭamūrtibhṛddēvapūjanam || 5 ||

which means we all have to take up some profession or the other.

So the question will come, what type of profession I should take? Lord Kṛṣṇa says all professions are equally great. There is no superior profession or inferior profession, because all professions are like the different functions of the different organs of the body. In an organism, just as there are different organs, doing different functions, the whole society is like a huge organism, and any group of people, taking any type of profession is an organ of the society, the huge organism. And since all professions are equally sacred, the question will come which one I should take. Kṛṣṇa says the primary criteria should be your svabhāva.

According to your svabhāva, or guṇa or inclination, choose the profession, because if your profession and svabhāva are in alignment, you would love the very profession. It will not be a strain in your personality; you will not hate your profession; you would not look forward to the week-end, you will look forward to the week days. And therefore svabhāva based choice of profession, is the best. And if you are not able to do that, if you are confused and you do not know what your svabhāva is, that is my svabhāva if he has, what is that? Doubting, doubting is my svabhāva. And what is the doubt? What is my svabhāva is the doubt? What to do? and I feel today I am sātvic, tomorrow I am rājasic, today doing business is good; tomorrow working under someone is good; all confusions and then we say if you are not able to choose, go by hereditary, and whatever has been the traditional profession, you take to that, because you have an environment created by your parent and grandparents. So either svabhāva-based or jāti-based hereditary. Of course, later jāti based profession became prominent in our society; once upon a time, Brahmins by birth took to priesthood; Kṣatriyā by birth took to administration; vaiśyas by birth took to business, but now again that system is going, but the idea is, svabhāva norm is the best; therefore Kṛṣṇa said svabhāvaprabhavaiguṇaiḥ; based on the guṇas, based on the prakṛti; karmāṇi pravibhaktāni professions are categorised. And all these professions are broadly classified into four types, brāhmaṇa karma, Kṣatriyā karma, vaiśya karma and śūdra karma. And what are those four professions? Kṛṣṇa is going to define in the following verses; we will read verse No.42.

Verse 18.42

शमो दमस्तपः शैचं क्षान्तिरार्जवमेव च ।
ज्ञानं विज्ञानमास्तिक्यम् ब्रह्मकर्म स्वभावजम् ॥ १८.४२ ॥

śamō damastapaḥ śaucam kṣāntirārjavamēva ca |
jñānam vijñānamāstikyam brahmakarma svabhāvajam || 18.42 ||

शमः śamaḥ mind control दमः damaḥ sense-control तपः tapaḥ austerity शौचम् śaucam purity क्षान्तिः kṣāntiḥ patience आर्जवम् ārjavam straightforwardness ज्ञानम् jñānam jñānam विज्ञानम् vijñānam vijñānam एव च आस्तिक्यम् ēva ca āstikyam and faith ब्रह्मकर्म स्वभावजम् brahmakarma svabhāvajam are duties of the brāhmaṇas

42. Mind-control, sense-control, austerity, purity, patience, straightforwardness, jñānam, vijñānam, and faith are the duties of the brāhmaṇas born of (their) nature.

So what is brāhmaṇa karma? Kṛṣṇa says brāhmaṇa karma is preservation and propagation of the scriptural wealth of our tradition. Especially the vēdic tradition has got huge scriptural wealth; they call it caturdaśā vidya sthānāni or aṣṭa daśa vidya sthānāni. They say:

अङ्गानि वेद चत्वार, मिमान्स, न्याय विस्तराः
पुराणाम् धर्म शास्त्रम् च, विद्य हेते चतुर्दशः ॥

aṅgāni vēda catvāra, mimānsa, nyāya vistarāḥ
purāṇām dharmā śāstram ca, vidyā hētē caturdaśaḥ |

Catvāra vēda; the four vēdas themselves are voluminous and in those days, they did not have books, therefore they have to retain in the mind; therefore they have to constantly do pārayāṇam, to retain it. Now itself is in trouble; if you do not chant the guru sthōthram for 4 days, you will forget. After tasmai sree guravai namaha, what is the next one, somebody else has to start. 14 slōkās remembering we are struggling; Remembering the entire vēda, they were learning and propogating; so catvāra vēda, then ṣaṭ aṅgāni, six vēda aṅgas are there, śikṣa, kalpam, vyākaraṇam, niruktha, candaḥ, jyotiṣam;

- śikṣa the science of pronunciation,
- kalpa the science of rituals then etc.
- etimology,
- grammar etc.

all of them we saw in the upaniṣads; four plus six, ten.

mīmāṃsa, nyāya vistarāḥ; mīmāṃsa means the methodology of analysing the vēda. There is a key to open the vēda, you cannot see the dictionary meaning, there is a special grammar called vaidica vyākaraṇam, and vēdic grammar is different from the conventional grammar.

and therefore mīmāṃsa, then nyāya vistarāḥ; nyāya means the science of logical thinking; the science of reasoning; that is important nyāya vistarāḥ; and for each one, we have got 100s of books, commentaries, sub-commentaries, sub-sub-commentaries, sub-sub-sub-commentaries, thus it flows down; and pūraṇam; 18 pūraṇams and 18 upa pūraṇas, even for reading one life is not enough and there are people who have written commentaries.

Sridhara svāmi has written a commentary on the 18,000 verses of Bhagavatvam. One Neelakaṇṭha has written commentary upon on the one lakh verses of Bhāratham. It all requires time, therefore there must be some people committed exclusively to the in-depth study of all these. Therefore pūraṇams, then dharmā śāstra, the science of values; what is ethics, what are the common values, sāmānya dharmā, what are the viśeṣa dharmā, what is brāhmaṇa dharmā, Kṣatriyā dharmā, vaiśya śūdra dharmā, brahmacāri dharmā, gṛhastha dharmā, vānaprastha dharmā, sanyāsi dharmā, puruṣa dharmā, stṛi dharmā (even it has got mixed up in the dress, then what about the dharmā). It is a huge science. And you have to deal with varieties of dharmā sankatas conflict. So when a person has a duty to wife and mother, and wife and mother are quarrelling, and wife tells you decide whom do you want; whether mother or me, you decide, See the dharmā sankatam, who is important, I would not tell you, why should I get caught here?

So thus we have got several role, each role giving a particular dharmā, and if they are mutually reinforcing, no problem; but when they are conflicting how to handle. So dharmā śāstra is a vast subject, vidyā hētē caturdaśaḥ; these are the fourteen vidyas. And if you add the four upa vēdas; like gandharva vēda, ayur vēda, tapatya vēda, etc. fourteen plus four, 18, commentaries on each; lifelong you will have time only to study and teach; and therefore we require an exclusively dedicated group of people who can spend their life time in their study and also condense it and present it to other people who do not have time. Because all the books are in Sānskrīt; and if you have to study the original, one has to study first the Sānskrīt, and if you come to study Sānskrīt, you will get vairāgyam, detachment when you come to Sānskrīt. They will start with sandhi rule, which will never be understood. So when are you going to study the Sānskrīt grammar and read the originals and the sub-commentaries, etc. and commentaries; so it is not possible for all the people and therefore we require an exclusive group, committed to learning and teaching.

And the next thing if my teaching has to be valid and should produce the necessary effect; I should try to follow what I teach. Teaching will never create an impact, if my percept and practice are incongruence. Imagine सत्यं वदः satyam vadaḥ, satyam vadaḥ telling in Sānskrīt, and then outside you do सत्यं वधः satyam vadhaḥ (killing satyam), how will the words of such a hypocritical teacher will enter into the brain of a student; and therefore a brāhmaṇa not only has to learn and teach, he should learn to practice also; that is why ācārya is defined as

स्वयं आचरते यस्मात्, तस्मात् अचार्य उच्यते ॥

[ācinōhi śāstrāṇi, acāryē stapayatyapi
svayam ācaratē yasmāt, tasmāt acārya ucyatē ||](#)

If he wants to request the other people to follow dharmā, first he must follow dharmā; then alone he can boldly ask others to follow. And therefore he should be intellectually learned, and also he must take to a life of karma. And the one who does that and also once a person has dedicated to learning and teaching, the life must be simple. Only a simple life would contribute to high thinking; and a luxurious life is an obstacle to the study.

सुखार्थी त्यजते विद्यां विद्यार्थी त्यजते सुखम् ।
सुखार्थिनः कुतो विद्या कुतो विद्यार्थिनः सुखम् ॥

sukhārthī tyajatē vidyāṁ vidyārthī tyajatē sukham |
sukhārthina: kutō vidya kutō vidyārthina: sukham ||

So sukhārthī tyajatē vidyāṁ. If you are interested in a luxurious life, you will not get opportunity to learn, because you will be busy providing and maintaining the infrastructure for pleasure. That is why in all gurukulams, in those days, life was simple, even a Kṣatriyā king when he goes to gurukulam, he had a simple life and ordinary food. And therefore brāhmaṇa profession means, simple life, study of scriptures, following what is said in the scriptures and teaching the other people the essence of scriptures and serving as a model. What type of model?

Dharma can give happiness, even without a luxury. A brāhmaṇa has to be a model to teach the society. That dharma itself will give happiness; dharma itself will give peace; dharma itself will give security; even though luxuries are not around. Luxury is not a necessity for a happy life; this is a great teaching of the vēda. Luxury is not required for a happy life, luxuries can give physical comfort, happiness has nothing to do with physical comfort; happiness is an inner state.

This has to be taught to the society, not merely verbally, but through his very life style a brāhmaṇa has to teach and therefore brāhmaṇa's profession requires voluntary poverty; brāhmaṇa's profession requires, I mean in those days, brāhmaṇa karma, required voluntary poverty and simplicity; in fact a brāhmaṇa's lifestyle was very very close to a sanyāsi's life style.

And that is why for such a brāhmaṇa, entering sanyāsa-āśrama was not a very big difference because even as a brāhmaṇa taking to brāhmaṇa profession he had lead a simple life. Dayānanda Swami says that the only thing he has to renounce is the poona; there is no other possession to renounce because he has lead a simple life. This is brāhmaṇa karma and unfortunately nowadays the number of people who are voluntarily coming to brāhmaṇa karma is heavily dwindling. That is the tragedy of the vēdic society. Now look at the definition of brāhmaṇa karma.

Brāhmin's profession first requires samaḥ. Samaḥ means what we have seen in Tatva Bōdha, samaḥ means calmness of the mind.

śanthaḥ, a person who takes to brāhmaṇa profession must practice śānti, quietude.

then damaḥ, damaḥ means sense control; he should not indulge in excessive sense pleasures, if he chooses the brāhmaṇa profession; he should ask himself am I willing to give up or reduce sensory pleasures. Therefore damaḥ, not as a sanyāsi; even as a gṛhastha he has to follow samaḥ and damaḥ.

Then tapaḥ, tapaḥ means an austere life, in which possessions are kept minimum; comforts are kept minimum; and austere life, a simple life of aparigrahaḥ; and practising this, will become highly useful, when he chooses to pursue spiritual knowledge. That is why for a person who takes to brāhmaṇa profession; pursuit of jñāna-yōga will be a walk over, as a gṛhastha he has practised, therefore it is simple; therefore tapaḥ means austerity; simple life.

Then śaucham, means purity, for simple life does not mean that he should clean the dress, place, simple life is not dirty life, you can be clean and simple. We think cleanliness should go with luxury; it need be a simple and clean life is possible. Śaucham, purity more than external purity, inner purity is important; I should be extremely careful about the words I use; if you read the Manu smṛthi, and look at the conditions presented for brāhmaṇa profession, we will shudder to enter that.

So what are the rules and regulation; what to talk and what not to talk? even in provocation, he should not utter certain words, so much physical discipline, so much verbal discipline, so much intellectual discipline, in fact the three threads of the sacred thread represent only the discipline; therefore purity.

Then śānthiḥ, when a person leads an austere life; naturally physical comfort will be less; because if you do not want to have possessions, if you chose to lead a simple and austere life, comforts will be minimum. That means I should be physically and mentally tough to face a life of discomfort. Therefore śānthiḥ means physical and mental preparedness to withstand external discomfort; to withstand heat, to withstand cold; to withstand humidity; to withstand sweat; it requires a person who is accustomed to comfort, he cannot stand without AC for even five minutes and he will shoot his head; external comfort, in fact it is a material progress to order the external condition, but the greatest disadvantage we face is we become intolerant; we want all conditions to be perfect; if any external comfort is missing; we get highly irritated; irritation is the price that we pay for a life of comfort.

Whereas a brāhmaṇa who has chosen a life of simplicity, he practices śānthiḥ; even if for some time the comfort is not there, he is OK with it. In fact, it is happy situation. யான் பெட்ற இன்பம்; யான் பெட்ற துன்பம். Yan petra inpan, Yen petra tunpam. But they will suffer more. We will not suffer because we are experts, because now and then there is power cut; Anyway, śānthyā.

Then ārjavam, a brāhmaṇa has to follow a life of integrity; he should avoid a split personality; he should avoid hidden motives; hidden agenda. So therefore that should be minimum; vāk, kāya and manas should be in one straight line; in consonance. Arjavam, we have seen this before in the 13th chapter, āmanitvam, adāmbitvam, ahimsa, śānthyā, arjavam; this is to be supposed to be summary I am not supposed to deal with it.

Then jñānam, this is important; since his profession is to preserve and propagate the scriptural wealth of the vēdic society, he has to learn. For a Kṣatriyā learning is minimum; just the basic knowledge of scriptures to know what is dharma and adharma; he is not going to teach, he has got some other profession; vaiśya need not learn too much; minimum to conduct his life; but a brāhmaṇa has to dedicate his entire life, like any teacher whoever takes to teaching profession; he has to learn how long, a teacher has to learn life-long. And therefore jñānam,

And not only he should learn the material sciences, or aparā vidya, he should be an expert in parā-vidya also. Therefore vijñānam means ātma jñānam. So jñānam, vijñānam, aparā-vidya and parā-vidya.

Then asthikyam; asthikyam means faith in the vēda as a means of knowing the spiritual world. A brāhmaṇa is supposed to have two eyes as it were; one is the pratyakṣa pramāṇa; the fivefold sense organs, this pratyakṣa pramāṇa the fivefold sense organs reveal the material world and the vēda is the second pramāṇa, instrument which will reveal the spiritual world.

Pratyakṣa can never reveal the truths of supra sensuous world, because our sense organs do not have access to that; therefore you close your eyes; What will happen?; you are going to the world of colours and forms; we have been provided with the eyes; if I choose to close the eyes, I am going to miss the world of colours and forms, who is the loser; I am the loser; Vēda is the sixth sense organ which reveals a totally different field which is the non-material field or spiritual field; aparūṣeya field; and if I refuse to use the vēda, I am going to be deprived of a totally different field or world, i.e. the world of spirituality. And a brāhmaṇa is one who accepts vēda, the 6th sense organ.

And the one who uses the six sense organ, the vēda, is called āsthikāḥ; and he has to teach the humanity that by accepting the sixth sense organ, the vēda, I am going to be the very beneficiary. By rejecting the vēda, vēda is not going to miss anything; Ṛṣis are not going to miss anything. God is not going to miss anything; by rejecting vēda, I am going to lose something great; A brāhmaṇa has to be an āsthika and he has to convert the society into āsthika.

And how should he do that? Only by one method; he should become a model for others. And how should he become a model? By making use of the vēda; his personality must be transformed to such an extent, that the society should wonder what is the secret of his peace; what is the secret of his contentment. All the materialistic people are struggling in the Society; caught up in rat race, they are rich; alright; but without peace of mind, here is a brāhmaṇa, does not possess anything.

सुर मंदिर तरु मूल निवासः
शय्या भूतल मजिनं वासः |
सर्व परिग्रह भोग त्यागः
कस्य सुखं न करोति विरागः ||१८||

sura maṁdira taru mūla nivāsaḥ śayyā bhūtala majinaṁ vāsaḥ | sarva parigraha bhōga tyāgaḥ
kasya sukhaṁ na karōti virāgaḥ ||18||

Here is a Brāhmaṇa, no comfort; no possession, even his future is bleak, but still he is an embodiment of peace and contentment; and that should attract the society. And they should ask him what is the secret?

Then this brāhmaṇa will introduce, and become āsthika, I will open a new world for you; which will give you shanti and peace. Thus a brāhmaṇa should become a model for the society to teach that peace and happiness are possible without external things. Therefore āsthikyam is very important.

Then Brahma karma. This is the Brāhmaṇa profession, a professional brāhmaṇa should follow all these things. Then how should he earn his livelihood. How should he earn his livelihood? When he shares his wisdom; the society is supposed to protect him by providing whatever he needs and whatever society gives he should be happy with that. He should not put conditions; if I have to teach Rudram, Rs.100. if I have teach and rudram and puruṣa suktham Rs.150, I should not put a price or condition, I enjoy sharing the wealth and the society will take care, because the society benefits from such a group of people.

It is a great profession, which a person can be proud. But unfortunately, dwindling, endangered species. Later you will have to put a glass case; brahma karma but one thing; if you have to follow that, it should be voluntary, you should enjoy and love that lifestyle. It should not be enforced poverty; enforced poverty is a suffering; voluntary poverty is simplicity and enjoyment and therefore Kṛṣṇa says svabhāvajam, one should be naturally interested in that.

शौर्यं तेजो धृतिर्दाक्ष्यं युद्धे चप्यपलायनम्
दानमीश्वरभावश्च क्षात्रं कर्म स्वभावजम् ॥ १८.४३ ॥

Śauryam tējō dhṛtirdākṣyam yuddhē cāpyapalāyanam |
dānamīśvarabhāvaśca kṣātram karma svabhāvajam || 18.43 ||

शौर्यम् śauryam Heroism तेजः tējaḥ power धृतिः dhṛtiḥ will दाक्ष्यम् dākṣyam resourcefulness च अपि अपलायनम् ca api apalāyanam not running away युद्धे yuddhē in battle दानम् dānam generosity च ईश्वरभावः ca īśvarabhāvaḥ and overlordship कर्म क्षात्रम् karma kṣātram are the duties of the Kṣatriyā's स्वभावजम् svabhāvajam born of (their) nature.

43. Heroism, power, will, resourcefulness, not running away in battle, generosity, and overlordship are the duties of the Kṣatriyā s born of (their) nature.

Having mentioned the duties of a Brāhmaṇa, the Lord now points out the duties of a Kṣatriyā.

When Swami Chinmayānanda established an institution for spiritual training and propagation, Swamiji invited interested youngsters for this lifestyle. And then everything during the spiritual training course is absolutely free; there is no capitation fee; there is no Rs.12,000 advance; everything free; food, clothing, shelter, medical; whatever it is; everything is provided, all the books are provided, and the wealth of the scriptures were presented in front. And then at the end of the training course also, there is no question of enforcing, because this is a lifestyle which cannot be enforced. So again choice is given; if you feel to dedicate your life for the revival of the scriptures, wonderful; otherwise, you can go back and again join the society, earn your money, get married. Dayānanda Swami used to tell; when you are studying, study well, do not too much worry about your future; afterwards, even if you want to get a job, I will get a job for you; if you want to get married, I will a girl also for you; now study sincerely.

Then even after the students showed interest; they were asked to live such a life for a few years with yellow dress; like an apprentice course or something like that and only afterwards, if they are convinced and they enjoy; they were given sanyāsa. Sanyāsa is the most wonderful thing, if you love it; and sanyāsa is the greatest hell if your mind is not tuned towards that; and it is a greatest hell because there is no return from sanyāsa. It is one way traffic. So what I want to tell is brāhmaṇa profession should be chosen out of love; and it will be greatest joy; a different type of joy;

Nor Kṛṣṇa comes to Kṣatriyā karma. Everybody cannot take to brāhmaṇa karma; Lord Kṛṣṇa knows. Bhinna ruchirḥ lōkāḥ. Everybody cannot take to same profession. Then Kṛṣṇa says if you love something else, take to that. That can be Kṣatriyā karma; and what is Kṣatriyā karma? He says: śauryam tējō dhṛtirdākṣyam; Kṣatriyā means a ruler, king or a soldier who has to maintain the law and order of the society and he has to protect dharma and he has to punish the adharmic people and if required he should be ready for entering the battle field also/

Naturally, he must be a man of dairyam, courage. If he is going to run away, seeing a cockroach, how can he come to this profession;

He should be śauryam, courage, valour, heroism; must be there for Kṣatriyā profession.

Tējah, not being overwhelmed by the strength of the enemy; not being cowed down upon, the capacity to overpower the enemy, is tējah; power.

dhṛtiḥ, means perseverance; dhṛtiḥ, will power, all these we have seen earlier, three types of will power and then dākṣyam, resourcefulness; the capacity to take quick decisions. So sometimes we will get enough time to think and act; but when crisis comes I cannot say I will think and act, when the neighboring country is attacking, he should not say after one month, I will decide what to do; he himself would not be there; problem would be solved for good. So there are crisis situation, in fact for a ruler, every moment, any administrator, even a company head, globalisation situation change all the time. I should have the resourcefulness to take quick decisions; it is called pratutpanna mathi; that is called dākṣyam.

Then yuddhē capyapalāyanam; not running away from the battlefield; before entering the battlefield, he should think well; but once he had entered, he should fight it out and even if death comes, he should welcome it; he should not run away; and Kṛṣṇa is very much particular about using this word you know why, what is this book, you should not forget this, this is Bhagavat Gīta, and in Bhagavat Gīta, who is teaching whom, Lord Kṛṣṇa is teaching Arjuna, where he is teaching, not in Vidya Mandir, he is teaching in the battlefield; and Arjuna is about to run away and therefore Kṛṣṇa is taunting Arjuna, running away from the battlefield is never befitting a Kṣatriya; yuddha ca api apalāyanam;

then dānam, a Kṣatriyā, a ruler has to give grants to all the people, all the artists are patronised by the king in the olden days, and scientists and even the brāhmaṇas who do not have any learning, for their infrastructure, gurukulams, etc. Kṣatriyā has to visit the gurukulam and provide what is necessary. Now the Govt has got variety of grants; what they are doing is not known? That provision is there; Kṣatriyā has to promote all sciences, arts, culture, everything and therefore dānam.

Then īśvarabhāvaḥ ca, means leadership. To be in the forefront; so he should be in the forefront and lead; he should not sit under the chair in a corner; any situation comes, he must have the magnetic personality, even physically he should have that imposing personality is required. That is why even in āhāra or Food for Kṣatriyā strong food meat, everything was allowed. If he were to eat only vendakai and kathirikkai, he would be like a drumstick; and he would fall when blown by the enemy. He should have muscles and be a body builder; etc. but that is not required for a brāhmaṇa and it is not possible also. Because brāhmaṇa leads a life of austerity; for a Kṣatriyā it is required; therefore Īśvara bhavaḥ; means leadership qualities; they are all Kṣatram karma; Kṣatram karma means that is the profession of a Kṣatriya.

And svabhāvajam, also is born based on his svabhāva or character. If the personality is not there, what is the use of giving all the weapons to him; he should have the tendency. So svabhāvabhajam. This is Kṣatriya karma.

Then what is Vaiśya śūdra karma.

Verse 18.44

कृषिगौरक्ष्यवाणिज्यं वैश्यकर्म स्वभावजम् ।
परिचर्यात्मकं कर्म शूद्रस्यापि स्वभावजम् ॥ १८.४४ ॥

[Kṛṣigaurakṣyavāṇijyam vaiśyakarma svabhāvajam |
paricaryātmakam karma śūdrasyāpi svabhāvajam || 18.44 ||](#)

So vaiśya profession is commerce or business. So distribution of materials; whether you take a factory or whether you take a farm, all things are not produced in one and the same place, in different places, different things are produced. Naturally, we require distribution of the produce and that person is that profession is vaiśya karma.

Kṛṣi, means agriculture, we can include industry also, because that also does production.

Then gaurakṣyam, means cattle-rearing; because that was important in those days; cattle played an important role in economy. Even now it is playing; so gaurakṣyam.

Then vāṇijyam, commerce or business or exchange; all these are vaiśya karma, taking care of the economic wellbeing; Kṣatram karma is defence; vaiśya karma is economy. Which is important for the country? All are important; imagine business is running and there is defense at all, means 1962 China came, we were going with lathis, it seems; they had come with guns, and we did not have anything; because we said Indi-Chini bhai bhai. So we could not defend and they took Arunachala Pradesh and again they voluntarily stopped; we could not do anything; Kargil we know, so we require defence; and if all the people join defence, then also it is useless; economy of the country is to be taken care of, that is also important, and in all these professions, we have to have people who have to take important decisions; all these professions involve skill and leadership. King should have discrimination and leadership. Brāhmaṇa of course should have discrimination and leadership in his field; vaiśya business person should have that leadership and discrimination.

Then there are people who do not have leadership qualities. They cannot lead, they can only follow. They will do what they are told; not one thing more. They are the unskilled people and they are called śūdraḥ by character; we are not talking about birth here; that śūdraḥ guṇa whoever has got; since he does not have leadership, let him serve the other three groups of people. Either do service to a brāhmaṇa in his brāhmaṇa profession; when he does a big yaga he requires assistance, be an assistant, or be an assistant to a Kṣatriyā, or be an assistant to a vaiśya; that is śūdraḥ karma. That is paricarya; paricarya means service in which decision making is not involved; decision making is not that easy. There are many people, even simple thing, even the dress, they cannot decide. What to buy, this or that; doubt everything; how can they be leaders; therefore you take to service; paricaryatmakam karma, śūdra sya svabhāva; and svabhāvajam karma. And what is the most important thing to be noted is all the four professions are equally important for the society organism. If you take society as an organism; all these four groups are like the four organs of the society; never look down upon any profession.

Hari Om

230 Chapter 18, Verses 45-47

ॐ

From the 44th verse onwards, in this 18th chapter, Lord Kṛṣṇa is condensing two main topics of Bhagavad-Gīta, viz., karma-yōga and jñāna-yōga. Of these two topics, karma-yōga is being summarised in these verses 41 to 49th.

And here Lord Kṛṣṇa is emphasising svadharma; karma-yōga in the form of offering one's own profession or one's own occupation or occupational work as a worship to the Lord. We know the worship of the Lord in the temple and in the pūja room, where the Lord is invoked upon an idol; and varieties of upacārās are done; that type of worship is known to all. Here Lord Kṛṣṇa says converting the very life and every activity that we undertake into a form of offering to the Lord is the best form of karma-yōga. This Kṛṣṇa has clearly mentioned in the 9th chapter:

यत्करोषि यदश्रासि यज्जुहोषि ददासि यत् ।
यत्तपस्यसि कौन्तेय तत्कुरुष्व मदर्पणम् ॥ ९.२७ ॥

yat karōṣi yadaśnāsi yajjuhōṣi dadāsi yat |
yat tapasyasi kauntēya tat kuruṣva madarpaṇam || 9.27 ||

It is a very important in the 9th chapter, and in the 3rd chapter, Lord Kṛṣṇa has emphasised this:

मयि सर्वाणि कर्माणि संन्यस्याध्यात्मचेतसा ।
निराशीर्निर्ममो भूत्वा युध्यस्व विगतज्वरः ॥ ३.३० ॥

mayi sarvāṇi karmāṇi sannyasyādhyātmacētasā |
nirāśīrṇirmamō bhūtvā yudhyasva vigatajvaraḥ || 3.30 ||

Thus Kṛṣṇa has mentioned this in several chapters that he emphasises in this summary portion.

And as part of that, He talked about four types of professions possible; one is the teaching profession called brāhmaṇa karma; and when we talk about the teaching in our tradition, we refer to that teaching which refines the student internally. Educating a student in physics or chemistry is important. But according to our tradition, that is only a bye-product; learning certain skills in certain fields is only a bye-product, the primary education of the child is internal molding or character building; making the child a humane-human being. Because if that internal transformation is not brought about; whatever education he gets, he will abuse that education for cheating the society; for exploiting the society. Even a doctor, if he does not have character but doctoral or medical knowledge, he can run a kidney racket in his medical profession. So he is a knowledgeable person, perhaps he went through the college, and got education in the field of medicine, but more important than education is character building; but if character building takes place, any skill would be used for serving the society. If the character is not built; any skill can be used for abuse or cheating; and therefore in our tradition, primarily education means character building; internal molding, and along with that I learn some other skills also, may be engineering, or medicine or economics or art or anything for that matter.

And since teaching primarily involves the moral and spiritual growth of a child, the teachers play a very very very very (you can put any number) important role in the society and teachers are called brāhmaṇaḥ who are in alignment with the vēdas. Because a teacher is supposed to use the vēda for moral and spiritual evolution of the child. And therefore Brāhmaṇa karma is considered to be teaching; along with secular skills; the teacher has to help the student grow morally and spiritually. And therefore brāhmaṇa karma is important profession; and a society which respects the teachers will be a healthy society.

In fact we can measure the internal health of the society from the respect the society gives to the teachers. In the vēdic society, the teachers are the brāhmaṇas enjoyed a very very high status. Even in daily prayers, go brahmaṇēbhyō śubhamastu nityam; why they prayed for the well-being of the brāhmaṇa, because they are the molders of the next generation, the children. Thus brāhmaṇa profession it may be; which is teaching profession; or Kṣatriyā profession, administration and defence; or vaiśya profession, agriculture and commerce, or śudra profession, assisting the other three groups. And Kṛṣṇa says all these four professions are equally sacred; they are like the four organs of the body called the society; just as every organ is equally sacred in the body; every profession is equally sacred; therefore you need not feel any complex, whatever be your profession; feel proud; feel proud of yourselves; whatever be your profession; without comparing yourselves with others.

And once you have learned that profession, the next stage is what? Converting that occupation into a form of worship; and therefore your pūja is not half-an-hour a day but entire working hours is a continuous pūja. And if you are taking OT, overtime, you are doing extra pūja. And if your profession has to be converted into a worship, there must be a transformation in your attitude; converting your occupation into a pūja; happens by a conversion; a transformation in your attitude and what is that attitudinal transformation, Hey Arjuna, I will teach you. In fact Kṛṣṇa himself is a great teacher. So he is going to teach Arjuna how it is to be done in the following very very important verses. All these verses are beautiful; Dayānanda loves these verses, he can go and on on on, commenting upon these verses. We will read verse 45.

Verse 18.45

स्वे स्वे कर्मण्यभिरतः संसिद्धिं लभते नरः ।
स्वकर्मनिरतः सिद्धिं यथा विन्दति तच्छृणु ॥ १८.४५ ॥

[svē karman्यabhirataḥ saṃsiddhiṃ labhatē naraḥ |
svakarmanirataḥ siddhiṃ yathā vindati tacchr̥ṇu || 18.45 ||](#)

अभिरतः abhirataḥ Engaged स्वे स्वे कर्मणि svē svē karmaṇi in his own duty नरः लभते naraḥ labhatē a person attains संसिद्धिम् saṃsiddhim purity शृणु śṛṇu listen तद् यथा tad yathā how स्वकर्मनिरतः svakarmanirataḥ one engaged in his own duty विन्दति vindati attains सिद्धिम् siddhiṃ purity.

To convert Karma into karma-yōga, you do not have to change your profession. First Kṛṣṇa says whatever be the profession in which you are, you do not have to change at all. You have only to change the attitude with which you undertake those activities and therefore first Kṛṣṇa emphasises, continue in your profession. Svē svē karmaṇyabhirataḥ; remain in your own profession. Once you have chosen a profession, do not go on changing it; because you develop skill and excellence in any field only by long practice. As they say, practice makes a man a perfect, it requires time and practice. If I keep on changing the profession, I will not get excellence in any field. Therefore take your own time to choose the profession; but once you have chosen, stick to it; whatever be the comment of the society; society will have its own comment; society will look upon certain professions as prestigious at a particular time; that means what; more girls will be ready to get married to that boy; prestigious means what?, you will get girls. And as the society changes, the value also changes. Therefore do not be enamoured by the prestige attached to it by the fluctuating society; you choose either by heredity or by your svabhāva; choose a profession and thereafter continue in that; and your aim is to excel in that field.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa says; svē svē karmaṇi; in one's own chosen profession, abhirataḥ; one should learn to be fully involved; fully dedicated; you do more and more research in improving the quality; in improving the facility. If you are a teacher, you can try to learn more and more, the subject you are teaching. And in any subject, infinite scope for learning, learn more and more, you should know minimum 10 times more than what you are teaching; minimum 10 times. And if you can make it hundred times more than what you teach, wonderful; thousand times than what you teach, still wonderful. In that particular field itself you can work to excel. And not only that if you are teacher or a head or leader, most important faculty required is communication. Every leader has to communicate to the sub-ordinate; whatever be the field in which you are working, and therefore communication skills you can do research, so that there is no gap; you tell something to the subordinate, he understands something and he does something and you shout.

And therefore in any field; you can try to put your heart and soul, i.e. the meaning of the word; "abhirataḥ;" 'रं' raṁ means reveling, enjoying, abhiraṁ, intimately enjoying; which means putting your heart and soul, in whatever you are undertaking; abhirataḥ; by taking to that.

saṁsiddhim labhatē naraḥ; by changing the attitude and by doing it properly you can gradually grow spiritually; even the most worldly activity can contribute to inner growth; if it is properly handled; therefore saṁsiddhim; saṁsiddhi means citta śuddhiḥ; very careful; saṁsiddhi means citta śuddhi and citta śuddhiḥ means purity of mind, or to put in technical language, sādhanā catuṣṭaya sām̐pathi or to put in another language, jñāna-yōgyatha; or to put it in another language, more and more interest in spiritual knowledge. So interest in spiritual knowledge should increase, that is the indication of successful karma-yōga; Therefore naraḥ; naraḥ means being human, saṁsiddhim labhatē.

And how to achieve that? He says: svakarmanirataḥ siddhim yathā vindati tacchṛṇu. In the next following verses, I will teach you how karma will produce citta śuddhiḥ; how remaining in worldly action; you can attain citta śuddhiḥ; that methodology I shall teach you in the following verses; tat śṛṇu; may you listen to carefully. This is conversion of karma into karma-yōgaḥ; and what is that? The crucial verse, verse 46.

यतः प्रवृत्तिर्भूतानां येन सर्वमिदम् ततम् ।
स्वकर्मणा तमभ्यर्च्य सिद्धिं विन्दति मानवः ॥ १८.४६ ॥

yataḥ pravṛttirbhūtānām yēna sarvamidaṁ tatam |
svakarmanā tamabhyarcyā siddhim vindati mānavaḥ || 18.46 ||

मानवः विन्दति mānavaḥ vindati a person attains सिद्धिम् siddhim purity अभ्यर्च्य abhyarcyā by worshipping स्वकर्मणा svakarmanā through his own duty, तम् tam that (Lord) यतः प्रवृत्तिः yataḥ pravṛttiḥ from whom (is) भूतानाम् bhūtānām the origination of all beings येन yēna and by whom सर्वम् इदं ततम् sarvam idaṁ tatam all this is pervaded.

46. A person attains purity by worshipping, through his own duty, that (Lord) from whom (is) the origination of all beings and by whom all this is pervaded.

Very important verse. If karma, by which I mean your profession; whatever be your occupation; if it has to be converted into a worship; you have to change your attitude towards three factors; there are three important factors involved; and towards all the three, you have to discover and develop a very very healthy attitude. Those three factors are:

No.1 karma; your attitude towards your own actions.

No.2, karma-phalam; whatever you do is going to produce a consequence; it may produce success, it may produce failure; the people around may praise you, the people around may criticise you, people around may acknowledge your contribution, the people around may not acknowledge, all these are consequences of your action, which we call karma-phalam. People around may be utterly ungrateful to you. Ingratitude of others is also a karma phala. No.2 is karma-phalam. You do the work, and somebody gets the promotion; you do the motion, and others get the promotion; another karma phala; this is the second factor.

No.3: the third and most important factor involved is Īśvaraḥ; the karma phala dhāthā. The result of every action is determined by Īśvara; the cosmic judge, who knows all the laws of karma, and who produces the result; according to the laws of karma; and gives me what I deserve, not what I desire or expect. Sometimes rarely what I desire and what I get coincide but that coincidence is very very rare; most of the time, my expectation and the actual consequence, there is a very very big gulf; and the producer of the karma-phalam is called karma phala dhāthā, Īśvaraḥ.

So what are the three factors? Karma, phalam and dhāthā; dhāthā means KP dhāthā; karma phala dhāthā; initial you put properly KP dhāthā; karma-phalam and dhāthā, develop a healthy attitude, if you want karma to become a worship.

And what is the attitude towards karma? Constantly remember that this karma is going to be an offering to the Lord. Whether I like it or not; all the karmas I do, will have to go into the hands of the Lord, because Lord has to generate the phalam, therefore you like it or not; it is going to go to the Lord, and why cannot you make it an offering; and once you look upon the karma as an arpaṇam or offering, then my attitude towards karma should be healthy. First I learn to enjoy the karma, however gross the karma may be, I learn to enjoy dhṛti utsāha samanvithāḥ; learn to cheerfully do; do not do for somebody else's sake; do not do with a gloomy face, cheerfully do, whatever you have to do. Therefore first thing is what: learn to enjoy.

And the next attitudinal change is since it is going to become an offering to the Lord, I should try to improve the quality of the karma. Not for the sake of the boss; not for the sake of the promotion; not for the sake of an award; let them be a bye-product, I tried to excel in my actions, because it is going to the Lord. Therefore always learn to excel or improve the quality of action, even if you are writing in your letter pad, letter pad tearing, itself is an art; tearing some here and tearing some there, etc. You have to watch Swami Chinmayānanda doing it; every small action, he expects excellence. He will not like if you do it halfway; or when you fold that, they fold anyway they like. Correctly the corners should touch each; put in the cover properly; and when you paste, do not paste all over, paste it properly; and for affixing the stamp, the eternal source water, is the tongue. And he does not like that; properly apply and stick it properly. People say I do not have time; Swamiji Chinmayānanda was one of the busiest person in the world; but still he maintained excellence in every small thing he did; including folding his own kerchief and putting in the pocket; you can do it; you should do it; and so excellence in whatever you do; because it is an offering to the Lord; that is healthy attitude towards the karma.

Then the next thing is what? Attitude towards karma-phalam. And I should remember, karma has gone to the hands of the Lord; because Lord is the karma phala dhāthā; and since the karma has gone to the Lord, whatever phalam comes is coming from the Lord's hand and therefore it is a just result. There is no unfairness on the part of the Lord; we have no right to judge the karma-phalam or fair or unfair, because our knowledge of laws of karma is heavily limited. With a limited knowledge what right I have to judge the karma-phalam; as just or unjust, remember when I am receiving the karma-phalam, not only my actions of present janma have to be taken into account. Bhagavān has to take into account, the karma's of the past janma also. And therefore I accept it as a prasāda from the Lord; for my own learning. Therefore the attitude towards karma-phalam is prasāda bhāvana. This is the second important thing; arpaṇa bhāvana in karma; prasāda bhāvana in phalam.

And the next important thing is attitude towards God. Because in the beginning, we look God as a person located in the pūja room, or located in the temple, or still verse, located in some Vaikunta lōkā or Kailasa lōkā; that attitude is OK for the sake of pūja. For pūja purposes, I have to locate the Lord, otherwise how can I offer flowers; therefore Lord is located for pūja purposes but I should know that Lord is not a located-individual but Lord is an all-pervading principle.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa says in the first line, yataḥ pravṛttirbhūtānām; Lord is the source, pravṛttiḥ means utpathiḥ, utpathiḥ or origin or source of bhūtānām, of all the things and beings, learn to look upon God as jagat kāraṇam. Lord is not a person in the world. God is not a person within the world; but God is the very cause of the world; who existed even before the emergence of the world.

And once I look upon God as kāraṇam, next thing that I should remember is cause pervades all the effects. Cause pervades all the effect; just as gold pervades all the ornaments; wood inheres all the furniture; clay pervades all the earthen wares. So if God is the kāraṇam; and the world is a product; where is the Lord?

Lord inheres. udu uruvi irikkirar உடு உருவி இருக்கிரார். Ākāśa, vāyu, Agni , āpaḥ, pṛthivi, not only pañca bhūtha; but also the pañca bhauthika prapañca, the Lord pervades.

And if the Lord as a cause of the universe, pervades all over, what will be the form of the Lord?

All pervasiveness and form do not go together. Simple logic. If there is a form, it is not all pervading; if it is all pervading, it cannot have a form; the space is all pervading, this space does not have any form; God is all-pervading, God cannot have the form.

Therefore Kṛṣṇa says, yēna sarvamidam tatam. By God. Yathāḥ means from God the creation has come and by God the creation is formlessly pervaded; in what way the Lord pervades? As the harmonising intelligence principle. Just as your physical body is pervaded by intelligence or life principle; cētana tatvam pervades your body, similarly the entire material cosmos, is pervaded by an intelligent principle. My eyes see your body but the sentiency of your body, the intelligence pervading your body, my eyes do not see. If there is a dead body and a live body, eyes cannot see the difference; even though the live body is pervaded by a life principle. Similarly the cosmos is pervaded by a live, sentient, intelligence harmonising principle, that I learn to appreciate as Īśvara; I continue to worship my iṣṭa dēvatā; but I look upon the iṣṭa dēvatā as the symbol of the formless God. Iṣṭa dēvatā is not God. Iṣṭa dēvatā is a representative; a symbol for the formless organising intelligence; this awareness may you develop. Just as we appreciate formless love; we do talk about love; what is the form of love? We are able to appreciate; we are able to appreciate anger, what is the form of anger? It is formless; we are able to appreciate beauty, even though it does not have a particular form; a sensitive mind can sense formless thing; that is called transcending the form. You should sensitise the mind to appreciate the formless intelligence;

And whatever you do mentally visualise as an offering to formless intelligence; தூணிலும் இருப்பார்; துரும்பிலும் இருப்பார்தெரியாது பார்தால் கண்ணுக்கு.; tūṇilum iruppār; turumpilum iruppār. Kañcuka pārtāl teriyātu; because it is formless intelligence, and that pervades the universe; therefore change the attitude towards the Lord. Dayānanda Swami uses the word Order. Learn to look upon the Lord as the Order in the universe.

And a scientist will understand order as the cosmic laws, which govern the universe. Therefore appreciate as intelligence, appreciate it as Order, sensitise your mind to see the Lord, everywhere; then the whole universe becomes a temple; and thereafter for worship, you do not require a special temple, you do not require a special flower; you do not require, special asana, any place the Bhagavān is present; and what is the flower? Whatever you do is a flower, and in fact, that is the prayer we chant every day before the class.

पूजा ते विषयोपा भोगा रचना, निद्रा समाधी स्तीती,
संचार पदयो प्रदक्षिणा विधी, स्तोत्रानि सर्वा गिरा, यदयत कर्म करोमि ततद अखिलं, शम्भो तवाराधनम् ātmā tvam girijā mati saharā, prāṇa sarīrama gṛham, pūjā tē viṣayōpā bhōgā racanā, nidrā samādhī stīti, sañcāra padayō pradakṣiṇā vidhī, stōtrāni sarvā girā, yadayata karma karōmi tatada akhilaṁ, śambhō tavārādhanam

Every word I speak also, I should learn to look as an offering to the Lord, then you will be careful in maintaining the quality of the word; if it is an offering, you will not talk meaningless word; you will have quality control. Therefore Kṛṣṇa says; yataḥ pravṛttirbhūtānām yēna sarvamidam tatam; God is the causal intelligence pervading the universe; look at God as the all-pervading one; and tam abhyarcya; worship that all-pervading God; who is in your office also; whatever be the office that Lord is present in your office also; and how do you worship, do not look for flowers and naivēdyam.

svakarmanā, in the office, every letter you write, or every file you clear; or if you a doctor, every patient you treat, everything you do, make it as an offering to the Lord. Kṛṣṇa uses the word, svakarmanā, by your own duty, you worship the Lord.

And what will happen, as a result? Siddhim vindati mānavaḥ; this will even without your knowledge, it will refine you; it will purify you, because when the result comes; you do not resist the result, you do not criticise God, you only ask a question, what lesson have I learned from this experience.

The bhōkthā is converted into a learner. In Sānskrīt, a learning person is called a pramātha; bhōkthā does not look for joy from karma phala, he does not look for joy from karma phala, he only asks a question, what do I learn from this karma phala? And he derives joy not from karma-phalam; he derives joy from karma itself. Normally what we do? We expect ānanda from karma-phalam. Kṛṣṇa says that is dangerous, karma-phalam is not under your control. Therefore if you expect happiness from karma phala, you will have tension all the time; because you do not whether karma-phalam will be to your expectation and most of the time it is not to your expectation; therefore you will have unhappiness.

Therefore karma-yōgi does not expect happiness from karma-phalam; he derives happiness from karma itself. And from karma-phalam what does he expects; not happiness; but learning, education. In fact, sorrowful experiences contains maximum education. Just as snake poison contains medicine also; if you go to snake park; you will find, they extract medicine from poison. Similarly if you have a learning mind, you can learn from happy experiences, in fact you can learn more from painful experiences also; thus karma-yōgi is that person who gets joy from karma and learning from karma-phalam.

And that learning will lead to what? Siddhim vindati mānavaḥ; that learning will lead to citta śuddhiḥ; and such a learner alone is called mānavaḥ; mānavaḥ means an intelligent person; a man of discrimination is one who learns from experiences, a man of indiscriminate reacts to the karma-phalam and a reacting mind cannot learn. A reacting mind wastes valuable experiences; a karma-yōgi maintains samatvam and learns from experiences.

Verse 18.47

श्रेयान्स्वधर्मे विगुणः परधर्मात्स्वनुष्ठितात् ।
स्वभावनियतं कर्म कुर्वन्नाप्नोति किल्बिषम् ॥ १८.४७ ॥

śrēyān svadharmō viguṇaḥ paradharmātsvanuṣṭhitāt |
svabhāvaniyataṁ karma kurvanna"pnōti kilbiṣam || 18.47 ||

स्वधर्मः svadharmaḥ one's own duty विगुणः viguṇaḥ (though) improperly performed
श्रेयान् śrēyān is better परधर्मात् paradharmāt than another's duty, स्वनुष्ठितात् svanuṣṭhitāt properly performed. कुर्वन् kurvan doing कर्म karma duty स्वभावनियतम् svabhāvaniyatam determined by (one's) nature न आप्नोति na āpnōti one does not incur किल्बिषम् kilbiṣam sin

47. One's own duty (though) improperly performed, is better than another's duty, properly performed. Doing the duty, determined by (one's) nature, one does not incur sin.

The normal tendency of human mind is when it has taken to one type of profession; it always compares that profession with the other profession. Human mind tends to compare; not only profession; anything whether it is dress or food or house or anything we tend to compare. And always it appears the other one is better than what I have. Distant pastures are greener; ikkaraki akkari pachai; there is also an English proverb. Therefore our tendency is to think that the other profession is better. When I take to brāhmaṇa karma, Kṣatriyā, vaiśya, śūdra karma will appear better, when I take to Kṣatriyā, the others will appear better. Kṛṣṇa says do not compare and keep on changing; You will never perfection in any field; and therefore try for perfection; in whatever you have taken. Therefore he says, svadharmaḥ śrēyān; for you the best profession is your profession; whatever profession you have taken to. Learn to look at it as the best and you can excel in any field;

And therefore svadharmaḥ śrēyān; and this is very important; because Arjuna is now trying to change svadharma. Because it is uncomfortable and inconvenient; therefore he argues with Kṛṣṇa, bhaikṣyam api srēyaḥ; I think to do tapas in the forest is better. So Kṛṣṇa gives a strong warning; it will all appear so; many people who are in the city; when they go to an āśrama or Rīṣikeś; they say, they say they want a flat in gaṅgai karai and wants to stay there; and it would better, etc. do some service, it would be better, many people say; I give them a strong warning. Do not make it a firm decision, you go there, and stay for a few months and see; equally vehemently you will feel that Madras is better than Rīṣikēśam. Any doubt, try, Do not try, you have tried or not; you try. There are many people who are in the āśramas struggling to get out. That is why somebody went to the āśrama and asked where is the Swamiji, the head of the āśrama; the reply was that he has gone to the next āśrama for peace of mind. All these are stories; remember in every profession in every place, there are plus points and minus points

And therefore Kṛṣṇa argues svadharmah śrēyān; be where you are and enjoy it. paramadharmāt śrēyān, it is better than somebody else's profession. Until you choose you can adjust a little here and there; you should decide and stick to that; and viguṇaḥ api, even though you have not reached perfection in your profession; it does not matter; even if you are not that skilled in your profession, does not matter, because if you are at it wholeheartedly, you can learn any skill.

Therefore, He says viguṇaḥ api; even though you are not perfect now, in due course, you can make it perfect; make it perfect means what? There is no such thing called perfect; there is scope for infinite refinement; including the coffee cooling; that requires a skill; many people even do not know how to drink, you can work in any field.

Then what do you do? svabhāvaniyataṁ karma kurvan; take to a profession, either in keeping with heredity or in keeping with your svabhava or inclination; you do it; enjoy it, be cheerful and try to improve it; never be stagnant in a particular field; kurvannāpnōti kilbiṣam na apnōti. And sometimes, as Arjuna's profession, the profession involves hiṁsa; even though hiṁsa or violence is supposed to be unhealthy, when a person takes to certain professions, hiṁsa becomes part of it; if the profession is army or police, he will have to use Lathi once in a while; you cannot help it; and Arjuna has to fight and involves killing and therefore even if involves hiṁsa. That hiṁsa which is part of your duty, hiṁsa is not done for the sake of violence, but it has been taken to for the sake of dharma; that violence will not create pāpam.

Therefore, Kṛṣṇa says: Arjuna even if you kill people, it will not be a pāpa karma at all and imagine the hangman's duty, hangman you know, those who have to give the capital punishment, somebody will have to implement that; what is the job: professional killer; what to do; even if hanging is converted into lethal injection; even if that is given, somebody has to do that; therefore even if violence as part of svadharma, it will not harm you; because your motive is not violence; but dharma rakṣaṇam. And therefore kilbiṣam na āpnōti.

Then in the next verse Kṛṣṇa says every profession has plus and minus points called occupational hazards; even for a sanyāsi, they are there. Therefore do not look at the negative points; there will be; you will have to learn to ignore that. Those details we will see in the next class.

Hari Om

231 Chapter 18, Verses 48-51

ॐ

Lord Kṛṣṇa is giving a summary of karma-yōga in these verses beginning from the 44th verse up to 49th verse, and we were seeing 47th verse in the last class; and Lord Kṛṣṇa points out that karma-yōga is worshipping of the Lord through any profession that a person undertakes. Through any profession a person chooses, he directly contributes to the world, the benefit of the society. Social benefit is the direct outcome; but to convert it into a religious worship one should have the attitude of offering that action to the Lord and Lord Kṛṣṇa points out any type of profession is OK.

And as we were seeing the last class, the profession can be chosen based on our own svabhāva or inclination, aptitude or it can be based on the heredity also. And Lord Kṛṣṇa points out that whatever profession you choose, learn to enjoy that; have commitment, never compare your profession with another's, because ultimately any type of profession has got its own plus points and minus points. We have an expression: occupational hazard. Occupational hazard means whatever occupation you take, you will have problems; if it is a travelling job, plus points and minus points are there; non-travelling job plus and minus points; if you are running your own company, plus and minus points; if you are working under someone, plus and minus points; if you are working for an American company from India, there are wonderful plus points and terrible minus points also and Kṛṣṇa says learn to accept it and do not keep on changing, for he says: śrēyān svadharmō viguṇaḥ paradharmātsvanuṣṭhitāt; one's own dharma chosen based on heredity or svabhāva, that is śrēyān, the best; and svabhāvanīyatām karma kurvan. So by taking to an occupation which suits one's svabhāva, kilbiṣam na''pnōti, a person does not attain kilbiṣam, because he is dedicating it to the Lord.

And Lord Kṛṣṇa is emphasising this here in the Gīta context because Arjuna's svadharma happens to be a svadharma in which he has to take to violence for the sake of dharma. And nobody likes war, nobody can recommend violence and especially when it involves killing thousands of people, and all of them are his own kith and kin; and it also involves even Bhīṣma, Drōṇa and others, who are fatherly figures. That svadharma is certainly sadōṣamapi svadharma, a svadharma which involves blood-shedding.

Kṛṣṇa says even though it involves violence, you cannot afford to get out of it; because somebody or the other has to join army also; everybody cannot do business; everybody cannot become brāhmin, everybody cannot be a servant somewhere; we require army also, police also, and these will not give you pāpam; even violence will not give pāpam, if it is meant for dharma rakṣaṇam and as one's own dharma. Up to this we saw in the last class.

सहजं कर्म कौन्तेय सदोषमपि न त्यजेत् ।
सर्वारम्भा हि दोषेण धूमेनाग्निरिवावृताः ॥ १८.४८ ॥

Sahajaṁ karma kauntēya sadōṣamapi na tyajēt |
sarvārambhā hi dōṣeṇa dhūmēnāgniriva"vṛtāḥ || 18.48 ||

कौन्तेय kauntēya Oh Arjuna ! अपि सदोषम् api sadōṣam though defective न त्यजेत् na tyajēt one should not give up सहजं कर्म sahaṁ karma the inborn duty हि hi for सर्वारम्भाः sarvārambhāḥ all duties आवृताः āvṛtāḥ are surrounded दोषेण dōṣeṇa by defect इव आग्निः
iva āgniḥ as fire धूमेन dhūmēna by smoke

48. Oh Arjuna! Though defective, one should not give up the inborn duty, for all duties are surrounded by defect, as fire by the smoke.

Almost the same idea as given in the previous ślōkā, every occupation has its own plus and minus points. Seeing the minus points, do not give up your occupation; sahaṁ karma na tyajēt; may you not give up your svadharma, which has born along with you. Whether you are choosing the occupation based on svabhāva, whether you are choosing based on heredity; either way Dharma is born along with you, because your svabhāva is also born along with you. So whatever be the basis of choice, the occupation is born along with you. And therefore sadōṣamapi; even though it has certain minus points, na tyajēt.

And the minimum point every profession has is boredom. When you take to one particular job regularly; first it is exciting; and after one week, the same thing you get bored, any job. So suppose you see the priest in the Venkachalapati Temple; and you are waiting in the queue for hours and at the end you get the darśanam for few seconds; whatever be the time; and definitely you will feel that it would be a wonderful time for the priest, because you have been struggling to get the darśan of the Lord for a few seconds; and the priest is all the time there; what a lucky person he must be, it is better that I take up his job; but you look at him; the moment he gets a gap, he comes out and he looks for some fresh air; so that means what, you envy him; he wants to come out of that. Therefore boredom is a natural consequence one has to find out one's own method of fighting boredom and the only method is innovation of one's own profession; whether it is mechanical or skilled profession, we have to find out our own method of creativity and innovation; otherwise like a baby throwing the toy every moment, this person will also for one week something and another week something, he will never stick to anything. And when a person does not stick to anything, there is no possibility of growth at all. And therefore Kṛṣṇa gives a strong warning, sadōṣamapi na tyajēt; even though it has disadvantages do not give up.

And what is the reason? Because sarvārambhāḥ; ārambhāḥ in this context means karma; the regular dictionary meaning of the word ārambhāḥ is beginning, in this context is karma; we can translate as occupation or profession. So sarva ārambhāḥ means any profession; Brāhmaṇa karma, or Kṣatriyā karma, or vaiśya karma or śūdra karma; all the karmas are āvṛtāḥ; associated with, enveloped by dōṣeṇa, its own minus points.

There is no perfect profession at all; it is your attitude which makes any profession enjoyable; there is no enjoyable profession. It is a mind which makes the mind enjoyable; and if the mind does not have the skill of enjoying; any profession will become dull; and therefore change your attitude. This is the uniqueness of vēdic tradition. They never ask you to change the set up. Materialistic approach is what? Always change things; if you bored with a particular type of dress; there are varieties of dress changing; therefore, science advances to cater to your whim and fancy; they produce varieties of clothes. If you bored with hairstyle, they discover umpteen varieties, so that you can change.

So materialism talks about successful change of the surrounding; vēda talks about the successful change of the attitude, so that you can be contended with any set up that you are in.

And therefore sarvārambhā, or any set up or profession is surrounded by dōṣaḥ; minus point; like what; dhūmēnāgniriva''vṛtāḥ.

Dhūmēnāgniriva; just as fire is enveloped by smoke; just as fire is enveloped by smoke; similarly, every profession has got its own minus points.

Verse 18.49

असक्तबुद्धिः सर्वत्र जितात्मा विगतस्पृहः ।
नैष्कर्म्यसिद्धिं परमां संन्यासेनाधिगच्छति ॥१८.४९॥

asaktabuddhiḥ sarvatra jitātmā vigataspr̥haḥ
naiṣkarmyasiddhiṁ paramāṁ sannyāsēnādhigacchati ||18.49||

जितात्मा jitātmā one who has self-mastery असक्तबुद्धिः asaktabuddhiḥ whose intellect is detached सर्वत्र sarvatra from everything विगतस्पृहः vigataspr̥haḥ and who is free from desires, अधिगच्छति adhigacchati attains परमां नैष्कर्म्यसिद्धिम् paramāṁ naiṣkarmyasiddhim the supreme goal of actionlessness संन्यासेन saṁnyāsēna through renunciation

49. One who has self-mastery, whose intellect is detached from everything, and who is free from desires attains the supreme goal of actionlessness through renunciation.

So what will be the consequence of karma-yōga way of life? Up to which stage karma-yōga will take a person and beyond that stage what should a karma-yōgi do that is being said.

And here we should remember karma-yōga will prepare the mind alright; but karma-yōga can never give liberation. Karma-yōga can never give self-knowledge also. So one has to follow karma-yōga up to sādhana catuṣṭaya sampathiḥ; preparation, and that is said here.

Asaktabuddhiḥ. So first He defines the karma-yōgi. Karma-yōgi is one who is sarvatra asaktabuddhiḥ; one who is not attached to any external factor. The one who gradually grows out of external attachments, by discovering the fact that the world is neither a source of joy, nor a source of sorrow. World is neither a source of joy, nor a source of sorrow; so world cannot be blamed for our problem; nor should the world be dependent for our joy. This can easily be understood by applying a little logic, If any external factor is a source of happiness; all the people who have that external factor, they must be happy. If money is source of happiness, all the rich people must be happy. But we find there are many rich people who are very miserable, in fact, commit suicide also; and there are many poor people who are happy without wealth also. So from this it is very clear that money cannot be responsible for either.

Similarly, if wife is the source of happiness; all the people who have wives must be happy. But you find that everybody is busy nowadays. You see the paper, everybody is kicking out, more and more, somebody is marrying and somebody is kicking away. So from that it is very clear, wife is neither the source of joy nor sorrow.

Similarly, everything, the world is not the cause of joy or sorrow; then who is the cause; if world is not the cause, and I do experience joy and sorrow; other than the world, there is only one thing; what is that; I who am confronting the world, that I alone must be the cause of sorrow and also the cause of happiness.

Then Vēdānta says that is true. I am the cause of joy; and I am the cause of sorrow also; therefore the change required is not outside; but in myself. And what type of change is required?

Vēdānta says when I, is misunderstood, I do not have a clear knowledge of myself and when I have a misunderstanding about my real nature, the misunderstood-I becomes the cause of sorrow. Ajñātha aham is duḥkha kāraṇam, and the very same I, when it is properly understood that I is the cause of joy; ajñātha aham duḥkha kāraṇam, jñāta aham sukha kāraṇam.

Therefore if I want to convert sorrow into joy, I have to only convert what the misunderstood-I into the understood-I; this is called self-knowledge.

In Chandōgya upaniṣad, Nārada, the most popular person comes to Sanatkumara and he tells Sanatkumara: "I have got all the qualifications; I have got so many miraculous powers also; and I am the most popular person; I am the trilōka sancāri, without passport or visa; diplomat passport I have; and I am the best musician also; and sōham bhagava sōcāmi, still I am missing something in life; I do not know what is lacking; but I have heard one thing, tarati sōkham, ātma vith iti; rithkum ēve bhagavat dṛēśēbhyaḥ". So Narada tells Sanatkumara, that self-misunderstanding is the cause of sorrow I have heard; and therefore Self-knowledge will take me across saṁsāra.

To understand that one has to do minimum 50 years of karma-yōga; to understand that my problem is non-understanding; to understand that my problem is non-understanding of what? My real nature. இந்த maturity வறத்துக்கு நாளாகும். To get this maturity, it will take years; that is what he says.

Asaktabuddhiḥ, this karma-yōgi is no more attached to the setup, because he knows set up has nothing to do with one's pleasure and pain; and therefore he is a man of detachment; and vigataspr̥haḥ; and he does not have a desire for a new set up; not attached to the present set up; not craving for a new set up, so vigataspr̥haḥ. Spr̥haḥ means desire; āsakthi means attachment.

What is the difference between attachment and desire? Attachment is towards something which I have; and desire is for something which I do not have. Karma-yōgi has transcended both rāga and kāma. And how? By the practice of karma-yōga.

And not only he has practised karma-yōga, parallelly he has practiced upāsana also. Upāsana is also an integral part of karma-yōga which is saguṇa Īśvara dhyānam. Meditation upon saguṇa Īśvara. That is why in our tradition; that is also kept as an integral part of daily prayer; any pārāyaṇam you want to do, in the beginning stage, we have; atha dhyānam | kṣīrōdanvatpradēśē śucimaṇivilasat saikatērmuktikānāṁ mālākṣiptāsanasthaḥ sphaṭikamaṇinibhairmuktikairmaṇḍitāṅgaḥ,

If you want to chant Lalitha Sahasranama, atha dhyānam: sīndūraruṇa vigrahāṁ trinayanām.

You want to chant Rudram - atha dhyānam: āpātālanabhaḥsthalāntabhuvana brahmāṇḍamāvisphurat

Any daily prayer you want to do, dhyānam is inbuilt; but only thing that also we chant in express speed. Atha dhyānam; means Now Meditation. That slōkā also we chant kata pada and finish it off. They are all meant for visualisations, so that you get a control over your sense organs.

Through dhyānam, you get śarīra nigrahaḥ, because 15 minutes you have to sit, body control you will get and sensory control you get because they take the sense organ away from the external world. Then manōnigrahaḥ, thus through upāsana, one gets self-mastery, self-integration, self-organisation, self-control.

Therefore Kṛṣṇa uses the word, jitātma, here the word ātma means body-mind-sense complex. Here the ātma does not mean satcidānanda ātma; careful. Here the word ātma means the body-mind-and-sense organs, jitham means mastered; aṣṭāṅga -yōga is also a typical discipline for that; daily pūja, etc. are the disciplines. Because we learn to sit for some time without distraction. So all these are benefit of what, karma-yōga; he becomes asktha buddhi, free from attachment, vigataspr̥haḥ, free from desires, jitātma, master of his own equipments, sarvatra, under all circumstances; and this alone is technically called sādhana catuṣṭāya sampathī. Is this an end in itself? No.

Hereafter alone, the crucial sādhana has to begin, which is called jñāna-yōgaḥ; therefore Kṛṣṇa mentions that in the next line; sanyāsēna; sanyāsa literally means renunciation, and according to tradition, sanyāsa is the lifestyle of a monk and that lifestyle is designed for vēdānta vicāra. Very description of sanyāsa-āśrama is meant for systematic vēdānta śṛavana, manana, and nidhidhyāsanam. Therefore, the word sanyāsa represents jñāna-yōgaḥ.

So whether a person becomes a sanyāsi or not, external sanyāsa is not relevant, if a person takes external sanyāsa; and does everything else other than vēdānta vicāra, it is useless. On the other hand, even if you continue in gr̥hastha-āśrama, if you systematically do vēdānta vicāra; you are all sanyāsis only.

Therefore do not worry; sanyāsēna is equal to jñāna yōgēna; by the practice of jñāna-yōga; naiṣkarma siddhiṁ adhigacchati. Naiṣkarma siddhi is the name of mōkṣa; or self-knowledge; ātma jñānam or mōkṣa is called naiṣkarma siddhi; the literal translation of this word is the state of actionlessness. Siddhi means the stage or state or the goal; and naiṣkarmyam means actionlessness; that is the literal meaning, and here it has got technical connotation, You should not literally take that it is a stage that you drop all actions; state of actionlessness means the state of knowledge, wisdom, that I am ever the actionless ātma. This wisdom is called actionlessness. The mind also will continue to be active. But through jñāna-yōga, I discover the fact I am not the active body; I am not the active mind; but I am the consciousness-principle which is ever actionlessness; ever actionless.

And what is the definition of consciousness; do you remember? If you keep that in memory only, you will understand this. Consciousness is not a part, product or property of the body. Consciousness is an independent entity, which pervades and enlivens the body. Consciousness is not limited by the boundaries of the body, and the consciousness survives even after the fall of the body. These four facts about ātma, the caitanyam he knows and not only he knows these facts, he has trained his mind to claim that I am not the changing body; I am not the changing mind, I am not the changing sense organs; but I am this consciousness which blesses all these activities. And it this is the goal one has to attain through the practice of vēdānta śṛavana, manana and nidhidhyāsana.

Therefore Kṛṣṇa says: Jñāna yōgēna naiṣkarma siddhiṁ paramam, which is the ultimate destination; purification of mind is intermediary destination, self-knowledge is the ultimate destination that this person attains.

Verse 18.50

सिद्धिं प्राप्तो यथा ब्रह्म तथाप्नोति निबोध मे ।
समासेनैव कौन्तेय निष्ठा ज्ञानस्य या परा ॥ १८.५० ॥

siddhiṁ prāptō yathā brahma tathā"pnōti nibōdha mē |
samāsēnaiva kauntēya niṣṭhā jñānasya yā parā || 18.50 ||

कौन्तेय kauntēya Oh Arjuna ! समासेन एव निबोध samāsēna ēva nibōdha briefly know, मे mē Me तथा यथा tathā yathā how प्राप्तः सिद्धिम् आप्नोति prāptaḥ siddhim āpnōti one who has attained purity ब्रह्म brahma attains Brahman या परा निष्ठा yā parā niṣṭhā which is the supreme culmination, ज्ञानम् jñānam of knowledge.

50. Oh! Arjuna. Briefly know from Me, how one who has attained purity, attains Brahman which is supreme culmination of knowledge.

With the previous verse, Kṛṣṇa concludes the topic of karma-yōga which started from verse No.40; and at the concluding verse that is the last verse, Kṛṣṇa said Arjuna you cannot end your sādhanā with karma-yōga; you have to go to the jñāna-yōga also to attain liberation. And when Kṛṣṇa referred to jñāna-yōga; Kṛṣṇa assumes that Arjuna remembers what is jñāna-yōga; because he has discussed jñāna-yōga in the 2nd chapter, 4th, 5th, 6th, 7th, 13th, 9th chapter, 14th chapter; in all these chapters, Kṛṣṇa has discussed jñāna-yōga and therefore Kṛṣṇa assumes that Arjuna remembers.

But Arjuna's look at Kṛṣṇa is so strange; that when he was speaking about the four points of consciousness, he seems to think that he has not heard it before! Then only Kṛṣṇa remembers; Oh.....; Arjuna has forgotten. Therefore out of his infinite compassion, without asking the student to write imposition, or to stand-up on the bench; Kṛṣṇa condenses jñāna-yōga in these verses, from 50 to 55. 50 to 55 is jñāna-yōga condensation.

And as I said jñāna-yōga consists of three stages; śṛavanam, mananam, and nidhidhyāsanam.

What is the definition of śṛavanam? Consistent and systematic study of the vādāntic scriptures for a length of time under the guidance of a competent teacher; a non-forgetful teacher!!; the student forgets but the teacher should not forget; that is why competent teacher. This is śṛavanam.

And mananam is not confining to śṛavanam alone, doing at least some homework; going back and trying to recollect what is the definition of ātma, what is the definition of anātma, this is called mananam.

And finally Nidhidhyāsanam is dwelling upon the teaching so that it becomes my own second nature. It is not enough that I know that consciousness is different from the body; I have to regularly practice, I am not the body; body is only a temporary medium for me; I am the consciousness-principle who am transacting through the body. Only then I will be free from the fear of death; after some time the body will go away; the mortality of the body is not my own mortality; body may go away; and the transaction may end; but the end of transaction is not my own end. So thus my real nature, I have to regularly claim which requires quality time.

And therefore Lord Kṛṣṇa suggests, allot some quality time for vādāntic meditation; in which you can temporarily become a sanyasi; not external sanyāsi; internal sanyāsi you can become, you can forget your father-role, mother-role, husband-role, employer-role, employee-role, you forget all your roles, and become a sincere vādāntic seeker and dwell upon your real nature. Thus Kṛṣṇa here emphasis the importance of vādāntic meditation. Without vādāntic meditation, śṛavanam is incomplete.

Remember the example I gave, when you add sugar to your coffee; you may put two spoons or three spoons, and you drink the coffee, there is no sweetness at all. And you wonder why it is not sweet. Coffee, milk or anything; and what you do?; then add two more spoons and drink, no sweet at all; not sweet at all; and you add some more, any amount you add; it will not give sweetness. What is important is adding should be followed by mixing. So adding is important or mixing is important? Which is important? Suppose I say mixing is important; this fellow does not add sugar at all; nothing will happen; and another person goes on adding; no mixing.

These are the two types of students; one type of student does śṛavanam; but does not do nidhidhyāsanam. They are adders; not mixers;

And there is another type of student, who says I won't attend classes. Attending the class is adding the sugar, I will only do vēdāntic meditation; ātma dhyāna. What is ātma? If you ask; he says he does not know. How can you do ātma dhyānam, without listening to ātma? Without śṛavana; nidhidhyāsanam is impossible; without nidhidhyāsanam, śṛavaṇa is incomplete; you should not say: impossible. Shall I repeat. Without śṛavana, nidhidhyāsanam is impossible; without nidhidhyāsanam, śṛavaṇa is incomplete. Therefore all are important, śṛavana, mananam, and nidhidhyāsanam.

In these verses 50 to 55, Kṛṣṇa is highlighting the nidhidhyāsanam part, otherwise called vēdāntic meditation. In the Bhagavat Gīta, vēdāntic meditation has elaborately discussed in a particular chapter. Do you know the chapter in which vēdāntic meditation is thoroughly, totally and comprehensively discussed? One important chapter, that is the 6th chapter of Gīta, titled, dhyāna yōga or ātma samyama yōga; Kṛṣṇa has elaborately studied. The sixth chapter is condensed in these verses.

Now look at the slōka. He says; siddhim prāptaḥ; a seeker attains siddhiḥ; siddhiḥ means purity of mind; jñāna-yōgyatha; or sādhanā catuṣṭāya sampathi; or vēdāntic qualification; preparatory qualifications are called siddhiḥ and it is attained by following what? By karma-yōga; because we have to supply that. By karma-yōga, a seeker attains preparatory qualification, and after that, saha brahma apnōti, we have to supply through jñāna-yōga; through karma-yōgaḥ; he has attained siddhi, which is preparatory qualification, and through jñāna-yōga brahma apnōti; Brahma means Brahman; he attains Brahman, because through jñāna-yōga, he gains the knowledge that Brahman is not different from me at all.

It will be a very great revelation, because through jñāna-yōga, he comes to know that whatever I have been seeking outside, they are not available outside. That is first startling discovery; whatever I am seeking outside, that is not available outside; peace will not come from outside; ānanda will never come from outside; whatever ānanda seems to come from outside is a fake ānanda; real ānanda never comes from outside; security will never come from outside, this is the first startling discovery; and the next startling discovery is all of them are already my nature; śanti is my svarūpam; security is my svarūpam; ānanda is my svarūpam.

Thus he attains them through knowledge; and jñānasya niṣṭa; not only he attains jñānam, by the practice of jñāna-yōga; he attains jñāna-niṣṭa. So jñāna-niṣṭa; niṣṭa means spontaneity; jñāna-niṣṭa means spontaneity in knowledge; And what do you mean by spontaneity in knowledge? By spontaneity what we mean is whenever a life difficult situation comes, whenever a crisis or problem comes in life, vādānta must be available to help you, without any difficulty. It must be easily and effortlessly accessibility to you. So I will define spontaneity as effortless accessibility of this knowledge, whenever there is crisis in family; like people say. I want to have some fluid money in hand. For what purpose; because whenever I need for emergency, it must be available; Or else it will be in some bank, in some fixed deposit and today is holiday because of Vināyaka chaturthi; etc. Therefore what is the use of having money if it is not readily accessible; therefore every intelligent householder what does he want; some cash should be there; Why he wants? Because he wants that to be effortlessly accessible when there is crisis. Just as you want local money to be effortlessly accessible; similarly, the vādāntic wisdom should be available when?; not in the Vidyā Mandir class on Sundays between 6 and 7. What is the use; when the problem arises in the house; there is crisis; financial crisis; health crisis; children do some mischief or big mischief they do; when situations come to me; this knowledge must be there.

I may first ask what? But in two minutes, Vādānta should come to my rescue, and I should say So What? Only one minute allowed to ask What? the next moment Vādānta should surface and you should be able to say even for the worst tragedy So What? This if you are able to do, vādānta has worked; that is called jñāna-niṣṭa; so therefore through jñāna-yōga, one attains Brahman, one attains jñāna-niṣṭa; brahma prāpti and jñāna niṣṭa prāpti both are one and the same. They are not different at all.

And Hey Arjuna I shall tell you how through jñāna-yōga one will attain this niṣṭa; and He says; saṁnyāsēna nibōdha mē; I am going to summarise this jñāna-yōga; it is going to only brief; because 18th chapter is supposed to be not a teaching chapter, it is supposed to be reminding chapter. So I will teach you in summary. So listen.

बुद्ध्या विशुद्धय धृत्यात्मानं नियम्य च ।

buddhyā viśuddhayā yuktō dhṛtyā"tmānaṁ niyamya ca |
śabdādīn viṣayāṁstyaktvā rāgadvēṣau vyudasya ca || 18.51 ||

युक्तः yuktaḥ Endowed विशुद्धया बुद्धया viśuddhayā budhdayā with a clear intellect नियम्य च niyamya ca having restrained आत्मानम् ātmānam the mind धृत्वा dhṛtvā by will त्यक्त्वा tyaktvā having renounced विषयान् शब्दादीन् viṣayān śabdādīn the sense-objects like sound etc च व्युदस्य ca vyudasya one should give up रागद्वेषौ rāgadvēṣau likes and dislikes.

51. Endowed with a clear intellect, having restrained the mind by will, having renounced the sense-objects like sound etc., one should give up likes and dislikes.

As I said before, jñāna-yōga consists of three parts; śṛavanam, mananam and nidhidhyāsanam. Kṛṣṇa wants to deal with nidhidhyāsanam more than śṛavaṇa and mananam. And therefore he presents śṛavaṇa and manana in three words; viśuddhayā budhdayā yuktaḥ. May you go through śṛavaṇa first; that is study the Upaniṣads or study vēdānta very clearly. It is exactly like college education, vēdāntic study is not different from any other study because there also there is a syllabus and it is covered in a systematic manner. Vēdānta is also a thorough śāstram and it is to be studied in a systematic manner. There are how many topics? There are certain important topics:

- Jīva svarūpam, the nature of individual;
- the Īśvara-svarūpam, the nature of God;
- Jagat svarūpam, the nature of the world;
- Bandha svarūpam, the nature of saṁsāra;
- Mōkṣa svarūpam, the nature of mōkṣa; and
- Sādhanā, the method by which you go from bondage to liberation.

How many topics? 6 topics. Jīva svarūpam, Īśvara-svarūpam, jagat svarūpam, banda svarupam, mōkṣa svarūpam and sādhanā. That is the systematic spiritual discipline by which you go to from banda to mōkṣa.

And each topic has to be very thoroughly studied. When you go to individual, prāṇamaya kōśa, annamaya kōśa, vijñānamaya kōśa, manōmaya kōśa and ānandamaya kōśa. Avastha trayam; śarīra thrayam; very big topics. And if you say world, pañca bhūta śṛsti, pañcikaraṇam, very big topics. Then when you come to Bhagavān; nimitha kāraṇam, upādāna kāraṇam, very big topic. And suppose you study Jīva svarūpam for one month and one decade gap (to remember in the next week itself is a big problem!!) and then you study jagat svarūpam. By that time, you forget Jīva svarūpam; by the time you come of Īśvara; Jīva and jagat are forgotten; you have to keep all of them in mind; because we are trying to understand all of them in a comprehensive manner. Therefore just as physics requires a systematic and consistent study; to become a physics graduate, you have to go through 20 years of education. In normal course, if you fail in between it will increase; just as chemistry of 20 years of regular and systematic study; vēdānta is much more comprehensive śāstram; therefore that also requires a thorough study.

People think spirituality is just sitting in bhajan or dhyānam. They think that is enough; People forget that spirituality involves thorough study; it is an education which requires all the involvement. That is why also I tell that at least you try to summarise the class by writing notes; or find out some victim outside and share; catch hold of someone; try to teach. They will surely run away, if they see you again. Try to find out some method to remember and assimilate.

Therefore Kṛṣṇa says through śṛavaṇa and mananam, you should gain doubtless knowledge of your real nature. Doubtless knowledge is called viśuddhayā buddhi. Viśuddha means clear, doubtless; buddhiḥ means knowledge, you should have a doubtless knowledge or doubtless intellect; both are the same; an intellect which has got knowledge without doubt; and this is possible only through systematic śṛavaṇa and manana.

And once you have done that; now śṛavanam is not compulsory because the teaching has been received; so what is compulsory is what; sugar has been added; you have to stir and how to do that, spend some time alone; and try to bring the knowledge to your intellect and look at yourselves as revealed by the śāstra; replace the ahaṁkāra -I, which is the familiar-I and replace it by the śākṣi-I, the higher-I, the ātma-I. And that is going to be discussed in these verses; the details of which we will see in the next class.

Hari Om

ॐ

In this 18th chapter of the Gīta, which happens to be a summary of the entire Bhagavat Gīta, Lord Kṛṣṇa repeatedly talks about the two main yōgas or sādhanās in the form of karma-yōga and jñāna-yōga. Karma-yōga itself Kṛṣṇa summaries, three times in this chapter itself; and jñāna-yōga also he summaries twice in this chapter. First He summarised jñāna-yōga from the 13th verse up to the 17th verse, wherein the emphasis was given to the systematic study of the scriptures under the guidance of a ācārya; otherwise jñāna-yōga in the form of śravaṇam was highlighted before.

Now once again Kṛṣṇa talks about jñāna-yōga but now highlighting the role of nidhidhyāsanam. From verse No.50 up to verse No.55, we get the second summary of jñāna-yōga; emphasising nidhidhyāsanam.

And as I had said in the last class, the primary or the only purpose of nidhidhyāsanam is to assimilate the knowledge that we have received, Nidhidhyāsanam is not meant for acquiring knowledge; nidhidhyāsanam is not meant for validating this knowledge; nidhidhyāsanam is only meant for the assimilation. And this nidhidhyāsanam we were seeing in the Māṇḍukya kārīka also; same topic is parallely going.

I said nidhidhyāsanam primarily consists of dwelling upon the teaching; which we have already received from the ācārya. Even though we know the essence of the teaching; we dwell upon it so that it enters it to every cell of our personality. Remember the example adding sugar is not enough; whether it is milk, coffee or tea, you have to mix it with every droplet of the liquid. Otherwise you will be adding sugar but it will not make any difference at all. And therefore śravaṇam is like adding the sugar; in nidhidhyāsanam alone, we are mixing the sugar called śāstra jñānam.

And as we saw yesterday, we can dwell upon this teaching in several ways. The mind has to dwell on the teaching that is important; it can be accomplished by any method. And I gave you the example even repeated listening can be a form of nidhidhyāsanam. When you listen for the first few times, you are gaining knowledge; but after gaining knowledge, you continue to listen, you are not gathering any new information; but you are only digesting it.

Therefore repeated hearing is a form of nidhidhyāsanam; repeated reading of the śāstra is a form of nidhidhyāsanam; repeated writing of the content is a form of nidhidhyāsanam; repeated discussions among the students, that discussion is also a form of nidhidhyāsanam; and finally when a person shares this knowledge with another person; that sharing or teaching is also a form of nidhidhyāsanam.

In all these forms of nidhidhyāsanam, we give importance to the mind dwelling on the teaching; we are not particular about the physical posture. We do not insist that you should listen to the class only sitting in padmāsanam. If I say that, next class, half the hall would be empty. Sitting itself is difficult; and not only that, somehow you struggle and put the Padmāsana, and somebody should help you to pull out the leg once the class is over. Here we do not insist on your physical posture, because vēdānta is primarily associated with the mind receiving the knowledge. Therefore you hear it in any posture; you can listen lying down, as long as you avoid dozing off (not in the class). Thus reading, writing, discussing, teaching, listening, etc. whatever be the physical posture, is a form of nidhidhyāsanam.

And in addition to all these forms of nidhidhyāsanams, we have got another version of nidhidhyāsanam, in which we give importance to the physical posture also. And this form of nidhidhyāsanam is also accepted in the śāstra. A person can take to that form of nidhidhyāsanam, and if it is inconvenient, a person need not take to that form of nidhidhyāsanam; it is an optional version, in which the yōgic method of meditation are employed. Even though it is not compulsory, the mind alone has to dwell on the teaching; just to assist the mind, to give support to the mind, we can take care of the external postures also, and therefore in this version of nidhidhyāsanam, we make use of the Pathanjali's aṣṭāṅga-yōga stages.

And when such a form of nidhidhyāsanam is practised, it is called samādhi abhyāsaḥ; and this samādhi abhyāsaḥ of nidhidhyāsanam, Kṛṣṇa himself has talked about in the sixth chapter.

And in this version of nidhidhyāsanam, you give importance to your external layers of personality also. And six stages are mentioned in Pathanjali yōga; they are āsana, prāṇāyāma, pratyāhāra, dhāraṇā, dhyāna, samādhi. Āsana means sitting in an appropriate and comfortable posture.

I do not want to go into the details; care of the sixth chapter, this is supposed to be a summary. Therefore you sit in an appropriate comfortable posture and make sure that your body, head and neck are in one straight line, samam kāyaśirōgrīvaṁ dhārayannacalam ssthiraḥ, etc. āsana.

And then prāṇāyāma you practice, so that the prāṇic flow in the physical body is also smooth and well harmonious, because the flow of prāṇā and the calmness of the mind are interconnected. When prāṇic flow is disturbed, the mental harmony is disturbed and therefore Patanjali says that you practice prāṇāyāma; which Kṛṣṇa also accepts and mentions.

स्पर्शान्कृत्वा बहिर्बाह्यान् चक्षुश्चैवान्तरे भ्रुवोः ।
प्राणापानौ समौ कृत्वा नासाभ्यन्तरचारिणौ ॥ ५.२७ ॥

[sparśān kṛtvā bahirbāhyāṁścākṣuścaivāntarē bhruvōḥ |
prāṇāpānau samau kṛtvā nāsābhyantaracāriṇau || 5.27 ||](#)

This come at the end of the 5th chapter, He says; before you start dwelling upon the vėdāntic-teaching; make sure that your breathing is also normal. Just as in the Olympic weight lifting, what he wants to do is the lifting the weight; but you can see and he stands in front of the weight and closes the eyes and takes a few breathing; after all he is going to lift with the hand; because they have found that they are all interconnected.

Thus āsana is given importance; prāṇāyāma is given importance; in fact before all our vėdic rituals, prāṇāyāma is made compulsory because concentration in rituals, concentration in japa, concentration in dhyānam, all can be achieved by prāṇāyāma.

Therefore immediately after śuklabharataram, Om Bhuhu; Catch the nose, they do not know what is prāṇāyāma; so āsana, prāṇāyāma, then, pratyāhāra; deliberate withdrawal of all the sense organs which is called pratyāhāra; this is the third stage in meditation;

And then dhāraṇā. The mind is withdrawn from all the anātma viṣaya; all the objects consisting of the world, the body and even the mind. So the mind is withdrawn from everything else, and the attention is focused upon the sākṣi caitanyam, the witness consciousness principle, because of which I am aware of all these things; and this turning the mind and fixing upon the ātma is called dhāraṇā; and then comes of practice of dhyānam, in which I try to retain my attention upon the ātma itself for a length of time; dhāraṇā and Dhyāna are you able to see the difference.

Fixing is dhāraṇā, retaining is called dhyāna and up to dhyānam the will power is involved; effort is involved; struggle is involved; because the mind tends to run away; like a baby or like a monkey.

And once a person has deliberately dwelt on the ātma caitanyam, aham caitanya rūpōsmi, nityōsmi, śuddhōsmi, asaṅgōsmi, etc. after some time, the mind gets naturally absorbed in the thought; and once the mind gets sucked into the state of absorption, it is spontaneously abiding in the teaching; that no will power is required; this natural or spontaneous absorption in the ātma is called samādhi. And all these Kṛṣṇa has elaborately discussed in the sixth chapter, wherein He said

आत्मसंस्थं मनः कृत्वा न किञ्चिदपि चिन्तयेत् ॥ ६.२५ ॥

ātmasaṁsthaṁ manaḥ kṛtvā na kiñcidapi cintayēt || 6.25 ||

यतो यतो निश्चरति मनश्चञ्चलमस्थिरम् ।
ततस्ततो नियम्यैतद् आत्मन्येव वशं नयेत् ॥ ६.२६ ॥

[yatō yatō niścarati manaścañcalamasthiram |
tatastatō niyamya itadātmanyēva vaśaṁ nayēt || 6.26 ||](#)

यथा दीपो निवातस्थः नेङ्गते सोपमा स्मृता ।
योगिनां यतचित्तस्य युञ्जतो योगमात्मनः ॥ ६.१९ ॥

[yathā dīpō nivātasthō nēṅgatē sōpamā smṛtā |
yōginō yatacittasya yuñjatō yōgamātmanah || 6.19 ||](#)

To absorbed mind, Kṛṣṇa gives an example for this mind, like a flame which is kept in a protected enclosure. Just as the flame does not flicker at all, it is steady. Similarly the mind of a person in samādhi is also absorbed; absorbed in what; aham Brahmāsmi; or aham śarīra vilakṣaṇa asmi; any teaching that is given at the time of śravaṇam.

From this it is clear that a nidhidhyāsanam can be practiced only after successful listening for some time. If you call a person and ask him to do ātma dhyānam, he will ask what is ātma; therefore, ātma dhyānam is possible only for a person who has systematically studied the scriptures and have done avasthā traya vivēka; pañca kōśa vivēka; śarīra traya vivēka, I am the witness of the waking state, I am the witness of the dream state, I am the witness of the sleep state; and I am not affected by the events happening in these states. If you have studied, all these if you learned through scriptures, you can dwell upon. In fact, Vēdāntic-meditation is nothing but reliving the vēdāntic class. Śravaṇam, replayed is nidhidhyāsanam.

There is no difference between śravaṇam and nidhidhyāsanam at all. In śravaṇam the recording player is functioning, and in nidhidhyāsanam, the replay is functioning.

And suppose you do not record and you want to replay. What you will get? You can only play if recorded; therefore śravaṇam is the mental vēdāntic activity with the assistance of a guru; Nidhidhyāsanam is the same mental vēdāntic activity without the assistance of a guru; guru pūrvaka vēdānta cintha, śravaṇam; guru rahitha vēdānta cintha is nidhidhyāsanam.

And when a person remains absorbed in the teaching for a length of time, vēdānta becomes my own second nature; and that is called jñāna niṣṭa. And only when the teaching is assimilated; it will be available during crisis; during the problems, during loss of things; during loss of people; during loss of health; during loss of youth; or during the śaṇi daśa, rāhu daśa; all these are coming; during that if it has to be useful, you have to spend time.

There is no shortcut, you have to give time for the teaching; and that too quality time. Who says? Not me, Lord Kṛṣṇa is saying; we have seen the introduction in the 50th verse, and now we are seeing the 51st where he talks about the importance steps of nidhidhyāsanam; vēdāntic meditation, samādhi adhyāsaḥ.

And what is the first stage; Kṛṣṇa said; buddhyā viśuddhayā yuktaḥ; if you have plan of vēdāntic meditation; make sure that you have studied vēdānta; make sure that you have gone through śravaṇam and mananam. Therefore viśudda buddhi, an intellect which has got clear knowledge of the vēdāntic-teaching.

And what to do you mean clear knowledge? Is there something called unclear knowledge? There is unclear knowledge called vague knowledge. Therefore clear knowledge means a knowledge which is free from all doubts.

Vēdānta talks about three important factors which are intimately associated with our life:

- one is the world; what is this world? The world, vēdānta talks about.
- and it talks about myself confronting the world, who am constantly affected by the world and its happenings; Therefore I vēdānta talks about.
- And God as the cause of both, jīva jagat kāraṇa bhūta Īśvara.

All these three basic things vēdānta talks about and the interesting thing is: what vēdānta teaches is totally different from what we have understood about ourselves:

- I think I am mortal; vēdānta says that you are immortal;
- I think the world is real; vēdānta says that there is no world at all; and
- I think God is far away and totally different from me. Vēdānta says, God can never be away or different from you.

With regard to each thing, what Vēdānta says is diagonally opposite to my conception. Therefore a thorough study is required to clearly assimilate brahma satyam, jagan mityā, jīvō brahmaiva na paraḥ; and this reception of thorough knowledge is accomplished by śravaṇam and mananam.

That is what Kṛṣṇa says: viśuddhayā buddhyā yuktaḥ; after thorough study of vēdāntic scriptures with a clear knowledge.

Then dhṛtyā''tmānaṁ niyama ca; if you have to spend time upon vēdāntic-teaching, you should feel worth, because the mind is very very economical, especially with regard to time, especially with the time, the mind is economical, if the mind feels that something is unimportant, it will go away from that subject matter; Suppose you chant viṣṇu sahasranama, because the mouth knows how to chant, because I know it byheart; viśvam Viṣṇuōrvaṣatkara; then kada kada, kada, for the 20-30 minutes the mouth can chant; then the mind beings to think that this 15-20 minutes can be used better; for chanting my attention is not required; therefore why I can't utilise these 20 minutes of Viṣṇu Sahasranama chanting for something else. And happily runs all over, where the mind considers is very important.

If there is an important talk in office, office is important for me; Viṣṇu sahasranama is not important, a mechanical mouth can do that work, therefore the mind does that; So the mind knows only one language; what it values, there the mind goes. So the absorption is directly proportional to the value we attach; we never lack concentration; we all have got plenty of concentration; but concentration is directed towards the things which we consider important and if v̇dāntic-meditation should naturally happen, v̇dānta must be a thing that I value.

And once I have value, then even in office, you think of v̇dānta; because whatever I value, the mind goes; a scientist, wherever he goes, he will think of. A chess player, wherever he goes, he thinks of chess only. Therefore, dhṛtyā; by the will power, you discover the value of v̇dānta; and turn your mind towards the teaching. So dhṛti means buddhi niścaya; that this 15 minutes of v̇dāntic-meditation will be useful to me, this niścayam should be there. So dhṛti meaning conviction regarding the worth of v̇dāntic meditation. Therefore dhṛtya ātmānam, here ātma means the mind and sense organs, niyama means turning away from worldly thoughts.

Then śabdādīn viṣayāmstyaktvā; turn the sense organs from the relevant sense objects, śabdā, sparśa, rūpa, rasa and gandha; may you drop at least at the time of meditation; for 15-20 minutes turn the sense organs away; to use the Pathanjali language, it is called pratyāhāra; prathi āharathi; āharathi means withdraw the sense organs.

Then rāgadvēṣau vyudasya ca; make sure that you have handled the problem of rāgaḥ and dvēsaḥ, because the mind will only go to such things where you have rāgaḥ or dvēsaḥ. There are hundreds of people walking on the road, they are all neutral people, you are neither attached to them, nor do you hate them. What happened in so many countries and you read the newsitem, you are not worried at all. Suppose something happens in New Zealand; for many people it does not register at all; it never disturbs at all; but suppose what? Some member of the family is there in Newland; then in meditation that thought. Why? Because I have got a rāga in that particular thing. Therefore rāgaḥ and dvēsaḥ are responsible for dragging the mind towards the thing. And therefore learn to transcend your rāgaḥ and dvēsaḥ. In fact this must have been practised at the level of karma-yōga itself; I should not tell here at all. At karma-yōga level itself it must have been done.

But Kṛṣṇa knows that we all have come to v̇dānta through backdoor; and therefore we have come to nidhidhyāsanam, like an M.Sc. Maths students, 4+5 is equal to 10 or 11 is the only doubt. Like that, nidhidhyāsanam we are talking about. Rāgaḥ dvēsaḥ we are not handled at all. So that Kṛṣṇa reminds that you have to handle. Vyudasya ca means what?: Transcend; Do not allow them to disturb you in meditation.

So these are all not actual nidhidhyāsanam. These are only preparatory step; we gave a special title to the preparatory step in the 6th chapter of the Gītā. I do not know whether you remember, those preparatory step were called antaraṅga sādhanāni. In the 6th chapter whatever we saw; antaraṅga sādhanāni, bahiraṅga sādhanāni, dhyāna svarūpam, dhyāna phalam, dhyāna pratibhanda parihāram. All these, and in the antaraṅga sādhanāni itself, I talked about 8 steps, all those steps we have to recollect here.

Verse 18.52

विविक्तसेवी लघ्वाशी यतवाक्कायमानसः ।
ध्यानयोगपरो नित्यं वैराग्यं समुपाश्रितः ॥ १८.५२ ॥

viviktasēvī laghvāśī yataṅkāyamaṅasaḥ |
dhyānayōgaparō nityaṅ vairāgyaṅ samupāśritaḥ || 18.52 ||

विविक्तसेवि viviktasēvī resorting to a secluded place लघ्वाशी laghvāśī taking limited food, यतवाक्कायमानसः yataṅkāyamaṅasaḥ restraining the speech the body, and the mind, समुपाश्रितः samupāśritaḥ taking to वैराग्यम् vairāgyaṅ detachment नित्यं ध्यानयोगपरः nityaṅ dhyānayōgaparaḥ one should be ever devoted to dhyānayōga

52. Resorting to a secluded place, taking limited food, restraining the speech, the body and the mind, taking to detachment, one should be ever devoted to dhyāna yōga.

Kṛṣṇa does not give all these instructions in an orderly manner. In the 6th chapter also he did not maintain an order. Here also he does not maintain an order. We only have to reshuffle; First we have to take care of annamaya kōśa; then gradually we should come to prāṇāmaya kōśa and then we come to manōmaya kōśa; and there also sense organs first, then the mind, then we come to vijñāmaya process; and it is a gradual process. Kṛṣṇa does not here concentrate on the order.

So vivikta sēvī; chose a relatively secluded place where the external disturbances will be minimum. So viviktaḥ means secluded place. And elsewhere He will say ēkāki; preferably be alone; starting to talk about meditation, we are doing all other things, except that! Therefore, try to be ēkāki. Not only that, it will be a nice training also, to leave alone; it is very very important faculty we have to develop, because ultimately we have come alone, and when we are facing serious problems also, we are alone, because others can never understand the problem and in the old age, we have to be alone, and especially in the night, when we do not get sleep and all others are snoring away. You have to face yourselves alone, and suppose in the hospital, ICU unit; let us hope that such things does not happen; but who says: Only doctor says: I See You. Doctor will I see you. Nobody will see you; others say I do not see you; So it is a fact that we are travelling alone, we are born alone, and we have to die alone. Since this is an inevitable fact of life, why can't we learn to spend some time alone; this meditation will help that. And therefore Kṛṣṇa says; vivikta sēvī;

And alone means do not go with the walkman; gone; it is a talkman; or go with a cell and go on talking, what is the use; do not seek anything, just be yourselves; it is an important lesson, everyone has to learn. I told you when Swami Chinmayānanda conducted the sādhanā camp in Siddabhāri, he used to tell every sādhanaka, the camper that he should go alone and spend some time alone. Because in that area, there is a vast area, where a person can stay alone. There it is possible; not in Chennai. Do you know that the campers do; they know Swamiji is around and he may be watching; and they all go alone, and they have an understanding that they will meet there; and in every place there will be two or three persons together. Dayānanda Swami says that the greatest tragedy is we cannot face ourselves; being alone is facing ourselves; being alone is facing my own mind; being alone is facing my own anxieties and concerns; face courageously. So vivikta sēvī; means the one who resorts to aloneness; Not once in lifetime, as often as possible.

Then, eating in a regulated manner; eating in a limited measure; laghvāśī, eating in moderation, all these we have seen; because only when the stomach is not full, the mind will work. If the stomach is too full, all the blood circulation would go to the Madhya pradesh, and Uttra pradesh will dose off; the head; therefore laghvāśī.

Then yataavākkāyamānasah; and learn to master all your organs; so this is a repetition, which he has said in the last verse; vāk means organ of speech, kāya means the physical body, mānasam means the mind, all of them are yatham, yatham means withdrawn from the external world and vairāgyam samupāśritaḥ; and taking to, resorting to or invoking detachment. And Kaivalya upaniṣad gives a beautiful tip, it says at least mentally become a sanyāsi at the time of vādāntic meditation. Do not be afraid; only mentally, and only 20 minutes, and thereafter you can take all; so at the time of meditation, you tell, I am not a husband; I am not a wife; I am not a father; I am not a grandfather; I am not an employer, I am not an employee; all these roles invoke a saṅgha; and every association will cause its own type of disturbance, tell yourselves, I am not related to anything; and ultimately that is the fact because all the worldly relationships are temporary and incidental. They were never there before the birth; and they will never be there after the death; it is for a few decades that is there; only permanent relationship is with the Lord alone; because Īśvara sambhanda was in every janma; whereas manuṣya sambhanda is not in every janma. In the last janma, whether I was a manuṣya is itself doubtful; or whether I was a buffalo. So drop all incidental relationships and invoke only three relationships: Īśvara sambhanda; guru sambhanda and śāstra sambhanda. Kaivalya Upaniṣad gives this tip. Therefore vairāgyam upāśritaḥ.

And if you are worried about your family members; who will take care of them after me; if that worry comes, you tell yourselves; nothing to worry, Bhagavan will take care of all of them in a better way; in fact they are praying for, when this person will 'leave'. We think that we are protecting them; they want to protect them from us; this is the truth; therefore hand over all the responsibilities to the Lord with this prayer.

अनन्याश्चिन्तयन्तो मां ये जनाः पर्युपासते ।
तेषां नित्याभियुक्तानां योगक्षेमं वहाम्यहम् ॥ ९.२२ ॥

[ananyāścintayantō mām yē janāḥ paryupāsatē |
tēṣāṃ nityābhiyuktānām yōgaksēmaṃ vahāmyaham || 9.22 ||](#)

Aham means not me; but Kṛṣṇa. Hand over the charge; everything will be perfectly fine; everything will be perfect without me; Therefore vairāgyaṃ samupāśritaḥ.

Now you have got a free body, free sense organs, free mind and free intellect; use that time for dwelling upon the śāstram. Therefore Kṛṣṇa says paraḥ. Paraḥ means be committed to. Be sincerely wholeheartedly diligently committed to the sādhanā of vėdāntic meditation. If a person has not studied vėdānta, then also he can practice meditation, but before vėdāntic study, the mediation is called, upāsana, which is meditating upon our own īṣṭa dēvathā, in the form of Rāma, Kṛṣṇa, etc.

But here we are talking about after vėdāntic study, therefore what is the substance of meditation, there is one truth, behind God, behind the world and behind this body-mind complex, and that one truth is I the Satcidananda Ātma;

ब्रह्मैवाहमिदं जगच्च सकलं चिन्मात्रविस्तारितं
सर्वं चैतदविद्यया त्रिगुणयाऽशेषं मया कल्पितम् |
इत्थं यस्य दृढा मतिः सुखतरे नित्ये परे निर्मले
चाण्डालोऽस्तु स तु द्विजोऽस्तु गुरुरित्येषा मनीषा मम || २ ||

[Brahmaivāhamidaṃ jagacca sakalaṃ cinmātravistāritaṃ
sarvaṃ caitadavidyayā triguṇayā:'śeṣaṃ mayā kalpitam | itthaṃ yasya dṛḍhā matiḥ sukhatare nityē parē nirmalē cāṇḍālo:'stu sa tu dvijo:'stu gururityeṣā maṇiṣā mama || Maṇiṣa Pañcakam 2||](#)

I am quite convinced that he is the great Master, be he a Brahmin or an outcaste, who, dwelling on the pure and infinite Brahman thinks of himself as that very Brahman, of whose manifestation the whole Universe is, though apparently the Universe is assumed to consist of different things, due to ignorance and the three Guṇas (Satva, Rajas and Tamas).

(Thanks to sanskritdocuments.org)

I, the consciousness is the substratum of this body, this world and even God's body; So dwelling upon this truth is called dhyāna yōga paratvam; and we should very carefully note, vēdāntic-meditation is not a thoughtless state. Thoughtless state is the meditation prescribed in the Pathanjali yōga śāstra, we the vēdāntins defer from Pathanjali's yōga, we accept his āsana, prāṇāyāma, pratyāhara, all OK, but our meditation is different from the Pathanjala yōga; we dwell upon aham brahmāsmi.

मनोबुद्ध्याहंकारचित्तानि नाहं
न च श्रोत्रजिह्वे न च घ्राणनेत्रे.
न च व्योमभूमिः न तेजो न वायुः
चिदानंदरूपः शिवोऽहं शिवोऽहम् ॥ १ ॥

Manobuddhyahamkāraccittāni nāham na ca śrotrajivhe na ca ghrāṇanetre.
na ca vyomabhūmiḥ na tejo na vāyuḥ cidānamdarūpaḥ śivo:'ham śivo:'ham ॥ 1 ॥

It is a thought which I have to deliberately entertain. And this is called sajātiya vritti pravāhaḥ. May you, Hey Arjuna, practice that. Not now, after Mahābhāratha war. Or else, Arjuna will sit there itself; as it is he wants to avoid the war. Therefore, you have to add; after Mahābhāratha war, you should practice.

Verse 18.53

अहङ्कारं बलं दर्पं कामं क्रोधं परिग्रहम् ।
विमुच्य निर्ममः शान्तः ब्रह्मभूयाय कल्पते ॥ १८.५३ ॥

ahaṅkāraṁ balaṁ darpaṁ kāmaṁ krōdhaṁ parigrahaṁ |
vimucya nirmamaḥ śāntō brahmabhūyāya kalpatē || 18.53 ||

विमुच्य vimucya having given up अहङ्कारम् ahaṅkāraṁ egoism बलम् balam power दर्पम् darpaṁ arrogance कामम् kāmam desire क्रोधम् krōdhaṁ anger परिग्रहम् parigrahaṁ and possession निर्ममः nirmamaḥ being free from 'Mine' - notion शान्तः śāntaḥ (and) remaining tranquil कल्पते kalpatē one becomes fit, ब्रह्मभूयाय brahmabhūyāya for becoming Brahman.

53. Having given up egoism, power, arrogance, desire, anger, and possession, being free from 'Mine' notion, (and) remaining tranquil, one becomes fit for becoming Brahman.

And during the practice of the vēdāntic meditation, several emotional disturbances can happen. And they do happen and if they happen it is because of the traces of āsuri sampath, which I have enumerated in the 16th chapter of the Gīta. So Kṛṣṇa talked about certain traits which will disturb the mind and therefore they have to be weed them out. In the śāstra, it is called durvāsana-kṣyaḥ. So certain unhealthy patterns of thinking will certainly disturb the mind and therefore you have to carefully weed them out, as we were seeing in yesterday's class:

Utsēka yadvat kuśagrē, kēnaika binduna, manasō nigraha, tatvat parikēthathaḥ. 49.02

Lots of weeds are there in the garden called the mind. We have weed out that first; Check it. And what are some of the weeds, not all, some of the weeds, here weed I mean unhealthy pattern of thinking.

No.1 Ahamkāraḥ; Āhamkāra means anātma abhimāna. This strong identification with the body. A vēdāntic student should never encourage that; he has to repeatedly remind the body has come from the pañca-būthās, it is a temporary gift given for vēdāntic study, not for eating, it is given for vēdāntic study and after using the body, I have to return it to the pañca būthās and that is why repeated reminder is given by applying the ash, so that you will be told that the body will be reduced to what; ash alone; or if he is a vaiṣṇava; thiruman, therefore, whether it is called mannū or ash, do not get attached to your body. You have to protect the body, but you cannot get attached; and this dēha abhimāna is called ahamkāra.

Then balaṁ, balaṁ means power, holding on to the power and position, either in an organisation or in any particular institution, or in the family itself; I do not want to give up my power; even though the next generation has come; and they have to take over, Son is growing up, daughter-in-law has arrived, grand-children are there; they themselves want gradually take over; and the śāstra says, become a guest in your own house, but this person wants to interfere with everything; and everything that happens, he must be informed. Nobody should go without telling me; 85 years old and already the ticket is booked; and still he wants to hold on to that power. balaṁ means attachment to power; holding on to power; Remember what I say: Aviyai vittālum chaviyai viden. That is called attachment. So balaṁ.

Then darpaṁ; darpaṁ means arrogance; if I have accomplished something in life, I have got a few awards or degrees, or I am self-made man; Dayānanda Swami, says he is the most difficult man; constantly I am a self-made man, I started from scratch and now I have become a millionaire, and the time talking about his biography; so he says give up your arrogance; self-aggrandizement.

Then kāmaṁ; materialistic desires; which are endless; I do not want to dwell upon them; because we have seen in the third chapter, kama ēṣa krōdha ēṣa.

Then krōdhaṁ; wherever kāma comes, the krōdhaṁ is bound to come; kāma means expectation; when expectations are there; I am an irritable person; higher the expectation, higher the irritability; because when the expectations are not fulfilled; I will shout at those people. Therefore, kāma and krōdham go together; therefore handle them.

Then parigrahaḥ; parigraḥ means possession. Vēdānta always values a simple line; bigger the possession or more the possessions, greater the distraction; and therefore aparigrahaḥ or simple life is always prescribed, especially for a spiritual student. And if a person cannot practice in earlier stages; at least gradually you reduce things; right from dress on wards; 73 dresses are there. What to do? we require a few dresses and again other things also; therefore drop or reduce or possessions; And Śankarācārya will say take sanyāsa; he will say that whenever he gets a loophole; I am not going to tell that; reduce the possession.

Then nirmamaḥ; not only give up the dēha abhimāna; also give up the abhimāna towards the possessions. mama kāraha. So ahamkāra and mama kāra.

So the difference between aparigrahaḥ and nirmama is: aparigrahaḥ is reducing the possessions; and even if the possessions, I will have to hold on to minimum possessions. Some possessions, even a sanyasi cannot avoid; towards those possessions what should the attitude and this here presented as nirmama, even towards the minimum possessions, do not develop, too much ownership; always be a trustee, of even those possessions; all these belong to the Bhagavan and I am using it.

Then what will happen? Śantaḥ; the mind will be naturally tranquil; the details we will see in the next class.

Hari Om

233 Chapter 18, Verses 53-56

ॐ

In these verses, beginning from the 50th verse, up to the 55th verse of the last chapter, of the Gīta, Lord Kṛṣṇa is summarising the jñāna-yōga sādhana, which consists of these stages;

The first stage being śravaṇam, which is systematic study of the vēdāntic scriptures

And the second stage is mananam, through which we clear all the doubts with regard to the teaching, and make the knowledge into a conviction, a doubtless knowledge;

And the final stage of sādhanā, which is the most important stage also and that is the internalisation or the assimilation of this wisdom.

And this is extremely important because the assimilated wisdom alone will help me; just as digested food alone will help in the nourishment of the body, it is not the amount of food that I consume, but it the amount of food that I digest that is going to nourish my physical body.

Similarly, if my spiritual-spirituality is to be nourished, the food for the nourishment of the spiritual personality; is the v̥dāntic-teaching; jñānam is the āhāraḥ, the food for the nourishment of the spiritual personality and it is not the amount of teaching that I receive that matter, but it is the amount of teaching that I digest.

Therefore even though the receiving the teaching is very important, the assimilation of the teaching is equally or perhaps more important; and therefore Lord Kṛṣṇa emphasises the sādhana of nidhidhyāsana or assimilation and as I said the primary sādhana of assimilation is dwelling upon the teaching as often as possible, and also leading an alert life to make sure that my way of life and the teaching that I have, they are closer. There is no big divide between what I know and what I am; which will be a spiritual hypocrisy. Talking of v̥dānta and doing all akramās, so that cannot be there. Therefore I have to constantly monitor my thought, word and deed, and make sure that there is no gap between what I know and what I am. So thus an alert life is part of nidhidhyāsanam; dwelling upon the teaching is part of nidhidhyāsanam.

And here Kṛṣṇa presents v̥dāntic-meditation or samādhi abhyāsa; which we are seeing in the Māṇḍūyaka kārika, this v̥dāntic-meditation is also a form of nidhidhyāsanam. In v̥dāntic meditation, I turn my mind away from all other things and exclusively dwell upon the teaching.

And Kṛṣṇa talked about the various stages of preparation in these verses; 51 and 52 and 53. How one should be seated in a comfortable posture; how one should withdraw from external disturbances and how one should die to the relative worldly roles of life; which are only incidental; which are only vēṣam that we have; and removing all of them; I invoke my real I.

And Kṛṣṇa said: having observed all these conditions; nityaṁ dhyānayōgapaṛaḥ bhavēt; that is the crucial thing; dhyāna yōga parāḥ means one should be committed to the meditation upon the teaching. parāḥ means it is not a casual hobbish approach but one should be sincere and serious. Parāḥ means tātparyavān and dhyāna yōga. Śankarācārya divides these two words; and dhyānam and yōga, and translates yōga as samādhi. Thus dhyāna yōga parāḥ means one should remain totally absorbed in the teaching; at least for some time, as often as possible. Up to this we saw in the last class.

And in the 53rd verse, we are seeing the second line; vimucya nirmamaḥ śāntō if a person practices this vĕdāntic-meditation for a length of time.

Then brahmabhūyāya kalpatē; he learns to dis-identify from his superficial personality, called ahaṁkāra; ahaṁkāra is the inferior-I, the lower-I, the changing I, consisting of the physical body-mind-complex, and this person learns to dis-identify from this finite I and learns to identify with the higher I; which is nothing but the caitanya tatvam; the consciousness principle.

And what is consciousness? Do you remember? Consciousness is not a part, product or property of the body, (only if you do nidhidhyāsa, you will remember it) it is an independent entity which pervades and enlivens the body, it is limited by the boundaries of the body, it survives the death of the body.

And when you practice meditation, you do not use the word it for consciousness; now what is the mistake we are doing; whenever we refer to consciousness, we are referring to as 'third person singular'. And when it comes to the body, we spontaneously take as ourselves using the first person. In nidhidhyāsanam, what do we do? Instead of using the word it, you train yourselves using the word 'I'. I am not part, product or property of the body; I am an independent formless consciousness, which pervades and enlivens this body; (you have to say "this" for the body) and I am not limited by the boundaries of the body and I continue to survive even after the fall of the body; the surviving-I will not be accessible through this body; this phone No. is dead; I-the-surviving-consciousness am not accessible through this body; but I continue to be accessible through innumerable other bodies; thus I am space-like all pervading, formless, all accommodating consciousness principle. This I have to drill it to my mind; until it becomes spontaneous to me.

Of course, when I transact with the world, you need not tell this and confuse the people and somebody ask you, you say "I am not part of the body, product or property of the body" etc. you keep this in mind and there you can give biography, date of birth and all those things, but in the background, let the tāmura sṛuti be there, I am behind the body, I am not the body.

And the moment I learn to identify with the formless consciousness principle, I can very very boldly claim 'Aham Brahmāsmi"; until I spontaneously identify with caitanyam, I will not be comfortable with aham Brahmāsmi;

When dis-identification from the body is natural; and identification with consciousness is spontaneous, I can very boldly say Aham Brahmāsmi. Who says? Lord Kṛṣṇa.

Look at the slōka; brahmabhūyāya kalpatē; such a meditator; kalpatē, is fit to become one with Brahman; such a person is fit to become one with Brahman; 'to become one with Brahman';

Not that I become Brahman, I own up the fact that I am the consciousness which is Brahman; after all the word Brahman means what; boundless; and from consciousness stand point I do not have boundaries, what is the difficulty in owning up that fact. As body if I am saying I am all-pervading, it is confusion, but as consciousness if I claim I am all pervading, where is the aberration? Therefore such a person will comfortable aham Brahmāsmi. Therefore Brahma bhūyāḥ; bhūyāya means bhāvaḥ. So Brahmabhūyāya means Brahma bhāvaḥ; Brahma bhāvaḥ means brahma ikyam, brahma ikyam means oneness with brahman.

So in nidhidhyāsanam alone, one owns up the teaching; and therefore nidhidhyāsanam alone can produce the benefit of vēdāntic study. Śravaṇam is an incomplete jñāna sādhanā; therefore through śravaṇam a person cannot hope to get the complete benefit of vēdānta. If I want to get complete benefit, it requires nidhidhyāsanam.

How many minutes; people want crash programs; because people are in a hurry. It is not minutes; or hours or days, weeks or months, we have identified with the body for how many decades and how many janmas? Therefore I am the body notion is so entrenched deep into the mind; and therefore if I have to de-condition my mind; it requires lot of time. And that is why in the 6th chapter, Bhagavān said that tirelessly one has to practice nidhidhyāsanam. In fact, if you ask, Śankarācārya will go one step further and he will say, drop everything and take sanyāsa and do nidhidhyāsana. I am not asking too much from you; you need not go to that extent; but as often as possible; dwell upon the teaching.

ब्रह्मभूतः प्रसन्नात्मा न शोचति न काङ्क्षति ।
समः सर्वेषु भूतेषु मद्भक्तिं लभते पराम् ॥ १८.५४ ॥

brahmabhūtaḥ prasannātmā na śōcati na kāṅkṣati |
samaḥ sarvēṣu bhūtēṣu madbhaktim labhatē parām || 18.54 ||

ब्रह्मभूतः brahmabhūtaḥ Having become Brahman, प्रसन्नात्मा prasannātmā the tranquil-minded one न शोचति na śōcati neither grieves न काङ्क्षति na kāṅkṣati nor desires, समः samaḥ being the same, सर्वेषु भूतेषु sarvēṣu bhūtēṣu towards all beings लभते labhatē he attains परां मद्भक्तिम् parām madbhaktim supreme devotion towards Me.

54. Having become Brahman, the tranquil-minded one neither grieves nor desires. Being the same towards all beings, he attains supreme devotion towards Me.

So nidhidhyāsanam helps in the assimilation of the teaching and when the teaching is assimilated, it is called jñāna-niṣṭa or it is called sthira prajñā or it is called ātma niṣṭa; niṣṭa means spontaneously abiding in this knowledge. Spontaneously abiding in one's own higher-nature.

And how do you define spontaneity? Swamiji, have I spontaneity or not? How to know; as I said the other day, spontaneity means the knowledge must be accessible to me effortlessly whenever I face problems in life. So like the money available in ready cash form, this knowledge must be easily accessible to me; whenever there is a threat or a problem for me. And therefore it is called ātma niṣṭa, Brahma niṣṭa, jñāna-niṣṭa; sthira prajñā or jīvan muktiḥ. This is called freedom; even when one is alive.

Now the question is how can I measure or how can I understand this jīvan mukti? In what way the jīvan mukti will be indicated in my life. And that Kṛṣṇa talks about here; the phalam he points out; What is that? Prasanna ātma, the indication of jīvan mukti, is general quietitude of the mind. Like a santāḥ samudraḥ, a calm ocean, a calm lake, the mind is predominantly santāḥ.

So mana śāntiḥ is the first indication of jīvan mukti. Therefore He says prasanna ātma; here the word ātma means the mind; so prasanna ātma means what? Mana śāntiḥ. And what is indication of saṁsāra? The opposite; general stressful condition of the mind. If you read the Hindu supplement today, in the health feature, they have dealt with the modern problem of stress; the constant stress is the indication of saṁsāra; the general śāntiḥ is the indication of mōkṣa.

And not only that, na śōcati, and a jīvan muktha mind is not easily disturbed, not pained, not overpowered by sorrow; so śōkaḥ or sorrow caused by the events in life also will come down; so na śōcati means, he or she does not grieve; he is able to accept the situations calmly. Remember what I said the other day, even if he says what in a shock, in two minutes, he will say, So what? That what to, so what is from saṁsāra to muktiḥ; and this alone Kṛṣṇa said in the beginning of the Gītā teaching;

श्री भगवानुवाच ।

अशोच्यानन्वशोचस्त्वं प्रज्ञावादांश्च भाषसे

गतासूनगतासूंश्च नानुशोचन्ति पण्डिताः ॥ २.११ ॥

Śrī Bhagavān uvāca |

aśocyānānvaśocatvaṁ prajñāvādāṁśca bhāṣase

gatāsūnagatāsūṁśca nānuśocanti paṇḍitāḥ || 2.11 ||

jñāna niṣṭāḥ na grīvanthi. They do not grieve. OK.

And na kāṅkṣati; another indication of jīvan mukthi is a sense of fulfilment in life. I am at home with myself; I do not lack anything in life; I do not miss anything in life. The freedom from self-insufficiency is another indication; positively presented it is called pūrṇatvam.

Remember the puri example, when the puri is put in the oil, it runs about all-over, and in the process it is expanding, struggling to become pūrṇa, through various karma-yōga, upāsana, jñāna-yōga and when it has become a fully bloomed pūrṇa puri, It does not run about; Why? Ātmanyēva''tmanā tuṣṭaḥ sthitaprajñastadōcyatē; no more struggle.

Therefore, na kāṅkṣati; freedom from binding desires and if at all there are desires, thereafter. That desire is not born for the sake of pūrṇatvam; it is a desire to contribute to the people, born out of pūrṇatvam; it is not a desire to get but it is a desire to give.

Like in the Karnataka, when there is sufficient water and it is overflowing; and their dams are threatened, what do they do, give to Tamil Nadu; pūrṇaḥ; so pūrṇaḥ they are and therefore it is not out of consideration and all; they are overflowing; and therefore they helplessly share; in fact, every jñāni helplessly shares, sharing is natural to him. Therefore desire to take is saṁsāra; desire to give is not a saṁsāra; Desire to take is struggle; desire to give is leela. Bhagavān's avathāram. Therefore, na kāṅkṣati, he does not expect, even gratitude from the society for what he is doing, because whatever he does, is not even for the sake of gratitude; not even for the sake of acknowledgement; not even for the sake of pāda pūja; nothing, because brimful, therefore share. Na kāṅkṣati.

And samaḥ sarvēṣu bhūtēṣu; he enjoys a mind which looks upon every one objectively. Subjective colorations are removed. When I look at the world from ahaṁkāra standpoint, from individuality standpoint, I become judgmental; I never live in a public world; I am living in a private world, judging every situation from the standpoint of what benefit I will get. But since jñāni does not judge the situation from ahaṁkāra standpoint; he does not have a coloration. To use a technical language; he is no more in a jīva sṛṣṭi, he is no more in a private colored world of his own; but he looks at the world as Īśvara sṛṣṭi. And when I look at the world objectively, there is no question of rāga, dvēṣa; all those things fall down; Therefore sarvēṣu bhūtēṣu samaḥ; samaḥ means rāgaḥ-dvēṣaḥ rahitaḥ; all these things we have seen before:

Sarvabhutahasmanam, in the 13th chapter. Every chapter Kṛṣṇa has talked about. Here He briefly mentions, because this is supposed to be summary chapter. Therefore sarvēṣu bhūtēṣu samaḥ;

And what is his attitude towards God? What happens to his bhakthi? Because generally there is a misconception that vēdānta and jñānam are opposed to bhakthi, jñānam will displace bhakthi; there is a fear. So Kṛṣṇa wants to remove that; Kṛṣṇa tells jñānam is not opposed to bhakthi. On the other hand, jñāna refines the bhakthi; and not only it refines bhakthi, jñāni's bhakthi alone is the highest form of bhakthi. Who says?

Kṛṣṇa says; parām bhaktim labhatē; he attains the highest form of bhakthi. In the 7th chapter of the Gīta, it was called jñāni bhakthi, ārtō jijñāsurarthārthī jñānī ca bharatarṣabha;

And otherwise it was called advaita bhakthi; advaita bhakthi is said to be the highest Bhakthi. It is generally expressed in the form of closeness. Can you say, that person is very close to me. That means what? We have got such an understanding, we love each other so much. Therefore love is indicated by closeness. We express that way also. And not only that. 30.14

When two people love so much; what do they do? They do not like the distance between them and they embrace tightly; therefore, as the love increases, distance decreases. Distance is inversely proportional to love and advaita bhakthi is the highest form of bhakthi because in advaitam alone, the distance between God and the bhaktha; the jñāni has become minimum. In fact, the minimum is not the word, it is zero distance.

And therefore the advaita bhakthi is the highest bhakthi; Therefore Kṛṣṇa says, parām madbhaktim labhatē; Śankarācārya writes; jñānim bhaktim; caturthim bhakthi labhatē; Caturthim means the seventh chapter remember. And this is called what? jīvan mukthiḥ.

Therefore how to find out whether something is happening to us; by the study of Gīta; whatever is happening or not; how to check that; you have got certain indicators, the śānti should become dominant; śōka should become less; kāma becomes less; objectivity increases; these are all the indicators; I used the expression, F I R. Do you remember?

F means the Frequency of mental disturbances comes down; the number of occasions; causes that disturb me has to come down; that is frequency reduction;

The second is Intensity of reaction; how to measure that? When the reaction is extremely intense, it expresses at three levels; mental, verbal and even physical. sīdanti mama gātrāṇi mukhaṁ ca pariśuṣyati.

When the intensity comes down, physical expressions will come down; but mental and verbal, one will be cursing always; verbal and mental continues; and when it comes down still further, verbal reactions come down; physical reactions come down; but mental reactions continue; thus gradually, three, two, to one. This is reduction in the intensity. And final difference is what?

Indicator is what. R. Recovery period. After getting mental disturbed, I take to come back to normalcy. The re-salience quotient; IQ, EQ, this queue, RQ, resalience quotient. Are you able to forget it and continue? Swamiji people reserving the seats in the class; we are disturbed; very big problem; they come at 4.30 and put the kerchiefs. Can the Gīta students behave like this? Is this right or wrong; I said I am not going to enter into this field and I will start reacting. My job is giving the teaching; the teaching has to change the person. And one should ask oneself whether it is right or wrong; and one should go by the conscious; I will not tell whether it is right or wrong; you have to decide; even small things can disturb; they are sitting with so many gaps, I have to sit below the fan; I decided not to tell that also. As long as you are able to sit, it is OK. Do not come to the front after I start the class. Come and adjust; these will be there; do not get disturbed; Use Bhagavat Gīta to get out of your disturbance. All these disturbances; these disturbance comes at the beginning of the class; and if you forget it, it is OK. But after that you do not listen to anything at all. for some people disturbance is from 6 to 7 p.m. class is out. That means resilience is not there; Get disturbed does not matter; after the class starts, forget; I have told all that has to be told!! This is telling without telling.

भक्त्या ममभिजानाति यावान्यश्चास्मि तत्त्वतह ।
ततो मां तत्त्वतो ज्ञात्वा विशते तदनन्तरम् ॥ १८.५५ ॥

bhaktyā māmabhijānāti yāvān yaścāsmi tattvataḥ |
tatō māṁ tattvatō jñātvā viśatē tadanantaram || 18.55 ||

भक्त्या bhaktyā through bhakthi अभिजानति abhijānati one knows माम् mām ME तत्त्वतः tatvataḥ truly यः च यावान् yaḥ ca yāvān who and how much अस्मि asmi I am ततः tataḥ then ज्ञात्वा माम् jñātvā mām having known ME तत्त्वतः tattvataḥ truly विशते viśatē he enters (ME), तदनन्तरम् tadanantaram immediately.

55. Through Bhakti one knows ME truly --- who and how much I am. Then having known ME truly, he enters (ME) immediately.

In the previous slōka, Kṛṣṇa completed the topic of meditation with the phala sṛūti. What is the phalam, jīvan-mukti, what is jīvan-mukti; reduction in FIR. FIR you remember always; not the police station FIR. Vēdāntic FIR. So frequency, intensity, recovery period should get reduced with regard to the disturbances in life situations; This is called jīvan mukti. And this is a gradual process; not that suddenly from 100 count FIR, it will come to 0. It is not; it will gradually come down; jñānam you may get quickly; relatively quickly, but the assimilation and transformation is a gradual process; because of that alone, in some vēdāntic scriptures, they grade the jñānis also.

Even though the jñānis should not be graded, because all the jñāni's knows Aham Brahmāsmi, the grading is done on the basis of FIR level; so Brahmavit; and Brahmavit varaha; and Brahmavit variyan; and Brahma vit variṣṭa; 20% less with, 40% varāha, 60 varyān, 80% variṣṭa; not exactly written like that; I am giving an example. It is a gradual process.

Having talked about nidhidhyāsanam phalam, now in the 55th verse, Kṛṣṇa summarises that nidhidhyāsanam topic. This is a consolidating verse.

So Kṛṣṇa says in this manner, hey Arjuna, bhaktyā, by the practice of nidhidhyāsanam, the word bhakthi, in this context means nidhidhyāsana rupa bhakthi; I had told in the 12th chapter of the Gītā, the word bhakthi can be used in the meaning of any spiritual sādhanā. Bhakthi is a word which can be used to any spiritual sādhanā; karma-yōga is also called a form of bhakthi; upāsana is also a form of bhakthi; vēdāntic sṛavaṇam is also a form of bhakthi, it is called jñāna-yajña, it is considered to be a form of pūja; Jñāna yajña it is called. Chinmayānanda, used to name his lecture series; as Jñāna Yajñā; because this is also a yāgaḥ, in which the fire of knowledge is kindled; and the fuels are nothing but the ignorance, ego, the misconceptions, all these are the fuels that you offer; therefore that is also a form of pūja only; therefore karma is form of a bhakthi; upāsana is a form of bhakthi; scriptural study is a form of bhakthi and even vēdāntic-meditation is a form of bhakthi; Śankarācārya tells this in the Vivekacūdāmani; svasvarūpānusandhānam bhaktirityabhidhīyatē. Vēdāntic-meditation is also a form of devotion.

And by this bhakthi in the form of vādāntic meditation, what phalam a person gets? Mām abhijānati; a person gets Īśvara jñāna-niṣṭa. Jānāthi means he gets knowledge; abhi means the jñānam will get converted into niṣṭa. Abhijānati finally means assimilate this teaching. The teaching about whom, mām, mām means Bhagavān, about Īśvara jñānam, he assimilates, and when a jñāni gains the knowledge of Īśvara, Kṛṣṇa says both the higher form of God as well the lower form of God. Īśvara in his higher-nature called parā-prakṛti, and Īśvara in his inferior nature, called aparā-prakṛti. Do you remember these two words; para prakṛti is in the 7th chapter, higher-nature means the Lord without form, the absolute God who transcends all the attributes.

And what is the inferior nature of the Lord? The very Lord obtaining in the relative world, endowed with all the superior virtues, sarvajñātvam, sarvakāraṇātvam; sarvasṛṣṭikāraṇātvam; sarvapūjyatvam. All these are what, saguṇa Īśvara-svarūpam; Therefore yāvan means the saguṇa svarūpam; and tatvataḥ yaḥ means nirguṇa svarūpam. Tatva means the absolutely real nature; caitanya svarūpam.

So thus a nidhidhyāsaka assimilates the knowledge of god, both in his lower and higher-nature. In the relative field, Bhagavān and the bhaktha are not one and the same; Bhagavān is the total, the macrocosm, I, the devotee, am the microcosm, in the relative field there is a difference; but at the absolute level, there is neither micro nor macro. No crow. There is only nirguṇa caitanyam. Iti abhijānati.

That person knows and tatha mam tatvathō jñātvā. Of these two, which one is more important, the knowledge of the higher-nature is more important, which is called vijñānam; in the 7th chapter, knowledge of the lower nature is called jñānam, the knowledge of the higher-nature is called vijñānam.

And why do we consider, the higher-nature as superior? Nirguṇa jñānam, as superior? The reason is only at nirguṇa level, one transcends the time; only at nirguṇa level, one transcends division, one transcends space, one transcends time and only when one transcends time, one can transcend mortality; mrtyōrma amṛtam gamaya; amṛtatvam is only in Nirguṇatvam. In Saguṇatvam, amṛtatvam you will not get at all. Why? Saguṇa means relativity; relativity means Time space mortality. Therefore Kṛṣṇa emphasises that; tatō mām tattvatō jñātvā, having known Me in my higher-nature.

Thatanatham; as a consequence of that nirguṇa Īśvara jñānam, Mam viśathē; he enters into Me, again "enters", because once I transcend the time and space and come to the caitanyam, the consciousness which is beyond time and space, there is nothing to divide me and God. Therefore ahamēva saḥ; saḥ ēva aham asmi. This is called merger. Merger into the Lord is dropping the notion of division caused by ignorance. Ignorance based division dropping. Ignorance based division. What division? Bhagavān is there and I am here; that division that is ignorance based and that ignorance based division dropping is figuratively called merger; there is no question of physically travelling, travelling, like train journey; train shunting and joining with a dadār sound. Do not imagine such things; it is a silent affair, because it is in the form of understanding; like the one wakes up, merges into the waker; the dreamer on waking, merges into the waker; which is a pure silent affair; this is also like that.

All these are important verses; Śankarācārya writes a very elaborate commentary. And some of the brilliant commentaries in the Gītā are found in these verses, especially the commentary of verse 55 which is a very beautiful commentary.

Verse 18.56

सर्वकर्माण्यपि सदा कुर्वाणो मद्व्यपाश्रयः ।
मत्प्रसादादवाप्नोति शाश्वतं पदमव्ययम् ॥ १८.५६ ॥

sarvakarmāṅyapi sadā kurvāṇō madvyapāśrayaḥ |
matprasādādavāpnōti śāśvataṁ padamavyayam || 18.56 ||

कुर्वाणः kurvāṇaḥ doing सर्वकर्माणि अपि sarvakarmāṅi api all actions सदा मद्व्यपाश्रयः sadā madavyapāśrayaḥ ever depending on ME अवाप्नोति avāpnōti one attains, शाश्वतम् अव्ययं śāśvataṁ avyayaṁ the eternal and changeless goal, पदम् मत्प्रसादात् padam matprasādāt by MY grace.

56. Doing all actions ever depending on ME, one attains the eternal and changeless goal by My grace.

With the previous verse, the jñāna-yōga topic emphasizing nidhidhyāsanam; nidhidhyāsanam pradhāna jñāna-yōga topic is over, which started from verse No.50. Now listening to this nidhidhyāsanam, and giving up of ahaṁkāra abhimāna, and owning up of our higher-nature, and sitting in meditation for long time, hearing all these things, some of the seekers they feel that all these are beyond our reach. It is all too high; I do not think it is for me.

This inferiority complex is so powerful; and Kṛṣṇa might have found in Arjuna's face also some such expression; I?, leaving this dēha abhimāna?, Is it possible? Is it workable? etc. Swamiji what are you talking; So many people may feel śravaṇa, manana, nidhidhyāsaṇa is too high; even śravaṇam, they might not mind, because one has to just come to the class and sit and others are talking; there we do not have to do anything; only one has to make sure that we are present; in between also one can go out also mentally and come back. In Śravaṇam students plays a relatively passive role, it is the teachers' headache of the student, which is the toughest talk; getting the attention of a person for sixty minutes, it is a real solid work, I know how difficult it is, when I start, Om Poor...

namada; like a sting of a scorpion they get up when they hear Poorna...; so much impatience is there; and I wonder how I made them sit for one hour and therefore I pat myself!! So there the responsibility is on the teacher.

In Nidhidhyāsanam, the teacher is not available, therefore it may appear tougher. Therefore Kṛṣṇa out of compassion comes down. Hey Arjuna, or any seeker for that matter, if you consider that you are unfit for jñāna-yōga; Do not worry, concentrate on karma-yōga; just come to the class; nothing wrong, but focus on karma-yōga sādhanā.

Thus from verse 56 Kṛṣṇa again comes down; like the game of paramapada (snake and ladder). So he has come down through the snake to karma-yōga; so verse No.56 to 62 again coming down to karma-yōga; and this karma-yōga Kṛṣṇa has already talked about verse No.41 to 49.

Again he is coming; but he makes a slight shift in the emphasis. Previously when he talked about karma-yōga, he emphasised svadharma. Always be aware of your responsibility; repeatedly all the politicians and PM is telling; people are always talking about the rights; people generally do not remember the responsibility. Our society is responsibility-based society; we do not talk about rights at all. Because our approach is if everybody does his duty; the other person's rights are taken care of; husband does the duty to wife; wife need not go for women's liberation; and women's right, etc. Similarly father does his duty to the children; and the children does their duty to their parents. But generally we tend to go to the right pradhāna; So Kṛṣṇa said: forget your rights and all; concentrate on your duty, and enjoy discharging the duty; thus svadharma was highlighted in that portion;

Whereas in this portion, Kṛṣṇa is highlighting the attitude of bhakthi. There are many people who are very much aware of their responsibility and they do discharge them perfectly well; but they forget the other dimension of karma-yōga and that is Īśvara bhakthi.

Without devotion to God, karma-yōga does not exist; as Dayānanda Swami repeatedly says. There is no secular karma-yōga; karma-yōga means Lord has to come; I may not know the highest Nirguṇam brahma; I do not know; I need not know; I can have my own concept of Īśvara, as the creator of the world; or the ultimate truth of the creation and I can symbolise the formless God, with any particular form, which we call as Iṣṭa Dēvatā bhakthi, which is very very useful.

And this Īśvara bhakthi, at the time of karma-yōga, should express in two fold ways; which we have seen several times, one is Īśvara arpaṇa bhāvana; and the other is prasāda bhāvana. That is every contribution of mine; whatever I do, I take it as an arpaṇam to the Lord. And then whatever be the consequences, favourable, unfavourable, neutral, any consequence that comes, I take it as prasāda; This Īśvarārpaṇa prasāda bhāvana; karmaṇi arpaṇa bhāvana; karma phale prasāda bhāvana, this is extremely important; and that is going to be the highlighted in these verses; the details of which, we will see in the next class.

Hari Om

234 Chapter 18, Verses 56-60

ॐ

Lord Kṛṣṇa gave the summary of jñāna-yōga, in six verses, beginning from the 50th verse up to 55th verse. And this jñāna-yōga is the final sādhanā that a person has to go through and this jñāna-yōga alone liberates a person from saṁsāra; and this jñāna-yōga has three stages of sādhanā; that is Śravaṇam, mananam, and nidhidhyāsanam; and Lord Kṛṣṇa highlighted the nidhidhyāsanam or the vēdāntic meditation part of jñāna-yōga.

And hearing this, a seeker may feel diffident; that I am not at all ready for this level of jñāna-yōga; because Kṛṣṇa talks about withdrawal from all activities; learning to live alone, viviktasēvī, and laghvāśī, Kṛṣṇa is asking us to reduce eating, which is very very difficult; therefore hearing all these things, a seeker may feel that these are all too high for us and we are all ordinary people not yet ready. Thus some seekers may feel that but I am sure that you would not feel that, because you are all advanced seekers; may be some people who feel diffident with regard to jñāna-yōga and to such people Kṛṣṇa comes back to the topic of karma-yōga once again.

In fact, Kṛṣṇa has talked about karma-yōga several times; but being extremely important, he repeats this once again. Previously while talking about karma-yōga, Kṛṣṇa emphasised the importance of svadharma anuṣṭāna.

स्वे स्वे कर्मण्यभिरतः संसिद्धिं लभते नरः |
स्वकर्मनिरतः सिद्धिं यथा विन्दति तच्छृणु || १८- ४५ ||

[svē svē karmaṇyabhirataḥ saṁsiddhiṁ labhatē naraḥ |
svakarmanirataḥ siddhiṁ yathā vindati tacchṛṇu ||18- 45||](#)

स्वकर्मणा तमभ्यर्च्य सिद्धिं विन्दति मानवः || १८- ४६ ||

svakarmanā tamabhyarcya siddhiṁ vindati mānavaḥ ||18- 46||

Previously while talking about karma-yōga, dharma was emphasised and that too svadharma was emphasised. And everyone has to follow svadharma, according to one's own designation in the society. People ask the question, What is svadharma? Fundamental doubt; what is svadharma?

The simple definition of svadharma is that whatever be the set up in which you are, you make sure that you do not disturb the set up, that is the first svadharma; and if possible positively contribute to the happiness and wellbeing of the set up. This is the simplest definition of svadharma. If you are a member of family, which you are, your svadharma means your life should be such that by your life, first family does not come to suffer; that is the first thing.

And the next positive thing is by my existence, the family must benefit; or to put in another language; what I take must be lesser than what I give; and extend it to other set up also; if I am part of an organisation; if I am an employee of a company, if I am a citizen of the country; as somebody nicely said, do not ask what the country has done to you; have you ever asked what you have done to the country.

Therefore svadharma means living in harmony with the set up and contributing to the harmony and the growth of the setup; and it can be extended to the religion also; I claim myself to be a Hindu; what do I do to my religion? That also you should ask; all these things will come under svadharma; my contribution to the family; to the country; to the society; to the environment; to the religion, all these are called svadharma. And Kṛṣṇa said karma-yōga means offering the svadharma. Doing the svadharma to the surroundings; and how do you do that? In the form of worship of the Lord. svakarmaṇā tamabhyarcya siddhiṃ vindati mānavaḥ. This is the karma-yōga discussed before; where the emphasis is on your effort and your action.

Now Kṛṣṇa is going to discuss karma-yōga from another angle; and that angle is success in karma-yōga not only depends on your effort, it also depends upon the grace of the Lord. Do not lose sight of Īśvara anugrahaḥ. I have often said the puruṣārta, the individual effort and the grace of the Lord and like the two wings of the bird. Just as a bird can fly; only with the help of both the wings. Similarly spiritual growth requires, not only our effort; but also Īśvara anugrahaḥ; and therefore, in this part of karma-yōga, the Īśvara anugrahaḥ is highlighted.

And how do you reap Īśvara anugrahaḥ; Kṛṣṇa says, it is by taking shelter or surrender unto to the Lord. Thus śaraṇāgati or Īśvara Bhakthi is an integral part of karma-yōga.

And therefore from 56 up to 62, which I introduced in the last class, Kṛṣṇa talks about karma-yōga, emphasising śaraṇāgati and anugrahaḥ. And of course, we should remember, a karma-yōgi does not have Brahma jñānam. If he is a Brahma jñāni, he is no more a karma-yōgi. Remember karma-yōgi is trying to purify the mind, and after purification, he has to follow jñāna-yōga, after jñāna-yōga, he has to gain jñānam, after jñānam alone, he is going to become a Brahma jñāni, a karma-yōgi is an ajñāni. This one should remember. Karma yōgi is a pucca ajñāni. He is working towards knowledge; for knowledge, he does not have knowledge.

Since he does not have knowledge of Brahman of Īśvara, totally, at the time of karma-yōga, he only appreciates God in the form of an Iṣṭa dēvathā. He does not have the knowledge Īśvara svarupam; and he does not know aham Brahmāsmi; knows there is someone called Īśvara; because scriptures talk about God, and Īśvara is the nimitta kāraṇam, Īśvara is the upādana kāraṇam, Īśvara is omnipotent and omniscient but he does not know the essential nature of God. Therefore as a karma-yōgi, he only visualises God as a person; and that is called Iṣṭa dēvathā bhakthi. And therefore a karma-yōgi has Iṣṭa dēvathā bhakthi; and he surrenders to that Lord and seeks the grace of the Lord.

And how does he do that: Kṛṣṇa explains; madvyapāśrayaḥ; First take shelter in Me; vyapāśrayaḥ; shelter, śaraṇam, refuge; that means what? First tell yourselves that my ultimate source of strength and the security is God alone. You can have your relations around; you can have your people around; you can love them; you can take care of them; but if somebody asks who is your ultimate support; who is your ultimate support? Our general tendency is to name someone in the family. Kṛṣṇa tells us to stop that practice. You need not push them away; but learn to say that my ultimate support my ultimate security, my ultimate source of strength is Bhagavān alone. Which means Bhagavān will take care of me, though he may not come directly, through someone or the other. Even if all the family members, are all over the world (that is the present condition in India); no child is around; one is Canada, another is in America, another is Europe and this old husband and wife stuck in Madras. We also do not like to go there, because one has to get stuck in the house; what to do? How do you know who is going to come to my rescue in my old age; and even if I send email to them; by the time they plan and get the passport renewed as his passport expired, before this person's expiry; visa expiry; who knows, who is going to come to our rescue; better learn to seek support from Īśvara and if Īśvara's grace is there; somebody will come; and if Īśvara's grace is not there; nobody will be there also.

Remember, Daśaratha's example; he had four children; all gems; and ultimately, when he had to die, nobody was around; who decides; I am not terrifying you; I am not frightening; what I am telling is; train your mind to draw strength from Īśvara and this is called madvyapāśrayaḥ;

And how to do that? Invoke the Iṣṭa dēvathā in the heart; and remember that the Lord is in the heart all the time. And it is vēdāntically also true; yo vēdha nihitham guhāyam, paramēvyōman. That is why, when we do pūja in the morning, I have told you before; after the pūja, there is yathasthānam prathiṣṭāpayami. Yathasthānam prathiṣṭāpayami means what, I am sending the Lord to his own place; because there is accommodation problem; 400sq.ft. how can I keep the Lord permanently; therefore invite the Lord for the pūja and send back; even Gāyathri, gachha dēvi, yatha sukham. Gāyathri, one has to sent.

Now what is the meaning of yathasthānam prathiṣṭāpayami? I think that the Lord is sent back to His place. he is somewhere else; you should remember, the Lord's original place is what? Our own hṛdayam only. For the sake of pūja, we keep outside; God is here inside. You cannot put on your own head for the pūja; for the sake of ēkadasa dravya abhisēka, you intelligently keep Him outside and then after the pūja is over, you put back here (heart).

What is the idea? That refuge, Lord is in my heart all the time. This is the meaning of madvyapāśrayaḥ. This is the first meaning.

There is a higher more important meaning also. Taking refuge in God also means taking refuge in God's teaching. Taking refuge in the Lord, means taking refuge in God's teaching. Like taking refuge in a doctor, means what? Whatever instructions he gives, for my physical wellbeing, I should follow. What is the use of taking refuge in doctor, and violating every instruction he gives? Taking refuge in doctor, is following his instructions. Similarly madvyapāśrayaḥ has a second meaning; śāstra vyapāśrayaḥ; taking shelter in Bhagavān's teaching; which is in the form of Veda; and which is also in the form of Gīta. And therefore take shelter in Geetha, how, by following the lifestyle prescribed.

Then the next question is what is the lifestyle prescribed in Geetha and Vēda? Sarva Karman api kurvanna; perform all the actions you want to do; whether it is worldly actions or religious actions; laukika karma or vaidika karma, you can do all those actions, but what is the prescription of the Geetha? Offer all of them, as an naivaidyam, oblation to the Lord. Sva karmaṇa tam abhyarca siddhim vindhathi mānava. You offer flowers at the time of pūja, but later, every action is an offering. Therefore sarva karmāṇapi tatha kurvanna; you have supply the word, Īśvara arpaṇa bhāvanaya kurvanna; may you perform.

And then what will happen? mat prasādāt; by my grace and receiving every consequence as Īśvara prasāda; gift from the Lord, mat prasādat, Īśvara prasādat; āpnōti; you will certainly attain your goal. What is that goal? padam apnōti; padam here means mōkṣa padam; the goal of liberation.

And what type of goal it is? Śāśvatam padam; which is eternal and also avyayam padam; which is undecaying; this eternal undeclaring permanent goal of mōkṣa you will attain.

But here we should be very careful; every slōka we should be alert. So by following this karma-yōga regularly will mōkṣa automatically come. No no No., because we have repeatedly said, without jñānam, without mōkṣa is not possible. Therefore we have to supply an expression that you will attain mōkṣa, gradually by going through the various stages and what are the stages? Purity of mind, thereafter the ideal condition for vēdānta sṛavaṇa; thereafter attainment of jñānam, and thereafter attainment of mōkṣa; chitta śuddhi; guru prāp̥thi; sṛavaṇa prāp̥thi; jñāna prāp̥thi dvāra you will attain mōkṣa. Therefore start karma-yōga properly.

Verse 18.57

चेतसा सर्वकर्माणि मयि संन्यस्य मत्परः ।
बुद्धियोगमुपाश्रित्य मच्चित्तः सततं भव ॥ १८.५७ ॥

cētasā sarvakarmāṇi mayi sannasya matparaḥ |
buddhiyōgamupāśritya maccittaḥ satataṁ bhava || 18.57 ||

मत्परः matparaḥ keeping as the supreme (goal) चेतसा संन्यस्य samnyasya cētasā (and) mentally dedicating सर्वकर्माणि sarvākarmāṇi all actions, मयि mayi to ME, उपश्रित्य upāśritya by resorting to, बुद्धियोगम् buddhiyōgam karma-yōga भव मच्चित्तः bhava maccittaḥ remain with (your) mind (fixed) on ME, सततम् satatam all the time

57. Keeping ME as the supreme (goal, and) mentally dedicating all actions to ME by resorting to Karmayōga, remain with (your) mind (fixed on ME all the time

This is explained further; buddhi yōgam upāśritya; May you to take the discipline of buddhi yōga; which is another name for karma-yōgaḥ a; and it is called buddhi yōga because it involves two important attitudes. So karma-yōga involves two important bhāvana; here the word buddhi means bhāvana. And what are those two important bhāvana, as a kartha, I take every karma as an offering to the Lord and therefore I do not hate any karma. So a karma-yōgi who has got Īśvarārpaṇa bhāvana, should treat every karma as offering to the Lord. Therefore whatever he has to do, there is no question of you like it or dislike it; I love to do whatever I have to do; But it is little difficult; there is no question boring, etc.; any karma you have to do, learn to love and enjoy. And this is very important for Arjuna, now Arjuna what a terrible duty, which involves bloodshed.

Therefore whatever you have to do, in office, you are under the control of the boss; whatever you are supposed to; there is no question of likes or dislikes; or you will lose the job; Where is the question of like and dislike, when I am an employee. And at home, this person has to be an obedient husband, therefore, whatever the wife asks; the other way around also, I have to do; it is not my rāga dvēsaḥ based. Therefore do not judge the action, based on your rāga dvēsaḥ; I have to do, and therefore I learn to love to do, therefore I enjoy; even though you may not enjoy it internally; at least have a pleasant face. With பூன்முறுவல். Punmuruval do it. This is called bhāvana No. One, which is called buddhi No.1.

And the second thing is what; every experience that comes to me, is coming from the Lord; Therefore I never judge any experience based on rāgaḥ-dvēsaḥ; the moment I judge an experience based on rāga dvēsaḥ; I will classify it as pleasant, unpleasant and therefore I will begin to react. And therefore here Kṛṣṇa says; whatever has come, it is welcome. This welcome bhāvana, agathē svagatham kuryāt, is bhāvana No.2.

Therefore Kṛṣṇa says buddhi yōgam upāsriṭhya. Accept every karma that you have to do; accept every experience that you have to go through; accept the choiceless; accept the choiceless and unfortunately, in life, 75% is choiceless; 75% is choiceless; You know why; past is choiceless. Why? Over. You cannot change the past. Present is choiceless; Why? It has already come. So past is choiceless; present is choiceless.

What about future? In future, because of our freewill, perhaps we do have some choice. But in future also, many of the things, we do not have choice. Our age will increase or decrease? You may give a smaller figure; last year you said 50, now you give 49, but age increases; therefore, most of the situations are choiceless; acceptance of the choiceless is the main thing. Therefore the buddhi can be called samatva bhuddhi yōga also. So Īśvara arpaṇa prasāda bhāvana rūpa buddhi yōga; or samatva buddhiyōga; samatva buddhi means accept; do not react.

And with this buddhi yōga or karma-yōga; what do you do, sarva karmani, mayi sanyāsa; here the word sanyāsa means dedicating. Normally the word sanyāsa mean renouncing, but in this particular context, the word sanyāsa is not renouncing but offering or dedicating. Dedicating what? Sarva karmaṇi; all the actions that you do; so mayi sanyāsa.

How do you do that? Cētaṣa; by your attitude or bhāvana; Īśvararpaṇa bhāvana sanyāsa. When you are doing all these things, you must be very clear about the goal; because this is very important, because karma-yōga is relevant only if the goal is spiritual. For a materialistic person karma-yōga cannot be relevant because a materialistic person gives importance to external factors, because his strong belief is happiness depends upon external factors. Whereas a spiritual-seeker is one, who is strongly convinced that happiness does not depend upon external factor but it depends upon the internal growth. Therefore to be a karma-yōgi; my main aim should be what? Internal growth only; Keeping the goal as God; So God is goal; or mōkṣa is the goal; or jñānam is the god; whichever way you may say; God, jñānam, or mōkṣa or citta śuddhi is the goal, you can say; that is the immediate goal; so the goal must be citta śuddhi, guruprāp̥thi, jñāna prāp̥thi, mōkṣa prāp̥thi. Therefore matparaḥ; keeping Me as the goal.

And what about materialistic things; it is not that karma-yōgi neglects them, but he considers them as an incidental needs in life, but he never looks upon them, as the primary thing. They are bye products, not the goal.

This is very important; mat paraḥ san; buddhi yōgam upāsriṭhya; taking to karma-yōga mat cittaḥ satatam bhava. Never forget Me. 'I' should never get out of your Mind. So satatam means always; Mat citta ḥ bhava. If you are working, God is there in what form? Īśvararpaṇa bhāvanaya; I offer; therefore God is involved; if I am going through any experience, then also God is involved, in what form?

God is giving me the experience, therefore I accept it; As a karta also, Īśvara plays a pivotal role, as a bhōktā also, Īśvara is important for me. And all the time, I am either a kartha or a bhōktā. The only you are not a kartā or bhōktā is when? Doze; when you are sleeping. And at that time, Kṛṣṇa does not ask you to remember God; because you cannot; therefore, during all the waking hours, either I am a kartā or a bhōktā. Either way it is Īśvara centric lifestyle.

मच्चित्तः तरिष्यसि सर्वदुर्गाणि मत्प्रसादात्तरिष्यसि ।
अथ चेत्त्वमहङ्काराद् न श्रोष्यसि विनङ्क्ष्यसि ॥ १८.५८ ॥

[maccittaḥ sarvadurgāṇi matprasādāt tariṣyasi |
atha cēttvamahaṅkāraṇna śrōṣyasi vinaṅkṣyasi || 18.58 ||](#)

मच्चित्तः maccittaḥ With (your) mind (fixed) on ME तरिष्यसि tariṣyasi you shall cross over सर्वदुर्गाणि sarvadurgāṇi all obstacles मत्प्रसादात् matprasādāt by My grace अथ चेत् atha cēt but if, त्वं न श्रोष्यसि tvaṁ na śrōṣyasi you do not listen अहङ्कारात् ahaṅkārat due to egoism, विनङ्क्ष्यसि vinaṅkṣyasi you will perish

58. With (your) mind (fixed) on Me, you shall cross over all obstacles by MY grace. But if you do not listen due to egoism, you will perish.

Such a karma-yōgi, who has an Īśvara centric life, wherein Īśvara is involved, whether a person is kartā or bhōktā, will learn from every single experience of life; Every single experience has something to teach. Only if I have a relaxed calm mind, I have got a learning capacity, a disturbed mind can never learn from any experience, and therefore he will repeat the same mistake again and again. As somebody nicely said: Committing mistake is the privilege of a human being; that privilege God does not have. Poor God does not have that privilege. We are greater than God. One thing that God cannot do, we cannot do? What is that? Mistake. The privilege of committing mistakes; and we all do commit mistake and we do not feel bad about it.

But what the scriptures say is, repeating the mistakes is foolishness. So an intelligent person commits mistakes. Alright, but he learns; Why does he learn? Because karma-yōga helps him enjoy a sama buddhi; siddhyasiddhyōḥ samō bhūtvā samatvam yōga ucyatē. When the mind is calm, the intellect is bright; and when intellect is bright, from every single experience I learn; that is called maturity. And when I learn and grow mature, I discover the fact that self-knowledge alone will solve the human problem.

And here every experience will teach me; and painful experiences teach more than pleasure experiences. So even pain has got a message. So Bhagavān gets two things done through pain; one is exhausting the karma; through pain alone, we exhaust karma. And Bhagavān does another important thing and what is that? Educate a person through that experience. And what is why those planets which generally give trouble and difficulty, if you ask the astrologer, they will say that they are the planets which are jñānakāraṇa; jñāna kāraṇa, those who give jñānam.

When the world says; that those planets are givers of trouble, śāstra says that they give maturity. But if I have to learn from pain, it is possible only when my mind enjoys samatvam. And karma-yōgi enjoys samatvam and he learns very fast from every pleasure and pain. Just as even snake's poison contains medicine in it; even the worst pain has got education, valid lessons. This is the inner growth achieved by karma-yōgi.

And not only that. Kṛṣṇa says: In the spiritual path, certainly there will be obstacles. Anything will have obstacles; and better the thing; more the obstacles; srēyāmsi bahu vighnani, bhavanthi mahatam api. Any good karma you want to do; obstacles would come; whenever you plan to come to the Geetha class, obstacles will be there; adhyātmika, adidaivika, adibautika obstacles are bound to come.

Kṛṣṇa says that if you are karma-yōgi, by the grace of the Lord, those obstacles also you will also circumvent. So He says: maccittaḥ; keeping Me in your mind; with the help of My grace, that is Īśvara anugrahaḥ; matprasādāt; anugrahaḥ; by My anugrahaḥ, sarvadurgāṇi tariṣyasi.

Here the word durga means obstacles; not Durgā Lakṣmi Saraswati. You cannot take that Durgā here; that is Durgā, akārāṇtha striliṅga. Here the durgam, durgam means obstacles; plural number. All the obstacles, either coming from yourselves in the form of illhealth, this is the wandering mind, I am here, but I do not hear!! I am here, but I do not hear! Not deaf; my ears are so powerful that my neighbours talk I can hear very well. There is no hearing problem; manas is not under my control.

That is called adhyātmika obstacles; or surrounding obstacles or any other obstacle; trivida durgāṇi tariṣyasi; Arjuna you will cross.

And Now Kṛṣṇa gives a warning. In spite of all these advertisements, and all these incentives and all these encouragements, if you refuse to follow karma-yōga, it will lead to your spiritual downfall.

Therefore He says; Atha na śrōṣyasi cēt; on the other hand, if you do not listen to my sincere advice, because of what? ahaṁkāra, because of your ego; ego will always come to the forefront; Why I should follow somebody else's suggestion; after-all I am a human being, I have got freedom, I have a right to do whatever I want; I will follow my path; if that ego comes; ahaṁkāra, because of your ego; na śrōṣyasi cēt. If you refuse to listen to me; vinaṅkṣyasi; you will perish; here the word perish does not mean, physical death; but here the word perish means, spiritual destruction; you will not get the benefit of being born a human being; benefit of born as a human being is mōkṣa prapthi, that unique benefit you will lose.

यद्यहङ्कारमाश्रित्य न योत्सय इति मन्यसे ।
मिथ्यैष व्यवसायस्ते प्रकृतिस्त्वां नियोक्ष्यति ॥ १८.५९ ॥

[yadyahāṅkāramāśritya na yōtsaya iti manyasē |
mithyaiṣa vyavasāyastē prakṛtiṣtvām niyōkṣyati ||18.59||](#)

आश्रिच्य अहङ्कारम् āśricya ahaṅkāram sticking to egoism यदि मन्यसे yadi manyasē if you think न योत्सये na yōtsyē “I won't fight”, इति एषः व्यवसायः iti eṣaḥ vyavasāyaḥ such a resolve ते ते of yours, मिथ्या mithyā (will be) in vain प्रकृतिः नियोक्ष्यति (your) nature will compel prakṛtiḥ niyōkṣyati त्वाम् tvām you (to act).

59. Sticking to egoism, if you think “I won' fight’, such a resolve of yours (will be) in vain (your) nature will compel you (to act).

So in this verse, Kṛṣṇa is explaining further, what he said in the previous slōkas; na śrōṣyasi, na vinaṅkṣyasi, is explained here. What is Kṛṣṇa's advice? Kṛṣṇa says: Arjuna, You are a rājasic person; You a born kṣatriya; You are an embodiment of rajō-guṇa; therefore you have to lead an active life at least for the time being.

And now if you refuse to go by your rajō-guṇa and give up this war; and decide to go to forest; in the name of sanyāsa; or in the name of spiritual sādhanā; you go there, and try to withdraw from actions, it will miserably fail because, that is not your nature. Therefore if a person has high satva-guṇa; then that person does not have a tendency to be active; then it will be a nice to go to an āśrama and do dhyāna and study the vēdānta systematically etc. but the problem is you are rajōguṇa personified and if you give up the war and go to forest. What will happen?

You should be studying vēdānta, sṛavaṇa, manana, nidhidhyāsana; and you will not have 'iruppukollamattenkirathu'; you will feel highly uncomfortable after the initial few days; then you look around and meditate for 10-15 minutes and look around and see some people and if you find some sanyāsis, you gather all of them and form an association called SWO. Sanyāsi welfare organisation and start working for them and if they do not have kutia, you will build them; you do this and do that and fly to Delhi; representation; seat reservation; fast; agitation; something or the other, because sitting quiet is not easy. Either you will work for their welfare and you will fight with the sanyāsis.

In many āśramas, sanyāsis quarrel. I do not want to talk too much. Why should I criticise my own people! So whenever someone says, Swamiji, I will go and settle in an āśrama, for the rest of life, I do not generally criticise the āśramas and the Sadhūs, generally I tell them do not decide it for good; go and stay there for some months and then decide. If everything is fine, you continue, otherwise you come back. So many people leave all the money to the āśrama; all their money and earning and they get some house or some kutia there. And they would have given in writing also, that after my life, the kutia belongs to the āśrama, and all my also belongs to the āśrama and after 2-3 months, comes varieties of problems, because everywhere people are there, people means rāgaḥ-dvēsaḥ; I do not like him; this group and that group, etc. and thereafter you will feel Madras was better. Everything is: the other side is greener; never decide permanently. If you have any such plans, nothing wrong with that plan, but I would suggest that go, do not give all the money; keep it in the bank, and stay there for some time and mostly you will come back. Ok. All these have to be deleted, I think. These are all fads.

Arjuna, it is not all that easy to withdraw and when people withdraw, without maturity; politics; when you withdraw with maturity, you dwell on the śāstras; when you withdraw without maturity, you dwell on the other's lifestyles. What that Swami does; why is he keeping the door closed always; Is he sleeping always? Even the window curtains are closed always: I want to see what is happening inside, etc. Mind will not remain quiet.

Therefore Arjuna, listen to me; yadi ahaṅkāram āśritya; if you hold on to your ahaṅkāra; and na yōtsya iti manyasē; if you refuse to fight; out of sheer adamancy, if you refuse to listen to me, mithyaiṣa vyavasāyastē; this resolve of yours; mithya, will be in vain; will not work for you; your withdrawal from activity; will not work for you, maximum you will withdraw from this activity and it will be replaced by another activity. You may give up here some computer business or so, and there you will start some rudrakṣa business, because from Indonesia you get cheap rudrakṣam; and in India rudrakṣam is costly. So you import and you sell and live. You will think; therefore business mind rudrakṣa or spatika mala business, the mind will go. Instead of that, be here and do your business with dharma and attend the Sunday class and it would be more beneficial to you. Who says? Lord Kṛṣṇa. Yēṣā vyavasāya mithya; it will not work; and why it will not work; your rajasic nature will not allow you to remain quiet. So here prakṛti means svabhāva; and svabhāva means rājasic nature; therefore the rule is. Go by your nature.

स्वभावजेन कौन्तेय निबद्धः स्वेन कर्मणा ।
कर्तुं नेच्छसि यन्मोहात् करिष्यस्यवशोऽपि तत् ॥ १८.६० ॥

svabhāvajēna kauntēya nibaddhaḥ svēna karmaṇā |
kartuṃ nēcchasi yanmōhāt kariṣyasiyavaśō'pi tat || 18.60 ||

कौन्तेय kauntēya Oh ! Arjuna निबद्धः nibaddhaḥ bound, स्वेन कर्मणा svēna karmaṇā by your own duty स्वभावजेन अवशः svabhāvajēna avaśaḥ which is born of (your) nature, अपि करिष्यसि api kariṣyasi you will helplessly do, तत् tat that यद् न इच्छसि yad na icchasi which do you want कर्तुम् kartum to do मोहात् mōhāt because of delusion.

60. Oh Arjuna! Bound by your own duty which is born of your nature, you will helplessly do that which you do not want to do because of your delusion.

So Arjuna remember the rule; everybody has a svabhāva; either you are satva pradhāna or raja pradhāna or tama pradhāna. Whatever lifestyle you choose, must be in harmony with your svabhāva. Then alone there will not be a strain in your personality. Otherwise you cannot survive in that for long time; you will kick that and change your profession; or remain in that and change your activity; something you will do.

Therefore he says: svēna karmaṇā nibaddhaḥ, everyone is bound by his own type of karma; a particular type of karma or activity, everyone is bound; and this karma is determined by what? Svabhāvajēna; it is determined by the svabhāva.

And this svabhāva will not go away even after jñānam; very interesting thing that you can watch; even jñānis have got their own svabhāva. No doubt they have gained the knowledge; I am not the body, I am not the mind, I am the ātma which is nirguṇa; but even though they know I am nirguṇa ātma; they possess a body, mind complex which has got a particular svabhāva.

And this svabhāva will decide what the jñāni, even jñāni does after jñānam. So there are so jñānis who are withdrawn; their nature is withdrawal; therefore they do not want to remain in the society, they go Rishikesh; they go to Uttarakāśi or they go to Gaṅgōtri. There are some swamis, they live in Gaṅgōtri only. In fact, for six months in a year, that place is not even inaccessible; and yet they stay there; surrounded by thick peaked snow, they remain there; you cannot see a single human being for six months; you will get mad; you would not be able to talk to even a single person; or else you will talk in the sleep; so we have to talk to someone, but there are some swamis like that and there are some other jñānis, they are jñānis all right. Still their svabhāva is; they would love to be in the society and they would love to be active; and there are swamis and swamis who have travelled round India, they have travelled round the world, in fact they are busier than the most busy executive.

What makes one jñāni active jñāni and one jñāni a passive jñāni; even that is decided by svabhāva. And therefore Kṛṣṇa here says: You are bound the activities by svabhāva and kartum naichithai; and if you do not want to do that action, it is governed by svabhāva.

mōhāt, it is because of your delusion; you are trying to avoid, what cannot be avoided; And what is that you cannot avoid; your svabhāva; and svabhāva based lifestyle you cannot avoid and if you try to escape from that, it is mōhaḥ; it is delusion; and will not succeed in that. You go anywhere; svabhāva will push you into activity; Straight from brahmacarya and grihasthāśrama; and if he is highly sātvic and you send him to grihasthāśrama, he will be misfit in grihasthāśrama, and it has a trouble for the wife, to kick him always out of the house for activity, for earning the living, etc. Therefore, sanyāsa svabhāva is there, and you put in the grihasthāśrama, it is problem for all, and karma svabhāva person is there, if you are put in an āśramam, it will not work; it is impossible; and therefore Kṛṣṇa says; Kariṣyathi; you will take to that action which you tried to avoid; you will take to that action, avaśaḥ api; helplessly.

A rajasic person will be busy, whether one is brahmacarya āśrama, grihasthāśrama; vanaprastha āśrama, or even sanyāsa-āśrama. And why do not you accept your svabhāva and take to a lifestyle in harmony with svabhāva. Therefore do not take sanyāsa, be here and do your duty; get the wisdom and be free; this is Kṛṣṇa advise; the details in the next class.

Hari Om

235 Chapter 18, Verses 61-64

ॐ

In this 18th chapter of the Gīta, Kṛṣṇa is summarising the entire Gīta teaching; which mainly consists of two fold sādhanā; karma-yōga, the first one, and jñāna-yōga, the 2nd one.

And karma-yōga contributes to the preparation of the mind; which we called jñāna-yōgyatha prāp̥thi and jñāna-yōga is the primary sādhanā through which we have jñāna prāp̥thiḥ; and jñānam alone gives liberation. This is the main teaching. And any other spiritual sādhanā that we know, will have to fall within one of these two alone. If somebody talks about pilgrimage, going to Badri, Kēdar, Rameśvaram, etc. it will have to come under karma-yōga. If a person practices prāṇāyāma, etc. it will come under karma-yōga; etc.; if a person does a variety of social service, etc. it will come under karma-yōga only if a person sings bhajans, it will come under karma-yōga; if a person performs a variety of vēdic rituals etc, it will come under karma-yōga only; all the other sādhanās will come under karma-yōga.

And any sādhanā which will indirectly help in jñāna prāp̥thi, that all will come under jñāna-yōga. If you are studying Sānskrīt language; generally people would not come near and even if they come, they will get vairāgyam at the shortest time. Even though it is not directly scriptures, when you are studying to help you in jñāna-yōga, that will be part of jñāna-yōga, equipping yourselves intellectually. You study, tarka śāstra, mimāṃsa śāstra, all for understanding original text or Śankarācārya's bhāṣyam, they all come under jñāna-yōga, because it helps you in gaining jñānam, and if you are studying the Gīta text by heart or upaniṣad text by heart that also will help you in doing the enquiry. Therefore it will come under jñāna-yōga; in short all the sādhanās should fall under these two alone. That is why Kṛṣṇa said in the third chapter:

लोकेऽस्मिन् द्विविधा निष्ठा पुरा प्रोक्ता मया नघ |
ज्ञानयोगेन साङ्ख्यानां कर्मयोगेन योगिनाम् || ३- ३ ||

lōkē'smin dvividhā niṣṭhā purā prōktā mayā'nagha|
jñānayōgēna sāṅkhyānām karmayōgēna yōginām||3||

He only mentioned these two yōgas. And in the 12th chapter, I talked about bhakti yōga; and there I mentioned Bhakti-yōga is not an independent or separate sādhanā, but it is a common name given to karma-yōga plus jñāna-yōga.

The beginning stage of Bhakti-yōga is called karma-yōga and the advanced stage of Bhakti-yōga is called jñāna-yōga; there is no Bhakti-yōga as a separate yōga I said and therefore the essence of Gīta is karma-yōga plus jñāna-yōga is equal to liberation. And since Bhagavat Gīta is a teaching is borrowed from the original scriptures, known as the vēdās (that you should not forget), vēdās are the original scriptures; Gīta has borrowed from the vēdās. So when I say Gīta sāra, it is also vēda sāra; essence of vēda also is the same; what is that? karma-yōga plus jñāna-yōga is equal to liberation. Karma-yōga dealt with in vēda pūrva and jñāna-yōga dealt with in vēda antha bhāga.

And since these two are the primary sādhanās, in the 18th chapter, Kṛṣṇa is talking about these two repeatedly. Karma-yōga itself he talks three times; and jñāna-yōga also he repeats and towards the end also, he again and again summaries these two only.

And from verse No.50 to 55, we saw the summary of jñāna-yōga; emphasising the vēdāntic-meditation or nidhidhyāsanam, and now Kṛṣṇa reverts back to karma-yōga topic once again, from verse No.56 to 62. Previously from verse No.41 to 49, He talked about karma-yōga, he is repeating that from 56 to 62; with only a slight difference; there he emphasised svadharma; here emphasising bhakti or the attitude of devotion.

And there we saw verse No.60 in which Kṛṣṇa said Arjuna you will have to do karma in life, because karma alone contributes to the purification of the mind; you have to contribute to the society through some form or the other form of karma; and since you cannot escape karma, better choose a karma which will suit your personality; and that is why depending upon satva pradhāna; or raja pradhāna, you choose one profession or the other. If you do not know how to choose, go by heredity; jāti-wise, you choose karma, jāti means heredity, or guṇa-wise you choose your karma; and in this 60th verse, Kṛṣṇa emphasised svabhāva or guṇa based choice of profession; by guṇa we mean your aptitude or your inclination.

And as I said, the emphasis is the inclination because only then you love your profession. If you choose a profession, merely for the sake of money, your life is something and your profession is something; there is a constant strain in the personality and as I said, you always look for the weekend; because by Friday you are weakened. You will be tired because whenever you do something, you do not like, in one hour you will be tired. Whenever you do something; you do not like, you will be tired in one hour; when you do something you love, even 18 hours, you do not feel that.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa tells Arjuna: Your guṇa is rajō-guṇa and if you go to Himalayan cave and try to meditate, it would not work; therefore do not unnecessarily try to run away. So svabhāvajēna, svēna karmaṇā nibhadhaḥ; you are bound by a profession; which is born out of your svabhāva; therefore do not try to go against your nature.

And remember, this argument should not be abused; and the thief should not argue; by aptitude is in picking the pocket, etc. Then the police will say our aptitude is putting you in jail; therefore remember, whatever aptitude which falls within dharma; if I tend to love anything which is adhārmic; then even if it is my inclination; I have to change. As long as it is a dhārmic one, you can choose a profession which is dharmic, and which is also in keeping with your life; Manusmṛti beautifully says; Ātmanaḥ priyamca; any profession you choose, you should like also.

And if you say, I got a job, I do not like, because the employment market, getting the job is itself difficult, where is the question of choosing, if you get a job which you do not like, what to do: I have told you the method; learn to loving the job you got. In fact, you can start liking anything. As Dayānanda Swami says; you can start liking even the cockroach. Anything you can like; you can change your mind to like. Therefore, Arjuna, your profession has to be kṣatriya profession and if you try to escape from that, you will not be able to do that; avaśaḥ api tat kariṣyasi, helplessly you will fight; instead of in Kurukṣētra; in the forest you will fight with somebody or the other; that you do it here itself. Up to this we saw.

Verse 18.61

ईश्वरः सर्वभूतानां हृद्देशोऽर्जुन तिष्ठति ।
भ्रामयन्सर्वभूतानि यन्त्रारूढानि मायया ॥ १८.६१ ॥

īśvaraḥ sarvabhūtānāṃ hṛddēśē'rjuna tiṣṭhati |
bhrāmayan sarvabhūtāni yantrārūḍhāni māyayā || 18.61 ||

अर्जुन Arjuna Oh Arjuna! ईश्वरः तिष्ठति Īśvaraḥ tiṣṭati The Lord resides हृद्देशे hṛddēśē in the heart सर्वभूतानम् sarvabhūtānam of all beings, भ्रामयन् bhrāmayan revolving सर्वभूतानि sarvabhūtāni all the beings मायया māyayā through Maya यन्त्रारूढानि yantrārūḍhāni (as though they are) mounted on a machine.

61. Oh Arjuna! The Lord resides in the heart of all beings; revolving all the beings through Maya, (as though they are) mounted on a machine.

So once you have chosen a profession, or any work through which you have decided to serve the society, because purity is only by giving; by taking mind can never be purified; tyāgēna ēva citta śuddhi; tyāgēna ēva mōkṣaḥ also; any kind of spiritual growth requires giving. Therefore through any type of profession; you contribute to the society. And that will be called karma; but it is not enough that you do karma; it has to be converted into yōgaḥ; and how do you convert karma into karma-yōga?

That method Kṛṣṇa gives in these two verses; and that method is converting that karma into an offering unto the Lord. The very profession should become a type of flower; and your performance should become an offering to the Lord. And if you convert it into an offering; two things will happen; the first thing is you should not do it with curse; because it is going to the Lord and therefore it should be done sincerely and wholeheartedly and not only that; it should be done cheerfully also. An indication of karma-yōgi is cheerfulness and sincerity. You should not say that for the salary they give, this kind of work is enough! salary is incidental; salary we do not say not required; three times or four times we get hungry; nobody says money is not required; the quality of the work, should never be tied to the compensation; because compensation is looked upon as avāthanthara phalam or a by-product; the primary purpose is worship of the Lord; therefore be sincere and be cheerful; whatever be the profession.

And if I have to offer to the Lord to which temple I should go; in office there is no picture of the Lord etc. if you say; Lord Kṛṣṇa says: you need not go in search of any shrine or temple, because originally the residence of God; the original residence, you know what? you will say Vaikunṭham; or Kailsam; Badri, or Rāmēśvaram; Lord Kṛṣṇa says that the original residence of the Lord, is your own heart. And in the heart which is otherwise called the mind, the original Lord is there in the form of sākṣi caitanyam. Satyam, Jñānam Anantham Brahma; Yō Vēda Nihitam Guhāyam Paramēvyōman.

All the other residences, are not the real residences of the Lord, only place is your own heart; therefore Kṛṣṇa says: Hey Arjuna, Note this very clearly, īśvaraḥ sarvabhūtānāṃ hṛddēśē tiṣṭhati; to practice karma-yōga and to offer to the Lord, you do not require idols and pictures or shrines or temples; we were chanting; we are chanting daily before the class.

Ātmātvam giricamatim sahadaca, prāṇa śārīram grihaṃ, sārīram is the grihaṃ; dēhō dēvālaya prōkta; jīva dēva sanātana; body is the temple; the very jīvātma is none other than the paramātma. Therefore hṛddēśē, hṛdaya dēśē, why Kṛṣṇa says hṛdayam, because according to the scriptures, hṛdaya is the place of the mind. The location of the mind, according to the śāstra is not the brain, but it is the heart; which heart, right side or left side? One heart only you have.

Then the question will come, the Lord resides in the heart of Mahatmas and jñānis only; I should have a mahātma or jñāni around. Kṛṣṇa says; No No; Lord resides in the heart of everyone; sarvabhutanam hṛddēśē, whether one is a saint or a sinner; a criminal or a scholar, in everybody's heart, the Lord is there; the only difference in the case of the saint, he has purified the mind, and therefore Lord's presence more manifest; whereas in the case of people, whose minds are full of impurities, Lord is not absent, but Lord's presence is not manifest.

It is like a gold which is old one; old-gold and also gold that has been refurbished, that gold has extra shine; there is no difference in the gold; in one place, the gold is manifest because it has been cleaned, in the other it is not. Therefore Kṛṣṇa says that in your heart also, God is fortunately there.

Hey Arjuna, ḥṛddēśē, in antaḥkaraṇe, in what form he is there? śakṣi caitanya rupēṇa; in the form of witness consciousness; witness of what; the witness of presence of thoughts; as well as the absence of thoughts; every thought is known by me; and even the absence of thought is known by me; it is known because of which awareness; that awaring consciousness is Īśvaraḥ tiṣṭati.

What does the Lord do? What is his job? He says: sarvabhūtāni bhrāmayān; enlivening all the living being; remaining in the heart, the Lord enlivens every human being; by enlivening, we mean, the Lord lends consciousness; because the physical body by itself is inert principle; it does not have a life of its own; that is what we see after death; the body is decaying matter; the mind does not have consciousness of its own; the sense organs are also made up of subtle matter; and all these material vestures are now live and sentient; because of borrowed consciousness; if they enjoy borrowed consciousness, there must be somebody to lend.

So Kṛṣṇa says here the one who lends consciousness is called Ātma; therefore bhrāmayān means what: enlivening, energising; activating; which alone, we beautifully read in Kēnōpaniṣad; śrōtrasya śrōtraṁ manō yad vācō ha vācoṁ sa u prāṇasya prāṇaḥ. Eye is eye because of consciousness; ears are ears, because of consciousness; and if that consciousness or life is absent, the ears are there, but no hearing; Eyes are there, but no seeing; the doctor opens the eye lid and uses the torch and see and no response at all.

There is a beautiful Malayalam song; kaṇṇinu kaṇṇāya kaṇṇā കണ്ണിനു കണ്ണായ കണ്ണാ; You can understand; Kannā is the name of the Lord Kṛṣṇa; Hey Kṛṣṇa you are kaṇṇinu kaṇṇu, you are the eye of the eye. Therefore bhrāmayān, bhrāmayān means activating all the bhūtāni, here bhūtāni means what? Stūla, sūkṣma śarīrāṇi; which are jaḍa by themselves.

And how does the Lord activate? An example is given, yantrārūḍhāni māyayā; you have to supply the word ēva; like the dolls which are activated by a machine inside; like dolls which have been activated by a machine or battery; just wind and then leave the doll, it will talk, walk, and do everything; or even the robots; robo, robots are there; like that they do not have life of their own; but because of the battery inside; the fan does not have the power of its own; but there is the electricity inside. Similarly, the bodies are activated by the Lord.

But here a doubt may come; once we give the puppet example, one will misunderstand; we always misunderstand if one is not careful in any situation. So Swamiji you say all of us are puppets, and Bhagavān is making all us active; therefore all the bad karmas that are done by the individuals, who must take responsibility? Bhagavān is only making the thief do the thievery. Then who should be imprisoned; doubt will arise; therefore very careful, I have analysed this elaborately in the 11th chapter; I will tell in the class itself, in the 11th chapter, I have discussed, nimittamātram bhava savyasācin; we should remember, Bhagavān is only lending general life or consciousness to us, but the type of action that we do is not determined by Bhagavān; but it is determined by our freewill only.

And what is the example that we give? Like the petrol in the car; petrol energises the car and gives the power to the car for its running; but petrol does not determine the direction of the running; it is determined by the driver. Bhagavān is not the driver; Bhagavān is like the petrol who enlivens; but whether I should do good or bad actions, who should decide? I should decide; Therefore Bhagavān is called sāmānya kāraṇam; our freewill is called viśēṣa kāraṇam. So this verse is talking about Bhagavān as the samānya kāraṇam; he is like the petrol who enlivens all the vehicles.

And how does Bhagavān does all these things? Māyaya; because of His Maya śakti; Bhagavān is not only able to create all the world and the body; but he is able to enliven also; because of his Māya śakti.

Verse 18.62

तमेव शरणं गच्छ सर्वभावेन भारत ।
तत्प्रसादात्परां शान्तिम् स्थानं प्राप्स्यसि शाश्वतम् ॥ १८.६२ ॥

tamēva śaraṇam gaccha sarvabhāvēna bhārata |
tatprasādātparām śāntim sthānam prāpsyasi śāśvatam || 18.62 ||

भारत bhārata Oh Arjuna ! शरणं गच्छ śaraṇam gaccha surrender, तम् एव tam ēva to Him alone सर्वभावेन sarvabhāvēna whole heartedly तत्प्रसादात् tatprasādāt by His grace, प्राप्स्यसि prāpsyasi you shall attain परां शान्तिम् parām śāntim supreme peace शाश्वतं स्थानम् śāśvatam sthānam and the eternal abode

62. Oh Arjuna! Surrender to Him alone whole heartedly. By His grace you shall attain peace and the eternal abode.

And what should you do? Since the Lord is there in your heart, enlivening your body and mind, you offer all the karmas to that Lord; and also take the support of the Lord in your spiritual progress. That Lord alone has to give you citta śuddhi, through your karma.

Because Bhagavān is the karma phala datha; every karma can produce two types of puṇyam; one is called spiritual puṇyam and another is called material puṇyam; material puṇyam is that which will give you all the material benefit, house, family, etc. and again spiritual puṇyam means what? Opportunity to study the Gīta. And also the capacity to come here; if you are coming here, it is because of what: Puṇyam, may be of your last janma itself (if you have doubts of this janma); some time we have done.

So the Lord has to give you citta śuddhi, therefore surrender to the Lord by saying; māmōpatha samastha durithakṣaya dvāra; let rāgaḥ-dvēṣa kāma krōdhaḥ all go away. Therefore Kṛṣṇa says; tam ēva śaraṇam gaccha; May you take refuge in that Lord; by offering all the karmas to that Lord. Tam ēva; that Lord; What is meant by that Lord? The Lord described in the previous slōka; who is the Lord described in the previous slōkā? The heart resident Lord, give that to that Lord.

Tamēva śaraṇam gaccha; And what type of surrender it should be? sarvabhāvēna; wholeheartedly, sincerely, with śraddhā and bhakti; may you offer; whether that karma will give you material benefits or not, we do not know, but if you offer the karma to the Lord, spiritual growth is definite; material successes and failures are dependent on so many other factors. That is why in spite of our śaraṇāgati also, failures come materially. Swamiji, I broke the coconut to the Lord and then only stared, and yet I failed. Material results may come or may not come; because we do not how powerful is the obstacles; but spiritual growth is not a doubtful thing, it is definite;

नेहाभिक्रमनाशोऽस्ति प्रत्यवायो न विद्यते ।
स्वल्पमप्यस्य धर्मस्य त्रायते महतो भयात् ॥ २.४० ॥

nēhābhikramanāśō'sti pratyavāyō na vidyatē |
svalpamapyasya dharmasya trāyatē mahatō bhayāt || 2.40 ||

In the second-chapter Bhagavān said. Therefore sarvabhāvēna, bhāva means what; bhakthi or reverential attitude; whole heartedly; whole heartedly (if you are writing, be careful of the spelling, it is w.. h... o.. l.... e; not h..o..l..e; there should not be a hole in the heart)! You should surrender to Me.

And tatprasādāt, and once you hand over the responsibility to the Lord; Lord will take you step by step; vivēkam, he will give in good measure; vairāgyam which is absent and given and replenished; śamādi ṣatka sampathi He will give; then mumukśatvam; all the four qualifications he will give; at the appropriate time Guru will be given; opportunity for knowledge, everything Bhagavān will give; you are in safe hands.

Tatprasādāt; by Īśvara anugrahaḥ; and even if you do not know what is the next step; Bhagavān will know about purchasing the right ticket for you and getting into the right train; you need not what are the stations to be crossed; the driver will take you through the appropriate stations. Bhagavān will accompany you and take you; tatprasādāt; you will reach the destination; what is the destination;

śāśvatam sthānam prāpsyasi; the permanent or the infinite goal of mōkṣa; the destination of mōkṣa, the eternal, you will attain. And what is the indication of mōkṣa? Whether it has come or not; how will you know; will there be any colour change in my skin?

Kṛṣṇa says the indication of mōkṣa is param śāntiḥ; spiritual progress is indicated by abiding relaxation, abiding peace; abiding poise, abiding equanimity is the indication of mōkṣa. Therefore Kṛṣṇa says: Param śānthim prāpyasi. How, by going through all the necessary steps which is citta śuddhi, then guru prāp̥thi, is the next step; then śṛavaṇa prāp̥thi, means what, listening and then it should lead to jñāna prāp̥thi; which will lead to mōkṣa prāp̥thi; these are the various stations that you will go through.

With this Kṛṣṇa concludes the karma-yōga summary, which he started from verse No.56.

Verse 18.63

इति ते ज्ञानमाख्यातं गुह्याद् गुह्यतरं मया ।
विमृश्यैतदशेषेण यथेच्छसि तथा कुरु ॥ १८.६३ ॥

[iti tē jñānamākhyātam guhyādguyataram mayā |
vimṛśyaitadaśēṣeṇa yathēcchasi tathā kuru || 18.63 ||](#)

इति iti Thus ज्ञानम् jñānam (this) knowledge गुह्यतरम् guhyataram more secret गुह्यात् ākhyātam guhyāt than every (other) secret आख्यातम् ākhyātam has been imparted ते मया tē mayā to you by Me विमृश्य एतत् vimṛśya ētat having analysed this अशेषेण aśēṣeṇa completely कुरु kuru do तथा यथा इच्छसि tathā yathā icchasi as you like

63. Thus (this) knowledge, more secret than every (other) secret, has been imparted to you by ME. Having analysed this completely, do as you like.

Now Kṛṣṇa wants to formally conclude the Gītā teaching in the four verses 63 to 66. He is formally concluding; because he has repeated karma-yōga three times; he started 18th chapter with karma-yōga; but with a new name; in the 18th chapter karma-yōga was presented with a new name (I do not know whether you remember), and that name was sāt̥vika sanyāsa; and thereafter he summarised karma-yōga a second time, from 41 to 49 and third time, He summarised from 56 to 62; Three times, he has given karma-yōga summary.

Then jñāna-yōga also he summarised twice; from verse 13 to 17, he summarised one time and then 50 to 55, he summarised again; now he feels summary I have repeated several times; and Arjuna is intelligent enough and therefore it is not necessary again, Kṛṣṇa himself concludes with Iti.

In this manner; jñānam tē ākhyātam; I have given you the Gīta teaching; So very valuable important Gīta teaching I have imparted to you; which started from 2nd chapter, 11th verse; Iti means from the 2nd chapter, 11th verse; you have to take that meaning. What is the verse; aśōcyān... the up to the previous verse. 18th chapter, 62nd verse; I have very elaborately taught you the Gīta śāstra, which is the sāra of the vēdās.

And do not take this teaching for granted; just because I have so easily given to you and also I have not charged you; for anything uncharged, the value is less!! so therefore just because I have not charged you, and just because I have immediately accepted to teach you; without showing graaki, when you said śiṣyastē'ham; therefore do not take this teaching for granted;

this is the rarest teaching; guhyataram jñānam; guhyataram means greatest secret; there are so many secrets in the world; and in the mantra śāstra; also the mantras are not revealed; all those secrets are there; but this ātma jñānam is more secret than all other secrets;

Therefore guhyādguyataram; rare teaching I have given to you; and ultimately I do not want to tell you what you should do.

Arjuna's question was what; should I fight; or should I not? Tadēkaṁ vada niścītya yēna śrēyō'hamāpnuyām (3.2).

Here Kṛṣṇa says: I do not want to tell you, do this or do that; because you are a thinking human being; you should not lead your life based on other people's advices. If you have to live by other people's advices, then why should I give you buddhi; I would not have given you buddhi. Since I have given you intellect and the thinking power, you draw information or knowledge from all sources; you use the other people to learn but every decision ultimately you yourself should make; you should be responsible for your life.

We are not like dogs; so you are not a puppet or a dog; you are a thinking human being, and not only that; if I take decisions for you, you will ultimately depend upon me for every small thing, including, what dress I should wear today. In India it happens; age is above 60; śaṣṭiabdapūrthi is over; but even for small decisions, I have to consult my amma and appa; they will say; that is not the correct thing; up to a particular age when I cannot think and decide, I can go by others' advices; but beyond that age, I have to decide. Then does that mean that I should not listen to other people. Listen to others, elders are there; gurus are there; parents are there; śāstras are there; gather input from everyone but you should decide and also you should face the consequences of your decision; and generally our problem is we do not the courage to face the consequences. Therefore we should blame someone, therefore we put the decision on others.

Here Kṛṣṇa says: Arjuna I am not going to decide for you. My aim is educate you and not to command you; and therefore ētat aśēṣēṇa vimṛśya; whatever I have taught you analyse; and you find out where you stand in spiritual ladder; because the decision will depend upon the level the spiritual level of the person; until citta śuddhi, karma is important. After citta śuddhi, one has to gradually reduce karma; whether I should do more karma, or more vēdāntic study; is not an uniform advice, since the level of the student vary; one person should increase the karma whereas the other should decrease the karma.

So how can we give uniform advice? A doctor cannot say that all the people with the headache should take aspirin; that is dangerous because, headache can be caused by 2500 causes; including family members; spouse itself can cause headache; So how will aspirin help. Therefore, remember, there is no uniform spiritual advice, for one śṛavaṇam is important; for one karma is important; for one japa is important; Therefore you should understand what is the role of every sādhāna and I should introspect and see where I stand and accordingly I have to decide. Therefore Kṛṣṇa says, ētat vimṛśya; understand this very well by analysis;

And thereafter yathēcchasi; whatever you decide as the appropriate course of action; for you, according to your need. Yathēcchasi tathā kuru; this is the job of every elderly person. So there are many people dependent on us for their decision; we can certainly help others in taking decisions; but ultimately, they should not depend on us; they should be able to decide by themselves; because we are not going to be permanently there; our children cannot eternally ask us for everything; they must be able to decide.

Giving independence to others is appropriate education; but if I have to give independence to others, I should be strong enough, because we are dependent on others depending on us. Do you understand; I will repeat. We are dependent on others depending on us; so our son regularly was asking; now after marriage he is not consulting us; but his wife; previously you are asking mother for advice; now the wife; But now the mother gets angry; angry with the daughter in law; as till her arrival, he used to ask the mother's advice for everything; now she feels neglected, because of the daughter-in-law.

Our problem is we want others to depend upon us. Wanting to be wanted is a form of saṁsāra. Wanting to be wanted by others, is a form of saṁsāra; and as long as I want to be wanted by others, I will keep them under my control; for each thing you should ask me and then only you should act. Thus we order.

Kṛṣṇa says: This is not correct; gradually help them to become independent of you; healthy parenting is making the children independent of the parent; healthy teaching is making the student independent of the teacher. Kṛṣṇa says I am a true teacher. Therefore I am not going to command you; yathēcchasi tathā kuru.

सर्वगुह्यतमं भूयः शृणु मे परमं वचः ।
इष्टोऽसि मे दृढमिति ततो वक्ष्यामि ते हितम् ॥ १८.६४ ॥

Sarvaguhyatamaṁ bhūyaḥ śṛṇu mē paramaṁ vacaḥ |
iṣṭō'si mē dṛḍhamiti tatō vakṣyāmi tē hitam || 18.64 ||

भूयः bhūyaḥ again शृणु śṛṇu listen मे परमं वचः mē paramaṁ vacaḥ to MY supreme word, सर्वगुह्यतमम् sarvaguhyatamam the most secret of all इति असि iti asi since you are दृढम्
इष्टः मे dṛḍham iṣṭaḥ me very dear to ME ततः tataḥ hence वक्ष्यामि vakṣyāmi I shall tell हितं ते hitaṁ tē what is good for you.

64. Again listen to My supreme word, the most secret of all. Since you are very dear to Me, hence I shall tell what is good for you.

So Kṛṣṇa gave freedom to Arjuna in the previous slōkā; and that means what; now Arjuna has to use his freewill and remember freewill is that which can be used or which can be abused also. Swami Dayānanda describes freewill as that which can be abused. And therefore Kṛṣṇa gave the freedom, but still out of compassion, Kṛṣṇa is worried; Arjuna after learning all these 18 chapters, thoughtfully he may choose the wrong course.

Like that example, the ceiling is very low; the door is very low therefore, they said, be careful, ceiling is very low, therefore you have to bend your head; and this person wanted to be careful and he bent his head from here itself and then what did he do, and exactly when he came under the room, he raised his head and got hit.

So there are two mistakes; one is called thoughtless mistake; other is called; thoughtful mistake; Kṛṣṇa is worried; Arjuna may after 18 chapters, may decide wrongly, therefore once again, he does not want to command, you fight, he does not want to say; therefore he says once again I will summarise the Gīta; everything is over; ബഹുമാന പാടിയാളി. Maṅgalam has been sung; therefore once again. Bhūyaḥ; once again;

Guhyatamaṁ bhūyaḥ śṛṇu; the greatest secret of this teaching.

Paramaṁ vacaḥ; my supreme words; my greatest words, which is the rarest one, may śṛṇu; listen to me; hear from me.

And why Kṛṣṇa is repeating again and again; Kṛṣṇa wants to be wanted; or will Kṛṣṇa be affected by Arjuna's wrong decisions; When we try to give freedom to our children, what is our problem, we are willing to give freedom but our worry is what, if they make a wrong decision, we are going to be hurt, that is why we are hesitating to give freedom; I can give freedom to the children only when my heart is ready. I will not be affected when the children make wrong decisions. Similarly the Guru can give total freedom to the disciple, only when the guru is not going to be affected by the wrong decision.

Therefore Kṛṣṇa here says here that not because I will be affected by your wrong decision, whatever you decide, I will not be affected, still I am repeating because iṣṭō'si; because of my compassion towards you; and also you have taken refuge in me. Therefore I feel responsible; therefore may iṣṭaḥ asi

And that too not ordinarily dṛḍham; you are very very dear to me; and therefore, not because I will be affected by your decision; Bhagavān will never be affected by anybody's right or wrong decision; he has given us all freedom; He says you do what you want; be ready to face the consequences; I have given you the correct warning; I have written correctly in the board; you take the decision and face the consequences; ततः ते हितं वक्ष्यामि tataḥ tē hitam vakṣyāmi, I am telling you what is good for you; and what is that; he is going to summarise once again; the entire Gīta.

मन्मना भव मद्भक्तः मद्याजि मां नमस्कुरु ।
मामेवैष्यसि सत्यं ते प्रतिजाने प्रियोऽसि मे ॥ १८.६५ ॥

manmanā bhava madbhaktō madyājī māṃ namaskuru |
māmēvaiṣyasi satyaṃ tē pratijānē priyō'si mē || 18.65 ||

भव मन्मनाः manmanāḥ bhava fix the mind on ME मद्भक्तः madbhaktaḥ (be) MY devotee
मध्याजी madhyājī (be) MY worshipper नमस्कुरु माम् namaskuru mām surrender to ME
एष्यसि eṣyasi you shall reach माम् एव mām ēva ME alone, सत्यं प्रतिजाने satyaṃ pratijānē truly do I promise ते tē to you, असि मे प्रियः asi me priyaḥ you are dear to ME.

65. Fix the mind on ME. (Be) MY devotee. (Be) MY worshipper. Surrender to ME. You shall reach ME alone. Truly do I promise to you. You are dear to ME.

These two verses are the final final final summary of the Gīta; considered to be one of the important slōkās; both 65 and 66; are very important; 65th verse summarises karma-yōgaḥ; and 66 verses summarises jñāna-yōgaḥ. Previously he had several verses to summarise to karma-yōga; and several verses to summarise to jñāna-yōga; here one verse summary of karma-yōga and one verse summary of jñāna-yōga. That means these two verses contain the entire Gīta. So even if you forget the Gīta; which you should not, you should not forget these two verses are sāra sāra.

And in this karma-yōga summary, Kṛṣṇa tells a God-centered lifestyle is karma-yōga. An active God-centered life style in which I contribute to the Society; which is the first stage of life; an active God-centered lifestyle in which I contribute to the society is karma-yōga.

Then what will be jñāna-yōga; a withdrawn knowledge-centered life-style will be called jñāna-yōga; in the next verse. So this is the essence, the meaning of the verse, we will do in the next class.

Hari Om

236 Chapter 18, Verses 65-66

ॐ

Up to the 64 verse of the 18th chapter, Lord Kṛṣṇa summarised the entire bhagavad Gīta teaching consisting of two main sādhanās, viz., karma-yōga and jñāna-yōga; he summarised karma-yōga three times in this chapter and he summarised jñāna-yōga twice in this chapter and Lord Kṛṣṇa feels satisfied with his summary; And therefore he told Arjuna that I have told everything that I wanted to say. I do not want to impose any idea upon you; I do not want to impose any decision upon you; you have to make your decision based upon my teaching.

Therefore Kṛṣṇa said vimṛśyaitadaśēṣēṇa yathēcchasi tathā kuru; I am only a guru to enlighten you, but I am not here to take decisions on behalf of you. And after saying this much, Kṛṣṇa is still worrying in a corner of his mind. Even though predominantly he feels confident that he has taught him well; but still Kṛṣṇa feels diffident; after hearing all the 18th chapters, perhaps Arjuna may take a wrong decision, and therefore Kṛṣṇa feels like summarising the entire Gīta; for which he gave in the introduction in the 64th verse; sarva guhyatamam bhuyaḥ ṣṛṇu; even though I have completed my teaching, but still on parting I will summarise the whole teaching once again, which Kṛṣṇa wants to give in the next two verses; that is the 65th and 66th verse; which is going to be the final summary of the Bhagavad-Gīta. And as I said in the last class; the 65th verse is the summary of the karma-yōga and the 66th verse is the summary of the jñāna-yōga; both are very important verses; we will see now.

मन्मना भव मद्भक्तः मद्याजि मां नमस्कुरु ।
मामेवैष्यसि सत्यं ते प्रतिजाने प्रियोऽसि मे ॥ १८.६५ ॥

[manmanā bhava madbhaktō madyājī māṃ namaskuru|
māmēvaiṣyasi satyaṃ tē pratijānē priyō'si mē || 18.65 ||](#)

So in this verse, Lord Kṛṣṇa summarises karma-yōga which is nothing but a religious way of life; a God-centered way of life. And this religious way of life which Kṛṣṇa has been teaching in all these chapters, begins with two main sādhanās.

The religious way of life begins with two main sādhanās; one sādhanā is allotting exclusively sometime daily for prayer. So prayer is the first sādhanā for religious life, depending upon the convenience, it may be half an hour, or one hour or three quarter of an hour, it is compulsory for a religious way of life; no excuses are allowed. And preferably, the time allotted should be in the morning; so that the impact of the prayer will continue throughout the day. So if one can allot time twice a day; wonderful; but if it is only once, preferably in the morning, and that too preferably before or during the sunrise; which means we have to get up early.

So watching TV till 1 a.m. HBO or AXN and then getting up 10 a.m. in the morning, that business will not work. Get up either before or during the sunrise; and allot sometime for prayer; it can be in the form of pūja if one knows or it can be in the form of pārayaṇam; reading the scriptures or it can be in the form of japa; and if the nama japa is done mentally, it becomes a form of dhyanam also. Japa itself is dhyanam; when it is done mentally. So this is one important sādhanā, I will call it prayer.

And the second important sādhanā of religious life which people do not emphasise nowadays is a thorough study of the Bhagavad-Gīta; which is called the svadhyāya which is called brahma yajñāḥ; we are supposed to study the original vēdantham. Since the Bhagavad-Gīta is the essence of the vēdās, one Gīta book, thorough, complete, comprehensive study; by study I do not mean learning to chant; I mean the learning of the meaning of the śāstra is second compulsory and important religious sādhanā; so prayer and study of the Gīta.

गेयं गीता नाम सहस्रं
ध्येयं श्रीपति रूपमजस्रम् |

gēyam gītā nāma sahasram
dhyēyam śrīpati rūpamajasram |

Śankarācārya tells in Bhaja Govindam; every one of you should study the Gīta; so prayer and Gīta study is the beginning of religious life.

And if a person begins with this, sooner or later, a person finds a big transformation in life. because by the study of the scriptures; one begins to know more about oneself; more about the world and more about God: Jīva, jagat, Īśvara are understood more clearly and which brings about a total transformation in our perspective or outlook; And not only there is a transformation in the outlook, there is a transformation with regard to our perspective of life and its goal; எதுக்காக வாழணம்; எதை அடையணம். For what purposes we live; what should we achieve. With regard to life and its goals also there will be a transformation in the outlook. This is the next stage of religious life.

And when a person continues these two; which two? Prayer and study; which are compulsory throughout, like the tāmrapa ṣṭuti it should be there, not only there will be a transformation in perspective, God enters the life of that person. God is no more someone distantly present beyond the cloud; God becomes an integral part of this life. God becomes a companion or partner in his or her life; and God in the form of Iṣṭa dēvathā; in the form of Rāma or Kṛṣṇa becomes an integral part; his regular prayer includes:

वनमाली गदी शार्ङ्गी शङ्खी चक्री च नन्दकी । श्रीमान् नारायणो विष्णुर्वासुदेवोऽभिरक्षतु ॥

vanamālī gadī śāṅgī śaṅkhī cakrī ca nandakī | śrīmān nārāyaṇō viṣṇurvāsudēvō:'bhirakṣatu

God is my primary companion and help. Other people may be available; may not be available; my primary companion and my primary relationship is God alone, in the form of my Iṣṭa dēvathā. This is the entry of God as a partner or companion; this is the next stage.

And if a person continues to the religious life; sooner or later, he discovers God is not only my companion in my life; the scriptures point out that God is the ultimate goal of life also. Previously I considered God is only a companion in accomplishing worldly goals; God was never considered a goal at all. Goals are different. God is only a companion to help me in achieving the goal; but sooner or later, God is discovered not only as a companion and a help, but God occupies the list of my goals of life. There are so many goals; 7847 goals are there; just a number, you can put any number, and in that list, previously God was not included; God is only a help in fulfilling these goals; but now God is not only a companion but God enters the list of my goals. The moment God enters the list of my goals, God gets a new name; God as a goal is called mōkṣa. The moment God enters the list of goals, God is given a new name. What is the name of God now? Mōkṣa.

And once God or mōkṣa has entered my list of goals; I am called a spiritually-religious-person. Until now, I am only an ordinary-religious-person; not spiritually-religious-person; an ordinary-religious-person is converted into spiritual-religious-person. When? When God is no more a mere companion; God is my goal also. When God or mōkṣa is one of the goals; I am called a mumukṣu. So this religious person has now become a mumukṣu; the moment God has become one of the goals of life; and still he will continue the fundamental religious sādhanā. What are the two? Remember; prayer and study; that should be continued.

Then what happens? God was occupying my list of goals as one of the goals of life; and in the list, it was occupying some remote position. If there are 7437 goals, God occupied the 7437th position, and if this religious life continues; the ranking of God improves; Poor God also is ranked by us; So from 7437th, it become 36th, then 35th God climbs the ladder, as my rating of God as human goals increases. And after several months or years or decades or perhaps janmas, God reaches the top of the list. So instead of being one of the goals of life; God becomes the top primary goal.

And as a mumukṣu also; he has evolved from mandha mumukṣu to madhyama mumukṣu; Mandha mumukṣu to Madhyama mumukṣu. What is the difference? For a mandha mumukṣu, God is one of the goals, somewhere down below; but for a madhyama mumukṣu, spiritual-seeker, God occupies the topmost position; it is the greatest puruṣārtha.

And still he should continue the religious life; consisting of two things. What are those two things? Prayer and study; which should not be left. Then what will happen? Once God-desire occupies the top goal of life, gradually the God-desire gets stronger and stronger and stronger; the religious life nourishes the God-desire; and as it is nourished, what will it do? The God-desire begins to eat up the other desires. God-desire begins to eat up the other desires; How many? 7437, till this class finishes, I will keep that number, 7436 down below are there; What will it do? This desire becomes so significant and all-consuming and obsessive. Then slowly, other worldly desires will begin to appear smaller and insignificant, just as for a grown up person, desire for toys will gradually drop, and you do not have any regret also; you do have any regret? In that days, I had desire for toys, now that desire is gone; are you sad about it, not only it has gone; you do not have any regrets; in fact, you do not publicise to everyone; I do not have toy desire. If you publicise, some problem. So this is called transcendence; or growing out of finite and smaller desires and all of them are consumed by what? mōkṣa iccha; Īśvara iccha or mumukṣutvam and a time comes when all other goals disappear and in the entire list, there is only one goal. And what is that? God or mōkṣa. And when it is only one goal; can you call it the topmost goal? Topmost when you say, there should be a list; then only top or bottom comes; there is no list at all; there is only one. From topmost goal to only goal.

How is the progress? One of the goals, to topmost goal, to only goal. When God is one of the goals, the person is called mandha mumukṣu; when God or mōkṣa is the topmost goal, is called madhyama mumukṣu; when God becomes the only goal, he or she is called, uttama mumukṣu. Thus karma-yōga or a religious way of life, will gradually nourish him and will take this person up to what? uttama mumukṣu and this uttama mumukṣu is called sādhanā catuṣṭaya sampanna adhikāri. This is the height of karma-yōga.

And once a person has reached this stage; wherein there is only one goal in life and that is mōkṣa, karma-yōgaḥ has done its job. Now he is ready for what? The next level of sādhanā called jñāna-yōga. So the first level is presented in this slōkā; manmana bhava, etc. and this verse is almost the repetition of the last verse of the 9th chapter. In the 9th chapter last verse, Kṛṣṇa has said the same thing; I will give the running meaning of this verse. And I am not going to elaborate on this, c/of that 34th verse.

So what is this running meaning of this religious way of life?

Manmana bhava; keep me in your mind; let your life be God-centered life; may you not forget the role of God.

Mad-bhakthaḥ bhava; May you become my devotee; may you develop a devotion towards me; initially as a companion, love me; later as one of the goals of life, you should love me; later as the topmost goal of life you should love me; and finally as the only goal of life you should love me. Thus you nourish your love and devotion towards me; madbhaktha bhava; and madyāji bhava; may you worship me; which alone I pointed out as the first religious discipline; allot sometime however busy you may be, preferably in the morning, for worship and prayer. And even those doctors who are talking about stress and strain, even they are talking about some time for prayer and meditation. And therefore madyāji bhava; may you worship me; and initially you allot exclusive time for worship and later you convert your regular life into a form of worship; yad yad karma karami, tat tat akilam, sambo tavaradhanam.

Two types of worship; one is exclusive worship which is direct worship and the second is indirect worship. And what is indirect worship? Converting your very life into a form of worship. Which is very important? Both are important; both direct and indirect should be there; madyaji bhava;

Mām namaskuru. And may you surrender unto me; may you take refuge in me; for facing the challenges of life; for facing the crisis of life; for facing the failures of life; for facing the losses of life; every moment of life is a challenge; if you want a shock absorber; may you have me; mat cittaḥ; sarva durgāni mat prasādāt tariṣyathi.

And if you follow this, mam ēva esyasi; you will reach the goal of life, which is myself, mōkṣa.

Ma ēva ēsyasi; not directly, but coming through jñāna-yōga, which is the next stage of life; so through jñāna-yōga; you will reach me.

Satyam; this is 100% guarantee, I am giving you a guarantee card, not 3 months valid or 6 months valid, eternally valid;

And tē pratijane, I am promising to change. You see the transformation in yourself; here the peculiar problem that the human being faces is only if he sees the transformation, he will study the Gīta; and only if he studies the Gīta, he will see the transformation; கல்யாணமானால் பைத்தியம் தெளியும்; பைத்தியம் தெளிந்தால் தான் இன்னொரு பைதியம் இவனைபண்ணிப்பா கல்யாணம் இவளை/. kalyanamānal paithiyam theliyum; paithiyam telindaal than another paithiyam will marry him; Therefore this is a catch 22 situation; he says I will study Gīta if you promise transformation; and I say I will promise transformation if you study Gīta; and people are not willing to see the transformation; Somewhere you have to experiment and see.

prathijānē; I am not promising; Kṛṣṇa is promising; you see the change in your life; and His promise also is not a commercial promise; priya asi me, you are dear to me; therefore I will never give you a false promise; therefore it is reliable; believe me; start your religious life. This is the first stage called karma-yōga.

Now Kṛṣṇa is going to present the 2nd stage of jñāna-yōga.

Verse 18.66

सर्वधर्मान् परित्यज्य मामेकं शरणं व्रज ।
अहं त्वा सर्वपापेभ्यः मोक्षयिष्यामि मा शुचः ॥ १८.६६ ॥

sarvadharmān parityajya māmēkaṃ śaraṇam vraja |
āhaṃ tvā sarvapāpēbhyō mōkṣayīṣyāmi mā śucaḥ || 18.66 ||

परित्यज्य parityajya Having renounced सर्वधर्मान् sarvadharmān all actions व्रज माम् एकम् vraja mām ēkam seek ME, the nondual, शरणम् śaraṇam (as your) shelter अहं मोक्षयिष्यामि ahaṃ mōkṣa yiṣyāmi I shall liberate त्वा tvā you सर्वपापेभ्यः sarvapāpēbhyaḥ from all sins मा शुचः mā śucaḥ do not grieve

66. Having renounced all actions, seek ME, the nondual, (as your) shelter. I shall liberate you from all sins. Do not grieve.

So this is the final jñāna-yōga summary of the Gīta; and this is also the final teaching verse of the Gīta; the later verses are only winding up verses; and therefore this is called the carama slōkā; carama slōka means the final teaching verse. The teachings started from the 11 verse of the 2nd chapter, and the teaching is concluded in the 66th verse; therefore this is called carama slōka; and therefore considered to be a very important slōkā.

And even though this is a summary of jñāna-yōga, Kṛṣṇa does not directly mention jñānam anywhere in the verse. If you look at the whole verse; nowhere the word jñānam or enquiry or teaching or vēdānta; or vicāra, no such word is used, Therefore jñāna-yōga is hidden in this verse; implicit in this verse; it is not explicitly available. This is last mischief of Kṛṣṇa. Can't he say neatly? This verse contains jñāna-yōga in implicit form. And therefore by superficial study, we will not be able to see any jñāna-yōga in that. And not only jñāna-yōga is not evident.

Superficially seeing this verse can be a confusing verse also, subject to different interpretations. If you look at this simple translation of this verse it will be startling; Kṛṣṇa startling; Sarva dharmān paritajya; renounce all dharma; dharma means, virtues, morals, ethics, punya karma whatever be the translations; literally the sentence means give up all the dharmas. In fact throughout the Gīta Kṛṣṇa has talked about the importance of dharma. In fact he told in the 4th chapter, my very arrival my very avathāra is for what purpose; do you remember the slōkā;

परित्राणाय साधूनाम् विनाशाय च दुष्कृताम् ।
धर्मसंस्थापनार्थाय सम्भवामि युगे युगे ॥ ४.८ ॥

[paritrāṇāya sādḥūnām vināśāya ca duṣkṛtām |
dharmasamsthāpanārthāya sambhavāmi yugē yugē || 4.8 ||](#)

My purpose of avathāra or the very purpose of My arrival is the promotion of dharma; 4th chapter He said that; And how does Kṛṣṇa promote dharma? All of you do dharma; satyam vada, dharmam cara. Here mischievous Kṛṣṇa says; give up all dharmas. How confusing it is; and he had said when dharma comes down, I will take avathāra; And the same Kṛṣṇa says: all of you give up dharma; and that too not one or two dharma; sarva dharma.

And this is the most comfortable line also. In kali yuga; all the immoral people, all those people who compromise with values, all unethical people can say that I follow the central teaching of the Gīta; which Kṛṣṇa has given in the carama slōka; give up all the values. Kṛṣṇa has said, that is what I have been doing all these years; and after reading this slōka; I do not have guilt also. Earlier I had some guilt; but now it is not there. So this is confusion no.1. How can Kṛṣṇa say: renounce dharma?

The next confusion is what? In the latter part He says: mām ēkam śaraṇam vrja; you approach Me as the only refuge or shelter; you approach Me as the only refuge or shelter; mām means Me; and śaraṇam means refuge of shelter; ēkam means the only shelter; And therefore this also creates the confusion; what is the confusion; Only Kṛṣṇa is the ultimate refuge; He says that I am the only the ultimate refuge; All the Kṛṣṇa bhaktas declare and in fact, all the vaiṣṇavās declare and the Hare Kṛṣṇa people declare, Kṛṣṇa alone is the real God; Kṛṣṇa is the only protector; and therefore do not worship any other God; Śiva will not come to protect; Ganapathi will not come to protect; even Rāma they do not accept; they even change the Hare Rāma Mantra; reverse it; normal mantra is what?

Hare Rāma Hare Rāma. Rāma Rāma Hare Harē |
Hare Kṛṣṇa Hare Kṛṣṇa, Kṛṣṇa Kṛṣṇa Hare Harē ||

They say you should not say like that, because primary God is Kṛṣṇa; therefore you should chant like this:

Hare Kṛṣṇa Hare Kṛṣṇa Kṛṣṇa Kṛṣṇa Hare Harē.

This is another great confusion. People refusing to go to Śiva Temple; even they will not say the name; because why? This Kṛṣṇa has said; you will get mōkṣa only if you come to Me. Just this slōka read superficially; not only it does not bring out the implicit jñāna-yōga meaning, but it also confuses a person.

And therefore Śankaracārya comes to our rescue and brings out the jñāna-yōga meaning. Now we will see how this conveys the jñāna-yōga, step by step;

The first quarter; What is that? Sarvadharmān parityajya; the word dharma Śankaracārya tells in this context, must include adharma also. Kṛṣṇa does not mention that because it has been all the time talked about before; all the scriptures repeatedly say; you have to give up adharma; unethical activities and since it is very evident; even without Gīta study, everyone knows; Kṛṣṇa does not mention; therefore you add adharma also in the list and therefore you should read; sarva dharma-adharmān parityajaya.

Then the next question. What do you mean by the word dharma; different people give different meaning by studying the Sānskrīt dictionary. In the Sānskrīt dictionary if you see the word dharma, you will get a 108 meanings. How to do you which one should the meaning; Here the word dharma has a technical meaning, it is all punya karmani, all the vihitha karmas are dharma; all the proper activities; ethical activities prescribed in the śāstras; in the form of kāyika karmāṇi; proper physical activities; vāchika activities; proper verbal activities; and mānasa karmāṇi, proper mental activities; All put together we will call punya karmani.

Then naturally the word adharma will mean the opposite of that; all the unethical improper activities; kāyika, vācika, mānasa pāpa karmāṇi. So dharma is equal punya karmāṇi; kāyika, vācika, mānasa puṇya karmāṇi and adharma means kāyika, vācika, mānasa pāpa karmāṇi.

And the word sarva means all puṇya pāpa karma. In short, all karmas; karma means what? Activities. Because all karmas should come under either proper and improper activities; therefore the literal meaning of the first quarter is: Renounce all activities; Renounce all actions is the literal meaning.

Now the problem is: How can a living being renounce all the actions? It is impossible for a living being to renounce all the actions which Kṛṣṇa himself has declared before:

न हि कश्चित्क्षणमपि जातु तिष्ठत्यकर्मकृत् | 3.4 |

Nahi kascit kṣṇam api, jathu thiṣṭathi akarma kṛt |

And in the 18th chapter; Kṛṣṇa said na hi dēhabhṛtā śakyaṁ tyaktuṁ karmāṇyaśēṣataḥ..18.11 No living being can give up all the activities totally.

In the fifth chapter Kṛṣṇa said; Even the survival requires certain basic minimum activities; even the greatest sanyasi who has given up all karmas will have to do the minimum activity of eating, drinking, drinking means water; not something else; you have to be careful; cleaning, all these activities are there. Total activities can be given up only at the time of death; when other people will become more active to dispose of the body.

Therefore the first mischief we find here is that Kṛṣṇa is giving an improper impossible advice. What is that? Give up all the karmas.

Now we have to find out what is the significance of this statement; and the significance of the statement you can understand only if you remember the teachings contained in all the previous chapters, because this is supposed to be summary. Therefore Kṛṣṇa assumes that you remember the teaching before and what is the teaching before; Kṛṣṇa said in the previous chapters that all the karmas or actions belong to the body-mind complex alone. It is a very important teaching that Kṛṣṇa gave; all the karmas belong only the body-mind complex; prakṛthē kriyamānāni guṇai sarvani sarvaśa; in Tatva bodha language, the śarīram alone has got karma.

And therefore, as long as I am identified with the body-mind complex, all the actions of the body-mind complex will belong to me alone; and the identification with the body-mind complex is called dēha-abhimāna; or ahaṁkāra. Ahaṁkāra vimūdhātma karta aham iti manyathē; When I have ahaṁkāra, when I have got dēha-abhimāna; identification with the body mind complex, then all the karmas belonging to them; will become what? My karmas.

Therefore, if you have to give up all the karmas; it is possible in one way; and in fact it is possible only in one way. And what is that? Give up your dēha abhimāna; identification with the body mind complex; which means the notion that I am the body, I am the mind. Identification with body-mind complex means what? The notion the idea that I am the body, I am the mind.

Therefore karma tyāga is equal to dēha abhimāna tyāgaha. Again you see where he is going; Very technical verse; karma tyaga means dēha abhimāna tyāga; dēha means body-mind complex, abhimāna means identification; identification with what; the notion that I am the body and the mind.

Then the next step is: I can give up the dēha abhimāna; I can give up the body-mind identification only if I know that I am someone different from the body-mind complex. I can give up dēha abhimāna only if I know that I am someone different from the dēha; which is called dēhi. In the second-chapter itself; from the 12th verse up to the 25th verse, Kṛṣṇa takes lot of pains to teach that you are not the body, you are not the mind but you are the dehi, different from the dēha. Then who am I; I am the ātma caitanyam, the consciousness principle, and what type of consciousness; which is not part, product or property of the body, which is an independent entity which pervades and illumines the body, enlivens which is the limited by the boundaries of the body, and which survives even after the fall of the body; Very good: 100% marks; Therefore I am the ātma chaitanyam, which is akartā and abhōktā. So this is called ātma jñānam.

And when I get ātma jñānam; what is the consequence? I give up the dēha abhimānam and when dēha abhimāna is given up; then all the karmas of the body, that abhimāna also I give up, as said in the fifth chapter, paśyañśṛṇvan sprśaṅ jighrann aśnan gacchan svapan śvasan 5.8 aham naiva kincit karōmi.

Therefore, remember the three steps; I asked you to give up sarva karma; karma tyāga is accomplished by dēha-abhimāna-tyāga; dēha-abhimāna-tyāga is accomplished by ātma jñānam, which is called jīvātma-svarūpa-jñānam.

Therefore sarva dharmān parityajya means gaining the knowledge of the jīvātma svarūpam. Sarva dharmān parthyajya means gain the jīvātma svarūpa jñānam. What is the knowledge? No karma belongs to me; all the karmas belongs to the body mind complex, and I have no connection with the body mind complex; This is the first stage of jñāna-yōga; which is called jīvātma svarūpa jñānam. In technical language; tvam padartha jñānam.

Then the next stage of jñāna-yōga is paramātma aikya jñānam; which will come in Mam ēkam śaraṇam vrja; Mam ēkam śaraṇam vrja is paramatma aikya jñānam. Sarva dharmān parityajya is jīvātma svarūpa jñānam; mam ēka śaraṇam vrja is paramatma aika jñānam. How do you say so? That we will see in the next class.

Hari Om

237 Chapter 18, Verses 66-69

ॐ

In the verses 65 and 66 of the 18th chapter, Lord Kṛṣṇa gives the final summary of the Gīta teaching; 65th summaries the karma-yōga sādhanā; and the 66th verse summarises jñāna-yōga sādhanā; and with the 66th verse, the actual teaching part of the Gīta is over. From the 67th verse onwards, we get only some concluding verses, talking about the glory of the teacher, student, the teaching, etc. and since the 66th verse is the final teaching verse, it is called carama slōkā and because of the expression śaraṇam vrja occurring in this verse, it is also called śaraṇagathi slōkā.

Śankarācārya points out that through this śaraṇagathi slōkā, Lord Kṛṣṇa is talking about jñāna-yōga sādhanā and in this verse, the first line talks about jñāna-yōga and the second line talks about jñāna-yōga phalam, i.e. mōkṣa. Jñāna-yōga consists of two stages, and the two stages are presented in the first two quarters of the first line; sarva dharmān parityajya is the first stage of the jñāna-yōga and māmēkaṁ śaraṇam vraja is the second stage of the jñāna-yōga; sarva dharma parityajya is stage one; Īśvara śaraṇāgati is the stage two.

And I explained the stage one in the last class; sarvadharmā parityāga, ultimately means knowing the real nature of the jīvātma; jīvātma svarūpa jñānam alone is sarva dharma parityāga. How do you say that jīvātma svarūpa jñānam is sarva dharma parityāga?

And I explained in the last class; sarva dharma parityāga literally means renunciation of all the noble karmas; sarva dharma parityāga literally means renunciation of all the noble karmas; and here we should not take it literally, and the give up the noble karmas; doing noble karmas itself is little difficult and if at all someone does something; if we also drop that; what should we do? Therefore sarva dharma parityāga should not be literally taken; it should be understood in the figurative language.

What is the figurative meaning? Let the body-mind complex, continue to do puṇya karma, they should not drop the puṇya karmas; because dharma alone will save the society; an ajñāni has also to perform dharma, noble actions; even a jñāni should perform noble karmas; lōkasaṅgrahamēvāpi sampāśyan kartumarhasi; Kṛṣṇa said in the 3rd chapter, whether one is ajñāni or jñāni, dharma, puṇya karma, noble karmas, should not be given up, let the body mind complex, continue the dharma.

Then what do you do? You gain the knowledge of your true nature and when I gain the knowledge of my true nature, I know that I am not the body, I am not the mind also; but I am the sākṣi caitanyam, which is akartā and abhōkta . And when I gain the knowledge that I am akartā and abhōkta . What does it mean? I am neither a doer, nor an enjoyer, at once I know that all the karmas belong to anātma, no karma, puṇya karma or pāpa karma is related to me - the real-I. So jñāni will continue to do noble karmas, but a jñāni will never claim "I am doing noble karma".

Then what will a jñāni claim? In my presence; in the presence, me, the akartā, abhōkta, the ātma, the body-mind complex is performing the action. This disowning of the action, this dis-identification from the action is called jñāna karma sanyāsa. And this topic has been particularly discussed elaborately in the fourth chapter. The entire 4th chapter, you have to revise, because this is the summary and understand how the jñāni does dharma but does not claim I am doing the karma; I am the sākṣi caitanyam. So sarvadharmā parityāga is akartṛtva svarūpa jñānam. jīvātma svarūpa jñānam. This is the first part of the jñāna-yōga.

Now we will go to the second part of the jñāna-yōga. What is that? Māmēkaṁ śaraṇam vraja. Mām vraja means approach Me. Vraja means approach. Come or Reach. Mām means Me. And Who is making this statement? The Lord, Lord Kṛṣṇa, therefore mām vraja means approach the Lord.

Now the question is? What is the meaning of approaching the Lord? What is the meaning of the word Lord or Īśvara? And this also we have analysed throughout the Gīta and I would like to remind that the word Īśvara has three different meanings according to the context. The word Īśvara or God has three different meanings according to context. The first meaning is ēka rūpa Īśvaraḥ; God as a personal Īśvaraḥ. As Rāma or Kṛṣṇa or Vināyaka; a finite personal god is the meaning of Īśvaraḥ. The first meaning.

When our Lord Kṛṣṇa says that I am born on such and such time, and I have destroyed such and such asura and I am a friend of Arjuna, etc., there I-the-Lord means the ēka rūpa Īśvara, Dēvaki putra Īśvara; V. Kṛṣṇa, V means Vasudevan's son. V. Kṛṣṇa, localised-personalised-finite-God subject to arrival and departure. Aṣṭami and Navami. Kṛṣṇa Aṣṭami and Rāma Navami; that is the first meaning of God.

The second meaning of Īśvara or God is anēka rūpa or viśva rūpa Īśvaraḥ; whose description we saw in which chapter? ēkādaśōdhyāya; Lord said, I am the all-pervading universe; and all forms are My forms; this is called anēka rūpa Īśvaraḥ.

And the third meaning of God is the highest nature and in fact the real God (if this is real god, what about the other two, I am not telling). So the third meaning is the real God, real Īśvara; which is neither ēkā rūpa nor anēka rūpa, but arūpa Īśvaraḥ; nirguṇam brahma, which was presented as para prakṛti, in the 7th chapter. I will give the chapter reference and you can do the home work; para prakṛti it was mentioned.

Therefore when Kṛṣṇa says that you should approach me, in this context the question is which Me? Kṛṣṇa is referring to ēkā rūpa, anēka rūpa or arūpa? We conclude in this context, Mām refers to the arūpa Īśvara; the highest nature of God, which is called nirguṇam brahma; Kṛṣṇa the paramātma, or Kṛṣṇa paramātma, who is all pervading satcidānanda svarūpam; maya tata idam sarvam, jagat avyakta mūrthina. He said in the 9th chapter. So mām means Kṛṣṇa paramātmānam vraja.

And that is why, Kṛṣṇa uses an adjective Ekam; Ekam means without a second, that which is only One and that which is advitīyam; that which is without a second; therefore it means the infinite Brahman. Sajātīya vijāthīya, svagatha bhēda rahitam param Brahman. Upaniṣadic expressions. If you understand it is Ok, or leave it. Only remember this much; Mām ēkam refers to infinite formless Kṛṣṇa paramātma. And māmēkaṁ vraja; approach the all-pervading paramātma.

Now the question is how will the jīvātma approach the all-pervading paramātma? How will the jīvātma approach all-pervading paramātma? If you analyse, the very word approach is a wrong word; Why it is a wrong word? You can approach someone who is far away from you. If the Lord is in one place in Vaikunta or Kailasa, in the name of śaraṇāgati, you can travel, travel and you can go to the Lord and reach him. But if the real Kṛṣṇa is all pervading, where is the question of travelling and reaching and therefore here the word 'reaching' is also a figurative expression. Just as 'dharma parithyaga' is only figurative, 'reaching' the Lord is also figurative because the all-pervading Lord can never be reached because the all-pervading Lord is never away from Me. and if the Lord is never away from Me, what do you mean by 'reaching'?

By 'reaching' what we mean is at this moment, we have a notion, we have a false notion, that the Lord is different from me and away from me. At this moment, we have a false notion, that paramātma is different from and paramātma is away from me; both this difference and distance are false notions. And therefore 'reaching' paramātma is the dropping the false notion; that I am different from paramātma; and that I am away from paramātma, இந்த ரண்டு தப்பான எண்ணங்களை விடறதுதான், பகவானை அடையறது. This wrong notion dropping is reaching the Lord.

Now the question is: How do you drop these false notions? What are the two false notions? Division and distance between Jīvātma and Paramātma are the two false notion and how do you drop these two false notions?

The answer is: any false notion is dropped by right knowledge; right notion one should not say. And therefore I have to drop these two false notions; by the right knowledge; What is the right knowledge? Between jīvātma and paramātma; there is neither a division nor a distance. Between jīvātma and paramātma, there is neither a division nor a distance; and this knowledge is called jīvātma paramātma aikya jñānam.

Therefore what is ultimate śaraṇāgati? There are people who give different meanings to śaraṇāgati; but the ultimate śaraṇāgati is nothing but jīvātma paramātma aikya jñānam, by which I drop the idea that I have to reach paramātma and this is called mām ēkaṁ vraja. And this jīvātma paramātma aikya jñānam alone is called mahavākya jñānam; the knowledge of the vēdic-teaching; tat tvam asi.

And when the vēda teaches tat tvam asi, how does the student receive the knowledge? Student should not say tat tvam asi to the Guru; the student should convert tat tvam asi into aham brahmāsmi; இந்த ஞானம் தான் சரணாகதி. this jñānam is śaraṇāgati.

And how do you gain this knowledge? Vēdanta śravaṇa, manana, nidhidhyāsana dvāra; And how do you do śravaṇa, manana, nidhidhyāsanam? With the help of a guru; and who has said this?

Lord Kṛṣṇa himself; tadviddhi praṇipātēna paripraśnēna sēvayā; upadēkṣyanti tē jñānaṁ jñānina tatva darśinaḥ; Therefore may you gain this knowledge; aham brahma asmi.

And what is the advantage of this knowledge? What is the benefit of the knowledge; aham brahmāsmi? Lord Kṛṣṇa says: Mām ēkaṁ śaraṇaṁ. Paramātma alone is the ultimate refuge from saṁsāra. If you want to save yourselves from saṁsāra; paramātma alone is the ultimate refuge; because paramātma alone is beyond time and space. Other than paramātma, anywhere you go; any 'where' you go, it is a place; any 'where' I go; it may be Vaikunṭha or Kaiāsa or Brahma lōka, anywhere you go, it is a particular place, and place means, time also will be there; Therefore wherever you go, you cannot escape from time.

And Time is called saṁsāra; because time alone is responsible for birth, decay, disease, death, separation, etc. Therefore by going elsewhere you do not save yourselves; but by recognising the timeless space-less formless attributeless Brahman alone, by recognising that Brahman alone, you will save yourselves from saṁsāra. Therefore śaraṇaṁ vraja; come to Brahman as your ultimate shelter. So with this jñāna-yōga summary is over.

Now in the second line Kṛṣṇa gives the jñāna phalam; if you gain this knowledge; what will happen; ahaṁ tvā mōkṣayiṣyāmi; I shall give you the phalam for your knowledge; because Bhagavān is both karma phala dātha and jñāna phala dātha. He alone gives the phalam all your sādhanās; whether it is in the form of karma or whether it is in the form of jñānam; Bhagavan alone will give the phalam for all your sādhanās; Therefore Kṛṣṇa says I will give you the jñāna phalam. And what is the phalam of jñānam? Sarvapāpēbhyō mōkṣayiṣyāmi. I shall release you from all the pāpam; sañcita pāpam; āgāmi pāpam; prārabhdā pāpam, I will release you.

And according to vēdānta, puṇyam also will come under pāpam only; only difference is pāpam is iron chain; puṇyam is golden chain; but both are shackles only. Puṇyam is also considered a shackle because puṇyam also is responsible for punarapi jananam, punarapi maraṇam. Neither puṇyam will save you from birth-death cycle; nor pāpam will save you from birth-death cycle; both of you will keep you within saṁsāra. Therefore if you want mōkṣa, you have to transcend both puṇyam and pāpam; tadā vidvān puṇyapāpē vidhūya nirañjanaḥ paramaṁ sāmīyamupaiti. Muṇḍakōpaniṣad beautifully says; jñāni transcends both puṇyam and pāpam; so sarva puṇya pāpēbhyā sañcita pāpam; āgāmi pāpam; prārabhdā karmēbhyāḥ; tvam pāpēbhyō mōkṣayiṣyāmi; I shall release you. And therefore mā śucaḥ; do not feel; there is a solution for the problem of saṁsāra.

And thus Śankarācārya in his commentary points out that śaraṇāgati, the ultimate, is the only jñānam; and there is no śaraṇāgati, other than jñānam. And this Śankarācārya elaborately establishes in his commentary by giving various reasons also. Why do we interpret saraṇāgati as jñānam? Because generally we think śaraṇāgati means namaskāram and lying down itself; or we think śaraṇāgati is nāma japa; various meanings various people give.

How dare Śankarācārya give the meaning of jñānam. And Śankarācārya gives reason. It is not my interpretation; but that is the correct meaning. And why do we say that it is the correct meaning?

Śankarācārya says firstly we should know that all the vēdās uniformly mention that jñānam alone will give mōkṣa; wherever mōkṣa phalam is mentioned, you should understand the sādhanā mentioned is jñānam. This is the declaration in the vēdās; not once or twice; hundreds of times. Tamēvaṁ vidvān amṛta iha bhavati; nānya panthā ayanāya vidyatē. Jñānam alone will give mōkṣa; nothing else. Jñānam is not even one of the paths; this is the only path.

Not only that; in one place, the upaniṣad beautifully says that without jñānam you can get mōkṣa, if you fulfil one condition. And what is the condition? The upaniṣad says, you have to role the sky like a mattress. Are you understanding? You have to go to the eastern, western or northern end; there is blue sky like a canopy, and you have to roll it like a mattress; and bring it and then you will get mōkṣa without jñānam. Means what? You cannot roll the sky and therefore you cannot get mōkṣa by any other method. If Kṛṣṇa says śaraṇāgathi gives mōkṣa; śaraṇāgathi is equal to jñānam alone; because Vēdā repeatedly say that jñānēna ēva mōkṣa. This is one important point to be noted.

And then in the Bhagavad-Gīta itself Kṛṣṇa himself has repeatedly said jñānam alone gives liberation:

श्री भगवानुवाच ।
अशौचानन्वशौचस्त्वं प्रज्ञावादांश्च भाषसे
गतासूनगतासूंश्च नानुशोचन्ति पण्डिताः ॥ २.११ ॥

Śrī Bhagavān uvāca |
aśocyānanvaśocatvaṃ prajñāvādāṃśca bhāṣase
gatāsūnagatāsūṃśca nānuśōcanti paṇḍitāḥ || 2.11 ||

Jñānis alone will get liberation; this is the very beginning of the Gīta. And later Kṛṣṇa talks about varieties of sādhanās like karma, bhakthi, etc. There also Kṛṣṇa says karmas, all types of karmas, will not give you liberation, all your karmas have to culminate in ātma jñānam. Karmas themselves will never give jñānam; never give mōkṣa. Karmas should take you to jñānam and jñānam alone will give liberation. sarvaṃ karmākhilam pārtha jñānē parisamāpyatē.

If you do not come to jñānam; any amount of karma will not give liberation. Who says? Kṛṣṇa has said; and even when he comes to bhakthi in the 7th chapter, Kṛṣṇa clearly says that all the bhakthas are wonderful and great but I want to assert one thing; only that particular bhaktha is the greatest one. And who is that particular bhaktha? That bhaktha who has come to jñānam.

उदाराः सर्व एवैते ज्ञानी त्वात्मैव मे मतम् ।
आस्थितः स हि युक्तात्मा मामेवानुत्तमां गतिम् ॥ ७.१८ ॥

udārāḥ sarva ēvaitē jñānī tvātmaiva mē matam |
āsthitaḥ sa hi yuktātmā māmēvānuttamāṃ gatim || 7.18 ||

You may practice varieties of bhakthi; but the ultimate level of bhakthi is what? Vēdānta śravaṇa, manana nidhidhyāsanam, and through that the ajñāni bhaktha has to convert himself into jñāni bhaktha; and jñāni bhaktha alone will be liberated. Kṛṣṇa says in the 7th chapter, in the 9th chapter, in the 12th chapter, and therefore, you may practice any form of karma; any form of bhakthi; any form of śaraṅagathi; but the ultimate śaraṅagathi is what? Aham brahmāsmi iti jñānam. Kṛṣṇa also endorses that teaching.

And therefore Śankarācārya concludes that sarva dhārman parityajyā, is jñāna-yōga as the ultimate means of liberation.

And with this final summary Kṛṣṇa concludes the entire Gīta teaching and from the following verse, we get some other aspects of the Gīta teaching; we will read.

Verse 18.67

इदं ते नातपस्काय नाभक्त्या कदाचन ।
न चाशुश्रूषवे वाच्यं न च मां योऽभ्यसूयति ॥ १८.६७ ॥

idaṃ tē nātapaskāya nābhaktāya kadācana |
na cāśuśrūṣavē vācyam na ca mām yō'bhyasūyati || 18.67 ||

इदं ते idaṃ tē This teaching given to you न कदाचन na kadācana should never be imparted वाच्यम् अतपस्काय vācyam atapaskāya to anyone who is without austerity, न अभक्ताय na abhaktāya nor to the one who is not a devotee न च अशुश्रूषवे na ca aśuśrūṣavē nor to the one who is not desirous of hearing, न च यः अभ्यसूयन्ति na ca yaḥ abhyasūyanti nor to the one who criticises माम् mām Me

67. This (teaching given) to you should never be imparted to the one who is without austerity, nor to the one who is not a devotee, nor to the one who is not desirous of hearing, nor to the one who criticises ME.

In this verse Lord Kṛṣṇa talks about four qualifications required for Gīta study. If these four qualifications are there, Gīta study will be highly beneficial; and if the qualifications are lesser and lesser; proportionately the benefit also will be lesser and lesser. And if this qualification is zero, the benefit also will be zero; perhaps the benefit may be for the other members of the family, as for some time he would be out of the house; so they tell in their houses; why can't you go the Gīta class and why are you cutting our necks by staying here itself; giving us trouble; give some trouble also to the Swamiji!

So what are the four qualifications? Qualifications are presented in different ways; in Tatva Bōdha, it was presented as sādhanā catuṣṭaya sampathi; but here Kṛṣṇa presents in a different form; what are those four?

1. Tapas or discipline; especially spiritual or religious discipline is the first qualification.

2. The second qualification is Bhakthi; Reverence or devotion to God and Guru. So bhakthi to God and Guru, the upaniṣad says:

yasya dēvē parābhakti, yatē dēvō tathā gurō, tasyaitē katitāyārthaḥ prakāśantē mahātmanah

The one who has got Īśvara Bhakthi and Guru bhakthi, he will get the knowledge; it is said; therefore Bhakthi is a second qualification;

3. The third qualification is susṛūṣa; deep interest in the study of the Gīta; a desire for knowledge; which is called jijñāsa. So susṛūṣa; normally susṛūṣa is used in the meaning of service, guru susṛūṣa; pitru susṛūṣa; pathi susṛūṣa (in olden times!, I will not tell that now. இப்போ சொல்ல மாட்டேன்) varieties of susṛūṣa. Now you can say pathni susṛūṣa; serving the husband, serving the wife. susṛūṣa is generally translated as service, but the real meaning of the word susṛūṣa is: srōthum iccha; the root sru is to hear, to listen; and the suffix, ṣa is desire; susṛūṣa is desire to listen to Gīta teaching. So that is susṛūṣa.

And if that desire is not, even if you come and sit here; but you will be not hear. This is what happens when you force someone from your family and bring to the class; So somebody comes as a guest; you cannot leave them and come and so you bring them here; but that person is not interested and he will be suffering. So susṛūṣa, desire for study must be there.

4. And the fourth qualification is: anasūyaḥ. Anasūyaḥ is a non-critical mind; never approach the scriptures with a motive of criticising or finding fault with the scriptures. Just as the atheistic people, just as the nāsthikas, DMK or the DK people will study the vēdās, the Gīta; their aim is to find fault with them. Never approach that attitude; you will be the loser; and therefore anasūyaḥ means a healthy attitude of shradda, the scriptures are valid; And if I reverentially approach I will be benefitted; the scriptures are valid and if I approach reverentially, the scriptures will bless me. That positive attitude is called anasūyaḥ; this is not only required for Gīta; for any pursuit in life; even when you approach a doctor, if you do not have faith in the doctor, even the best medicine will not cure.

And if you have got faith in the doctor, even if he gives a dummy medicine; water injection, this doctor if he gives, I am cured instantly, that attitude is called śraddhaḥ. These are the four important qualifications.

And Lord Kṛṣṇa instructs all the Gīta teachers; Lord Kṛṣṇa addresses all the Gīta teachers and says: All Gīta teachers note it: if anyone who does not have these four qualifications and if he wants to study Gīta, do not teach; just avoid them at all. It will not bless; it will only be a waste of your time.

Therefore he says; idam tē, this Gīta teaching which I have given to you, tē prōktam (you have to supply), which has been given to you, imparted to you, He Arjuna, na vāchyam; should never be given to the following people; should never be given to the following people. And who are the people whom it should not be given?

athapskaya na vāchyam; the one who does not have discipline; and that too religious and spiritual discipline; and if you ask me what is religious and spiritual discipline, the answer is care of 17th chapter.

In 17th chapter, 3 types of āhāra, 3 types of yajña, 3 types of tapas also, kāyika tapaha, vāchikam tapaha, mānasam tapah; Not only that; sātvikam tapaḥ; rājasam tapaḥ and tāmasam tapaḥ; six types of tapas were mentioned in the 17th chapter. Those people who at least attempt to follow that; may not be able to follow 100%, at least there must be a sincere attempt to follow. Those disciplines, through those people, those who do not even attempt; never give the Gīta teaching.

Similarly na abhaktāya (add ah to everything) abhaktāya na vāchyam. Never give this Gīta to an atheistic person; abhaktā means who is a non-devotee; who is a nāsthika; that person also you do not give; kadācana; at any time, he will only criticise. Somebody asked; Kṛṣṇa advises all the people to be humble; never to be arrogant; never to talk to of oneself, amānitvam, adambitvam; never glorify yourselves, be humble, He says; and in the entire Gīta Kṛṣṇa is talking about His Glory; this angle I did not know; how they think; Kṛṣṇa is all the time talking about his glory only; that means Kṛṣṇa is the most arrogant person in the world; in the 10th chapter throughout He talks about his vibūthi, 11th chapter He talks about himself. Therefore Kṛṣṇa is arrogant; therefore you should not study Gīta. Thus if he has a perverted mind; anything you can interpret wrong. In fact after I say this you also may get that idea and say that it is correct. What is wrong? Kṛṣṇa is arrogant. Remember, when you talk about your glory; identifying yourselves with Brahman, I, as brahman, you talk the glory, it is a fact, it is not arrogance. Identified with the body mind complex, as an Individual ahaṁkāra, if you talk about your glory, it is glory. We should know the difference what is fact and what is arrogance.

Therefore ābhaktāya na vācyam na cā śuśrūṣavē vācyam. Never give this teaching to one who is not interested in learning; not only it is true for Gīta for anything if a person does not have interest, how can you talk to that person. In fact, if you forcibly talk, next time, he sees you from a distance, he will take a different route, even if it means taking one mile extra.

Therefore never talk to one who is not interested in listening and ultimately, yaha mam abhyasuyathi; that person who criticises, finds fault with me and my teaching, he is also unfit to listen to Gīta; therefore these four people you never teach; on the other hand; those who have tapas, bhakthi, śuśrūṣa and anasūya, you give this knowledge.

Verse 18.68

य इमं परमं गुह्यं मद्भक्तेष्वभिधास्यति ।
भक्तिं मयि परां कृत्वा मामेवैष्यत्यसंशयः ॥ १८.६८ ॥

ya idaṁ paramaṁ guhyaṁ madbhaktēṣvabhidhāsyati |
bhaktiṁ mayi parāṁ kṛtvā māmēvaiṣyatyaśaṁśayaḥ || 18.68 ||

कृत्वा परां भक्तिम् kṛtvā parāṁ bhaktim with supreme devotion मयि mayi towards ME, यः अभिधास्यति ya: abhidhāsyati he who imparts इमं परमं गुह्यम् imaṁ paramaṁ guhyam this supreme secret मद्भक्तेषु madbhaktēṣu to my devotees एष्यति eṣyati shall reach माम् एव mām ēva ME alone असंशयः aśaṁśayaḥ there is no doubt.

68. With supreme devotion towards ME, he who imparts this supreme secret to MY devotees, shall reach ME alone. There is no doubt.

In the following slōkā, Kṛṣṇa is glorifying three types of people, by saying that all these groups of people are dear to me. Even though everyone is dear to the Lord, these three groups are very dear; Who are they; No.1; anyone who teaches Bhagavat Gīta to other people is dear to me; a Gīta teacher, a Gīta guru is dear to me, Now you will be jealous of me!; do not worry; three groups are there;

Next one is a Gīta student is very dear to me; every Gīta student is very dear to me; this is the second group.

And the third group is even a casual Gīta listener is dear to me; that means one who just comes and sits in the class; whether he understands or does not understand; the one who casually sits in the class, even that person he is dear and great and will get benefit.

Therefore, teacher, the student and a casual listener all the three are glorified here; and of these three also; who is the dearest one? Unfortunately or fortunately Kṛṣṇa says a Gīta teacher is very very dear to me; because he is doing the work which I want to do. In fact, I took avathāra for spreading and reviving the vēdic wisdom and since all the Gīta ācāryas are assisting me in the preservation and propagation of the sanatana dharma, which is the aim of the Lord, Kṛṣṇa says they are all my group and therefore they are very very dear to me. Look at the slōkā; yaha imaṁ paramam guhyam abhidasyathi.

Suppose a person teaches or shares this most secret wisdom, Now and then Kṛṣṇa will say secret secret, etc. because when one says secret, we are curious; that is the human tendency and therefore to generate the interest; and therefore the paramam guhyam the great secret of self-knowledge; what is secret is sacred also; the most sacred spiritual wisdom, suppose a person shares with whom; mat bhaktasu, who has all the four qualifications; bhaktha represents those who have all the four qualifications; bhakthi, tapas, śuśrūṣa and anasūya; to those people, if a person shares, and how does he shares, bhakthim mayi param kṛtham; with great reverence; indirectly Kṛṣṇa is instructing every Gīta ācārya; when you share this knowledge, do not be arrogant; remember that it is a teaching of the Lord; therefore, with that reverence a teacher should impart. Not only śiṣya should have bhakthi; guru also should have bhakthi; therefore param bhakthim; and guru's bhakthi is of which type of bhakthi; out of the four; arta, artārthi, jijñāsu, jñāni; the fourth type, jñāni. Therefore param bhakthi; cathurthim bhakthi; advaita bhakthim kṛtva. Suppose a person shares; māmēvaiṣyatyaśamśayaḥ; he is definitely liberated and he will become one with me. That means he will attain jīvan mukthi and vidēha mukthi.

न च तस्मान्मनुष्येषु कश्चिन्मे प्रियकृत्तमः ।
भविता न च मे तस्माद् अन्यः प्रियतरो भुवि ॥ १८.६९ ॥

na ca tasmānmanuṣyēṣu kaścinnē priyakṛttamaḥ |
bhavitā na ca mē tasmādanyaḥ priyatarō bhuvi || 18.69 ||

च ca Moreover मनुष्येषु manuṣyēṣu among the people न कश्चित् na kaścit there is no one प्रियकृत्तम् मे priyakṛttam me who does a dearer service to ME तस्मात् tasmāt than him न च भविता na ca bhavitā nor will there be अन्यः भूवि anyaḥ bhūvi another on earth प्रियतरः priyatarāḥ who does a dearer service to Me, मे तस्मात् mē tasmāt than him.

69. Moreover, there is no one among the people who does a dearer service to ME than him, nor will there be another on earth who does a dearer service to ME than him.

And in this verse, Kṛṣṇa places a Gīta teacher or Gīta instructor as the greatest and the dearest person. For he says; मनुष्येषु सः प्रियकृत्तमा manuṣyēṣu saḥ priyakṛttama; saḥ means what? Whoever preaches or shares the Gīta wisdom with other people, he is manuṣyēṣu, among all the human beings, priyakṛttama, he is the dearest person to me; because he is doing the dearest work of mine. Bhagavān does many things;

परित्राणाय साधूनां विनाशाय च दुष्कृताम् |
धर्मसंस्थापनार्थाय सम्भवामि युगे युगे || ४- ८ ||

paritrāṇāya sādḥūnām vināśāya ca duṣkṛtām|
dharmasam sthāpanārthāya sambhavāmi yugē yugē||8||

but among various avathāra karmas, the dearest job for the Lord is perpetuation of the v̄edic tradition; Because of perpetuation of this teaching alone is the perpetuation of dharma; perpetuation of harmony, perpetuation of peace and therefore he is doing a work which is dearest to me, and therefore he himself is dearest to me;

And not only he is dearest; He says in the future also; there will be no one in the future dearer to me, than a Gīta ācārya; therefore bhagavad Gītā ca; in future also; there will not be anyone else anyaḥ, anyone else;

Priyatarah; who will be dearer to me than the Gīta ācārya.

From this also, you can also get a note; What is that? If there is a chance, catch hold of some victim; someone, pray for him first and share whatever knowledge you gather, you share with other person. It is Brahma yajña and Bhagavān will be very very happy. svadhyāya pravacanē ca; these two are our duties; only then the knowledge will be perpetuated. Therefore bhuvī in this world, there is no one who is dearer to me.

Hereafter the student has to be glorified; which we will do in the next class; so that you will come.

Hari Om

238 Chapter 18, Verses 70-78

ॐ

With the 66th verse, sarvadharmān parityajya of the 18th chapter, Lord Kṛṣṇa has formally concluded His Gīta teaching to Arjuna. And from the 67th verse onwards we are getting some winding up verses consisting of four topics.

Firstly, Kṛṣṇa talks about the sampradāya vidhiḥ; the rules for teaching the Gīta and the learning of the Gīta. What are the conditions for the successful transference of Gīta from a guru to a śiṣya. In short qualifications for Gīta study. We call it sampradāya vidhiḥ; this is one topic.

And the next topic is the glorification of Gīta ācāryaḥ; the teacher of the Bhagavat Gīta, guru sthuthiḥ.

Then the next topic we get is not only the guru is great; as I said in the last class, the śiṣyas are also really great; therefore śiṣya stuthi; the glorification of the student.

and finally upasamhārah; the conclusion in which Sañjaya comes and completes the discourse formally.

Of these four topics, we have completed the first topic, viz., the qualifications required and Lord Kṛṣṇa mentioned four of them in the 67th verse, and they are tapas, bhakthi, śuśrūṣa and anasūyaḥ.

And after that, in the two verses, 68 and 69, Lord Kṛṣṇa glorifies the Gīta teacher; whoever dedicates his life for the transmission or the propagation of the Gīta teaching; these two verses also we completed in the last class.

And Lord Kṛṣṇa said that the Gīta teacher would get two-fold result:

-one is of course he will attain liberation; he will merge into Me.

-and the second is even while living; that Gīta teacher is the dearest to Me; प्रियकृत्तमः priyakṛttamaḥ. This is the glorification of the Gīta teacher.

Now we have to see the glorification of the student; which is more important for you. Therefore I will not dwell upon the teacher glorification too much; I will come to the student glorification, which you are all waiting for.

Verse 18.70

अध्येष्यते च य इमं धर्म्यं संवादमावयोः ।
ज्ञानयज्ञेन तेनाहं इष्टः स्यामिति मे मतिः ॥ १८.७० ॥

adhyēṣyatē ca ya imaṁ dharmyaṁ saṁvādamāvayōḥ |
jñānayajñēna tēnāhamiṣṭaḥ syāmiti mē matiḥ || 18.70 ||

च ca moreover ज्ञानयज्ञेन jñānayajñēna through Jñāna yajñā अहं स्याम् इष्टः ahaṁ syām iṣṭaḥ
I will be worshipped तेन tēna by him यः अध्येष्यते yaḥ adhyēṣyatē who will study इमं धर्म्यं
संवादम् imaṁ dharmyaṁ saṁvādam this righteous dialogue आवयोः āvayōḥ between us
इति मे मतिः iti me matiḥ this is my view

70. Moreover through Jñāna yajñēna I will be worshipped by him who will study this righteous dialogue between us -- this is My view.

These two verses 70 and 71 are śiṣya sthuthi or śiṣya mahimā. And Lord Kṛṣṇa divides the students into two categories. One is a qualified and serious student of the Gīta; Serious does not mean 102 degree temperature. Serious means committed student, who is uttama variety; serious qualified student;

And the second type of student is unprepared and therefore only a casual student; So the one whose approach to the Gīta is a casual approach, such a student is the inferior is the second one -and the study of the qualified student, Kṛṣṇa calls adhyāyanam;

-and the study of the unqualified student Kṛṣṇa calls śṛavaṇam.

adhyāyanam means serious systematic study, śṛavaṇam means casual hearing, with the simple of thought of let some noble thoughts come to me; etc. so that is also another approach; casual, hobbish approach.

And Kṛṣṇa says both types of students are great and both are going to get great results; and you know what are the results; the higher students would get mōkṣa itself; and the casual student will get svarga. Definitely come to the class; whatever be the type of student, minimum promise is svarga, wonderful; and maximum promise is mōkṣa.

Kṛṣṇa says; Look at the slōkā; ya imaṁ saṁvādam adhyēṣyatē; suppose a qualified and a serious student studies the Bhagavat Gīta carefully, with attention and what is this Gīta; āvayōḥ saṁvādam, which is in the form of dialogue between Kṛṣṇa and Arjuna

And what type of dialogue it is? dharmyaṁ saṁvādam, dharmyaṁ means that which is based on the vēdic-teaching; any teaching of the vēdās is called dharmāḥ; and dharmyaṁ means that which is keeping with the vēdic-teaching; and the Bhagavat Gīta is not an independent philosophy of Kṛṣṇa, Kṛṣṇa himself has repeatedly admitted; Hey Arjuna I do not have a new philosophy, the vēdic wisdom has deteriorated; I am only reviving, resuscitating the vēdic-teaching in the new name of Bhagavat Gīta. Therefore dharmyaṁ means that which is in keeping with the vēdic-teaching. Such a great dialogue whoever seriously, systematically, regularly studies adhyēṣyatē. And what is he practicing, jñāna yajñēna, he is practicing a great yajña, yaghā called jñāna-yajña, where the fire is not the local fire; but it is the fire of knowledge.

In the Gīta class, what we are kindling is not the local fire; but we are kindling the jñānāgni; we saw in the Gīta itself; jñānāgni sarva karmāṇi bhasmasāt kurutē; And therefore this is called jñāna-yajña, in which the oblation is ignorance; we are not offering the local oblations, but our ignorance is offered; ignorance based confusions are offered; ignorance based ahaṁkāra, the ego is offered and every student is practising jñāna-yajña.

And in the fourth chapter Lord Kṛṣṇa said jñāna-yajña is the greatest yāgaḥ.

श्रेयान्द्रव्यमयाद्यज्ञज्ञानयज्ञ प्रन्तपः.... ॥४.३३॥

śrēyān dravyamayādyajñājjñānayajñāḥ parantapa |... 4.33

Compared to all the other yāgās that people do, this jñāna-yajña is the greatest yajña and every serious student is practising jñāna-yajña ḥ and Kṛṣṇa says through that jñāna-yajña every student is worshipping the Lord. Even though there is no photo; even though, there is no idol; even though there is no picture; in this class also, we are all worshipping the Lord alone.

Therefore Kṛṣṇa says aham iṣṭaḥ; iṣṭaḥ means pūjithaḥ; I am worshipped. It is an invisible form of worship; because materials are not offered; the invisible ego is offered; And not only he is practising the greatest yajña, for this yajña the phalam is mōkṣa itself. That mōkṣa phalam is not mentioned in this verse; we have to add that; not only such a student worshipping Lord Kṛṣṇa says, for that jñāna-yajña is going to attain both jīvan mukthi as well as vidēha mukthi. Thus every serious Gīta student is a muktha puruṣaḥ; and whether you are a serious student or not; you have to decide; I do not want to pass a judgment on you. Now Kṛṣṇa is going to talk about the next level of the student, the casual and unprepared student. What will happen to him? Kṛṣṇa says:

श्रद्धावाननसूयश्च शृणुयादपि यो नरः ।
सोऽपि मुक्तः शुभान् लोकान् प्राप्नुयात्पुण्यकर्म्माम् ॥ १८.७१ ॥

śraddhāvānanasūyaśca śṛṇuyādapi yō naraḥ |
sō'pi muktaḥ śubhān lokān prāpnuyāt puṇyakarmaṇām || 18.71 ||

अपि सः नरः api saḥ naraḥ even that person यः अपि श्रृणुयात् yaḥ api śṛṇuyāt who merely hears (this), श्रद्धावान् śraddhāvān with faith, च अनसूयः ca anasūyaḥ and without criticism मुक्तः muktaḥ becomes free (from sins), प्राप्नुयात् prāpnuyāt he shall attain शुभान् लोकान् śubhān lōkān the sacred worlds पुण्यकर्म्मणाम् puṇyakarmāṇām belonging to the people of righteous action.

71. Even that person who merely hears this with faith and without criticism becomes free from sins. HE shall attain the sacred worlds belonging to the people of the righteous actions.

Suppose there is a casual student, who does not have all the qualifications, who is not very serious about mōkṣaḥ itself. There are many people who openly confess, Swamiji, I want to make it clear that I am not interested in mōkṣa kīkṣaḥ, etc. Thus there are many people who have not understood or looked into the full significance of mōkṣa and therefore they are not interested in the ultimate spiritual goal; but they come to Gīta for some practical worldly benefits or at least to some efficiency in their profession; because Gīta promises that also; yōgaḥ karmasu kauśalam; they will all quote that; there are many people who prescribe Gīta for lowering the blood pleasure.

They are using the Gīta for whatever think; those people who do not have mumukṣatvam and have a casual approach, suppose such a student listens; but even though he is casual in his approach, he has got śraddhā and anasūya; otherwise he cannot even come to the class; he may not be interested in mōkṣa; but he has a reverence for the Gīta and the Lord. Therefore Kṛṣṇa says this person is casual, but the śraddhāvān; he has faith in the efficacy, in the validity of the Gīta.

And anasūyaḥ ca; one who does not approach the Gīta critically; with the motive of finding fault; that anasūyaḥ ca; suppose such a person śṛṇuyāt api saḥ naraḥ; he is only casually listening; and not even fully, listens to 10 minutes and then travels all over the world, mentally, not physically, suppose such a casual listening takes place.

Kṛṣṇa says: saḥ api, even for such a student.

I have told you before how one old Andhra Telugu lady regularly attending my Gīta classes, without knowing one single English word. But she would regularly come because her faith is that the Gīta sound even if it falls in the ears, it is puṇyam. And I knew that she did not understand English, when one day, she brought to me a safety pin and I enquired for what? And she said that you are adjusting your angavasthram on and off, why can't you put a safety pin. Because she does not understand the language, and therefore she has been watching what all bhāratānāṭyānāṃ mudrāḥ I am doing.

And therefore even for that Telugu lady; anyone who sits here and even sleeping in this class does not matter; no problem.

saḥ api muktaḥ, he will be freed from all the pāpas for this puṇya karma; such a śṛgavaṇam will not come under jñāna-yōga, it will come under karma-yōga or puṇya karma; and for that puṇya karma which he does, muktaḥ, he gets rid of his pāpam.

and śubhān lokān prāpnuyāt; and after death he will get a better next janma; śubhān lokān means superior lōkā, puṇya lōkāḥ.

And what type of lōkāḥ, they are puṇyam karmanam, which higher lōkāḥ can be attained by doing big yāgāḥ; sōmayāgam; rudra ēkādaśini; athi rudram; maha rudram; for all those big big rituals, whatever higher lōkā will come, the same higher lōkā you can get without doing any ritual, if you are listening to Gīta. Who says? Kṛṣṇa. Do not ask me; Kṛṣṇa himself promises. Therefore svarga is the phalam for casual śṛgavaṇam. Thus in these two verses 70 and 71, śiṣya sthuthi has been done.

Now Lord Kṛṣṇa is curious to find out which category of student Arjuna is and Kṛṣṇa must be very curious, because he has only one student! 18 chapters and only one student and Arjuna is left off, nobody else to listen; Compared to that, my lot is better. Therefore Kṛṣṇa is asking Arjuna what category you are:

Verse 18.72

कच्चिदेतच्छ्रुतं पार्थ त्वयैकाग्रेण चेतसा ।
कच्चिदज्ञानसंमोहः प्रनष्टस्ते धनञ्जय ॥ १८.७२ ॥

Kaccidētacchrutam pārtha tvayaikāgrēṇa cētasā |
kaccidajñānasammōhaḥ pranaṣṭastē dhanañjaya || 18.72 ||

पार्थ pārtha Oh Arjuna ! कच्चिद् एतत् kaccida ētat has this श्रुतम् śrutam been heard त्वया tvayā by you एकाग्रेण चेतसा ekāgrēṇa cētasā with one-pointed mind? कच्चित् ते kaccit tē has your अज्ञानसंमोहः ajñānasammōhaḥ delusion born of ignorance प्रनष्टः pranaṣṭaḥ gone completely धनञ्जय dhanañjaya Oh Arjuna?

72. Oh Arjuna ! Has this be heard by you with one-pointed mind? Has your delusion born of ignorance gone completely, Oh Arjuna?

So He Pārtha, Arjuna, did you listen to my teaching sincerely as an uttama adhikāri.

ēkāgreṇa cētasā śrutam kaccid? Pranaṣṭaḥ kaścid? Did you listen to my teaching ekāgreṇa cētasā? With one pointed mind; with total attention; wholeheartedly did you listen to my teaching.

And if you have been a serious student; then the result that you get will be ajñāna nāśaḥ jñāna prāp̥thi and therefore Kṛṣṇa asks, as a serious student; did you destroy your self-ignorance. Ajñānasammōhaḥ pranaṣṭaḥ kaccid?; Here also kaccid is question mark? Did you ignorance and ignorance caused conflicts. and what is the basic conflict Arjuna had? I hope that you have not forgotten the first chapter; whether to fight or not to fight; so ignorance and ignorance based conflict; did all of them pranaṣṭaḥ end; hey Dhanjaya; hey Arjuna.

I know that you are going to get definitely svarga phalam; but a true teacher does not a student to get an inferior svarga; but the teacher wants the student to get the sakshat mōkṣa itself. Arjuna are you a muktha puruṣa? In short, otherwise, am I a qualified teacher? Remember, it partly reflects upon the efficiency of the teacher also. Therefore Kṛṣṇa is concerned about himself as the jagat guru, Gītācārya. Therefore Arjuna, I am yearning to know whether you are muktaḥ or not.

Then Arjuna has to answer; for a change, Kṛṣṇa is very curious. All ears on what Arjuna is going to tell and thank God Arjuna says Kṛṣṇa I am a superior student and you are a great teacher and the communication has been successful and my ignorance is gone and conflict is also gone and thank God Arjuna tells that; if Arjuna does not tell that; Chapter 19 will have to start; OK. Whether Chapter 19 is required is not wholly depends on Arjuna's answer.

Verse 18.73

अर्जुन उवाच --
नष्टो मोहः स्मृतिर्लब्धा त्वत्प्रसादान्मयाच्युत ।
स्थितोऽस्मि गतसन्देहः करिष्ये वचनं तव ॥ १८.७३ ॥

Arjuna uvāca
naṣṭō mōhaḥ smṛtirlabdhā tvatprasādānmayā'cyuta |
sthitō'smi gatasandēhaḥ kariṣyē vacanaṃ tava || 18.73 ||

अर्जुन उवाच Arjuna uvāca Arjuna said ---मोहः नष्टः mōhaḥ naṣṭaḥ (My) delusion is gone
स्मृतिः लब्धा smṛtiḥ labdhā and knowledge has been gained मया mayā by me त्वत्प्रसादात् tvatprasādāt by Your grace अस्मि स्थितः asmi sthitaḥ – I remain गतसन्देहः gatasandēhaḥ free from all doubts करिष्ये kariṣyē I shall carry out तव वचनम् tava vacanam Your instruction अच्युत acyuta Oh infallible Lord.

73. Arjuna said --- (My) delusion is gone and knowledge has been gained by me by your grace. I remain free from all doubts. I shall carry out Your instruction, Oh Lord !.

In this verse Arjuna gives the crucial answer for which Kṛṣṇa is curiously waiting, which Arjuna is aware. So he says; Gone is my delusion; he could have said: My delusion is gone, If he says My delusion; still Kṛṣṇa has to wait another extra second, because the answer could have been "My delusion 'is not gone". Therefore knowing Kṛṣṇa's impatience perhaps, Arjuna instead of saying delusion is gone; he says gone is my delusion. Just as Āñjanēya said; கண்டேன் ஸீதையை; kaṇṭēṇ sītaiyai. If he had said Sitaiyai first, there would have been an extra second to confirm the seeing or even the non-seeing கண்டேன் என்று ஆகலாம்; காணவில்லை என்றும் ஆகலாம். And Rāma would have to have waited for that extra second. And therefore he says; Kanden Sitaiyai; There: Dristah; here naṣṭaḥ. Naṣṭaḥ mean gone; mōhaḥ, both my delusion as well as ignorance; ajñānam, and delusion, in technical language; mōhaḥ is called adhyāsaḥ; ajñānam and adhyāsa, both of them are gone, for me.

And how did the ignorance go? Ignorance can go only by one method; what is that? By the arrival of knowledge; darkness can go only on the arrival of light; similarly, ignorance cannot go by the practice of śiraṣanam, so that the ignorance can be crushed; so when you stand on your head, the ignorance gets crushed; it would not work; perhaps because of extra blood circulation, ignorance may get more flourished; remember, ignorance can go only by knowledge; smṛtiḥ labdhā; knowledge has been gained by me; whenever we say knowledge, remember, jīvātma paramātma aikya jñānam.

In the context of vādānta, jñānam means only jīvātma paramātma aikya jñānam; that is called smṛtiḥ; normally the word smṛtiḥ is memory, in this context, smṛtiḥ means knowledge.

And then Arjuna is worried. If he claims that he has gained knowledge and ignorance is gone and it may lead to arrogance; vidya garvaḥ can be the worst type of ego or arrogance. All other arrogance has got a cure; but arrogance born out of knowledge; there is no cure; therefore Arjuna is worried it may lead to arrogance, therefore he adds: Hey Kṛṣṇa, if I have gained knowledge and my delusion is gone; by your grace.

And what do you mean by the grace of the Lord in the Bhagavad-Gīta? The grace is only in the form of systematic teaching.

There are so many other types of grace, cakṣusu anugraḥ; sparśa anugraḥ; blessing through touch and sight, varieties of prasāda or anugraḥ are mentioned; if knowledge has to come; the prasāda or grace has to be only in the form of systematic teaching.

As I have repeatedly said, if knowledge can be transferred by touch, Kṛṣṇa could have easily done that in the battle field itself; which is very convenient, like touching the head like Bhasmāsura and Kṛṣṇa did not touch; Kṛṣṇa did not give knowledge through sight. From that it is clear; jñānam can be transferred only by systematic teaching. Perhaps the powers can be transferred; siddhis can be transferred; jñānam can never be transferred; if a shortcut is there; in all the colleges the physics teacher can ask all the physics students to stand in a line and keep the hand on the head, and say over. It is not happening. Our problem is in spite of teaching, one does not understand; how can just 'seeing' give you knowledge; Therefore remember, guru anugraha is teaching. Therefore tvat prasāda is equal to tvat upadēśāt or tvat bhōdhana. It has gone; my ignorance and delusion have gone and therefore sthitō'smi gatasandēśaḥ. Now I do not have any doubt whether fighting is dharma or adharma. That was his doubt.

पृच्छामि त्वाम् धर्मसंमूढचेताः ।
यच्छ्रेयः स्यान्निश्चितं ब्रूहि तन्मे.... ॥२.७॥

pṛcchāmi tvāṃ dharmasammūdhacētāḥ yacchrēyaḥ syānniścitaṃ brūhi tanmē..... 2.7

I do not have any conflict, I have decided to fight this righteous war. Therefore Arjuna says: tava vacanam karisyē; I shall follow your instructions; if I am an ajñāni, I have to do my duty for the citta śuddhi, if I am a jñāni, I have to do my duty for I do not know whether you remember, we saw in the third chapter, a jñāni has to continue to do his or her (that also has to be added) duties for lōka sangrahaḥ. Either way, you cannot escape from the duty. Kṛṣṇa has taught and therefore Arjuna says: I will fight this war, even though the duty happens to be unpleasant duty.

And when this was heard, Kṛṣṇa got liberation a second time as it were! Even though Kṛṣṇa is already liberated, He was in great ānanda on hearing this: My effort has fructified. So with this Kṛṣṇa also became silent, because Kṛṣṇa has nothing to teach, Arjuna also become silent because Arjuna has no more questions; if both of them become silent, what to do? Sañjaya, the master of ceremonies, comes and concludes the Gīta saṁvāda.

Verse 18.74

सञ्जय उवाच --

इत्यहं वासुदेवस्य पार्थस्य च महात्मनः ।

संवादमिममश्रौषम् अद्भुतम् रोमहर्षणम् ॥ १८.७४ ॥

Sañjaya uvāca --

ityāhaṁ vāsudēvasya pārthasya ca mahātmanah |

saṁvādamimamaśrauṣamadbhutaṁ rōmaharṣaṇam || 18.74 ||

सञ्जय उवाच Sañjaya uvāca Sañjaya said --- इति iti thus अहम् अश्रौषम् aham aśrauṣam I heard इमम्, अद्भुतम् imamṁ adbhutam this wonderful रोमहर्षणं संवादम् rōmaharṣaṇam saṁvādam and thrilling dialogue, (lit.-making the hair stand on their ends) वासुदेवस्य vāsudēvasya between Lord Kṛṣṇa च पार्थस्य महात्मनः ca pārthasya mahātmanah and Arjuna, the noble one

74. Sañjaya said --- thus I heard this wonderful and thrilling dialogue between Lord Kṛṣṇa and Arjuna, the noble one.

So now the scene has changed; we are no more in the battlefield; now we are in front of Dhṛtarāṣṭra and Sañjaya; because Sañjaya is reporting the whole thing to the blind Dhṛtarāṣṭra. Therefore Sañjaya says: Hey Dhṛtarāṣṭra, hey Rajan, not only Arjuna was fortunate enough to receive the Gīta teaching; indirectly, I was also blessed enough to receive this teaching; because Vyāsā had given a special telepathy by which Sañjaya could know everything that is happening. Not only what is happening in the battlefield; what is happening even in the mind of Arjuna, Sañjaya could see.

And therefore Sañjaya expresses his gratitude; iti in this manner; imamṁ saṁvādam aham aśrauṣam; I heard this beautiful sacred dialogue which took place between Vasudēvasya Parthasyaca; between Vāsudēva Lord Kṛṣṇa and Pārtha, Arjuna.

And what type of Arjuna and Vāsudēva; Mahātmana, the great one, the glorious one, And this mahātmana adjective can be added to both Kṛṣṇa and Arjuna, Kṛṣṇa is of course Mahatma, the great one. Now Arjuna is also Mahatma because, he was fortunate enough to receive the teachings straight from the Lord. Straight from horse's mouth; Straight from Hayagriva; horse-headed Lord. Here Kṛṣṇa was not horse-headed; just used that expression because in English we have that idiom; straight from the horses' mouth; and what type of dialogue; adbutam; there are no words to describe it; it is wonder of all wonders; most wonderful; and also rōmaharṣaṇam; it is so wonderful that even my physical body feels the thrill and my hairs on the body are standing on end; they say horripulation taking place to indicate the extent of his feeling. So this thrilling and wonderful dialogue I also overheard;

And how could I get this capacity? Sañjaya says I am indebted to Vyāsācārya, because of whose grace alone, I developed this extra ordinary power; ESP. Extra sensory perception I got.

vyāsaprasādācchrutavān. I could hear this dialogue only because of Vyāsācārya who blessed me with Divya cakṣu. Just as Kṛṣṇa blessed Arjuna with divya cakṣu in the 11th chapter, Vyāsā has blessed Sañjaya with this divya cakṣu; Therefore by Vyāsā's grace, śrutavān, I could hear,

What? ētat param guhyam; this supremely secret knowledge, because it is not easily available; all types of courses are available all over the world; Name a science is available; but brahma vidya is the rarest teaching and such a rare teaching, which is secret, and therefore only sacred; the upaniṣad says: śravanayabhir bhahubhir yōna labhyaḥ; many people are yearning for this teaching; because of some obstacle or other, because of some obstacle or other; and I always observe; interesting teacher; wherever I take class; the immediately surrounding students does not come; exceptions are there; I was taking class in some quarters; they will come from so many places, including from Kancheepuram; but people from that colony would not come. At least to see whether chundal, vadai is available; even if it is closely available; we should have the mind to make use of. Just as they say: the one who lives on the shores of Gaṅga, rarely takes bath in it.

Therefore Sañjaya says: I was blessed enough to get this rare and sacred teaching; And I have got extra good fortune because I did not hear from a local human being but I listened from sākṣāt bhagavān himself; Yogēsvara Kṛṣṇa : From Lord who is the Lord of the all the yōgas; all the teachings; I heard this yōgam; this word yōgam should be connected with guhyam param of the first line; ētat param guhyam yōgam; Yōga here is the teaching; I heard and sākṣāt kathayataḥ; Is not an indirect teaching; but it is the direct teaching from the Lord.

And why did Arjuna get the teaching? Not Bhīṣma, Drōṇa, Karṇa, Dharmaputra, people have big debate to find out why Arjuna got the teaching; Patti Mandram, as they look for extra ordinary and rare reasons; but the reason is very simple, Arjuna got the teaching because he asked for it; only that; śiṣyaste'haṁ śādhi mām tvām prapannam. I am surrendering; please teach me; he said; those who ask, it will be given; so sākṣāt svayam kathayataḥ That is why pārthāya pratibōdhitām bhagavatā nārāyaṇēna svayam.

राजन् rājan Oh King ! संस्मृत्य संस्मृत्य saṁsmṛtya saṁsmṛtya remembering again and again इमम् अद्भुतम् imam adbhutam this wonderful पुण्यं संवादम् puṇyam saṁvādam (and) sacred dialogue केशवार्जुनयोः kēśavārjunayōḥ between Lord Kṛṣṇa and Arjuna, हृष्यामि hr̥ṣyāmi I rejoice च मुहुः मुहुः ca muḥuḥ muḥuḥ again and again

76. Oh King ! remembering again and again this wonderful (and) sacred dialogue between Lord Kṛṣṇa and Arjuna, I rejoice again and again.

Sañjaya says Hey Dhṛtarāṣṭra, when I look back and think of my good fortune, I am extremely ecstatic about that; muḥuḥ muḥuḥ hr̥ṣyāmi; I feel the ecstasy, extreme happiness; when I look back to the teaching, that I received; saṁsmṛtya saṁsmṛtya, when I again bring back to my mind;

What? Imāṁ adbhutam puṅyam saṁvadam, this wonderful sacred dialogue, when I go through flashback; the more I think of it; the more I feel thrilled and what type of dialogue?

kēśavārjunayoḥ, the dialogue took place between Lord Kṛṣṇa and Arjuna, aham hr̥ṣyāmi; like people having the reminiscences; like if you have gone to Kailas Manasarovar; Badrinath or Kedarnath; world tour even; when you look back and enjoy, reminiscences, Sañjaya provides here.

Then one question that people ask is if you like the Bhagavad-Gīta very much; tell me among the 18 chapters, which one you like the most. Everyone has this question. Like in a movie, which scene you liked the most; similarly, here also, Sañjaya tells, I liked all the chapters, Sañjaya's choice is the 11th chapter, which is said in the next verse.

तच्च संस्मृत्य संस्मृत्य रूपमत्यद्भुतं हरेः ।

77. Moreover, great is my wonder as I remember again and again that extremely wonderful (universal) form of Lord Kṛṣṇa, and I rejoice again and again, Oh King.

Hey Rajan, Dhṛtarāṣṭra; when I look back into every chapter, of course Kṛṣṇa did not teach in the form of chapters, remember, when Kṛṣṇa taught Arjuna, he did not say prathamōdhya or dvidhya. It is Vyāsācārya who compiled and presented in this form, for the sake of communication I am using that expression;

When I look back into the entire teaching; harēḥ atyadbhutam rūpam; what strikes my mind; what is well itched in my mind, is harēḥ atyadbhutam rūpam, the wonderful viśva rūpam of the Lord; which the Lord is the limitless one; consisting of all forms and names; that alone comes to my mind. And when I think of this viśva rūpam, mahan vismayaḥ me; I am wonderstruck; I am stunned; I am thrilled; I am stupefied; I am overwhelmed, I have no words to describe. So vismayaḥ means āścaryam. He Rajan, Dhṛtarāṣṭra, and hr̥ṣyāmi ca punaḥ punaḥ; I bring that vision to my mind again and again and I enjoy again and again. So with this Sañjaya also has expressed his feelings. Now Sañjaya concludes the whole Gīta in the last verse.

Verse 18.78

यत्र योगेश्वरः कृष्णा यत्र पार्थो धनुर्धरः ।
तत्र श्रीर्विजयो भूतिः ध्रुवा नीतिर्मतिर्मम ॥ १८.७८ ॥

yatra yōgēśvaraḥ kṛṣṇō yatra pāṛthō dhanurdharaḥ |
tatra śrīrvijayō bhūtirdhruvā nītimatirmama || 18.78 ||

यत्र yatra wherever कृष्णः kṛṣṇaḥ there is Kṛṣṇa योगेश्वरः yōgēśvaraḥ the Lord of Yōga यत्र पार्थः pāṛthaḥ yatra and wherever there is Arjuna, धनुर्धरः dhanurdharaḥ the bow-wielder, तत्र tatra there (will be) ध्रुवा श्रीः dhruvā śrīḥ permanent wealth विजयः vijayaḥ victory भूतिः bhūtiḥ prosperity नीतिः nītiḥ (and) justice मम मतिः mama matiḥ this is my view

78. Wherever there is Kṛṣṇa, the Lord of Yōga and wherever there is Arjuna, the bow-wielder, there (will be) permanent wealth, victory, prosperity and justice – this is My view.

So here Sañjaya says the Gīta teaching is alive even now and at all times the Gīta teaching is alive, wherever Lord Kṛṣṇa is remembered, and wherever Arjuna is remembered; their remembrance, by the law of association, will bring the Gīta teaching.

Therefore yatra yōgēśvaraḥ kṛṣṇa; wherever Kṛṣṇa is there; as the Gīta ācāryā; as the Brahma vidya guruḥ; as the teacher of vēdānta; yōgēśvaraḥ, brahma vidya guruḥ;

and yatra pāṛthō dhanurdharaḥ; wherever Arjuna is there; wielding his bow; dhanurdharaḥ means wielding the bow, Bow represents svadharma anuṣṭānam; because of Arjuna, svadharma rakṣaṇam and dharma rakṣaṇam requires the bow and arrow.

And therefore wherever there is a person following the svadharma; so wherever such a student and a teacher are there; there the Gīta wisdom will be there; it will never die. So many thousands of years are gone; even now the Gīta is alive and kicking; What is the proof? We are still studying. Our very class is the proof the glory of the Gīta; and Kṛṣṇa says wherever Gīta teaching is there; all these benefits also will be there; the primary benefit is mōkṣa; Kṛṣṇa does not mention that because many are not interested in that. Mōkṣa they do not want.

So Kṛṣṇa enumerates the other benefits; śrīḥ means wealth; vijayaḥ; success, bhūtiḥ prosperity; all other forms of prosperity; and nītiḥ; justice or fairness; all these things, wealth, prosperity and success; and all of them will be there; iti mē matiḥ. This is my verdict; this is my observation; and all these will not be there for a short period; but dhruvā; they will be permanently present; Therefore even if you do not want mōkṣa, you are interested in money, better read Gīta; if you want to examination, better read Gīta; If you are attending an interview, better read Gīta; just reading Gīta is not enough; you have study what is required for the interview also; Read Gīta also; prepare also; success is yours; this is my verdict; who says: Sañjaya tells and therefore Gīta is ever valid.

With this the entire Bhagavad-Gīta teaching is over.

Thus, in the Upaniṣad sung by the Lord, the science of Brahma, the scripture of Yōga, the dialogue between Sri Kṛṣṇa and Arjuna, ends the eighteenth chapter entitled "The Yōga of Liberation", Mōkṣa sanyāsa yōga.

239 Chapter 18, Summary

ॐ

Today I will give you a summary of the 18th chapter of the Gīta. In the Bhagavat Gīta; the second-chapter and the 18th chapter are considered to be very important chapters, because Lord Kṛṣṇa summarises the entire Gīta in these two chapters. In the second-chapter, Lord Kṛṣṇa summarises the whole Gīta, as an introduction. It is an introductory summary. upakrama sañkṣēpa. And this summary given in the second-chapter, Bhagavān magnifies from the third chapter onwards, up to the 17th chapter. 3rd to the 17th is the elaboration of the 2nd chapter; and then at the time of conclusion, the Lord summarises the entire Gīta once again in the 18th chapter; it is the concluding summary; upasañhāra sañkṣēpa; Thus introductory summary; expansion and concluding summary. This is the style of the Gīta.

I have talked about this before also. When you hear the news in the radio or television; they start the news with the summary and then they elaborate the initial summary and then at the time of conclusion, they recapitulate again. Thus summary, expansion, summary is the method of any teaching. And Bhagavān adopts the same method; and therefore the 18th chapter is considered to be a very important chapter and it is the biggest chapter also, consisting of 78 verses.

And this chapter is called mōkṣa sanyāsa yōgā; the chapter dealing with sanyāsa or renunciation. It is called mōkṣa sanyāsa yōgaḥ, to differentiate this chapter from the 5th chapter, the 5th chapter is also called sanyāsa yōgaḥ. To avoid confusion; the fifth chapter is called karma sanyāsa yōgaḥ and the 18th chapter is called mōkṣa sanyāsa yōgaḥ. But only we should be careful in understanding the meaning. Karma sanyāsa yōgaḥ; we know the meaning; the chapter dealing with the renunciation of karma. And then what is mōkṣa sanyāsa yōgā? The chapter dealing with the renunciation of mōkṣa? மொக்சம் வரவே இல்லயே; எங் விடறது; mōkṣa has not come, where to renounce; we have to be careful in translation; karma sanyāsa is renunciation of karma; mōkṣa sanyāsa is renunciation 'for' the sake of mōkṣa. There you cannot use 'of' for the sake of mōkṣa. This is the 18th chapter.

With this background, we will enter into the summary of the chapter. I will divide the entire chapter into five portions for the convenience of our analysis. First I will enumerate those five portions; thereafter I will summarise each part.

- The first portion is sanyāsaḥ or renunciation; sanyāsa; this is from verse No.1 to 12.
- Then the second part is from verse No.13 to 17; which Kṛṣṇa deals with ātma svarūpam; the nature of the real self; or the real nature of the Self; the nature of the real self; or the real nature of the Self; or the real nature of the real Self; whichever way you want to call it; ātma svarūpam is the second topic;
- And then from the 18th verse, up to the 40th verse; 18th to 40; Kṛṣṇa analyses six topics; six topics for analysis; or analysis of six topics; What are those six topics? I will explain later; this is just seeing the division;
- Then the fourth topic is from verse No.41 to 66; and in this portion Lord Kṛṣṇa summarises karma-yōgā and jñāna-yōgaḥ; the two yōgās which happen to be the central theme of the Gīta; the two yōgās; karma-yōgā plus jñāna yōgā; this is the fourth topic 41 to 66.
- And the fifth and final topic is the conclusion; upasamhāra; winding up of the 18th chapter; as well as the entire Gīta dialogue; this is from verse 67 to 78.

Thus sanyāsa; ātma svarūpam; analysis of six topics, two yōgās and conclusion; these are the five portions of the 18th chapter.

Now I will take up each one and give you the gist of the Lord's discussion.

The first portion is Sanyāsa. Lord Kṛṣṇa is forced to discuss the topic of Sanyāsa; because Arjuna wants a clarification regarding sanyāsa. So the chapter begins with Arjuna's question in which Arjuna asked the Lord; Hey Kṛṣṇa, is there a difference between the words Sanyāsa and tyāga? Because dictionary-wise sanyāsa also means renunciation; tyāga also means renunciation. So Arjuna asks; are they different or the same and what is the significance of the words? In short, what is sanyāsa or renunciation? Lord Kṛṣṇa explains those terms by way of answering Arjuna's question.

Here, we have to note that the word Sanyāsa and Tyāga according to Kṛṣṇa are both one and the same; they are synonymous. Sanyāsa is equal to tyāga is equal to renunciation. Then the question is what is meant by renunciation?

And this word renunciation has two meaning; one is the primary meaning, the other is the secondary meaning; one is called mukhya sanyāsa and the other is called gauna sanyāsa; primary renunciation and secondary renunciation, there are two. Primary renunciation is prescribed only for those people who have attained all the qualifications for self-knowledge; evolved students; purified students; refined students; prepared students; who are called sādhana catuṣṭaya sampanna adhikāri. For those prepared students; the scriptures talk about primary renunciation; otherwise called mukya sanyāsaḥ.

And this primary renunciation is in the form of leaving the family; leaving the society; breaking all the relationship with everyone in the society; and dropping all the possessions; all these are the meaning of primary renunciation. What does it mean? Leaving the family, leaving the society; leaving the job; you have to leave the job when you leave the society; society includes job. Leaving the family, society, job, breaking all relationships and giving up all the possessions; not even extra dress; no bank balance, this total physical giving up is called mukya sanyāsa. This is accepted and permitted for those who are advanced spiritual students.

And according to Lord Kṛṣṇa, Arjuna is not an advanced student, which is proved from the 1st chapter; he could not even think of imaginary separation from kith and kin. Where is the question of renunciation for Arjuna, when Arjuna cannot even withstand imaginary separation from Bhīṣma and Drōṇa. Therefore according to Kṛṣṇa, Arjuna is not ready for primary renunciation. Kṛṣṇa therefore discusses primary renunciation in the 18th chapter.

In this Sanyāsa portion, Kṛṣṇa quietly avoids a discussion of Mukya sanyāsa. It is called āśrama Sanyāsa; it is called kāṣāya vastra sanyāsa. That Kṛṣṇa avoids and Kṛṣṇa deals with the second sanyāsa; which is the secondary sanyāsa; compromised version, figurative sanyāsa, in Sānskrīt it is called gauna sanyāsa.

And therefore Lord Kṛṣṇa in this portion strongly advises Arjuna; Arjuna you should not give up your family. You should not give up your karma. You should not give up anything; if you give up your karma, it will be a wrong renunciation in your case; because you are not ready for renunciation. Without being ready if you renounce things, it will come under tāmāsa sanyāsa; and rājāsa sanyāsa. Improper renunciation by an immature mind is called rājāsa tāmāsa sanyāsa. Improper renunciation by an immature person which is an escapism, Kṛṣṇa calls rājāsa, tāmāsa sanyāsa.

Therefore Arjuna never take to that; therefore you be in kurukṣētra and do your duty. And if you remain in Grihasthāśrama and do your duty, and renounce your rāga dvēṣa, which are binding expectations from the society. When we are in the family, in the āśrama, in the society, our greatest problem is expectations from others; these binding expectations alone are responsible for mental turbulence. If you renounce your saṅkalpa, which are in the form of binding expectations; building castles, fantasising future; how my son is going to become, that fantasising you give up; plus 2 itself is doubtful; we go on building dreams. Avoid the saṅkalpa and that is called sātvika sanyāsa; which is the sanyāsa required for immature people. Sātvika sanyāsa, which is remaining in the society; doing the duty and avoiding binding expectations. And thus Lord Kṛṣṇa says Arjuna give up your rāgaḥ-dvēṣaḥ; fight this war; you are a sātvika karma sanyāsi.

अनिष्टमिष्टं मिश्रं च त्रिविधं कर्मणः फलम् ।
भवत्यत्यागिनां प्रेत्य न तु संन्यासिनां क्वचित् ॥ १८.१२ ॥

[Aniṣṭamiṣṭam miśram ca trividham karmaṇaḥ phalam |
bhavatyatyāginām prētya na tu sannyāsinām kvacit || 18.12 ||](#)

And if you act in this manner, whatever be the outcome of the Mahābhāratha war, you will be willing to accept the outcome without anxiety; without fear or worry; this samatvam alone is the sanyāsa, which is required for you.

So thus saṅkalpa tyāga pūrvaka svadharma anuṣṭānam, Lord Kṛṣṇa prescribed from verse No.1 up to verse No.12. This is first topic. Sanyāsa in the secondary sense of the term.

Now we will go to the second topic, which is from verse No.13 to 17. We wish Lord Kṛṣṇa talked about our real nature, our higher-nature, which we do not know by ourselves and because of ignorance alone, we are suffering from problems and this higher-nature is called ātma svarūpam. And this ātma svarūpam is none other than caitanya svarūpam, pure consciousness.

And what is the nature of the pure consciousness? You ought to remember, but still for my satisfaction I will give enumerate, Consciousness is not a part, property or product of the body, consciousness is an independent entity which pervades and enlivens the body, consciousness is not limited by the boundaries of the body; therefore it is all-pervading like space, then fourthly and finally and importantly, this consciousness does not perish even when the body disintegrates.

So first note the presence of that consciousness in that body; if you have any doubt, pinch your body and see, whether you are consciousness of the pain and instantaneous realisation of the pain means that you are conscious of the pain. And having identified this consciousness, I have to learn to identify with that consciousness which means instead of claiming the body as myself, I have to start practising, body is a dress, which I am temporary wearing; vāsāmsi jīrṇāni yathā vihāya navāni gṛhṇāti narō'parāṇi (local dress we wear for a day or a half a day), this dress I have been wearing from the date of birth and there is a wear and tear, and one day I will cast off, how can the arriving departing body be myself; I am the formless consciousness, who am operating through this temporary body; body comes, body goes; I ever am. And then Lord Kṛṣṇa says Arjuna, that is not enough, you have to note another very important nature of this consciousness, and that is the consciousness is akartha and abhōktha. I, the consciousness, neither act in this world; nor does this I, the consciousness, reap the result of the action; because anything all-pervading cannot perform any action; this space does not perform any action; the space does not and cannot act; similarly, I am akartā and abhōktā; in my presence the material factors consisting of five components that alone performs

yasya nāhaṅkṛtō bhāvō buddhiryasya na lipyatē|
hatvā'pi sa imāḥ||ōkāna hanti na nibadhyatē ||18.17||

These are very very important slōkās; from 14 to 17. Kṛṣṇa says the various pañca-kōśas are performing the action; kōśa means the material factors; the material body, the material prāṇa; the material mind; they perform the actions; in my presence, but I myself do not do any action; just as the light is pervading the hall; we do actions in the presence of the light, but the light itself does not perform any action. My hand is moving; light which illumines the hand does not move at all; Similarly, I am akartṛtva, abhōktṛtva caitanyam asmi; and this knowledge extremely significant because once I know I am akartā, abōktā. I know the sañcita, āgāmi, prārabdhā, none of them belongs to me. Because sañcita, āgāmi prārabdhā, all of them are what, karma-phalam; when karma itself is not mine, how come will its results? வினை விதைத்தவன்; வினை கொய்வான். viṇai vitaittavaṇ; viṇai koyvāṇ.

So the one who does alone has to reap, I am neither a doer nor a reaper, receiver of the karma phala; which means I am nithya muktha svarūpaḥ; puṇya pāpa athithaḥ; sañcita, āgāmi, prārabdhā varjitha; uttama, madhyama, adama janya rahithaḥ. Even janmas do not belong to me; even janmas do not belong to me; because janmas are determined by karmas. When karmas are not there; how will janma take place?

OK Janma is not there; would punar janmam will come? How will that be, when janma is not there? Therefore I am ever free; this knowledge is called ātma svarūpa jñānam. This Lord Kṛṣṇa has elaborately dealt with in the second-chapter, from verse No.12 to 25; Kṛṣṇa has highlighted this and therefore he summarises this topic in five verses 13 to 17. This is the 2nd topic ātma svarūpam.

Then from 18 to 40th verse, I said Lord Kṛṣṇa analyses six topics which will give a comprehensive picture of the entire Gīta teaching; Kṛṣṇa has ingeniously chosen six topics. If these six topics are understood properly, the entire Gīta teaching is understood. What are those six topics? Jñānam, means knowledge; karma means action; kartā, kartā means the doer; buddhihi means intellect, dṛitiḥ means will power, and sukham - happiness. Jñānam, karma, kartā, buddhi, dṛitiḥ, sukham; knowledge, action, doer, intellect, willpower and happiness. These are the six topics he takes and each one of them Kṛṣṇa divides into sātvic, rājasic and tāmasic varieties; in each of these it is divided into three; and if we can understand this division, then we have got clarity regarding the Bhagavad-Gīta teaching; I am not going to elaborate each of them; then it will not be summary, it will be re-teaching of the 18th chapter.

But we can have a general understanding of this classification. I have pointed out this before. Whatever contributes to spiritual growth is sātvic variety. The criterion for classifying something as sātvic is that which promotes spiritual growth, the inner growth is called sātvic; whether it is food, whether it is action; whether it is relationship. Anything in the world, if it contributes to the growth, it is sātvic. Spiritual growth.

Then what is tāmasic? The opposite of it; whatever contributes to the spiritual downfall; whatever contributes to spiritual downfall, spiritual slip, spiritual retrogression; is called tāmasic variety. Whether it is food, whether it is dress, whether it is even relationship, you can classify into sātvic, rājasic and tāmasic. So these are the two opposites.

Then what is rājasic variety? Whatever contributes to material growth; but leads to spiritual stagnation. A lifestyle in which there is material growth; I am becoming richer and richer; I have got more and more number of industries and several houses and any number of cars; thus materially I am growing; but I am so much materially involved that there is no time:

बालस्तावत्क्रीडासक्तः
तरुणस्तावत्तरुणीसक्तः |
वृद्धस्तावच्चिन्तासक्तः
परमे ब्रह्मणि कोऽपि न सक्तः ||७||

bālastāvatkrīḍāsaktah
tarunastāvattarunīsaktah |
vṛddhastāvaccintāsaktah
paramē brahmaṇi kō:'pi na saktah ||7||

I am the richest person but there is no time for religion, no time for spirituality, no time for japa, no time for pūja, no time for Gīta class. And the society looks upon him as a successful person. Thus that which makes a person materially successful but spiritually the one who is stagnating; that person has got a rājasic lifestyle.

So thus, anything which leads to spiritual growth is sātvic, spiritual stagnation is rājasic, spiritual downfall is tāmasic; stagnation you are understanding I think, he will neither go up or comes down, he remains in the same position, spiritually.

If we remember this norm, we can adjust our life in such a way that first we make sure that we do not go down spiritually. First attend to that; whether you are earning gain or not, see that you are not losing the capital லாபம் கிடைக்கிறதோ இல்லையோ; முதல் போகாத பாற்கணம். Because you have reached up to this level spiritually; at least we are human beings. That is a great accomplishment; see that you do not go down; and gradually trying to go upwards. This is the hint Lord Kṛṣṇa gives through these 6 topics from 18 to 40. And you should remember that even happiness Kṛṣṇa divides into sātvic, rājasic and tāmasic. There also a pleasure which contributes to spiritual growth, a pleasure which contributes to spiritual stagnation and certain types of lowly pleasures; they are pleasures and kicks alright, but they lead to spiritual downfall. All immoral pleasures are pleasures; but spiritually slipping down. This is the third portion of the 18th chapter.

Now we will go the fourth part, which is from verse No.41 to 66. In this portion alone, which is important and central part of the 18th chapter, Kṛṣṇa summaries these two main spiritual disciplines; namely karma-yōgaḥ; and jñāna-yōgaḥ; the entire spiritual journey can be divided into these two.

And what is the definition of karma yōgā? We have seen this often; proper-action plus proper-attitude is kama yōgaḥ; proper-action plus proper-attitude is karma yōgā. And what is proper action? Lord Kṛṣṇa defines svadharma anuṣṭānam; performance of one's own duty. Duty to oneself; duty to the family, duty to the society; duty to the religion and duty to the environment. I am born with many duties. No doubt I would like to enjoy life, our scriptures say you can enjoy life, but you have to fulfil your duties also.

And the next question is how to determine my duty. How to do it? In those days, the duties were determined based on varṇa and āśrama;

ब्राह्मणक्षत्रियविशां शूद्राणां च परन्तप ।
कर्माणी प्रविभक्तानी स्वभावप्रभवैर्गुणैः ॥ १८.४१ ॥

[Brāhmaṇakṣatriyaviśāṁ śūdrāṇāṁ ca parantapa |
karmāṇi pravibhaktāni svabhāvaprabhavaigūṇaiḥ || 18.41 ||](#)

Depending upon your varṇam, brāhmaṇa, kṣatriya, vaiśya or śūdra; similarly depending upon your stage of life, whether you are a student; householder or monk, a sanyāsi, you have to do your duty.

And if the varṇa āśrama dharma basis you do not accept, because varṇa āśrama dharma is declining, nobody follows that; then the next option is what; according to your nature; contribute to others; your life should involve giving, your life should involve contribution. That I have to take things from outside, scriptures need not teach. Why because we are experts in grabbing. So therefore Kṛṣṇa does not talk about that; Kṛṣṇa says you can take but more important than taking is, you have to give also. According to śāstra, your contribution must be more than your consumption; only then it is spiritual success.

There is a difference in the definition of spiritual success and material success. What is the definition of material success? When the contribution is less than the consumption. When I take more and give less, I am considered to be a successful person. This big book, just Rs.10, I just purchased, what is inside I do not know; ! So we always judge success in terms of getting a bigger share and giving the lesser. This is the definition of material success.

The definition of spiritual success is contribution is more than consumption; in terms of your knowledge, your energy, your time, your capacity, your good wishes, your smile; Contribution of smile; do we contribute smile; cheapest contribution is contribution of smile, even there we are very very stingy அதுக்கு கூட கஞ்சனம். So this is the proper action. What is proper action? Any action in which I contribute;

Then what is proper attitude? Which is the second part of karma yōgā; the proper-attitude is whatever you do, see it as an offering to the Lord, and whatever be the consequence, accept it as the prasādam from the Lord. Any blessed action, you look upon as offering, it is called Īśvara arpaṇa bhāvana and whatever you receive, you have prasāda bhāvana.

स्वे स्वे कर्मण्यभिरतः संसिद्धिं लभते नरः ।
स्वकर्मनिरतः सिद्धिं यथा विन्दति तच्छृणु ॥ १८.४५ ॥

svē karman्यabhirataḥ saṁsiddhiṁ labhatē naraḥ |
svakarmanirataḥ siddhiṁ yathā vindati tacchr̥ṇu || 18.45 ||

यतः प्रवृत्तिर्भूतानां येन सर्वमिदम् ततम् ।
स्वकर्मणा तमभ्यर्च्य सिद्धिं विन्दति मानवः ॥ १८.४६ ॥

yataḥ pravṛttirbhūtānāṁ yēna sarvamidaṁ tatam|
svakarmanā tamabhyarcya siddhiṁ vindati mānavaḥ || 18.46 ||

Whatever you do, do it as an arcāna to the Lord; this is the proper attitude; thus proper-action plus proper-attitude is equal to karma yōgā; And what is the benefit of karma yōgā? Purification of the mind.

Having condensed karma-yōgā in these portions, Lord Kṛṣṇa condenses jñāna yōgā sādhana also, which is the next stage, which everyone has to go through. They are not optional courses; everybody has to go through, both karma-yōgā as well as jñāna yōgā.

And jñāna yōgā consists of three-fold exercises:

- The first exercise or part of jñāna yōgā is consistent and systematic study of the vēdāntic scriptures for a length of time, under the guidance of a competent teacher, called śṛgavaṇam. Study Gīta regularly. This is part one.

- The second part of jñāna yōgā is whatever I have received, I dwell on it; and make sure that it is acceptable to my intellect; whatever I receive I make sure that it is acceptable to my intellect, so that there are no doubts; This is called mananam. śṛavaṇam; mananam.
- And then the third part of the jñāna yōgā is called nidhidhyāsanam. Even after conviction, I have to remain in that knowledge for a long time like the pickled mango in that water உறறத்துக்கு. Similarly in the Bhagavad-Gīta teaching one of us should become a pickle and it should through osmosis enter every cell of my personality that whatever I do this knowledge is there to help me. How? This internalisation is called nidhidhyāsanam; and Lord Kṛṣṇa in this portion emphasises nidhidhyāsanam.

विविक्तसेवी लघ्वाशी यतवाक्कायमानसः ।
ध्यानयोगपरो नित्यं वैराग्यं समुपाश्रितः ॥ १८.५२ ॥

[viviktasēvī laghvāśī yataṅkāyāmanasaḥ |
dhyānayōgaparō nityaṁ vairāgyaṁ samupāśritaḥ || 18.52 ||](#)

अहङ्कारं बलं दर्पं कामं क्रोधं परिग्रहम् ।
विमुच्य निर्ममः शान्तः ब्रह्मभूयाय कल्पते ॥ १८.५३ ॥

[ahaṅkāraṁ balaṁ darpaṁ kāmaṁ krōdhaṁ parigrahaṁ |
vimucya nirmamaḥ śāntō brahmabhūyāya kalpatē || 18.53 ||](#)

You have to assimilate. It is not for a day or two. A week or two a month or two or a year or two; it has to be for decades; that in svapna also I should see myself as a free person. Thus Kṛṣṇa summarises jñāna yōgā; highlighting the nidhidhyāsanam part.

Then he concludes his whole teaching in the most in the 66th verse:

सर्वधर्मान् परित्यज्य मामेकं शरणं व्रज ।

sarvadharmān parityajya māmēkaṁ śaraṇaṁ vraja|

Arjuna give up, sarvadharmān parityajya. We saw giving up dharma is nothing but giving up of the dēha abhimāna; because all dharma, adharma etc. belong to the body alone, therefore dharma parityāga, is dēha-abhimāna-parityāga; give up your body identification.

After that do what? māmēkaṁ śaraṇaṁ vraja; choose to identify with the dēhi; ātma which is the real Kṛṣṇa; So dis-identify from the body is sarvadharmān parityajya; identify with the ātma is māmēkaṁ śaraṇaṁ vraja. And if you do this, ahaṁ tvā sarvapāpēbhyō mōkṣyayiṣyāmi. Then you are instantaneously free. Thus Lord Kṛṣṇa concludes the teaching; with the 66th verse; this is the 4th topic.

Now comes the fifth topic, from verse No.67 to 78; in which Vyāsācārya winds up the whole 18th chapter, as well as the Bhagavat Gīta. And in this four qualifications are mentioned for the study of the Gīta. And what are those four qualifications? Tapas, bhakthi, śraddhā and anasūya;

- tapas means life of discipline.
- bhakthi means devotion.
- then śraddhā means deep faith in the validity of the Bhagavad Gīta.
- and then finally śūsruṣa also he mentions; śūsruṣa is desire for learning.

Thus discipline, devotion, deep faith, and desire for learning is four or important qualifications and then Lord Kṛṣṇa glories the Gīta teacher as well as the Gīta student.

He said the teacher will get mōkṣa, and the teacher is dearest to me; and the student depending upon what type of student he or she is, either he will get the minimum svarga or maximum mōkṣa. Therefore better continue your Gīta study.

And then Lord asks Arjuna: Arjuna which type of student you are? And Arjuna answers I am the best student and has grasped your teaching and I have got knowledge and I am free from all the conflicts.

अर्जुन उवाच --
नष्टो मोहः स्मृतिर्लब्धा त्वत्प्रसादान्मयाच्युत ।
स्थितोऽस्मि गतसन्देहः करिष्ये वचनं तव ॥ १८.७३ ॥

Arjuna uvāca
naṣṭō mōhaḥ smṛtirlabdhā tvatprasādānmayā'cyuta |
sthitō'smi gatasandēhaḥ kariṣyē vacanam tava || 18.73 ||

And then Sañjaya comes and gives his final remarks; addressing Dhṛtarāṣṭra he says: Not only Arjuna was fortunate, I was also fortunate to listen because of the grace of Vyāsācārya; I got this ESP or telepathy; that I overheard the Bhagavat Gīta and I also enjoyed this teaching and Sañjaya says that the best chapter I liked, is the 11th chapter of Viśva rūpa Darśanam.

And then Sañjaya concludes with a remark:

यत्र योगेश्वरः कृष्णा यत्र पार्थो धनुर्धरः ।
तत्र श्रीर्विजयो भूतिः ध्रुवा नीतिर्मतिर्मम ॥ १८.७८ ॥

yatra yōgēśvaraḥ kṛṣṇō yatra pāṛthō dhanurdharaḥ |
tatra śrīrvijayō bhūtirdhruvā nītimatirmama || 18.78 ||

The benefit is not only Arjuna and Sañjaya; whoever invokes Lord Kṛṣṇa and whoever invokes the Arjuna in him, the real seeker in him, and whoever invokes the Gīta teaching, he will have all success in life; material as well as spiritual success.

With this concluding remarks of Sañjaya, the 18th chapter as well as the entire Bhagavad-Gīta is over.
