Explanation & Commentary by
SWAMI PARAMARTHANANDA

His Holiness Svāmi Paramārthānanda, disciple of His Holiness Dayānanda Saraswati studied Vēdānta and Sanskrit under him for a period of three years at Sandeepany Sādhanalaya, Mumbai. After his studies and initiation he came to Chennai and started teaching Bhagavad-Gīta, Upaniṣads and other Vedantic texts. He has been conducting several weekly classes in different parts of Chennai since 1978. He is well read in the śāstras and is a great Sanskrit scholar. His talks are known for their clarity, simplicity and are an excellent guide for practical use of Vedantic truths in daily life.

This is the verbatim transcription of the 240 Bhagavad-Gīta weekly classes consistently delivered at Chennai, over many years.

Greatness of the Gīta

Our culture, that is the Indian culture, is based upon the vēdic scriptures and therefore we can look upon the Indian culture as the vēdic culture itself. And Vēdic culture happens to be a religious culture. A lifestyle which is based on vēdic culture can never be separated from religion. Life and religion are inter-twined. So Indian culture is vēdic culture. Vēdic culture is a religious culture and a religious culture means a God-centered culture. And therefore in our culture, God plays a very very important role; our day begins with the remembrance of the Lord. Not with bed coffee. That is the materialistic culture, which we are tending to borrow from outside, Indian culture; vēdic culture; religious culture means that the day has to start with suprabhātham; suprabhātham is suprabhātham only when it is associated with the Lord. And not only our day begins with the Lord; throughout the day also, everything is intimately associated with the Lord.

Even when we brush the teeth we are supposed to pray to the dēvathās presiding over the tree; because they used the twig from the tree to brush the teeth. Now only plastic has come, we require plastic dēvathā. In the olden days it was the twig from the tree, therefore vanaspathi dēvathā that is God associated with the tree is prayed to and the prayer is Oh Lord, when you remove the dirt from my teeth, do not stop with that; remove the dirt from my mind also.

And thereafter the snānam involves the remembrance of the Lord. We look upon the snānam as abhisēkam done to the Lord who is within us.

and thereafter wearing the cloth involves prayer to the presiding deity of the clothes, called Rēvathi dēvathā; wearing cloth is associated with the Lord.

thereafter eating is associated with the Lord. In fact right from the waking up, up to going to bed, even before going to bed, we remember or we are supposed to remember the Lord.

And not only from the beginning of the day up to the end of the day, our entire life right from conception starts with the remembrance of the Lord. The very conception of baby happens with the chanting of the vēdic mantra, and the parents are themselves are supposed to remember the Lord, so that the conceived baby will be well-refined and cultured. Thus the conception is associated with the Lord and ultimately the cremation is a yāga in which we offer our own body to the hōma kuṇḍa. The fire, the cremation fire is Agni dēvathā. Until now, we are offering varieties of things to Agni dēvathā; at the time of death, we offer this very body, of course we would not be there to offer, our relations, children or somebody offers the very body to the Lord. Thus from conception to cremation, our life is God-centered life. From waking up, up to sleep, our life is called God-centered life.

And why do the vēdic scriptures prescribe a God-centered life? The reason is according to the scriptures, our primary relationship is with the Lord alone. God is our creator and we are the created being, God is the cause and we are the effect; and therefore in the form of the parent-and-child, in the form of the kāraṇam and kāryam; we are related to the Lord in every janma. Not only in this janma; in every śrṣṭi, in every janma; we are related to the Lord, as the cause and effect. And all our other relationship with the people of the world; they are only temporary relationship. The longest relationship with any individual can last only for one life; Our relationship with our parents or mother can maximum last only for one life; because in the previous life; we had some other parents; may be buffalo parents; who knows? And in future life, if there is one, (because we are all liberated!), we will not have the same parents. That means any human or other relationship is only incidental/temporary empirical and relative. Whereas the primary and fundamental relationship is only with the Lord and therefore the vēdās repeatedly remind us; never forget the fundamental relationship. In your worldly interaction, you are busy forming other relationship and nourishing other relationship, that is all wonderful but it should never be at the cost of that fundamental relationship.

And therefore the vēda gives a very strong warning; the moment you lose sight of the fundamental relationship with God, your life becomes directionless; your life will have varieties of problems; it is like a rudderless boat and a directionless boat; because you have forgotten, you have lost that fundamental relationship and therefore our scriptures give a warning; real prosperity in life is nothing but the non-forgetfulness of the fundamental relationship with the Lord.

And if that fundamental relationship is forgotten; even if you become very very rich materially, even that materially prosperous life will be full of problems. Even richness will create problems; the moment that original saṁbhanda is forgotten; therefore the scriptures remind us

विपत्तो नैव विपत्तः, संपत्तो नैव सम्पदः |
विपत् विस्मरणं विष्णोः, सम्पद् संस्मरणम् हरेः ॥

vipatō naiva vipataḥ, saṁpato naiva sampadaḥ,
vipat vismaraṇam viṣṇoḥ, sampad saṁsmaraṇam harēḥ ||

Tragedy is forgetting the Lord; Prosperity is remembrance of the Lord. The material prosperity is not real prosperity and the worldly tragedies are not real tragedy, but the real tragedy is losing sight of this fundamental relationship and therefore the v̄edic life involves understanding this fundamental relationship; preserving this relationship between me and God and also nourishing this basic relationship. Understanding, preserving, and nourishing my relationship with the Lord is a religious God-centered lifestyle.

And for this purpose our v̄edic culture, our religious culture prescribes varieties of religious practices. Because any relationship can be maintained only when you spent some time with the relationship. Now they are writing articles how to preserve husband wife relationship. Previously we never knew this problem because once married, you are booked for good; there is no choice. It is God-created relationship. Therefore in the olden days, they never had to struggle to maintain the husband-wife relationship. But nowadays, one important thing exercise in life, how to keep my wife the husband has to worry; and how to keep my husband, the wife has to worry, all the time. And they prescribed several exercises and one of the exercises they prescribe, but anyway, How to preserve a wife? Why should the sannyāsi read? I read for your sake; so that I can share it in the class. So one of the exercises they prescribe is giving quality time with the husband; quality time with wife; quality with children; they say, unless you spend quality time, a relationship cannot be preserved; cannot be nourished; and the v̄edās knew this principle and therefore v̄edās prescribed preserve and nourish the relationship with the Lord also; we should regularly have quality time and exclusive time. Do not talk keeping the TV on. That is not quality time; you have to switch off the television; we have to see serial on the TV later; quality time means what exclusive time; do not do other jobs at that time, and being with that relative at that time; and sharing it with that relative; that only will preserve the relationship.

Similarly the relationship with the Bhagavān can only be preserved only by giving quality time and therefore they prescribed varieties of religious practices; which are much much more in our religion. In other religions, it is a weekly business or yearly business; whereas for us it is repetitive and regular.

And once there is the religious practices, we should know the theory and principle behind any religious practice. Any practice will be meaningful. Any practice will be purposeful only when you understand the principle behind the practice. Only when you know the theory behind the practice. Without knowledge of the principle, without the knowledge of the theory, any practice will become empty ritual; it will become meaningless, mechanical practice. Anything I do without the knowledge of the theory, that will become mechanical, empty, meaningless jumbo-mumbo ritual; and when any practice is mechanical; sooner or later, it will drop off from one's life; because we will lose interest in those practices.

And therefore anything you want to practice, the first step is learning the theory. Theory, knowledge should precede any practice. Whether you want to sing, you want to practice music, there is the study of theory. They will teach you arōḥaṇam. Avarōḥaṇam. what is sa pa sa; what is jaṇḍa variśai; what is ādi tālam; what is rūpaka tālam; Otherwise everything will become a vethalam. So you have to learn what are the tālams, what are the rāgās involved, what are the svarams involved, the more sound your knowledge of theory is, the more polished and refined will be your music.

Similarly you want to practice, you have to study the theory; you never practice anything without the study of theory. Even for playing tennis; after-all I thought you have to hit the ball with the racket; that is tennis; you have to hit the ball, but they say you have to go to the coaching camp, paying Rs.15,000 to 25,000 rupees, how to hold the racket, how to place the foot, how to toss the ball, how to hit the ball. Coaching is involved, study of theory is involved.

Anything you want to practice, you can do it well only when you have the sound knowledge of theory. If that is so, all the religious practices, also will be meaningful, purposeful only when I understand the principles behind those religious practices; only when I have the sound knowledge of the theory behind it.

And therefore religion involves two things; one is the thorough study of the principles and theory; and the other one is practicing whatever principles or theories I have learned. Theory is incomplete without practice. I know how to do every yōga pose; what is ardha matsēndrāsanam; what is śīrṣāsanam, kukkudāsanam; all āsanams; etc. I have gone and studied; How many hours you practice if you ask; He says Nil; theory is incomplete without practice; practice is mechanical and empty without the knowledge of the theory; theory and practice both of them play a very very important role in everything; If that is true in everything, it is true with regard to religion also.

Every religious practice should be preceded by a thorough study of the theory, principles, philosophy, behind those religious practice; otherwise even Om Bhuhu, we do not know why we are catching our nose; and therefore he does like that, like some bhāratha natyam mudra; why are we keeping like that, etc. one does not know; so everything that I do, I should know the meaning, purpose, principle, etc.

And therefore in vēdic culture; they prescribed two exercises, first one is the thorough study of the principles behind the religious practices; and these principles are enshrined in our religious scriptures. And therefore scriptural study is a compulsory and important and preliminary step; only if the scriptures are studied; one will know the principles and the philosophy and the theory behind every practice that we do. And this theory must be followed by practice also. Thus study and practice, both of them are equally important; of which the study must be the first thing; and the practice must be the later thing.

And therefore all our ācāryas said that everyone has to compulsorily study the scriptures. To understand the theory and principles behind our religious life; svadhāyaḥ adhyētavyaḥ; and when in the vēdic tradition everybody went to gurukulam; whether he is a brahṃmaṇa, kṣatriya vaiśya or śūdra; he studied various skills for his livelihood; but all of them uniformly studied, the principles behind a religious life. Therefore the vēdic study was compulsory for all; and in the gurukulam it was incorporated.

And having studied the theory behind the religion, in gurukula, when he came out to the Society; and got married; no doubt, he struck many relationships, but in and through all the relationship, he knew that I should never forget the fundamental relationship, with the Lord. Therefore, gr̥hasthā-lifestyle also became an āśrama- lifestyle; it becomes an āśrama only when it is God-centered; otherwise it will be śrama; So the married life will be śrama; āśrama means without tension anxiety, fight and quarrel; whether married life should be śrama or āśrama, will depend upon whether it is God-centered or not; it will be God-centered only if I have studied the principles behind the religious life; in brahmacarya āśrama.

And later they found the thorough study of our scriptures is an extremely difficult project because our scriptural literature is very vast; 14 sciences or 18 sciences are there. In our scriptures, aṅgāni, vēda chatvāra; mimāmsa nyāya visthara, puraṇam dharma śāstram ca, vidya hētē caturdaśa; 14 branches of science are there in our traditional scriptures; before vēdās, they themselves are voluminous; along with the commentary. Then the ṣad-aṅgāni, the six-aṅgās are there; mimāmsa-śāstra is there; tarka-śāstra is there; puraṇās are there; dharma-śāstram is there; totally fourteen branches are there. And later if you add the four upavēdās; like gandharva-vēda etc. our literature is too voluminous.

And therefore in the Bhagavad-Gīta, Lord Kṛṣṇa tells in the fourth chapter, that our scriptural literature is very vast; and the people do not have time to study the scriptures; because we are all busy; right from the morning, we have to rush to the office; and our time has to suit with America time; because business is with America; and you are given a cell phone which you cannot switch off even in the Gīta class; So busy and tight and fast is our life; where is the time to study.

अनन्द शास्त्रम् बहु वेदितव्यम् , अल्पस्य कालो भवस्व विग्नः ।
यत् सारभूतम् ,तत् उपासितव्यम् ,हंसो यथा क्षिरमिवांभु मिस्रः ॥

[ānanda śāstram bahu vēditavyam, alpasca kālo bhahavasca vighnaḥ
yat sārabhūtam, tat upāsitavyam, haṁso yathā kṣiramivāmbhu misraḥ ||](#)

Anantha śāstram, scriptures are many; bhahu-vēditavyam; plenty to study; alphasca kālo; time is very limited; and bhahavasca vighnaḥ; and the obstacles are too many; And therefore yat sārabhūtam; tat upāsitavyam. If you do not have time to study all our scriptures, at least you should study the essence of our scriptural literature; just as the swan takes the milk out of a milk water mixture; similarly at least we have to study the sāra of our scriptures.

That essence has been given in the form of Bhagavat Gīta, which Lord Kṛṣṇa himself tells:

स एवायं मया तेऽद्य योगः प्रोक्तः पुरातनः ।
भक्तोऽसि मे सखा चेति रहस्यं ह्येतदुत्तमम् ॥४-३॥

bhaktō:'si mē sakhā cēti rahasyaṁ hyētaduttamam ||4- 3||](#)

Śankarācārya in his introductory commentary says: People are busy and extrovert; that Śankarācārya said this 1200 years ago. He said that they are extrovert and their materialistic desires have increased. Śankarācārya complains during 8th century; kāmas means desires have increased; because we have to complete world tour; so many things in the list.

And therefore Bhagavān Kṛṣṇa has taken the essence of all the śāstras and given in the form of Bhagavat Gīta and this one text book is enough to comprehensively understand our entire scriptural literature; to understand what is religious culture, what is vēdic culture; to understand what is god centered living; to understand the principles behind every religious practice of ours.

And therefore I feel and all our ācāryas feel that every Indian, every Hindu, must compulsorily study at least the Bhagavat Gīta. Thoroughly and systematically, not casually; verse by verse; thorough and systematic study at least once Bhagavat Gīta is compulsory. Whether one is a spiritual-seeker or not; to understand India, which is our mother land, to understand our culture in which we are born; whether we are materialistic or spiritual, Bhagavad-Gīta study is compulsory for all.

If you are a spiritual-seeker you can add the upaniṣad, even if you are not a spiritual-seeker, Bhagavad-Gīta study is required; otherwise our religious practices will become mechanical; they will all look empty and gradually we will drop one by one; pañca-mahā-yajñās; all are dropped, agnihōtra dropped, aupāsana is dropped. At least one Gāyathri they asked us to hold on to, even the Gāyathri mantra is disappearing from our culture.

And once the religious culture goes away, India will be overpowered by materialistic culture; and in materialistic culture, we will have everything, but the heart will be empty. In religious culture, materially we may be empty; but the heart will be full. but in materialistic culture, we will be surrounded by a palatial house, and all the modern gadgets may be there; but inside there will be emptiness, because materialism is māya; Māya is mithya; worthless; Spiritual culture alone will give us fullness.

And in the Gurukulam; there was an opportunity to study, but nowadays we do not have the gurukula sampradāya; and therefore we do not have an opportunity to study even the Gīta; and that is why we are trying to at least conduct extra classes on the Bhagavad-Gīta so that the Indian society, the Hindu Society will have at least a thorough knowledge of the Bhagavad-Gīta; which requires a systematic verse by verse study of the Gīta.

And unfortunately many people do not understand the significance of the Study; institutions and organisations are mushrooming; and they are prescribing newer and newer practices; all varieties of practices are prescribed; but nobody is highlighting the thorough study of scriptures. Scriptural study is never emphasised by those organisations. We are in the minority group. We are only emphasising the importance of the study because only then, we will know the significance of our Hindu way of life.

And therefore if a person understands the importance of the study, that person is indeed blessed and it requires lot of effort and therefore I have to appreciate all those students who have managed to come, class after class after class and in Besant Nagar, we used to run to one temple or the other; and somehow or other, some of you or most of you preserved the interest in Gīta study; and came for so many years; and successfully completed the Gīta course. I would say it is not only the grace of the Lord of course, it is there; it also is because of your interest and commitment and the value that you had attached and therefore I have to congratulate all of you; and congratulate me also. I need congratulate me, because I do not have any other job. So it is a not a great thing; but you amidst all the other busy schedule; you managed to come and successfully complete; it is a very great achievement and beautiful; but I want to tell you; perhaps warn you, that the Gīta study is not complete, by just attending the class only; what you have studied has to be internalised, it has to be assimilated and it has to reflect in your day-to-day life; Gīta is not merely for studying; Gīta is meant for the living; and they say

ācāryāt pādām adattē, pādām śiṣya svamēdayā, pādām sa brahmacāribhyaḥ, pādām kālakrameṇa ca ||

By attending the classes you gather only one fourth of the knowledge contained there;

- one fourth you get by attending the class;
- the next one fourth you have to gather by going back and revising. pādām śiṣya svamēdayā;
- and the next quarter you get by sharing with other people; either in the form of discussion or in the form study group, or in the form of teaching, in one form or the other; sharing gives you the next quarter.
- and pādām kālakrameṇa ca; the last quarter you will gather only by alert living; and watching and constantly asking yourselves, Is my life in keeping with the Gīta teaching?

So how a Gīta student should live; Bhagavān Kṛṣṇa has prescribed in several chapters, I have to keep those values; and I have to regularly match my life; and try to make my life, and try to make my life, closer to the knowledge. Knowing is called rhythm, following is called satyam; rhythm and satyam both are important; information and transformation both are important and therefore I would like to tell all of you that do not think that it is like school books; School books you write the examination, after that; somebody said New Thirukural,

கற்க கசடற; கற்பவை கற்றறபின்
நிற்க, அதற்க்கு தக.

kar̥ka kacataṛa; karpavai kar̥trapin
niṛka, ataṛkku taka.

kar̥ka kacataṛa, original Kural is: kar̥ka kacataṛa, study you thoroughly, then karpavai kar̥trapin niṛka, ataṛkku taka; do not stop with learning, live according to your knowledge; do not stop with theory, you practice. This is the original Kural; Somebody modified it;

கற்க கசடற; கற்பவை கற்றறபின்
விற்க, எடைக்கு தக.

kar̥ka kacataṛa; karpavai kar̥trapin

viṛka means sell those according to the weight.

Ok. You can do that to your physics, economics, and chemistry books, etc. please do not do that to the Gīta book. And therefore in the Gīta Māhatmyam, it is repeatedly said that you have to regularly study the Gīta; it will give you everything in life, material as well as spiritual riches it will give.

And they say if you are not able to study the meaning thoroughly, at least do the pāṛāyaṇam of the Gīta regularly; chant 18 chapters regularly, if you cannot do that 9 chapters; or 6 chapters; or 3 chapters; or one chapter; or one fourth of a chapter, or one verse, or at least half a verse.

So at least daily do pāṛāyaṇam because many people think Gīta is part of mahabhāratham, and therefore if you keep that book at home, there will be a quarrel; as though there is no quarrel now. It is not at all true; mahābharatham or Bhagavat Gīta pāṛāyaṇam would do no harm; and there the mahātmyam tells that all the dēvathās would be at home; all the sacred rivers will be at home; even if there are evil forces, they will not touch you or your family members; and finally the Gīta- Mahātmyam says that even if you cannot chant the Gīta slōkas, at least repeat the word Gīta even that will be very good.

And if even that you cannot do, they say at least by a Gīta book; in Ramakrishna Math and Gorakhpur edition, you get it cheap. And keep it at least the book at home; it will do all the good for you and the family. Therefore my request is that you have to continue to study and also share so that you will get the full benefit of the Gīta.

And with this I would like to conclude my talk.

Hari Om

001 Introduction

Every human being, in his or her life, is busy pursuing different types of goals. There are some short term goals and there are many long-term goals and throughout our lives, we are busy fulfilling or struggling to fulfill, these goals that we have fixed for ourselves. And when you talk to the people, you will find that these short-term and long-term goals vary from individual to individual.

While one person keeps struggling to buy a house, another person is struggling to sell the house. While one person is struggling to get married to someone, another person is struggling to get rid of the married one.

Thus goals are different and often opposite and these goals even get revised from time to time. What we were frantically searching for a few weeks or months before, now we are not at all interested, even if given free. Thus superficially seeing, we find that goals are infinite in number and they vary from individual to individual; time to time.

Even from age to age, these goals differ. A few centuries before, our children would never have asked for computer game. But now the times have changed. The desires of our children are totally different from what we desired during our childhood.

Thus from age to age, time to time, person to person, season to season, the goals vary. But if you deeply probe into this phenomenon, we can find there are certain goals which are common to all beings; all human beings. They are universal goals and they are basic goals and not only they are universal, but they do not change from age to age. It was there a few centuries before and it is there now also. This we will call the 'Fundamental or Basic Universal Goals of Humanity'. Even animals have that. But it is instinctive. In the case of human beings, it is well defined. These goals can be classified into three for our convenience.

The first and foremost is security. I want to be secure in my life and the desire for security and survival and the consequent desire for food and shelter is universal. It is there in all animals instinctively and in the human being, it is a sophisticated goal. We work for varieties of insurance. Every type of insurance is a version of our desire for security; ~ House insurance; car insurance; and if one is a big musician; throat insurance; and if one is a very great football player; leg insurance; ~ security and safety. This is one universal and eternal fundamental goals.

And next universal goal is I want to lead a peaceful life. Śāntiḥ. In Tamil, நிம்மதி. Nimmadhi. Nimmadiyay erukka vidungo. So I want to be peaceful, comfortable with myself, hunting for peace and going from āśramam to āśramam, from one resort to other, having extra houses in Kodaikanal and Ooty, all are Nimmadiyai Nādi (search for peace). So the second instinctive goal of every human being is peace or śāntiḥ.

Security peace and the third goal which is natural, universal is the desire for happiness; desire for fulfilment; desire for enjoyment. Sukham or ānandaḥ in Sānskrīt is the third universal eternal goal. Security, peace and happiness. And all human-beings are running after these three only through different methods. One considers status will give security; another person considers lot of people around will give security; another person thinks real estate will give security till he discovers real-estate is really not real. Some people consider gold, share, position, job ~ endless. The means of seeking security varies, but the end is universal. Similarly, peace also. It seems two soldiers were talking about the reasons for joining army; and one soldier said "I was not married", I love war therefore I joined the army. The other person said "I am married and I love peace; therefore I joined the army." How is this? Meditate on this.

So therefore, different people seek peace in different methods. With regard to these three fundamental goals of humanity our scriptures have some comments to make: with regards to these three fundamental goals or destinations, our scriptures have some comments or suggestions to give. And what is the comment or suggestion of our scriptures?

The scriptures point out that all these three are available within ourselves. All these three basic needs; desperate needs of these three, are available within ourselves. And not only that, they add, another statement which is disturbing; they say not only these three are within you, they say they are within you ONLY. Within you, if they say, it is OK. They add that all those three are within you ONLY and what is the significance of the word ONLY? Can you guess? The significance of the word ONLY is they are within you ONLY means they are not available outside. And therefore, if you seek them outside, all of them will elude you; all of them will evade you.

The other day I had gone to some house for bhikṣāḥ and they gave me a soup made of semiya. And soup is given in a bowl; you know and there is a spoon; you use a spoon and you know what is the nature of Semiya. What is that? Vazha-Vazha; Kozha Kozha. Now you take the semiya in the spoon, you do see semiya, when you lift the spoon, it goes. Even now, I do not know how to handle the semiya. I knew I am in soup. I understood what is the meaning of the word 'To be in soup'. Do not ask how I managed, that is a different story; but what I am saying is: this peace, security and happiness; they are like the Semiya, in your life, which is 'in soup'. And therefore if you look for these three outside, the search becomes a misplaced search.

Therefore, according to the scriptures, the fundamental human problem is 'misplaced search' for something in a place, where it is not available. And therefore, the intelligent approach is to search for something in a place where it is available.

Now the question is: why do the human-beings commit such a mistake? Why do the human-beings commit such a mistake and make the life a soup and go from struggle to struggle to struggle. Why? The scriptures point out that these three basic needs are available within but they are hidden. They are covered like the treasure that is covered under the ground or like the borewell water which is under the ground.

One Swami who had an āśrama, was struggling for water. Even an ordinary house, needs a lot of water. Imagine an āśrama, where several members are there, big kitchen, means what? A śrama āśrama. āśrama. What is āah. Big. śrama, means problem. So a house is small ā śrama; āśrama is āah big śrama! And that Swamiji dug all the ground, all over the āśrama, to tap some source of water, he could not and he was struggling to get it from outside several places and 10 years he had to struggle sometime he gets, sometimes he does not. This is a real incident. And one day he was standing outside waiting for someone and one government official from water department came with some instrument 'Hydrometer' or some instrument, which can detect the ground water, it seems. And he said, why can't we try (18.28) and he asked the Swamiji to move a little bit standing on the gate and he kept the meter and found out that right underneath there is a huge and perennial source of water. And he has dug everywhere except that place. And that Swamiji was jumping it seems, like mōkṣa, Nandathi, Nandatheva.

Why was the struggle for 10 years ? What he wanted he had but it was covered. Similarly, the scriptures point out, we have the perennial borewell, which has got the permanent; what you call, source of these three fundamental needs, viz., security, peace and happiness. But the problem is it is hidden by layers of covering. And sometimes the water is so deep, we have different layers, one clay layer, some rubble layer, some other layer. Similarly, it is covered. And therefore, what is required to get these three. The scriptures point out, remove the layers of covering and tap the borewell. Tap the eternal spring of S P H, security, peace and happiness. May you tap from the eternal spring. And this process is called discovery. Discovery means what? Dissing the cover. Dissing means what, removing the cover. The Swamiji did not produce water, because water was already there. He only removed the covering which was between him and water.

Now the next question is: what are the layers that cover these three, so that I can handle appropriately. If the cover is stone and rubbles, you have to use a different weapon, instrument; if it is wet clay, you have to use an appropriate instrument; the instrument depends upon the type of covering.

The scriptures point out that there are three layers covering the spring of S P H (security, peace and happiness) within us is covered by three layers. The grossest, subtle and the subtlest, the finest layer and what are those three layers.

They are known as (1) Malam; literally meaning impurity. Malam means impurity.

No.2 vikṣēpaḥ, means a extrovertedness. vikṣēpaḥ, literally means disturbance; disturbance caused by extrovertedness. Outgoing tendency.

And the third layer is called āvaraṇam, otherwise ajñānam, ignorance.

Malam, vikṣēpaḥ and ajñānam. Malam or impurity refers to varieties of mental problems, normally enumerated as the six fold impurities; six fold enemies, six fold obstacles to discover our inner joy. And those impurities are kāmaḥ, krōdhaḥ, lōbhaḥ, mōhaḥ, madaḥ, mātsaryaḥ. You would have heard kāmaḥ, (desire), krōdhaḥ, (Anger); lōbhaḥ (Greed); mōhaḥ (delusion); madaḥ (arrogance or vanity); mātsaryaḥ (jealousy or competitiveness). These are the main six-fold impurities in the mind. They make the first layer of obstacles in unearthing our inner joy.

Then the second layer of obstacle is, as I said, Vikṣēpaḥ, the mental restlessness, mental wandering, mental extrovertedness is the second layer of obstacle, because of which I am not able to see; like when the water is turbulent, you cannot see the bottom of the river properly. If the water is muddied, you cannot see. That muddied water has got Malam (impurities). The turbulent water has got Vikṣēpaḥ (obstacle). When these two are there, you do not see what is down below. Similarly when the mind has got impurities and turbulence, you cannot recognise the truth behind. So Vikṣēpaḥ, Cañcalyam (in Tamil சஞ்சலம் Cañcalam) etc.

And the third obstacle is called Ignorance; ignorance of the fact that I am the only source of these three. I am the spring of ānandaḥ. I am the embodiment of security. I am full of, I have abundance of Śāntiḥ. This fact, I am ignorant. Ignorance is the third layer. Therefore what is required? Remove these three layers. Three layers by appropriate sādhanāḥ.

Sādhanā means any discipline or exercise. You may call it spiritual exercise, spiritual discipline, you have to practice. Remove these three obstacles. And each discipline is called a yōgaḥ. Yōgaḥ means that which unites the seeker with the destination. Yōga means that which unites the seeker, Me, with what? The destination called 'Security, peace and happiness. Like when the treasure-hunter uses different instruments, each one is like yōga because when obstacles are removed, who is united with whom? The treasure-hunter is united with the treasure. So the hunter-treasure-union is caused by this and that one which causes the union is called the Yōgaḥ. Like marriage broker. That Broker. What does he do? He combines the two. He can be called Yōgi. In Rāmāyaṇa Añjanēya served that purpose of uniting Rāma and Sīta. The whole Rāmāyaṇa is compared to a spiritual journey.

We have to use three different disciplines or yōgas to recover the treasure; to claim my own treasure. And the three yōgas prescribed in the scriptures are called karma-yōga, to remove the first layer of obstacle; the second yōga is called Upāsana yōgaḥ, to remove the second layer of obstacle and the third one is called Jñāna yōgaḥ to remove the third layer. Karma Yōgēna mala nivṛtthi, you can understand these three Sānskrīt sentences. Karma Yōgēna mala nivṛtthiḥ, upāsana yōgēna vikṣēpaḥ nivṛtthiḥ, jñāna yōgēna ajñāna nivṛtthi.

These three Yōgas do not bring me anything. These three yōgas do not bring anything but it connects me to my own treasure. It helps me claim my own wealth. Like some people die, without writing proper will, and for the other survivor, to claim the property; it is his own property, their own property, but you have to go through so many procedures, வைராக்கியம் வந்துடும் vairākyaṃ vantaṭum; and ultimately, what do you get. You do not get money, you have claimed the money which has been already yours. you are claiming your birthright; as Tilak said "Swaraj is my birthright. I will have it". Thus three yōgas are prescribed.

karma-yōga is a life style consisting of proper-action and proper attitude. What do you mean proper action? Any action which will primarily contribute to the reduction of kāmaḥ, krōdhaḥ, lōbhaḥ, mōhaḥ; instead of increasing them. Any action which will help in the reduction of the impurities is called proper action.

And proper-attitude is the right attitude towards the action as well as the result of the action. A healthy attitude towards the action and its result which will help me grow through every experience. Healthy attitude is that which will help me, which should help me, grow through every experience; even through the most painful experience. Elaboration we will have later in the Gīta. It is enough if you note this much. Proper action plus proper-attitude is karma-yōgaḥ. karma-yōgaḥ removes the first layer of impurity. That much is enough for now.

Then the second yōgaḥ is Upāsana Yōgaḥ; which consists of different types of meditations, different forms of meditations. We need not go to the details. We will be seeing that again later and all different forms of meditations will help in quietening the mind. The extrovert, turbulent, restless, outgoing, wandering, fidgety mind has to have some relaxation.

A stress-free mind is the result of Upāsana yōgaḥ, which we call Vikṣēpaḥ-nivṛtthiḥ. Mala-nivṛtthiḥ, can be positively presented as citta-śuddhiḥ. Removal of impurity can be translated as attaining purity. Is it not correct? Removal of impurity, mala nivṛtthiḥ is citta śuddhiḥ. Upāsana Yōga will lead to Vikṣēpaḥ nivṛtthiḥ. Removal of restlessness which can be positively presented as attaining the steadiness of the mind. Instead of wandering, the mind is steady and calm. In Sānskrīt, it is called citta niścalatvam. Niścalatvam is opposite of vikṣēpaḥ; śuddhiḥ is opposite of malam. Removal of malam is equal to getting śuddhiḥ. Removal of Vikṣēpaḥ is getting niścalatvam.

And then comes the third Yōga called Jñāna-yōgaḥ. It consists of enquiry into my real nature. Do I require Peace from outside or is my very nature is peaceful? Do I require security from outside or am ātmā? Do I require happiness from outside or can I tap it from myself? So Jñāna yōgaḥ consists of self-enquiry. Self-analysis. ātma vicāraḥ.

And if a person goes through karma-yōgaḥ, Upāsana Yōgaḥ and Jñāna-Yōga ḥ, all these three layers are removed. And there is no option in these three, because we have all these three layers; in fact very very thick; thick layers we have got. And therefore, to help us in going through these three yōgas, and also discover the inner security, peace and happiness, our scriptures guide us and these wonderful scriptures who guide us are called the Vēdās. The Vēdās are these wonderful scriptures whose only aim is helping us to tap our own wealth. Vēdā means source of knowledge, with means to know Vēdāḥ means a source of knowledge and these Vēdās are revelations from the Lord himself. Vēdās have come down to us through the ṛiṣīs. God is the transmitting centre, ṛiṣīs are the receiving centers; just as we have transmission station and receiving station; God is the transmitting centre and every ṛiṣī is a receiving centre.

And these Vēdās have got four portions.

- The first portion is called mantra bhāgaḥ or saṁhitā bhāgaḥ. mantraḥ and saṁhitā both mean the same; first portion.
- Then the second portion is called brāhmaṇaḥ bhāgaḥ. bhāgaḥ means part or portion.
- The third part is called āraṇya bhāgaḥ, āraṇyakam.
- and the fourth and final part is called the upaniṣad bhāgaḥ. mandraḥ, brāhmaṇaḥ, āraṇyakam, upaniṣad.

Of these four bhāgaḥ, the second bhāgaḥ, what is that? Brāhmaṇa bhāgaḥ deals with karma-yōgaḥ. Therefore it is called karma-kāṇḍam. Kāṇḍam also means bhāgaḥ. Karma Kāṇḍam or brāhmaṇaḥ bhāgaḥ teaches us karma-yōgaḥ. āraṇyaka Bhāgaḥ teaches us Upāsana Yōgaḥ. Upāsana Yōgaḥ is taught by āraṇyaka Bhāgaḥ. Therefore it is called Upāsana Kāṇḍam. Kāṇḍam means portion; and then finally, we have upaniṣad Bhāgaḥ, which teaches us Jñāna-Yōga ḥ and therefore it is called Jñāna Kāṇḍam. Karma kāṇḍam of the Vēdās teaches karma-yōgaḥ and helps us in mala nivṛttiḥ and Upāsana Bhāgaḥ teaches upāsana-yōgaḥ and helps us in Vikṣēpaḥ nivṛttiḥ, jñāna kāṇḍam teaches and helps us in Ajñāna nivṛttiḥ.

What about Mantra Bhāgaḥ? Mantra bhāgaḥ or saṁhitā bhāgaḥ deals with prayer or Sukthams which are addressed to the various deities because only if we pray to Lord, we will be able to diagnose our problem. Only a prayerful life will help us in diagnosing the problem. Only then we will come to these Yōgas. If Bhagavān's grace is not there, we will never look inwards. We will be materialistic people; eternally searching for peace, and happiness through materialistic way.

You can never take a treatment unless you diagnose. The problem of human being is a knotty one; diagnose the problem. What is the problem I said? Misplaced searching. Going to a cloth shop and looking for a shoe. Going to a cloth shop and looking for a shoe.

Like that brāhmaṇa who went to the Mahāmaha tank in south Kumbhakonam and every twelve years; there is a big function, and he took dip in that tank and dropped his ring. And he could not and went and search, no place because so many people. And therefore he came out and saw another tank where nobody was there. So he said wonderful place for searching. And he started searching. And another social-service-minded person came and asked what are you searching for? He said I am searching for the lost ring. He said I also want to do some service. Service better than self. Motto. Therefore he wanted to search. Third person came and he also joined and twenty people, went on searching. And then came eleventh person and asked where did you lose. He said in the other tank. Then fool why are you searching here. Here it is comfortable to search. You can search eternally. When we hear this story, we all laugh. But throughout the life, we are doing the same thing. And if the search should be redirected; it requires Bhagavān's anugrahaḥ, therefore Mantra bhāgaḥ alone changes the direction towards yōgaḥ ~ from bhōgaḥ to yōgaḥ.

And Vēdās are a very very voluminous scripture. It has got 4 branches, Ṛg-vēda, Yajur vēda, Sāma-vēda, Atharvaṇa-vēda is very very huge and in the Yajur Vēdā itself two branches Śukla-Yajur Vēdā; Kṛṣṇa-yajur Vēdā and therefore for many people the original Vēdās are inaccessible. And therefore out of compassion, the Lord himself gave us a condensed version of the Vēdā, consisting of all the three yōgas and that condensed Vēdā; Vēdā sāraḥ is the Bhagavat Gīta.

Gīta is a relatively small work consisting of 700 verses which is small compared to the original Vēdās; that Bhagavat Gīta is Vēdā sāraḥ. It occurs in the Mahābhāratam in the form of a dialogue between Kṛṣṇa and Arjuna and if you learn the Gītā, you have learned the entire Vēdā.

And therefore, all our traditional ācāryās point out that you may not be able to learn the Vēdās and original upaniṣads, even if you can't study them, does not matter, at least learn the Gītā.

भगवद्गीता किञ्चिच्चधीता गङ्गाजललवकणिका पीता ।
सकृदपि येन मुरारिसमर्चा क्रियते तस्य यमेन न चर्चा ॥ bhagavadgītā kijcicdadhītā gaṅgājalalavakaṇikā pītā ।

sakṛdapi yēna murārisamarcā kriyate tasya yamēna na carcā ॥

Śankarācārya says that if you do not study any scripture; minimum study the Bhagavad-Gītā. It will be useful in getting a direction to your life. And it is this Bhagavad-Gītā śāstram, this Vēdā sāraḥ which we are going to study from the next class onwards, and this Bhagavad-Gītā is generally studied after studying a set of prayer verses, known as Bhagavad-Gītā Dhyāna slōkās.

This Bhagavad-Gītā has got several commentaries in different languages. Śankarācārya himself has written a very beautiful commentary and one ācāryā known by the name Madhusūdhana Saraswati has written a very beautiful commentary and before the writing the commentary, he writes a few prayer verses known as Gītā Dhyāna slōkās, consisting of 9 verses.

And we always start anything with a prayer, because any undertaking can have any number of obstacles. Today you come to the class, next week something or the other obstacle may come and therefore to ward off the obstacle, generally we chant the prayers. And here we have chosen Madhusūdana Saraswati's 9 prayer verses.

And in these 9 prayer verses, he offers namaskāra to Mahabhāratam; Mahabhāratam namaskāra because Bhagavad-Gītā is part of Mahabhāratam. Then he offers Bhagavad-Gītā namaskāra, looking upon Gītā as sāksāt Saraswati Dēvi, the mother of wisdom; nourishing us with the milk of wisdom.

And thirdly he offers Vyāsa-namaskāra because Vyāsa is the author of the entire Mahabhāratam, including Bhagavad-Gītā and therefore Vyāsa-namaskāra.

and finally Kṛṣṇa namaskāra, because Lord Kṛṣṇa happens to be the Guru, the jagat guru who teaches Arjuna and through Arjuna he is teaching the entire humanity and he is going to teach us also.

Thus we get Bhāratha-namaskāra, Gīta -namaskāra, Vyāsa-namaskāra and Kṛṣṇa-Namaskāra, in 9 verses. In the next class, or next 2 classes, we will see the dhyāna slōkās and thereafter enter into the Bhagavat Gīta proper.

002 Dhyāna slōkās-1

Om

In the last class, I mentioned that there are certain prayer verses known as Gīta dhyāna slōkās, which are generally studied before the actual study of the Bhagavad-Gīta and the purpose of studying the prayer verses is that through these prayer verses we invoke the grace of the Lord so that we will be able to successfully complete the study of the Bhagavad-Gīta, to ward off the obstacles that may come.

And you know that the Bhagavad-Gīta is part of Mahābhāratham but these prayer verses are not part of Mahābhāratham but these are written by a great ācārya by name Madhusūdana Saraswati who wrote these verses before writing a commentary upon the Gīta. The name of his commentary is Gudārtha-Dīpika. Beautiful name, Gudārtha- Dīpika, a lamp which illumines the hidden and deeper meanings of the Bhagavad-Gīta. It is a very famous commentary and it is so famous that another ācārya wrote a commentary on his commentary. And this Madhusūdana Saraswati, before he starts his Gudārtha-Dīpika, writes about 9 verses which are the well known Dhyāna-slōkās.

And I said in the last class that in these 9 verses, Madhusūdana Saraswati offers Namaskāra to Mahābhāratham. Bhāratha-Namaskāra as the most sacred book; then he offers Namaskāra to the Bhagavad-Gīta itself looking upon Gīta as Mother Saraswati, the embodiment of wisdom; then he offers Namaskāra to Vyāsācārya, the author of Mahābhāratham and therefore the author of the Gīta also. And finally he offers Namaskāra to Lord Kṛṣṇa who gives the Gīta teaching to Arjuna. So the teaching belongs to Kṛṣṇa. Vyāsācārya is only a reporter as it were, receiving the teaching and giving it out to us. So Kṛṣṇa Namaskāra is the fourth. Bhāratha Namaskāra, Kṛṣṇa Namaskāra, Vyāsa Namaskāra and Gīta Namaskāra. These four we find in these 9 prayer verses and first we will study the meanings of these prayer verses because later we will start the class with these prayer verses, so that you can enjoy the meaning when we chant later.

First we will chant the verses together. I will rearrange the order of the verses while giving the meaning so that we can go from one Namaskāra to another namaskāra. So the first namaskāra is to Mahābhāratham itself which comes in the 7th verse. Therefore, I will first give you the meaning of the 7th verse. So look at the 4th line of the verse.

Verse No.7 – Mahābhāratha Namaskāra

अमलम् भारतपङ्कजम् amalam bhāratapaṅkajam – May the pure spotless lotus of the Mahābhārata पाराशर्यवचः सरोजम् pārāśaryavacaḥ sarōjam born in the lake of the words of the son of Parasara (Vyasa).. गीतार्थगन्धोत्कटम्. gītārthagandhōtkāṭam which is rich with the fragrance of the import of the Gīta, नानाख्यानककेसरम् nānākhyānakakesaram which has many episodes as its filaments,.. हरिकथासम्बोधनाबोधितम् harikathāsambōdhanābōdhitam. which is expanded through the narration of Hari's stories, अहरहः पेपीयमानम् aharahaḥ pēpiyamānam which is always drunk day after day,.. मुदा mudā joyously सज्जनषट्पदैः sajjanaṣaṭṭpadaiḥ by the bees of noble people लोके lōkē in the world कलिमलप्रध्वंसि kalimalapradhvaṃsi which is the destroyer of the impurities of Kaliyuga भूयाद् नः श्रेयसे bhūyād naḥ śrēyasē - be for our supreme good.

May the pure lotus of the Mahābhārata which was born in the lake of the words of Vyāsa, which is rich with the fragrance of the import of the Gīta, which has many episodes as its filaments, which is expanded through the narration of Hari's stories, which is always drunk day after day joyously by the bees of noble people in the world, and which is the destroyer of the impurities of Kaliyuga be for our supreme good.

I will rearrange the order of the verses, while giving the meaning, so that we can go from one namaskāra to another namaskāra. So the first namaskāra is to the Mahābhāratham itself which comes in the 7th verse. Therefore I will give the meaning of the 7th verse.

Look at the 4th line of the verse. bhāratapaṅkajam na śrēyasē bhūyāt. You know Mahābhāratham is a work composed by Vyāsācārya; it comes under the scriptural literature known as itihāsaḥ. Itihāsaḥ means a scriptural literature which is partially based on history. So historical events are taken, actual events are taken and they are modified here and there and so some masala added (you know what is Masala), and then with a mixture of fact and fiction, this work has been created like a historical movie. The main theme will be based on history but they will add ideas here and there so that movie will be attractive. Thus part fact, and part fiction literature is called the itihāsaḥ. The very word itihāsaḥ, "thus it happened" hāsaḥ means happened, iti, really in this manner it happened and therefore Mahābhāratha stories are supposed to be a real events with slight modifications presented and since deals with the Bhāratha varṁśa, the dynasty of Bharatha, it is named Bhāratha. So bhāratha varṁśa adikrithya pravrtham, bhāratham, and it is called Mahābhāratham because it is a voluminous literature perhaps the biggest in the entire world with 1 lakh verses. 100,000 verses. Bhagavad-Gīta is only 700 verses and this Gīta is part of Mahābhāratham which has got 1 lakh verses. And therefore it is called Mahābhāratham scripture. Let the scripture be naḥ śreyasē, śreyas means our well being; prosperity, happiness, health, Mangalam. Śreyas means Mangalam. Śreyasē bhūyāt means let it be a source of happiness to me. May the study of Mahābhāratham enrich my personality, transform my personality, help me grow physically; physically growth we have enough, emotionally and intellectually and spiritually. For whom? Not for Vyāsa. He is already accomplished. naḥ. naḥ means for us, who are the students of Mahābhāratham. Naḥ means for us śrēyasē bhūyāt. Let it be a source of happiness.

And in this Mahābhāratham is compared to a lotus. Just as a lotus is a very very attractive flower, attractive because of its beauty and because of its fragrance it is attractive to the nose, the smell, and because of the honey it is attractive to the taste also. Catering to the eyes, the nose and the tongue. Therefore it is compared to पङ्कजम् pankajam. pankajam means lotus. So bhāratha pankajam means the Mahābhāratham lotus be a source of happiness to me.

And from this an important idea is conveyed, the study of Mahābhāratha at home is good only. Because there is a general misconception that only Rāmāyaṇam must be studied at home and Mahābhāratham should not be studied, because it is dealing with family quarrel and if you read about family quarrel, in our family also quarrel will come, as though it is not there already. Anyway, this is a very big misconception; it is only a blind belief; it is not at all true. Mahābhāratham study and therefore Gīta Study is an auspicious thing for all. So let it give us joy. Then the rest of the words are the glory of bhāratha lotus, the description we get; each one is an adjective to bhāratha pankajam.

What are the glories? Go back to the 1st line. pārāśaryavacaḥ sarojam. A lotus is born in a pond. Lotus pond is the source of Lotus. If Mahābhāratham is comparable to lotus, naturally the question will be what is the pond out of which the Mahābhāratham lotus has emerged. Here Madhusudhana Saraswati says. pārāśaryavacaḥsa, speech or the words, better speech, speech of whom pārāśara, means Vyāsācārya. pārāśara is the name of Vyāsācārya's father and since Vyāsācārya is the son of pārāśara, pārāśarya's putra, pārāśarya. And vacaḥ means organ of speech, from the mouth of Vyāsācārya, has come the beautiful lotus of mahābhāratham and therefore the mouth is compared to sarōjam, means pond. So vacha sarah, means mouth-pond, or speech-pond, from that pond has emerged, the Mahābhāratham Lotus. So sarōjam.

And amalam, it is a flower without any impurities. It is a pure lotus. The interesting thing is one of the name of the lotus is pankajam. The word pañka means lush; lush means muddied water, and lotus is born in that pond with muddied water; even though the water is lushy and muddied, the lotus is pure without any slush. Just as the lotus is pure, even though it is born in muddied water; similarly Mahābhāratham is very very pure. amalam, without any dōṣaḥ. Amalam means śuddham. Pure in terms of the teaching, without any defect and in terms of the language also it is pure. There is neither grammatical-defect nor content-defect and therefore śuddham.

And this Mahābhāratham lotus is extremely attractive. Gītāthagandhōtkāṭam. utkāṭam means prominent. So popular, famous, well known; attractive; which draws the attention of all the people because of what? gandha utkāṭam, because of the powerful fragrance. The Mahābhāratham lotus has got such a powerful fragrance that anybody around will turn.

Now the question is what is the fragrance of Mahābhāratham? Here the author says: gītārtha. The teachings of the Bhagavad-Gīta, is the fragrance. If the Mahābhāratha is lotus, Bhagavad-Gīta is the fragrance coming out of the Mahābhāratha. In fact, Mahābhāratham is attractive, because of the Gīta. In fact, Mahābhāratham is popular, because of the Gīta. Bhagavad-Gītam ore people know than Mahābhāratham. Therefore gītārtha, means teaching, gandha means fragrance, utkāṭa means prominent or popular; that is popular because of Gīta teaching.

Nānākhayānakakēsaram; any flower will have several filaments, small thread like thing are called filament, which are seen in the flowers. If Mahābhāratham is like a flower, what are the filaments of Mahābhāratham lotus? Here he compares nānākhayāna. ākhayāna means stories, even though Mahābhāratham is one book, there are hundred and thousands of beautiful small stories. In fact many great Sānskrīt scholars have written independent works, based on small stories occurring in the Mahābhāratham. The story of Śakuntala which is beautifully written by the Great Sānskrīt poet, Kalidāsa and which is world famous drama called Abhijñāna Śākuntalam is taken from Mahābhāratha only. Like that there are thousands of stories which can be compared to filaments hanging from the lotus of Mahābhāratha, so nānākhayāna Kēsaram, kēsaram means filaments and ākhayāna means small, small stories, the story of Harischandra; the story of Śakuntala, etc. There are many and it adds to its extra glory.

And not only that: harikathāsambōdhanābōdhitam. Lotus is of two types; one is the lotus bud, the other is the well bloomed expanded lotus. both are beautiful, but the beauty of the bud, you cannot completely enjoy; whereas the fully blossomed lotus is attractive. That is why they buy the bud and with the hand they separate. it will not be beautiful. Naturally it should bloom.

Similarly, the Mahābhāratha lotus is a fully blossomed lotus. It is an expanded lotus. Expanded with what? harikathāsambodhanābodhitam. ābodhitham means expanded; blossomed. Through what? Saṁbōdhana; means narration. Narration of what? Harikathā. the stories of Lord Kṛṣṇa. Even though it is dealing with Bhāratha Vamśa only, but often Mahābhāratha is filled with the stories and exploits of Lord Kṛṣṇa and therefore harikathāsambodhanā means narration of Kṛṣṇa stories, through those stories Mahābhāratha has expanded into hundred thousand verses.

And not only that. sajjanaṣaṭpadaiḥ pepīyamānam. Thus wherever flower is there; honey will be there and attracted by the honey, the honey-bees will go towards those flowers. Similarly, Mahābhāratha contains deep wisdom. On all the subjects under the Sun. Religion is discussed there; philosophy is discussed there; psychology is there; politics is there; sociology is there; human relationship is there; any science that you can think of, Vyāsācārya has very brilliantly discussed in the Mahābhāratham. In fact it is said that what is not there in Mahābhāratha, it cannot be there anywhere and whatever is there anywhere, that all is discussed in bhāratham.

यदिहास्ति तदन्यत्र यन्नेहास्ति न तत्क्वचित् ॥

dharmē ca arthē ca kāmē ca mōkṣē ca bharatarṣabha |
yadihāsti tadanyatra yannēhāsti na tatkvacit ||

There is no topic which is not discussed in Mahābhāratha. So it is not a work of some superstition but it is a very live and valid treasure house of wisdom dealing with every science. And therefore all the students whoever wants to learn is like a honey-bee. And therefore sajjanaṣaṭpadaiḥ. Sajjana means noble people, and who are the noble people, who have got an open mind when they approach the scriptures; those who have got reverence towards the Mahābhāratham such people are called sajjanaḥ. They are like the honey-bee and when they approach Mahābhāratha, they know it is not mere stories for children; behind every story, there is a lessons on psychology, lessons on family problems; lessons on human relationships; lessons on the ultimate truth of the creation. Superficially it is a story but you go behind it, it is study of various sciences. And therefore by the sajjanaṣaṭpadaiḥ, ṣaṭpadam means honey bees. six legged one, honey bees.

And by the people aharahaḥ pepīyamānam, so they bring the honey of wisdom by enquiring into; by the analysis of Mahābhāratha in general and Bhagavad-Gīta in particular, so they suck the honey of wisdom. pepīyamānam, means repeatedly sucked.

Lōkē, in this world, and when do they do that. aharahaḥ, day in and day out. First time, they study they get one meaning, another time they go like a diamond, a totally different facēt of life is brought out. There are psychologists who study every character to unearth valuable lessons on human minds. Study of Karṇa itself is a lifelong study. Study of Duryōdana. Study of Draupadhi. Study of Kunti. Study of Dharmaputra. Every character you analyse, you get valuable lessons. So thus, pepīyamānam mudā; mudā means happily they drink the nectar.

And kalimalapradhvaṃsi. And this Mahābhāratham is a literature, which can destroy the problem which are prevalent in a materialistic universe. Kaliyugaḥ is known for predominant materialism, competition, compromise, cut-throat. This is kaliyugaḥ; the very word Kali means fight and quarrel. Even in sports, there will be cheating. There will be competition. There will be betting. That is the nature of Kali yuga and when there is materialism and value-less-ness are rampant, our mind also will be coloured by that. If we should not be affected by that, Mahābhāratha is the medicine for the Kali malam; malam means the impurity caused by kaliyugaḥ.

So even within family quarrel and of course there is no family stability at all. All these are very big psychological problem for children and psychological problems of present children will be the sociological problems of next generation. When families break down, children will suffer because single parent or no parent or each parent is busy with somebody else. So when such things happen in Kali Yuga, the children suffer and there will be sociological problem and if you want to avoid such problem, there is one medicine; what is that? Mahābhāratham medicine. Therefore he says, kalimalapradhvaṃsi. Pradvvaṃsi means destroyer, remover of malam, the impurities belonging to kaliyugaḥ. kaliyugaḥ is the name of the present materialistic age. And may that Mahābhāratham strengthen me; strengthen my family and strengthen our society. This is Bhāratha Namaskāra. Now we will go to Gīta Namaskāra.

ॐ पार्थाय प्रतिबोधितां भगवता नारायणेन स्वयं

O Mother Bhagavad-Gīta ! I constantly meditate upon You which was taught to Arjuna by Lord Nārāyaṇa Himself, which was composed by Vyāsacārya, the ancient sage, in the middle of Mahābhārata, which consists of eighteen chapters, which showers the ambrosial wisdom of non-duality, which is divine, and which is the enemy of Saṁsāra.

We have read it. I will give you the meaning. So here the author is addressing Bhagavad-Gīta as the Mother. He Amba! You are Saraswati Devi, the mother who will nourish my internal personality. The local mother by feeding the physical food will nourish my physical personality but the Gītam other, by feeding the wisdom-food will nourish my inner personality. And mother knows what type of food should be given when. Liquid food in the beginning stages; then semi-solid food in later stages and thereafter solid food. The right time right food should be given and the child does not know; the mother out of compassion does.

Similarly Bhagavad-Gītam other gives you the wisdom of karma-yōgaḥ in the beginning stages gives the wisdom of Upāsana Yōga in the later stages and also the Jñāna-Yōga, really solid food, when the baby is sufficiently grown up. Therefore wonderful compassionate, loving, nourishing, kind mother you are Oh Gīta !. Therefore He Amba! He Gite!, addressing the Gīta. Gītē, Bhagavad Gītē; tvāmanusandadhāmi, I meditate upon you with reverence.

And what is this Bhagavad-Gīta? We get the description pārthāya pratibōdhitām, a teaching which has been given to Arjuna, one of the pañca-pandavas. pārthā means Arjunah, pratibōdhitām means taught. So pārthāya pratibōdhitām.

Taught by whom? Not any ordinary person, Bhagavadā nārāyaṇēna svayam, by Lord Nārāyaṇa himself, the Omniscient God; and therefore in this teaching, there will be no defect at all. And that is why it is a time-tested wisdom. It has blessed the Society from beginningless time and blesses the society even now and we ourselves can personally see whether Gīta is benefitting us or not. It is a challenge given. Therefore, given by Sakshat Bhagavan himself. Bhagavada Narayane Prathi bodhitham,

And compiled by whom? Kṛṣṇa did not write. Compilation, the reporting is done by vyāsēna grathitām; Reported by Vyāsācārya who is supposed to be an avatāra of Lord Viśṇu.

व्यासाय विष्णु रूपाय व्यास रूपाय विष्णवे |
नमोवै ब्रह्म निलये वासिष्ठाय नमो नमः ॥

vyāsāya Viśṇu rūpāya vyāsa rūpāya viṣṇavē |
namōvai brahma nilayē vāsiṣṭhāyā namō namaḥ ॥

Therefore Vyasācārya's report will be correct. Otherwise like the newspaper report; something happening, something is reported. What can be done. So Viśṇu has taught properly, Vyāsa has reported properly.

And what type of journalist he is? purāṇamuninā, the most experienced ṛṣi who has given us, 18 purāṇās; very experienced ācāryā, who has given the purāṇam like Bhagavatha purāṇam, etc. given by Vyāsa etc.

Where has he given this? madhyemahābhāratam. This Bhagavad-Gīta is occurring in the middle of mahābhārata, in Śānti Parva, when Arjuna faces a crisis and all the resources he had, do not help him. His knowledge, his courage, his strength, his popularity, his beauty, all those things do not help him. At that time Kṛṣṇa gives this teaching. So mahābhāratam madhyē purāṇamuninā vyāsēna grathitām; grathitām means, composed.

And what is the content of the Bhagavad-Gīta? Advaitāmṛtavarṣiṇim. It showers the wisdom of Advaitam. The non-dual infinite truth. How many infinities are possible? Only one. Therefore truth is called Advaitam and Amṛtham means the nectar or the wisdom, the wisdom of Advaitam, i.e., satya jñānam, it showers.

And how big is the Bhagavad-Gīta? Aṣṭādaśadyābinīm, which consists of 18 chapters. 700 and odd verses are there. Therefore, aṣṭā daśa adyābinīm.

And bhavadvēṣiṇīm; bhāvaḥ means saṁsāra and saṁsāra means dissatisfaction with oneself. Self-dissatisfaction is called saṁsāra which alone drives a person to go from one activity to another. Either I am physically dissatisfied, not happy with my colour of my skin or not satisfied with the hair or not satisfied with the teeth arrangement. Some problem or the other; physical dissatisfaction or emotional dissatisfaction like my children does not love me. I have done everything for them. I have worked like a मरु (Bull).

And that girl came yesterday and this boy, my own son has forgotten me. Dissatisfaction. Emotional dissatisfaction or intellectual dissatisfaction; because I want to know what is this life? Why are we born? Where are we going? These are intellectual dissatisfaction? All dissatisfaction put together is called saṁsāra . And what is Mōkṣa. Total satisfaction with myself as I am. This Poornatvam or fulfilment is called Mōkṣa, and Bhagavad-Gīta is the destroyer of the saṁsāra . Therefore bhavadvēṣiṇīm. Dvēṣi means enemy. Destroyer of saṁsāra . And such a Bhagavad-Gīta, I meditate upon before I start the study. Then more Gīta Namaskāra comes.

सर्वोपनिषदो गावो दोग्धा गोपालनन्दनः ।
पार्थो वत्सः सुधीर्भोक्ता दुग्धं गीतामृतं महत् ॥४॥

sarvōpaniṣadō gāvō dōgdhā gōpāla-nandanah|
pārthō vatsaḥ sudhīrbhōktā dugdham gītāmṛtam mahat||4||

All the Upaniṣads are the cows. Kṛṣṇa is the milker. Arjuna is the calf. The pure-minded is the enjoyer (of the milk) The supreme nectar of Gīta is the milk.

What is the Bhagavad-Gīta? Here Madhusūdana Saraswathy says Gīta is not the philosophy of Kṛṣṇa. Gīta is not the philosophy of even Vyāsa. And what is Gīta. It is the teaching which is contained in the Vēdās. So Vēdās are the original scriptures which have been existing in our culture from beginningless time; we do not know when Vēdās started itself and the end portion of the Vēdās is called Upaniṣad which alone gives us this Self-knowledge and Bhagavad-Gīta is the essence of the Upaniṣads. The essence of Vēdānta. And to convey this, the author gives another analogy.

So here, Vēdās especially the Upaniṣadic portion he compares to a cow. sarvōpaniṣadaḥ. All the Upaniṣads belonging to Rig Vēda, belonging to Yajur Vēda, belonging to Sāma Vēda and Atharvana Vēda, all the final portions of all the Vēdās called the Upaniṣads, they are all like cows. They are not cows. They are like cows. What does Kṛṣṇa do? Kṛṣṇa is an expert cowherd boy. We know from mythology, Kṛṣṇa is an expert person who knows how to handle cows.

Similarly Kṛṣṇa knows how to handle Upaniṣadic cows also and therefore what did Kṛṣṇa do? Milked the Upaniṣadic cows, which means extracted the essence from the Upaniṣads. Therefore, gōpālanandanaḥ; gōpālanandanaḥ means, Kṛṣṇa, son of Gōpāla or the cowherd boy and he has milked. Here milking is symbolic, the Upaniṣadic essence has been extracted by him.

And if the cows have to give out the milk generally they keep the calf in front. Otherwise, the cows will not release the milk. When the calf is seen, the cow out of compassion and out of love, gives out the milk. For the Upaniṣadic cow to give the milk, who is the calf? pāṛthō vatsaḥ, Arjuna is like the calf, because keeping Arjuna in front, Kṛṣṇa milked the Upaniṣadic cow and out of this milking came the milk of wisdom.

And what is the milk of wisdom? He has gītāmṛtam iva dugdham. This nectar of Bhagavad-Gīta, the teaching of the Bhagavad-Gīta is the milk and milk is supposed to be a balanced diet.

In between they were telling Milk is not good. Now again they have changed the opinion. They say now that milk can reduce the weight. In Readers' Digest, milk can reduce the weight. so you all can start drinking milk, if you are overweight.

dugdham gītāmṛtam mahat. The great and glorious. Gīta is the milk. This is Gīta namaskāram.

So Bhāratha namaskāram over. Gīta namaskāram is over. Then the next one is Vyāsa namaskāram.

Verse No.2 – Vyāsa Namaskāram lamp ज्ञानमय jñānamaya of wisdom भारततैलपूर्णः bhāratatailapūrṇaḥ filled with the oil of Mahābhārata.

Oh Vyāsācārya, with vast knowledge (and) with eyes as large as the petals of a full-blown lotus! Salutations be to you, by which you has been lighted the lamp of wisdom, filled with the oil of Mahābhārata.

Hey Vyāsa viśālabuddhe. The student is addressing Vyāsācārya. The very word Vyāsa means the one who has divided the Vēdās into four and also the one who has expanded the Vēdic teaching through the 18 purāṇas. So Vyāsa means the divider and the expander. So viv Vyāsa Vēdaniti, Vyāsa. Originally the Vēda was one, but people were not able to study the whole Vēda. Therefore Vyāsa classified them and he called four of his disciples and each disciple was put in charge of one Vēda, so that the burden is shared. This division he has done. Therefore he is called Vyāsa. Not only that he has expanded it through his purāṇas. Thus before doing this job? What was his job. After dividing and expanding he got the name Vyāsa. But before that he must have had some name. His original name is Kṛṣṇa. He is also Kṛṣṇa. Kṛṣṇa is also Kṛṣṇa. Vyāsa is also Kṛṣṇa. Why they are called Kṛṣṇa. Because it seems both of them were dark complexion. Perhaps they chose, you will not have this complex. This colour complexion-complex is so much that even in matrimonial column they write Fair. So any skin colour is beautiful. Yellow or White or dark, or mixture. whatever it might be, because Kṛṣṇa was dark. Draupadi was called Kṛṣṇā. She is also dark. And how to differentiate between this Kṛṣṇa and Vyāsa. To differentiate them, Vyāsācārya is called Kṛṣṇa-Dvaipāyana. Dvaipāyana means the Island-born-Kṛṣṇa. So his initial is different. So Hey Vyāsa!

And how great you are? Viśālabuddē, you are an ācārya of great erudition, whose knowledge is very great in terms of its vastness as well as in terms of the depth. There are some people, who know various subjects, but very little. But there are some specialists, who know one subject deep. But the others do not know. Vyāsācārya had both the width and depth of knowledge. Therefore, viśālabuddhiḥ, means jñānam. One whose knowledge was very great.

And phullāravindāyatapatranetra. Who had beautiful eyes like the petals of a fully bloomed lotus. One whose eyes were beautiful, like the petals of a fully bloomed lotus. Madhusūdhana Saraswathy is glorifying. Vyāsa is supposed to be ugly looking. Here you can take the third eye of wisdom. That was beautiful.

Then tvayā jñānamaya pradīpaḥ prajjvālitaḥ. You are so great that you have lighted the lamp of wisdom. dīpaḥ means lamp, jñānamaya means wisdom.

The knowledge has been kindled by you, with the help of what oil. भारततैलपूर्णः bhāratatāilapūrṇaḥ. With the oil of Mahābhāratham. With the help of Mahābhāratham story, you have lighted the lamp of wisdom. And therefore I offer a Namaskāra because with that lamp, I can remove the ignorance from my gloomy intellect. This is Vyāsa Namaskāra. Thus we have four slōkās, dealing with Bhāratham, Gīta, and Vyāsa. Now we have five more versus, dealing with Bhagavān Kṛṣṇa. That we will see in the next class.

Hari Om.

003 DHYĀNA-SLŌKĀS- 2

Om

We are seeing the meaning of the Bhagavad-Gīta Dhyāna slōkās. These nine Dhyāna slōkās are not part of the Gīta but they are written by one great ācārya, by name Madhusudhana Saraswathy, before he wrote a brilliant commentary on the Gīta and because these verses are nice-well presented verses, these verses were used by all the later students of the Gīta and therefore, they became almost an integral part of the Bhagavad-Gīta. And I said in the last class that in these 9 verses the author is offering Namaskāra to Mahābhāratham, Bhagavad-Gīta, Vyāsācārya and Bhagavān Kṛṣṇa. Bhāratha is worshipped because Bhagavad-Gīta is a part of the Mahābhāratham. Bhagavad-Gīta itself is worshipped, because we look upon the Gīta wisdom as Mother Saraswati herself and we offer Namaskāra to Vyāsācārya because he is the author of the Mahābhāratha and therefore the author of the Gīta also and he is considered to be one of the incarnations of Lord Viṣṇu. And finally, the author offers Namaskāra to Bhagavān Kṛṣṇa himself who happens to be the teacher of Arjuna. Of these, we have seen 4 verses, through which we did Bhāratha Namaskāra, Gīta Namaskāra and Vyāsa Namaskāra. And we have got 5 more verses which happens to be in the form of Bhagavān Kṛṣṇa Namaskāra.

We will see the meaning of those five verses today. Before that we will read the Dhyāna slōkās once together.

So now we will see those verses which deal with Lord Kṛṣṇa.

Verse No.3 – Kṛṣṇa Namaskāra

प्रपन्नपरिजाताय तोत्रवेत्रैकपाणये ।
ज्ञानमुद्रायकृष्णायगीतामृतदुहेनमः ॥३॥

jñānamudrāya kṛṣṇāya gītāmṛtaduhē namaḥ||3||

नमः namaḥ salutations कृष्णाय kṛṣṇāya to Kṛṣṇa ज्ञानमुद्राय jñānamudrāya who is with the Jñānamudrā प्रपन्नपरिजाताय prapannapārijātāya who is like a wish-yielding tree for those who surrender unto him, तोत्रवेत्रैकपाणये tōtravētraikapāṇaye who has a whip in one hand, गीतामृतदुहे gītāmṛtaduhe and who has milked the nectar of Gīta.

Salutation to Lord Kṛṣṇa who is with Jñānamudrā, who is like a wish-yielding tree for those who surrender unto him, who has a whip in one hand, and who has milked the nectar of Gīta.

kr̥ṣṇāya namaḥ. Our Namaskāra to Lord Kṛṣṇa who is of the above description. prapannapārijātāya. pārijātā, is a mythological tree which is supposed to be in the heavens and the uniqueness of this tree is if you sit under the tree and desire for anything, by your mere wish the tree will provide whatever you ask for. And therefore this tree is called a wish-yielding tree. It is unfortunate that such trees are not available here. We could have started with water! In the heaven it is said it is there. Here Lord Kṛṣṇa is compared to such a pārijātā vṛkṣa, which means that by praying to the Lord, you can get anything, whether it is Dharma, Artā, Kāma, or mōkṣa.

All the puruṣārtaḥs the Lord will give, if only we ask, and therefore the condition is presented prapanna. For those people, who surrender unto him. So prapannapārijātāya.

Then tōtravētrēkapāṇayē. In the Mahābhāratha battle field, Lord Kṛṣṇa was the Charioteer of Arjuna and therefore he was in the front as a driver and holding a whip in the hand to drive the chariot. Tōtravētram, the handle of a whip. Thōtra means whip, vētra means the handle. Tōtravētra means whip handle. ēkapāṇayē, he is holding in one hand to Drive the Chariot. And this indicates that the Lord, even though he is Lord of the Universe, he does not consider any job as below his dignity.

Through this he is conveying an important message. Whatever profession you have, whatever job you are doing, do it with pride. Do not look down upon any profession; may you maintain the dignity of any labour that you undertake. Bhagavān did not feel inferior to be a driver of Arjuna. He drives the whole world. But he still does not feel bad about it and that is the message he gives. Do any action with commitment, love, enthusiasm and pride. totravetrekapāṇaye.

And at the same time, not only he is the most effective worker, Lord was the greatest jñāni as well as the greatest Guru of Arjuna. Therefore jñānamudrāya kr̥ṣṇāya. With the help of other hand, he was wielding or courting the jñānamudrāya which is otherwise called the cin mudrā. Cin mudrā is a symbolic presentation of the philosophical teaching contained in the Gīta and contained in the upaniṣads and this cinmudrā indicates jīvātma-paramātma-aikyam. This index finger jīvātma, the individual, who is at the moment a limited entity having a beginning and an end, a mortal, finite entity and not only he himself is a mortal saṁsāri, this is threatening finger also. In Sānskrīt, this finger is called, tarjani. Tarjani means Tarjayati iti Tarjani. (I will see you). Threatening finger it is. This finite Jīvātma is a threat to himself as well as a threat to the Society. And this Jīvātma is unfortunately associated with the three fingers naturally. The thumb is away in a distant whereas the three fingers are closer to this finger. They represent the three guṇās, Satva, Rajas and Tamō-guṇa. The three śarīrams. Do you remember, three śarīrams, stūla, sukṣma, kāraṇa śarīrams, associated with the material body. These three fingers represent perishable material body, the Jīvātma is associated with that.

And what is spiritual sādhana? Separate this Jīvātma from the material vesture, the perishable body, the changing guṇā, from them you separate and this thumb represents the paramātmā. The thumb represents Paramātmā because with the help of the Thumb alone, the other four fingers can function. Any job you want to do, including writing, you require the support of the powerful thumb. Thus without the help of the thumb try to do any work and it will be difficult. Just as the thumb powerful thumb supports all the other fingers, Paramātmā is the ādhāraḥ, the support of the whole creation.

And now the Jīvātma is away from the Paramātmā and what should the Jīvātma do, get detached from the matter vesture and join the paramātmā thumb. And when the Jīvātma and Paramātmā join together, Jīvātma paramātmā aikyam takes place. Now what happens? You have got a circle.

And what is the uniqueness of the Circle? A circle does not have a beginning or an end. It is pūrṇam; it is anādi, It is anantam. Once the jīvātma merges with Paramātmā, the mortal jīvātma becomes the immortal paramātmā, the apūrṇa jīvātma becomes pūrṇa. Therefore the whole spiritual sādhana is: jīvātma has to detach from the three guṇās, i.e. matter and attach to paramātmā. Therefore what is the Sādhana, detachment-attachment is the sādhana.

Now also we have done detachment-attachment. Other way round. We have detachment from Paramātmā and attachment to everything else. Just the reverse. Detach from Anātma and attach with Paramātmā and that will give you immortality. And this wisdom of immortality, Kṛṣṇa is symbolically presenting through jñāna Mudrā or cinmudrā. And to that Lord, who is the greatest Jñāni, who is the greatest Karmi, and who is the kindest Lord, who blesses the devotee with everything he or she asks for, to that powerful Lord Kṛṣṇa my Namaskāram.

And because of these reasons alone, Kṛṣṇa becomes the most popular one. The very word Kṛṣṇa means, the one who attracts the devotee. Imagine somebody gives whatever you want. Naturally you will be attracted to that person. Therefore, by blessing the Humanity, the Lord has become the greatest attractor. Therefore Sarvān Bhakthān karṣathi. ākarṣathi iti Kṛṣṇa. And to that Kṛṣṇa, I offer my Namaskāra. This is the first verse on Lord Kṛṣṇa.

Now we will go to the next verse. 5th verse.

Verse No.5 – Kṛṣṇa Namaskāra

वसुदेवसुतं देवं कंसचाणूरमर्दनम् ।
देवकीपरमानन्दं कृष्णं वन्दे जगद् गुरुम् ॥५॥

Vasudēvasutaṁ dēvaṁ kaṁsacāṇūramardanam |
dēvakīparamānandaṁ kṛṣṇaṁ vandē jagadgurum||5||

वन्दे vandē I salute, देवं कृष्णम् Dēvaṁ kṛṣṇam Lord Kṛṣṇa वसुदेवसुतम् vasudēvasutam..who is the son of Vasudēva, कंसचाणूरमर्दनम्..kaṁsacāṇūramardanam the destroyer, of Kaṁsa and Cānūra.. देवकिपरमानन्दम् Dēvakīparamānandaṁ who is the supreme ānanda of Dēvaki jagadgurum जगद्गुरुम् and who is the teacher of the world....

I salute Lord Kṛṣṇa, the world teacher, the son of Vasudēva, the destroyer of Kaṁsa and Cānūra, the supreme bliss of Dēvaki.

5th verse is also Kṛṣṇa Namaskāra. kṛṣṇaṁ vandē. I offer Namaskāra to Lord Kṛṣṇa. And what is the greatest of the Lord? As a member of a family, as a person Kṛṣṇa was great, as a member of the Society, citizen of the world, Kṛṣṇa was great and as the Jagat Guru, Kṛṣṇa is great. Greatness of Kṛṣṇa in three levels we get the description here.

vasudēvasutam Dēvaṁ. So the Lord who is the son of Vasudēva. And not only the son of Vasudēva, Dēvaki Parama Anandam; a great source of joy to Dēvaki, his mother. Therefore, as a member of the family, Lord Kṛṣṇa gave joy to the family members.

This is where duty begins. We should give happiness to our family members, then expanding we give happiness to the community, then expanding, we give happiness to the next generation also. Some people are very good, they take care of the family; but their contribution to the Society is Zero. There are great service-minded people, who take care of all the children in the Society and leave out their own children at home. Children will be yearning for the father or mother; the lady has no time. Why? Slum children I am taking care of. That is also not correct. One has duty to the family. One has duty to the contemporary society; one has duty to posterity also. Kṛṣṇa fulfilled all the three successfully. Therefore vasudēvasutaṁ dēvakīparamānandaṁ indicates, Kṛṣṇa's contribution to the family.

And what did he do the Society? kaṁsacāṇūramardanam. He destroyed all the asurās who were a threat to the peace and harmony of the Society; who were embodiments of adharmā; such people Lord Kṛṣṇa killed and saved humanity from adharmā.

परित्राणाय साधूनां विनाशाय च दुष्कृताम् |
धर्मसंस्थापनार्थाय सम्भवामि युगे युगे ||४ -८||

paritrāṇāya sādḥūnām vināśāya ca duṣkṛtām |
dharmasaṁsthāpanārthāya sambhavāmi yūgē yūgē ||4- 8||

Thus by establishing dharma, Lord contributed to their Society; his contemporary society.

Now the next question how did he contribute to the posterity? Because by killing Kāmsa and Chānura, we are not going to get any benefit, because we have got different types of Kāmsa and Chānura. Kāmsa and Chānura are the names of the asurās. So to the posterity, Kṛṣṇa's contribution is the Bhagavad-Gīta. jagadgurum kṛṣṇaṁ. He taught the Bhagavad-Gīta to Arjuna and through Arjuna, he has given the wisdom to not only the contemporary humanity, but even the posterity. Mahābhāratha war is supposed to have taken place, 3102 B.C. Somebody has calculated. So sometime around 3000 b.c. Now it is 2000 AD. 5000 years have gone. Even now Bhagavad-Gīta is fresh and alive; capable of helping the students of the Gīta. What better contribution we require from Kṛṣṇa. Therefore, Kṛṣṇa is called jagadgurum. The Lord, the teacher, the preceptor of the universe; to that wonderful Lord Kṛṣṇa, I offer my Namaskārah. Thus 2 verses on Kṛṣṇa are over.

Now we will see the next verse on Kṛṣṇa. Verse No.6.

सा रणनदी sā raṇanadī That battle river, भीष्मद्रोणतटा bhīṣmadroṇataṭā with Bhīṣma and Drōṇa as the banks,. जयद्रथजला jayadrathajalā with Jayadratha as the waters, गान्धारनीलोत्पला gāndhāranīlotpalā. with the King of Gāndhara as the blue lotus... शल्यग्राहवती śalyagrāhavatī – with Salya as the shark,.....कृपेण वहनी kṛpeṇa vahanī with Krpa as the current,कर्णेन वेलाकुला karṇena velākulā with Karna as the high waves, अश्वत्थामविकर्णघोरमकरा aśvatthānavikarṇaghōramakarā.. with Asvatthama and Vikarna as the terrible crocodiles (a kind of marine animal) दुर्योधनावर्तिनी duryodhanāvartinī. with Duryōdhana as the whirlpool,..खलु khalu that was indeed उत्तीर्णा uttīrṇā crossed over (with) पाण्डवैः pāṇḍavaiḥ by the Pāṇḍavās, केशवः keśavaḥ Lord Kṛṣṇa, कैवर्तकः kaivartakaḥ was the ferryman.

The battle river with Bhīṣma and Drōṇa as the banks, with Jayadratha as the waters, with the kind of Gāndhāra as the blue lotus, with Śalya as the shark, with Kṛpa as the current, with Karṇa as the high waves, with Asvatthama and Vikāraṇa as terrible crocodiles, and with Duryōdhana as the whirlpool was indeed crossed over by the Pāṇḍavās. Lord Kṛṣṇa was the ferryman.

kaivartakaḥ kēśavaḥ. In the 4th line, we have an expression kaivartakaḥ kēśavaḥ. kaivartakaḥ means a boatman. So the one who knows to ride a boat; to steer a boat; even in the most tempestuous situation and in a most treacherous river, the Lord can drive the boat. And in this beautiful verse, the Mahābhāratha war is compared to a treacherous river. It is an analogy. Mahābhāratha war is compared to a treacherous river, with so many varieties of dangers lurking and the Pāṇḍavās had to cross the river to save themselves and this was the biggest crisis and the biggest challenge in their lives.

For the Pāṇḍavās, it was the Mahābhāratha war and for every human being, there are situations in life which are treacherous which are trivial, which are trying and which are dangerous. And a person who is caught up in such a situation is called Artha Puruṣa. Arthaḥ means one who is helpless. One who is in soup; one who is cornered; and one who does not know how to get out of the situation wherein all doors are closed and Pāṇḍavās were Ārtas when they had to face the Mahābhāratha war and at that crucial moment, Lord Kṛṣṇa became the saviour. When they sent the SOS, you know SOS, save our souls, Lord Kṛṣṇa, became the saviour, and in the scriptures, such a saviour is called ārta trāṇa parāyaṇā.. ārtānām ārthi hantāram; there is a ślōka.

And what is the danger that Pāṇḍavās faced is described and what are the dangers involved in the Mahābhāratha war is described here.

For this river like Mahābhāratha war, who were the two shores or banks of the river. It says bhīṣmadrōṇataṭā. If Mahābhāratham is compared to the river, Bhīṣma and Drōṇa were the banks which determined the direction of the war-river. Just as the banks determine the direction of the river; similarly, these people were two powerful warriors who can decide the course of the war. That is challenge No.1. In fact two challenges.

Then what is the next problem? jayadrathajalā. The waters of the river is none other than Jayadratha, the Sindhu raja, the king of Sindhu dēśa, who was also on the side of Kauravās and very very powerful. And he is like the river whose depth cannot be fathomed. And him the Pāṇḍavās had to face. Crisis no.3. Everyone is a danger.

And gāndhāranīlōtpalā. gāndhāra, the king and prince of gāndhāradēśa, the king of gāndhāradēśa is by name Subhalah and the prince of the gāndhāradēśa was Śakuni and the Gāndhāri is the daughter from gāndhāra dēśa; therefore Gāndhāri's brother and father, especially brother Śakuni is comparable to nīlōtpalā. Like the blue lily in the waters, which is very attractive but when you go near, there is slush and you get trapped. Thus Śakuni is the most deceptive water, like the blue lily in the waters. So gāndhāranīlotpalā.

And śalyagrāhavatī. Śalya, another king of Mādra dēśa. Mādri, who is the wife of Pāndu, comes from Mādra dēśa, and king of Mādra dēśa is Śalya. he was another powerful person, related to Pāndu's wife is Mādri, but he joined the opposite party. He is the relative and joined the opposite party. And he was like grāhaḥ. Crocodile. So Śalya is like the crocodile in the river.

And kṛpēṇa vahanī. Kripācārya, another great archer; who was the teacher of all the Pāṇḍavās. Along with the Drōṇācārya, Kripācārya was also a teacher of Pāṇḍavās and Kauravās and Yādhavās; such a powerful archer. And he was also unfortunately on the opposite side and he is like vahanī. Like the powerful undercurrent. Undercurrent you never know; superficially it is very calm and you go there, you go there and it just drags. And Kripa was like the powerful current.

And there was Karṇa. karṇena velākulā. Karṇa was like the turbulent waves in the waters. velākulā. Vela means waves. ākulā. Turbulent. Turbulent, noisy, tossing, tornado like waves. Karṇa was powerful like a wave.

Then aśvatthānavikarṇaghoramakarā. And there were so many varieties of Makara. Makara is a type of man eating fish. There are certain flesh eating fish also. Smaller ones and bigger ones are there. And who are they. Aśvatthāma. The son of Drōṇācārya. Then vikarṇa. Brother of Duryōdhana, son of Dhṛtarāṣṭra and they are like gorah makarā, the flesh eating fish type of piraanaah, supposed to be flesh eating fish. So they are like that. Sharks. Jaws movie you might have seen. so they are like the shark in the river.

What about Duryōdhana? duryōdhanāvartinī. āvartinī, means a whirlpool. An eddy, that which moves in a cyclic fashion. You know if you get caught in that, everything will be suck. Bermuda Triangle you would have read. Where even ships disappear. So who is that? Duryōdhana is like the eddy or whirlpool of the river Mahābhāratha, raṇanadī.

And Pāṇḍavās, with a feeble catamaran. They want to cross the river. How is it humanly possible? What we know is that they crossed. It is impossible but they made it. And how was it possible? Because of the skilful boatman; oarsman, and who was that skilful director? kaivartakaḥ keśavaḥ. That means what Madhusūdana Saraswathy says, that tomorrow if you face such a situation, then you can also surrender to the Lord, you will find out a way. As somebody nicely said when all the doors are closed, remember; all the doors are not closed. When all the doors are closed, remember, what, all the doors are not closed!! So therefore, Lord will help out all the Ārthās. So three verses on Kṛṣṇa we have seen. Now we will go to the 8th verse.

Verse No.8 – Kṛṣṇa Namaskāra

मूकं करोति वाचालं पङ्गुं लङ्घयते गिरिम् । यत्कृपा तमहं वन्दे परमानन्दमाधवम् ॥८॥

mūkaṃ karōti vācālaṃ paṅguṃ laṅghayatē girim|
yatkrpā tamahaṃ vandē paramānandamādhavam||8||

अहं वन्दे aham vandē. I salute. तम् tam that परमानन्दमाधवम् paramānandamādhavam Lord Kṛṣṇa who is the supreme. ānanda यत्कृपा yatkrpā and whose grace.. करोति karōti makes मूकम् mūkam the dumb वाचालम् vācālam eloquent.. पङ्गुं लङ्घयते paṅguṃ laṅghayatē (and) the cripple crosses गिरिम् girim a mountain.....

I salute Lord Kṛṣṇa who is the supreme ānanda, and whose grace makes the dumb eloquent (and) the cripple cross a mountain.

paramānandamādhavam vandē. So I salute Mādhava. Mādhava means Lakṣmipathi. Srīpathiḥ. Mā means Lakṣmidēvi. dhava. Consort or husband. Mā dhava means Srī Pathi.

And what type of Nārāyaṇa? Paramānanda. Naturally, Lakṣmi is in your hands. If money is in the hand, who will not smile? Therefore, Lord is very very smart. Whether other things are there or not, he has kept Lakṣmi besides. So naturally Parama ānanda. And here it is not wealth in the form of money. Remember, the greatest wealth is wisdom. Mere wealth alone need not give ānanda; in fact, often wealth gives problems and causes quarrel among children. In fact, they wait for our death. So remember, Lakṣmi is a source of ānanda only when Saraswati is there. And therefore Lord had wisdom also and therefore Parama ānandah.

And what does that Lord do? mūkaṃ vācālaṃ karōti. So he makes a dumb person an eloquent speaker, if only he surrenders to the Lord. That is, the Lord can do anything, he is Sarva śaktiman. So mūkaṃ vācālaṃ karōti. The other way round also. What is that? A person who talks too much, the Lord silences also. Appropriately.

Then paṅguṃ girim laṅghayatē. He makes a lame person climb even Everest mountain. He is capable of giving strength. You know lame person have climbed Everest. So many handicapped people have climbed Everest. Because of what? Their will power, which is the blessings of the Lord. Therefore, he makes the lame an Olympic champion.

Then, yatkrpā, means that Mādhava kṛpa, the grace of Mādhava, makes all this possible. So Mādhava kripa, mūkaṃ vācālaṃ karōti, paṅguṃ giriṃ laṅghayatē, taṃ mādham ahaṃ vandē. I salute.

And which means what? Here, for a Gīta student what is the mountain? The Gīta study. because 700 verses are there. And we are able to complete in a class 3-4 verses. We have been seeing. at the rate of 3-4 verses a day, if we have to complete 700 verses, how many weeks are required is a home work. Tell me next week. How many weeks? Therefore how many months and therefore how many years required; I would not tell you now, you will not come to the next class. So do not feel diffident, you can climb the Gīta mountain. And the successfully complete the study, if only you surrender to the Lord. That is why we are starting with a prayer. Nammala mudiyumo, mudiyatho? Oh, Lord you make it possible. All our engagements will be on days other than Mondays. Bhagavān will adjust. And now comes the 5th and final verse on Lord Kṛṣṇa.

यं ब्रह्मा वरुणेन्द्ररुद्रमरुतः स्तुन्वन्ति दिव्यैः स्तवैर्वेदैः

नमः namaḥ Salutations तस्मै देवाय tasmai dēvāya to that Lord (Viṣṇu) यम् yam whom ब्रह्मा वरुणेन्द्ररुद्रमरुतः brahmā varuṇēndrarudramarutaḥ Brahma, Varuna, Indra, Rudra and Vāyu, स्तुवन्ति stuvanti praise दिव्यैः स्तवैः divyaiḥ stavaiḥ through divine hymns, यम् yam whom. सामगाः sāmagaḥ the singers of Sāmavēdā गायन्ति gāyanti invoke वेदैः vēdaiḥ through the Vēdās साङ्गपदक्रमोपनिषदैः sāṅgapadakraṃopaniṣadaiḥ with their limbs, Pada, Krama and Upaniṣads, यम् yam whom योगिनः yōginaḥ the wise पश्यन्ति paśyanti see ध्यानावस्थित तद्गतेन मनसा dhyānāvasthitatadratena manasā. with a contemplative mind directed towards Him. यस्य yasya and whose अन्तम् antaṃ limit सुरासुरगणाः surāsura-gaṇāḥ (even) the Dēvas and asurās न विदुः na viduḥ do not know.

Salutations to Lord (Viṣṇu) whom Brahmā, Varuṇa, Indra, Rudra and Vāyu praise through divine hymns, whom the singers of Sāmavēdā invoke through the Vēdās with their limbs, Pada, Krama and Upaniṣads, whom the wise see with a contemplative mind directed towards Him, and whose limit (even) Dēvās and Asurās do not know.

tasmai dēvāya namaḥ. You can understand. Prostration to that Lord. Dēvaḥ, means God. And what type of God?. Not ordinary God. Go back to the first line; yaṁ stuvanti. Which God is worshipped by so many other deities like Brahma, Varuṇa, Indra, Marut; they are all names of various deities described in our scriptures. And of these deities, Brahma is the greatest one, because he is the creator of this world, even that Brahma worships Viṣṇu. From that it is very clear, how great Viṣṇu is or Kṛṣṇa is.

Stuvanti. They all glorify; sing the glory. How? divyaiḥ stavaiḥ; through divine hymns, sacred sthōthrams, sacred prayers; if you read Bhāgavadham, we will find of and on, the Stuthi comes, Dhruva Sthuthi, Kunti Sthuthi; Rudra Sthuthi. So many devotees will glorify. Even Brahma comes and glorifies Viṣṇu. If they themselves glorify. How glorious He must be. And not only that. They all glorify in the higher world. Because they are not locally available.

Even here on the earth, all the devotees of the Lord glorify him, sāmagāḥ gāyanti. Sāmagāḥ means the chanters of the Sāmavēdā. gāḥ, the chanter or the singer, which represent all the four vēdās; therefore those people who chant the four vēdās. There Sāma is specifically mentioned because Sāma vēda is in musical form. And therefore all the vaidikās sing the glory of the Lord, vēdāiḥ. Through the 4 vēdās.

aṅga-pada-kramōpaniṣadai. Not only Vēdās. Aṅgas, Vēdā has got so many satellite scriptures. Secondary scriptures are there, which are meant to elaborate Vēdās, which I have told in the introduction as the smṛti-granthas. So aṅgaḥ means Vēdā aṅgāni, 6 aṅgās are there; we need not go to the details; it is enough if we note secondary scriptures called Vēdāṅgaḥ.

And pada; krama, Pādaḥ and Krama represent different types of chanting the Vēdās. They had ingeniously devised different types of chanting of the Vēdās; one method of chanting is called Pāda chanting. Pada Padāḥ. Where each word is chanted separately. Instead of chanting Parthaya.... you have to Parthāya, prathibōthitham... bhagavadhām, (we will forget) each word is taken as a sentence. Then in krama. They join 2 two words. 1-2, 2-3 parthāya prathibōditham, prathibōditham bhāgavadham, bhagavadha nārāyaṇēna. this is krama pada. There is a Jaṭa Pāṭa. Where they have 1-2, 2-1, 1-2; 2-3, 3-2, 2-3; 3-4, 4-3, 3-4. This is Jaṭa Pāda. You can try. Pārthaya.....

And then comes Ghana Pāta.. A toughest form of chanting, where they have to do 1-2, 2-1, 1-2-3, 3-2-1, 1-2-3; 2-3, 3-2, 2-3-4, 4-3-2, 2-3-4. Even to talk in numbers it is difficult. Like that the words have to be joined and chanted. That is Ghana Pāṭa. All these different types of chanting are used for the glorification of the Lord. Therefore they sing your Glory.

And not only that, yōginaḥ yaṃ paśyanti. Great Jñānis, Great meditators see the Lord in their inner mind; they see the Lord manasā tadgatēna, with their mind which is concentrated on the Lord. So with the help of a one pointed mind, ēkāgra manasa, the Yōgis visualise or perceive the Lord, not outside, inside within. So dyānāvasthita. In the state of meditation. Yōgis perceive the Lord inside. Devotees see the Lord outside, Yōgis see the Lord inside. So Yōginaḥ, yaṃ paśyanti.

And yasyāntaṃ na viduḥ surāsura-gaṇā. Even though the Lord is described in the scriptures as a person, the real God is not a person. Even though God takes a personal form, for the sake of the devotee, the real God is not a person.

Why do we say so? Because if God is also a person, like you and I, what will happen? Can you guess? There will be limitation. First limitation is what? If you are in the Sterling Club, you are not at home. If you are at home, you are not in Sterling Club. This is called spacial limitation. And there will be time-wise limitation, if you are in this century, you are not in the previous or later centuries; there will be mortality. Therefore, real Bhagavān does not have time-wise limitation and space-wise limitation. And where will be that God? Important. Khon Bhanēga Croredpathi. Who does not have time-wise and space-wise limitation. Vaikunṭha and Kailāsa. That is not the answer. If God is limitless, that God is in Vaikunṭha also, in Kailāsa also, in the Sterling Club also.

So he says that real God many people do not know. Therefore surāsura-gaṇā, so even the Gods Dēvās and Asurās, na viduḥ, do not know. yasyāntaṃ. Antha means the limit of that Lord. What type of limit? Both limits. space-wise limit of the Lord as well as the time-wise limit of the Lord; even Dēvās and Asurās, do not know. Why they do not know? Because there limit is not there; because Bhagavān is limitless.

So Bhagavān has got two forms; one is a limited human form, temporarily taken for the sake of the devotee and limitless space_like form, which is his real nature. All the details we will get in the Gīta. Kṛṣṇa himself will say, that devotees think that I am Mr. Kṛṣṇa located in Gokulam or some place. They are all fools; they take my body as me. My body is only Māya mānuṣa vēṣa. The real I am all-pervading. To that all-pervading Lord namaḥ. I offer Namaskāra. That means He will be available even in the 21st century in Sterling Club also. That Lord is there to bless the students of the Gīta. And May that Lord bless us all to successfully study and understand this great scripture. With this Dhyāna slōkās of the Gīta is over.

From the next class, we will enter into Gīta proper. And try to come regularly and if possible if you can write some kind of notes also, it will be useful, because you cannot keep all the ideas in the mind, as it is you have memory problem. Nice to keep some kind of notes, you can make the points in the class or go home and keep a salient features and share this with the family if they will listen to you. It will be a revision. Hari Om.

Om

Having completed the dhyāna slōkās, now we will enter the first chapter of the Bhagavad-Gīta and the first chapter happens to be an introduction to the teaching of the Gīta. It is in the form of a dialogue between Lord Kṛṣṇa and Arjuna, begins only in the 2nd chapter, especially in the 11th verse.

From the 2nd chapter 11th verse, the actual Gīta teaching begins and that is why Ādi Śankarācārya also, who writes a commentary on the Gīta, begins his commentary only from the 2nd chapter, 11th verse. He does not write a commentary on the 1st Chapter and reason is that the first chapter happens to be an introduction to the Gīta. But even though it is only an introduction, we cannot disregard the chapter because introduction is equally important and it puts the foundation for the Gīta dialogue to take place.

And therefore we will be seeing the 1st Chapter also and the 1st chapter that is the introductory chapter serves two purposes. The first purpose of the first chapter is presenting the basic human problem known as saṁsāra . So the presentation or the description of the basic human problem known as saṁsāra comes in the first chapter.

I call this basic human problem, because this human problem is universal, irrespective of the nationality, irrespective of religion, caste, education, sex, age, the āśrama; irrespective of all the superficial human differences, the basic problem of saṁsāra is common. And this does not belong to a particular time of history. This problem is a human problem at any time of history. This was faced by Arjuna 5,000 years before and we are also facing or we will face in this century also and even after 10,000 years if the human-beings are going to survive, they will continue to have this problem.

And therefore, I am calling this as basic or fundamental problem, which the scriptures call saṁsāra . Presentation of this human disease, known as bhāva-rōgaḥ; Saṁsārāh rōgaḥ is the first purpose of the first chapter.

And why should Vyāsācārya describe the saṁsāra -disease in the first Chapter? Because the entire Gīta śāstra happens to be a remedy for this universal-disease. The entire Gīta śāstra consisting of 17 chapters from the 2nd chapter onwards is presenting a remedy to this and therefore it is known as mōkṣa-śāstra. Mōkṣa-śāstram means a scripture which deals with the remedy for the human problem of saṁsāra . And therefore unless we know the disease, we cannot appreciate the importance and relevance of the remedy.

And therefore saṁsāra varṇanam is the first purpose of the prathama adhyāyaḥ and that is why the very chapter is called Arjuna Viṣāda Yōgaḥ. In fact, here the word Viṣāda means saṁsārah. It is Arjuna saṁsāra Yōgaḥ. So the human problem faced by Arjuna, in a particular context. This is the first purpose of the first chapter and what is that description I will deal with soon.

The second purpose of the first chapter is introducing the gūru and the śiṣya whose dialogue is going to be the Gīta teaching, so the introduction of the preceptor, the spiritual guide, viz., Lord Kṛṣṇa, and Arjuna, the spiritual-seeker; they have to be introduced, because the entire Gīta is in the form of a dialogue between them. Now I will briefly discuss these two topics. Let us take the first one.

What is the description of saṁsāra ; the human problem can be presented in different ways; just like a disease can be explained in different ways; each system defines the disease in different ways. If an allopathic doctor describes or defines a disease, he has got a particular way; but the very same disease, if is diagnosed by an Ayurvēda doctor, he has got only 3 principles, vātam, pittam, kapham. One person may say jaundice, cancer or this or that; allopathic presentation of the problem but ayurvēda will present; but that this person the same but the presentation is different.

Similarly, the scriptures also present the universal human problem in different formats in different contexts and in the first chapter, Vyāsācārya presents in a particular fashion and what is that? Vyāsācārya points out that saṁsāra is a combination of three diseases. It is a syndrome. Not of one problem. but three diseases known as and rāgaḥ, śōkaḥ and mohaḥ. The combination of these three is called saṁsāra .

What are these three? The first one is rāgaḥ. It is an important word, whose significance must be clearly grasped, throughout the Gīta Kṛṣṇa will repeat this word very often, especially those people associated with carnatic music, they must be very alert. (they will ask Kalyani, Kambodhi). This is Vēdāntic rāgaḥ. The word Rāgaḥ means attachment; emotional dependence, psychological addiction is Rāgaḥ.

And when we talk about Rāgaḥ in the Bhagavad-Gīta very often, we must differentiate the Rāgaḥ or attachment from love, which is a very very similar and closer emotion. While attachment is very much criticised in the Gīta love is something very much glorified in the Gīta. While attachment is presented as a trait of a Saṁsāri, love is presented as a trait and characteristic of a liberated saintly person. And therefore the word 'attachment' and 'love' must be very clearly differentiated.

Vēdānta is against attachment. But Vedānta is all for love. Now how do you differentiate attachment and love?

As I said the first difference, attachment is based on selfishness. I am attached to a person. I am emotionally hooked or dependent or holding on to a person based on selfishness, which means all the time I think of what do I get; what do 'I' get out of this particular relationship. I never bother about what the other person gets out of this relationship. Either I do not care or it is only secondary. I am always interested in my happiness and for the sake of my happiness, when I emotionally depend upon a person, that selfish leaning; that selfish dependence is called Rāgaḥ.

Whereas Love is a totally different relationship, it is based on selflessness where I am not going to emphasize very much on what do 'I' get out of it, but I am interested in the other person also. Not that I should ignore my own well-being but not at the cost of other person. Therefore, love is based on selflessness whereas attachment is based on selfishness.

And the second difference which is a corollary of the first one is attachment is always in the form of taking. I hold on to things and situations and people for taking something, whereas love is something which is based on giving and sacrifice. One is in the form of taking; another is in the form of giving.

Thirdly, attachment is always conditional. That as long as I am going to be benefitted by this relationship, as long as I am comfortable I hold on to that. The moment I am not comfortable, I drop the relationship like a hot potato and that conditional psychological dependence is called attachment; whereas love is not based on conditions. It is unconditional.

And next, attachment invariably comes from a weak mind which is empty; which is not happy within itself and therefore it depends upon external factors for satisfaction, happiness, fulfilment, etc.

Therefore attachment is born out of weakness. Whereas love is not born out of weakness but it comes out of strength and fullness.

And finally, in attachment; the intellect is clouded and therefore attachment will lead to violation of dharmā. Attachment will lead to violation of Dharmā; whereas in love a person's intellect is sane and clear and therefore it will never lead to the violation of Dharmā.

These are the main differences between attachment and love. While love is a sign of freedom; attachment is a sign of bondage. And therefore, attachment is presented as the basic disease of saṁsāra .

Then the second disease, which is the expression of saṁsāra is born out of this attachment. What is that? Śokaḥ; or sorrow. Attachment will invariably lead to sorrow because I have been emotionally depending upon an external factor when the dependence goes away; which is very natural, definitely I am going to fall like a person who walks with a walking stick is going to heavily lean upon the walking stick. Moment the walking stick is gone, this person will fall down. Whereas imagine another person who goes with a baton; a stick without leaning on that, we can see early morning, several people walking. They do not lean on that. Just for style. Now they hold it, but they do not lean on it. If I lean on the stick, when it is a crutch, the moment that is gone, I am flat; but if I am just holding it, even if it is lost, nothing is going to happen.

Similarly, attachment is a psychological crutch which will make me psychologically flat; frustrated, disappointed. In fact, shocked, when the object of dependence goes away from me.

And unfortunately, whatever object I depend upon psychologically is impermanent in nature; whether it is possession, whether it is people; whether it is property; whether it is position; whether it is the very physical body; whatever I am attached to, whatever I am psychologically leaning upon is impermanent, that means any time in future, I am going to lose that; making me, or leaving me high and dry and therefore Vedānta asks the question, what preparation you have to face this potential threat?

Because every human being has to face; we are preparing for our old age. Because we are not going to earn until we retire, and we know that that income source is going to go away after retirement and therefore, we are preparing for old-age, by saving, or by insurance, by medi-claim, all physical security, we are preparing. But for psychological leaning and the consequent future loss, what preparation are we making? And as long as we do not prepare; our future is in danger; psychologically in danger. And this pain, this psychological fall, this psychological depression a person faces, because of the loss of the object of attachment: is called Śokaḥ, sorrow.

And what Gīta says is the preparation cannot be done when the problem comes. The preparation has to be early. For old age when do you prepare? Is it in old age? No, From now itself, by PF, other thing, share, etc. We do that. Not after old age, we think. Therefore, we try to solve the problem of old age not in old age, but when we are young. In the same way, when the object of attachment is lost; whatever pain will come, we can never solve that pain at that time and therefore the preparation has to be when things are around and comfortable. That is called 'farsightedness'.

ātmāśreyasi tāvadeva viduṣā kāryaḥ prayanto mahān
saṃdīpto bhavane tu kūpakhananaṃ pratyudyamaḥ kīdrśaḥ || 75 ||

(As long as this body is free from disease and decrepitude, as long as senility is far off, as long as the powers of the senses are unaffected and life is not decaying, so long, wise persons should put forth mighty exertions for the sake of their supreme good, for when the house is on fire what avails setting about digging a well (for water)?).

The psychological strengthening process, psychological insurance should be, when? yāvat śāśvatam idam, when physically I am healthy, when I am psychologically healthy, when the sense organs are intact; when the family members are reasonable cooperative; when what is called the business conditions are also reasonably good, then everything is fine, ātmāśrēyasi tāvadēva kāryaḥ prayantō mahān; at that time, be farsighted.

If you try to solve a problem when the tragedy has struck, that is a foolish approach, it is like digging a well when the house is on fire. And that too in Madras, water problem is rampant. Therefore, be far sighted because every attachment is a potential sorrow. Therefore what is the second disease, attachment born sorrow. No.1. Rāgaḥ. No.2. Śokaḥ.

What is the third disease Vyāsācārya presents is Mōhaḥ, means delusion. When there is rāgaḥ and Śokaḥ attachment and consequent frustration or worry; the intellect does not function properly. The intellect is veiled by, intellectual is clouded by Rāgaḥ and Śokaḥ. And when a clouded intellect takes decisions, all those decisions will be wrong decision. And all the wrong decisions will appear as right decision and all right decisions will appear as wrong decision. This inversion of things; so this clouded perception is called Mōhaḥ, which will lead to Adhārmic way of life. Adharma will be seen as Dharmā and Dharmā will be seen as Adharma. This delusion; this confusion is called Mōhaḥ.

And it becomes a vicious cycle. Once I get clouded, once my vision is clouded; my actions will be wrong and because of that the situation will be worse and again because I will be worried and I will take wrong decisions, Like a chain reaction, the whole life will be a series of rāghaḥ-śōkaḥ - to mōhaḥ. Mōhaḥ to again Rāgaḥ to śōkaḥ. In fact, a person never gets out of dependence. He will be shuffling the dependence from one object to other. Instead of working for freedom, he will be only changing from one dependence to other, like a person who gives up smoking takes to snuff. You have not solved the problem. You have only changed the disease; from one disease to another. This cycle of shuffling the diseases and going from suffering to suffering is the human problem, which is known as saṁsārah.

And presenting this saṁsārah is the purpose of the first chapter and the purpose of the later 17 chapters is how to get out of this whole whirlpool or vicious cycle, so that I am an independent person.

Not physically. Physical independence, nobody can get. Psychologically I am an independent person. This is called Mōkṣah or freedom. This is the first purpose of the first chapter.

And then what is the second purpose? I said, introducing, Gūru-Śiṣya and the context and why should the scriptures introduce the Gūru and Śiṣya? All the spiritual teachings that are found in the scriptures are generally in the form of dialogues. They are presented in the form of a dialogue, to show that we have to gain spiritual knowledge only with the help of a spiritual guide. We should never attempt individually.

Therefore, the self-medication or self-effort without guidance can be counter-productive like self-medication can be often dangerous. If you do not take any medicine; it is OK. But we take medicine, the headache can be because of 2500 reasons, including one of the family members! Anything; tooth can cause headache, ears, eyes, neighbors, stomach, including worry. Therefore, dialogue indicates that a teacher or a spiritual guide is required if a person wants consistent progress. Without that we can get some idea of spirituality and often it will be confused ideas or worse misunderstood also. And therefore, the importance of Gūru is highlighted and then the qualifications of the teacher and the student also can be presented.

So therefore the second purpose of introducing a teacher and a student is to show who is a qualified gūru and who is a qualified Śiṣya. The Gūru is Lord Kṛṣṇa himself and the disciple is Arjuna. And the context is also presented. The context is the Mahābhāratham war. I need not describe the Mahābhāratham war elaborately.

The Mahābhāratham war is a war between Pāṇḍavās who are dhārmic people and कौरवास् kauravās who are Adhārmic, unrighteous people. And the Pāṇḍavās wanted to avoid the war by all means, even though they knew that the Kauravās are doing Adharmā, they have done all types of Akramās and they have taken away Pāṇḍavās' land. They tried sāma, dāna, bhēdaḥ; all the non-violent methods; they tried. Because ahimsā paramō dharmāḥ. The scriptures point out that Ahimsā is an important value. And being Dhārmic people, Pāṇḍavās tried the Ahimsā method. But later they found that the Ahimsā method does not work and therefore as a last resort they decide to resort to war.

And hiṃsā is accepted in our scriptures under certain conditions. Ahimsā is not an absolute value. Ahimsā is a conditional value; the scriptures allow certain conditions under which a person can take to hiṃsā . That is why, even our Gods, they are all said to be embodiments of compassion; they are described karuṇāsāgaraḥ kripāsāgaraḥ, etc. but you will find that all our Gods have got weapons. Kōdanḍapāṇi, pinākapāṇi, sudarśana cakraḥ, why? Because, if non-violent methods fail, for the sake of paritrāṇāya sādḥūnām vināśāya ca duṣkṛtām, dharmasamsthāpanārthāya sambhavāmi yūgē yūgē. It is not Adharma. It is exactly like a doctor amputating one of the limbs. No doctor loves the job of amputation, cutting a limb. All his attempts will be what? To save the limb alone through medication, but the moment he has seen that by medication, the disease cannot be cured; not only that, it is going to spread further and destroy the whole individual; then, the doctor out of compassion, not out of anger or hatred, out of compassion, the doctor decides to amputate it.

In the same way, in the society also, if there is Adharma anywhere, then we have to, especially a kṣatriya, has to rectify the Adharma by non-violent methods. And if non-violent methods fail, a Kṣatriyā can take to a violent method and the Pāṇḍavās thought over this violent option for long because they were in the forest for 13 years and they suffered all kinds of problems being Kings and Kṣatriyās and they have thought whether it is proper to fight. And then after consulting after thinking very well, they decided that war alone is the only solution. Amputation Duryōdhano-dectomy. Finish him off. There is no other way and therefore, they have thought; fully decided to take to this Dharmā Yuddham.

And what do we find? When both of them, both the armies join together and they are about to fight this war, then Arjuna feels like supervising the army on the opposite side and he requests Kṛṣṇa to bring the chariot in front of the opposite side and then he surveys the people and the people he sees in the front happens to be not Duryōdhana. If he had seen Duryōdhana, his anger would have burst. But instead of Duryōdhana whom he saw was Bhīṣma, Drōṇa, etc. and with them Arjuna had the problem of 'attachment'.

How do you know whether it is attachment or love? It is very difficult. I told you that the difference between attachment and love is that attachment will lead a person to violate dharmā whereas in the case of love, there would not be violation of dharmā. In the case of Arjuna, he has the problem of attachment, because his thinking becomes clouded as a result of that.

And how do we come to know that his thinking becomes clouded? Very simple. After 13 years of reasoning, he had come to the conclusion that the Mahābhāratham war is Dharmā Yuddah. He had thought out very well. But suddenly, in a moment, he begins to see the very same Mahābhāratham war as Adharma Yuddham. And therefore, there is a twisting in perception; Dharmā is seen as a Adharma.

And not only that, having decided to take to war, a Kṣatriya should never withdraw from the war and when a Kṣatriya is responsible for his family, he should never run away from family life and take to sanyāsā. Misplaced sanyāsā is also Adharmā. What is misplaced sanyāsā? Whenever problem comes, run away. Escapist-Sanyāsā is adharmā.

And Arjuna knows this very well but in the battle field, he talks about taking to Sanyāsā. So he sees the Adhārmic Sanyāsā as Dharma and he sees the Dharma Yuddha as Adharma, which is an indication of muddled thinking.

And not only it is very clear for us, this becomes clear for Arjuna himself because later Arjuna himself confesses to Kṛṣṇa and says

कार्पण्यदोषोपहतस्वभावः

पृच्छामि त्वां धर्मसम्मूढचेताः |..... ||२ -७||

Hey Kṛṣṇa, I am confused. Wherever confusion has come, attachment is lingering somewhere. Is'nt it. Suppose we are working somewhere, we are the head of some institution or company. Then somebody commits a mistake. And report comes. Immediately we see the laws. According to the laws, this is the punishment for this mistake. And this boss decides, give him that punishment. Then somebody comes and tells, you know who has done that, it is your brother-in-law. Suppose now the moment the news-item comes, then, you are in dilemma. Conflict comes when there is some axe to grind; some involvement is there. Otherwise everyone is very dhārmic when they have to take decisions with regard to somebody else.

So why we are not able to think clearly. Even they say, even the best doctor will find it difficult to do a very difficult surgery, if the patient happens to be his own child. Why because it is not he is not doing as a perfect professionalist, but he is doing that as a father also; then the problem comes and therefore we find in the first chapter of the Gīta, Arjuna goes through the problem of Rāgaḥ towards Bhīṣma and Drōṇa and this Rāgaḥ leads to Śokaḥ and this Śokaḥ leads to mohaḥ and Arjuna finds himself helpless.

And the moment he discovers the helplessness, he surrenders to Lord Kṛṣṇa, who knows the medicine. And therefore what is the qualification of the student? Discovery of the human problem is the basic qualification of the student because without discovering the problem, he will never know the relevance of the remedy. So therefore, discovery of the problem

And what is the qualification of the Gūru? Firstly he should be free from that disease and also he should know the remedy. The one who is free from the problem and the one who knows the remedy, that person is Gūru and here we find Arjuna has the qualification to be a disciple and Kṛṣṇa is more than qualified to be a Gūru and since two qualified people come together, the conditions are ideal for a spiritual dialogue to take place and therefore the dialogue starts from the 11th verse of the 2nd chapter.

These are the two purposes of the first chapter. Presenting the problem, presenting the gūru and he Śiṣya.

With this background, we will enter into the verses.

māmakāḥ pāṇḍavāścaiva kimakurvata sañjaya||1.1||

King dhṛtarāṣṭra asked -

किम् kim what did मामकाः māmakāḥ my people च एव पाण्डवाः ca ēva pāṇḍavāḥ and the Pāṇdavas युयुत्सवः yuyutsavaḥ who were eager to fight समवेताः samavētāḥ (and) who were assembled धर्मक्षेत्रे कुरुक्षेत्रे dharmākṣētrē kuruḥkṣētrē in the holy land of Kurukṣētra, अकुर्वत akurvata do सञ्जय sañjaya Oh Sañjaya?

1. King asked – What did my people and the Pāṇdavas, who were eager to fight (and) who were assembled in the holy land of kurukṣētra, do, Oh Sañjaya?

So Vyāsācārya present the context. The two armies have assembled. Duryōdhana's Army is very powerful, qualitatively and quantitatively. He has got more numbers of soldiers. And also many of them are atirathi's and maharathi's. Very powerful. And Pandava's army is weaker both qualitatively and quantitatively. But the Pandava's have got one plus factor. The most powerful factor. That boatmen, that Lord is with Pandavas. And before the war is to begin, we find Dhṛtarāṣṭra is asking Sañjaya, what is happening there. You know Dhṛtarāṣṭra is the blind parent of Kaurava's or Duryōdhana and the blindness of Dhṛtarāṣṭra indicates his avivēka or his indiscrimination. Even though Dhṛtarāṣṭra very well knew that Kauravās are taking to adhārmic activities, Dhṛtarāṣṭra does not stop them out of his problem of attachment. And even though he may not know what is Dharma by himself, Vidura was there very much to constantly advice his or guide him. Knowingly he violates all the norms. So that inward blindness is symbolised in Mahābhārata as the blind Dhṛtarāṣṭra. And even though he is blind, because of the grace of Vyāsācārya, he is given an opportunity to know what is happening in the battlefield. And Sañjaya is given the special power of Television. Television does not means, Sony, Panasonic, Lg etc. Television means the capacity to see what is beyond the range of perception. Tele means what? Far away. Telecommunication, Telepathy, Television, Telephone etc, Tele means that which is far away, beyond the ranges. Vision means the capacity to see. Nowadays we are getting that power by external gadgets. But in the olden days they got the very same power by Tapa śakti. So Vyāsācārya had the power "Dīrghdarśanam" and Temporarily Vyāsācārya blesses Sañjaya with this power. And therefore Sañjaya and Dhṛtarāṣṭra are seated together. Sañjaya is seeing what is happening there and Dhṛtarāṣṭra is asking Sañjaya. So hey Sañjaya, so what did these two people do.

Who are they? means my people, namely Kaurava's and means the Pandu's Children, the Pandava's. Not only Kauravās and Pandavas. All the other King's who have joined this two parties. And why they have assembled? And where they have assembled? they have assembled in the Kurukṣētra. So even now that Kurukṣētra is available, you can see that the tree also is there. They say that Tree symbolises the dialogue, that also is said.

And that is why, I think in that area constantly quarrels and all are going on still, that Parampara is protected even now. Therefore in the Kurukṣētra which is Dharmkṣētra, which is the land of Dharma. The whole Bharata is considered as the land of Dharma. In that land, they have assembled together. For what purpose? Not for a get together, not for a tea party, but with a desire to fight it out. Very unfortunate desire, but that is what it is. And what happened at that time?

सञ्जय उवाच ।

दृष्ट्वा तु पाण्डवानीकं व्यूढं दुर्योधनस्तदा ।

आचार्यमुपसङ्गम्य राजा वचनमब्रवीत् ॥१२॥

sañjaya uvāca

dr̥ṣṭvā tu pāṇḍavānīkaṃ vyūḍhaṃ duryōdhanastadā|

ācāryamupasaṅgamyā rājā vacanamabravīt||1.2||

सञ्जयः उवाच sañjayaḥ uvāca Sañjaya said तु dr̥ṣṭavā tu Having seen पाण्डवानीकम् pāṇḍavānīkaṃ the army of the Pāndavas व्यूढम् vyūḍham arrayed, राजा दुर्योधनः rājā duryōdhanā king duryōdhanā उपसङ्गम्य आचार्यम् upasaṅgamyā ācāryam approached Drōṇācārya अब्रवीत् abravīt and spoke वचनम् vacanam(these) words तदा tadā at that time.

In answer to Dhṛtarāṣṭra's query, Sañjaya says:

2. Sañjaya said - Having seen the army of the Pāndavās arrayed, King Duryōdhanā approached Drōṇācārya and spoke (these) words at that time.

So Sañjaya replies. So he says. rājā Duryōdhanā pāṇḍavānīkaṃ dr̥ṣṭavā. So the King Duryōdhanā saw the army of the Pāndava. aṅīkaṃ means army, which is vyūḍham, well arranged according to yuddha śāstra; they have varieties of vyūhams. Vyūham means a particular manner of arranging the armies. Padma-vyūham, chakra-vyūham, garuda vyūham, etc. They are all tactical positioning, just to trap the enemies. You know how Abhimanyu got trapped into one of the vyūhas he knew how to get in; like some of the temples, huge temples like Madurai Meenakṣi temple, like that here, with no negative motive. In this war, it is done with the negative motive so that the opposite party gets trapped and therefore pāṇḍavānīkaṃ vyūḍhaṃ; tactically arranged, that Duryōdhanā saw.

And after surveying them,. ācāryamupasaṅgamyā, Raja Duryōdhanā approached his ācārya. So his ācārya, his Gūru in warfare. Not gūru in any other field but in yuddha śāstra and who is that? Drōṇācārya, he is the ācārya. He approached Drōṇā and vacanam abravīt; he addressed Drōṇācārya in the following words. What did Duryōdhanā say to Drōṇā?

Verse 1.3

पश्यैतां पाण्डुपुत्राणामाचार्य महतीं चमूम् । व्यूढां द्रुपदपुत्रेण तव शिष्येण धीमता ॥१३॥

paśyaitāṃ pāṇḍuputrāṇāmācārya mahatīm camūm|
vyūḍhām drupadaputrēṇa tava śiṣyēṇa dhīmatā||1.3||

3. "O teacher! See his vast army of the Pāndavas, arrayed by the son of Drupada, your skillful disciple."

So here we have to supply Duryōdhanā uvāca. It is not said but it is understood because these are the words of Duryōdhanā. So hēy ācārya, hēy Drōṇā.

The army had been arranged by Dṛṣṭadumna, son of Drupada. He was born only for the purpose of killing Drōṇā, who was his teacher also. As a scorpion would sting him whose protection is sought to be free from fear, so did the wicked Duryōdhanā insult his teacher. His meaning in plain words comes to this: "Thus think of your stupidity in teaching the science of fight to the son of Drupada and to those of Pāndu. They are arrayed to kill you!" Then he gives the list of powerful warriors of Pāndu army.

Having thus pointed to the array of the Pāndava Army, Duryōdhanā now proceeds to mention in three verses the names of the principal warriors on the Pāndava side:

So here we have supply Duryōdhanā uvāca. it is not said, but it is understood because these are the words of Duryōdhanā.

So Hey ācārya, Hey Drōṇā, pāṇḍuputrāṇāmācārya mahatīm camūm paśyaitāṃ. May you see this huge army of the Pāndavās. And who is the head of the army, who is the leader of the army, He says, drupadaputrēṇa vyūḍhām. Drupadaputra is the son of Drupada, viz., Dṛṣṭadumna. Dṛṣṭadumna, the son of Drupada, is the leader of the army and the leader alone arranges the army and therefore he says drupadaputrēṇa vyūḍhām, which is arranged by Drupadaputra,

And who is this Dristadumna? So Duryōdhanā is very angry, and he says: tava śiṣyēṇa. In the family also, when the son does some mischief; the wife or husband will tell, your son has done this, as though he is not his/her son. Without him, how is the putra going to come. When he gets first class, then, my son. Mistake, then your son.

Like that, Duryōdhanā is son, your śiṣya has done all this mischief; Thava śiṣya, not only is your śiṣya, he is a dhīmatā; he is a clever śiṣya, a cunning śiṣya. Why he is a cunning śiṣya? Because he learnt all the archery from you and he is using that knowledge to destroy you, like joining a company and learning all the skills and start another company and become the competitor of the original one. See the Akramam. In fact I hear that is happening everywhere. Similarly here also, in fact, Dṛṣṭadhumnya, is born exclusively for killing Drōṇā, because Drupada and Drōṇā had a rivalry and Drupada was not powerful enough to destroy Drōṇā, and Drupada conducts an exclusive yāgaḥ to get a son to kill Drōṇā. See how we use the Pūjā. Doing all pūjās to destroy people. Kṛṣṇa will talk about this later as tāmāsa pūjā.

tāmāsa pūjā is a pūjā which is meant to destroy others. rājasa pūjā is a pūjā which is done for purely selfish gain. sātāvika pūjā is a pūjā done for the well-being of the whole world. Lōkāḥ samastāḥ sukhinō bhavantuḥ.

Now Drupada has done a yāgaḥ and out of the yāgaḥ the Agni kuṇḍaḥ, Dṛṣṭadhumna comes, and what is the purpose? To kill Drōṇā. And the most ironical thing is what: Dṛṣṭadhumna goes to Drōṇā to learn archery.

And Drōṇā teaches knowing that he is going to use all these skills against me; because the rule is that once a qualified śiṣya comes, asking for a knowledge and if I have the knowledge, I have to give. That is dharma śāstra. Just as a parent has to bring up the child, without bothering whether the children are going to protect me in future or not. That is the approach of Dharmā; that is approach of any relationships. Here also, Drōṇā gives all his knowledge to Dṛṣṭadhumna and that is what Duryōdhanā is reminding Drōṇā; Hey Drōṇā, he has learned from you and he is standing there to kill you. Therefore dhīmatā; by this clever Dṛṣṭadhumna, this army has been arranged. More in the next class.

Hari Om.

I said in the last class that the first chapter serves two purposes. The first purpose is presenting the problem of saṃsārah, which is in the form of and rāgaḥ, śōkaḥ and mohaḥ. Attachment, Grief and Delusion. And this problem of saṃsārah has to be presented because the entire Gīta -teaching which starts from the 2nd chapter happens to be a solution for this disease called saṃsāra . Therefore, unless one discovers the disease or the problem he will never know the value of the medicine. And therefore, Vyāsācārya through the first chapter presents the problem of saṃsāra .

And the second purpose of the first chapter is to bring the student and the teacher together; i.e. student-Arjuna and teacher-Kṛṣṇa have to be brought together. And this is important because, self-knowledge has to be gained only with the help of a Gūru; not by an independent attempt. And while introducing the teacher and the student, Vyāsācārya will indirectly reveal the qualifications of the student and also the qualifications of the teacher. And only when both the teacher and student Gūru-Śiṣya are properly qualified; then and then alone the dialogue will become successful. And therefore, the second purpose of the first chapter is introducing the student and teacher and for this purpose, Vyāsācārya is presenting the context.

And the context is Mahābhāratha war. Both the armies have decided to settle their dispute by this unfortunate violent method of Mahābhāratha war and they have assembled together. And Dhṛṣṭdhumna has arranged the army of the Pāṇḍavās and Kauravās are also ready to begin the war. And just before beginning this battle, Duryōdhanā comes in front of Drōṇācārya who happens to be their Gūru and he is addressing Drōṇā in the following verses beginning from the third slōkā onwards and therefore the IIIrd slōkā; Duryōdhanā uvāca. Duryōdhanā uttered the following words to Drōṇācārya and saw this verse in the last class.

Hey Drōṇācārya!, please survey the army of Pāndavā which a huge and vast army which is arranged by Drupada Putra, Dhṛṣṭudhumna and who is a cunning person; because he has learnt archery from Drōṇācārya and he is going to use the very same knowledge against Drōṇācārya and duryōdhanā continues in the following verses also, which we will read.

अत्र शूरा महेष्वासा भीमार्जुनसमा युधि ।
युयुधानो विराटश्च द्रुपदश्च महारथः ॥१.४॥
atra śūrā maheṣvāsā bhīmārjunasamā yudhi |
yuyudhānō virāṭaśca drupadaśca mahārathaḥ ||1.4||

अत्र atra in this army शूराः महेष्वासाः mahēṣvāsāḥ śūrāḥ there are many powerful archers भीमार्जुनसमाः bhīmārjunasamāḥ who are equal to Bhīma and Arjuna युधि yudhi in war युयुधानः yuyudhānaḥ Sātyaki विराटः च virāṭaḥ ca the king of Virāta country, च द्रुपदः ca drupadaḥ and Drupada, महारथः mahārathaḥ a great warrior.

4. In this army there are many powerful archers who were equal to Bhīma and Arjuna in battle – Sātyaki, the king of Virata country, and Drupada, a great warrior.

Duryōdhanā's words continue and in these verses Duryōdhanā is enlisting the important warriors. The powerful soilders in Pāndavās ' army. And who are they: atra śūrā maheṣvāsā, mahārathaḥ. śūrāḥ valours one; courageous one; who are not frightened of our army and they are all maheṣvāsā. Ísvāsāḥ means a bow, a dhanu, maheṣvāsā, a mahā dhanu, those who are weilding powerful bows which are received from great sources, including the divine sources. Therefore they are wielding powerful bows and arrows and each one of them is a Mahārathā or Mahārathi. Mahārathi or Mahāratha is title given to certain soilders based on their accomplishment and capacity. So they have got अर्ध रथाः ardha rathāḥ, in a particular level, higher level Rathi, still higher level Mahārathi, still higher level adirathi. And Mahārathi is defined as:

ऐकोदश सहस्राणाम् योद्धये यस्थु धन्विनाम् |
शस्त्र शास्त्र प्रविणस्व || महारथः इति स्प्रिताः ,
ēkōdaśa sahasrāṇām yōddayē yasthu dhanvinām
śāstra śāstra praviṇasca, mahārathaḥ iti spritāḥ.

Who can have the title of Mahārathi? The one who can single-handedly fight 10,000 soldiers at one time. Ekaḥ san, single handed, daśasahasrāṇānām dhanvinām yōddayē, imagine the strength of that warrior if he has to face 10000 soldiers simultaneously. And such a person is called Mahārathi and if a person can fight more than 10000 amitam yōdhayē yasthu samprōkathē, adirathi saha. If he has to get the title athiratha or athirathi, he must be able to fight more than 10000 people and Duryōdhanā says here the Pāndavās army has got many Mahārathis.

Therefore he says śūrā; maheṣvāsā; mahārathāḥ and bhīmārjunasamāḥ and almost every other warrior is as powerful as Bhīma and Arjuna. Not only eating but yudhi. In fighting there are as great as Bhīma and Arjuna and who are they? For sample he gives some name, Yuyudhāna, Yuyudhāna is another name for Sātyaki; he is a warrior; then Virātaḥ, Virātaḥ rāja and Drupadaḥ, Draupadi's father, all these are great Mahārathi and not only them more people are there who are they:

द्रष्टकेतुः drṣṭakētuḥ Dṛṣṭakētu चेकितानः cēkitānaḥ cēkitānaḥ वीर्यवान् काशिराजः च vīryavān kāśirājaḥ ca the powerful king of Kāśi, पुरुजित् purujit Purujit कुन्तिभोजः च kuntibhōjaḥ ca kuntibhōjaḥ च शैब्यः ca śaibyaḥ and Saibya नरपुङ्गवः narapuṅgavaḥ who is the best among men (are all assembled here).

5. dṛṣṭakētuḥ, Cekitānaḥ, the powerful king of Kāśi, Puruji, Kuntibhōja, and Saibya, who is the best among men (are all assembled here).

Not only Sātyaki, Virāta and Drupada but there are more powerful warriors named: Dṛṣṭakētu, proper names of various warriors. Dṛṣṭakētu is one name; Cēkitānaḥ is another name; Kāśirājaḥ, is the king of Kāśi, and vīryavān is not a name, but it is an adjective to Kāśi rājaḥ; vīryavān Kāśirājaḥ, the most powerful king of Kāśi. Then Purujit is another name, Kuntibhōjaḥ, another name, kunti's father is called kuntibhōjaḥ, then Śaibhya, another name; all these are great warriors and narapuṅgavaḥ, is an adjective of Śaibhya, it is not another name, difficult to find out which is noun and which is adjective. Narapuṅgavaḥ, the greatest among men, i.e Śaibhya. All these people, belong to Pāndavās' army. And as even Duryōdhanā is enumerating, his fear is increasing.

सर्वे ऐव महारथाः sarvē ēva mahārathāḥ All of them are great warriors

6. Moreover, the powerful yudhāmanyuḥ, the valiant Uttamaujas, Abhimanyu, and the sons of Draupadi (are all there). All of them are great warriors.

And there are more powerful soldiers on their side. Yudhāmanyuḥ; another proper name, then vikrāntaḥ, should be adjective to Yudhāmanyuḥ, vikrāntaḥ Yudhāmanyuḥ, the very powerful, the valours Yudhāmanyuḥ. In Indian army there was a ship called Vikrānt. So Vikrānt the very powerful one, Uttamaujāḥ vīryavān, vīryavān is adjective to Uttamaujāḥ is name of another warrior and vīryavān, the powerful one; so the powerful Uttamaujāḥ, the powerful Yudhāmanyuḥ and Saubhadra, Saubhadra, another name of Abhimanyu. Saubhadraḥ Apathyam puman, Saubhadraḥ, son of Subhadra, is Saubhadra, the most powerful Abhimanyu, Draupadēyascha, the five sons of Draupadi. Draupadi had one son from each Pāndavā and these five sons are here called Draupadēyāḥ; Draupadi putrā, they were also powerful warriors in the Mahābhāratha war and how powerful they are: sarvē ēva mahārathāḥ. All of them are mahārathis.

अस्माकं तु विशिष्टा ये तान्निबोध द्विजोत्तम ।

asmākaṃ tu viśiṣṭā yē tānnibōdha dvijōttama |

द्विजोत्तम dvijōttama O best among Brahmins, निबोध तान् nibōdha tān May you know ये
विशिष्टाः yē viśiṣṭāḥ those who are prominent अस्माकं तु asmākaṃ tu among us, नायकाः nāyakāḥ the leaders मम सैन्यस्य mama sainyasya of my army, ब्रवीमि तान् bravīmi tān I am mentioning them to you ते संज्ञार्थम् tē saṃjñārtham for the sake of information.

7. Oh best among Brahmins! May you know those who are prominent among us, the leaders of my army. I am mentioning them to you for the sake of information.

After describing Pāndavās army, now he is giving a list of the important men in his own army. So the idea is that he can compare and contrast the relative strengths of both the armies.

Even in sports, if they have to play a particular game, they have to study the strength and weakness of every player, who is a good batsman what are the strengths, who is a fast bowler, who is a spinner, so each one's strengths and weaknesses they study, it is almost like a war. Here also Duryōdhanā wants to make a comparative study of the strength and weaknesses of both the armies.

Now he says, Hey dvijōttama, means Drōṇācārya, you should remember, Drōṇā is a Brāhmaṇā, and according to varṇa-āśrama dharmā, a Brāhmaṇā should not take to kṣatriya-dharmā. A Brāhmaṇā should not take to vaiśya dharmā. He cannot fight a war, he cannot do business; he cannot serve in any company, according to varṇa āśrama dharmā. I am telling the regular varṇa āśrama dharmā rule and a brāhmaṇa has got only six duties; yajanam, yājanam, paṭhanam, pāṭhanam, dānam, pratigrahaḥ; ṣaṭakarmāṇi brāhmaṇa karmāṇi. Yajanam, yājanam, doing the rituals and poojas is the yajanam and yājanam means helping the Kṣatriyās and Vaiśyās and Śūdras to do their duties. Himself he should do the vaidikha karmas and he also should officiate as a priest. We cannot say priest Brāhmaṇā. Brāhmaṇāś only job is priesthood.

The second pair is paṭhanam, pāṭhanam. He should study the scriptures and also he should transfer the knowledge to the other three groups that is Kṣatriya, Vaiśya and Śūdra.

A Kṣatriya can do yajanam but he can never do yājanam. A Kṣatriya can do vēda-adyayanam but a Kṣatriya can never do vēda adhyāpanam. He can learn but not teach.

Vaiśya can learn Vēda but he cannot teach. Brāhmaṇā alone can learn and teach. Do and officiate.

Finally dhānam and pratigrahaḥ. Dhānam. You know, giving dhānam. Charity or dakṣiṇa. not only giving pratigrahāśca. He can receive dhānam also.

Kṣatriya can give dhānam; but he has no right to receive dhānam.

Similarly Vaiśya can give dhānam. kṣatriya, vaiśya śūdras, have got yajanam, dhānam and paṭhanam. They cannot do yājanam, pāṭhanam and pratigrahaḥ.

This is varṇa-āśrama dharmā and Drōṇā is one of the persons who started violating that Dharmā and we are all followers of Drōṇācārya. We are getting a backing from Drōṇā.

That is why in Mahābhāratha war, when a context comes, Bhīma scolds Drōṇā left and right. What are you doing? What right you have to fight this war? You can learn archery and you can teach archery. A Brāhmaṇā can learn archery and teach archery; but he is not supposed to join any war. And Bhīma scolds Drōṇā and Drōṇā does not have any answer to that.

Anyway, Duryōdhanā here addresses: dvijōttama tān nibōdha. May you know the important warriors on our side. asmākaṃ viśiṣṭāḥ. asmākaṃ means among our warriors viśiṣṭāḥ important prominent ones who are nāyakāḥ mama sainyasya who are the commanders the leaders of our army and why am I enumerating, saṃjñārtham tē tān bravimi. I am just giving this for your information. I know that you already know them. Still I am enumerating them so that you can have an idea about the relative strengths. And who are in this army. He enumerates.

bhavān bhīṣmaśca karṇaśca kṛpaśca samitiñjayaḥ

भवान् bhavān Yourself, भीष्मः च bhīṣmaḥ ca bhīṣmaḥ, कर्णः च karṇaḥ ca Karṇa, कृपः समितिजयः च kṛpaḥ samitiñjayaḥ ca kṛpaḥ, who is ever victorious in war, अश्वत्थामा aśvatthāmā asvatthama, विकर्णः च vikarṇaḥ ca Vikarṇa, च तथा एव सौमदत्तिः ca tathā ēva sōmadattiḥ and the son of Sōmadatta (are in our army)

8. Your venerable self, Bhīṣmaḥ, Karṇaḥ, Kṛpaḥ the victorious in fight, Aśvatthāmā, Vikarṇaḥ and Sōmadattiḥ (are all in our army).

So he gives the list. First topmost in the list is bhavān, is not the name of a warrior. Bhavān means Your Honour, You. First Duryōdhanā lists Drōṇā. If Drōṇā feels insulted, it is finished. You are the first one. You are also the Gūru of all these people. Next one is bhīṣmaḥ. Great Bhīṣmācārya, then Karnah; the great Karṇa, then kṛpaḥ and samitiñjayaḥ is not a name of a person, is an adjective to Kṛpaḥ. samitiñjayaḥ Kṛpaḥ, the one who is ever victorious in a war. The one who has never been defeated. Undefeatable person is called samitiñjayaḥ. Samithiḥ means Yuddhaḥ. Jayaḥ means victorious. Samithi jayathi sarvata. One who has never seen a defeat. Who is that. Kripa. Kripācārya. and Aśvatthāmā, who is also a great warrior. Vikarṇaḥ is another name, you all know the Mahābhāratha story, and therefore I do not want to bring the story part here. Aswathhama, you know, and vikarṇaḥ, vikarṇaḥ is another name to Duryōdhanā's brother and Sōmadattiḥ, another name of a warrior; tathā ēva ca, all these people are powerful warriors on our side. And not only these people are there, more are there. He adds in the next slōka.

अन्ये च बहवः शूरा मदर्थे त्यक्तजीविताः ।

नानाशस्त्रप्रहरणाः सर्वे युद्ध विशारदाः ॥ १. ९ ॥

anyē ca bahavaḥ śūrā madarthē tyaktajīvitāḥ|
nānāśastrapraharaṇāḥ sarvē yuddhaviśāradāḥ||1.9||

9. And (there are) many other heroes ready to give up their lives for my sake. All of them have many weapons and missiles, and are experts in war.

Not only previously listed people, but there are more on our side. Anyē ca bahavaḥ śūrāḥ and there are many other powerful ones and who are they? Madarthē tyaktajīvitāḥ; out of respect for me, to support me, they have renounced their lives and they have kept their own lives at stakes and joined this army. Even though they are not directly involved in this war, they have come to support me. Like in the First World War and Second World War, the actual war is between two countries only but the others joined to support. In the same way, India had many kingdoms and all these kings had divided themselves into two groups and they had joined either Pāndavas or Kauravās therefore it was something mini world war itself and therefore madarthē tyaktajīvitāḥ. They have renounced their life for my sake. And they are not ordinary people, nānāśatrapraharaṇāḥ, they have got varieties of weapons and varieties of missiles. praharaṇam, means missiles. śāstra, means weapons. The difference between śāstram and praharaṇam is śāstra is a weapon which is held in the hand and fought. It is never released from the hand but it is held in the hand and fought like the sword, like mace, spear, etc. whereas praharaṇam or astram is those missiles which are released, like arrows, called praharaṇam. Powerful by invoking various dēvathās, by chanting the mantras. Therefore it was not technology based missiles, but it was all mantra- śāstra based missiles.

That's why in Rāmāyaṇa, Rāma takes a blade of grass and invokes the powerful Lord Brahma and releases the blade of grass. The grass, as it is, has no strength but he had invoked the powerful Brahma and therefore a blade of grass can become brahmāstra. From that only the famous, popular statement, வல்லவனுக்கு புல்லும் ஆயுதம் vallavaṇukku pullum āyutam. Suppose arrow itself is not powerful, it is the Dēvathā. Now we have got Agni missile.

Here India's Agni missile is technology based but in olden days our warriors also had Agni missiles, it will not be technology based but it will be mantra-based. Agni Dēvathā would be invoked. And when such an arrow is released, whole place will catch fire. And the other side will not keep quiet. if Agnēyaḥ aṣṭram is released, they will release Varuṇāstraḥ. Jala dēvathā is invoked. All the fire will be put off. Similarly Nāgāstraḥ. Against that Garudās. Thus they had what you call equivalent weapons. They are called prakaraṇam; missiles and are warriors have got all these mantras and therefore sarvē yuddaviṣāradāḥ; all of them are experts in warfare.

अपर्याप्तं तदस्माकं बलं भीष्माभिरक्षितं ।

पर्याप्तं त्विदमेतेषां बलं भीमाभिरक्षितं ॥१.१०॥

aparyāptam tadasmākaṃ balaṃ bhīṣmābhirakṣitam|
paryāptam tvidamēteṣāṃ balaṃ bhīmābhirakṣitam||1.10||

तत् tat Therefore अस्माकं बलम् asmākaṃ balam our army, भीष्माभिरक्षितम् bhīṣmābhirakṣitam protected by Bhisma, अपर्याप्तम् aparyāptam is insufficient तु tu On the other hand, इदं बलम् idaṃ balam this army एतेषाम् ēteṣām of these (Pāndavās), भीमाभिरक्षितम् bhīmābhirakṣitam defended by Bhīma, पर्याप्तम् paryāptam is more than sufficient (to defeat us)..

10. Therefore, our army, protected by bhīṣmā, is insufficient. On the other hand, this army of these (Pāndavās), protected by bhīmā, is more than sufficient (to defeat us).

So having enumerated the important people of both the armies, now Duryōdhanā wants to find out the relative strength, who is superior and who is inferior. And according to Duryōdhanā's judgement, Who is superior? He says Pāndava sainyaṃ is superior and our kaurava sainyaṃ is inferior. This is his judgement indicating he is now tremendously frightened. And therefore he goes nearer to Drōṇā and he says asmākaṃ balam aparyāpatam, aparyāpatam means insufficient. It is weaker. It is incapable of overpowering the Pāndava sainyaṃ. Aparyāpatam meaning inferior, insufficient. Even though bhīṣmābhirakṣitam. Even though most important warrior in our troupe is bhīṣmā it is protected by bhīṣmā, and bhīṣmā is most powerful one; still I feel that we are weaker. And not only that, ēteṣām balam paryāptam. Ēteṣām means Pāndavānam. Here balam, means army; Balam means sainyaṃ. So the army of these Pāndavās is paryāpatam. It is too powerful to overwhelm us, to defeat us. bhīmābhirakṣitam, even though it is protected by Bhīma only, even though bhīma is inferior to bhīṣmā, but still I feel that their army is more powerful.

So from this we come to know a very important psychological point. If we are going to objectively see the situation, we can very easily conclude that Kauravās' army is more powerful. Objectively judged, we can easily say Kauravās' army is more powerful; because numerically Kauravās' army is more. They have got 11 akṣaukinis or divisions whereas Pāndavās have got only 7 akṣaukinis or divisions. Akṣaukini means a division, a certain number of ratha, gaja, uragha, padāthi. They have classified ratha, chariot, gaja, elephants, thuragh, horses, padāthi, infantry soldiers, so many lakhs of rathas, so many lakhs of elephants, horses, etc. together is called one akshoukini. In fact in Mahābhāratha, they have given all the numbers also. And you have to multiply it with 14. So you may to multiply by 14. So against 11 akṣaukiṇis of Kauravās, whereas Pāndavās had only 7 akṣaukiṇis. Therefore, quantitatively, numerically, Kaurava army is stronger. And not only quantitatively, even qualitatively more powerful warriors are in Kauravās' side. One Bhīṣma is enough. One Drōṇā is enough. Because the Drōṇā is the Acārya of all the Pāndavās and the teacher always knows the weakness of the students. So whether we are weak in Maths or English or history, geography, teacher knows. Therefore Drōṇā knows the weaknesses of every Pāndavā; therefore one Drōṇā can fight all these people. Similarly Karṇa is elder is all these Pāndavās. Therefore Karṇa is enough. Similarly Kripa. Aswathama. All senior soldiers are in Kaurava side. Fortunately or unfortunately, even though Kauravā army is superior, both qualitatively and quantitatively what is Duryōdhanā's subjective feeling, that we are weak.

From this what do we come to know? That where Dharmā is lacking; and where Bhakthi is lacking, in such a place, inner strength and confidence will also be lacking. Dharmā is not there on Duryōdhanā's side; because he has been consistently violating Dharmā and therefore there is always a pinprick. Whoever violates Dharmā, he might become materially richer but he can never have inner confidence and strength and peace of mind and secondly Duryōdhanā was not at all a Bhaktha and he never understood the value of Īśvara anugrahaḥ.

And that is why when both Arjuna and Duryōdhanā went to Lord Kṛṣṇa, Kṛṣṇa gave the first option to Duryōdhanā to choose one of the two. You know the story. He said you can either choose me or you can choose all my army. Kṛṣṇa being a Rāja, he himself had an army. In fact, this is a symbolical thing; Kṛṣṇa represents spiritual strength Īśvara anugrahaḥ and Kṛṣṇa's army represents the material strength. It is like asking do you want money or Īśvara anugraha. Do you want property or Īśvara anugrahaḥ? This was the question. And Duryōdhanā chose the army, instead of Kṛṣṇa. Arjuna was asked to chose and Arjuna chose Lord Kṛṣṇa and Duryōdhanā said: What a fool he was, you have chosen Kṛṣṇa who will not fight; who will be a useless fellow. So therefore Arjuna knew the invisible strength of Īśvara anugrahaḥ whereas Duryōdhanā voted for the concrete material strength. And as a result of that, even though he had the material wealth and support, Duryōdhanā had no confidence, whereas Pāndavās were a picture of confidence.

And from this what is the lesson that we learn? If we require confidence and sense of security. Because in life, we invariably face this problem a sense of insecurity and to get rid of this sense of insecurity, we go on acquiring more and more and more and any amount of acquisition, we continue to have inner insecurity and if this insecurity should go, mere acquisition of material wealth will not do that; there is only one solution Kṛṣṇa will tell that in the 9th chapter.

तेषां नित्याभियुक्तानां योगक्षेमं वहाम्यहम् ॥ ९.२२ ॥
ananyāścintayantō māṁ yē janāḥ paryupāsātē |
tēṣāṁ nityābhīyuktānām yōgākṣēmaṁ vahāmyaham || 9.22 ||

Hey Arjuna! if you have got me the Lord in your heart, even though your possessions are minimum, you have a sense of security; whereas if that Lord, that devotion is not there, you may have empires, but you will not be secure. In fact, the higher you go, the more you require security guard. So the PMs and Presidents - they have got maximum name, fame, possession and position and the President has got the entire army of the nation in his hand. President Clinton can press a button and explode an atom bomb. But they require security guard. Do you think security guard will give security? You know in certain cases, the security guard himself will become the source of death. From this one thing is clear.

arakṣitam daiva rakṣitam; surakṣitam daiva hatam vinaśyati.

If the Īśvara anugrahaḥ is not there, if Bhakthi is not there, whatever you possess will not give security and if Bhakthi is there, whatever possess will give security. And here Duryōdhanā suffers from a sense of insecurity. And what is the proof for that. He is saying asmākaṁ balaṁ aparyāpatam. It is insufficient. He is saying.

अयनेषु च सर्वेषु यथाभागमवस्थिताः ।
भीष्ममेवाभिरक्षन्तु भवन्तः सर्व एव हि ॥१.११॥
ayanēṣu ca sarvēṣu yathābhāgamavasthitāḥ |
bhīṣmamēvābhirakṣantu bhavantaḥ sarva ēva hi||1.11||

अवस्थिताः avasthitāḥ Stationed सर्वेषु अयनेषु च sarvēṣu ayanēṣu ca at all the points of entry यथाभागम् yathābhāgam as allocated सर्वे भवन्तः sarvē bhavantaḥ all of you, हि एव hi ēva indeed, अभिरक्षन्तु abhirakṣantu should closely protect भीष्मम् एव bhīṣmam ēva bhīṣmā alone.

11. Stationed at all the points of entry as allocated, all of you, indeed, should closely protect bhīṣmā alone.

Even though Duryōdhanā suffers from the sense of insecurity, he feels that there is at least one person who gives some amount of security and confidence and that is bhīṣmapithamahā, who is the eldest in the Kuruvamśa alive, and therefore his mere presence will give sense of security, just as we feel at home if there is someone who is elderly. It may be who is 86 year old great grandfather. Even though that person does not do anything, in fact cannot do anything, he may be sick also, he may be in the bed also, but the very thought that the elderly person is around gives a sense of security. And similarly, the very presence of Bhīṣma will give security to them, Duryōdhanā feels and therefore he commands all the other soldiers, that you should protect bhīṣmācārya, whatever be the cost. Therefore he says: bhīṣmam ēva abhirakṣantu. He need not even fight. But his very presence is enough to enthuse us. Therefore bhīṣmam ēva abhirakṣantu. So in this Duryōdhanā is commanding all the people around, including Drōṇāchārya; please protect Bhīṣma.

And how should you protect? Bhavantaḥ sarvē yathābhāgam avasthitāḥ. So by remaining in your own allotted strategic points which are known as ayanam. Ayanam is a technical word used in warfare and it stands for any strategic position in which a powerful warrior is placed, especially when different vyuhās or different arrangements are made; certain positions are there; eastern, western, northern, southern, etc. Strategic points are called ayanam. And in each of these strategic points, a powerful warrior will have to be there and he says whatever happens, you do not leave those place. Like any game, In cricket also, there are for a particular bowler, there is a strategic point. Slip, On, off, etc. Silly point (do not translate at all). These are all only jargon of a particular game. Similarly, ayanam means various strategic points, yathābhāgam as has been previously appointed, avasthitāḥ you should be stationed only in those places, and bhīṣmam ēva abhirakṣantu. You give top importance to the protection of bhīṣmācārya.

तस्य संजनयन् हर्षं कुरुवृद्धः पितामहः ।

सिंहनादं विनद्योच्चैः शङ्खं दध्मौ प्रतापवान् ।१.१२॥

tasya sañjanayan harṣam kuruvṛddhaḥ pitāmahaḥ |
siṃhanādam vinadyōccaiḥ śaṅkhaṃ dadhmau pratāpavān ||1.12||

संजनयन् sañjanayan Generating हर्षं तस्य harṣa tasya enthusiasm in him, प्रतापवान् pratāpavān the powerful, पितामहः कुरुवृद्धः pitāmahaḥ kuruvṛddhaḥ the oldest among the Kurus, विनद्य उच्चैः vinadya uccaiḥ sounded aloud सिंहनादम् siṃhanādam a lion-roar दध्मौ शङ्खम् dadhmau śaṅkham and blew the conch.

12. Generating enthusiasm in him, the powerful grandsire, the oldest among the Kurus sounded a lion-roar and blew the conch.

So with the previous slōka, Duryōdhanā uvāca is over which started from verse 3 up to no.12 is Duryōdhanā uvāca. Now again Sañjaya uvāca, we have to supply. Sañjaya is continuing his narration in front of the Dhṛtarāṣṭra.

So when Bhīṣmā saw Duryōdhanā's pathetic condition, he understood Duryōdhanā that has to be encouraged now. Like the children, before writing the examination, they have got fear. Bhakthi also comes, before examination, extra bhakthi comes and swamis will become busy. Exam Swamiji for giving anugrahams, Bhīṣmā understands the unseen factor, the importance of the situation, therefore tasya sañjanayan, so Bhīṣmācārya generated enthusiasm, inner strength and confidence in Duryōdhanā. so kuruvṛddhaḥ pitāmahaḥ. Both these words refer to Bhīṣmācārya. kuruvṛddhaḥ means eldest among Kauravās, pitāmahaḥ, great-grand father, most elderly person, and that Bhishmacharya, created, generated confidence in the heart of Duryōdhanā. And how did he create confidence? uccaiḥ siṃhanādam vinadya. So he roared aloud. Like a lion he roared aloud; made huge noise. Some will create some sound, increase the volume of radio, etc. so you feel that somebody is around. Similarly here also Bhīṣmācārya made a huge roar of a lion to create, generate enthusiasm or confidence and thereafterwards Bhīṣmācārya did not want to delay the commencement of the war. Because, the more the delay is the more the butterfly in the stomach. You all know. The more the delay the more the butterfly and therefore Bhīṣmā decided to blow the conch signaling the commencement of the war. Therefore it is like the whistle indicating the beginning. So therefore both the armies are important, but Bhīṣmā being the eldest in both the armies, therefore Bhīṣmā decides to blow the conch first indicating their preparedness for the war.

Therefore, pratāpavān means the most powerful śaṅkham dadhmau, he blew his conch to begin this battle. And when Bhīṣmā blew the conch all the other warriors in kaurava sēna also started blowing the conch.

tataḥ śaṅkhāśca bhēryaśca paṇavānakagōmukhāḥ|
sahasāvābhyahanyanta sa śabdastumulō'bhavat||1.13||

ततः tataḥ Thereafter शङ्खाः च śaṅkhāḥ ca couches, भेर्यः च bhēryaḥ ca kettledrums, पणवानकगोमुखाः paṇavānakagōmukhāḥ trumpets drums, and horns सहसा एव sahasā ēva were immediately अभ्यहन्यन्त abhyahanyanta sounded forth. सः शब्दः saḥ śabdaḥ That noise अभवत् तुमुलः abhavat tumulaḥ became tumultuous.

13. Thereafter, conches, kettledrums trumpets, drums, and horns were immediately sounded forth. That noise became tumultuous.

So when Bhīṣmā blew the conch all the other people in Kaurava side also did the same and not only the conch, varieties of instruments; varieties of battle drums and instruments were sounded forth and various instruments are enumerated here, like the band that they have now in the army, they also had because they all create enthusiasm. Therefore, śankāḥ, Bhēryaḥ, phaṇaga, anaghā, gōmukhāḥ, they are varieties of drums, and varieties of blowing instruments. All of them sahasaivābhyahanyanta, there were all sounded forth immediately and imagine lakhs of people making noise simultaneously. Trichur Pooram, varieties of drums are beaten and then happens, sa śabdastumulō'bhavat. That sound reverberated, resonated and it pervaded the whole sky. It became tumultuous noise and now the Kauravās have indicated their readiness.

Now the Pāndavās have to say whether they are ready or not. And how can they say. You cannot speak. They were all so far away. Not like today with cellular phone. How do they do that. They have to sound their drums and their conches, etc. indicating their readiness. So now we have to know whether they are ready or not, which we will know in the next class.

sahasāivābhyahanyanta sa śabdastumulō'bhavat ||1.13||

In the first chapter Vyāsācārya is introducing the situation or background in which the Gīta dialogue is going to take place and through this presentation of the context, Vyāsācārya is going to introduce Arjuna who is going to become a disciple, and Kṛṣṇa, who is going to become a teacher. At this moment, Arjuna is only a soldier, a warrior and Kṛṣṇa is a simple driver of Arjuna and both the armies are arrayed and the Mahābhāratha battle has to begin. And Duryōdhanā surveyed the army of Pāndavā and addressed Drōṇācārya pointing out that the Pāndavā army is stronger and Kaurava army is weaker and we saw that it is not at all an objective fact, really speaking Kauravās ' army is both qualitatively superior and even though this superiority is there, Duryōdhanā does not feel the inner confidence.

If that inner confidence has to come, we require an unseen factor, which is called Īśvara anugrahaḥ, and Īśvara anugrahaḥ will flow only in a place where dharmaḥ is there. In Duryōdhanā's heart Dharmaḥ is not there and therefore Īśvara anugrah; unseen factor is missing and therefore Duryōdhanā feels diffidence in spite of his material wealth.

On the other hand, Pāndavās' heart is full of dharma and therefore they have the support of Īśvara anugrahaḥ, the unseen, adhrṣṭam. Once the Īśvara anugrahaḥ is there, even if we are materially weaker and poor, it gives an extra strength and that is how Pāndavās are not frightened, whereas Duryōdhanā is diffident. And Bhīṣmācārya recognises this diffidence of Duryōdhanā and Mahābhāratha battle has to start and therefore creating enthusiasm in Duryōdhanā's mind, Bhīṣmācārya made a huge roar of a lion and thereafterwards blew his conch, signaling the readiness for beginning the war. And Bhīṣmācārya has to do that, because he happens to be the most eldest and the respected person. Up to this we saw in the last class.

And once Bhīṣmācārya blew his conch, then all the other soldiers in Duryōdhanā's side, they also sounded forth various instruments, both string instruments, pipe, drum instruments, varieties of instruments, śaṅkhāśca bhēryaśca paṇavā anaka gōmukhāḥ sahasaivā abhyahanyanta; all of them were simultaneously sounded and that sound reverberated in the entire battle field and become much much more noisier than the original sound; so sa śabdastumulō'bhavat.

Now the Pāndavās have to respond and indicate whether they are ready for the battle and it is going to come now in the next verse. We will read verse no.14.

ततः श्वेतैर्हयैर्युक्ते महति स्यन्दने स्थितौ ।

माधवः पाण्डवश्चैव दिव्यौ शङ्खौ प्रदध्मतुः ॥११४॥

tataḥ śvētaiḥ hayairyuktē mahati syandanē sthitau |

mādhavaḥ paṇḍavaścaiva divyau śaṅkhau pradaghamtuḥ||1.14||

14. Thereafter, Kṛṣṇa and Arjuna, seated in a grand chariot with white horses, blew (their) divine conches.

Until now, our attention was turned towards Duryōdhanā, addressing Drōṇācārya and thereafter attention was turned to Bhīṣmācārya, i.e. on the Kaurava side. Now Vyāsācārya is turning his camera, verbal camera towards the Pāṇḍavās side and in the Pāṇḍavā side, who is the senior most, even though Dharmaputhra is there, they all recognised Kṛṣṇa as the most important person; even though not age-wise, they all recognised Kṛṣṇa as an Avathāra, respected Kṛṣṇa as the Lord himself and therefore all the Pāṇḍavās are looking at Kṛṣṇa for him to blow his conch.

And therefore Vyāsācārya is showing Arjuna's chariot now. tataḥ śvētairhayairyuktē, first the horse, he is now focusing the attention on the horses first. The horses of Arjuna's chariot. What type of horses Arjuna had: śvētairhayairyuktē white horses.

In Kathōpaniṣad, the whole chariot is given as an example for human life. In Kathōpaniṣad, our physical body is compared to the chariot and the sense organs are compared to the horses, mind compared to the reins, the sense organs driven are with the help of, controlled with the help of the reins. Similarly horses are controlled by the reins, sense organs are all controlled by the mind.

And the sense organs represent knowledge and knowledge is given white colour in our tradition. That is Sarawathy, goddess of knowledge is given the white dress. Yākundēndu tuṣārahāra dhavaḷā, yā śubhra vastrāvṛtāḥ, Saraswathi has white dress, symbolising knowledge. We will be seeing later knowledge is represented by satva guṇā and satva guṇā is given white colour and our sense organs represent knowledge, sense organs are here in the form of horses and the horses are also white in colour.

Philosophical symbolism and these white horses are drawing Arjuna's chariot; what type of chariot it is? mahati syandanē sthitau, a huge chariot, a special gift to Arjuna coming from the heaven. Heavenly gift to Arjuna and therefore this is not an ordinary chariot, it is a celestial chariot and therefore Vyāsācārya says mahati syandanē. And upon this wonderful chariot, āsīnaḥ; are seated two people, who are they? Mādhavaḥ, means Lord Kṛṣṇa, so Ma represents Lakṣmidēvi or Śakthi or power or knowledge and dhava means husband the Lord. Therefore, Ma Dhava means the Lord of wealth; here the wealth is knowledge-wealth and Lord Kṛṣṇa is endowed with the wealth of knowledge which he is going to impart to Arjuna and therefore Kṛṣṇa is given the title Mādhava. Not only Mādhava, Pāṇḍavāicha. Pāṇḍavā here indicates Arjuna. Now Arjuna is the master, Kṛṣṇa is driver, the role is going to be reverted in future. Now Kṛṣṇa is humble, simple, obedient servant sitting and Arjuna is master and both of them. What did they do, divyau śaṅkhu, pradadmatuḥ, Kṛṣṇa blew his conch indicating the preparedness of the Pāṇḍavā side to begin the war and their conches also are not ordinary ones and therefore they are called divyau śaṅkhau, Divine conches, they blew. And what are their conches, the details are given in the next verses.

पाञ्चजन्यं हृषीकेशो देवदत्तं धनञ्जयः ।

पौण्ड्रं दध्मौ महाशङ्खं भीमकर्मा वृकोदरः ॥ १॥ १५.

pāñcajanyaṁ hṛṣīkēśō dēvadattaṁ dhanañjayaḥ|

pauṇḍraṁ dadhmau mahāśaṅkhaṁ bhīmakarmā vṛkōdaraḥ || 1.15 ||

15. Kṛṣṇa blew (the conch) pāñcajanyaṁ. Arjuna (blew he conch) Devadatta, Bhīma, of terrible deeds, (blew) the big conch Paundra.

So we can see Vyāsācārya's partiality, he is supposed to be a neutral observer, his heart is towards the Pāṇḍavās. When the Duryōdhanā people sounded their instruments, he made only a general statement. They all made a lot of noise; sahasaivā abhyahanyanta; but when the Pāṇḍavās are blowing the conches, he is giving even the names of their conches. He says hṛṣīkeśaḥ; hṛṣīkeśaḥ is Lord of kēśaḥ, so many names, previously we saw Mādhava, Lakṣmipathi, Lord of wealth, wealth of knowledge. Here another beautiful name is given. hṛṣīkam, means sense organs, and īśaḥ means the Lord. So hṛṣīkeśaḥ, the Lord of the all the sense organs, including the mind and therefore the Lord is the very sākṣi; the very witness who is seated within everyone, witnessing and blessing all the sense organs, because the Lord is the very Ātma, who is called the śrōtrasya śrōtram manasō manō yad, and such a title is given, because Lord Kṛṣṇa is going to soon study the mind of Arjuna. That means Lord Kṛṣṇa knows what is happening in Arjuna's mind and therefore he is called hṛṣīkeśaḥ, the Lord of our mind and sense organs.

And that Kṛṣṇa pāñcajanyaṁ pradadhmau. So the verb is not there in the sentence. We have to supply the verb. For every sentence, hṛṣīkeśaḥ pāñcajanyaṁ pradadhmau, means, he blew the conch named pāñcajanyaṁ. And behind each one of these, there are a lot of purāṇic stories, and Rākṣasās alone gets converted into the pāñcajanya. I do not want to go to the stories and all. Amarcithra katha and stories you can read. Pāñca janāsura, he becomes pāñcajanyaṁ.

Then dēvadattaṁ dhanañjayaḥ, is the title of Arjuna, which means the one who has amassed, acquired plenty of wealth. He was most prosperous person. All these titles of Arjuna are important, because we find in Mahābhāratha and in the Gīta that Arjuna was the most materially successful person. So he had wealth. He was one of the most beautiful person, handsome person, and the strongest person, and he had name, he had fame, he had dharma; everything was there and he was the most successful person, even he went to heaven, he was called even by Indra to assist him in battle. So all these things materially needed by an ordinary person Arjuna had and we find such an Arjuna, in spite of material successes, he finds in a crisis, he is not able to solve the problem.

And from that we come to know that material successes cannot be a remedy for human sorrow. If material success could have been a remedy, Arjuna should not face any problem. But we find Arjuna is facing the problem and he finds ātma-jñanam alone is a solution. Therefore indirectly it is a teaching that Oh! human being can attain material success; you can work for prosperity; you can work for family, children; all of them, and very good and they help you lead a comfortable life but they will not help you solve the deeper inner problems of life, like attachment, like dependence, like fear, like sorrow.

And therefore, it is indicated here Arjuna is dhanañjayaḥ. Dhanañjayaḥ means most wealthy person. One who acquires wealth. Dhanam Jayathi. Sarvathra dhanam prāpnōti. That Arjuna dēvadattaṁ dadhmau; he blew his conch known as dēvadattaṁ; not the name of a person; name of the conch.

vṛkōdaraḥ pauṇḍram dadhmau. vṛkōdaraḥ, another name of Bhīma, the one whose stomach is like that of a wolf. vṛka means a wolf. vṛkasya udaram iva yasya saha vṛkōdaraḥ. What is the uniqueness of the wolf. Any amount it eats it will not get Tripti. It is a glutton. It eats. But when we eat too much; what is the problem. Battle of the bulge. Therefore many people or battling with the bulge. madhya pradesh grows. But what is the uniqueness of the wolf? any amount it eats, the stomach is always inside; never comes out. Similarly looking at Bhīma, you will never know he is a glutton, he had a fit stomach but he will eat plenty, therefore he is given a title, vṛkodaraḥ and such a Bhīma not only he is mere glutton there are many people who are gluttons but they cannot do anything. Bhīma was not like that. Proportional to the eating, he had many exploits also. Therefore, a beautiful adjective, a title here, Bhīma karma, a man of terrible deeds, Bhīma means bhayankaraḥ, karma means deed or exploits. so Bhīmani bhayankaraṇi karmaṇi yasya saḥ, Bhīma karma, and what are his Bhīma karma, you can read in Mahābhāratha, he has destroyed so many Rākṣasās, even though he has wonderful weapons often he does not use any weapons at all, any tree around is enough. Electric posts also. Mountains he lifts, trees he lifts. Therefore, he is called Bhīma karma and naturally his conch should not be an ordinary one; and therefore he should have a special conch also. It is called mahāśaṅkhaṁ pauṇḍram; pauṇḍram, the great, the huge conch, and he blew that conch. Not only these people. Vyāsācārya is not satisfied; he mentions some more in the following verses.

अनन्तविजयं राजा कुन्तीपुत्रो युधिष्ठिरः ।
नकुलः सहदेवश्च सुघोषमणिपुष्पकौ ॥ १.१६॥

anantavijayaṁ rājā kuntīputrō yudhiṣṭhiraḥ |
nakulaḥ sahadēvaśca sughōṣamaṇipuṣpakau || 1.16 ||

राजा rājā the king युधिष्ठिरः yudhiṣṭhiraḥ Yudhiṣṭhiraḥ, कुन्तीपुत्रः kuntīputraḥ son of Kunti, अनन्तविजयम् anantavijayam (blew the couch) Ananthavijaya, नकुलः nakulaḥ Nakula च सहदेवः ca sahadēvaḥ and Sahadēva, सुघोषमणिपुष्पकौ sughōṣamaṇipuṣpakau (blew the conches) Sughōṣa and Maṇipuṣpaka

16. The king yudhiṣṭhiraḥ, son of Kunti, blew anantavijayaṁ; Nakula and Sahadēva blew Sughōṣa and maṇipuṣpaka.

yudhiṣṭhiraḥ anantavijayaṁ dadhmau, we have to supply the verb dadhmau, yudhiṣṭhiraḥ is another name of Dharmaputra, he is called so because he is firm in warfare, powerful in battle, Yudhi, battle. He does not go back. Therefore he is given the title yudhiṣṭhiraḥ. He also happens to be son kuntīputraḥ, who is rajah the king, he blew the conch anantavijayaṁ. Names are beautiful. anantavijayaṁ, ever successful. It brings him only success. Never defeat. And nakulaḥ and sahadēva, the other two Pāndavās, they blew their conches and they also have beautiful names; what are they, sughōṣamaṇipuṣpakau. Sughōṣa conch of Nakula, maṇipuṣpakau of Sahadēva.

17-18 Oh King! The king of Kasi, the wielder of a big bow, Sikhandi, a great warrior, dhṛṣṭadhyumnaḥ, the king of Virāta, the undefeated Sātyaki, King Drupada, the sons of Draupadi, and the mighty Abhīmanyu, the son of Subhadra blew the conches distinctly from all directions.

kāśyaḥ, Śaṅkham dadhmuḥ, is the king of Kāśī, very famous very powerful, Kāśī Raja who is a great a archer, परमेष्वासः paramēṣvāsaḥ, eṣvāsaḥ means bow, one who has got a great bow, a powerful bow, he blew his conch. śikhaṇḍī ca mahārathaḥ; śikhaṇḍī, again you know the story, who is specially born, taken a vow to destroy Bhīṣma and he succeeds in that also, that śikhaṇḍī is not an ordinary person, mahārathaḥ, a great warrior, the great archer, blew his conch. And Dhṛṣṭadhymna, also blew his conch, virātaḥ, the king of virāta, sātyakiścāparājitaḥ, ever successful Sātyaki. And not only these people, drupadaḥ, father of Draupadi and draupadēyāḥ, 5 sons of Draupadi, Draupadi had one one son of each Pāndavā and there are five Draupadēyāḥ, and they are also great warriors and saubhadra, mahābāhuḥ, subhadra's son, Abhīmanyu, all of them mahābāhuḥ; Abhīmanyu is known for his heroism, special title mahābāhuḥ, man of powerful arms, all of them śaṅkhān pṛthak pṛthak dadhmuḥ, they blew their conches distinctly. pṛthivīpatē: Sañjaya addressed Dhṛtarāṣṭra. Whole thing is Sañjaya narrating in front of Dhṛtarāṣṭra. And then what happened?

स घोषो धार्तराष्ट्राणां हृदयानि व्यदारयत् ।

[sa ghōṣō dhārtarāṣṭrāṇām hṛdayāni vyadārayat |

व्यनुनादयन् vyanunādayan resounding throughout नभः च nabhaḥ ca the sky च एव पृथिवीम् ca ēva pṛthivīm and the earth सः saḥ that तुमुलह् घोषः tumulah ghōṣaḥ Tumultuous noise व्यदारयत् हृदयानि vyadārayat hṛdayāni pierced the hearts धार्तराष्ट्राणाम् dhārtarāṣṭrāṇām of the Kauravās.

19. Resounding throughout the sky and the earth, that tumultuous noise pierced the hearts of the Kauravās.

Then all the Pāndavās blew the huge noise, the sound was heard by Duryōdhanā and other people, and hearing this sound Duryōdhanā's heart was pierced, as it were. That is said here. Śaṅkhanāda of all the people, vyadārayat, literally, bored into pieces; it afflicted intensely, it pierced the heart of dhārtarāṣṭrās or Kauravās. That means already Duryōdhanā was frightened, hearing this sound, his fear increased. And this fear increased because of his diffidence, and his diffidence is because of Adharma.

Therefore, Vyāsācārya indicates what type of Saṅkhanāda it was, nabhaśca pṛthivīm caiva anunādayan. anunādayan; echoing; resounding, reverberating all over on the earth and above in the sky is Saṅkhanāda spread and it pieced the heart of Kauravās.

Verse 1.20 and 1.21

अथ व्यवस्थितान् दृष्ट्वा धार्तराष्ट्रान् कपिध्वजः ॥

hr̥ṣīkēśam tadā vākyaṁidamāha mahīpatē| 1.21 |

महीपते mahīpatē O king! अथ तदा atha tadā Then, at that moment, शस्त्रसम्पाते śastrasampātē when the discharge of arrows प्रवृत्ते pravṛttē was to be commenced, कपिध्वजः kapidhvajaḥ The monkey-bannered पाण्डवः pāṇḍavaḥ Arjuna ध्वा dr̥ṣṭvā saw धार्तराष्ट्रान् dhārtarāṣṭrān the Kauravās व्यवस्थितान् vyavasthitān arrayed, उद्यम्य धनुः udhyamya dhanuḥ raised the bow, आह āha and spoke इदं वाक्यम् idam vākyaṁ the following words हृषीकेशम् hr̥ṣīkēśam to Kṛṣṇa.

20. O King! Then, at that moment, when the discharge of arrows was to be commenced, he monkey-bannered Arjuna saw the Kauravās arrayed, raised he bow, spoke the following words to Kṛṣṇa.

Up to the 19th verse is the first phase. And now from the 20th verse is the turning point is going to take place and turning point is indicated by the word atha, and in Sānskrīt language the atha indicates, a change, either in topic or a change in context. If it is a movie, tv show, they can have some background music. Poor Vyāsācārya cannot have such thing and therefore he has only to do it through a word and therefore he indicates the turning point by the word Atha.

Now what is the present situation? Kauravās have blown the conches. Pāṇḍavās have blown the conches. That means both teams or both the armies have indicated that they are ready. Now that the indication is over, the actual battle must start. And therefore shooting of the arrows must start. Therefore Vyāsācārya says: śastrasampātē pravṛttē.

The situation was ready for śastrasampātē, means release of the arrows. Shooting of the arrows, time is ideal, ready but at the nick of the moment. Therefore they are ready but the last moment some problem; similarly Arjuna has to shoot the arrow and at the nick of the moment a flash of thought comes in Arjuna's mind and this flash is going to be a huge turning point. As if this flash had not taken place, if both had started the Mahābhāratha war, Gitōpadeśa would not have taken place and Vyāsa would not have written and Gīta classes would not have been started and you would not have been sitting here.

All these happened because of what; Atha, indicates why we are sitting here. Flash indicate. Flash of card; he feels that I should see people who are arrayed in front. Somehow he feels. Just before shooting the arrows, let me see who are the people whom I am going to destroy in the war. Perhaps this is the last moment that I am seeing them alive. Naturally, and Arjuna knows that they are all various relatives because this is a family war, and therefore I will not be able to see their face; farewell, Arjuna feels that he should see their faces.

And therefore orders Kṛṣṇa that is said here, dhārtarāṣṭrān vyavasthitān dhṣtvā. Arjuna saw all the Kauravās. dhārtarāṣṭrās must be the real expression for Duryōdhanās. The word Kaurava is really speaking common to both Duryōdhanā family as well as the Pāndavās. Really speaking Arjuna is also a Kaurava because literally Kaurava means those who belong to Kuru varṇśa. Both the Dharmaputra people as well Duryōdhanā people, both belong to Kuru varṇśa and therefore Kauravās is the common name for both Pāndavās and dhārtarāṣṭrās. But by convention when we say Kauravās we think it represents Duryōdhanā people. Literally speaking, in schools and all, the teacher is lady, Sir means male, male instructor is Sir. Female instructor is called teacher. Just a convention. Like that used by the expression Kaurava means Duryōdhanā people and Pāndavās are not called; really speaking Kaurava is common to both. If we are to differentiate, how should you differentiate? Dharmaputra, etc. Pāndavās, Duryōdhanā should be called Dhārtarāṣṭrās, Dhṛtarāṣṭra putrās.

Vyāsa has used the correct expression here. Vyavasthitān who is Arjuna. kapidhvajaḥ. kapidhvajaḥ one who has got monkey emblem on his flag. And that monkey represents Āñjanēya. And we all know Āñjanēya is Vāyuputra, son of Vāyudēvatha, and we also know that Bhīma is also Vāyuputra. Father is the same for both and therefore Bhīma and Āñjanēya are brothers.

And Āñjanēya is supposed to be a cirañjīvi and therefore he was in Rāmāyaṇa kālam, trēta yuga, dvāpara yuga, kali yuga and he continue to exist and Bhīma made a special request to Āñjanēya: "you should come to the Mahābhāratha battle and you should bless us so that we will get victory" and therefore Āñjanēya said that "I will be in the form of an emblem on your flag and I will bless you" and people say that Āñjanēya also had therefore an opportunity to listen to Gīta. Rāmōpadeśa he listened. Krishnōpadeśam also he listened. There is a commentary on the Gīta by Āñjanēya. This is called paiśāca bhāṣyam. Paiśāca, one who did not have a physical form. So he existed in invisible form; heard the Gīta and wrote a commentary. And that commentary is even now available. A beautiful simple bhāṣyam called Hanumat paiśāca bhāṣyam. Anyway, because of this reason, Arjuna got a name kapidhvajaḥ; one who has got the monkey emblem, in his flag. So Arjunah dr̥ṣṭvā, he saw, and what did he do, dhanuḥ udhyamya he raised his bow, like the batsman doing, not ready. Similarly he also raises bow saying not ready. Do not shoot now. dhanuḥ udhyamya Pāndavā kapidhvajaḥ, hṛṣīkēśaṁ idam vākyam āhaḥ, there we saw, Duryōdhanā went to Drōṇācārya and here Arjuna is addressing whom, hṛṣīkēśaṁ, Lord Kṛṣṇa. idam āhah mahīpatē, King Dhṛtharāṣṭra, Sañjaya is addressing Dhṛtharāṣṭra as mahīpathi; this is what happened.

All these things how did Sañjaya see, without the satellite TV, Sañjaya is not in the actual battlefield and he could see from the palace. The other side of the continent, we are able to see. Sañjaya TV was better, he could even read the mind of the people. What is in batman or bowler's mind, we do not know. But Sañjaya had extraordinary TV that he could also read the mind; so therefore Viśva-rūpa darśana what transferred in Arjuna mind, even that Sañjaya reports. And what did Arjuna say to Lord Kṛṣṇa.

21-23 Arjuna said – Oh Kṛṣṇa ! Place my chariot between the two armies till I see those who are assembled with a desire to fight. (Let me see) with whom I should I fight in this event of war. I wish to see those who are assembled here eager to fight, and who want to fulfill the desire of the evil-minded Duryōdhanā in this war.

Now comes Arjuna's word to Lord Kṛṣṇa. So Arjunaḥ uvāca. He says Hey Acyuta, this is another beautiful name of Lord Kṛṣṇa. Acyuta, very very significant word, both religious moral significance, philosophical significance, Acyuta, unflinching; infallible, one who never falls, one who never fails is called Acyuta. So whatever satya saṅkalpa, whatever he wants to accomplish he will accomplish because the Lord is omniscient and omnipotent and therefore he is called Acyuta, never failing, because in Mahābhāratha war, they all trusted Lord Kṛṣṇa and they found their trust was proved worthy. Kṛṣṇa helped them Kaivārthaḥ kēśava, he helped them. Similarly here also we should understand that if depend upon the local people and local institutions and local governments he may be successful or not, whereas if you depend on the Lord, He is Achuta.

And Draupadi experiences this in the sabha of the Kauravās, people who are powerful, 5 husbands were there, each one was powerful, Bhīṣma, Drōṇa were all there; and when Draupadi was in crisis, she surrendered to the Lord, help came. Therefore the Lord is one who is always trustworthy and therefore he is given the title Acyuta. And if you have to understand the philosophical significance you go back to Saturday class where we are seeing as Parambrahma, one who is Acyuta, one who is ever, infinite, the one who never falls into saṁsāra . Acyuta, ever liberated, ever free, one who never falls into saṁsāra . That is when the Lord takes birth in the world, we do not call it janma, we call it Avathāra.

What is the difference between janma and avatāraḥ? Janma means falling down; avatāraḥ is descending down. We are not avathāras. When we are born it is falling down from our original nature, therefore it is saṁsāra patanam when Bhagavān comes down Kṛṣṇa, Rāma, it is called avatāraḥ, one who never falls.

Why should he come down? To uplift the humanity, he comes down. Since he never falls from his original nature, he is called acyutaḥ. One meaning, one is who is ever trustworthy. Second meaning is one who is ever free.

nitya muktaḥ. Hey Acyuta, sthāpaya mē ratham. Arjuna is commanding Lord Kṛṣṇa; afterall Kṛṣṇa is now a driver. For some time he is the master, therefore Hey Acyuta, ratham sthāpaya. Please place the chariot. Sēnayōḥ ubhayōḥ madhyē. In between the two armies. Now, the Kaurava army is little bit far away and because of the distance, I am not able to see their faces properly. Also therefore please place the chariot in front. Ubhayōḥ madhyē ratham sthāpaya. For what purpose?

ētān nirīkṣē ahaṁ; so that I can very clearly survey, see, yōddhukāmān avasthitān, people who have assembled there to fight with us and kaiḥ mayā saha yōdhavyam. Let me clearly know with whom I have to fight. asmin raṇasamudyamē. In this huge venture called Mahābhāratha war. Let me know with whom I have to fight. yōtsyamānānavēkṣē: 'haṁ ya ētē: 'tra samāgatāḥ I want to have a clear view of them and therefore, take me in front of them.

And not only I have to see the Duryōdhanā people but also I have to see the other kings. Because remember, Mahābhāratha war some kind of a world-war type, because though it was a war between two families, so many other kings have joined this. Just like they had Allies and Axis. So many other countries also joined even from South, also, some of them joined Pāndavās, some Kauravās and therefore, Arjuna says, let me also see the other kings who are supporting the Kauravās. So yuddhē priyacikīrṣavaḥ. Let me see the allies of the dhatharāṣṭrās and when he is naming them dhatharāṣṭrās, Arjuna's blood is boiling because they have done so many akramams, right from the lac palace, consistently Kauravās have been jealous of Pāndavās and were trying to destroy them several methods. And therefore Arjuna feels extremely angry and therefore he uses the expression durbuddhēḥ.

You have to note this expression. You have to refer to this later also. Crucial expression. Durbuddhi means duṣṭa-buddhi. Adhārmica-buddhi. And why do I say, the expression is very important, because Arjuna does not see this as a war among the relatives or between the relatives. This is not an issue between who is the relative and what type of relationship we have; that is not the issue at all. But it is a fight between dharma and adharma. And who is the person, we are not going to bother, whoever is on the side of Adharma, we have to destroy.

No doubt, Bhīṣma is a great person. Drōṇā is a great person; and they have brought Arjuna up and not only that, they are even the gurus of Arjuna and Arjuna did not have any sentimental problem. He did not have any emotional problem. His intellect was ruling his decision.

Whoever has got a sound-intellect, whomsoever has his emotional-mind under the control of intellect he will have right judgment. Only when the emotions and sentiments begin to overpower the buddhi, then all kinds of confusions will come.

And until now, Arjuna did not have any emotional problems, or sentimental problems. His intellect was very clear. What is that? That side is Adharma side. And this side is Dharma side. It is a fight between dharma and adharma. And in society, dharma is more important than a temporary relationship. After-all, human-beings are subject to birth and death, whereas Dharma is śāśvatha, and if we have to vote for one of these two, whether personal relationship or dharma, we should be clear enough in our thinking to choose Dharma.

That is why we have the story of Manu Neethi Chōla. His own son had done Adharma and the Rāja said whether it is my son or daughter, my relations or somebody else relation; no question. Whoever has done Adharma, he has to be punished; Where Dharma is given more importance than temporary-relationships.

Now also we have politicians we know what is happening. And Arjuna did not have this problem and therefore he says dhārtarāṣṭrasya durbudhdeḥ showing that his intellect is now stronger than the mind.

And Vēdānta is going to later teach us that emotions are wonderful, because many people think that Vēdāntins will not have emotions. They will be sitting like stone when someone is suffering, they will say everything is Brahma mayam. No; Vēdāntin is not like a stone, is not a sentiment_less person. In fact, later Kṛṣṇa will say that jñāni is the embodiment of compassion, maitraḥ karuṇa ēva ca

Sentiments are wonderful, emotions are wonderful, they are unique gift from the Lord. But śāstrās says is once the sentiments begin to cloud our intellect, then it becomes a sentimentalism and once the intellect is clouded, the biggest problem is our judgment will be wrong, we will begin to see Dharma as Adharma, Adharma as dharma. Sentimentalism will lead to delusion. But sentiments make me a human being.

And until now, Arjuna did not have the problem of sentimentalism and therefore he happily came to the battlefield without any regrets or any compunction. Even though battle involves hiṃsa, even though it involves killing his own kith and kin; Arjuna never felt bad, because his protection of Dharma requires destruction. As a last resort, it can be taken. Therefore Arjuna did not have any problem until now. And that is indicated by the word Durbudhē. His thinking is very clear.

But now we have to see the change. The moment he comes in front and he sees the people and gradually his mind is going to change and we are going to see that emotion is going to replace discrimination; attachment is going to replace discrimination. And therefore saṁsāra begins and therefore Gīta has to begin. How? In the next class.

Hari Om.

The armies of both the Pāṇḍavās and Kauravās are ready for the Mahābhāratha battle and even the conches have been blown on both sides and the war has to begin and at this crucial juncture Arjuna gets a flash of idea and that is he has to see the Kaurava Army at close quarters. Even though he knows the people with whom he has to fight, somehow it must be puṇyam that he feels like surveying their army once again. And therefore he raises the bow and commands his driver, Lord Kṛṣṇa, to place the chariot in the middle of the armies. And he tells Lord Kṛṣṇa that "I would like to see who are the people with whom I have to fight; who are going to be killed by me". And even at this juncture, Arjuna is very clear about his action. Arjuna knows this is going to be a war; which means hiṁsā is involved. Arjuna is aware of the fact that the war involves hiṁsā or killing the people.

And no doubt our dharma-śāstra, clearly says that ahimsā is an important virtue na hiṁsyāt sarvān udāni. And one of the important vows prescribed by the śāstra is ahimsā; not harming other people. In the Bhagavad-Gīta itself Kṛṣṇa is going to stress the value of ahimsā. But at the same time, our śāstras point out ahimsā is not an absolute value.

For that matter, no value can be followed absolutely because every value has got exceptions. This general or universal value is called utsargaḥ and we get exceptional situation is called Apavādha. Therefore, ahimsā is a utsargaḥ rule; but there are cases when one's duty is to take to himsā. One should not follow ahimsā. On the other hand he has to take to himsā in certain cases and that will come under apavādaḥ rule. Even our Gods who are supposed to be embodiments of compassion, you will see all our Gods have got weapons; whether it is Lord Śiva or whether it is Lord Viṣṇu or whether it is Dēvi whether it is Subrahmaṇya, all Gods, even though they are embodiments of compassion, they do not believe in misplaced compassion.

Misplaced-compassion is dangerous to the society and especially a kṣatriyaḥ must be aware of the fact that for a kṣatriyaḥ, ahimsā is not an absolute rule. For the sake of protecting Dharma, if he has to kill people, if he has to punish people, as Kṛṣṇa will say later, paritrāṇāya sādḥūnām vināśāya ca duṣkṛtām, and both of them are for what purpose? dharmasamsthāpanārthāya. Exactly God does destruction for the sake of dharmasamsthāpanārtham. Even a kṣatriyaḥ has to take to destruction for the sake of dharmasamsthāpanārtham and Arjuna is intensively aware of this fact. Therefore in his heart there is no regret. There is no pang. No doubt he is going to kill thousands of people but he does not have any regrets or compunction, because he clearly says dhārtarāṣṭrasya durbuddhēr. I am doing this for the sake of protecting Dharma. And this is a duty of a kṣatriyaḥ and as I said the other day, the very definition of a kṣatriyaḥ is kṣatāt adharmāt trāyatē iti kṣatriyaḥ. Kṣatriyaḥ is one who has to protect the society from adhārmic people. And he should try non-violent methods like sāmā, dhāna and bhēda and if all of them fail, he has to take to dhanda, i.e. it is an angry-Arjuna who is now in the battle-field and his hands are itching and waiting to shoot the first arrow.

And with this attitude, he asks Lord Kṛṣṇa to place the chariot and Lord Kṛṣṇa also like an innocent person and an obedient driver, He says: I will place the chariot. And then what happened, we have to see:

24-25. Sañjaya said - Oh Dhṛtarāṣṭrā! Commanded thus by Arjuna, Kṛṣṇa placed the great chariot between the two armies in front of great warriors like Bhīṣma and Drōṇa and all (other) kings and said thus - “Oh Arjuna! See these Kauravās assembled”.

After Arjuna gave this commandment, Kṛṣṇa also did not speak a single word and Arjuna also did not speak and therefore Sañjaya comes in between he gives the report. So sañjayaḥ uvāca. What transpired in that battlefield. uktaḥ ēvaṃ hr̥ṣīkeśaḥ, hr̥ṣīkeśaḥ, Lord Kṛṣṇa, the charioteer was commanded thus by Arjuna, uktaḥ, commanded by Arjuna; what Arjuna, gūḍākeśēna, Arjunena, Arjuna is given a beautiful title here gūḍākeśaḥ, gūḍāka means Tamō guṇa; laziness, dullness is called gūḍāka, īśaḥ means a master; the one who has won over. Therefore gūḍākeśaḥ, means the one is not a tāmasic person, one who has conquered tamō guṇa; because if a person is under the grip of tamō guṇa, he is never fit for learning Gīta. Indirectly Vyāsacārya says Arjuna is not a tāmasic person, not a dull-witted person; he is competent enough to keep awake in the class. Therefore he is competent enough to keep awake in the Gīta talks.

When Kumbhakarṇa was killed in the Rāmāyaṇa war, Nidrā dēvi had one regret; because she was, all the time, in Kumbhakarṇa, sleeping for six months. Nidrā dēvi, the goddess of sleep, was very happy that I had an āśraya to happily repose. When Kumbhakarṇa was killed, Nidrā dēvi did not have any āśraya support and therefore she asked Rāma it seems what should I do. Rāma said it seems: wherever spiritual discourses are taking place, you go there! Arjuna is not of that type.

Therefore, hey bhārata; Bhārata, is Sañjaya addressing Dhṛtarāṣṭra. Hey Dhṛtarāṣṭra. And what did Kṛṣṇa do? sēnayōrubhayōrmadhyē ratham sthāpayitvā. He positioned, stationed the chariot, specially gifted by the Dēvas, between the two armies from where Arjuna can clearly see the faces of everyone in the opposite site and what did Arjuna see there?

भीष्मद्रोणप्रमुखतः सर्वेषां महीक्षिताम् ।

[bhīṣmadrōṇapramukhataḥ sarvēṣāṃ ca mahīkṣitām|

sarvēṣāṃ mahīkṣitām pramukhataḥ ratham sthāpayitvā; from the previous verse and supply it here. pramukhataḥ sthāpayitvā. He placed the chariot in front of a row of kings, because many kings are supporting Duryōdhanā. mahīkṣith means king, those who protect the earth, pṛthvi, or kingdom, etc.

And there also, even though there are many kings, Kṛṣṇa could have positioned the chariot in front of any one. There was huge row. But here Kṛṣṇa does a mischief here. Knowing Arjuna's weakness, Kṛṣṇa knows therefore where he did position the chariot, bhīṣmadroṇapramukhataḥ, right in front of Bhīṣma and Drōṇa. Just to test Arjuna. If Kṛṣṇa had placed the chariot in front of Karṇa or Duryōdhanā, then Arjuna's blood would have boiled further and Mahābhāratha battle would have happened; Gīta would never have happened, but Kṛṣṇa wanted to convert Arjuna. Therefore, as though he is innocent, (I think he wanted to become a guru!) He placed the chariot in front of bhīṣmadrōṇa pramukhataḥ, towards whom Arjuna had intense attachment.

And having positioned, then He said Hey Pārtha! samavetān kurūn paśya. Hey Arjuna, May you survey, may you study, all the Kauravās who have assembled iti uvāca. Thus Kṛṣṇa told Arjuna. And naturally Arjuna had to study in the next slōkā.

26-7. There Arjuna saw fathers, grandfathers' teachers, uncles, brothers, sons, grandsons, friends, fathers-in-law, and well-wishers assembled in the two armies. Having seen all these relatives assembled, Arjuna was overpowered by deep attachment. Grieving he said the following (words).

So tatra pārthaḥ apaśyat; tatra, on the side of Kauravās, the opposite side, Arjuna saw all these people and who are these people, most of them are his own relatives; kith and kin and therefore Sañjaya gives a huge list of relatives. pitṛīn, pitāmahān, ācāryān, mātulān, bhrātṛīn, putrān, pauṭrān, sakhīn; you can understand most of the words.

pitṛīn, he saw his own fathers standing. Pitha means father; pitṛīn means the fathers. You will say. How can you see fathers? There can be only one father. Here he says pitṛīn, because according to Dharma śāstra, every individual has got 5 fathers; every individual has got five fathers; who are those five fathers;

अन्नदाता भय त्राता, पन्जैते ,पज्जैते पितरस्मृतः janitā ca upanētāca, yasca vidyām prayacati;

annadātā, bhaya trātā, panjaite pitarasmṛtaḥ

There are five people, who are as good as the fathers. First one is janitā, the biological father, who has given birth to the person, who is popularly known as the father. Then the next one is upanētā; one who gives the sacred thread, whoever does the initiation ceremony that person is also considered another father; generally father himself does the upanayanam, but if the father does not do, whoever does that ritual, he is also considered as good as a father; i.e. he must be respected as though he is the father. The next one yasca vidyām prayacati, Gūru is also considered a father; and that is why during upanayana ceremony also, when the Gāyathri upadēśa is done, they cover the person with the silk cloth, and this indicates garbha-vāśah. It is a symbolic representation of second garbha-vāśah. First garbha-vāśah is the actual one, when a person was in the womb of the biological mother; second garbha-vāśah is when a person is a student in Gūrukula. And why is this Gūrukula-vāśah considered a garbha- vāśah or pregnancy, because, when a person is born, he is practically an animal only. There is no culture, there is no restriction, there is no control at all; any child is a wild, untamed, uncontrolled, uncultured, indiscriminate living being; therefore, we are all born prākṛta puruṣaḥ, with animalistic instincts, we are only physically human beings, but mentally we are not yet cultured.

Only when a person enters Gūrukula, and learns the vēdās, and learns what is dharma and what is adharma, and learns to lead a life based on dharma-adharma, rather than rāgaḥ-dvēsaḥ. I cannot lead a life according to my instinct, but I have to lead life according to śāstric injunctions, and when that child comes out of Gūrukula, he is a new human being, he is not a prākṛta puruṣaḥ, he becomes a saṁskṛta puruṣaḥ; he is no more a wild animalistic, brutish person; but he is a cultured human being.

And that is why he is called dvija, the twice born; the first birth is from the biological mother; the second birth is from the Gūrukula and for this second birth, Gāyathri is supposed to be mother and the ācāryā is supposed to be the father.

तत्र स्यम् माता गायत्रि पिता तु आचार्य उच्यते ॥

matṛ agre dvijānānam, dvitīyam maunji bandanāt |
tatra syam mātā gāyatri pitā tu ācārya ucyatē ||

A cultured person is born out of vēdic study, helped by the ācāryā. Thus ācāryā and Gāyathri together give birth to the cultured twice-born. And therefore, ācāryā is the third father. Janitā ca upanētāca, yasca vidyām prayacati.

Then the fourth-father is anna dhātha. When I am hungry, and I do not have anybody to feed me, at that time, if a person protects me by feeding me, giving food; without food I would have died, the one who gives that, one who keeps me going by feeding me, that person is also like a father. And therefore, Annadhātha is the fourth father.

And the fifth and final father is bhaya thrātha. The one who rescues me from adversity or crisis. The one who gives me a second life, protecting me from any danger, if it comes in my life, he is also called a father. Keeping that śāstric view, here Vyāsācārya uses the expression, pitṛn, those people are all respectable people like teachers, who are all as good as his parents.

And similarly, pitāmahāḥ, if there are many fathers, there must be many grand-fathers also. pitāmahān, then ācāryān, teachers in different fields, especially in the field of archery, the ācāryā is there, Drōṇa is standing in front, mātulān, uncles; bhrātṛn, brothers, because the Kauravās are his cousin brothers only, putrān, means his own children, because the children of his cousin brothers are as good as his own children only. Karṇa's children or Duryōdhanā's children, all those people are as good as his own children. putrān, pautrān, grand children. sakhīn friends, and in the next slōkā, śvaśūrān, means fathers'-in-law. Of course, Arjuna had many father in laws. All those people who are as good as fathers-in-law. All these people are sēnayōḥ ubhayōḥ api, standing on both sides of the Army.

And tān samīkṣya sa kauntēyaḥ, sarvān bandhūnavasthitān. Bandhū means the person towards whom I have got the bond of attachment is a bandhū. It is derived from the root, बन्ध् bund, to be bound, i.e., attachment is called பரசம் Pācam, பரசகயிரிṛ pāśakayir in Tamil. You do not have to say pāśakayir. பரசம் is கயிரிṛ. Attachment is compared to a rope, because it binds me with other people and more I am bound, the more I lose my freedom, because my happiness is not determined by me. My happiness will be determined by so many other people with whom I have the problem of attachment and therefore they are called bandhūn. bāndhava.

So seeing; Arjuna saw all these Bandhūs, kith and kin, very closely. So samīkṣya, īkṣaṇam, seeing, samīkṣya, closely seeing, intensely seeing. When he saw their faces very closely, what happened; a total transformation took place in his personality.

And what is that transformation? kṛpayā parayā'viṣṭa. Arjuna was overpowered by attachment. Here the word kṛpa does not mean compassion, even though normally, kṛpa means compassion; in this context, kṛpa means attachment. Compassion is the virtue of a jñāni, it does not bind a person, whereas attachment is the weakness of an ajñāni, which causes problem. Therefore compassion is a virtue and attachment is a weakness. Compassion belongs to a jñāni and attachment belongs to ajñāni.

Here Arjuna happens to be ajñāni; therefore kṛpa should be translated as rāgaḥ. Therefore rāgēṇa āviṣṭa. He was overpowered by the emotion. So here also, it is not an emotion that he took to himself. He is not the master of the emotion but the emotion became his master.

A jñāni entertains the emotion as a master, whereas ajñāni is a slave of emotion. For a jñāni, emotion is an action, willfully, consciously entertained whereas for an ajñāni, emotion is a reaction.

And this Vyāsācārya indicates by using the word āviṣṭa; āviṣṭa, means he was overpowered. That is why many people ask the question, Swamiji, after all isn't 'anger' a useful emotion to control or discipline the children. Many people argue in favour of anger because Swamiji without getting angry, servants do not obey, children do not obey, nobody listens; (what do you know? ~ if we tell, slowly, lovingly, compassionately, nothing will work. அடியாத மட்டு படியாது aṭiyāta māṭu paṭiyātu. Anger is a tool to conduct business in the world. This is the people ask. For that the answer. Yes. Wonderful.

Anger is a tool if you are using the anger and if you are using the anger, you will be free to take it at will and you will be able to drop it at will or you will be able to postpone at will. Therefore you asked the question? Can I drop the anger at will or can I postpone the reaction at will. And if a person says Yes. I am a master, I can have it, I can drop it, then we say Anger is a tool in your hand; therefore, have it.

What we find, we do not have anger, but anger overpowers us. This is the difference between jñāni and Ajñāni. One is the master of emotion another is the slave of emotion. And Arjuna also is now kṛpayā āviṣṭa; overpowered by the fundamental problem of Saṁsārā, known as Rāgaḥ.

And once a person is overpowered by Rāgaḥ, his twin brother, the immediate consequence will come and what is that viṣṭidannidamabravīt. viṣṭidam, means grief, or sorrow. Wherever there is attachment, there will be sorrow. So always attachment and sorrow are like two sides of the same coin and the intensity of sorrow will be directly proportional to the intensity of attachment and in the case of Arjuna; parayā kṛpayā, attachment was extremely intense and therefore the sorrows also was extremely intense.

Therefore here we find a transformation in Arjuna. So the angry-Arjuna has now become sorry-Arjuna. Rational-Arjuna has become emotional-Arjuna. Solider-Arjuna has become Saṁsāri-Arjuna.

This is the first stage of introduction; because before Gīta comes, everyone has to go through the three stages; solider becomes Saṁsāri, Saṁsāri becomes disciple-Arjuna. Solider-Arjuna has to get converted into Saṁsāri-Arjuna. Saṁsāri-Arjuna has to get converted into disciple-Arjuna and once this takes place, Gīta śāstram can begin and this portion is talking about the first conversion of solider into Saṁsāri.

And Vyāsācārya cannot dramatise this conversion because his only medium is cold words therefore he can only write one line kṛpayā parayā āviṣṭa. So we have to do lot of imagination. We have to stop at this juncture and we have to identify with Arjuna and we have to imagine Arjuna seeing Bhīṣma's and Drōṇa's face, and his mind rushes back to his entire life. How he has played with them and how they have played with him; he has been on their lap also. They have told him stories. They have caressed him, they have kissed him, so intimate is their relationship. And until now, whenever they met, they must have been placing, now for the first time, they are meeting, not for exchanging kisses, but for exchanging arrows. And Arjuna must be visualising the consequences also. Soon, they are going to become victorious, because Arjuna is confident, because Kṛṣṇa is there; and then he imagines a future in which Bhīṣma is dead; Drōṇa is dead, and he goes home and the home is empty and he imagines a life without them and suddenly his mind breaks down. They have not been actually lost. They are only lost-in-imagination. The very imaginary loss makes a big change in Arjuna's mind. All these steps we have to imagine.

If it is a movie or TV, at least they can have few cameras, one showing Arjuna's face, one Bhīṣma, Drōṇa. Arjuna Bhīṣma, Drōṇa Arjuna, etc. one shot, here and one shot, there. Arjuna's face farther, closer; zoom lenses. And as even they show, slowly sweat coming and also background music.

Poor Vyāsācārya, he does not have background music, he does not have zoom lenses, he does not have different cameras, therefore you have to imagine all those things. And now Arjuna is now turned into Saṁsāri and what is Saṁsārā? rāgaḥ, śōkaḥ and mōhaḥ. Remember these three. Attachment, sorrow, conflict. Of these 3 basic problems, two have come, attachment has come, and sorrow also has come.

Now here we should remember that Arjuna developed attachment not in the battlefield. Not that Arjuna developed attachment in the battlefield, even before Arjuna had the attachment. But the problem was the attachment was not evident. Only in the battle field, when the possibility of losing the object of attachment; only when the possibility of losing the object of attachment comes, then alone the hidden attachment, the hidden intense attachment surfaces. He had the disease, but it was not evident. It was in incubation period. In the battlefield alone, it surfaced.

And that is why we find it extremely difficult to handle attachment. Because often we do not know that we have the problem of attachment and therefore we are blissfully ignorant and there is no question of taking action against the problem, because we are not aware of the problem. And it is hidden so long, and when it surfaces, it is so powerful that I cannot take any action.

Previously because of ignorance, I do not take action and when it surfaces, it is so powerful that I cannot take action. Like many of the addictions or diseases, like cancer, etc. When it is growing inside often, the patient does not know. They say if it is detected early, it can be cured. But cancer seems to be so intelligent, in the initial stage, one does not know; therefore we do not take action and when it becomes manifest, we cannot take action.

Therefore, what are the two problems? I do not take action or I can't take action. That is how the attachment and Saṁsārā happily continued. There are only some rare people who are lucky enough to detect that we have that problem and therefore they can start some remedy.

And Arjuna also finds almost in the same situation. And therefore viṣādan. And how much sorrow he has got. Vyāsācārya dramatises that: A verbal dramatisation.

28-30. Arjuna said – Oh Kṛṣṇa ! Having seen these relatives of mine who are assembled, eager to fight, my limbs droop. My mouth dries up. Shiver and horripilation occur in my body. Gāndiva slips from the hand and the skin burns. I am not able to stand even. My mind also reels, as it were. Oh Kṛṣṇa ! I see adverse omens also.

In the previous three verses, 26 to 28 Vyāsācārya showed the problem of Rāgaḥ, which is the first symptom of Saṁsārā. From this verse up to verse 31, Vyāsācārya is showing the 2nd symptom of Saṁsārā, i.e. sorrow or grief. From Rāgaḥ, we are going to śōkaḥ, i.e. up to 31. And thereafterwards, Vyāsācārya will talk about the third symptom, i.e., Mōhaḥ.

This is not Arjuna's problem; but this is the universal-problem. Only the object of attachment varies, the problem of attachment is universal.

And here Vyāsācārya wants to show that since attachment was intense, the grief also was intense. And when the mind is intensively afflicted, that suffering will overflow into the physical body also. So if it is a milder problem, we can cover up. We will keep only in the mind and outwardly we can pretend as though everything is fine, we can smile, we can forget it; mind is different and body is different, but when the emotions are intense, it will overflow into the physical body.

Since Arjuna's sorrow was intense, it begins to show at the physical level also. And therefore Arjuna says, Hey, Kṛṣṇa !, Oh Lord, imaṁ svajanam dṛṣṭvā, I am seeing these people, who are all my relatives; I am seeing these people who are all my relatives; that means I belong to them, and they belong to me. and this is called the problem of Ahaṁkāra and mama kāra. So we have got a sense of belonging i.e. 'I' belong to someone and someone belongs to me. The sense of belonging is called attachment, which Arjuna expresses by using a word svajanam.

You can note this word repeated several times in the first chapter; this is another crucial word of the first chapter, svajana, means my people. And there is nothing wrong in claiming some people as my people. After all we are worldly people, and we belong to someone, and many people belong to us; it is fine. But when the sense of belonging becomes attachment and when the attachment begins to cloud the intellect, we begin to confuse between Dharma and Adharma.

Until now, Arjuna said that on the opposite, there were Dhātaraṣṭra, who were all durbuddhē. See how it changes. Earlier he said this, perhaps biting his teeth. "These people are terrible ones, they have all joined Duryōdhana who is Adhārmic person". Until now, he saw those people as Adhārmic people; therefore requiring punishment. Which means he had Dharma-adharma vivēka buddhi is functioning.

But now Arjuna has slipped from buddhi-level to mind-level. Rational-level to emotional-level. Therefore instead of calling them Adhārmic people, now he is calling them "they are all my own people". That means what? If 'our people' do the adharmā, it is OK. If it is someone else, punishment is called for. This is called wrong-judgment. And Arjuna is getting into problem which indicated by the word, 'svajanam' sva means mamakāra. My people.

More we will see in the next class. Hari Om.

008 CHAPTER 01, VERSES 30-38

ॐ

गाण्डीवं संसते हस्तात्त्वक् चैव परिदह्यते ।

निमित्तानि च पस्यामि विपरीतानि केशव ॥ १.३१ ॥
nimittāni ca paśyāmi viparītāni kēśava || 1.31 ||

Arjuna had the problem of attachment all through. He was not aware of the problem until he came to the battlefield. When he stood in front of those people, towards whom he had intense attachment, and when he thought of the possible loss of those people; that imaginary loss makes his attachment stronger and therefore, the saṁsāra, which was there in him all the time, is flaring forth as it were, at this moment. And that is being described here and this attachment leads to sorrow and later to delusion and thus rāgaḥ, Śōkaḥ and mōhaḥ are being depicted. First rāgaḥ was indicated in verse no.27 or 28, kṛpayā parayā''viṣṭō viṣṭdannidamabravīt. There the word kṛpa indicates rāgaḥ; rāgaḥ or attachment and then viṣṭdannidamabravīt indicates the problem of sorrow and Vyāsācārya wants to show how intense the sorrow and for that purpose, Vyāsācārya points out that the sorrow was so intense that it started expressing in the physical plane itself.

And what are the physical symptoms of that intense sorrow are given in these verses, which we were seeing the last class. dṛṣṭvēmam svajanam kṛṣṇa. I pointed out in the last class that the word 'svajanam' Arjuna repeats several times. The word 'svajanam' indicates, 'my people' that means the moment he began to see them as 'my people' he forgot the Adharma that they had perpetuated. If Arjuna's vision is very clear, then it does not matter, whether they are his people or somebody elses'; Adharma has to be punished; but when he begins to see the relationship and comes down to the emotional plane, his intellect is getting clouded. That is indicated by the repeated expression 'svajanam' which we will be seeing later also. So that mamakāra, is another expression of attachment.

In fact, Śankarācārya, does not write a commentary on the first chapter of the Gīta. There is no commentary on the first chapter. Even in the 2nd chapter, the first 10 verses Śankarācārya does not write a commentary. Śankarācārya's Gīta bhāṣyam starts with only the 11th verse of the 2nd chapter and the portions up to that, Śankarācārya condenses in a few lines and in his condensation, he only says one thing: Arjuna suffered from the problem of aham yē śāṁ, mama yē te. Is otherwise called rāgaḥ. That is indicated by the word 'svajanam'. imarṁ dṛṣṭva.

What type of people? yuyutsum samupasthitam. They have come here to not for enjoying the relationship but for fighting and seeing them what happens to me. sīdanti mama gātrāṇi. It does not happen very suddenly. You should remember, before his mind has worked a lot. As I said in the last class, he imagines what will happen in the war. He imagines the death of the near and dear ones and he imagines his survival and he imagines his life without these people.

And the more he thinks, the more real the imagination becomes and the more real it becomes, the more intense the sorrow becomes; Because any emotional problem does not take place in one thought. It is a built-up of thought; whether it is anger; whether it is depression; whether it is jealousy, any emotional problem does not happen in one thought.

Generally, if you see, you will find that you have repeated that thought again and again and that is why in movies, or in television serials, etc. you find somebody might have made an insulting statement or something and thereafterwards, they will show the person walking up and down. They can show all that in the movie. Poor Vyāsācārya cannot show that. And as he is walking up and down, you will find the statement, insulting statement of that person is repeated again and again and again and each repetition, increases the anger or frustration or revenging mentality.

Any emotional problem is a thought, built up, not a single thought. Single thought is not a sorrow. Single thought is not anger. Single thought is not jealousy. Single thought is not depression. So therefore, all these emotions require our cooperation.

What is our cooperation? We provide the condition, ideal condition. Sitting in the beach, we built up the worry-thought and from this we also get another important clue, all emotional breakdowns can be handled, if you are able to take care of the second thought. First thought is not in our hands. It happens. Somebody has insulted me. First thought is an experience. But thereafterwards, whether I should repeat it or not, is in my hands and if I choose not to repeat it, then it cannot conquer me; but if I allow that thought, like a ripple becoming a wave. Ripple is a weak but a wave is too powerful. Arjuna also has allowed the ripple of that thought to become a huge wave and it has overpowered and therefore his powerful hands, which has destroyed millions of asurās, that hand is not able to hold even that gāṇḍīvaṁ.

Therefore, he says sīdanti mama gātrāṇi, my limbs are shaking. So sīdanti mama gātrāṇi, they are becoming weaker and weaker and mukhaṁ ca pariśuṣyati and my mouth is drying up. The problem is in the head. But peculiar thing is the mouth dries up. If you have any doubt, try public speech. The moment you stand, it is only a welcome address of 1-1/2 minute, or vote of thanks of 1 minute. But he would have planned and throughout the programme he would have made it bye-heart also. Programme of vote of thanks people, generally do not hear the programme. They will be practicing, practicing, practicing. The 'scintillating talk', and inspiring talk, etc. already prepared, has already written up. and he come there and come in front of the mike, as somebody said: "Heart is an organ which starts functioning right from the time of birth, until you stand in front of the public for speech".

Similarly, the mouth also gets parched up. Here Arjuna says, mukhaṁ ca pariśuṣyati. Not only that vēpathuśca śarīrē mē, my whole body is shivering or shaking and rōmaharṣaśca jāyatē; my hairs are standing on end, and gāṇḍīvaṁ sraṁsatē hastāt, the gāṇḍīva bow is slipping from my hands, that means my hands are becoming weak; is failing; and tvak ca ēva paridahyatē, my skin is burning as though na śaknōmi avasthātuṁ, I am not even able to stand. I wonder whether I will be able to stand, na śaknōmi avasthātuṁ bhramati iva ca mē manaḥ, my head is reeling; and not only that, nimittāni ca paśyāmi viparītāni kēśava. viparītāni nimittāni, means bad omens, nimittām, means omen, viparītām means bad.

From this it is very clear that half of the bad omens that we have is projected by our own mind. When we are strong, you see good omens; when we become weaker and weaker, the non-existing cat will be crossing your path; single Brahmin; double-Brahmin will cross you in the street when you are going for an important work. When we become weaker and weaker, more you become weaker, the more these things become visible.

Similarly Arjuna also says viparītāni nimittāni aham paśyāmi. That means he is in intense sorrow now.

And what is the further consequence of sorrow? Depression. Now Arjuna is going to go through deep depression; if it is in Bay of Bengal, it would have been useful!, at least some rains would come, but depression in our mind is of no use; you do not get any benefit. In both cases, rain comes in depression, but here it is salt rain from the eye, and thus useless! Here you find the courageous Arjuna is going through an intense depression. Extension of sorrow. We will read 31-2. Moreover, killing my people in this war, I do not see any good. Oh Kṛṣṇa ! I desire neither victory, nor kingdom, nor pleasures. Oh Kṛṣṇa ! What is the use of kingdom for us? What is the use of sense pleasures? Or, (what is the use of) life (itself)?

Arjuna goes through the symptoms of depression also and how does it express itself. First he begins to feel that the very life is meaningless. These are all typical signs of these mental problems of saṁsāra . He begins to feel that the whole life is meaningless. For whom should I live?

Why should I live? Why should I eat, drink coffee. Why wear the ornaments. Why should I dress? Why should I do anything at all? The whole life will appear to be empty or meaningless.

It is the most unique thing because Vēdanta tells that you are the only meaningful thing in the creation and meaning for life or meaning for your existence does not depend upon any external factor at all. But because of ignorance we begin to get associated with the world, with the people, with various activities and we begin to enjoy them and we begin to get more and more interested, we put our heart and soul in that pursuit and we make them meaningful and after some time, it appears as though they are making our lives meaningful.

In fact, we are the one who give meaning to everything else, but because of ignorance, because of addiction, after some time, it appears that those pursuits are making my life meaningful. A musician thinks that without music life is meaningless. A sportsman addicted to sports thinks that without sports, life is meaningless. A workaholic thinks that after retirement, life is meaningless. And similarly each one gets addicted to certain things or certain people and he begins to conclude that without that my life is empty.

And once you begin to think so, why should I live, for whom I should live, etc. this is the biggest confusion and delusion. And what Vēdānta says is: Nothing can make or give meaning to your life, your life is worthwhile by itself. You add meaning to life, nothing adds meaning to your life. Let the whole world exist, your life is meaningful. Let the whole world go away, your life is meaningful. Therefore, do not connect the purpose or meaning to anything else at all.

And that is why, we have to train our mind in the beginning itself; that my life is full and complete because of itself, not because of any blessed things. That is why religious training, religious preparation etc. has to start very early. Otherwise, whenever that crutch we hold on to fall, we have all these kinds of depression problem.

Arjuna is a typical example. He says na ca śreyo'nupaśyāmi, I do not see any good in my life, without these people. These people means, Bhīṣma, Drōṇa, etc. They alone can make my life meaningful, without their existence, śreyo'nupaśyāmi, I do not see any good in my life. hatvā khajanamāhave. After destroying my people, my life is meaningless and what about victory in the war? na kāṅkṣe vijayaṁ Kṛṣṇā, even though I do not see any meaning in victory. Here also you should remember, previously when he was about to start the battle, what was the purpose, the purpose was very clear that it is a fight between Dharma and Adharma and the purpose of this war is what, paritrāṇāya sādḥūnāṃ vināśāya ca duṣkṛtām dharmasaṃsthāpanārthāya, Dharma saṃsthāpanām is the meaningful thing; meaningful outcome of this war; that dharmasaṃsthāpanārthāya, he forgets completely and he begins to look at life from the stand point of a few people, coming and going. That is called short-sightedness.

Our Dharma śāstras say that people are subject to arrival and departure, whereas Dharma is śāśvatham. Therefore if at all you should have attachment, develop attachment to Dharma, śāśvatha dharma; never develop attachment to aśāśvatha janāh.

In the Kathōpaniṣad, Nachiketas beautifully says: sasyamiva martyaḥ pacyatē sasyamivājāyatē punaḥ. People are mortals holding on to mortals; how can you give up Dharma? Therefore an attached-mind sees people as more important than Dharma, whereas a man of right vision sees dharma as more important than the mortal.

So here Arjuna is confused. Na kāṅkṣe vijayaṁ Kṛṣṇā Na ca rājyam. Even a kingdom is meaningless, purposeless, na ca sukhāni, all the pleasure of life are also worthless; kiṁ nō rājyēna gōvinda, hey Kṛṣṇa, what is the use of getting a kingdom; kiṁ bhōgairjīvitēna vā. See where he is heading. What is the use of pleasures? What is the use of kingdom, and finally he says, kiṁ jīvitēna vā.

What is the purpose of living? Whereas our Dharma śāstra say: purpose of living is not a few people around, the original purpose of living is the spiritual attainment and if you forget that, you get into all these troubles.

sense objects, च सुखानि ca sukhāni and pleasures काङ्क्षितं नः kāṅkṣitam naḥ are desired by us

33. Renouncing (their) lives and wealth, such (people) have assembled in his war, for whose sake alone the kingdom, sense objects, and pleasures are desired by us.

Here also we find how Arjuna has forgotten the original purpose of Mahābhāratha battle. In this slōkā he says yēṣāmarthē kāṅkṣitam nō rājyam bhōgāḥ sukhāni ca, through this battle, we wanted to get a kingdom. So the purpose of this Mahābhāratha battle is getting back the kingdom; bhōgāḥ, getting back the pleasures, or sense objects, sukhāni ca, and the pleasures born out of the sense objects. All these we are trying to get for what purpose. yēṣāmarthē, for the enjoyment of Bhīṣma, Drōṇa, etc. only. How he is bluffing, just see.

Now he says, purpose of Mahābhāratha battle is to get all the pleasures and to give these pleasures to Bhīṣma, Drōṇa, etc. Like that I want to accomplish all these things and to dedicate them to Bhīṣma and Drōṇa and such people are going to be destroyed. Here, you find how Arjuna's mind is clouded. The purpose of Mahābhāratha war is not getting the kingdom and handing over to Bhīṣma and Drōṇa. Very purpose of Mahābhāratha war is fighting Adharma and whoever has joined Adharma, they have to be destroyed and if Bhīṣma and Drōṇa have unfortunately joined them, they also have to be destroyed. This vision was very clear before.

Now Arjuna is turning the table and says for Bhīṣma's and Drōṇa's sake only, we are getting all these things. Therefore he says, yēṣāṃ Bhīṣma Drōṇādinam prayōjanāya ēva rājyaṃ bhōgāḥ, sukhāni ca kāṅkṣitaṃ. And all these people, imē asmin yudde avasthitāḥ. And these very people prāṇāṃstyaktvā dhanāni ca. Sacrificing their life and wealth they are standing here. And therefore Arjuna's argument is: if I win this war and get the kingdom who will I show this to. Like a person having some money and he did not have a valet; a purse was not there. Therefore, what did he do? He got a purse using the money he had. And now what is the problem? There is no money to keep in the valet. Similarly, I win war only to bring all the goodies and the keep in front of Bhīṣma and Drōṇa to enjoy. He should say Sabhāsh, well done. Now I will kill them and get the kingdom, and in whose front I will keep them place them, and therefore it is utterly meaningless. yudde avasthitāḥ.

एतान्न हन्तुमिच्छामि घ्नतोपि मधुसूदन ।
अपि त्रैलोक्यराज्यस्य हेतोः किं नु महीकृते ॥ १.३५ ॥

ētānna hantumicchāmi ghnatō'pi madhusūdana |
api trailōkyarājyasya hētōḥ kiṃ nu mahīkṛtē || 1.35 ||

मधुसूदन Madhusūdana Oh Kṛṣṇa ! अपि हेतोः api hētōḥ Even for the sake of त्रैलोक्यराज्यस्य trailōkyarājyasya three worlds न इच्छामि na icchāmi I do not desire.. एतान् ētān to kill these people, अपि api even if भ्रतः ghnataḥ They kill (me). किं नु महीकृते kiṃ nu mahīkṛtē Why indeed (should I fight) for the sake of a kingdom?

35. Oh Kṛṣṇa ! Even for the sake of three worlds, I do not desire to kill these people, even if they kill (me). Why indeed (should I fight) for the sake of a kingdom?

Who are those people standing in front? He gives a list once again. Even though he has told earlier, he is repeating again and again. Typical breakdown.

Anybody who is becoming sorrowful and depression like that broken gramophone record, they will repeat it. However much you try to console, it would not work, only Kālah has to help them. Extremely difficult to handle. If a person has to face a situation the only thing is the person must be prepared before any such tragedy comes. Actually when the problem comes, it is very difficult. That is why they say, have the Lord, have devotion, have all those things beforehand itself. Always preparation is better than shock.

And Arjuna has never prepared and therefore he is sliding down and you can see Kṛṣṇa is also utterly silent. So, therefore so many things people do. Different people have different expressions. Some people loudly laugh also; and some people cry, roar. So many people do so many things. Kṛṣṇa is silent spectator because he wants to allow the person to exhaust and this is indirectly a training to us.

Tomorrow if somebody is like this, do not start with sādhana catuṣṭaya sampanna adhikāriṇām, etc. Tatva bodha. Allow them to exhaust their feelings. Kṛṣṇa allows Arjuna. Therefore, Arjuna again tells (just now only he has finished telling so many things). ācāryāḥ all these Ācāryāḥ are standing. pitarāḥ. Fathers, putrāḥ, sons, pitāmahāḥ, grand fathers, mātulāḥ, uncles śvaśurāḥ, fathers in law, pautrāḥ, grandson; śyālāḥ, brothers in law, sambandhinaḥ; in short, all relations. Because it is a war among or between cousins and therefore Arjuna says, ētānna hantumicchāmi. Come what may, I will not kill them, hurt them.

It look as though compassion, it is very difficult to distinguish what is attachment and what is compassion. It is very difficult. We may think that Arjuna has compassion. On what basis we say that it is problem of attachment?

The difference is only this. In attachment, a person's vision of Dharma and Adharma gets clouded. Compassion's greatness however much it comes; however much a person is disturbed by compassion, he will not violate Dharma.

A judge may also feel compassion when a criminal cries and ask for mercy petition. Most interesting thing. He wants mercy from the President. When he killed so many people, he did not want to show any mercy, now he cries that he has got wife, children, etc. and if I am not there, it will be a problem for them. But a judge can never afford to show a false compassion. If capital punishment is required, he has to do that. And when he does that, you cannot say judge is compassionless. You cannot say.

Similarly, here also, if at all Arjuna shows compassion, it is a misplaced compassion and therefore it is a problem of Rāgaḥ alone. More details we will be seeing later. Therefore, he says ētāna hantumicchāmi. I do not want to kill them. ghnatō'pi Madhusūdana, Hey Madhusūdhana, he is addressing correctly, Madhusūdhana, a destroyer of Madhu the rākṣasa, madhukaidabha asura. Kṛṣṇa, you did not face any problem when you destroyed Madhu, a rākṣasa. Killing rākṣasa is easy. Here I am not killing rākṣasa, I have to kill my own relations. But Kṛṣṇa killed Kaṁsa; Arjuna is not seeing that. He should have called Kaṁsa niṣūdhana; he did not do that. He says Madhusūdhana. For you the job was easier; but I cannot do that. ghnataḥ api, even if they choose to strike us. Even if they choose to hit us we will receive the arrow, like the freedom movement, they received the blow. I will receive everything but I am not going to take my bow at all. ghnataḥ api; even though they strike us. api trailokyarājyasya. Even I am going to get all the three lōkās, bhu lōkā, bhuvan lōkā, suvar lōkā, it will not compensate my Bhīṣma, my Drōṇa, cannot be compensated by all the three lōkās. Then what to talk of kinna mahikrite. By getting a small kingdom, it is not going to be compensated when the three lōkās, cannot compensate, what else can compensate? Therefore I will choose Bhīṣma and Drōṇa and not anything else.

निहत्य धार्तराष्ट्रान्नः का प्रीतिः स्याज्जनार्दन ।
पापमेवाश्रयेदस्मान्हत्वैतानाततायिनः ॥ १.३६ ॥

nihatya dhārtarāṣṭrānnaḥ kā prītiḥ syājjanārdana |

pāpamēva"śrayēdasmān hatvaitānātāyinaḥ || 1.36 ||

36. Oh Kṛṣṇa ! By killing these Kauravās, what happiness can belong to us? Killing these criminals, sin alone will accrue to us.

So Hey Kṛṣṇa, Hey Janārdhana, nihatya dhārtarāṣṭrānnaḥ kā prītiḥ syājjanārdana.. What happiness or what joy can we acquire by killing these dhārtarāṣṭrānnaḥ. Again go back to one of the previous slōkās. Remember dhārtarāṣṭrasya durbuddheryuddhe priyacikīrṣavaḥ. He has now forgotten durbhuddhi; now he is asking what are we going to get by killing these Kauravās, Hey Janārdana, Hey Kṛṣṇa. So Janārdana means Duṣṭa janān ardhayati who destroys Duṣṭa jana is Janārdana. You do not have problem, because you have to kill only Duṣṭa jana. But I have to kill my relatives you have only to Duṣṭa jana. Your job is easier my job is very difficult and therefore I will not take to this war and gradually Arjuna's mind is further becoming worse. Until now, Arjuna's problem was only grief and depression. It was the problem of Śōkaḥ.

Now from this verse onwards, Arjuna gets into the problem of mōhaḥ, this wrong judgment, misconception, dharma-adharma avivēka. This is the third symptom of saṁsāra . Up to previous slōkā, 35th slōkā, he had the problem of Śōkaḥ, and now that is from verse No.28 to 35, is Śōkaḥ problem and from now 36 to 47 end of the chapter, we find problem of delusion.

What do you mean by Delusion? Seeing whatever is dharma as adharma and whatever is Adharma, he begins to see as Dharma. Now objectively seeing, what is dharma; the dharma of a kṣatriya is punishing whoever is committing adharma. Just as the judge has to punish; there the hiraṁsa becomes a dharma for a kṣatriya. And when he does that job, he is not going to get pāpam, on the other hand, he is going to get only Puṇyam, and therefore Mahābhāratha war is only going to give puṇyam for Arjuna. Kṛṣṇa is going to say that in the 2nd chapter. There you will have to remember this line. In the 2nd chapter Kṛṣṇa says that only very rare people gets:

...स्वर्गद्वारमपावृतम् | सुखिनः क्षत्रियाः पार्थ लभन्ते युद्धमीदृशम् ॥ २- ३२ ॥

...svargadvāramapāvṛtam | sukhinaḥ kṣatriyāḥ pārtha labhantē yuddhamīdṛśam || 2.32 ||

Arjuna, for you this Mahābhāratha war is svarga dvaram, a means of giving svarga; therefore it is a puṇya karma. On the other hand,

अकीर्तिं चापि भूतानि कथयिष्यन्ति तेऽव्ययाम् |
सम्भावितस्य चाकीर्तिर्मरणादतिरिच्यते || २- ३४ ||
भयाद्रणादुपरतं.....

akīrtim cāpi bhūtāni kathayiṣyanti tē'vyayām |
sambhāvitasya cākīrtimaraṇādatiricyatē || 2.34 ||
bhayādraṇāduparatam.....

There he says when you run away from the battle, it is going to give pāpam. Here yuddham is puṇyam and palayanam, means running away from the yuddham is pāpam. This is the objective fact Kṛṣṇa is going to tell in the 2nd chapter.

Now Arjuna is going to lose sight of this and what does he do, he sees the yuddham as pāpam and running away from this yuddham as puṇyam.

Therefore Puṇyē pāpa dr̥ṣṭi, pāpē puṇya dr̥ṣṭi, athasmin tat buddhihi ēva, mōhaḥaḥ, adhyasaha avivēkaḥ and this athismin tat buddhi, this mōhaḥ Vyāsācārya beautifully brings out. He says pāpam ēva āśrayed asmān, Hey Kṛṣṇa, we are going to incur pāpam alone by killing these people and who are these people. hatvā etān ātatāyinaḥ, another interesting thing.

Arjuna calls these people, i.e., Kauravās as ātatāyinaḥ. ātatāyi is a technical word used in dharma śāstras. In Dharma śāstras, they enumerate varieties of pāpam. The huge list of pāpams with gradation. All these things we tell in Avani avitta saṅkalpah. Sankarī karaṇānām, malīnī karaṇānām, apātri karaṇānām, jāti brahṁsa karaṇānām, nava vithanam, bhahūnām, bhahuvīdhānām; varieties of pāpah. Drinking liquor is one type of pāpah; smelling it is another type of pāpah. lesser grade. Moving with a person who is given that, is a pāpam. There is a great list. Directly killing. Indirectly killing. All these are said on the avani avittam day. All those pāpānām, sadyaḥ apanōdhanārtham, it is said, after doing the pāpam for the whole year and all these pāpams should go in one day's snānam!! Sadyaḥ apanōdhanārtham gaṅgā snānam aham kariṣyē. Even on that āvani avittam day, for the kamōkarshit, one snānam; he does not want to do. Any way that is an aside thing.

Huge lists of pāpam are given and there they talk about pañca mahā pāthakāni. Five worst type of sins. What are they?

क्षेत्रदरापहर्थाच .पञ्छैते ह्याततायिना ,॥

agnidogarata caiva, aśastrapānir dhanāpahaḥ ।

5 types of criminal sin. agnida, burning down somebody else's house or property. garadaha; poisoning a person. aśastrapānir; killing another person with a weapon when the other person does not have any weapon in defense. aśāstrapāni, the third maha pāthakam; dhanāpahaḥ, stealing the property of another person, and finally, ksētra dhāra apaharthācha, taking the land or wife of another person; kidnapping. These are the five things, pañcaite hyātatāyinaḥ. Agnidaḥ, burning the house, poisoning a person, killing a defenseless person with a weapon, taking the land or property of a person and taking away the wife of another person; these five are considered pañca maha pāthakāni and whoever does any one of these pāthakani; even anyone is called ātatāyi.

And what should be the punishment according to the criminal law of those days. They had the criminal law. Our criminal law has come only after our constitution. They had their own danḍa neethi. And according to traditional danḍa neethi, athathayinam ayantham, hanya they tha charāka. Capital punishment is the punishment for an ātatāyi. And here Duryōdhanās are standing and you know what is their "glory" especially Duryōdhanā, Duśasana, etc. they have done all of them. They have poisoned, they have burned in the lac house, poisoned Bhīma, kidnapped Draupadi, all these things they did and therefore they are not ordinary ātatāyi. if you institute a noble prize for ātatāyi, then Duryōdhana will get the No.1 prize and then what should the punishment. Immediate capital punishment.

And if a kṣatriya does not do that, he will incur sin. Here Arjuna says (see how much conflict has entered Arjuna's mind), by killing these Atha thāyis, he is using the same word, I will incur pāpam. So how his vision is totally clouded. Look at the sentence. pāpamēva''śrayēdasmān. Only paapah will come to us by killing these people who are ātatāyis. This is the beginning of mōhaḥ. rāgaḥ over, Sānskrīt rāgaḥ, not carnatic music one. Śōkaḥ problem is clear. Now mōhaḥ problem starts.

तस्मान्नार्हा वयं हन्तुं धार्तराष्ट्रान् स्वबांधवान् ।
स्वजनं हि कथं हत्वा सुखिनः स्याम माधव ॥ १.३७॥

tasmānna"rhā vyaṁ hantuṁ dhārtarāṣṭrān svabāndhavān |
svajanam hi katham hatvā sukhinaḥ syāma mādharma || 1.37 ||

37. There we ought not to kill our kindred, the sons of Dhrtarastra. For how could we, O Mādharma, gain happiness by the slaying of our kinsmen?

So tasmāt, as though he has given a list of elaborate arguments, like a lawyer, he states: therefore; because of the reasons I have given, it is but a proper conclusion, vyaṁ dhārtarāṣṭrān hantum na arhāḥ. We should not kill these people. Who are these people? svabāndhavān. Here he again says svabāndhavān. svabāndhavān, means our kith and kin. That means according to him, two dharma śāstras are there. When our relations commit mistake, one law and somebody else's commit mistake, another law. That is what everyone's argument is.

Imagine, if law is changed for everyone individually; what law would be left out. Remember, this is the land of Manu Neethi Chozhan. That Manu Neethi Chozhan who was ready to kill his own son because he saw that he has committed a crime, which requires capital punishment. So therefore law is the same for everyone but now Arjuna says it is different. Therefore svabāndhavān. They are my relations. And svajanaṁ, again svajanaṁ, by killing my people, kathaṁ sukhinaḥ syāma, how can we enjoy a happy life?

Therefore our happiness is more important. Dharma is not important. So we can sacrifice dharma for the sake of happiness. This is indirect conclusion of Arjuna; whereas Gīta's teaching is svadharme nidhanaṁ śreyaḥ paradharmo bhayāvahaḥ. Dharma is prime. That is the conclusion of Gīta. Here Arjuna says we can sacrifice Dharma for the sake of a happy life.

यद्यप्येते न पश्यन्ति लोभोपहतचेतसः ।
कुलक्षयकृतं दोषं मित्रद्रोहे च पातकम् ॥ १.३८ ॥

yadyapyētē na paśyanti lōbhōpahatacētasah|
kulakṣayakṛtaṁ dōṣaṁ mitradrōhē ca pātakam|| 1.38 ||

लोभोपहतचेतसः lōbhōpahatacētasah with their intellect overpowered by greed, एते ētē they न पश्यन्ति na paśyanti do not see दोषम् dōṣam the evil कुलक्षयकृतम् kulakṣayakṛtam caused by the destruction of families, च पातकम् ca pātakam and the sin मित्रद्रोहे mitradrōhē in harming friends

38. With their intellect overpowered by greed, they do not see the evil caused by the destruction of families and the sin in harming friends.

Arjuna is totally confused. We are able to understand Arjuna's confusion but the irony is Arjuna himself thinks that he has got a clear vision now only. He is reviewing. What we were saying? Until he came to the battle, he had a clear vision. Now he had slipped from right vision to confusion. But Arjuna feels until now I was confused and now coming to the middle of the battlefield, now only my eyes have opened. I have got a clearer understanding. That this also is not Arjuna's problem. This is universal problem.

Even when we make wrong judgment, emotionally, we will think that the whole world is confused, we are the only the clear sighted person. This is the power of the mind. When the mind is deluded or confused, it is so powerful that it begins to cloud the intellect. Not only it begins to cloud the intellect, the intellect's instead of fighting the mind, emotional mind, the intellect will join the mind.

You know the theory. If you cannot fight a person, join a person. Like a smoker who argues, if we do not smoke the cigarette, how will the company people survive; how many people will lose their jobs. We have to support them by buying. You will find the intellect will justify smoking. Intellect will justify drinking. Intellect will justify all akramams; because the addiction has become too powerful to conquer.

Therefore, Arjuna begins to say that we have got a clearer vision. Duryōdhanā's are confused. Therefore he says, because of their confusion they have come to this battlefield and since our thinking is very clear, let us withdraw from our war, after all two hands are required to make a noise, and even if they are ready, if we withdraw, the war will not take place. And therefore, Arjuna is so happy now. At least now I have got a good buddhi. Now I got a clearer vision. Therefore he says:

Na paśyanti. Kṛṣṇa is listening and has to stand without laughing. See how difficult it is. Kṛṣṇa has to pretend as though Arjuna is right. Because Arjuna is so emotional and thoughts and words are flooding from him and Arjuna does not want to listen anything. Therefore Kṛṣṇa cannot even speak and therefore he has to remain silent. Therefore, he says, ētē na paśyanti, Ete Duryōdhanādaya, Arjuna must be including Kṛṣṇa also. Kṛṣṇa, you also did not see it! Ete na paśyanti, they do not see clearly, their intellects stifled, upahataḥ, stifled, suppressed, by what lōbha, means greed. So the Kauravās ' intellects are suppressed because of their greed and therefore, they do not see the evils involved in this war. What are the evils involved? kulakṣayakṛtaṁ dōṣaṁ. Evil consequences of destruction of many families because when a male is destroyed and especially in those days, male is the head of the family and he is the only bread winner.

Now is the confusion, as to who is the head. Therefore he was the head, and he was the controller, and he was in charge, the breadwinner also, therefore, destruction of a male, is as good as destruction of a family. Therefore by destroying these people, we are destroying countless families and by that so many evil-consequences happen and these consequences Duryōdhanā's do not see but now I have got a very very clear vision.

Not only that is the evil, there is another evil involved, mitradrōhē ca pātakam. And many of them are not only our relation but our close friends. And what is the job of a friend, to assist a friend, to help a friend, a friend in need, is a friend indeed, therefore we are supposed to protect them, instead of protecting a friend, we are destroying. And this is a mahapāpam. Therefore mitradrōhē ca pātakam cha. Generally itself harming anyone is a pāpam; harming a friend who has trusted me is ingratitude and it is a greater sin. And that I am able to see. Duryōdhanās do not see. But thank God, before we started the battle, at least now we have got our buddhi. So let us go back. So Arjuna decides to go away from the battlefield. And then what happened? Next week.

Hari Om.

009 CHAPTER 01, VERSES 38-41

Om

यद्यप्येते न पश्यन्ति लोभोपहतचेतसः ।
कुलक्षयकृतं दोषं मित्रद्रोहे च पातकम् ॥ १.३८ ॥

Vyāsācārya is showing how Arjuna is going through intense saṁsāra in the battlefield. And we saw that saṁsāra expresses in the form of the threefold problems, i.e. rāgaḥ or attachment; secondly as śōkaḥ, or sorrow and finally mohaḥ, or conflict. Of these attachment was shown before, kṛpayā parayā'viṣṭō viṣṭidannidamabravīt. Arjuna experienced intense attachment towards these people, when he thought of the possible loss of these people. Of course, he had the attachment already; but it was in a hidden form and in the battlefield, the hidden attachment surfaced and once the attachment overpowers him, then he suffers from the immediate consequences, namely sorrow, and sorrow is directly proportional to the attachment. And since the attachment was intense, the consequent grief also was intense and it was so intense that it started expressing in the physical body also. So his whole body was burning, head was reeling, hands were failing etc. which we saw.

Now Vyāsācārya shows how the rāgaḥ and śōkaḥ, attachment and grief, is leading him to conflict or confusion; i.e. mohaḥ. Mōhaḥ is dharma-adharma avivēkaḥ. Confusion between what is dharma proper and what is adharma. And when there is such a confusion between dharma and adharma; whatever is dharma will appear as though Adharma; and whatever is Adharma will have to appear as Dharma. We know that in the battlefield, Arjuna's duty as a kṣatriya is fighting the war. Therefore, yuddham is dharma for Arjuna but Arjuna sees the very dharma yuddham as adharma. This is conflict No.1.

Secondly, a kṣatriya should never run away from the battlefield. Running away from the battlefield is shirking the duty, it will come under omission of duty and according to Dharma śāstra, omission of duty will produce a special sin called pratyavāya. And therefore running away is a pāpa karma, producing pratyavāya but that Arjuna is seeing as though puṇya karma.

Therefore, Dharma yuddham he is seeing as Adharma and therefore he is trying to do adharma palāyanam; palāyanam means running away; he sees as though dharma. Thus the confusion is complete.

And the problem is once the mind which is so much attached and confused begins to overpower a person, that it stifles the intellect also. Even an educated informed intellect is stifled by an emotional mind, a disturbed mind. And unfortunate thing is when the mind is so much overpowered by the emotion, the intellect cannot fight the problem, and when the intellect cannot fight, it begins to support the mental weakness; because the rule is if you cannot fight the enemy, then the join the enemy. The rule of election. If you cannot fight the enemy, join the enemy unscrupulously.

Similarly, when the mind has got certain addictions and weaknesses, if that addiction and weakness is feeble, the intellect can fight that and get over that addiction. But if that addiction has become so intense, what will the intellect do. Instead of fighting it, the intellect will begin to justify the mental weaknesses. And if it is informed in scriptures, such an intellect will start even quoting the scriptures, which alone we call, devil quoting the scriptures.

In fact, we can quote scriptural statements for almost everyone of our weaknesses, like somebody who was indulging in some drink or smoke, he was quoting the Bhaja Govindam of Śankarācārya; yōgaratō vā, bhōgaratō vā, saṃgaratō vā, saṃgavihīnā; such a person quotes; yasya brahmaṇi ramatē cittam, nandati, nandati, nandyēva. What does it matter, whether you are a yōgi or a bhōgi, what is important is where your mind is. And a lazy person who does not want to get up and go to a temple, he can always argue, why should we go to the temple, when the Lord is all-pervading and it is in my heart itself. And in support of my laziness, I can even quote Śivānandalahari:

जले वा वह्नौ वा वसतु वसतेः किं वद फलम् |
सदा यस्यैवान्तःकरणमपि शंभो तव पदे
स्थितं चेद्योगोऽसौ स च परमयोगी स च सुखी || १२ ||

guhāyāṃ gehe vā bahirapi vane vā:'driśikhare jale vā vahnau vā vasatu vasateḥ kiṃ vada phalam | sadā yasyaivāntaḥkaraṇamapi śambho tava pade sthitam cedyogo:'sau sa ca paramayogī sa ca sukhī ||12||

A very convenient quotation, wherein Śankarācārya says it does not matter, where you are. What matters is where your mind is? Therefore I can argue, my mind is all the time on the Lord. There is no way to verify it. I can easily bluff my mind. Why go to the temple and why get up? Therefore the intellect can easily fool us.

Therefore Arjuna is befooled by his own intellect and therefore he now talks of the evils of war, even the arguments are wonderfully true, the war will cause a lot of evil, but here the place in which Arjuna is talking about that, is not a proper place because Arjuna is talking out of weakness of mind. And therefore in these slōkās, from verse no.38 onwards, Arjuna is talking about the evils of war. So what are they? He says:

कुलक्षयकृतं दोषं मित्रद्रोहे च पातकम् ॥ १.३८ ॥

[yadyapyētē na paśyanti lōbhōpahatacētaḥ|
kulakṣayakṛtaṁ dōṣaṁ mitradrōhē ca pātakam||1.38 ||](#)

Kṛṣṇa, the Kauravaas do not see the evils of war. So kulakṣayakṛtaṁ dōṣaṁ, in any war, millions of male members are killed, who are the heads of the family, and when such men are killed; the heads of the family are killed and when the heads of the family are killed, it is as good as destroying the family themselves. When families are destroyed, the consequences will be terrible.

What are the consequences? Arjuna will talk later. But here he is just mentioning, kulakṣayakṛtaṁ dōṣaṁ, dōṣaṁ means evil consequences born out of destruction of family.

And not only such evil consequences are there, mitradrōhē ca pātakam. We are hurting our own kith and kin which is called mitradrōham. We are supposed to help our friends, but only in its place we are destroying which is another mahā pāpam, that they are not seeing; but thank God!, we are seeing clearly. Therefore, having seen the evil consequences let us decide to withdraw from the war. After all, any fight requires minimum two. And if I refuse to become the second one, then there cannot be any fight. Therefore let us retreat.

This is Arjuna's argument which he is going to buildup in the following slōkās. This will go on; all are very interesting slōkās up to 46. He talks about the evils consequences of war. The evil consequences of destruction of family, which he calls kulakṣaya. Kulam means family; kṣaya means destruction.

कथं न ज्ञेयमस्माभिः पापादस्मान्निवर्तितुम् ।
कुलक्षयकृतं दोषं प्रपश्यद्भिर्जनार्दन ॥ 1.39 ॥

[kathaṁ na jñēyamasmābhiḥ pāpādasmanñivartitum|
kulakṣayakṛtaṁ dōṣaṁ prapaśyadbhirjanārdana||1.39||](#)

यद्यपि yadhyapi Still कथम् katham why न अस्माभिः ज्ञेयम् na asmābhiḥ jñēyam can't we decide निवर्तितुम् nivartitum to withdraw अस्मात् पापात् asmāt pāpāt from this sinful action प्रपश्यद्भिः prapaśyadbhi seeing दोषम् dōṣam the evil कुलक्षयकृतम् kulakṣayakṛtham caused by the destruction of families, जनार्दन janārdana Oh Kṛṣṇa?

39. Still, why can't we decide to withdraw from this sinful action, seeing the evil caused by the destruction of families, Oh Kṛṣṇa? "

So janārdana, Hey Kṛṣṇa, dōṣaṁ prapaśyadbhi, we are able to clearly see the negative consequences. Duryōdhanās' are confused but we have got a clear thinking now and therefore we are able to see the dōṣaṁ. dōṣaṁ in kulakṣayakṛtaṁ. Evil caused by the destruction of millions of families. And since we have seen the evil, why can't we withdraw?

Therefore, asmābhiḥ; asmāt pāpāt nivṛttim katham na jñēyam. Why can't we think of withdrawing from such an evil action. So here pāpa means what? Arjuna means this yuddham which involves kulakṣayaṁ. Kulakṣaya rupāt pāpāt nivṛtti, withdrawing from such a sinful action, why can't we think of, even though they would not do. We will do. Why should we have a false ego? If the other people going to criticise us, it is their problem, let the world say anything, let us withdraw from this War. Hey Janārdana, he is pleading because Kṛṣṇa is the Charioteer. Therefore he has to drive the chariot away; therefore he is asking for Kṛṣṇa's support; whereas Kṛṣṇa is sitting like Brahman; neither ready to cooperate nor is he is going to reject him. If Kṛṣṇa has to reject, he will have to give his arguments and if Kṛṣṇa has to give his arguments, Arjuna must be in a position to receive.

Unless the other person is in a receptive mood, there is no use of talking; talking to a non-receptive person is called vanarōdhanam. You know vanarodhanam. Crying in forest. In fact, half of the time, in our families, we are talking to people who are not at all interested in listening. Like talking to a wall. And therefore Kṛṣṇa is very intelligent, even though he has to say a lot of thing; he does not say anything, because Arjuna is not open. And not only he is not open, he wants to talk a lot of things to Kṛṣṇa. Therefore Kṛṣṇa is listening.

कुलक्षये प्रणश्यन्ति कुलधर्माः सनातनाः ।
धर्मं नष्टे कुलं कृत्स्नम् अधर्मोऽभिभवत्युत ॥४०॥

kulakṣayē praṇaśyanti kuladharmāḥ sanātanāḥ |
dharmē naṣṭē kulam kṛtsnamadharmō'bhībhavatyuta | 40 |

कुलक्षये kulakṣayē When families are destroyed सनातनाः sanātanāḥ the longstanding कुलधर्माः kuladharmāḥ family traditions प्रणश्यन्ति praṇaśyanti perish धर्मं नष्टे dharme naṣṭe
When family traditions are lost, अधर्मः adharmaḥ unrighteousness, उत uta indeed, अभिभवति abhibhavati overtakes कृत्स्नं कुलम् kṛtsnam kulam the entire family

40. When families are destroyed, the longstanding family traditions perish. When family traditions are lost, unrighteousness, indeed, overtakes the entire family.

Here Arjuna further explains the consequences of family destruction. So when there are no healthy families in a society; either there is no family life or there are broken families only, what will be the consequences in society. Here Arjuna wants to say that, without family life, Dharma can never grow. Religion can never grow. Culture can never grow and spirituality is never possible. Therefore, whether it is dharma; whether it is culture; whether it is religion; or whether it is spirituality; all these things can grow only in a society where there are stable surviving long lasting families.

In fact, we never understood the importance of families; because in India especially family life was very very strong. We should not say 'was'; it is still now. Now it is reasonable strong. And since we never had this problem of no family or broken family, we never knew the importance of it; but now only the family life is breaking down in many cultures and unfortunately in India also the family life is breaking down and therefore gradually we are beginning to understand the adverse consequences only now. A lot of research is going on; analyzing lot of sociological problems; youth problems; crimes; drugs; and all those things are now analyzed. And after analysis, and even statistical study, they have come to recognise 90% of problems in youth is only because they do not have a stable family background. And therefore, our scriptures gave lot of importance to healthy family life.

If an industry should grow very well, you know that it requires an ideal infrastructure where different departments are functioning in harmony, when there is understanding, where people are working as a team, only when such a wonderful infrastructure is there; material growth of an industry is possible. Similarly, if a nation should progress and grow, we know now, especially we have a learned hard lesson how a stable government is important for the growth of the country.

If there is no stable government; where the different members, there is no cohesiveness and harmony; most of the time, the government is struggling only for their survival, nobody has the time to think of the progress of the nation. So, just as a good infrastructure is required for an industrial growth; a good stable government is required for national growth; a stable family is required for cultural growth. Dharmic growth. Religious growth.

And spiritual growth and such values and culture alone we call, kuladharmāḥ. So Arjuna says without a stable family, kuladharmāḥ will perish and therefore he says kulakṣayē praṇaśyanti. So when the families are destroyed dharmāḥ, kuladharmāḥ i.e, cultural values, ethical values, religious values, spiritual values which have been coming down form anadi vēda parampara, all of them are destroyed. And dharmē naṣṭē and when the dharma is destroyed, and consequently, when the family is destroyed, and consequently when dharma is destroyed, the immediate thing will be adharmāḥ abhi bhavati.

adharmāḥ; that means a life in which importance is given only to arthaḥ and kāmaḥ. Adharmāḥ means a life given to only material values. Money becomes the most important thing in life; pleasure becomes the most important thing in life; and for the sake of money and pleasure, all the values can be given up. Such a materialistic life style is called adharmā and such a materialistic life style will overpower all the values. And therefore adharmō' bhibhavatyuta

41. Oh Kṛṣṇa ! Because of the prevalence of unrighteousness, the women of the family become corrupt. Oh Kṛṣṇa ! When women become corrupt, the intermixture of castes takes place.

Why do we say stable family is important for cultural growth? Why do we say so? We say stable family is important because a cultural personality has to be formed in a human being in very early life. A healthy personality has to be formed in very early life. Just as a healthy body has to be formed in very early life. Suppose a child has malnutrition, proper nutrition is not there within the first five to 10 years, after 10 or 15 years, even if the best food is given, it is not going to be of great use because within the first 10 years, already a physical personality is formed.

In the same way, if a healthy physiological personality has to be formed, it has to be formed in very early life. And healthy psychology is possible only when a child grows in a healthy family; a stable family.

A lot of study has gone into that especially in the west. They have studied a lot about the development of mind and the importance of family especially a stable family. When a child is growing it does not have the capacity to discriminate and to judge what is important, what is not important, what is valuable and what is not valuable. The child cannot discriminate. Since the child cannot discriminate and develop proper values, the child is always going to look to the parents and imitate. Therefore, the parents, the child believes absolutely; in fact parents are like God for the child. The parents are omniscient. Omnipotent; and therefore the child is going to value things based upon the values of the father and mother.

Now, while the child is developing values for various things, what type of value or respect the child has towards itself. That is also important. What type of self-value the child develops; what type of self-image the child develops. What type of self-worth the child develops. That is also very important.

Now the child does not have any idea about itself. Whether it is a useless child or whether it is a wonderful child. Whether it is a respectable child or whether it is to be a rejected child. The child does not have any opinion. The child is going to develop a self-opinion, based on what. The child is going to develop a self-opinion based on the parents' opinion of the child.

And therefore the psychologists say that if the parents are going to respect the child and treat the child as a v.i.p.; the most important thing in the family the whole life of the mother is centered on the child, and whatever the child asks for; our scriptures say, rājavat pañcavarṣāni, 5 years of life, the child develops self-opinion.

And once the self-opinion is formed within 5 years, it can never be raised and suppose the parents are going to treat, rājavat, at the beck and call of the child, every family member comes and takes care of the child. And all the silly question somebody is there to answer, and all the needs somebody is around to fulfill, if the parents treat the child like a vip, the child begins to develop a beautiful self-image, a beautiful self-worth, and that is self-respect and self-confidence. And if the child does not develop self-worth, self-image and self-confidence within those few years, the child is going to condemn itself; going to develop inferior complex and such a child of self-diffidence; can never achieve anything. It can never be an achiever -child. It can never be an accomplishing-child. It will say I can get it. And how did the child develop that value? It is not the child's mistake, but it is only the value that the parents have given.

Therefore, healthy mind is a mind which respects, which has got self-respect, which has got self-image. Kṛṣṇa will also tell in the 6th chapter,

आत्मैव ह्यात्मनो बन्धुरात्मैव रिपुरात्मनः ॥ 6.5॥

[uddharedātmanātmānaṃ nātmānamavasādayet |
ātmaiva hyātmāno bandhurātmaiva ripurātmanaḥ || 6- 5||](#)

Arjuna, once you condemn yourself, then nobody can help you. Even if Bhagavān comes and tells, you can accomplish mōkṣaḥ in this life, we will argue with Bhagavān and say you do not know who I am. Let hundred Gūrus comes and say, you can spiritually accomplish; you will sympathise with Gūru, he is so optimistic with the Gūru. You will sympathise with scriptures with God also, because if you do not have self-confidence, no God can help, no Gūru can help, no śāstras can help; therefore the most important grace is ātma kṛpaḥ.

Gūru kṛpaḥ is secondary; Īśvara kṛpaḥ is secondary; śāstra kṛpaḥ is secondary. All these graces will become valid only when there is most important grace, which is called ātma kṛpaḥ and what is ātma kṛpaḥ?; I can take charge of my life and I can accomplish what I want. This self-respect and image. and this self-image has to come within first few years. And that is possible only when there is a stable family, healthy parents who respect the child. And therefore, family life is very important to develop psychologically healthy citizens of a society.

And most of the crimes, and many of the drugs and all are developing only because of low self-image. When we say, a good self-image is required; they call it ego-nourishment. It is not arrogance. Only a nourished ego can grow and only when the ego grows it can ripen and only when ego grows and ripens, it can drop, leading to mōkṣaḥ. Therefore, we cannot remove the ego, without nourishing it. And that is self-respect. Therefore, family is required for developing self-respecting citizen.

The second importance of family is this. As I said, cultural values have to be imbibed very early in life. It has to be imbibed very early in life. And if I have to give cultural values to very young babies; naturally, verbal communication is not available. How can I teach cultural values, for 6 month old baby or 1 year old baby? Naturally, I can never communicate verbally.

So the next question, if the children have to develop cultural values, without verbal communication and how is it going to learn. Only one way, the child imbibes the cultural values without verbal communication and what is that; imitation. The child is going to imitate the parents blindly, just by observing the life of parents. Child is going to constantly watch the parents; every word the parents use, If you say, donkey, it will listen and use it when the Swamiji comes. What will it know? Here the father has called mother donkey or the other way around. But the child does not know, and it will imbibe it; use it in a wrong place and in a wrong way.

Every thought of the mother during the pregnancy influences the child, it is scientifically proved, and how the mother welcomes the child during the pregnancy that contributes to self-image. If the mother is going to not welcome the child, the child feels rejected. Even though it is not verbal, non verbal communication. That's why they have got the Seemantham, pumsavanam, etc. You whole family is welcoming the child; it seems the psychologically the child knows that so many people are there waiting to welcome me. I am a VIP; it is not a joke. These are proved scientifically and sociologically and therefore during pregnancy, the mother contributes through her thoughts and when the child is born, every word, every action of the parents; the child is going to imbibe, that means cultural values are taught by the parents only by serving as a model. Mother becomes the first model for the child. The father becomes the next model for the child. And thereafterwards, Gūru comes. Mātha, Pithā, Gūru and God is somewhere else. Mother is the first model. If the parents do not serve as the ideal models, the child will look around for TV models; imitating the wrong ones. So when we are not ready to serve as ideal model, the child requires model and therefore the child will take some other model. One Jackson, this chap or that. Swami Dayānanda says where music is no more sung, but music is done, music is lot of doing.

A child asked it seems, so the mother had taken the child, for a musical program, an opera or orchestra, the child asked the mother, why is this person threatening all these people with a stick. So the mother said, he is not threatening, he is only conducting the show with that. Then the baby asked, if he is not threatening, why is that lady screaming!! The child does not know the difference between what is screaming and what is singing; the line seems to be very very fine. I do not know.

Therefore the parents have to serve as a model. And if they have to serve as a model, the models should be available for a consistent length of time, which means a stable family is required. Imagine the father bringing in every other year, a new wife; or if the mother brings a new husband, the child will be confused. Which model to follow? To dress like whom? That means father and mother should be together and mere living within one roof is not enough. They should have the trust and love, because a house is possible not by mere bricks kept together, the bricks should be held together by cement. Similarly, a few members cannot make a family. These members should have trust and understanding, etc. And when such a love, care and understanding, harmony, etc. there they can serve as a model and the child imbibes.

The other day a family was sitting on the sofa, and they asked the child, a small baby of 1 year or 1-1/2 years, I think, they asked you do namaskāra to Swamiji. Then I had kept one foot down, and another foot I had kept up. I was surprised. What did the baby do you know. It pulled my leg. And put it down; both feet were together and did prostrated on both the feet. I was so surprised, and the child was with the grandparents and they had made it a point that whenever he does namaskāra, the head should touch the feet, or the hands should touch the feet. Therefore the child wanted to do namaskāra, and saw that one leg is up and the other is down, and therefore, pulled down my leg. Do you think it is verbal communication? It is all non-verbal communication. This is possible only when there is a stable family. And only when there is understanding, I emphasise understanding, because if the father and mother contradict, if the mother advises something to do this and if the father says do not do that, the child is confused; because for the child, both are Gods. Both are always right; if the parents contradict the child. Therefore a father or mother should never contradict the other one at least in front of the child. You can battle later. In front of the child, never contradict. And even if father wants to differ from the mother, it is better that after the event is over, the father tells the mother and the mother herself withdraws the advice. If the mother has to change the advice, then instead of father saying, it is better that the mother herself tells. Otherwise, mother tells something, father tells something, and the child is confused. There are some terrible families where the husband, some time wife also tells, that do not listen to your mother/father, he/she is a fool, etc. this is being taught!!

So therefore, the second important thing of a family is the child learns values only by observation. And for observation, parents are models and therefore, parents being there, and they being together, and they love each other, i.e. extremely important for the health of the child and also for imbibing the values.

And here Arjuna says among the parents also who is more important? Both parents are important. Everybody knows the answer. It goes without saying, mother is much much more important; because mother is intimate to the child. Because even biologically speaking, even from the stand point of nature, however much the man and women may like to do every job, the wife or the lady can never say all the time we are 'delivering'; why can't a male deliver a child; it is not possible. According to nature, according to biology, the mother happens to be intimately associated with the child. During pregnancy and immediately after the child is born for some years, or at least some months.

And therefore Arjuna says when the families are destroyed, then the women may become corrupt. If the girl child does not develop cultural value, that girl child she is going to become mother later; and when a valueless mother, a mother who gives importance to arthaḥ kāmaḥ, she gets a child, then a vicious cycle is created, valueless mother will only produce next valueless children and valueless children will produce valueless generation and then a time comes, when all values are utterly destroyed and therefore Arjuna says adharmābhibhavāt kṛṣṇa praduṣyanti kulastrīyaḥ. When the families are destroyed, the girl child gets spoiled. And when a girl child gets spoiled, she becomes a bad mother an unhealthy mother. So kulastrīyaḥ praduṣyanti.

And then what will happen. strīṣu duṣṭāsu vārṣṇēya. When the women become corrupt, i.e. the destruction of the entire society. Hey vārṣṇēya, here also he is addressing nicely. Kṛṣṇa is addressed in terms of his family. Vārṣṇēya, Vṛṣṇi kula samudbhudhaḥ. Vārṣṇēya; Hey Kṛṣṇa you are born in a beautiful family. How important family is, you know. Therefore, vārṣṇēya, strīṣu duṣṭāsu once the women become corrupt jāyatē varṇasaṅkaraḥ. There will be utter confusion with regard to varṇāśrama dharma. So varṇasaṅkaraḥ, confusion regarding varṇāśramadharmā. varṇasaṅkaraḥ, confusion, mess.

And what is varṇāśramadharmā? I will discuss very elaborately later, but to understand I will give some picture of this varṇāśramadharmā especially varṇa dharma, so that we can understand this portion.

In varṇa dharma the vēdas prescribe certain duties for each class of people. Brāhmanas have got certain duties, cultural duties; kṣatriyās have got political duties; vaiśyas have got economic duties; and Sūdrās have got supporting duties. Supporting the other three. Now all the four duties are extremely important for the growth of a society. Cultural duties are important because, without culture, a nation will collapse. Culture is like a sūkṣma śarīram of a nation. civilization is the sthūla śarīram duṣṭāsu.

sthūla śarīram of a nation and culture is the sūkṣma śarīram of a nation. and therefore cultural duties are important. And similarly, political duties; there must be a government, you know how important it is. Then economic duties are important and then of course the supporting system is also important.

Now, when Vēdas says that everyone should take to one of these four duties, either based on birth or based on character. You choose your duty; duty, profession, whether you should a politician, whether you should be a businessman, choose based on your birth or based on your character. Now imagine a situation when a society values money. Then when money is valued, then everybody will choose profession based on what? Not on birth, not based on their character or inclination also, based on which profession will bring maximum money. When you join the schools and college, you will get a good job, meaning, little work but more salary. Least work, or no work preferably and maximum salary; banks, or govt. jobs, etc. I do not bank people to misunderstand me.

Now imagine once a society is materialistic and values money, you will find every member will be after money and a particular class which was devoted to cultural growth of the nation; for that profession, nobody will come. And what is that profession? Learning the scriptures. Learning the dharma śāstras and not only learning; following the dharma śāstras and not only following; propagating the dharma śāstra. We require a set of people called brāhmaṇas, whose exclusive role is what? Paṭanam pāṭanam and ācaraṇam. They should learn, they should teach and they themselves should follow. satyam vadaḥ, it is not enough to say that, he should speak the truth. If you just tell satyam vadaḥ without telling the satyam, then it will be satyam vadaḥ; it will be destruction. Therefore we require a group in the society called Brāhmaṇa, whose exclusive job is to contributing to the cultural growth, religious growth and spiritual growth. Spiritual teachers. Saints, sages, we require.

Vaṇasaṅkaraḥ means, everybody will take every other profession, but nobody will come forward to the study and teaching of scriptures. How many brāhmins were there doing yajñas etc. in the olden days. Now we find that the brāhmins are taking up kṣatriyās' duties, that means they become politicians, vaiśya duties, sūdrā's duties, Brāhmins' turning to other duties, but the others do not compensate by coming to brāhmaṇas'. Therefore you will find, where will be loss. Culturally, we will go down. You will ask what is sandya vandanaṃ? What is gāyathri? So vaṇasaṅkaraḥ, means there is confusion among duties and there will no one to preserve and propagate the culture.

Religious and spiritual culture and once religious and spiritual culture is gone, we will get a society which has got only a cut-throat philosophy, what is that by hook or crook, eat, drink and make merry. We will get a carvāka society and as we are reading in the daily newspapers, all over killing and cheating and this and all those things, and that will be the destruction of humanity and therefore Kṛṣṇa all these will happen when families become unstable. And families become unstable because of war. And therefore, what should we do? Abolish war. And therefore what should we do? Drive the chariot away from the battlefield.

ॐ

In these verses, Arjuna shows how there is close connection between the institution of family and a dhārmic way of life. So family and धर्म dharma are closely connected so that when one is affected the other also will be affected. And then it becomes a vicious cycle.

When family is destroyed, dharma is destroyed and when dharma is destroyed, again the next generation family will be destroyed.

To understand this, we should know dharma consists of three aspects; from the standpoint of v̄edic-teaching :

One is values of life: like truthfulness, non-violence, generosity, love concern for others, etc. values.

The second aspect of dharma is attitudes towards the things and beings of the creation; i.e. attitude towards our parents, our teachers, the other members in the society; including our attitude towards the earth, the water, the sun, the moon, that basic reverential attitude; that is the second aspect of dharma.

And the third which is considered the very important aspect, is now generally not appreciated, is the aspect of ritual. V̄edic religion considers rituals as the most or at least one of the most important aspects of dharma.

And why do we say rituals are more important, because of two reasons; one reason is that values and attitudes are purely abstracting, which cannot be communicated or expressed because they belong to the mind and therefore, if it has to be expressed or communicated, it will have to be physicalised or verbalised. And therefore, rituals are considered verbalisation or physicalisation of the abstract attitudes and values and if the parent has to communicate values and attitudes to the child, the mother or father cannot do it at the fifth year or the 6th year. How will you communicate to a child, what is respect for the elders. The child cannot understand the concept of respect. But the mother can symbolise the respect in the form of bowing down, in the form of namaskāra, in the form of touching the feet or some physicalisation.

Even when we want to express our friendship to other people, how will you do that when you meet your friends. That friendship or love is purely is a mental faculty. I cannot convey unless I verbalise and say I love you or I physicalise by shaking the hands or by embracing. I have to do something or the other; and the psychologists also point out that the physicalisation and verbalisation is very important. When they are analysing the breaking down of family institution, one of the advices they give is verbalise your feelings. Start saying that "I love you", even if you do not, to keep the husband and wife team going together. Every time, "I love you honey", and the like. Therefore, ritual is a concrete expression of the abstract thing which is required for communication.

And the second thing they talk in psychology is that the rituals are one of the methods of keeping a group together. Togetherliness is possible if we have something in which every member of the family takes part.

In Readers Digest, there was an article, how to keep the family together. and one of the points he writes is invent rituals. For other people, they have to invent. For us, no problem, we have already too much. And he gives certain examples that you plan; you decide to eat together and all the members to eat at the same time. Now the problem is one child comes at 8 o'clock, and the other at 9 o'clock, another at 10 o'clock, whether the other will come or not, it is doubtful, they say decide to eat together and before you do that, have some kind of pradakṣiṇam around the table.

Therefore one importance of rituals is to make it concrete, what is abstract. The other benefit of ritual is communicating to the children. the other benefit of rituals is that it keeps a group together. I am talking about the psychological and physical benefit. I am not discussing the śāstric benefit of puṇyam.

So the adṛṣṭa phalam of puṇyam is talked about in the śāstram. I am not talking about that. I am talking about the psychological and sociological benefit. Therefore, whenever they talked about Dharma, three things were important. That is attitudes, values and rituals.

And when it came to rituals, you find they vary from religion to religion. Even though the idea of respect may be same, different religion communicate that in different ways. Rituals are different.

And within one religion itself from community to community, the rituals are different. And what Kṛṣṇa says is once the ritual part of religion is ignored, once the ritual part of religion is ignored, then there will be varṇasaṅkaraḥ. Because, religions differ only from the standpoint of rituals. Religion differ only from the standpoint of rituals. While they talk about values, whether it is Islam or whether it is Christian whether it is any other religion, it is universal. Therefore, as long as rituals are accepted, then a person wants to maintain a religion and they also get married within the same religion or community, once the rituals become lesser and lesser important, then the question comes, why should there be cohesiveness in religion or in community. Therefore, immediate consequence of sacrificing the rituals is varṇasaṅkaraḥ.

Because to follow the attitudes and values, a person need not belong to a particular religion, any religion is OK. But a particular religion becomes important only when I value a particular way of rituals. So if we have to celebrate our birthday; Hinduism has got its own way. We light up the lamp, in Christianity you have to blow out the lamp. So one is going from darkness to light (I do not want to criticize, just joking) another is going from light to darkness. To symbolise that, what I want to say is once rituals are given lesser importance, then the next consequence is the religion segregation will go away and even the community segregation will go away. That is called varṇasaṅkaraḥ.

Not only will varṇasaṅkaraḥ will take place, there will be another worse consequence also. Because family institution was required for three purposes. One is for rituals; they are required because without a family, rituals, especially vēdic rituals cannot be followed. A brahmacārī cannot do rituals, before first of all he cannot give dakṣiṇā. Because no money. Vānaprasthā cannot give dakṣiṇā. sanyāsi cannot give dakṣiṇā. Only a gr̥hasthaḥ can give. Most of the rituals involve annadānam, brahmacārī cannot do annadānam (because he himself is begging for food), vānaprasthā cannot do annadānam; sanyāsi cannot do annadānam. Only a gr̥hasthaḥ can do. For the sake of rituals, family institution was required.

For attitudes and values, we do not require family life. Then another necessity of family life was for the fulfilment of अर्थः and कामः arthaḥ and kāmaḥ. Security was one of the consideration; because everybody was worried, in old age, who will take care of us. On death, who will give us water, or who will do our kriyas; Security and pleasures. So three things were considered for the sake of family institution, rituals, artha and kāmaḥ.

You do not require family for values and attitudes. Now, once the rituals are not respected, family is required for the sake of what? arthaḥ and kāmaḥ and once a society develops or I do not know whether to say changes; I would like to say whether it is going backwards; when the society changes, the government changes, the social institution changes and artha and kāmaḥ are available without family. The government provides the security. Monthly doles in countries they are coming. And sense pleasures are available. Now if a person has got money, all pleasures he can order. Security he can order and rituals he would not believe. And values and attitudes do not require family life.

So now comes the basic question, why the institution of family? And that is why in the so-called advanced society, they are thinking non-legalising family life, and they have the situations of live-in life etc. because they think that if they get legally married, when they want to go their own way, the legal proceedings are so difficult. As long as we like each other, we will live together and when we do not like each other, you go your way and I go my way.

Therefore the very basic question of family life comes. All because of what? For art arthaḥ, family is not required. kāmaḥ family is not required. For values, family is not required. For attitudes family is not required. Family was required primarily for one purpose; that is to maintain the religion expressed in the form of certain karmas, vaidika karmas and if they come down, (and that is why you find in Indian societies also), we are dropping rituals and our children are asking the question what is the difference in marrying a Hindu or a Christian or Islam. I am not saying whether it is right or wrong; but I am saying, it is becoming meaningless because, meaning was only when there were rituals. They ask the question. Other people have also values. So they are also very good in character.

So what the answer the parent has to tell the child? And rituals the parent cannot tell, because the parents themselves do not follow. There is no śrāddham nor tarpaṇam. There is no gōtrā, sūtram etc. he does not know, which vēda he belongs to. Therefore the question of Vēda and all these things became relevant only because of Karma.

And once Karma goes away, family will get disintegrated and the next consequence will be that once the family gets disintegrated in the next generation no karma will be there; not only Karma, even values and attitudes cannot be there because without a stable family, how are they going to teach values and attitudes to the next generation?

In the present generation, if the just left the Karmas and kept the attitudes and values, next generation not only karmas goes away but even values and attitudes will go away because there is no stable family; each one changes the spouse like changing the dress or the car or scooter or house.

So therefore, Arjuna says here varṇasaṅkarā. There will be utter confusion. and nobody will be there to do brahmaṇā dharma of studying the scriptures and propagating it. Everybody will be interested in eat, drink and make merry. What it will lead to? Arjuna says:

सङ्करो नरकायैव कुलघ्नानां कुलस्य च ।
पतन्ति पितरो ह्येषां लुप्तपिण्डोदकक्रियाः ॥१.४२॥

saṅkarō narakāyaiva kulaghñānām kulasya ca |
patanti pitaro hyēṣām luptapiṇḍōdakakriyāḥ || 1.42 ||

हि hi Indeed सङ्करः कुलस्य saṅkaraḥ kulasya the intermixture of family एव नरकाय ēva narakāya will definitely be the cause of hell कुलघ्नानाम् kulaghñānām for the destroyers of families एषां पितरं च ēṣāṃ pitaraṃ ca Their ancestors also पतन्ति patanti fall,

लुप्तपिण्डोदकक्रियाः: luptapiṇḍōdakakriyāḥ being deprived of the offering of food and water.

42. Indeed, the intermixture of family will definitely be the cause of hell for the destroyers of families. Their ancestors also fall, being deprived of the offering of food and water.

Here Arjuna says once the varṇasaṅkarā takes place; varṇa, the 4 groups of vēdic society, Brāhmaṇā, Kṣatriyā, Vaiśya Śūdra, not only varṇasaṅkarā; even matha saṅkarā takes place, religious mixture takes place, the attitude part of dharma may remain, value part of dharma may remain, ritual part of dharma cannot remain because imagine one of the parent belongs to Hindu religion and one of the parent belong to Christian religion, how will be child celebrate the birthday. Whether to light the lamp or blow it out? To cut the cake, or eat the havis. Āyusya hōmam. should I go to the temple or the church?

There will be confusion and therefore He says, the ritual part of religion will have to be given up and why should there be rituals, you might ask? As I said, rituals are the method of communicating our feelings. Even the most nāsthika country will have the rituals when some dignitary comes, they also will shake hands. Shaking hand is what? It is a ritual. it is a clean ritual. So therefore, nobody can avoid rituals. Internationally rituals are there. If you have doubt, watch the Olympic games. Flag hosting; We used to do in front of our temples. Now they are doing it in the Olympic ground. And that all done, very ritualistic. Walking also special. Thereafter they also take oath; which is ritual. And again when they bring down the flag, it is a ritual and it is handed over to the other person, mayor of the city who is going to host the next Olympic. That is a ritual. People who say rituals are ridiculous, they do not know what it is all about.

Without rituals, nobody can survive. And the rituals go away and then what will it lead to? Arjuna says: This varṇasaṅkarā, this confusion will lead to narakā ēva; because all the karmas are sacrificed. Whose naraka? kulaghñānāṃ kulasya. For both the victor in the war as well as the vanquished. The defeated one, for both of them, there will be narakā because they will lose all the values for the religious practices and not only they will fall spiritually or religiously, patanti pitarō hyēṣāṃ luptapiṇḍōdakakriyāḥ

So we will be seeing later, that the vēdic religion prescribed, five-fold compulsory rituals for every Āsthika; and every Āsthika should follow them. He can only compromise in its size and intensity, they do not give a choice in its performance, and one of the pañcamaha yajña which we will be seeing later is Pitru yajña, our respect of worship of our forefathers. And Vēda considered that the blessing of our forefathers is very much required for our growth, whether it is material growth or spiritual growth. That is why any ritual in the family is started only with a particular śrāddham called, nāndi śrāddham.

And once dharma goes away, the values may remain, the attitudes may remain, but all the rituals will be sacrificed and in that luptapiṇḍōdakakriyāḥ. A person will say with pride. I do not believe in śrāddham; I do not believe in Tarpaṇam. Now it is a fashion to say that. If you say that you are a rational person! Here Arjuna says luptapiṇḍōdakakriyāḥ. Our forefathers will be deprived of the luptapiṇḍōdakakriyāḥ. Pinda kriya, śrāddha, udaka kriya, means tarpanam; lupta means deprived of. Forefathers will be deprived of all these karmas.

People ask the question, can I replace, these karmas by some annadhānam, poor feeding, in old age homes, etc. and the answer by our scriptures is they cannot replace them; they can be only in addition to them. Poor feeding or helping the poor is also considered equally important which is called manuṣya yajña and this is called pitre yajñaḥ, manuṣya yajña cannot replace pitre yajña and manuṣya yajña can only be a supplement to it. And the greatest tragedy will be that these will go down.

And therefore, not only they suffer, even the forefathers suffer. Therefore hyeṣāṃ pitarō patanti. All these arguments are from Arjuna of that society in which in society rituals were considered important. I am only presenting an objective assessment of Arjuna's view. Whether you believe in rituals or you want to believe in rituals is your business. I am just presenting the objective view of that society in which varṇa āśrama dharma was important; primarily from the stand point of rituals. Varṇa āśrama dharma has no value, once the rituals go away, because if it is from the stand point of morals, we do not have to retain varṇa āśramam dharma. Morals can be practiced without varṇa āśrama dharma. Attitudes can be practiced without varṇa āśrama dharma. Even our future can be taken care of without varṇa āśrama dharma. But from the standpoint of rituals, varṇa āśrama dharma is very important.

दोषैरेतैः कुलघ्नानां वर्णसङ्करकारकैः ।
उत्साद्यन्ते जातिधर्माः कुलधर्माश्च शाश्वताः ॥ 1.43 ॥

dōṣairētaiḥ kulaghnānām varṇasaṅkarakāraikaiḥ |
utsādyantē jātidharmāḥ kuladharmāśca śāśvatāḥ || 1.43 ||

एतैः दोषैः etaiḥ dōṣaiḥ Due to the misdeeds, कुलघ्नानाम् kulaghnānām of the destroyers of families, वर्णसङ्करकारकैः varṇasaṅkarakāraikaiḥ which cause the intermixture of castes, शाश्वताः śāśvatāḥ longstanding जातिधर्माः jātidharmāḥ caste-traditions च कुलधर्म Ca Kuladharmah as well as family-traditions उत्साध्यन्ते utsādhyantē are destroyed.

43. Due to these misdeeds of the destroyers of families, which cause the intermixture of castes, longstanding case-traditions as well as family-traditions are destroyed.

kulaghnānām ētaiḥ dōṣaiḥ, because of these defects, in which the ritualistic part of dharma is degraded or not valued, because of that, varṇasaṅkarakāraiḥ, which are responsible for the intermixture of various communities, various nationalities, and various religions; because of that. what will be the casualty. jāti dharmāḥ utsādyantē, certain practices which are purely based on varṇa.

Because according to Vēda, certain rights can be done only by certain varṇas. Rāja rajasūyena yajētha; this rājasuya yāgha can be done only by a rāja. Brāhmaṇā may know how to perform rājasūya yagha, but he can never perform, he can only assist a rāja to perform that.

In varṇasaṅkara, the problem will be the child cannot come under either Brāhmaṇā or kṣatriya and therefore, these vēdic rites will have to be given up. Jāti dharmāḥ will go away and kula dharma, within one jāti itself, varṇa itself, the vēdic practices differ from gōthram to gōthram or sutra to sutra. Sutra bhēdās are there. apasthambha sutra, grakyanana sutra. They have to go away in varṇasaṅkara, because the child who is a hybrid to use a crude word, cannot use any vēdic karma. So therefore, kuladharmah gachanthi, jati dharmaca gachhanthi, rituals gachhanthi.

Once the rituals are gone, the next generation child will ask a question, why should I marry a person from this community because there is no relevance. I can marry any person; should belong to the opposite sex. That is the minimum qualification. That is the only thing. And I am not saying which is right or wrong. I am just again objectively presenting the natural consequences. Why I am saying so is the Government will prosecute me; if I am going to say that inter-caste marriage is wrong. So therefore I am not going to say inter-caste marriage is right or wrong. What I will say is that it will be natural consequence when religion is removed from rituals or rituals are removed from religion.

And therefore he says, Jāti dharmaha, kula dharmāḥ and what type of dharmahs they are? śaśvathah, it has stated from Anādi kāla pravṛthaḥ. So perpetuation requires a lot of effort, but destruction takes only one generation and one link is gone, the whole chain will be gone. And therefore, śaśvathah kula dharmāḥ ca utsādyantē. they are destroyed.

उत्सन्नकुलधर्माणां मनुष्याणां जनार्दन ।
नरके नियतं वासो भवतीत्यनुशुश्रुम ॥ १.४४ ॥

utsannakuladharmāṇām manuṣyāṇām janārdana |
narakē niyataṁ vāsō bhavatītyanuśūruma || 1.44 ||

जनार्दन janārdana Oh Kṛṣṇa ! अनुशुश्रुम anuśūruma We have heard (from the scriptures)
इति iti that वासः vāsaḥ stay नरके narakē in hell भवति नियतम् bhavati niyatam becomes inevitable मनुष्याणाम् manuṣyāṇām for the people उत्सन्नकुलधर्माणाम् utsannakuladharmāṇām whose family-traditions are destroyed.

44. Oh Kṛṣṇa ! We have heard (from the scriptures) that stay in hell becomes inevitable for the people whose family-traditions are destroyed.

Then what will be the next consequence. As I said, when the rituals are gone, and the religion consists of values of attitudes; after 2-3 generations, the questions will come, for following attitudes and values, family is not required. And the question is: Do I require family for Artha and kāmāḥ, for that also not required, because all are available. Only paisa should be there. Everything is orderable. Therefore Artha does not require, kāmāḥ does not require, values does not require, attitudes do not require. Therefore why the institution of family and once the family institution is destroyed, such a life will be; there is no single person whom I can totally trust.

Very purpose of family life is what?: I have someone to call as 'mine'. Who will not reject me under any condition because human being require a psychological anchor. Wherever you move, 'For me' who is there. Somebody's in whose lap I can fall and cry. Somebody in front of whom I can open my heart and trust. Once the family institution goes, there is no question getting trust or love or psychological security, because I do not know, what my spouse is planning.

Now in the Readers' digest. What research is going? How to keep your spouse? So far it was not required in India. But the points are worth noting. Daily morning say I love you. You have to follow the rules, without fail. So the rules and regulations are kept and you have to dress up very well to look attractive to your spouse. This becomes a very big project. What is the project: to keep your spouse, like the keeping the employer and employee. Now they say even the child are also asking divorce from the parents. Now tell me, if everyone staying with me is unpredictable, tell me what is my hold. That is the psychological disaster. If human being does not have someone to trust and that is why when that is not there, the psychiatrists will have to come because since I cannot tell my problems to another one, I have to look for someone. If I tell to my wife/husband, then the divorce threat looms and I heard nowadays the young children, of and on, when the fight is on, they are saying: I will divorce you. This is constant expression. And therefore when there is that fear to who will I tell my problems.

Previously a husband had a wife. Wife used to have that. When they are not available and grand parents are also not available; because nuclear family; means what? Explosion. What comes out of nuclear explosion? So grand-parents not there. The word psychological use is: There is no empty lap. Human beings want empty lap. If father got angry, mother was there; if mother got angry, father was there; if both got angry grandfathers were not there and there is nothing is available and therefore they go to psychologists and he charges heavily to listen to your cries. You have to pay money for someone to listen to your Rāmāyaṇa and Bhāratha.

That is called psychological-disaster, and when such people come to the society, the psychological disaster of individual mind will lead to sociological disaster and the crime graph increases.

Anyway, Kṛṣṇa says manuṣyāṇām narake vāsaḥ. Not after death. That is a special one. Even while they are alive, without family institution; without love; without someone to trust, without someone to listen to my stories, manuṣyāṇām narake vāsaḥ. Not only while living, after death also narakē niyatham vāsa. Only thing is definite, what? Hell. iti anuśuśrūma, because when the svadharmā is not done, srāddham, tarpaṇam are not done, according to vēdic rules, it comes under pratyavāya pāpam, which will lead to narakam. iti anuśuśrūma. Because we will ask immediately. Have you seen Arjuna. You are talking as if you have seen. Therefore Arjuna will say: No, No, No; I have not seen, anuśuśrūma. We have heard this being repeated in the vēdic mantra.

अहो बत महत्पापं कर्तुं व्यवसिता वयम् ।
यद्राज्यसुखलोभेन हन्तुं स्वजनमुद्यताः ॥ 1.45 ॥

ahō bata mahatpāpam kartum vyavasitā vayam |
yadrājasukhalōbhēna hantum svajanamudyatāḥ || 1.45 ||

45. Alas! We have undertaken to commit a great sin! For, due to greed for the pleasure of kingdom, we are prepared to kill our people.

So these are all Arjuna's monologue. Because he is thinking of the consequence of the Mahābhāratha battle. Not only will it cause problems for the individual; not only for the contemporary community but it is going to have repercussions in the future also. And therefore aho bata. Arjuna says Alas! a great tragedy indeed. We are about to cause mahatpāpaṃ kartuṃ vayam vyavasitā. We are about to cause or do a great sinful act. And what is that mahatpāpaṃ? Killing to all these people, which will lead to varṇa saṅkarā; jāti saṅkarā, and dharma nāśa, pitruṇām pathanam, all these chain reaction. And all because of what. Arjuna says because of our shortsightedness. yadrājasukhalōbhēna. We were interested in the royal pleasures, the kingly pleasures. So lōbha, means greed because of our false misplaced greed for the pleasures. Svajanam hantūṃ udyatāh. Svajanam hantūṃ. Note here, Arjuna has forgotten the dharma-adharma problem. This is avivēka. Arjuna has forgotten dharma-adharma. He has forgotten that this is a fight between dharma-adharma, now he is only seeing svajana relations standing in front. To kill these people, udyatām, we have started. We are about to begin. and therefore Arjuna is thankful to the Lord that at least at the nick of the moment, he became wiser that at least he can withdraw now. Therefore he says:

यदि मामप्रतीकारमशस्त्रं शस्त्रपाणयः ।
धार्तराष्ट्रा रणे हन्युस्तन्मे क्षेमतरं भवेत् ॥ १ ॥ ४६.

yadi māmapratīkāram aśastraṃ śastrapāṇayaḥ |
dhārtarāṣṭrā raṇē hanyustanmē kṣēmataram bhavēt || 1.46 ||

46. Even if armed Kauravas would kill me who is unarmed and unresisting in this battle that would be better for me.

So therefore Arjuna says I have decided not to contribute to this tragedy, which means I am not going to fight this war. But the war the beginning of the war has already been signaled by the blowing of the conches, therefore Duryōdhanas may shoot arrows, and suppose they shoot arrows and Arjuna does not resist it all, what will be the consequence. Arjuna will be killed. Arjuna says that even if that happens I do not mind. I have decided to relinquish this bow and arrow and even if they are going to destroy us, I will die but I will not contribute to this chaos in the society. Therefore dhārtarāṣṭrā raṇē hanyu, kauravas may choose to kill us, who are we māmapratīkārama, who have decided not to resist. apratīkāram, not fight in return, unresisting.

And aśastraṃ, and we are without weapons and we are not going to resist: weaponless, unresisting people we are and for this they may kill us but even if such a tragedy happens: tat mē kṣēmataram bhavēt. I consider that as sacrificing my life for the sake of Dharma. I am going to consider it as like fasting people do. For the sake of the party.

Similarly self-immolation. They are considered to be rational party. I do not know how self-immolation and rationalism go together. There is no connection. Whatever it might be. Arjuna says that even if we have to sacrifice our lives, for the sake of saving the society, I do not mind. tat mē kṣēmatarāṃ bhavēt. That I consider as fortune for me.

And having said these words, Arjuna has exhausted everything. He has given a big lecture also and all these three problems have come out fully. rāgaḥ, śōkaḥ and mōhaḥ and Arjuna stops his words and what about Kṛṣṇa. As I said utter strategic silence. because even if Kṛṣṇa speaks now, Kṛṣṇa knows that Arjuna is not going to listen. Therefore Kṛṣṇa does not speak. Arjuna does not. And what does he say:

सञ्जय उवाच ।

एवमुक्त्वाऽर्जुनः समख्ये रथोपस्थ उपाविशत् ।

विसृज्य सशरं चापं शोकसंविग्नमानसः ॥ १.४७ ॥

sañjaya uvāca |

ēvamuktvā'rjunaḥ sañkhyē rathōpastha upāviśat |

visṛjya saśaraṃ cāpaṃ śōkasaṃvignamānasaḥ ||1. 47 ||

सञ्जय उवाच sañjaya uvāca Sañjaya Said उक्त्वा एवम् uktvā ēvaṃ Having spoken thus सङ्ख्ये sañkhyē in the battlefield, अर्जुनः arjunaḥ Arjuna शोकसंविग्नमानसः śokasaṃvignamānasaḥ whose mind was grief-stricken, उपविशत् upaviśat sat रथोपस्थे rathopasthe on the seat of the chariot, विसृज्य visṛjya having given up चापम् cāpam the bow सशरम् saśaram along with the arrows.

Sañjaya said:

47. Having spoken thus in the battlefield Arjuna, whose mind was grief-stricken, sat on the seat of the chariot, having given up the bow along with the arrows.

So Sañjaya gives a typical picture of Arjuna who symbolises Maha saṃsāri. A description of pacca saṃsāri is given here: who is he; śōkasaṃvignamānasaḥ. Arjuna's mind is totally grief-stricken; which indicates the problem of rāgaḥ and śōkaḥ. So he is completely overpowered by attachment and intense grief and not only that saśaraṃ cāpaṃ visṛjya, he has thrown away both the bow and arrow and what does it represent? It is a physical action but we should understand what it symbolises. For a kṣatriya, bow and arrow represent fighting for Dharma and establishing Dharma. Establishing dharma is the duty of a kṣatriya; so giving up of bow and arrow indicates svadharma tyāgaḥ, which is called conflict or mohaḥ.

Therefore śōkasaṃvignamānasaḥ represents rāgaḥ, śōkaḥ problem; attachment and grief, visṛjya saśaraṃ cāpaṃ represents mōhaḥ, conflict and what is the conflict whether to fight this war or not and he takes a totally wrong decision and what is the wrong decision; svadharama parityāgha and he wants to run away from the battle and wants to do tapas, etc. which is the dharma of a sanyāsi; a gṛhastha has to do his duty. Getting up in the morning and doing a long japa, etc. If he does not do it, it is pāpa. A gṛhastha should allot time for japa only without disturbing his family duties; and if a gṛhastha renounces family duties and does japa, that is also a para dharma grahaṇam.

So when there is a choice between taking care of family duties and what is called japa, pūja, etc. that also should not be disturbed. Therefore it is called paradharam grahaṇam, svadharama parityāgha. Both put together is called mōhaḥ. And this after what, ēvaṁ Arjuna uktva, having uttered all these words to Lord Kṛṣṇa, Arjuna did, and rathōpastha upāviśat, he was seated on the seat of the chariot. Seat which is on the chariot he was seated. Therefore, Arjuna viṣādha or Arjuna saṁsāra is beautifully depicted and now we are at the cross-roads and we do not know what happens next. At this crucial juncture, Vyāsācārya says, will continue....

Therefore Vyāsācārya stops at this crucial junction like the TV serial; opening the door and a frightening thing is seen; etc. Then only you will watch the next episode.

| | ōm tatsaditi śrīmadbhagavadgītāsūpaniṣatsu brahmavidyāyām yōgaśāstrē śrīkṛṣṇārjunasaṁvādē arjunaviṣādayōgō nāma prathamō'dhyāyaḥ | |

In the Upaniṣad of the Bhagavad-Gīta, the knowledge of Brahman, Supreme, the science of yōga and the dialogue between Sri Kṛṣṇa and Arjuna, is the first discourse designated THE DESPONDENCY OF ARJUNA.

OM TAT SAT.

This portion comes at the end of every chapter. I will give the meaning of this portion in the first chapter. Second chapter, etc. you can extend the same meaning. So every chapter ends with the expression Om tat sat. These are three words. Om is one word. Tat is one word. Sat is another word. All these three words are names of the Lord. Three names of the Lord and we are uttering the names of the Lord as thanksgiving and why should we give thanks to the Lord; for the successful completion of the first chapter. And therefore, Om Tat Sat.

What is the meaning of these three words.

Om̐. Several meanings are there. I will give the simplest meaning. Avathi ithi, Om̐. Avathi means the protector. Lord is called the protector and he protected us from all the obstacles, so that we could complete this.

Next word Tat, the one who is beyond sense perception. Parōkṣa. Kṛṣṇah param̐, Indriyathitha. Sarvēndriya agōcara is Tat. The one who is beyond the sense organs. supra sensual. beyond the sense organs is the meaning of the Tat. one of the meaning. So many other meanings are there. In some other context, I will explain.

Then third word is Sat. Sat means eternal. In Tatva bodha, we saw. Trikāle api thiṣṭathi iti Sat. So that which is in the past, in the present and the future. Therefore Om̐ Tat Sat the Eternal protector, who is beyond the our sense perception is the meaning of Om̐ Tat Sat.

And having remembered the Lord, we say, prathomodhyay, Oh Lord by your grace we have completed the first chapter.

And what is called Arjuna viśādhā yōga, which is called the grief of Arjuna, because the main theme of first chapter, is Arjuna's viśādhā. viśādhā, represents the other two also, rāgaḥ, and also mōhaḥ. In short, Arjuna saṁsāra yōgaḥ. The topic of Arjuna's saṁsāra. And how is it presented. Srikrishnaurjñā saṁvādē. which presented in the form the Krishna Arjuna saṁvādē, a dialogue between Kṛṣṇa and Arjuna. Of course the full dialogue will come only from the next chapter. But taking the whole Gīta it is given the title, Kṛṣṇa Arjuna saṁvādē.

Saṁvāda, is the word used for a dialogue between a guru and a disciple. So which is in the form of a dialogue between a guru and a śiṣya. Therefore it is called healthy dialogue. It is not an argument; it is not a debate; it is not a test. So guru has got love for the disciple, so he is not teaching for the monthly salary or something, so his aim is communication. purely love. There is no other gain he is going to have. Therefore the attitude of Guru is love and compassion and the attitude of Shisya is faith and reverence. And such a dialogue which is with love, faith and reverence, that is called saṁvāda. Most healthy form of communication.

And this saṁvāda is given the name Srimat bhagavat gītasu Upaniṣadsu. This dialogue is called Srimat bhagavat gītōpaniṣad. If you remember my introduction, I have said in the introduction that the full name of the Gīta is Srimat bhagavat gītōpaniṣad. The word upaniṣad means that knowledge which liberates a person from sorrow. Therefore Upaniṣad means liberating wisdom. Liberating from sorrow in life. And what type of wisdom, it is. Which is srimat bhagavat gītāsu, which is taught by; which is revealed by; srimat bhagavān, the Lord.

And I have given you the meaning of Bhagavān. Bhaga consists of six fold virtues. All those things you have to recollect. Therefore, this is an upaniṣad. And when here we call it upaniṣad, it is not the original upaniṣad, the original upaniṣad is part of the vēda, which existed even before Kṛṣṇa was born. So the original upaniṣads were there, even before Kṛṣṇa was born. Kṛṣṇa's teaching is not the original upaniṣad, but it is only a sāra of the Upaniṣad:

sarvōpaniṣadō gāvō dōgdhā gōpāla-nandanah|
pārthō vatsaḥ sudhīrbhōktā dugdham gītāmṛtaḥ mahat||4||

So Bhagavat Gīta is upaniṣad sārāvat upaniṣad ucyatē, being the essence of upaniṣad; butter of upaniṣad. it is called Srimad bhagavat gītāsu upaniṣadsu and what is the theme of this entire dialogue.

It is said that there are only 2 topics in the entire Gīta, They are the two main themes of the Gīta, which are represented by the vēda-pūrva-bhāga, karma-kandah, religious part, and second-theme is the vēda-andha-bhāga, the jñāna-kāṇḍa, the philosophical part. Gīta consists of 2 things, religion and philosophy.

Religion means, a way of life which makes me fit for the philosophy and philosophy is such an enquiry. Religion gives jñāna योग्यadha, philosophy gives jñānam.

Do you get it? Jñāna-yōgyadha fitness for knowledge. Religion gives me fitness for knowledge, philosophy gives me what? Knowledge.

For the first part of life, we should make us fit for knowledge. Second part of life is gaining knowledge. After knowledge what should we do.

You would not ask this question. What should we do, what should we do, means I am not satisfied with the present. The very question of doing something because I am discontented with the present condition; total contentment; pūrṇatvam; security is the benefit.

This religious part is called yōgaḥ śāstram, philosophical part is called brahma vidya. Therefore yōgaḥ śāstram plus brahma vidya is Gīta. Religion plus philosophy is Gīta.

Karma plus jñānam is equal to Gīta. Vēda-purva plus vēda-antha is equal to Gīta. Such a Gīta we are going to learn, of which, the first chapter, we have successfully completed with the Lord's grace. More in the next class.

011 CHAPTER 01, SUMMARY

Om

I propose to give a summary of the first chapter and introduction to the 2nd chapter.

If we have to live a healthy life, we have to take care of two factors; one factor is that the surroundings should be such that it should not cause any diseases. So you may be call it hygienic surrounding. This is one factor we all know. But this external factor alone is not enough; there is another important factor and that is my body must have sufficient resistance to face the external world. Because we know medically, however hygienic our surroundings may be we cannot totally get rid of all the bacteria and viruses. Even a perfectly clean atmosphere will have diseases around and that is why even in the most hygienic country, if they have to do a surgery, they have to have a special place, where it is sterilized and maintained. That means in any atmosphere, disease germs are there. So perfect hygiene surroundings is not possible, and therefore, in addition to keeping the surrounding clean, we have to take care of another important factor and what is that? we have to build up the body to such an extent, that it must have resistance and we are all healthy now reasonably, not because the surroundings are clean, but because we have got sufficient resistance to fight the germs.

One doctor was saying that suppose a person has got advanced TB and it is supposed to be contagious and suppose that person directly breaths in to the mouth of 20 healthy people, even then, only 3 or 4 or 5 people may catch the disease; all the people are not going to catch because Bhagavān has given us sufficient immunity and resistance to face most of the diseases and therefore, a physically healthy life is possible only when two factors are taken into account; I will call one factor, the objective factor, i.e. the environment; the other is the subjective factor, which is the resistance or immunity.

Nowadays they are talking about the spread of AIDS and what is happening in AIDS is acquired immunity deficiency syndrome is AIDS and what is happening is our resistance or immunity is taking down. The moment breaks down, the person does not die of AIDS, it leads to variety of diseases and those diseases alone kill. And how does that person get the diseases? When we are living in the same atmosphere, how come he is getting the disease and I am not getting. It is because Bhagavān has given us the resistance.

From this it is very clear, healthy physical life depends upon objective factor and subjective factor. Objective factor is clean environment; subjective factor is physical resistance.

Now you have to extend the same principle for mental health also. By mental health, means a mind free from all kinds of physiological diseases in the form of fear, in the form of anxiety; stress, strain, worry, anger, jealousy, inferiority complex; all these are psychological diseases; kāmahaḥ, krōdhaḥ, lōbhaḥ, mōhaḥ, madaḥ, mātsaryaḥ, etc. They are all varieties of psychological diseases.

And when we are facing these problems, generally we talk about only the external contribution, how the world is responsible for my worry. How the wife or husband is responsible for my tension. How the children are responsible for my anxiety. How the parents are responsible for the frustration. Our scriptures point out: that for mental health also, we have to take into account two factors: external world is not totally responsible for our mental problems. Just as environment is not totally responsible for the disease, that my body condition is susceptible to diseases, which we call physical weakness. That is also responsible.

In our āśrama, when we were undergoing the spiritual training, we had some students from America also. And we had in the āśrama, direct tap water. No treatment; aqua guard, filtering, etc. Whatever do a little bit, directly it comes. And we used to happily drink and survive. And all those people came, they have got almost purest water and second day they were repeatedly going to the bathroom only instead of classes. How come nothing happened to us and things happened to them? Water being the same, one is physically affected. Another is not affected; the difference is only in the body condition.

Similarly, here also, scriptures point out that the mind or the weakness of the mind is also responsible for our psychological problem. We do not say the mind alone. We say the mind is also another important factor. Therefore, if I have to have a healthy life, I should take into account the environment. I should also ask a question; do I have sufficient resistance to face it. Similarly if I should lead a healthy life, mentally, a happy life; a contented life; a secure life; a relaxed life; then I have to ask two questions. Have I taken care of the environment? That is what we always try to do. That is trying to change the husband or wife. We will request the children. We are trying to adjust the environment, people including the government. So we are trying to adjust the external factors. But what I am doing to find out whether I have got sufficient mental strength to face the situation. And if I have got the sufficient mental health, the advantage is even when the whole environment is unhealthy, my resistance is so much, that I do not get diseases.

What is the sign of a healthy body? Diseases are less frequent; frequency is less. The intensity of the disease also is less. Some cold, cough, etc. only. Frequency is less, intensity is less; the duration of the disease is also less; and finally, the after-effect of the disease also is also less; i.e. the healthy body.

Extending the same principle, if my mind has got sufficient strength and resistance, number of psychological problems I face; like frustration, stress, strain, irritation, jealousy, anger, fear, security, inferiority complex, diffidence, these are all the diseases; such mental diseases do not frequently occur. Frequency is less; that means the family is saved, if I am healthy. If I say, I get angry less, whether I get the benefit or not, the family members gets the benefit. The frequency of the psychological disturbances is less, second benefit is the intensity of whether it is anger or frustration; intensity is also less, and thirdly the duration also.

अधमेस्यात् अहोरात्रम् पापिष्ठे मरणान्धकः॥

uttamē kṣaṇa kōpasya madhyamē ghaṭikā dvayam।
adhamēsyaāt ahōrātram pāpiṣṭhē maraṇāndhakaḥ॥

uttame kṣaṇa kōpasya. Anger will come but what is the sign of a healthy person. Kṣaṇa kōpa and he recovers and carries on. madhyame ghaṭikā dvayam. 1-1/2 hours. adhamesyāt ahōrātram, i.e. whoever comes in front, he will fire; pāpiṣṭhē maraṇāndhakaḥ. Till death it will continue.

So a healthy mind is one in which the frequency, intensity and the duration is less and finally the after effect also. We all get frustrated sometime but you will find that there are some people, frustration continues for months and years but there are some people, like a rubber ball, they also get, but the like ball, they just bounce up and continue their life.

And therefore, healthy life, happy life, at the psychological level, requires taking care of two factors, one is adjusting the external condition, another is improving my resistance and all over the world, people talk about adjusting the external set up; company problem, change the company; if the house, change the house; now they are changing the wife even, they try to adjust the set up but the scriptures, especially the Vēdānta is talking about the subjective factor. How can I improve my inner strength? my psychological resistance? That whatever be the ups and downs in external conditions, I am not seriously affected.

And this freedom from mental diseases caused by external factors. This freedom from mental diseases caused by external factors is called Mōkṣa. Kṛṣṇa will tell in the 2nd chapter,

दुःखेष्वनुद्विग्नमनाः सुखेषु विगतस्पृहः |
वीतरागभयक्रोधः स्थितधीर्मुनिरुच्यते || २ ५६ - ||
duḥkheṣvanudvignamanāḥ sukhēṣu vigataspr̥haḥ |
vītarāgabhayakrōdhaḥ sthitadhīrmunirucyatē || 2.56 ||

Jñani, or a free person is one who also faces challenges and difficulties but anudvigna manāḥ, his resistance is so much that he is not shattered to carry the problem to others.

So the subject matter of the Bhagavad-Gīta is developing inner resistance; not changing the external world. That you can try to do by other methods; company-changing, house-changing, scooter-changing, car-changing, government-changing, spectacle-changing. it is another department. Gīta is talking about strengthening myself and finding my inner resistance and the consequent freedom from psychological disturbances. This is Mōkṣa. Therefore Bhagavat Gīta is a Mōkṣa śāstrah. Resistance building śāstram. Not physical. Resistance at the inner level and this is meant for whom. This is meant for those people who recognise that we have to improve our resistance. That I have got psychological weakness, that I am susceptible to rāgaḥ-dvēsaḥ, kāmaḥ, krōdhaḥ; frequently I am getting into psychological breakdown; etc. and that it is affecting other people also; that I require that inner strengthening, that I have got that inner weakness; the one who has discovered this problem; to that person Gīta is addressing.

And therefore, the first chapter of the Gīta is giving an introduction in which Arjuna is discovering this problem. What problem? That I have got an inner weakness. Therefore before I try to change the world or improve the world, first let me strengthen myself and once Arjuna discovers this problem, naturally, for resistance, to build the resistance, taking chavanaprasam, tonics, we require the tonic, similarly, one who has discovered the requirement of an inner tonic to build up the inner resistance is called a spiritual-seeker.

And in the first chapter of the Gīta, Arjuna becomes or discovers his weakness and later he becomes spiritual-seeker and then he surrenders to Kṛṣṇa and Kṛṣṇa gives the self-knowledge Chavanaprasam. Hoping that this will give the necessary inner strength. This is the background of the Gīta.

And in the first chapter, Vyāsā presents the context, in which the Arjuna discovers that he has got certain problems. This is the background.

The whole chapter can be divided into five portions. The first portion is from 1 to 20: in which Vyāsācārya presents the context. In which Arjuna catches the disease. For everyone some cause should be there to catch the disease; 'I took the bath there, drank water there, etc". Similarly here also, the context in which Arjuna feels the disease of saṁsāra or inner weakness, Arjuna develops, that is presented, and what is that context, Mahābhāratha battlefield. So in Kurukṣētra, Pandavās and Kauravās assembled to fight it out and settle their issue and Arjuna is very clear that he is doing the right thing; he never had the conflict. He had never had any guilt that I am going to kill these people. Why there was no guilt? Why there was no guilt; because he had a clear understanding that he is doing it as a last resort, because all the other non-violent means have been exhausted. And as a last attempt, Kṛṣṇa goes as a messenger tries to settle peacefully and amicably and you know what Duryōdhanā did; he wanted to kill Kṛṣṇa himself. A messenger can never be killed; but Duryōdhanā tries that. Therefore Arjuna without any compunction, any regret, any guilt, he has come to the battlefield, and in the first 20 verses Vyāsācārya clearly presented what happened.

First Duryōdhanā goes to Drōṇācārya and enumerates the important people in both the armies and Duryōdhanā also betrays his diffidence by stating that their army is stronger and our army is weaker. Duryōdhanā's diffidence is purely caused by Adharma. Because objectively seeing, Duryōdhanā side is stronger but in spite of that, because Dharma support is not there, he is weakened. And afterwards, Bhīṣmācārya entuses Duryōdhanā and he blows the conch and thereafter from both sides, the soldiers blow their conches signaling the beginning of the Mahābhāratha battle. The crucial moment has come. That is the first part, the preparation of the beginning of the war.

Then comes second portion from verse 21 to 25 in which Arjuna feels, somehow as a flash, that he has to closely see who are the people with whom he has to fight. It was not at all required. Perhaps it was a blessing in disguise. Even though it was immediately a negative decision, because Arjuna suffered from sorrow but ultimately it was a positive decision, because of the sorrow alone, Bhagavat Gīta teaching could come. Therefore,

प्रवृत्ते शस्त्रसम्पाते धनुरुद्यम्य पाण्डवः ॥ १ ॥ २०.
हृषीकेशं तदा वाक्यमिदमाह महीपते ॥ १ ॥ २१.

atha vyavasthitān dr̥ṣṭvā dhārtarāṣṭrān kapidhvajaḥ
pravṛttē śastrasampātē dhanurudyamya pāṇḍavaḥ | 1.20 |
hṛṣīkēśaṁ tadā vākyaṁidamāha mahīpatē | 1.21 |

So Arjuna says Hey Kṛṣṇa please bring the chariot and place in between the two armies, I can clearly watch them. Now Arjuna is not a disciple, Kṛṣṇa is not a Gūru also. Arjuna is the master and Kṛṣṇa a humble driver and therefore Kṛṣṇa obeys Arjuna's command then places the chariot. And he sees the face of everyone, and Kṛṣṇa has done a mischief, he has placed the chariot in front of those particular people towards whom Arjuna has got a strong weakness, intense attachment. Whereas Kṛṣṇa also wanted to teach Gīta, it seems. He was wanting at least one disciple. He also wants to be Gītācāryaḥ. Pārthasarathy wants to become Gītācāryaḥ. He wants to become Jagatgūru therefore he created that situation. So this is the second part. Arjuna going near the Kauravās and clearly seeing the faces of those people most of whom are his close relatives, because it is a family feud. This is the second portion.

Then the third portion is Arjuna's discovery of his weakness and the consequent problem and what is his weakness? The first weakness presented is the problem of attachment or psychological dependence on external factors. This I call a weakness because moment I am psychological dependant on any factor, then that means my happiness is no more in my hands; my happiness is hooked to, is connected to that external factor. And unfortunately, the external factors are not under my control. My own family members; they are not under my control, especially the children, not under our control. Everyone is an individual; the neighbor; the government.

Once, I depend upon an unpredictable factor, my life has become a risky thing, because the external factors can determine whether I should be happy or not. So if you say that a disobedient son is the cause of sorrow, Vēdānta will say, you do not know how to put it. You are putting it wrongly. Problem is not the disobedient son, then what is the problem? That you depend upon the obedience of your son for your happiness is your problem. Disobedient son means that you are putting the problem externally. I depend upon his obedience for my happiness you are placing the problem to your lack of resistance.

Therefore, problem inside or outside? Anything you say, the current went, therefore I am unhappy, Vēdānta will say, no. I depend upon the power for my happiness is the cause of problem. For any problem you will see, Vēdānta says that I need their condition to be happy. That is the problem. And this psychological dependence is psychological need is called the problem of rāgaḥ. Attachment; Leaning; Expectation and Arjuna had this problem and what is the problem? He expected certain people to be around him all the time. Around us all the time that we cannot even imagine or physical separation. We cannot even imagine a hypothetical separation. Arjuna also had the same problem. And Arjuna imagined a life without Bhīṣmā, without Drōṇa and without some of the other people, then he broke down.

And therefore, third topic is Arjuna's discovery of the problem of rāgaḥ, which is the basic factor called saṁsāraḥ. So Arjuna's discovery of rāgaḥ. kṛpayā parayāviṣṭō viṣṭidannidamabravīt. v.26 to 28 ~ discovery of the rāgaḥ problem. rāgaḥ; do not mistake. Not carnic. rāgaḥ is psychological-leaning.

Physically, we have to depend upon the world. Because we need food, clothing, shelter. Therefore Vēdānta never talks about physical independence. It is not possible. What Vēdānta deals with the emotional or psychological dependence, which is not required at all. In fact, Gīta's ultimate lesson is ātmani ēva ātmana tuṣṭa; I am happy with myself in spite of external factors, being favourable or unfavourable. We will wonder whether it is possible, because Gīta 's answer is possible. Gīta says why can't you try. A person who walks with a stick all the time, he can never think that he can walk without a stick. A person who is an addict to cigarette will imagine that without cigarette life will be impossible. In fact, before starting the smoking, he himself has lived. So much addicted that life is zero without cigarette. Life is zero without a drink. It is an imagination; not a fact. We can be wonderfully fine without any psychological dependence. Therefore, dependence is problem No.1. 26 to 28.

Then the 4th topic, the consequence of rāgaḥ; and what is the consequence. śōkaḥ. Sorrow. Grief, which is discussed from v. No. 28 to 35. śōkaḥ, otherwise called viṣāda. Both are the same. It means grief. That is why the first chapter itself is titled Arjuna viṣāda yōgaḥ. And grief is an inevitable consequence of dependence, because when I depend upon an external factor, it is fine. But it is a potential danger because, just like I lean on something, the chair or on the wall, and the wall falls, I also will have to fall.

Therefore, any leaning on an unpredictable perishable factor is going to cause sorrow only. Arjuna also faces this same problem, not that the object is gone. But, mentally, he imagines a state when they are not there; therefore, kṛpayā parayā'viṣṭō viṣṭidannidamabravīt. How intense was the grief? As I said, the intensity of grief, depends upon the intensity of dependence or attachment. Cigarette, coffee, etc. Intensely addicted. Some boy was telling me, Swamiji I was using pan parāg. Youth is using nowadays. I had told him that I was not happy with what he is doing; but he never listened and somehow I do not know what prompted him and he decided to quit, and he was telling me that Swamiji that for the last few days I am going through tremendous withdrawal symptoms. If I had taken only for some days, the withdrawal would be relatively easier, the stronger I am hooked, the stronger would be the withdrawal symptom also. For Arjuna the problem was so serious and his sorrow was overflowing into the physical body also.

nimittāni ca paśyāmi viparītāni kēśava |
na ca śreyo:'nupaśyāmi hatvā svajanamāhavē ||1- 31||

He faced intense sorrow. This is the 4th topic. rāgaḥ, śōkaḥ,

Then comes the final topic which is from Verse No. 36 to 47. It is the next consequence of rāgaḥ and śōkaḥ; which is mōhaḥ or confusion; indecision. Conflict. Delusion not able to know what to do. What not to do. Suddenly I feel that I am hanging in the middle of sky, I do not know what to do in life. This is called mōhaḥ, or avivēkaḥ. And Arjuna also faces the same confusion to fight or not to fight. And therefore, he makes a series of wrong conclusions and what is the main wrong conclusion. He sees Dharmah yuddham as Adharma. Which he had never before. He was a clear thinking person. And he had taken the decision to fight after thinking for months or years; in fact 13 years in the forest. And also he has cooled the idea from the Dharmaputra, Bhīma, Nakula, Sahadēva, Kṛṣṇa, Draupadi, Kunti, etc. and after thinking, he had made a decision. In spite of such a decided conclusion, Arjuna's mind wavers and he thinks that this yuddha is Adharma. He says it is pāpam. And the greatest irony is that statement which I wanted you to note. He said

By killing these criminals, we will get pāpam. It is like a judge saying that by punishing the criminal, by imprisoning the criminal, I will get pāpam. It is confusion. Prisoning a criminal is not a pāpam. On the other hand, it is the duty of the court. Similarly, Arjuna as a kṣatriya has to fight this war, but he says by killing these criminals, I will incur sin. that is mōhaḥ No.1.

Second confusion is what. If a kṣatriya gives up a righteous war; runs away from a righteous war, it is shirking one's duty. It is shirking one's duty which will come under a special type of sin called the sin of omission.

Sin is of two types, one is commission and another is omission. This omission type of sin is called Pratyavayaḥ in the śāstra. Akāraṇē prathyavāyaḥ. This is śāstra.

And if Arjuna runs away from the battlefield, that action is pāpam, and whereas Arjuna argue, running away from the battlefield is the best decision. He is seeing the puṇyam as pāpam and pāpam as puṇyam. Seeing the right as wrong and wrong as right. This is called utter delusion.

Dharma-adharma-avivēkaḥ. And not only his delusion is so complete, that his overflows into his intellect also and as I said, once the mind is weakened, intellect will not be able to fight that mind, because it is so addictive, that what will be logic of the intellect, if you cannot fight, join the enemy, as in elections.

When the mind has got has certain weaknesses, certain addictions intellect will justify that weakness and Arjuna also tries to justify his delusion by giving a wonderful discourse in front of Kṛṣṇa. That discourse taken separately is a beautiful discourse.

धर्मे नष्टे कुलं कृत्स्नमधर्मोऽभिभवत्युत || १४० - ||

dharmē naṣṭē kulaṃ kṛtsnamadharmō:'bhibhavatyuta ||1- 40||](#)

In these series of arguments, Arjuna points out that family is very important for culture. Taken out it is correct. Family is important for culture. A society in which family life is not respected, culture will break down. Not immediately. It will take one generation. it will not affect that generation very much. But all the consequences will be in the next generation. And what all problems will come, how the eternal karmas will be destroyed and also the Pithrun, forefathers etc. will be affected, people will lose faith in karma, in dharma in rituals, religion, God, everything. So therefore, like a devil quoting scripture, Arjuna is not a devil; but still Arjuna because of his confusion quotes wrongly and supports his stand. This is the third part of delusion.

These 3 put together, rāgaḥ plus śōkaḥ plus mōhaḥ. Attachment plus sorrow plus delusion these three put together is called saṃsāra and whoever has these three, he is a Saṃsāri. Saṃsāri (normally, it is taken that only Grihastha, married people are s Saṃsāris and not the sanyāsis) or the one who has got a wife is a saṃsāri. Poor lady, some sāri. Some sāri you catch hold of Saṃsāris!! People complain and think that ladies are responsible. It does not matter, whether you are a brahmacāri, gr̥hastha, vānaprastha or a sanyāsi, whether you are single or married with children or without children, that is not the criterion. Whether you have these three problems. Even a pucca sanyāsi, if he is going to have rāgaḥ towards his āśrama, means that which he has built and then is worried about its maintenance, or worried about the next one, (who will take care of after me) as long as that is going to cause dependence and worry, I may be in ochre robes, still I am an ochre-robed-saṃsāri. I do not require a sari for saṃsāra . rāgaḥ, is enough.

On the other hand, even a pucca gr̥hastha, with children and grand children; if he has handled these three-fold problem, he is muktaḥ, liberated person. Throughout the Gīta, Kṛṣṇa is going to emphasize that whether you are married or unmarried, that does not matter. Whether you are internally free. That matters. Therefore, Arjuna has discovered the problem of saṁsāra .

And even though Arjuna has discovered the problem, Kṛṣṇa has not started giving the solution. Because if the solution should come, some more steps are required. Discovery of the problem, diagnosis of the disease is the first step. I have a problem. But that is not enough. Because often, when we get some disease, what we will initially try to do. Self-medication. Why to go to doctor? He will take a long test and take Rs.5,000 and say that you do not have any serious problem. (Doctors, do not get offended; this is the view of the people). Therefore, why spend money. Pāti vaidyam and kaṣāyam, etc. and will manage. Homeopathy, and swallow some pills and pray.

Therefore, even when I discover the problem, I will not get solution from outside, because I am trying to solve the problem by myself. So after trying several methods, when I find that the disease does not get cured by my methods; that is called the discovery of helplessness. Discovery of helplessness. I have a problem and I do not know how to get out of it. Just as a person is in the middle of a wet ground. quagmire. Quick sand, etc. Suppose in the middle of quick sand, what will I do? Whatever I do, I will go down. I know that I require a help from another person who is on the land, not in the quick stand. So the other person must be on terra firma. He must be firm.

Therefore, what are the steps required. I have to diagnose, I should know that I have a problem, called discovery. Second stage is I should know that I cannot solve the problem on my own; once I discover the helplessness. in Vēdānta śāstra, it is called Dainya bhāva, or kārpaṇyam.

पृच्छामि त्वां धर्मसम्मूढचेताः |

यच्छ्रेयः स्यान्निश्चितं ब्रूहि तन्मे

शिष्यस्तेऽहं शाधि मां त्वां प्रपन्नम् || २ - ७ ||

kārpaṇyadoṣopahatasvabhāvaḥ

pṛcchāmi tvāṁ dharmasammūḍhacetāḥ |

yacchreyaḥ syānniścitaṁ brūhi tanmē

śiṣyaste:'haṁ śādhi māṁ tvāṁ prapaṇnam ||2- 7||

Once I know I have a problem I cannot solve it; what is the natural next stage, I have to surrender to someone who will give me a hand. This is called śaraṇāgathi . And once I go through the three stages, discovery of the problem, discovery of the helplessness, and surrender; then the fourth stage is the medication. A programme is given. Do this and follow these restrictions, etc. so following the restrictions, and the medicine. This is the fourth stage.

Similarly here also Arjuna has gone through only the first stage in the first chapter and what is the first stage he has discovered the problem of saṁsāra . And Kṛṣṇa will not come, unless Arjuna goes through the second and third stages. And therefore, Kṛṣṇa decides to observe silence. Since Kṛṣṇa does not speak, Arjuna thinks that his conclusion is right and therefore he decides to relinquish war and therefore throws away the bow, arrows and he is seated in the middle of the chariot; Therefore Vyāsa completes the first chapter saying

विसृज्य सशरं चापं शोकसंविग्नमानसः || १४७ - ||

ēvamuktvārjunaḥ saṅkhyē rathōpastha upāviśat |
visrjya saśaraṁ cāpaṁ śōkasamvignamānasaḥ ||1- 47||

Arjuna threw away all these and he sat on the chariot how, śōkaḥ saṁvigna mānasa. Pierced by, afflicted by problem of śōkaḥ, represents threefold problem. rāgaḥ, śōkaḥ and mōhaḥ, saṁvigna mānasaḥ. Therefore Arjuna is also silent, Kṛṣṇa is also silent. It is at this juncture, the first chapter has ended.

Now with this background, we have to go to the second-chapter. The second-chapter is a beautiful chapter which gives the comprehensive picture of the whole treatment. What is the treatment programme to be given by the Gītā? Therefore we can say the second-chapter is the essence of the entire Gītā. And this second-chapter has got 4 portions. I will give you just an overview so that you can know what to expect.

The first portion is Arjuna going through the other stages also. What are the other stages? He has discovered the problem. But he has not discovered the helplessness. Therefore, what we find in the first portion, Arjuna decides to quit the battlefield but his inner conscience says that there is something wrong. If he is totally convinced, he would have run away. But he feels something is wrong because he has decided to fight this battle after years of thinking. Not even days, not even months and it is a sudden momentary decision to quit this. Even though he intensely feels that he should run away, something in his subconscious says that perhaps I am confused and I am not able to take the right decision.

Therefore Arjuna wavers a little bit, and soon he discovers that the present problem he cannot solve. Therefore, he says

न चैतद्विद्मः कतरन्नो गरीयो
यद्वा जयेम यदि वा नो जयेयुः |
यानेव हत्वा न जिजीविषामस् - तेऽवस्थिताः प्रमुखे धार्तराष्ट्राः || २६ - ||

na caitadvidmaḥ katarannō garīyō yadvā jayēma yadi vā nō jayēyuh | yānēva hatvā na jijiviṣāmaḥ tē'avasthitāḥ pramukhē dhārtarāṣṭrāḥ || 2.6 ||

Hey Kṛṣṇa, I thought that I have come to the right decision but now my mind is wavering. I do not know whether my decision is right or wrong. One side says our case is Dhārmic therefore I should fight. Other side, my psychological mind, my emotional mind, how to kill my Gūru, how to kill my relations. Is like a boss in a company who has to take an action against a person and after deciding to take the action, he finds that it is one of his relatives. A big problem. So what to do? See the son-in-laws or the dharma. If I do not see the son-in-law, my daughter would be in trouble. Therefore that is very important. That is why it is said that Jāmātha daśamō grahaḥ. once you get a son in law, your life is controlled not by 9 planets but by ten. 10th planet has come. You can never control him. Whatever he does, you are affected, thorough the daughter of course. So therefore, Arjuna is in a double mind. Therefore, he accepts his helplessness. Arjuna goes the second stage of helplessness and he says:

कार्पण्यदोषोपहतस्वभावः
पृच्छामि त्वां धर्मसम्मूढचेताः |
यच्छ्रेयः स्यान्निश्चितं ब्रूहि तन्मे
शिष्यस्तेऽहं शाधि मां त्वां प्रपन्नम् || २ -७ ||

kārpaṇyadōṣōpahatasvabhāvaḥ
pṛcchāmi tvāṃ dharmasammūḍhacētāḥ |
yacchreyaḥ syānniścitaṃ brūhi tanmē
śiṣyastē'haṃ śādhi māṃ tvāṃ prapannam || 2.7 ||

Once Arjuna discovers the helplessness, immediately he has to surrender to someone and what blessed person Arjuna is, because right in front is available, jagat Gūru. Lord Kṛṣṇa. We have to search. Arjuna had the best gūru, universal gūru right in front.' Therefore without batting an eyelid, Arjuna surrenders and says;

यच्छ्रेयः स्यान्निश्चितं ब्रूहि तन्मे
yacchreyaḥ syānniścitaṃ brūhi tanmē

I am your disciple. Just like a patient surrenders himself in front of the doctor. I do not know what is the disease. You only know. Please treat me. Whatever course of treatment you suggest, I am ready to take.

Thus Arjuna goes through the third stage; then comes the 4th stage, where Kṛṣṇa accepts the patient Arjuna, the disciple Arjuna, and decides to give the programme of treatment. So saṁsāra nivāraṇa auṣadam. bhava rōga bhēṣajam, called Gīta śāśtram. Thus the first portion of the 2nd chapter is Arjuna śaraṇāgathi.

Then the second portion is making Arjuna fit for the treatment. Suppose you go to a doctor. Doctor sees the problem is cataract. Very simple, cataract now it is easiest surgery. But no doctor will directly do the surgery. Before surgery they will check up the body to find out whether you are fit for surgery. If there is infection or sneezing problem. No cold should be there. No infection should be there. No other disease should be there. Therefore operation-yōgyatha-prāp̥thi. So first he should have yōgyatha for the operation. yōgyatha, opposite ayōgyatha. Therefore yōgyatha prāp̥thi, Once all the parameters are OK, pressure, sugar, etc. OK, then surgery. Similarly, these spiritual pursuit requires two things. One is the surgery. Surgery is called self-knowledge, or jñāna-yōga, which is the medicine. Jñānam is the auṣadam.

अज्जान सर्प दष्टानाम् ब्रह्म ज्ञान औषदम् विना ||

saṁsāra sarpa daṣṭhānām jantūnām avivēkinām |
ajjāna sarpa daṣṭhānām brahma jñāna auṣadam vinā ||

Śankarācārya says brahma jñāna auṣadam, jñāna yōga. What is jñāna-yōga? We will see later. Jñāna yōgyatha is required. For yōgyatha prāp̥thi, doctor will give some medicine. Secondary medicines for yōgyatha prāp̥thi and then secondary medicine is called karma-yōgaḥ.

karma-yōga is for yōgyatha prāp̥thi, jñāna-yōgaḥ is for the disease removal. So therefore the second topic is jñāna-yōga. The third topic is karma-yōgaḥ. First topic Arjuna śaraṇāgathi.

And then the final topic is what is the nature of a healthy person. Who has developed that inner resistance. Who has solved the problem of rāgaḥ, śōkaḥ and mōhaḥ; what will be his life. It is all majah, majah, majah. nandathi, nandathi, nandathyeva. Just as a healthy person enjoys life, psychologically healthy person also enjoys life thoroughly. The 4th topic is jīvan muk̥thi, the inner freedom. These are the four topics we are going to see. Arjuna surrender; jñāna-yōga; karma-yōga and jīvan muk̥thi; the details of which will start from the next class.

CHAPTER 02

ॐ

In the last class, I pointed out that a seeker has to go through four stages if he has to successfully gain the spiritual knowledge. The first stage is discovery of the problem of Saṁsārā. That I have the Saṁsārā-disease consisting of rāgaḥ, śōkaḥ and mōhaḥ - and this has to be experienced and recognised. And even after recognising the problem, a person tries to solve the problem by himself or herself and generally what we do is: we do not understand the problem is with us and therefore we tend to blame the external factors for our problem.

And since we consider the external world is the cause of our problem, we try to adjust or change the external condition. A poor man thinks, that it is the poverty which is the cause. An unmarried person thinks that it is the 'unmarried'ness that is the making him unhappy. A married person thinks that it is the childless state that is the cause of the problem. Thus each one places the problem outside and goes on tampering and adjusting and after long struggle some rare intelligent ones discover the problem to be within themselves, not outside.

Like that person who experienced a peculiar problem. He was travelling in the bus and he heard some noise; oooshhhhh; that noise was coming and he thought that the bus tyre has burst, punctured and the bus has to be stopped and they have to change. And he was looking to the other people to suggest and nobody was suggesting. And he said, why are you keeping quiet, do you not hear the noise? The other people said: No, We do not hear. So that person was surprised how the other persons are not recognising the noise of the tyre. And then he asked the other people also and they also could not feel anything and still he went to the driver and said please stop the bus and check up. They stopped the bus and checked and found that the tyres were intact. But still this person, was hearing that noise. Then at last, he went to an ENT doctor and they discovered that there is an inner condition in the ear, because of which some people will hear some noise permanently. As long as the noise is mistaken as outside noise, this person will go on struggling to change the tyre or to change the other things without knowing that the noise is coming from inside. The moment he understood that the noise is from inside, then alone he can go the doctor and do whatever is required.

Similarly, all our problems or the noises of Saṁsārāḥ, whether it is rāgaḥ, dvēsaḥ or kāma-krōdhaḥ, all the disturbances that we face or disturbances caused by our own problems and as long as we do not recognise that it is within us alone; you are going to go on adjusting, changing so many things; how do we know that the problem is not outside, because any amount of external adjustment, we do; in fact we have been doing that right from our birth; as a baby, we looked for external adjustment; as youth, we did external adjustment; and a middle aged person, we did that or we are doing that and after 60 years of adjusting all over, but still if that inner problems continues, any intelligent person should take stock and ask the question: how come all kinds of changes have not solved the problem.

The other day a person came and told me: Swamiji everything is nice with me. I have got a very good job; I earn Rs.45,000 per month and the job is very satisfying and I am now young, health is fine, everything is fine but I do not know what is wrong, I am missing something and I am dissatisfied. So when the salary is not there, person may think that a higher salary would solve the problem; but here is a person who has a higher salary but still the problem is not solved; that means the problem is not with salary. Similarly, a person before marriage thought that a wife would remove the inner noise but when he sees people with wives (do not mistake, each individual person with one wife each!!), that plural should be appropriately understood; so the people with wives, still they have got the queeki noise coming; so that wife does not solve the problem. Similarly children, similarly grand children. This requires a mature intellect to understand that external adjustments do not stop the noise; for the noise is not coming from outside, but it is from inside.

Munḍaka. One II.12.

A cultured, a intelligent person, a mature person, after tampering with the world, and external factors for some time and finding the inner conditions to be same, should know that the problem is in me.

And once he knows the problem is within, he finds that he does not know how to solve it. Because whatever he knows is adjusting the external world and therefore the next stage is the discovery of helplessness. I have tampered with everything outside, but the noise is there. So this is called dāinya avastha, or kāraṇya avastha, the second stage.

And once a person discovers that he has a problem and also he is helpless, then alone he will go to the third stage; i.e. śaraṇāgati, taking help from outside. That requires a lot of intellectual honesty and humility. Because I might be an educated person with many degrees, I may be occupying a very big position, but I should be humble enough to admit this fact; however educated I am, however high a position I may occupy, but for this problem, I do not have a solution. So there should be sufficient intellectual honesty to accept this helplessness and ignorance and he should be humble enough to surrender to someone, that śaraṇāgati is the third stage, and the fourth stage is the actual pursuit of spiritual knowledge.

And once a person has gone through these stages, then Gīta becomes a meaningful pursuit. And this is what Vyāsācārya wants to show indirectly through the Mahābhāratha context. Of these three stages, Arjuna has gone through the first stage in the first chapter. He has discovered the problem. He has rāgaḥ, śōkaḥ and mōhaḥ.

But still he has not discovered the helplessness; so he thinks he has a solution for his problem. And the solution that he has visualised is throwing the bow and arrow and then running away from the battle. Thus he decides to run away, but suddenly he feels that even that may not be a real solution. Because one corner of his mind his conscience tells that he is a kṣatriya and that he has to fight for the sake of Dharma. Thus gradually, from wrong decision Arjuna is coming to a doubt.

From wrong decision coming to a doubt, is a great progress. Doubt is better or wrong decision is better, if you ask, I would say that doubt is better than wrong decision because, when a person has a doubt at least he will try to take the help of someone. There is a possibility of enquiry, because I have a doubt, there is a possibility of taking an external help; therefore there is a possibility of a solution. But when a person takes a wrong decision, there is no possibility of coming out. In the first chapter, Arjuna had taken a wrong decision, in the second-chapter, Arjuna progresses from wrong decision to doubt. Always our progress is like this; from wrong decision, to doubt, to knowledge. In Sāṅskṛit it is called Viparyaya to saṁśayā to jñānam. Viparyaya is tamōguṇa pradhāna; Saṁśayā is rajōguṇa pradhāna; jñānam is satva-guṇa-pradhāna. Tamas to rajas to satva is the progress, wrong decision to doubt to right decision.

Now in the 2nd chapter beginning we will see this progress. With this background, we will read the verses.

सञ्जय उवाच sañjaya uvāca Sañjaya said मधुसूदनः madhusūdanaḥ Kṛṣṇa उवाच uvāca spoke इदं वाक्यम् idam vākyaṁ these following words तं विषीदन्तम् taṁ viṣīdantam to that grieving (Arjuna) तथा आविष्टम् कृपया tathā āviṣṭam kṛpayā by attachment अश्रुपूर्णाकुलेक्षणम् aśrupūrṇākulekṣaṇam and whose eyes were blurred with brimful of tears.

Sañjaya said:

1. Kṛṣṇa spoke these following words to that grieving Arjuna who was completely overpowered by attachment as described before and whose eyes were blurred with brimful of tears.

So at the end of the 1st chapter we saw that Arjuna had talked a lot, and at the end of it, he had thrown away the bow and arrows and he is seated; his heart pierced by sorrow and Kṛṣṇa also did not talk anything, Arjuna has not sought the help of Kṛṣṇa. Therefore, Arjuna also does not speak. Kṛṣṇa also cannot speak. And therefore, Sañjaya comes.

And tells what happens further, because there is a stalemate; somebody has to break that so that it can continue again. Therefore Sañjaya says, taṁ tathā kṛpayāviṣṭam, Lord Kṛṣṇa saw the poignant condition of Arjuna who is a picture of Saṁsārā and remember represents the saṁsāri. So what is the condition of saṁsāri? kṛpayā āviṣṭaḥ. Kṛpa means attachment. In this context, Kṛpa should not be translated as compassion.

As I had said before, compassion is a positive virtue of a jñāni, and attachment is a negative weakness of an ajñāni. And here Arjuna is an ajñāni and his weakness is expressed here and therefore the word Kṛpa should not be translated as compassion but should be taken as attachment; weakness. By that weakness āviṣṭam, Arjuna was overpowered. If it is compassion it is something that I entertain. I am master, whereas attachment is something which I do not entertain but it overpowers me.

A man of compassion is a master and man of attachment is a slave. A man of compassion is Svāmi, a man of attachment is a asami, asvami, a slave. rāgaḥ, śōkaḥ and mōhaḥ.

Here Arjuna kṛpayāviṣṭaḥ; overpowered by attachment and this attachment has led to aśrupūrṇākulēkṣaṇam. His eyes are blurred, his vision is affected; akula ikṣaṇam. Eyes, akulam blurred, overpowered because of what aśrupūrṇām, because they are tearful eyes. They are full of tears and because of the tears he is not even able to see clearly; which represents śōkaḥ. kṛpayāviṣṭam represents rāgaḥ, and aśrupūrṇākulekṣaṇam represents śōkaḥ and viṣīdantam, and he was grieving in front of Lord Kṛṣṇa talking about sīdanti mama gātrāṇi mukhañ ca pariśuṣyati, etc. Such an Arjuna Lord Kṛṣṇa saw and Arjuna does not speak anything and Kṛṣṇa cannot teach also now and therefore Kṛṣṇa wants to break the ice with that intention; what did he do? madhusūdanaḥ idaṁ. Lord Kṛṣṇa uttered the following words to Arjuna. What did Kṛṣṇa say to Arjuna?

श्रीभगवानुवाच ।
कुतस्त्वा कश्मलमिदं विषमे समुपस्थितम् ।
अनार्यजुष्टमस्वर्ग्यम कीर्तिकरमर्जुन ॥२.२॥

śrībhagavānuvāca |
kutastvā kaśmalamidaṁ viṣamē samupasthitam |
anāryajuṣṭamasvargyama kīrtikaramarjuna ||2.2||

श्रीभगवानुवाच śrībhagavānuvāca Lord Kṛṣṇa said अर्जुन Arjuna Oh Arjuna कुतः kutaḥ From where did इदं कश्मलम् idaṁ kaśmalam this dejection अनार्यजुष्टम् anāryajuṣṭam which is not entertained by noble people अस्वर्ग्यम् asvargyam which will not lead to heaven अकीर्तिकरम् akīrtikaram and which will lead to ill-fame समुपस्थितम् samupasthim come त्वा tvā to you विषमे viṣamē at this wrong moment?

The Blessed Lord Said:

2. Lord Kṛṣṇa said – Oh! Arjuna! From where did this dejection which is not entertained by noble people, which will not lead to heaven and will lead to ill-fame come to you at this wrong moment?

So in these two verses, Lord Kṛṣṇa strongly criticises Arjuna. He uses very strong words which normally Kṛṣṇa will not use, and which normally Arjuna cannot tolerate also. Such strong words, Kṛṣṇa is using so that Arjuna may get up and fight. Like a charioteer-driver whipping up the horses by hitting the horses. Similarly, Kṛṣṇa is literally wounding Arjuna; hoping that at least wounded he will get up and fight. Strong words he uses here. kutaḥ idaṁ kaśmalam samupasthim. From where did such a low thinking, such a mean thought come to you. kaśmalam means impurity.

Here Kṛṣṇa is not talking about physical-impurity, but he is talking about mental-impurity in the form of depression, dejection, extreme frustration. From where did such a dejection come to you. Because you never have been entertaining such thought. You are known for your courage, you are known for your warfare, you would never be afraid of anyone. During Virātaparva, when Uttarakumarā was so much terrified, not only you encouraged Uttarakumarā, but also fought all the great warriors like Bhīṣma and others single handedly and won the war. Therefore you are not afraid of this Kaurava people, because you already have fought them. Even Karṇa you have defeated before and long before you fought even with Parameśvara, Lord Śiva himself and Śiva had congratulated and gave you even special ashram. Such a courageous person you are, now how you are crying? kutaḥ idam kaśmalam āgatham. And if you had been doing this there in the forest, you can afford, because nothing else to do, because you are not ruling a kingdom and whole day is available to you. You can have 3 or 4 sessions of crying. You could have done that when you were in the forest; but now that you have come to the middle of the battlefield, you cannot do that. So viṣamē samupasthim. Viṣama means at a wrong time and wrong place. At the most inopportune moment. So viṣamē samupasthim. Such a frustration, such a dejection, such a diffidence can never come to great people.

And who are the great people? Kṛṣṇa says: anāryajuṣṭam, dejection can never come for an āryapuruṣah. So āryapuruṣah means noble people, great people. So what do you mean by the word ārya? Moment we say ārya, we will only think of historical concept that āryas came from Iran or some place and India was occupied by Dravidians and āryans attacked and ārya-dravida big problem in Tamil Nadu. Dravidian movement. We cannot loudly talk about ārya. Therefore what is the meaning of the word ārya here?

तिष्ठति प्रकृता चारे, सः वः अर्यः इति स्मृथा ॥

kartavyam ācaran karma, akarthavyam anācaran |
tiṣṭati prakritā cāre, saḥ vaḥ ariyaḥ iti smrithā ||

This ślōkā is the definition of āryaḥ. And from this definition we come to know that it is only talking about a character. It is a discipline or character which makes a person āryaḥ. It has nothing to do with the place of birth, skin or anything. Who is an ārya? kartavyam ācaran karma, a person who does what is to be done, without murmuring, without grumbling, the one who does what is to be done, whether what is to be done is pleasant or unpleasant. Sometimes the duties are very happy duties, sometimes duties are painful, unpleasant. Āryaḥ is one who never divides the duties as pleasant or unpleasant, duty is duty. What is to be done has to be done. And one who does that. kartavyam ācaran karma. He never gives room for likes and dislikes.

Similarly, akarthavyam anācaran. What is not to be done, he does not do. However tempting it is. However attractive it is. However, likeable it is. He does not bother, what is not to be done, should not to be done. Therefore, the one who does what is proper and one who is not based on likes and dislikes. A cultured person. and tiṣṭati prakritā cāre, one who lives the life of ācāra. ācāra, discipline. saḥ vaḥ ariyaḥ iti smrithā. Such a cultured and disciplined person is called ārya. It does not matter whether he has a fair skin or a dark skin; does not matter whether he is short or tall. it has nothing to do with Iran or it has nothing to do with vēdic civilization with this place or that place. Nothing to do with a place. Definition of an āryaḥ is that he is a cultured person.

And here Kṛṣṇa says anāryajuṣṭam, such a dejection can never come to a cultured person. Arjuna, if you are a cultured person, you should do your duty, of a Kshatriya, without feeling bad about what you have to do. And if you try to escape from your duty, you are anārya. anāryajuṣṭam idaṁ kaśmalam. And not only anāryajuṣṭam, adhārmic, asvargyam. It will never give you puṇya phalam. It is adhārmic it will only give you pāpam. It will never give you puṇyam. asvargyam. akīrtikaram Arjuna. Not only it will not give svarga, after death, even while being alive, it will not give you name but it will give you only ill-fame. akīrtikaram. So you will lose your puṇyam; you will also lose your fame. How can such a negative thinking come to you. So akīrtikaram Arjuna kutaḥ idaṁ.

क्लैब्यं मा स्म गमः पार्थ नैतत्त्वय्युपपद्यते ।
क्षुद्रं हृदयदौर्बल्यं त्यक्त्वोत्तिष्ठ परन्तप ॥२.३॥

klaibyaṁ mā sma gamaḥ pārtha naitattvayyupāpa dyate |
kṣudraṁ hṛdayadaurbalyaṁ tyaktvottiṣṭha parantapa ||2.3||

3. Oh Arjuna! Do not take to unmanliness. This state does not befit you. Having given up this mean faintheartedness, get up, Oh Arjuna!

Hē pārtha, Hē Arjuna, Pārtha, son of pṛtha, pritha is another name of Kunthi. Therefore Pārtha, prithāya kunthyā puthra. kauntēya. Pārtha, Hē pārtha. klaibyaṁ mā sma gamaḥ. klaibyaṁ means unmanliness. Weak-mindedness; the one who is incapable of taking courageous decision; the one who withdraws when crisis comes. The one who is chicken-hearted. kliba means the weakness of the mind. May you not take to unmanliness or weakness.

Why? Because ētat tvayi na upāpadyatē. Anybody else does that, it is understandable; but Arjuna, you are known for your courage. In the Mahābhāratha, during Virāta-Parva, when Uttarakumāra is terribly frightened, you uttered the ten names of Arjuna. You need not see Arjuna. Just merely uttering 10 names they are given. It is said in the śāśtras, that you merely repeat that. Suppose you have to interview. Yuddham need not come. What will happen? Chant this slōkā. So whenever you feel weakness, it is said that you chant these 10 names and fear will go away; and all over the world, your name is so popular for courage and that Arjuna how can you be frightened? So tvayi na upāpadyatē. The one who has fought with Paramēśvara Śiva himself. It does not befit your status.

Therefore what should you do? hṛdayadaurbalyam tyaktvā. Throw away this mental weakness. These weak-heartedness, faintheartedness, you throw away, which is kṣudraṁ, which is very mean, which makes you a lowly person, which is disgrace for you. You give up and tyaktvā uttiṣṭa. First Arjuna you get up. That itself has become a problem. Before thinking of lifting the bows and arrows, etc. first you get up, because in extreme sorrow, a person cannot even get up. So therefore like whipping up a horse, Kṛṣṇa is whipping up Arjuna by using strong words. Arjuna you get up and also Kṛṣṇa addresses Arjuna with appropriate words parantapa. Scorcher of enemies. Destroyer of enemies. Parantapa. You get up and get ready to fight.

Here you find that even though Kṛṣṇa addresses Arjuna, Kṛṣṇa does not teach Gīta wisdom. There is no Gīta wisdom involved here. Neither karma-yōgaḥ nor jñānam, nor nothing of that sort. Just some strong words to whip up Arjuna. Why Kṛṣṇa does not teach Gīta here? The reason is two-fold. First thing is Arjuna has not surrendered to Kṛṣṇa and is also not prepared to listen. Only when the other person is ready to receive knowledge, I can give; because any transaction requires one receiver and one giver. I may be ready to give, but if the other person is not ready to receive, it is foolishness to teach or give advice. So there is a beautiful slōkā:

श्रद्ध हीनस्य तु प्रोक्तम् आराण्य रुथितोपमाः ॥

vācyam śraddhaḥ samēdasya prichchatasya viśeśathah |
śradhda hīnasya tu prōktam āraṅya ruthitōpamāḥ ||

You should give suggestions or advice only to a person who values your advice. And preferably only to a person who asks for advice. Once you know that the other person does not ask and once you know that the other person does not have value for your words, kindly never give advice. If you give the advice, it is like āraṅya ruthitōpamāḥ. It is like crying in wilderness. It is a very important lesson we learn from Kṛṣṇa, because he knows a lot, He is sarvajñā Īśvara and He can easily advice or teach Arjuna but still Kṛṣṇa does not do that because unless Arjuna is ready to receive, He should not give.

But if you look our lifestyle, we find that the easiest thing we do is that we give free advice and suggestions to everyone. Somebody comes and tells that I am going to Mumbai. "Do not go to Mumbai now". He never came and asked whether it is proper to go to Mumbai at this time, etc. He came to tell that he is going. But we call him and give advice over advice. And we give to such an extent that we lose all the respect for our words, the other person avoids me all the time. So the very important thing is never give advice.

And in fact, most difficult thing in life is to make another person listen to what you say. So Kṛṣṇa has understood psychology therefore he does not advice. And the second thing is Kṛṣṇa knows that Arjuna has not exhausted all his feelings. In the first chapter, Arjuna no doubt poured a lot; was highly emotional like a volcano or like a flooded river; he was talking on and on, but looking at Arjuna's face, Kṛṣṇa knew that it is a temporary stillness; he is waiting for another wave, another burst. And if Kṛṣṇa starts teaching the Gīta, one word or two words Kṛṣṇa will tell and Arjuna will again come with lot of words. And therefore Kṛṣṇa wants just to push Arjuna a little bit and see whether Arjuna has exhausted his feelings and you find that Arjuna again starts in the next verse and he has lot more to say.

So this I have experienced very often. Swamijis have this. Because they come telling some problem and they have stories and stories; especially married about 25 years ago and they have to start from that time, isn't? So therefore stories are about the mother-in-law or company and he/she says that he wants only a solution. And he talks a lot and there is a temporary lull. Swamiji, what to do? Really speaking he has not got into the next wave. It is only a temporary stop. Suppose I seriously start something only I have to start one or two words.

Again he will come with a lot of things. So we do not speak at all. Sometime, they talk the whole time and go back and say Swamiji, thank you for your advice, without my opening the mouth! I find really a very few people asking for solution. Why because they have got so much, initially we have to only allow that person to exhaust. and in between if at all, words, no serious words: Is't like that? Is the only words I use just to show that I have not slept away. So therefore, because you can nod the head because of sleep also. So just some words, here and there. You cannot speak, because simply the other person is not available for listening. Therefore Kṛṣṇa uses this master psychology and just uses two verses to whip up so that Arjuna will come up with some more of his emotion. And Arjuna is going to come and after exhausting his emotion then he says I have exhausted and I have surrendered and now you speak and I will listen!

And afterwards also Kṛṣṇa observes some silence because he might again start, and having made sure that Arjuna's mind is open for listening, (in fact, you can try that is interesting, often you can tell a long story and suppose somebody has come, now when you tell the story, in between a phone call comes and you attend the phone and come back and if the other person is interested in your story, he must be asking what happened next? You find that he never asks? We know that. We only say, where I have left. We again start. Several times I have seen that and no one is interested and therefore I have stopped restarting the story.

So therefore if we really know some of the things, we would not have much to talk. We would not have much to talk. Often we are talking, when it is not at all required. By talking too much, the value of our words is becoming lesser and lesser and lesser. So if at all you have to find out whether the other person is really interested, in start the story, ask how the Trip was. What he wants to listen is OK. But we say how went to the station, how the auto got punctured, and other person does not want all these. He only wants to get an OK from you and if you have any doubt, just leave in between and come back and nobody will question thereafter what happened. Therefore, here also, Kṛṣṇa whips up and sees whether Arjuna wants to surrender and has an open mind.

इषुभिः प्रतियोत्स्यामि पूजार्हावरिसूदन ॥२.४॥

Arjuna uvāca |
katham bhīṣmamahaṁ saṅkhyē drōṇaṁ ca madhusūdana |
iṣubhiḥ pratiyōtsyāmi pūjārhāvarisūdana ||2.4||

अर्जुन उवाच Arjuna uvāca Arjuna asked मधुसूदन madhusūdana Oh Kṛṣṇa ! कथम् अहम् katham aham How can I प्रतियोत्स्यामि pratiyōtsyāmi fight against पूजारहौ भीष्मं च द्रोणम् pūjārahau bhīṣmaṁ ca drōṇam adorable Bhīṣma and Drōṇa सङ्ख्ये इषुभिः saṅkhyē in this war iṣubhiḥ with arrows, अरिसूदन arisūdana Oh Kṛṣṇa !

4. Arjuna asked – Oh Kṛṣṇa ! How can I fight against adorable Bhīṣma and Drōṇa in his war with arrows, Oh Kṛṣṇa?

So Arjuna comes with his old story once again. Whatever exhausted in the first chapter, he begins. So Hēy Kṛṣṇa; katham aham bhīṣmaṁ drōṇaṁ ca pratiyōtsyāmi. During Virāta parva, I might have fought them but now how can I fight Bhīṣma and Drōṇa who are pūjārahau, who really deserve worship. pūjārahau bhīṣmaṁ ca drōṇaṁ katham pratiyōtsyāmi.

In the first chapter he says now my mind has become clearer and with the clearer mind when I see I should not be fighting them. And pūjārahau iṣubhiḥ pratiyōtsyāmi. How can I fight with arrows, oh Madhusūdhana? Hey Arisūdhana. Kṛṣṇa your job was simpler because you have destroyed many rākṣasās and you did not have any conflict. You are a Madhsūdhana, the destroyer of Madhu, a rākṣasā. Therefore it was not difficult. But I am not fighting rākṣasās but Bhīṣma and Drōṇa, who are honorable; and also my Gurus. Therefore I cannot imagine doing that:

गुरुनहत्वा हि महानुभावान् श्रेयो भोक्तुं भैक्ष्यमपीह लोके ।
हत्वार्थकामांस्तु गुरुनिहैव भुञ्जीय भोगान् रुधिरप्रदिग्धान् ॥२.५॥

gurūnahatvā hi mahānubhāvān
śreyō bhōktuṁ bhaikṣyamapīha lōkē | hatvārthakāmāṁstu gurūnihaiva
bhuñjīya bhōgāna rudhirapradigdhāna ||5||

इह लोके iha lōkē In this world अपि भोक्तुं भैक्ष्यम् api bhōktuṁ bhaikṣyam even to live on alms हि श्रेयः hi śreyaḥ is indeed better अहत्वा ahatvā than killing महानुभावान् गुरुन् mahānubhāvān gurūn the noble Gurus. हत्वा गुरुन् तु hatvā gurūn tu by killing the gurus, however, भुञ्जीय इह bhuñjīya iha I will enjoy here एव रुधिरप्रदिग्धान् ēva rudhirapradigdhān only the blood-stained भोगान् अर्थकामान् bhōgān arthakāmān pleasures of wealth and sense objects.

5. In this world, even to live on alms is indeed better than killing the noble Gurus. On the other hand, by killing these Gurus I will enjoy here only the blood-stained pleasures of wealth and sense objects.

Arjuna thinks of the other option. Suppose he does not fight this war because Bhīṣma and Drōṇa etc. are involved. What will he have to do? He cannot live in the country because Duryōdhanā is not going to give any place. He said he will not give a single house with 5 rooms, 5 bedrooms and I will not give you one room with 5 chairs or 6 chairs whatever that might be. As he said, he is not going to give even a needle space. So if Arjuna decides not want to fight he will have to leave for the forest once again. Once he goes to the forest, he would have to live a life of a sanyāsi or a vānaprastha, which means he has to live on alms, and living on bhikṣa is a pāpa karma, because according to Dharma śāstra, a gr̥hastha cannot live on bhikṣa. Bhikṣa life is possible only for a brahmacāri and it is a title to get bhikṣa. Bhikṣa means going to different houses and asking for food. Bhavathi bhikṣam dēhi. So at the time of upanayanam, they start taking bhikṣa, and the first bhikṣa is supposed to be from the mother. Why they choose the mother, because at the first attempt there would not be a failure. Because Mother will not say, I would not go. Others may give or may not give to a brahmacāri. Therefore the first attempt be not a failure. and thus they started with the mother. The idea is that brahmacāri should live on bhikṣa. A vānaprastha, he can live on bhikṣa. Not can. They are supposed to live on Bhikṣa. A sanyāsi also has to live on bhikṣa. Out of the four āśramas, three have to live on Bhikṣa. And naturally, who must be giver of bhikṣa. Pāriśēṣya nyāya, the gr̥hastha has to be the giver. Suppose the gr̥hastha also wants to live on bhikṣa means, what? What will happen? If all these 4 āśramas would want to live on bhikṣa, who will give. Therefore gr̥hastha has to give bhikṣa to all the other people. So a gr̥hastha has no right to live on Bhikṣa. So if he does that, it would be a pāpa karma, it would come under prathyavāya and it is a wrong thing. And Arjuna thinks that is going to be a pāpam. And if he fights in the war he has to kill his own gurus like Bhīṣma, etc. that also will give him pāpam. According to Arjuna, because of that, he is confused; therefore killing Bhīṣma and Drōṇa is pāpam, according to Arjuna. And living on bhikṣa also is a pāpam, because a gr̥hastha cannot do that. Now Arjuna faces these two pāpams and he wants to choose the lesser one. In fact often in our lives, we have got different bad choices only. And that is when we try to postpone our decisions. Because if we have to decide between good and bad, there is no problem. Easily we can choose good.

But often the things, we have to choose between different bad choices, it is exactly time that we try to avoid decisions and but in life we have to choose in many situations. Arjuna has to choose between two pāpams. Bhīṣmathi vatham and other is bhaikṣyam, living on bhikṣa or bhikṣa and Arjuna says between these two wrong actions, I will choose the bhikṣa. Therefore he says śreyō bhōktuṃ bhaikṣyamapīha lōkē. In this world, it is better to live on bhaikṣyam. Bhikṣa food collected from one house is bhikṣa; when food is collected from several houses, it is called bhaikṣyam; combined bhikṣa is bhaikṣyam. Therefore he says bhaikṣyam api śrēyaha hi bhōkthvyam. Better to do that than to mahānubhāvān nihatva. Rather than killing my gurus, guruvadha itself is pāpam and here that too not ordinary gurus but mahānubhāvān. Anubhava means mahimā. And mahānubhāvā means mahā mahimā. Those people are glorious, who are great rather than killing them, it is better to incur such a sin. And not only Guruvatham is a pāpam, also have further problem, hatvārthakāmāṃstu gurūnihaiva. Suppose we choose to fight the war and kill these gurus. No doubt there is a brighter side. Of course we are incurring sin but there seems to be a brighter side that we will get back the kingdom and instead of lying down on the ground in the forest, we will have a palaces and we will also have nice things but hey Kṛṣṇa, do you think that we will be able to enjoy those palatial things. Not only we will incur sin, later pleasures born out of victory also will not be enjoyable they will be rudira prathigtha artha kāman. All those wealth that we acquire and all those pleasure we acquire, they all will be smeared with the blood of these people. They will be tainted with the blood of these people; that means any enjoyment I have, I will only be reminded of this heinous crime. Therefore I will be thinking of Bhīṣma when I am in the palace. Moment I think of Bhīṣma; I will remember only his final moment. So being with a person at the time of death, very very painful thing because, you have lived with that person when he was healthy, wealthy, joyous, etc. When we have seen that person struggling at the time of death, later life memories will not be of the good days but of the struggles. Similarly in the palace, wherever I go about, I will think of Bhīṣma and Drōṇa, when their thought comes, battle field will be reminded off, how they struggled and how they died that only I will remember. Therefore it will be bloodstained wealth and bloodstained pleasures. Therefore neither in this world I will enjoy nor after death I can enjoy. We will only enjoy the bloodstained pleasures born out of Artā and Kāma. Artā means the wealth, kāma means sense objects and therefore I am not in favour of this war.

And here also we find Arjuna is adamant in his wrong decisions. And until a person switches over from wrong decisions to doubt, he can never progress. So even in your family also, person has made the decision; he cannot change. Having made some suggestion, then only wait for him to change from wrong decision to doubt, perhaps I may be wrong. Until that position comes, no advice will be useful and therefore Kṛṣṇa is waiting and in the next slōkā, we find that change is going to take place. That is the crucial moment where Arjuna is going to doubt his decision. Those details we will see in the next class.

Vyāsācārya is presenting here the circumstances in which Arjuna, a soldier becomes Arjuna, a seeker of mōkṣaḥ. And to become a seeker of mōkṣaḥ, or a receiver of mōkṣaḥ, I said a person has to go through certain stages. The first-stage being the discovery of the fundamental human problem. And we saw the fundamental human problem in the first chapter, which is in the form of rāgaḥ, śōkaḥ and mōhaḥ. Psychological dependence on external factors is rāgaḥ; and because of the psychological dependence there is a constant anxiety that I will lose the object and people upon whom I psychologically depend, and when the loss of the object or person takes place, either actually or imaginarily, then there is intense grief which is called śōkaḥ; and when the mind is in the grip of attachment and grief loses its discriminative faculty; and then it faces conflict with regard to what should be done and not do be done which conflict is called mōhaḥ; this 3-fold problem of attachment grief and conflict alone is the fundamental human problem known as saṁsāraḥ.

And Arjuna is facing the saṁsāraḥ in the battlefield which we saw in the first chapter and therefore the first stage is discovery of saṁsāraḥ. And when a person discovers this human problem, he does not seek the help of guru or scriptures; he thinks that he can solve the problem by taking some external help and therefore he goes on adjusting external condition. In fact all the lifelong struggles are nothing but adjustment of external condition hoping that this internal problem will be solved for good. But generally what we find is that the external adjustments do not solve the problem of attachment and even if it solves the problem, it is only a temporary solution. It only serves as a palliative, like certain medicines which we take for cold. Vicks, or something, which is not curing the problem of cold; in fact it is called a counter irritant; when you have got one irritation, you have a bigger irritation in front of which, the other irritation becomes insignificant.

Like we forgot one scam. You forget one scam when the next bigger scam comes. This is what? Solution or progress of the confusion. Similarly we only have some kind of first aid or temporary solution; it is not a permanent solution at all; and a person should discover the helplessness with regard to solving this fundamental problem. This helplessness alone is called - kārpaṇya bhāvaḥ or dainya bhāvaḥ. And unless we discover this helplessness, we will never seek the external guidance and Arjuna has come to the first stage now. He has discovered the problem. Now he has to go to the 2nd stage, discovery of helplessness. And Arjuna has not yet discovered and therefore he is trying to find a solution by himself. And therefore he thinks various possibilities and some of the possibilities he mentions; in the 5th slōkā he said,

गुरूनहत्वा हि महानुभावान् श्रेयो भोक्तुं भैक्ष्यमपीह लोके ।
हत्वार्थकामांस्तु गुरूनिहैवभुञ्जीय भोगान् रुधिरप्रदिग्धान् ॥ २.५ ॥

gurūnahatvā hi mahānubhāvān śrēyō bhōktuṁ bhaikṣyamapīha lōkē |
hatvārthakāmāṁstu gurūnihaiva bhuñjīya bhōgān rudhirapradigdhāna || 2.5 ||

Now he has got two choices between the devil and the deep sea as they call; one option is killing his kith and kin; which is a terrible action; revered gurus should be slain, and even if he gets a victory by killing them, he is going to enjoy the pleasures which are all soaked in blood as it were. rudhirapradigdhāna bhōgān bhuñjīya. Every object I see I will remember Bhīṣma and Drōṇa and then I will only remember, how I shot them dead, and how blood was going from their body. Do you think that I will enjoy those pleasures?

If I do not want that terrible action what is the other option that I have. I have to go back to forest. And again bed is the earth only, the pillow should be the hands only and with lot of mosquitoes; there is no Goodnight, etc. Arjuna's time those were not there. No mosquito repellants, etc. Insects will be biting, no fan, no A/c or an emperor, Arjuna who lived a luxurious life, he has to go back to forest and he cannot eat the food that he would like to have; bhaikṣyam he has to eat, he has to live on alms, which he had experienced for 13 years; felt miserable and he was waiting for the end of the 13th year. And now he has to decide, between these two courses, whether to go back to the forest or whether to fight.

And since he is utterly confused with regard to Dharma and adharma he votes for the wrong course of action and what is the course he suggests to himself? Bhaikṣyam apī śrēyaḥ. I feel it is better to live on bhikṣa. This indicates Arjuna's dharmādharma avivēkaḥ.

As I said in the last class, (whenever it was) for a kṣatriya; and that too for a gr̥hastha, bhikṣa is not at all allowed. Bhikṣa is allowed only for a brahmacāri, vānaprasthi or sanyāsi; they alone have to live on Bhikṣa and if Arjuna takes to bhikṣa he is committing two-fold sins. What are the two sins? one is svadharma parityāgaḥ, which is giving up a righteous war; dharmayuddhasya parityajya svadharma parityāgaḥ; and according to dharma-śāstra, giving up one's svadharma is called omission; technically called pratyavāya pāpam which is the first sin Arjuna is committing if he takes to Bhikṣa.

Not only he is giving up his svadharma and also living on Bhikṣa is paradharma parigrahaḥ. Paradharma parigrahaḥ taking up somebody else's duty. Giving up of one's own duty is omission; taking to somebody's else duty is commission; both omission-sin and commission-sin; both sins Arjuna is committing and Arjuna is not able to recognise it because of his muddled thinking mōhaḥ. And therefore he said:

and Kṛṣṇa still continues to be helpless. Because Arjuna is only suggesting his own solution but he never tells Kṛṣṇa, Hey Kṛṣṇa; help me (right in front help is available, you see). Still Arjuna does not feel like taking his help and not only Arjuna is helpless, even Kṛṣṇa is helpless because even if he wants to give, Arjuna is not ready to receive. Therefore, Kṛṣṇa is also sitting there, waiting for that one opportunity when Arjuna will say: Kṛṣṇa I am confused. One sentence; but it is a very big leap.

At home also, we find our children, or brothers, or sisters, or grand-children, they won't say one statement: "I am confused and Appa please guide me". Now Kṛṣṇa is waiting for that golden opportunity and that comes in the next slōkā. A turning point, the acceptance of helplessness, which is a great puṇyam; it is this turning point, which is responsible for the Gīta śāstram to come and what is that we will see:

न चैतद्विद्मः कतरन्नो गरीयो यद्वा जयेम यदि वा नो जयेयुः ।
यानेव हत्वा न जिजीविषाम- स्तेऽवस्थिताः प्रमुखे धार्तराष्ट्राः ॥ २.६ ॥

na caitadvidmaḥ katarannō garīyō yadvā jayēma yadi vā nō jayēyuh |
yānēva hatvā na jijīviṣāma- ste'vasthitāḥ pramukhē dhārtarāṣṭrāḥ ||2.6||

च ca Moreover न विद्मः na vidmaḥ we do not know कतरद् एतत् katarad ētat which one of these two courses is गरीयः नः garīyaḥ naḥ better for us यद् वा जयेम yad vā jayēma and whether we will conquer (them) यद् वा जयेयुः नः yad vā jayēyuh naḥ or they will conquer us ते एव धार्तराष्ट्राः tē ēva dhārtarāṣṭrāḥ Those very Kauravās, यान् हत्वा yān hatvā killing whom न जिजीविषामः na jijīviṣāmaḥ we will not even desire to live अवस्थिताः प्रमुखे avasthitāḥ pramukhē are assembled in front.

6. Moreover, we do not know which one of these two courses is better and whether we will conquer them or they will conquer us. Those very Kauravās killing whom we will not even decide to live, are assembled in front.

So the 3rd and 4th lines, dhārtarāṣṭrāḥ pramukhē ste:'vasthitāḥ; I am in a big conflict because my own cousins are arrayed in front of me. Any other asuras I would not have faced any problem; I would have enjoyed cutting their head; but here dhārtarāṣṭrāḥ, dhṛtharāṣṭrāḥ puthra; my own cousins are standing in front; therefore I do not feel like killing them; because yān hatvā na jijīviṣāma; by killing these people we would not like to even live in this world. It may be a great victory but we will not like to live in the world, we can never rejoice; it is unlike winning Independence cup. Therefore there is a great rejoicing because Pakistan we have won; no sympathy; but Hey Kṛṣṇa it is not like winning the Independence cup, but here we cannot enjoy because they are our own kith and kin.

And not only that, even if we are sure that it is a Dharma Yuddham and we take to fighting, the problem is yadvā jayema yadi vā no jayēyuh, we are not even sure whether we will defeat them or they will defeat us. So to avoid that suppose I give up this battle and go to the forest, then what will be the problem? Again I will have conflict. (This shore is better than that shore, and vice versa). If I go to the forest, I may think that I have shirked my duty and therefore I think I am not objective enough to analyse the situation. I am so much involved in the situation that my mind has lost all the objectivity and therefore I think I need the help of you.

Therefore, the first line he says na caitadvidmaḥ. Kṛṣṇa was waiting anxiously for this word, na caitadvidmaḥ, I do not know what to do. Na vidmaḥ, (there also some ego is there ~ he is using 'we' do not know ~ he should have used the singular 'I'. ~ it is arrogance.) In the ignorance also the ego is sticking. "We do not know". What we do not know? katarannō garīyā? Which one of the course of these two actions na ha garīyāha is better for us. So one is doing svadharma, doing svadharma has got a plus point but there is the terrible minus point; what is the minus point? guruvadhah. What is the plus point? It is dharma yuddham is plus point, guru vadhah is the minus point.

And suppose we get away from the war, there is a plus point, what is the plus point, I need not kill my kith and kin; there is a plus point; but what is the minus point; I have to give up my svadharmah, which is dharma yuddham. Therefore, both courses of action, I am seeing plus points and minus points. That is why generally we postpone all our decisions. But by postponement, we cannot help, we will have to squarely face one time or the other and therefore, Arjuna says I am not able to decide and therefore what is the next step: I seek your help. And that is going to come in the next verse.

कार्पण्यदोषोपहतस्वभावः पृच्छामि त्वाम् धर्मसंमूढचेताः ।
यच्छ्रेयः स्यान्निश्चितं ब्रूहि तन्मे शिष्यस्तेऽहं शाधि मां त्वां प्रपन्नम् ॥ २.७॥

kārpaṇyadoṣopahatasvabhāvaḥ
ṛcchāmi tvām dharmasaṁmūḍhacetāḥ |
yacchreyaḥ syānniścitaṁ brūhi tanmē
śiṣyaste'haṁ śādhi māṁ tvām prapannaṁ ||2.7||

कार्पण्यदोषोपहतस्वभावः kārpaṇyadoṣopahatasvabhāvaḥ with my mind overpowered by helplessness धर्मसंमूढचेताः dharmasaṁmūḍhacetāḥ and with my intellect completely deluded regarding righteousness, त्वां पृच्छामि tvām ṛcchāmi I ask You ब्रूहि तन् brūhi tat Tell (me) that यत् स्यात् yat syāt which is निश्चितं श्रेयः मे niścitaṁ śrēyaḥ mē definitely good for me अहं ते शिष्यः ahaṁ tē śiṣyaḥ I am Your disciple शाधि माम् śādhi māṁ Teach me. प्रपन्नं त्वाम् prapannaṁ tvām who have surrendered to You.

7. With my mind overpowered by helplessness and with my intellect completely deluded regarding righteousness, I ask You. Decidedly tell (me) tha which is good for me. I am Your disciple. Teach me who have surrendered to You.

Kṛṣṇa is not satisfied with Arjuna's loose confession. na caitadvidmaḥ, is coming only in a corner in between the sandhi, etc. na caitadvidmaḥ is not very clearly said and therefore Kṛṣṇa wants Arjuna to openly admit in so many words. Why do you feel bad to accept your ignorance? Because human being is born ignorant, ignorance is not sin. Because we are all born ignorant, ignorant of everything, and everything includes, self-ignorance also. Therefore we need not feel bad to admit our ignorance because ignorance is not sin. Only perpetuation of the ignorance is sin. And therefore we should only be honest enough to accept that and Arjuna here opens his breast and he says kārpaṇyadoṣopahatasvabhāvaḥ. Svabhāva means my inner-most heart; anthakaraṇam, hridayam. We can translate it as my mind. My mind is upahata. Upahataḥ means incapacitated; made defunct; non-functional. So my intellect is not able to do its function and what is the function of the intellect? The function is vivēkaḥ; discriminating between two things, is the function of the intellect and this is the crucial moment, when Arjuna has to choose the right course. And at this juncture, clouded by mōhaḥ, I am not able to think. upahataḥ; Stultified; Obstructed; Thwarted; Incapacitated; Made defunct; dullened; is upahataḥ. And because of what? Kārpaṇyadōṣō. kārpaṇyam helplessness, misery, confusion, wretchedness. kārpaṇya ēva dōṣa, kārpaṇya dōṣa, my intellect is not able to think, being afflicted by misery or helplessness. OK.

And the confusion is regarding what? dharmasaṃmūḍhacētāḥ. My confusion is with regard to dharma. Dharma means adharma also. What is dharma? What is Adharma? Because Dharma śāstra clearly says hiṃsa is a pāpam, na hiṃsyat sarva bhutāni. You should not harm anyone mentally, verbally or physically; ahimṣa paramō dharma is one side and that too one should not kill his own kith and kin and that too elders and that too cultured people and that too gurus themselves. Therefore one side says: I should not kill them. Another part of my mind says: Dhatharāṣṭrasya's Dhur..... bhuddhuē, (lengthen it long) Duryōdhanās' are embodiment of adharma and unfortunately Bhīṣma and Drōṇacārya etc have joined the adhārmic side and therefore we have to take action. Therefore another part of the mind says you have to fight. So therefore I am confused dharma saṃmūḍhacetāḥ. My mind is confused with regard to dharma. And therefore (he is opening the mouth and asking) aham prcchāmi. Now I am asking you.

जानन् च न पि मेधावि जठवल् लोक आचरेत् ॥

jānan ca na pi medhāvi jaṭhaval lōka ācarēt ||

A wise-person is not supposed to advice unless the other person seriously asks for advice. Not only asking, (not casually asking). Anyāyēna prcctatahaḥ (if he is asking in an anyāyēna way, do not say). If he is really honest, open minded and asking and then alone, you give advice). But suppose they are our own children, can we wait for their asking? They will never ask. Our children, will they ever ask? Therefore, if we feel that we have to give some advice, we can send some feelers and see whether they are really in a receptive mood. And in spite of our suggestions, if they have decided not to listen, we have to only surrender to the Lord and ask for நல்லபுத்தி Nallabuddhi for them. There is no other way. Kṛṣṇa also therefore does not want to give, unless he is sure Arjuna wants to listen.

Now Arjuna expresses his open mindedness, by saying prcchāmi. I am asking you. What should you tell me? yat mē śreyaḥ syāt. Tell me what is good for me, because I am not in a position to find out what is good and what is bad. Therefore, you better decide the right course of action and do not say this may be good; that may be good may be maybe does not enlighten me. Therefore niścitaṃ śrēyaḥ. Whatever is certainly good for me; whatever is definitely good for me; anaikantikataya yat mē śrēyaḥ bhavathi. That one may you tell me.

And not only that, I am opening my mind: ahaṁ tē śiṣyaḥ. This slōkā is the crucial slōkā in the introductory portion. Even if you forget the entire first chapter, it does not matter, but one should not forget this slōkā. 2nd up to 6th chapter you may forget, but the crucial turning point verses, is this verse, because in this verse alone, the Arjuna-the-soldier is converted into Arjuna-the-disciple. So he says: śiṣyaḥ ahaṁ. No more Swami; but I am śiṣyaḥ. śiṣyaḥ means śikṣa-yōgyah śiṣyaḥ. So the one who is a fit receptacle for teaching is śiṣyaḥ.

And what determines the yōgyatha? First he should have an open mind; without any prejudices; he should not have concluded what is right and wrong. If I have already concluded that I have read the Gīta 20 times; let me see whether the Swamiji is telling properly or not! Therefore, if my approach is, you know, giving an examination to the teacher, or the Swami, that means it is a prejudiced mind; I need not say that he is right; I need not say he is wrong, I come with an open mind; keep all the preconceived notions and conclusions along with the chappals outside.

Thereafter you can take back later. But at the time of śravaṇam, that openness must be there. I should not have concluded Karmaṇah mōkṣaḥ, bhakthya mōkṣaḥ, jñānēna mōkṣaḥ, (let me open my mind), this open-mindedness is called śiṣyayathvam; śikṣa yōgyathvam. And that is why, in the Sikhism, in that religion all the followers are called Sikhs; you know what is the meaning of Sikh. śiṣyaḥ, shortened is Sikh. In their language, 'sha'_khara becomes 'kha'_khara. All ṣa becomes kha. śiṣyaḥ changed to śikya.

They called their guide as what? Guru grantha sahib is the teacher and hosts a beautiful attitude and claim themselves as śiṣyaḥ. So similarly, because Sikhism is what is nothing but an offshot of Hinduism, so we all should be sikh only (not s.. i.. c.. k.. sick ~ very careful ~ but s.. i.. k.. h.. Sikh). Of course we are already there. We are sick; saṁsāraḥ-wise. But we should become the sikh in the form of śiṣyaḥ and Arjuna says: ahaṁ tē śiṣyaḥ. And śiṣyaḥ means what should Kṛṣṇa do. śādhi māṁ tvāṁ prapannam.

How can I show my open-mindedness? And guru can never see the mind of the disciple, because mind is invisible and therefore the śiṣyaḥ has to physically express his openmindfulness. It has to be symbolised. Just like, when we want to show friendship which is an internal notion, we have got some form of physical greeting. In some cultures, they shake hands, in some cultures, they kiss, in some cultures they kiss both the cheeks, in some cultures, they smell the top of the head, in some cultures in South America I heard they have to show the tongue out. In some of the South American countries. OK. Therefore, these are all physical expressions of internal condition. In our culture, how do you express the open-mindedness? I have kept my notions away, I appreciate your knowledge. I want to receive your knowledge. How do you do that? prapannam. Śaraṅgathi. Falling at the feet of the person. Doing namaskāra is called prapatthi, śaraṅgathi . This is the third stage.

What are the first two stages, you forgot? Discovery of the problem. What is the second stage? Discovery of helplessness. And what is the third stage. Surrendering to someone and seeking the help and Arjuna is doing that tvāṁ prapannam. And who is Kṛṣṇa?

Therefore, Arjuna surrendered correctly. So when I say I am a disciple, I am a śiṣyaḥ, I surrender to you, what should the other person become. Automatically, the other person becomes a Guru. As I said before, a learned man can never decide whether he should be a guru or not. I might have knowledge, any knowledge. Mathematics, English it may be; suppose I want to become a teacher. How can I become? I can learn and become knowledgeable; but if I have to become a teacher, what I require. Minimum one student; one victim. Minimum one person is required asking me to teach what I know. Therefore, whether I become a Guru or not, depends upon whether the other person is ready to receive; giving is possible only when there is somebody to receive. Kṛṣṇa can never become Guru unless Arjuna decides to become a disciple. And now here, Arjuna chooses to become disciple and by way of that, Arjuna converts Kṛṣṇa into Jagatguru, Gītācārya. Pārthasārathy becomes jagat-guruḥ Kṛṣṇa. And that conversion is taking place, in the 4th line, I am surrendering to you.

And what should you do? After surrender also, there are so many things. So when I surrender to someone, it can be with different expectations. Even for getting a mantra upadeśaḥ, I can surrender. And I can become a disciple and the other person can become a guru and I can ask you please initiate me into some mantra or the other. Then the job is very simple. Do padāpūja and take the mantra from him. Just as in Upanayana. They cover and they give you Gāyathri mantra. Similarly the guru can give some mantra, Namaśivāya, Nārāyaṇāya, so many mantras are there. But in this particular context, when a person gives only mantra-upadēśaḥ; remember, ignorance is not removed by mantra-upadēśaḥ. Conflict is not resolved by mantra-upadēśaḥ. Mantra-upadēśaḥ can purify the mind, mantra-upadēśaḥ can give temporary quietitude of mind but when there is confusion; what we require is not mantra-upadēśaḥ but what we require is teaching, so that the other person gains knowledge of what is right, what is wrong, what is everything and therefore Arjuna here says a Kṛṣṇa what I want is not some mantra, what I want is śādhi? Śādhi means instruct me; give me knowledge; remove my ignorance. So remove my ignorance.

If Kṛṣṇa does not remove Arjuna's ignorance and only gives an incidental solution for the problem, then what will be Arjuna's problem? When another conflict comes, again Arjuna will have to run to Kṛṣṇa. This is the difference between advice and teaching. When I give an advice to a person, I am not making that person independent, I am only making the person dependent on me. Therefore that person thinks whenever I have got conflict, I will take advice from this person. So when the next conflict comes, I have to run to me, asking for advice. And later, even for simpler things, we will run asking for advice, whether to drink coffee or tea.

Therefore, when I advise a person, it is all OK temporarily, but in the long run, advising does not help, I am making that person dependent on me. Therefore, if I am a true well wisher, I should not be advising the person. I should teach the person how to take decision, so that tomorrow I may not be around and when there is a situation you must have that objectivity to look at the situation and take a decision appropriately.

Therefore, advice makes a person dependent, teaching makes a person independent. That is what the Chinese proverb says: They say when you give a poor man a fish; you are solving that day's problem but when you teach a poor man how to fish, then you are solving his problem for good. Thus when I give him a fish today, tomorrow also, he will come for another. Day after for another. Once you teach him how to fish, then the problem is permanently solved.

Similarly here also, Arjuna asks for the teaching. Now Kṛṣṇa is at last happy. He was itching for that only. He was looking for an opportunity to guide Arjuna, and now that is possible.

Verse 2.8

न हि प्रपश्यामि ममापनुद्याद् यच्छोकमुच्छोषणमिन्द्रियाणाम् ।
अवाप्य भूमावसपत्नमृद्धं राज्यं सुराणामपि चाधिपत्यम् ॥२.८॥

na hi prapaśyāmi mamāpanudyād yacchokamucchoṣaṇamindriyānām | avāpya bhūmāvasapatnamṛddham
rājyaṁ surāṇāmapi cādhipatyam ||2.8||

न हि प्रपश्यामि na hi prapaśyāmi I do not see (anything) यद् अपनुद्यात् yad apanudyāt that can remove शोकं मम śōkaṁ mama this sorrow of mine. उच्छोषणाम् इन्द्रियाणाम् ucchōṣaṇām indriyāṇām which weakens all my sense organs. अपि अवाप्य ऋद्धम् api avāpya ṛddam even after getting असपत्नं राज्यम् asapatnaṁ rājyaṁ an unrivalled prosperous kingdom भूमौ bhūmau upon earth आधिपत्यं च सुराणाम् ādhipatyam ca surāṇām and (even after getting) the kingship over the gods.

8. I do not see anything that can remove this sorrow of mine which weakens all my sense organs, even after getting an unrivalled prosperous kingdom upon earth and even after getting the kingship over the gods.

And here Arjuna confesses that his grief is so deep and intense that all the local solutions will not really work. We might have so many temporary worldly solutions but they cannot uproot the problem of innermost grief and therefore Arjuna says here yacchōkamucchōṣaṇamindriyānām. My grief is so intense that it weakens, it dries up all my organs. Sīdanti mama gātrāṇi mukhaṁ ca pariśuṣyati etc. he said and not only it is weakening my jñānēndriyās and karmēndriyās, still it is worse it is weakening my thinking faculty.

And can I forget this sorrow like poor children when they cry so much; can I do something and escape from the sorrow? Arjuna says: this is a deep one that there is no escapism possible from this. Therefore he says, mama na apanudyāt and this grief is not going to go away. I do not see any method, other than your teaching. I do not see any method of removing this sorrow and even if I am going to escape, it is again going to bounce back and avāpya bhūmāvasapatnamṛddham; I may choose to fight this war and I may win this war; I may kill all these people and I may become the emperor and I may get this kingdom, what type of kingdom; asapatnaṁ ṛddam rājyaṁ. I may get a rājyaṁ which is unrivalled and also ṛddam, prosperous.

Here Arjuna is indicating money cannot remove the problem of sorrow. As somebody said, money can buy bed, but not sleep. Money can buy food, but not hunger. Money can buy house, but not home. Money can buy people but not friends. So similarly, Arjuna here shows that grief cannot be solved by getting anyone of these things. Not only the prosperity of this world cannot solve the problem, surāṇām api ādhipatyam, even if I am going to become Indra, the ruler of the Gods, I do not think even that will solve the problem. So that means the problem of saṁsāraḥ, cannot be solved by worldly accomplishments. So this is the essence of this slōkā; the problem of saṁsāraḥ cannot be solved by worldly accomplishments. And this is what is indicated based on the upaniṣadic mantra:

तद्विज्ञानार्थं स गुरुमेवाभिगच्छेत् समित्पाणिः श्रोत्रियं ब्रह्मनिष्ठम् ॥ १२ ॥

parīkṣya lōkān karmacittan brāhmaṇō nirvēda māyānnāstyakṛtaḥ kṛtēna |
tadvijñānārthaṁ sa gurūmēvābhigacchēt samitpāṇiḥ śrōtriyam brahmaṇiṣṭam || 12 ||
Munḍaka. One II.12. ||

So every human being should discover this fact that the human problem cannot be solved by worldly-accomplishments, material-accomplishments; therefore he has to go to the spiritual goal of life. And going to spiritual goal is going to a guru. And this a person will discover after lot of experience. Some people discover at the 20th age; some people discover it at the 30th year; some people 40, 50th; discover at the 90th year and some people do not discover it even in the death bed; but in Hinduism no problem, because better luck, next birth. But one day, every one will have to come around to this. So therefore hey Kṛṣṇa, you have to help me. And with these words, Arjuna surrenders and then what happens?

No speech from Arjuna also; no speech from Kṛṣṇa also. Kṛṣṇa must be preparing or planning: How should I start? And Arjuna has become what is called 'mum'; therefore, Sañjaya comes:

सञ्जय उवाच ।
एवमुक्त्वा हृषीकेशं गुडाकेशः परन्तपः ।
न योत्स्य इति गोविन्दमुक्त्वा तूष्णीं बभूव ह ॥२.९॥

sañjaya uvāca |
ēvamuktvā hr̥ṣīkēśaṁ guḍākēśaḥ prantapaḥ |
na yotsya iti govindamuktvā tūṣṇīm babhūva ha ||2.9||

सञ्जय उवाच sañjaya uvāca Sañjaya said उक्त्वा एवम् uktvā ēvaṁ Having spoken thus हृषीकेशम् hr̥ṣīkēśam to Lord Kṛṣṇa गुडाकेशः guḍākēśaḥ Arjuna परन्तपः parantapaḥ the destroyer of enemies, उक्त्वा गोविन्दम् uktvā govindam to Kṛṣṇa न योत्स्य इति na yōtsya iti 'I will not fight' बभूव तूष्णीं ह babhūva tūṣṇīm ha and became quiet.

Sañjaya said:

9. Having spoken thus to the Lord Kṛṣṇa, Arjuna, the destroyer of enemies, said to Kṛṣṇa “I will not fight” and became quiet.

Parantapaḥ guḍākeśaḥ ēvam uktvā. So in this manner; in so many distinct words, Arjuna surrendered to Kṛṣṇa and said I am your disciple. Connecting the channel of communication. Communication channel is connected for the Gīta śāstra to transpire. Gīta teaching to transpire. Therefore, parantapaḥ, Arjuna; who is the destroyer of all his enemies. Great warrior. And guḍākeśaḥ. Sañjaya is indirectly telling that Arjuna is a qualified person. Guḍāka means sleep, and sleep represents the Tamō-guṇa. And guḍākeśaḥ; the one who is the master of Tamō-guṇa, that means one who is satva-guṇa-pradhāna.

Satva-guṇa-pradhāna means sādhana -catuṣṭaya-sampanna. In fact this is not for Vēdāntic learning, we require this for any learning, because the human intellect generally goes to two extremes, like pendulum. One extreme is it is highly rājasic and therefore it is a restless intellect wandering all over. Therefore, such a person will be sitting with a book in hand, or he might be sitting in front of a guru who talks, but for him to keep the mind open to these words for one hour is a very big task. it is like மனம் ஒரு குரங்கு manam oru kurangu. It is a like a monkey, highly restless mind. This is one extreme. Therefore there is no learning take place.

There is another type of mind which goes to the other extreme. It never travels outward; it is never restless or active; but it is the other extreme; what is that? It is tāmasic mind, it dozes off. So these are the two extremes that we face. Either the mind is asleep or it is highly extrovert. And sleep or dull mind is called tāmasaḥ, and highly extrovert is called rājasāḥ, and sātvic mind is a non-extrovert, wakeful mind. Wakeful, non-extrovert, receptive, and registering mind is called Sātvic mind and Sañjaya says Arjuna has got that mind. Guḍākeśaḥ and he uttered these words to him hṛṣīkēśam. hṛṣīkēśa, Lord Kṛṣṇa who is the Lord of all the organs, sense organs, the Lord of all the mind. That means the one who knows the mental condition of Arjuna. Therefore he knows how to tackle.

And having said these words; na yōtsya iti gōvindam uktvā. Thereafter he said I am not going to fight this war. Because I am not very sure whether fighting is right or wrong. At the same time, I am not going to run away from this battle also because I am also not sure whether running away is right or wrong. Therefore I am not going to do either of them and I want to wait and hear from you and thereafterwards decide properly. And Kṛṣṇa is going to teach 18 or 17 chapters and Kṛṣṇa will ask at the end of 18th chapter,

कच्चिदज्ञानसंमोहः प्रनष्टस्ते धनञ्जय ॥ १८॥ ७२.

kaccidajñānasammōhaḥ pranaṣṭastē dhanañjaya || 18.72 ||

At the end of the 18th chapter, he asks Arjuna did you listen. Is your confusion gone? I do not want to make a decision for you. You must be able to decide. Because I want to make you independent. Fortunately, Arjuna says

नष्टो मोहः स्मृतिर्लब्धा त्वत्प्रसादान्मयाच्युत ।
स्थितोऽस्मि गतसन्देहः करिष्ये वचनं तव ॥१८.७३॥

[naṣṭō mōhaḥ smṛtirlabdhā tvatprasādānmayā'cyuta|
sthitō'smi gatasandēhaḥ kariṣyē vacanaṃ tava||18.73||](#)

Hey Kṛṣṇa all my confusions are gone; I know what to do.

Now Arjuna says I do not know what to decide, neither am I going to fight nor am I going to run away. na yotsya iti govindam uktvā. So Gōvinda is another name of Lord Kṛṣṇa; it is a significant word, several meanings are given for this word. One meaning is the protector of the world. गाम् विन्दति gām vindati. One who protects the world; gōvindaḥ. Another meaning is the dharma śāstra meaning; because

धर्मसंस्थापनार्थाय सम्भवामि युगे युगे ॥ ४.८ ॥

[paritrāṇāya sādḥūnām vināśāya ca duṣkṛtām|
dharmasaṃsthāpanārthāya sambhavāmi yugē yugē||4.8||](#)

He takes Avatāra and protects the dhārmic people and destroys the adhārmic people, and thus protects the world. This is the dharma śāstra meaning.

There is a second philosophical meaning. In this गौ Go means the Upaniṣadic scriptures and vindaḥ means the one who can be grasped through the upaniṣads alone. So the Lord's true nature can never be known through any method., gōpihi vēda śabda prāmāṇēna ēva vidyatē, is alone known is called gōvindaḥ. And such a Lord he surrenders to and uktvā babhūva tūṣṇīm. He became silent.

And Sañjaya says: ha means looking back at the turn of events. Just a few minutes back only all the noises were raised from the sankhas, drums, etc. And now it has all become quiet from battleground to philosophy class. What a change. To indicate this change Sañjaya uses the word Ha, Wonderful indeed. Then what happened?

senayorubhayormadhye viṣīdantamidam vacah || 2.10||

प्रहसन् इव prahasan iva Smiling, as it were, हृषीकेशः hr̥ṣīkeśaḥ Lord Kṛṣṇa उवाच uvāca spoke इदं वचः idam vacaḥ these words तम् tam to that (Arjuna) विषिदन्तम् viṣīdantam who was grieving मध्ये उभयोः सेनयोः madhye ubhayōḥ sēnayōḥ in between the two armies, भारत bhārata Oh Dhṛtarāstra!

10. Smiling, as it were, Lord Kṛṣṇa spoke these words to that (Arjuna) who was grieving in between the two armies, Oh Dhṛtarāstra!

Sañjaya continues, Hey Bhārata, is Dhṛtarāstra, bharatha vāmsōdbhava hr̥ṣīkeśaḥ tam uvāca. Lord Kṛṣṇa accepted the offer and then Lord Kṛṣṇa taught Arjuna. And what did he teach. idam vacaḥ. idam vacaḥ means idam Gīta śāstram vacaḥ represents the entire Gīta śāstram which begins from the 11th verse, i.e. the next verse 2.11 and Gīta śāstram continues up to 18th chapter, 66th verse. 18th chapter has totally 78 verses; of this with the 66th verse, the Gīta teaching is over. And thereafter, it is concluding verses only. Therefore, actual teaching is from 2.11 to 18.66 and this Gīta śāstram here referred to by the word idam vacaḥ. Gīta śāstram Lord Kṛṣṇa taught to Arjuna. And where did he teach sēnayōḥ ubhayōḥ madhye, between the two armies.

So do not ask me how can he teach 18 chapters in between the armies. What were the Duryōdhanā people doing. So therefore do not ask those historical questions and since we are also not interested in those details, we do not know also. Whether actually it happened or the teaching may be brief, but Vyāsācārya might have presented, in a magnified expanded version. So we do not know the details and we are not interested in those details whether it is Vyāsācārya's figment of imagination also, we do not care, we only want to know this much, Arjuna discovered the problem, surrendered to Kṛṣṇa.

We should also discover the problem and surrender to a Guru. We will find a solution. Once you have understood that, throw away the story part like the sugarcane. Bite the sugarcane, take the juice and spit out the remnant. Similarly bite the entire first chapter, take the juice; what is the juice, discover the problem, discover the helplessness, surrender, learn and be free. Once you have got the juice, do not ask the question, whether Mahābhāratha war took place in 3103 bc or it is 5000. And all these details, you do not bother, Therefore, sēnayōḥ ubhayōḥ madhye uvāca.

More details in the next class. Hari Om.

Arjuna expressed his helplessness with regard to the solution. So Arjuna expressed his helplessness and surrendered to Lord Kṛṣṇa requesting him to teach and Lord Kṛṣṇa also accepts Arjuna as his disciple and decides to teach the Gīta -śāstram from the 11th verse onwards.

Thus we get the Gīta teaching beginning from the 2nd chapter 11th verse, which will go up to 18th chapter 66th verse, i.e. called Gīta Śāstram. Now hereafter Kṛṣṇa is no more Parthasarathy; he is no more a driver of Arjuna; he has become Arjunasya Guruhu; he has become Gīta chārya; and through Arjuna he has become even jagatguruhu. Krishnam vande jagatgurum. And therefore Sañjaya said sēnayōrubhayōrmadhyē viṣīdantamidaṃ vacaḥ; idam vacah means idam Gīta -śāstram. Now we will enter into the actual teaching.

श्री भगवानुवाच ।

śrī bhagavānuvāca |

aśocyānanvaśocatvaṃ prajñāvādāṃśca bhāṣase

gatāsūnagatāsūṃśca nānuśocanti paṇḍitāḥ ||2.11||

11. The Lord said: You are grieving for those who should not be grieved for. At the same imē, you are speaking the words of the wise people. Wise men do not grieve for the dead and for the living.

This is an important verse, because in this verse Kṛṣṇa condenses the entire Gīta Śāstram. So what is Bhagavat Gīta, if somebody asks, we can say this verse, this word contains the essence of the Gīta and what is the essence, if you put in English, the essence is: Ignorance is the cause of all human problems. And by ignorance we mean self-ignorance. So self-ignorance is the cause of all human problems and therefore self-knowledge is the only solution for all human problems.

This is Gīta sārah. If you put in Sāṅskṛit, ātma-ajñānam saṁsāra -kāraṇam; ātma-jñānam mōkṣaḥ-kāraṇam. Ātma-ajñānam is the cause of saṁsāraḥ, ātma-jñānam is the cause of mōkṣaḥ. Mōkṣaḥ means freedom from saṁsāraḥ. And this key statement alone, just like the keynote address, this key statement alone Kṛṣṇa is going to elaborate in the entire Gīta śāstram. That is why at the end of every chapter, we get

Brahma vidya means self-knowledge, i.e. the central theme of the entire Gīta Śāstram. No doubt so many other topics are discussed in the Gīta like karma-yōgaḥ; upāsana; japa; pūja, dhyānam; so many other topics are discussed but they are all to support the central theme; i.e. ātma vidya.

And how does Kṛṣṇa conveys this idea? He presents it beautifully, look at the 2nd line, the last portion. Panditaḥ na anuśocanti. Very beautiful statement. paṇḍitāḥ na anuśocanti. This statement means that wise people do not grieve in life. Paṇḍitāḥ a wise person. Wise with regard to what? Not with regard to any other thing, wise with regard to oneself; therefore wise people means people of self-knowledge. ātma jñāni is paṇḍitāḥ. And these wise people na anuśocanti, do not grieve at all. So that means what? We can easily derive the corollary, if wise people do not grieve, Arjuna is profusely grieving; therefore Arjuna is... fill up the blanks. Arjuna is otherwise. Arjuna is ignorant. Therefore, indirectly, without directly hitting Arjuna on the face, Kṛṣṇa is conveying through implication, i.e. Arjuna, you are ignorant. You are अशु acaṭu.

And through Arjuna, Kṛṣṇa is telling the entire humanity, if only they have some open-mind; are you grieving? Yes. Then you are dash dash. It is an universal question and universal answer. If anybody complains, I am sorrowful; I am depressed; I am upset, I do not have 'nimmadhi' if anybody tells, the problem is self-ignorance and if ignorance is the cause of sorrow, what is the remedy? What anti-biotic we should take for ignorance bacteria? Thank God! ignorance is only a bacteria and not a virus. For a virus, there is no remedy. That is why, if it is a viral fever, you know what is the remedy, if you take medicine, it will go in one week; if you do not take medicines, it will go in seven days.

That means, it makes no difference. Cold is caused by virus. Cold virus is 240 types. Since it is caused by virus, there is no cure. We are advanced so much medically, we do not have a remedy for cold. For virus, there is no remedy. If it is bacteria, anti biotics will work. And ajñānam, Thank God, comes under bacteria variety. Just comparing, therefore there is a medicine. What is the medicine for ignorance, only one medicine, and that is jñānam.

If there is darkness in the room, what is the medicine, what is the remedy for that? How many remedies are there? There is only one remedy; we have to bring in light in the room. And similarly, jñānāt ēva kaivalyaḥ. Can Karma, action give mōkṣaḥ? If you ask, we ask a counter-question, can action remove ignorance? We know that no action can remove any type of ignorance; whether it is physics, chemistry, English. If action can remove ignorance, we can abolish all schools and colleges. And what should you do? give lot of work to children, one day work, chemistry ignorance gone; next day work, botany ignorance gone. Will it happen? No. Therefore, karma cannot remove ignorance, meditation cannot remove ignorance, japa cannot remove ignorance. Therefore, the only remedy is jñānam.

And therefore, Kṛṣṇa emphasises that in the first slōka itself, paṇḍitāḥ na anuśocanti. Therefore, Arjuna you also become a wise person.

And the wise people do not grief with regard to whom? Kṛṣṇa says: gatāsūn agatāsūn ca. They do not grieve for the living ones; they do not grieve for the dead ones. These are the only two possibilities. They do not grieve for the living ones. Either we worry about living; or worry about the dead; all our worries are with regard to these two alone.

Not only people, but with regards to things also. So there was a person it seems, he was travelling in the train with his wife. OK, the story can be said the other way round also. They did not have water. Therefore, the wife was telling I am thirsty, I am thirsty, etc. Then he said that you wait, let some station come, I will get some water. Until then, be patient. He also was nagged, and he was so much worried. And at last a station came, and he got water and gave. And thought the problem is solved. Then, the train started and then she started again nagging. So what was the nagging? I was thirsty I was thirsty. What do you do? Therefore, either we worry about that which is gone or worry about that which is not yet gone. If these two things are taken care of, there is nothing else to worry.

And therefore, Kṛṣṇa enumerates these two gatāsūn, that which is gone, that is past, and agatāsūn, means that which is not gone; which means that which is present or future. Either with regard to the past or with regard to the present or future, na anuśocanti. The wise do not grieve.

And now what about you, Arjuna? You belong to which category? aśōcyān anvaśōcaḥ. You grieved for those people who do not deserve any grief. Aśōcyā means those who do not deserve grief or sympathy. That is Duryōdhana people, do not deserve any sympathy, because they are all adharmic people and at the same time, prajñāvādārṁśca bhāṣase, you are speaking the words of the wise people; you are pretending to be wise. You are presenting yourself as a wise person, by talking about kulakṣaya, kuladharmā, varṇa samkharaha, and all those problems you are talking about. So therefore, you are contradicting yourselves.

gatāsūnagatāsūṁśca nānuśocanti paṇḍitāḥ

Therefore what you require is jñānam.

Verse 2.12

न त्वेवाहम् जातु नासं न त्वं नेमे जनाधिपाः ।
नचैव न भविष्यामः सर्वे वयमतः परम् ॥२.१२॥

na tvēvāham jātu nāsaṁ na tvam nēmē janādhipāḥ |
nacaiva na bhaviṣyāmaḥ sarvē vayamataḥ param ||2.12||

अहं न आसम् aham na āsam I was not there जातु jātu in the past त्वं n tvam na You were not there इमे जनाधिपाः n imē janādhipāḥ na These kings were not there. नतु एव natu ēva (such an idea is) not at all true. वयं सर्वे vyaṁ sarvē “All of us न भविष्यामः na bhaviṣyāmaḥ will not exist अतः परम् ataḥ param in the future”. च न एव ca na ēva (this is) also not true.

12. “I was not there in the past. You were not there. These kings were not there” (Such an idea is) not at all true. “All of us will not exist in the future (This is) also not true.

So in the previous ślōka, Kṛṣṇa has condensed the Gītā -Śāstram. Now hereafterwards, he is going to elaborate. Now what is Kṛṣṇa's ultimate aim? That he should persuade Arjuna to fight this Mahābhāratha war. Because that is his immediate problem. Even though he has to solve his life's problem of saṁsāraḥ; there is a immediate problem also whether to fight this battle or not.

That is why, Dayānanda Swami uses two words, topical or incidental-problem and another is fundamental-problem. Arjuna is facing an incidental-problem. What is that? Whether to fight or not? It is incidental-problem because this problem is not there at all the time. Previously he has fought many battles, he never had this conflict. And not only that, this problem is not universal also; we do not have the problem of fighting a battle. We do not belong to any army or anything; though in the family we fight; that is a different thing. But there is Kṣatriya problem. That is incidental and there is another problem. This incidental-problem triggered a deeper problem and what is that deeper problem. That of attachment and sorrow. And this attachment and sorrow; they are not incidental but they are eternal problems; not only they are eternal, they are universal problem also.

So one is incidental and another is fundamental. Kṛṣṇa has to solve both the problems of Arjuna. And to solve this problem, Kṛṣṇa is taking three lines of discussion; a three-pronged attack to make Arjuna fight this war.

One is from philosophical-angle, He is trying to solve this problem. And the second is from ethical-angle, Arjuna! you have to fight. And the third is from worldly-angle also you have to fight. Thus, a three-tire argument; philosophical approach; ethical approach; and simple worldly or materialistic approach. And Kṛṣṇa wants to say whatever be the angle from which you see, you have to fight this war.

Of these three, which one is the main argument in the Gīta? The philosophical approach is the primary approach in the Gīta. Then the ethical approach is also given importance and the worldly approach is given least importance.

Why should Kṛṣṇa give importance to philosophical approach? Because Arjuna already knows Dharma-śāstra. Arjuna's problem was not ignorance of ethics; he is the brother of sākṣāt Dharmaputra; he is a learned person; he knows what is Dharma and what is adharma, he has studied dharma-śāstram; he has moved with Lord Kṛṣṇa; therefore Arjuna's primary problem is not ignorance of ethics; but his problem was self-ignorance. And therefore Kṛṣṇa's approach is philosophical. And therefore from verse No.12 up to 25, we get the philosophical approach, wherein Kṛṣṇa talks about the true nature of Arjuna; true nature of Bhīṣma, the true nature of Drōṇa, the true nature of Kṛṣṇa, i.e. ātma vidya. ātma tatvam is talked about, from verse No.12 to 25.

And thereafter Kṛṣṇa will come down and will say svadharmamapi cāvēkṣya na vikampitumarhasi; you need not go to philosophy at all; just analyse it from the standpoint of ethics; then also you have to kill these people. It is not ahimsa; ethical himsa, as good as ahimsa, it is like giving capital punishment for a criminal.

And if you are not able to appreciate ethics, then he comes down, at least for maintaining your name and fame, you have to fight. Because you have to maintain your reputation. For that you have to fight. This is the three angles.

Now we come to the philosophical angle; once we come to the ātma angle, we should remember all about ātma, which we discussed in Tatva Bōdha. So I am going to summarise the discussion, these verses will become clear.

In Tatva Bōdha, we asked the question Ātma kaḥ? And the Teacher said, आत्मा		कः?

स्थूलसूक्ष्मकारणशरीराद्ध्यतिरिक्तः	पञ्चकोशातीतः	सन्
अवस्थात्रयसाक्षी	सच्चिदानन्दस्वरूपः	सन्
यस्तिष्ठति स आत्मा

ātmā		kaḥ?
sthūlasūkṣmakāraṇaśarīrādvvyatiriktaḥ	pañcakōśātītaḥ	san avasthātrayasākṣī	saccidānandasvarūpaḥ	san yastiṣṭhati sa ātmā

So we started saying every individual is a conscious entity. Every living being is a conscious entity, which means there is consciousness in his body-mind complex. Which consciousness we do not find outside the body, like what? The table is inert, the mike is inert; the wall is inert; the fan is inert; but the individual is conscious-entity, which means there is consciousness in the body; there is sentiency in the body.

Now we asked the question; what is this consciousness which makes the living being sentient; alive, different from a table? Then we said consciousness is a separate entity, a formless separate entity comparable to the light principle. It is not light, but it is comparable to the light principle. Then we said this consciousness is not a part of the body, it is not a property of the body; it is not even a product of the body. Consciousness is not a part, not a property, not a product; but it is a separate entity which pervades and enlivens the body. Exactly like what? We took the example of light; light is not part of the body, light is not a property of the body; light is not even a product of the body. On the other hand, light pervades my body and makes this body visible. When you are seeing the hand, you are seeing the two things, one is the hand, another thing is the light. It is intimately on the hand, but it is not a property, a part or a product. This is the first lesson we learned.

Then we said that this separate entity called consciousness is not bound by the limitations of the body; just as the light is not bound by the limitations of the hand.

Means what? The hand has got spatial limitation, but the light pervading the hand is beyond the hand also. Hand has got boundaries but the light does not; the consciousness survives. What is the second lesson: Consciousness is not bound by spatial and time-wise limitations of the body. This is the second lesson.

What is the third lesson we learned in Tatva Bōdha? When the hand is removed from here, even though the light continues there, you are not able to see the light, because there is no reflecting medium. Light continues there, but when the hand is removed, it is not visible. So when there is hand, what light is there? Visible light. When there is no hand, what is there? No light, we should not say, no visible light; but there is light in invisible form. Similarly, as long as the body is there, the consciousness is there in manifest form, manifested as sentiency, life, etc. When the body is removed, consciousness is but not in a detectable form; traceable form it is not. So in Sāṅskṛīt, we use the word, vyakta caitanyam when the body is; avyakta caitanyam when the body is gone.

Therefore, consciousness is always there in vyakta form or in avyakta form. And this consciousness is called Ātma. And the body is called Anātma. So therefore, consciousness is separate from body; consciousness is not bound by the limitations of the body; minus the body, consciousness is in invisible form. And that consciousness is called ātma, the body is called Anātma. When I say body, you include the mind also. Body-Mind-Complex is Anātma.

From this come to know that every individual is a mixture of ātma and Anātma. Just as whenever I see anyone of you, I am seeing two things. What are the two things? I see you, I also am experiencing; which we generally take for granted, the light, which is pervading on you. So when I am reading the book, if it were midnight, I would not be able to read. Now I am able to read because there are two things, one is the book, and the another is the light pervading. But generally, we take the light lightly. But remember, do not take the light lightly because without light, you will not be able to see anything. Therefore, all of us are what? Ātma plus anātma.

Now, the next lesson we learned from Tatva Bōdha is that the spiritual sādhana consists of shifting our identification from the perishable anātma to the imperishable ātma. The whole aim of spiritual sādhana is shifting my identification from perishable anātma to the imperishable Ātma. So when I say I am the body, what is the consequence? I will have to accept that I am mortal. To say I am the body, I should be ready to accept mortality. But how many people are ready to accept mortality.

But many people will say, Swamiji would not mind mortality, I should die suddenly but the lingering death; going in the hospital with tubes in all holes, etc. Remember, as long you claim I am the body, I should be able to accept old age and mortality. If I do not want those two, there is only one way, I have to shift my identity from Anātma to Ātma.

And if I shift my identity to Ātma, what will be my attitude? I do not hate the body, not that one should hate the body, One can love the body, as an instrument for transaction, instead of loving the body as myself. I can continue to love the body as an instrument and as long as this instrument is available, I transact; even when the instrument is gone, there is no question of I going away.

Therefore the greatest advantage is shift from mortality to immortality. Asatō mā sat gamayā; tamasōmā jyōtirgamayā, Tamas means ignorance. Jyōthi means knowledge. Tamasō mā jyōtirgamayā means Oh Lord! Lead me from ignorance to knowledge.

And by that what happens to me? mṛtyō mā amṛtam gamayā. From mortality to immortality. In fact, we are not going from mortality to immortality. Mortality to immortality means, from identification with mortal body to identification with immortal 'I". Because mortal body is not going to become immortal. Therefore, that shift cannot take place. Mortal body cannot become immortal. Can the Self, Ātma become immortal?; Can Ātma become immortal? Ātma need not become immortal, because it is already immortal. Therefore what are you immortalising? Anātma cannot be immortalised. Ātma need not be immortalised. Then what are we doing? Only shifting our identification from the mortal body to immortal self. This is all the spiritual sādhana.

And for this shift to take place, the scriptures are giving some methods of thinking and if we channelise our thinking along that method, it will be easier for us to claim 'I am the Ātma'. And one of the most powerful method of thinking is called Dṛk Dṛśya Vivēka thinking. And what is that thinking. Whatever I am experiencing, I am not. Whatever I am experiencing, I am not. Why? Because whatever I am experiencing is an object of experience and I am the subject of experience. So whatever the eyes see is not the eyes themselves. The eyes see everything in the creation; but the eyes do not see what? The eyes do not see themselves. From that it is very clear, the eyes are ever the seer; never the seen. Therefore, the subject is always different from the object.

If you use this method, the world is an object of experience, arriving and departing. Therefore, I am not the world. What about the body? The body is only something I experience only in the waking state. It is not available in the dream for me; it is not available in sleep also. During waking state I use this body. During sleep state, I do not use this body. It is like undressing, removing the shirt and put. Similarly we are taking the body as it were and hanging. Hanging, do not mistake there! That is why you are not aware of the physical body; no physical universe; waking up, you use this body.

What about the mind? The mind also I experience during waking, during dream; once I go to sleep; the mind also I do not use. That is why there is no worry, no rāgaḥ, no dvēṣa, no kāmaḥ, no krōdhaḥ. In fact, everybody is a liberated person in sleep. Only problem is he gets up. So therefore, mind and its properties come and go; body and its properties come and go; the world and its properties come and go; I experience all of them, and therefore I am none of them. Then who am I? The experiencer-conscious principle.

It is this Ātma Kṛṣṇa is talking about. And in these verses, Kṛṣṇa reveals some of the important features of this Ātma.

The first one he reveals is that I am ever the subject, never an object of experience. In Sāṅskṛīt, apramēya. Apramēyaḥ means ever-the-experiencer, never-the-experienced-object. Like the camera. Camera will take the picture of everything but it will never be there in the picture. But even though it is not in the picture, do you require a proof for the existence of the camera. Do you require a proof for the existence of the camera? You do not require. Why because without camera, the picture will not be there. Similarly, I am seeing all these pictures, but one is missing in the picture. Who is that? I am the one. I am never in the picture, and but I am ever existent; I am never in the picture, but I am ever existent and therefore I get the name apramēyaḥ.

The second feature that Kṛṣṇa talks about is nityaḥ. Ātma is eternal. Sometimes in vyakta rūpam; sometimes in avyaktha rūpam. Remember the light, when the hand is, in visible form, when the hand is removed, in invisible form. So the second is nityaḥ;

The third feature he reveals is nirvikāraḥ; it is changeless. So even the hand is changing or moving; what happens to the light; light does not move, only the hand is moving. Now the light is manifest there; now the light is manifest here; but the manifestation comes here and there; but light as it is, is all pervading. When I see light, do not imagine the bulb. I am talking about the parkaśaḥ, not the dīpa. I am talking about the light that is pervading. So the third one is nirvikāraḥ; changeless.

The fourth feature that Kṛṣṇa talks about is sarvagataḥ. sarvagataḥ, all pervading. All-pervading means that which does not have boundaries; spatial boundary, again remember the example of light; there is boundaries for the hand, the light goes beyond the boundaries. Therefore, sarvagataḥ, sarvayāpi, etc.

Then the next two features to be taken together and which is one of the most important features which Kṛṣṇa repeatedly emphasises is Ātma is akartā, and abhōktā. It does not do any action; therefore it does not reap any result. It is exactly like the hand may do some action. it may touch a dirty thing, a dirty object and because of the touching action, the hand may become dirty; therefore touching makes the hand kartā, when it becomes dirty, it is bhōktā, even the hand is kartha and bhōktā, the light pervading the hand does not, is not a kartā and the light does not become dirty also.

If the hand touches a blade, it is kartā, and for touching that, what is the phalam, the fingers are cut; bhōktā hand is kartā, hand is bhōktā, but the light is neither kartā, neither bhōktā, it is akartā, abhōktā. Thus Apramēyaḥ; nityaḥ; nirvikāraḥ; sarvagataḥ; akartā; abhōktā. In English, it is ever-the-experiencer, never-the experienced. It is eternal, it is changeless, it is all pervading, it is not a doer, it is not an enjoyer. This is the essence of the Ātma Vidyā presented between the 12th and 25th verse.

In fact, Gīta starts with the toughest topic. In fact, if anybody enters into the topic, they will say, I do not want Gīta, etc. But afterwards, Kṛṣṇa comes down to ethical thing and other thing, and this topic of Ātma vidya will be repeated again and again in the later chapters also. And through this argument, what Kṛṣṇa conveys is: Arjuna therefore you are not killing Bhīṣma, the ātma. Who is Bhīṣma? The ātma, who is Drōṇa? ātma. Therefore Bhīṣma is not killed; Drōṇa is not killed and therefore, why do you worry about death of Bhīṣma; death of Drōṇa, etc. because none of them is killed.

And not only Bhīṣma and Drōṇa are not killed, you are not a killer also, because Arjuna, the ātma is akartā. therefore, cannot kill anyone. What is the conclusion? Arjuna, the ātma is not a killer, Bhīṣma, the ātma is not killed. Therefore, why are you crying?

This is the argument; philosophical-argument. And when we hear this argument, we will be disturbed. This seems to be very very convenient argument. Every criminal who kills people, he can go to the court and argue, what? I am not the killer, he is not killed; therefore why do you punish me?

Therefore Kṛṣṇa goes from philosophical angle to ethical angle, that Arjuna not only from philosophical angle I am talking; from ethical angle also, you need not worry. Because, normally killing is hiṁsaḥ and pāpam; you should worry about hurting other people, but in this case, you are not hurting for hurting sake; your aim is dharma saṁsthāpanam. Exactly like a judge giving capital punishment. should a judge worry about that? I have incurred a sin. In fact for giving that punishment, judge is only appreciated. Therefore, from ethical angle also, you can go ahead and then from worldly angle also. This is the discussion.

In the 12th verse, Kṛṣṇa points out that Ātma is nityaḥ. Essence of the 12th verse is Ātma is nityaḥ; Nityaḥ means what? Eternal. And what is definition of eternal. Kṛṣṇa says Eternal Ātma was in the past, Ātma is in the present and Ātma will be in the future also.

So trikālēapi tiṣṭati iti tat. In Tatva Bōdha we saw. In all the 3 periods of time, whatever that exists is Ātma. This is the essence of this 12th verse. The exact meaning we will see in the next class.

Hari Om.

015 CHAPTER 02, VERSES 12-15

ॐ

na tvēvāhaṃ jātu na'saṃ na tvam nēmē janādhipāḥ|

Arjuna surrendered to Lord Kṛṣṇa with grief and delusion, and also he has to resolve his conflict with regard to the Mahābhāratha war; whether it is proper to fight or not; especially when killing of his own kith and kin, as well as his Gurus is involved. And Kṛṣṇa is going to approach from three different levels.

As I said in the last class, the first is the philosophical approach; which is the highest and subtlest approach; and philosophical approach is discovering that Arjuna is none other than the ātma svarūpam. Similarly, Bhīṣma, Drōṇa, etc. are also ātma only. The philosophical approach is sarvam ātma mayam jagat. And Kṛṣṇa will point out that the ātma which is caitanya svarūpam, of the nature of consciousness is neither a kartā nor a bhōktā and therefore there is no question of anybody killing or anybody being killed.

It is just shifting the vision; when you look at a pot as a pot, you talk about the origin of the pot and the destruction of the pot. But once you shift the vision and learn to see it as nothing but clay, then from your vision, clay was there before; even in the middle with a particular shape clay alone is there, and even when it is broken, nothing is lost, because clay continues to be there.

Therefore from the standpoint of pot-vision, birth and death are there; from the standpoint of clay-vision, there is no birth or death.

In the ocean example, from stand point of wave-vision, there is the birth of a wave and there is a death; but from the standpoint of water-vision, nothing is born and nothing is gone. This is philosophical approach.

Training the mind to understand that there are no individuals except ātma. Ātma alone is there, which is neither born nor gone. And since there is no birth or death, there is no question of somebody destroying and somebody getting destroyed. And therefore there is no question of puṇyam or any question of pāpam and therefore, Arjuna you do your duty. This is the highest philosophical approach which requires a very very subtle refined, sharp intellect. And this is the discussion from verse No.12 to verse No.25.

And if a person is not able to arise to that level, because it is not that easy; then Kṛṣṇa says do not bother about ātma now. Let us assume that we are all individuals. Let us look at from the ethical angle. From philosophical level, Kṛṣṇa comes down to ethical angle, dhārmika-dṛṣṭi. First one, adhyātmika-dṛṣṭi. Second is dhārmika-dṛṣṭi. Arjuna, you need not even believe in ātma, but let us see whether it is proper to fight this war and Kṛṣṇa says it is proper because for the sake of dharma, a Kṣatriyā must be ready to give up his life. And for the sake of dharma, Kṣatriyā should take to war, if all other doors are closed. And therefore Arjuna, fight. So from philosophical angle, you can fight, and you should , from ethical angle you can and you should , and then Kṛṣṇa comes down further.

Arjuna you may not believe in ethics itself. You may not believe in Dharma and Adharma, you may not believe in puṇyam and pāpam; leave it aside. But as long as you are in society, aren't you conscious of your self-esteem; your social status, and how the other people think of you? That we are more bothered about that only. Sometimes, we wear certain dress, which we are uncomfortable, because it is the fashion and other people are wearing it. So you are bothered about your name and fame, self-respect and social status. From that practical angle, we call it laukika-dṛṣṭi; also you have to fight this war. Otherwise, you will get a very bad name. You will lose your honor. So these are the three angles; first we are dealing with the philosophical angle, from 12 to 25.

And as I said, in this context, Kṛṣṇa is talking about the nature of ātma. And how it is different from the physical body? And I told you in the last class, Kṛṣṇa defines ātma as caitanyam or consciousness principle; which is different from the body and which pervades the body. It is neither a product of the body, nor a part of the body, nor is it a property of the body. Consciousness is a separate entity like, remember the example of light, which is neither a product of the hand, a part of the hand or a property of the hand. Light is a distinct entity which pervades the hand and makes the hand bright and visible. Similarly ātma is the consciousness principle, which pervades the body, and makes the body sentient and alive.

Next Kṛṣṇa points out that this consciousness is not bound by the limitations of the body. Just as the light is not limited by or bound by the limitations of the hand; hand has got height and width limitation, but the light pervades the hand as well as it pervades outside the hand. And not only it is free from spatial limitations; if you remove the hand, or destroy the hand, the light continues to survive here; relatively speaking. Here current can go. I am not talking about that. Relatively speaking, even when the hand is removed, the light continues. Therefore, ātma nityaḥ.

But only one thing; when the hand is removed, the light will continue to be there; but that light will not be visible to our eyes. For seeing the light, you require a reflecting, a manifesting medium. Light is here, light is here, in-between also it is there; but in-between light, you do not see. Then how will you see it? Suppose I keep an object; now you are seeing not only the object, but you are seeing what? The light which pervades the object; and if I remove this clip, in-between the light is; but in Sāṅskṛit it is called avyaktam. Similarly, ātma is vyaktam as life in the body; in a dead body or after the body is dead, ātma is not available as life principle it is avyaktam. Thus, ātma is nityaḥ, one important idea he gives.

Next important idea he gives is ātma is akartā and abōktā; it does not do any action. Again taking the example when the hand is moving, motion is possible for the hand, because it is a limited entity. Therefore it can move; whereas the light which is already pervading this hall cannot move, because motion is possible only for a limited entity. So air can move because it is limited; earth can move, because it is limited; but can you talk about the movement of space. Space does not move. Then what about space travel. Be careful. When you talk about space travel, remember it is not 'space' is travelling; space-travel does not mean 'space' is travelling; space-travel means we are travelling in space. It is not travel 'of' space, but it is travel 'in' space. Space itself cannot travel; why, because it is already all-pervading.

Therefore, any action requires motion. Any motion requires limitation. Any action requires motion and any motion requires limitation. Even thinking-action requires thought-motion. Suppose throughout the class, your mind remains motionless, then what will be result? This is a blank cassette. Nothing has happened. If you have to get some benefit out of this class, you may not physically move, but your mind should have thought-motion.

Therefore, what I want to say is: action requires motion. Motion requires the limitation. Ātma being limitless, Kṛṣṇa says Ātma cannot do any action. Therefore, Akartā. And if Ātma is akartā, what is the next consequence? Whatever is akartā is also abōktā. Abōktā means what: free from the result of action. Because kartā alone will reap the karma-phalam. Otherwise what will happen? Somebodyelse will do action, and Somebodyelse will get the benefit. You keep on eating and the neighbor will be getting the benefit. The eater alone will get the benefit of hunger nivriṭhi. So what is the universal truth? kartā ēva bhōktā bhavathi.

Kartā ēva bhōktā bhavathi is a very important law and that is why scriptures say whatever we experience in our life, is our own karma-phalam. Do not blame anyone. Only the other people can serve as a medium for experiencing our karma-phalam. Just like the pipe is only a medium for water; what is the source of water? The tank. Similarly, any struggle, any problem created by anyone in the world, do not take it as their problem, my karma-phalam is coming through those people. Because of what law? kartā ēva bhōktā bhavathi. If Ātma is akartā, Ātma is abōktā. This is the 2nd point. Ātma Nithya. Ātma is akartā, abhōkta.

The third point Kṛṣṇa emphasizes is Ātma Nirvikaraḥ. It is free from all modifications, changes. Again, remember the light example, whatever changes happens with the hand, light does not undergo change and when the hand becomes dirty; light does not become dirty; hand gets bloodied because of some wound, light does not become so. Therefore all the changes can belong to the reflecting medium but not to the light. Similarly, the body goes through modifications. How many modifications?

We saw in Tatva Bōdha; asti jāyatē vardhatē vipariṇamatē apakṣīyatē vinaśyati. Kṛṣṇa puts it in simpler form. Childhood state, boyhood state, youth and old age. The body goes through, but the Ātma does not have all these. So this is called nirvikāraḥ.

And finally, and most importantly, Kṛṣṇa says: this ātma you can never see. You know why? It is never seen because it is the very seer; I-the-conscious-principle. Ātma is ever-the-subject and therefore it is never-the-object. In Sāṅskṛit, it is said Apramēya. Like what: the eyes can see everything, except the eyes themselves. The seer cannot be seen. The toucher cannot be touched. The phone can ring up all the numbers except your own number. If you have doubt, try now. You can dial, however costly the telephone may be. It will not get one number. So the rule is what? The subject can never be the object; seer can never be the seen; experiencer can never be the experienced. Therefore, I-the-Ātma am ever-the-subject, never-the-object. This is the essence of these 12-13 verses.

We are seeing the 12th verse, in which Kṛṣṇa says Ātma is eternal. And this Kṛṣṇa presents in a technical language. He could have simply said that ātma is eternal. But he uses in a roundabout way. He is mischievous. Therefore He continues to be mischievousness in Gītā also. So he says: ātma is eternal means, ātma was in the past, ātma is in the present, and ātma will be in the future also. Trikālē api tiṣṭati. Ātma was in the past, is in the present and will be in the future.

That also He does not directly say. Some more mischief He does. So He could have said ātma was in the past, is in the present, will be in the future; but He says, you cannot say ātma was absent. Can you guess? Instead of saying ātma was present, He used double negative, you cannot say ātma was absent in the past. Similarly you cannot say ātma is absent in the present. And you cannot say ātma will be absent in the future. This is what He said here. aham na asat. I, the ātma was not there in the past, I means ātma. I the ātma was not there in the past, iti na. You cannot say so. Two 'na's are there. Na aham, na asat. Two 'na's are there. Two negatives. So how should you translate? I was not there in the past, it is not so. Means what? I was in the past. Similarly, na tvam; means you were not there in the past, also is not true. That means, you were there in the past. Similarly, na janādhipāḥ. These kings were not there in the past is also not true. That means that these kings were there in the past; in short, ātma existed in the past.

Then what about future? He says, na caiva na bhaviṣyāmaḥ. We will not be there in future iti na. Again double negative. That also is not true. So how do you understand? We will not be in the future is not true, means we will be in the future. Kṛṣṇa does not talk about the present, because regarding the present we have no doubt. Are you here? I will consult my husband and tell, will you tell? Do not say that? So therefore our present existence is doubtless and therefore Kṛṣṇa does not discuss that; only in the past and future we have a doubt, and therefore Kṛṣṇa says, in the past and future also, the ātma existed. Therefore what is the essence? Ātma is eternal.

But I could not talk with you before your birth, if somebody asks; I have already told that without the body, ātma is in avyaktham and therefore we will not be able to interact. The interaction ends not because of the death of the ātma, but because of the death of the medium of interaction. Therefore while talking on the phone, suddenly the conversation stops, you say the phone is dead, you do not say, I am dead. Similarly, when a person dies, what is the dead?; Not the person. His telephone No. is gone. What is the telephone No? His body is the present phone no. You apply for a new number. You apply and apply no reply. Similarly, new body can come immediately or later; but the ātma continues. Sarvē vayamataḥ paraṁ. Sarvē vayam all of us also; ataḥ paraṁ hereafter also we will continue.

देहिनोऽस्मिन् यथा देहे कौमारं यौवनं जरा ।
तथा देहान्तरप्राप्तिर्धीरस्तत्र न मुह्यति ॥ २.१३ ॥

dēhinō'smin yathā dēhē kaumāraṁ yauvanam jarā |
tathā dēhāntaraprāptirdhīrastatra na muhyati || 2.13 ||

13. Just as the Self which is in this body (goes through) boyhood, youth and old age, so also (It goes through) the attainment of another body also. A wise man does not worry over such a thing.

So then what is birth and death? If I am eternal, what is birth and death? Here Kṛṣṇa says birth and death are nothing but changing the medium of interaction, viz., the physical body. And the physical body will have to be changed regularly, because it is subject to be worn out. So do not we change, whatever we use? The curtains have become old, let us put a new curtain. The dress has become old; therefore, let us change. As the things get worn out, initially we will wash, thereafterwards, dry-cleaning, repainting, etc. all methods; we try and ultimately we change.

Similarly, he says, we use this medium and after sometime we change. And how the body gets worn out. He explains. asmin dēhē, in this body there are 4 states of experience. At physical level, what are they, kaumāram, before that, bālyam, understood, childhood state; kaumāram, boyhood state, or girlhood state; yauvanam, youth and jarā, means old age.

Now when these four changes take place, do I change? Do I change my name? My identity is not changed even when the body changes. So I use same-I when I was in bālya, I studied in that school, and I studied the college, and I am now a youth, now I am yuvaḥ and soon I will become vṛddhaḥ. Even though the body changes, what is the constant factor? I, I, I continues. It is one single thread; and according to biology, after every so many years, all our cells are completely replaced. Body is completely changed. We have got a fresh body as it were. Only thing is that cell by cell it is changing and you do not feel the change; but it is completely changed. But even though the body is completely changed, I identify you as the same person who was there before. Even the hair has turned grey or not there at all. Teeth are gone, almost every organ is replaced. Kidney is replaced, even though the physical body changed, you are the same.

Kṛṣṇa says: This extend a little bit more and what is that extension? Having changed sufficiently you replace the body by another one. Therefore he says tathā dēhāntaraprāpti. Like changing the old cloth, you have changed the useless body and you have replaced this with another body. So you should only be happy, because you have not lost anything. It is like demolishing the old building and building a new one. Flat systems are coming. All independent houses are pulled down and converted into flats. Even though they all change, the enclosed space, no body demolished. That space is eternal, the walls appear and disappear. Similarly, the consciousness is like space, is the caitanyam, the body wall appears, the body wall is demolished. Therefore, Kṛṣṇa says, tathā dēhāntaraprāpti. Similar is the acquisition of another body.

Dhīrastatra na muhyati. Dhīraḥ means a discriminative person. And who is a discriminative person. The one who accepts the body as a temporary medium. And therefore he is objective. Such a person is called dhīra, is not courageous person, here dhīra means discriminative person, na muhyati, he is not deluded and therefore Arjuna in this war also Bhīṣma śarīram will go, the Bhīṣma the ātma will never go. Similarly the Drōṇa śarīram. Similarly Karṇa śarīram. So why are you grieving?

मात्रास्पर्शस्तु कौन्तेय शीतोष्णसुखदुःखदाः ।

कौन्तेय kauntēya Oh Arjuna ! मात्रास्पर्शाः तु mātrāsparśāḥ tu Sense organs and objects
शीतोष्णसुखदुःखदाः śītoṣṇasukhaduḥkhadāḥ which cause cold, heat, pleasure and pain आगमापायिनः āgamāpāyinaḥ are subject to arrival and departure. अनित्याः anityāḥ They are impermanent भारत bhārata Oh Arjuna! तितिक्षस्य तान् titikṣasya tān Endure them.

14. Oh Arjuna! Sense organs and objects which cause cold, heat, pleasure and pain are subject to arrival and departure. They are impermanent. Oh Arjuna! Endure them.

Here Kṛṣṇa says that just as you understand and accept the nature of ātma, similarly you should understand and accept the nature of anātma also. Because wisdom consists in accepting the nature of a thing. And why do you accept the nature of a thing. Because there is no choice; because the nature of a thing can never be changed. The nature of a thing can never be changed. As somebody said, he did not like onion. Therefore he was speaking about onion and its specific smell. He says,

कर्पूरदूलि रछितालवालहः कस्तुरिक कुंकुमलिप्त देहः |
सुवराण कुंभैः परिछियमानः निजं गुणं मुञ्जति नो फलाण्डु ||

karpuradūli rachitālavālah kasturika kuṅkumalīpta dēhaḥ |
suvaraṇa kumbhaiḥ parichiyamānaḥ nijam guṇam munjati nō phalāṇḍu ||

He wanted to change the smell of phalāṇḍu. Means onion. What did he do? He made karpuradooli, camphor powder, he made a small bound surrounded by camphor, and kept the onion in the middle, and over that, kasthurika kumkuma liptha dēhaḥ; kasthuri, you know the musk, and saffron and all those things he just applied over; powerful vāsana dravyam, you know; then suvaraṇa kumbaihi parischiyamānai, he got scented water, perfumed water and washed the onion with that water. Like the rudrābhiṣēkam, he poured. And after 3 hours, removed all those things, took it and put it in the noose, how does it smell, onion. Similarly, the nature of a thing cannot be changed.

Why it is so, why do you say the nature of a thing cannot be changed? Very simple, what cannot be changed, is called the 'nature of a thing'. OK. Do not ask why the nature cannot be changed. What cannot be changed is called nature. And therefore, an intelligent person never struggles to change the nature which is a sheer waste of time. On the other hand, what does he do, instead of wasting the time, struggling to change the nature, he learns to change his attitude towards that. Because the nature of a thing cannot be changed, but our attitude towards that can be changed.

And in what way we can change the attitude? To change the attitude is "acceptance". I accept the nature of the body. This is the upāsana. So I have to repeat at least that only then, it become a new orientation. It should become natural to me. Because if you analyse most of our problems are: not accepting the nature of a thing. So when the summer comes, sun will be hot or cold? And you will see hereafter people will be talking, summer has started summer has started, what do you get out of it, you feel more hot. So therefore, summer will be hot. And you will know as the class goes, you will know the effect of summer also, and at that time, what do you do? Learn to accept the glory of the Sun. What a Bhagavat-srṣṭi. 9 crores miles away. Bhagavān has created an energy source, entire humanity is not able to find out a source of energy. They are trying all kinds of fuel, which pollutes. They are not able to find a replacement. Bhagavān has created a source of energy, year after year, 9 crores miles away, it lights up the whole earth. How much current charge it will be. So appreciate and when the sweat comes, learn to appreciate the body's thermostat, which is another wonderful phenomenon, because if that sweating is not there, it will be terrible. Therefore, sweating is a wonderful gift of Lord. The sun is another gift of Lord. Therefore, learn to change the attitude towards sweating; attitude towards the heat of the sun; and similarly, later, attitude towards some of the behavior of the people around, you have to extend, first you take inert things, thereafterwards the most difficult thing is what, the live beings around and among the live beings, the most difficult is the so-called human beings. Until I learn to accept, the problem will be there; therefore Kṛṣṇa says, Hey Kauntēya, Arjuna, know this fact and never show resistance.

Resistance to facts is sorrow. Definition of sorrow is what? Resistance to facts. When the resistance increases, even in the electricity when the wire resistance increases, the heat will also increase. It gets heated up. Therefore he says, mātrāsparsāḥ tu. Mātrā means the sense organs, (not tablets); mā, means to know, to experience is mā, pramānam has come from that, thra means instrument. So Mātrā means instrument of experience, nīyathi abhihi iti mātrāḥ, and what are the instruments of experience? the pañca jñānēndriyaṇi, the five sense organs, so they are there, and outside sparsā; sparsā means sense objects, objects of contact; sprśantē iti sparsāḥ. So whether you like it or not, there are sense organs, there are sense objects and they are going to interact. So even if with regard to eyes; you can close the eyes. But with regard to ears, you cannot plug. They are open. Therefore, you hear so many comments, and similarly, you get smell, certain things you can close, many of the organs you cannot close and therefore sense organ and sense objects will interact. You cannot avoid interaction. Like some people want to meditate and go to the caves. There he can avoid the local road noise but there will be some insects will be there, some mosquitoes will be there ringing in the ears; what can you do? you cannot escape anywhere. So what is the best method? Learn to live with situations, rather than run away. When you run away from the situation, your resistance and strength will come down; whereas when you face the situation, your resistance capacity will increase. So that is why they give inoculation, cholera injection, typhoid injection. So when they are injected, your resistance will increase.

Similarly, if you face the situation alone, we can strengthen our mind and therefore Arjuna accept them. And what will they give? śītoṣṇasukhaduḥkhadāḥ. They will give heat, or cold, pleasure or pain, etc. That is the opposite experiences, they are bound to give. So the whole life is a series of opposite experiences. If mānam comes, apamānam will come. If saṁyōgaḥ takes place, there will be viyōgaḥ. If there is growth, there will be decay. If there is gain, there will be loss. Life is a series of that. This is the nature of anātma.

And āgamāpāyinaḥ; āgamāpāyi, they are all subject to arrival and departure. They are subject to arrival and departure and therefore mentally be ready to welcome them, when they come; agatē svagatam kuryāt, gacchantam na nivārayat. When they come, be mentally prepared to welcome; when they go, be mentally prepared to send them off.

So certain things we are prepared to welcome, and it should go on coming. Certain things we want to send off permanently, but they keep coming. Therefore, be ready for both. āgamāpāyinaḥ anityāḥ; anityāḥ means that they are all impermanent. So in the previous slōka, he talked about nityā ātma, here he is talking about anityāḥ anātma. Accept both. tān titikṣasya bhārata. May you develop endurance. May you develop inner strength. Both physical and mental. May you increase your physical immunity and may you also increase your mental immunity. More than physical, mental immunity must be stronger.

यं हि न व्यथयन्त्येते पुरुषं पुरुषर्षभ ॥
समुदुःखसुखं धीरम् सोऽमृतत्वाय कल्पते ॥ २.१५ ॥

yaṃ hi na vyathayantyētē puruṣaṃ puruṣarṣabha |
samaduḥkhasukhaṃ dhīraṃ sō'mṛtatvāya kalpatē || 2.15 ||

पुरुषर्षभ puruṣarṣabha Oh Arjuna! सहः पुरुषं यम् sahaḥ puruṣaṃ yam That person whom एते ētē these (sense organs and objects) न व्यथयन्ति na vyathayanti do not disturb, समुदुःखसुखम् samuduḥkhasukhaṃ who is equanimous in pain and pleasure धीरम् dhīraṃ and who is wise हि hi alone कल्पते अमृतत्वाय kalpatē amṛtatvāya becomes fit for immortality

15. Oh Arjuna! That person whom these (sense organs and objects) do not disturb, who is equanimous in pain and pleasure and who is wise alone becomes fit for immortality.

So Kṛṣṇa says this faculty of endurance, of inner strength which is called titikṣa, is very important. It is called titikṣa. Mental endurance. Not to react immediately, not to get irritated immediately, not to punish the other person immediately; because when the endurance is very less, we get irritated very quickly. And the irritation alone becomes anger, anger alone becomes hiṃsā. So ultimately, lack of endurance alone is the cause of all the later problems. So you can see at home sometimes. When somebody calls another person, the children, you come, they might be doing something and they might not come immediately, and some people get irritated. Even that one minute, in fact one of the problems that we face in 21st century is that our patience is fast eroding. That you can see in the traffic signal, when the red comes, this person. After it is one minutes or two minutes he is not able to bear; the restlessness is shown all over; and he is not able to bear and banged. Restless and after some he goes into the middle of the road. And once the green signal comes, you can find that all the people are honking. Because first person has to start, it will take a half a second. Then cumulative effect; there is the second person, it will be half a second plus little more; by the time it comes to me, the 4th line, it will take another 2 seconds extra. But I do not have the patience. So therefore, the lack of patience is the cause of irritation and irritation leads to anger, anger leads to himsā, hurting our children, hurting other family members, and therefore Kṛṣṇa says titikṣa is an important virtue. And he says, without titikṣa, ātma-jñānam will not come.

In fact, even for ātma jñānam some patience is required. He wants, any crash programme Swamiji? Instead of coming class after class and slowly learning. Slowly you are taking. I will come to your house, does not matter, immediately you should open the head and put the ātma jñānam and immediately I should walk out. Even for ātma jñānam, there is no patience.

Kṛṣṇa says without patience, (in the olden days, when the śiṣyaḥ goes to the gurukula, he will tell that, spend some time; tending the cows; cutting the firewood and thereafter, if you deserve, I will give. If the student does not have the patience, I do not want, I will walk out, he will be the loser. Therefore any deep study requires certain mental makeup. Therefore Kṛṣṇa says samu-duḥkha-sukhaṃ. One who is calm and tranquil, he alone is fit for this knowledge.

Hari Om.

Lord Kṛṣṇa wants to solve Arjuna's problem of sorrow and confusion and also Kṛṣṇa wants Arjuna to fight this dharma yuddham. And therefore He is arguing from various angles to make Arjuna fight this war. And His discussion is at 3 levels; the first is the philosophical level, which we can call ātma-anātma vivēka; and then Kṛṣṇa comes down to ethical level of Dharma-Adharma-vivēka, and finally Kṛṣṇa comes to loukika level, worldly angle and Kṛṣṇa points out that from any angle you see, you have to fight this war.

Of these three levels, Kṛṣṇa is now discussing the first and topmost. i.e. from the 12th verse to the 25th verse, the philosophical angle. Here Kṛṣṇa is talking about the nature of ātma, which is the real nature of everyone. And Kṛṣṇa's contention is: when you take the real nature, that Ātma is akartā. So therefore, it does not do any action. So therefore, Arjuna, as Ātma, you are not fighting this war, you are not killing any one at all. And similarly, Bhīṣma, Drōṇa etc. are all Ātma svarūpam and they are not killed by you. Remember the example when you look at a wave in the ocean, from the standpoint of the wave, it has got birth as well as death but if you see the essential nature of the wave, i.e. water, from the standpoint of water, it is neither born nor it gets destroyed. If you look at the desk, as desk, it has got a beginning and it has got an end. But once you learn to look at it as a wood, then even when the desk is cut into pieces, the wood continues to exist. Therefore, ātma dṛṣṭya, Arjunaḥ akartā and Bhīṣma abhōktā, there is no killer, there is no killed relationship. This is the philosophical angle and for this purpose, Kṛṣṇa is talking about the nature of ātma. In the 12th verse, Kṛṣṇa said Ātma is eternal. Eternal means it was in the past, it is in the present, and it will be in future also. Whereas when you look Anātma level, the anātma is subject to change, modification, etc.

मात्रास्पर्शस्तु कौन्तेय शीतोष्णसुखदुःखदाः ।
आगमापायिनोऽनित्यास्तांस्तितिक्षस्व भारत ॥

mātrāsparśāstu kauntēya śītōṣṇasukhaduḥkhadāḥ|

anātmā, i.e. body-mind-complex is ephemeral. You cannot expect an immortal body. So once upon a time, they were talking about a medicine called kāya kalpam and this is a very difficult process of making that medicine; 100 times you have to make the paste, and again dissolve, and you have again dry and again dry and again do, and once that medicine is made, it is supposed to make the body immortal. Called Kāya kalpam. Making the body immortal.

Now whether that medicine will work or not, how do you know? Very simple, the authors of those medicines; they are dead and gone. OK. We do not have to try. If that medicine is going to work, who will be the first person to make use of, the discoverer himself, he is already out. You can go on making the paste, there is no method of immortalising the body. In America, I read some views that there are some people who still believe science may advance enough to make the body immortal. And therefore what they are doing is: after death, they do not want to dispose of the body. Suppose a new injection is discovered, and you give the injection, body comes to live, and live eternally. Why should I lose that person? They are spending lakhs of lakhs of dollars to preserve that dead body so that one day the science will advance, you can put the injection and that person will come back and live eternally. Kṛṣṇa says: do not waste your time; money, energy; this body has come out of panchabhūtās, it will have to go back and better it goes back, so that the next generation can come and comfortably live; otherwise imagine, we all continue, the new generations keep on coming. And who is this person, 12th century person; so the back and back round and round, but still that fellow survives; what will happen, if things happen like this. And therefore anātma is ephemeral, anātma has to be ephemeral; do not try to change the fact. what should I do? Change your attitude.

And what is the change in attitude? Accept that the anātma has to go. This is not only with regard to the body, but with regard to everything in creation. An experience comes, it has to go. So therefore, āgamāpāyinō'nityāstāmṣtitikṣasvabhārata. titikṣasva, forbearance. Endurance. The mental strength to withstand the loss.

And if the mental strength is not there, what could we pray to the Lord? I cannot ask the Lord to change the law for my convenience. If everyone asks the Lord to change the law, what will happen, God will get confused. Because, each one will ask, his own convenient law. Therefore, never pray to the Lord to change the law. Pray to the Lord to Lord for the inner strength, titikṣa; sahana śakti, so that I can accept the arrivals, I can also accept departures. And that is called titikṣa. And Kṛṣṇa says without titikṣa, self-knowledge is not possible, mōkṣaḥ is also not possible. Therefore, He said in the 15th verse,

समदुःखसुखं धीरम् सोऽमृतत्वाय कल्पते ॥२१५॥.

[yaṁ hi na vyathayantyētē puruṣaṁ puruṣarṣabha|
samaduḥkhasukhaṁ dhīraṁ sō'mṛtatvāya kalpatē || 2.15 ||](#)

That puruṣaḥ is dhīraḥ. That human being is really an intelligent one, a discriminative one. dhīraḥ in this context, not courageous one; but discriminative one; and what is discrimination; as somebody made a beautiful prayer,

Oh Lord, Give me the strength to change what can be changed;
Oh Lord, Give me the strength to accept what cannot be changed; and
Oh Lord, Give me the wisdom to know the difference between what can be changed and what cannot be changed.

Otherwise what we will do? What can be changed; we will accept. There are many things for which remedies are available; so where remedies are available, do not blindly accept the situation, put forth your efforts and change. And what do people do? Where things cannot be changed, there they put forth effort. Where it could be changed, they blindly accept. And therefore, what is more important, the discrimination to know what can be changed; and what cannot be changed. And what is the fact that cannot be changed. Changing-nature of the world cannot be changed. The changing nature of the world cannot be changed. And therefore dhīraḥ means a discriminative person who knows what to accept and what not to accept.

And because of this acceptance, what is the benefit that he finds? ētē na vyathayantē. ētē means mātrāsparśāḥ; in short, the changing world does not disturb him. ētē refers to mātrāsparśāḥ, mātrāsparśāḥ refers to the changing world of body, senses, mind, sense objects. They do not disturb him. na vyathayantyētē. They do not disturb his mind, irritate his mind. Why they do not irritate? Because when a beautiful rose blooms, he appreciates the rose; It is not that he is blindly in the name of philosophy, he doesn't turn away. He appreciates the beautiful rose, as even it blooms. And when the rose fades, withers and falls off, he accepts that also, without complaining rose is fading, rose is fading; rose has to fade. Similarly, any situation, arrival also he welcomes, departure also he does not resist, therefore samaduḥkha towards favourable and unfavourable situations'; he is samaḥ, equanimous. And therefore na vyathayantyētē. And such a person enjoys a mind which is fit for vēdāntic enquiry, philosophical enquiry. A disturbed mind cannot study Vēdānta. It will be worried about the happenings around. It will have so much complaints. A complaining mind, an irritating mind cannot probe into the truth of oneself.

Therefore, Kṛṣṇa says: saḥ, such a tough mind, which has got a shock absorber in itself. Like the road. When your vehicle is thrown up and down because of poor road, there are two options. One is you have to repair all the roads on which your vehicle travels. All potholes you have to close. Where? Whichever road you are travelling. This is one method. And there is another method. What is that? Make, fit a shock absorber in your vehicle. Tell me, which is economic. If you are going to cover the pot holes, next day, again it comes. And is it practicable to smoothen all the roads.

Similarly, can you change every person around you? Can you change the neighbour? Can you change the auto-driver? Can you change the bus conductor? Can you change so many people? You cannot change their character; their behaviour, but you can do one thing, put a shock absorber in your mind, so that, not that the car will not shake, but it is not that violent. Mind will react, but it is manageable reaction. We are not talking about total freedom from reaction. We say that manageable reaction. And what do you mean by manageable reaction? Where the intensity is lesser and anger is there. But it is not that of breaking things; shouting this and that. But the intensity is also less and duration also is less.

uttamē kṣaṇakōpasyāt, madyamē ghaṭikā dvayam, adamēsyāt ahōrātram, pāpiṣṭhē maraṇāntakāḥ

In the uttama puruṣa, evolved person, anger will come, but kṣaṇakōpasyāt. It will come in a moment and he will recover. madhyamē ghaṭikā dvayam. The mediocre person it will last for 1-1/2 hours. Roughly. adamēsyāt ahōrātram; the lowest person it is there throughout the day; angry with children, the husband is shouted at; or angry with the husband, the children get into trouble. you show the anger somewhere else, wherever it is possible. pāpiṣṭhē maraṇāntakāḥ; in the lowest of the lowest, the anger continues: how long; up to death. Therefore titikṣa does not mean total freedom from reaction, titikṣa means the capacity to manage one's own emotion and such a mind can quietly study vēdānta. And therefore saḥ; such a person, kalpatē, alone is qualified; for what? amṛtatvāya; amṛtatvam means mōkṣaḥ or Self-knowledge. He alone is fit for Ātma jñānam. He alone is fit for mōkṣaḥ.

Verse 2.16

नासतो विद्यते भावो नाभावो विद्यते सतः ।

[nāsatō vidyatē bhāvō nābhāvō vidyatē sataḥ |

विद्यते न भावः vidyatē na bhāvaḥ There is no existence असतः asataḥ for the unreal विद्यते न अभावः vidyatē na abhāvaḥ There is no non-existence सतः sataḥ for the Real अन्तः antaḥ The truth उभयोः अपि अनयोः ubhayōḥ api anayōḥ of both these तु दृष्टः tu drṣṭaḥ is indeed known तत्त्वदर्शिभिः tattvadarśibhiḥ by the seers of Reality.

16. There is no existence for the unreal. There is no non-existence for the Real. The truth of both these is indeed known by the seers of Reality.

Kṛṣṇa has mentioned Ātma is eternal, nityaḥ. In this verse, which is a very terse verse, very technical verse, one of the deepest verses of the Bhagavad-Gīta. In this Kṛṣṇa says Ātma satyaḥ; anātma. Ātma is real; anātma is unreal; Ātma has independent existence, anātma has borrowed existence. OK Let us try to understand this verse and then I will go to the word meaning.

Every object has got its own intrinsic nature; its own true nature, which we call svarūpam. It is its real nature, intrinsic nature, true nature. And also every object can have certain nature which is borrowed from outside and that borrowed nature, we will call as incidental nature. Two words, intrinsic-nature and incidental-nature. In Sāṅskṛīt, svābhāvika dharma; agantuka dharma. Svābhāvika dharma means one's own dharma, agantuka dharma, one that is borrowed, incidental nature. And whatever is intrinsic nature will be there all the time. Whatever is intrinsic nature will be there all the time, whereas whatever is incidental nature, that will be only temporary. So intrinsic nature is permanent; incidental nature is temporary.

I will give you an example. Suppose we have kept a vessel with water and we want to make hot water. So there is fire, over that there is vessel; and within that vessel, there is water; and imagine you light up the fire. Now gradually, the vessel becomes hot; and because of the contact with the vessel, water becomes hot. Suppose within the water you put something, some vegetable or anything you put, that vegetable also becomes hot. Now the vegetable is hot because not because of its nature, but it is in contact with the water. Water is hot because the vessel is hot. The vessel is hot, because fire is hot. Fire is hot because it vessel is hot. No. Fire is hot because it is Fire. So therefore, vegetable enjoys heat, as an incidental property, borrowed from water. Water enjoys heat as incidental property; because it is borrowed from vessel. Vessel enjoys the heat, as incidental property, because it is borrowed from fire. Fire enjoys heat, as intrinsic property, as its very nature. So therefore, heat in fire is intrinsic; whereas heat in the vessel, is incidental; heat in water is incidental, heat in the vegetable is incidental; heat in coffee, if it is intrinsic, no flask is required. How nice it would have been. Any time you make coffee, it is hot hot, and no cold coffee would be possible.

From this we got some corollary, whatever is incidental is borrowed, and therefore it is subject to loss also. Whatever is incidental, is borrowed and therefore subject to loss; subject to nāśaḥ. Āgamāsyat apāyi. And that is why the vegetable is hot as long as it is in contact with hot water. You take it out, it becomes cold. Loses its heat. Similarly, water is hot as long as it is in contact with the vessel. If you remove the water out, it has lost, because heat is incidental. Remove the vessel from the stove, the vessel becomes cold. Remove the fire, from there to another place; Siberia, there the temperature is supposed to be minus 60 to minus 80 in winter in Siberia. Fire will be hot or cold? It will be hot? Why does not the fire lose its heat? Because, heat is the intrinsic nature of fire.

So through all these stories, what is the law that we have learned? What is incidental property is subject to arrival and departure. What is intrinsic property is not subject to arrival and departure. In Sāṅskṛīt, svābhāvika dharma na āgacchati, na gacchati. For certain important philosophic topic. Now using this principle, what principle ~ whatever is incidental will be subject to arrival and departure whatever is intrinsic will not come and go.

Now, let us take anything that is perishable in the world. Any perishable thing, impermanent thing in the world; and an impermanent thing enjoys existence for some time. What is an impermanent thing? Whatever exists for a limited period of time is called impermanent. This body is called impermanent because between the date of birth and the date of death, it exists. Before the date of birth, the body did not exist and after the date of death, which do not want to think of now, but which is a fact, after the date of death, this body will not exist.

From this we can nicely say, every impermanent thing enjoys existence for some time. Every impermanent thing enjoys existence for some time. "Sometime" means what? Between the manufacturing date and (in the medicines) expiry date, and before and after, it does not enjoy existence. All impermanent things enjoy existence for sometime but not before or later. If that is true, now let us apply that law.

All these impermanent things enjoy existence, is it an incidental property or intrinsic. If it is an intrinsic property, it would have enjoyed existence all the time, just as the fire enjoys heat all the time. The very fact that impermanent things enjoy existence for some time indicates that it is not intrinsic property; but it is what? Incidental property.

Therefore, what is the important conclusion? All impermanent things do not have existence as their nature. All impermanent things do not have existence as their nature; then what existence they have; they have got borrowed existence for some time. Like the make-up beauty. You will understand that better. The make-up beauty is natural beauty or borrowed beauty? Make-up beauty is made up beauty. How long will it be there? As long as the make-up is there, you go to the person's house without warning and see the original condition at home. You will not recognise them. Teeth itself is not there. It all starts from there.

Kalidasa in Śakuntalam, while describing Śakuntala, he says:

सरसिजमनुविद्धं शैवलेनापि रम्यं
मलिनमपि हिमांशोर्लक्ष्म लक्ष्मीं तनोति ।
इयमधिकमनोज्ञा वल्कलेनापि तन्वी किमिव हि मधुराणां मण्डनं नाकृतीनाम्॥१८॥

iyamadhikamanōjñā valkalēnāpi tanvī kimiva hi madhurāṇām maṇḍanam nākṛtīnām||18||

kimiva hi madhurāṇām, maṇḍanam nākṛtīnām. Śakuntala was only with the barks there. Not the silken ones from Nalli or with the ornaments and other things from Kancheepuram. All those things were not there and then he says, real beautiful body, those things are not important, they alone add to the beauty, just as the lotus is beautiful even when it is surrounded by lushy water. Anyway, let us come back to our topic.

Any impermanent thing does not enjoy existence as its real nature. So it enjoys what? Borrowed existence. And that is called Mityā. Mityā or unreal. So the definition of Mityā, the definition of unreality, is anything that does not enjoy existence as its real nature, but it enjoys existence only by borrowing; whereas whatever is permanent enjoys existence as its ~ what nature? intrinsic nature. That means it does not borrow existence and that is defined as Satyam.

So Satyam is a thing with intrinsic existence. Mityā is a thing with borrowed existence. Satyam is a thing with intrinsic existence; mityā is a thing with a borrowed existence.

Now to convey this idea, we will take an example. There is a lump of clay. The lump of clay is converted into a pot. Until now, if somebody asks whether the pot is there or not, what did I say; there is no pot. And thereafterwards, the clay was shaped into a pot, now what do you say? Now there is a pot. And thereafterwards, imagine again you break the pot. Now what happens? The pot loses its existence. Now you say that there is no pot. Now pot enjoyed a temporary existence. Is it intrinsic or borrowed? Pot enjoyed a temporary existence, and it was a borrowed existence. Borrowed from where? Borrowed from where? From the clay. Clay alone lends existence to the pot. Whereas clay enjoys existence, when? Clay was existent; before the arrival of the pot, clay was there even when the pot was there, and clay will continue to exist even when pot is broken. Does clay borrow existence from pot? Clay does not borrow existence from pot, whereas pot borrowed existence from clay. So therefore, clay is permanent and clay enjoys intrinsic existence. Pot is impermanent and pot enjoys borrowed existence. Therefore Clay is Satyam pot is Mityā. This is vēdāntam. Vēdāntam is over.

The whole vēdānta is trying to understand these two alone. Swamiji used to tell, somebody studied vēdānta for 25 years and he came and said, Swamiji I understand everything in Vēdānta. 2 ideas are not clear to me. Rest are all clear. What are those two ideas? I do not know satyam and I do not know what is mityā? All other things I understood. Whole Vēdāntam is only this. Whole creation is ātma plus anātma. Ātma is satyam and anātma is mityā. Om Tat Sat. Vēdānta is over. If at all books and books are written it is only to convey this idea more and more and more clearly.

And therefore, what is permanent is Satyam; what is impermanent is Mityā. And Ātma is Satyam and Anātma is Mityā. Now look at this ślōkā. asataḥ bhāvaḥ na vidyatē. Bhāvaḥ means intrinsic existence. That is own existence; natural existence, is called bhāvaḥ. Na vidhyatē; is not there. Intrinsic existence is not there for what? asataḥ. asataḥ means for a mityā vastu, for an impermanent thing. asataḥ for a impermanent thing or for a mityā vastu. In this example which you have to take. Pot. Natural existence is not there for the pot. In the same way, sataḥ abhāvaḥ na vidyatē. abhāvaḥ means 'non-existence' or destruction. Non-existence is not there; na vidhyatē; sataḥ means for a real thing, which has natural existence. In the example, what should be taken? The Clay. Because even when the pot is broken, clay continues to exist.

Therefore a real thing does not have non-existence, and unreal thing does not have natural existence. A real thing does not have non-existence, unreal thing does not have natural existence. It has got what? Artificial existence.

And tatvadarśibhiḥ dṛṣṭaḥ? tatvadarśi means wise people. The wise people have understood realised, clearly ascertained, doubtlessly grasped. So the wise people have clearly grasped. antaḥ; antaḥ, means the true nature of ubhayoḥ, means both Satyam and Mityā. Wise people have understood this nature of both Satyam as well as Mityā. Both Ātma as well as Anātma.

So it is like handling the pot, with the knowledge all the time that pot is Mityā. Anytime it can break. And that is why even when they are packing and sending, they write outside what? Fragile; handle with care; and remember the most fragile thing is our body and still worse is our mind. Any time it will break. We say he broke down, means what? If we are in a small family, and all the few people around I interact, even if I have got a sensitive fragile mind, I can adjust, because the other people will carefully behave with me. But how long can I remain within the four walls? Different people will use different language; treat differently, no recognition, over recognition, rejection, insulting, gossip, all these are going to hit the mind. And therefore, understand the nature of anātma, and when anātma undergoes change, never complain. Just as my mind changes, other people's mind also change. Those people who love, who loved me once upon a time, they are trying to reject me now. As Swamiji says, first I love you, then I allow you. OK. So therefore, the one who has understood both this nature very clearly, is called a wise person.

अविनाशि तु तद्विद्धि येन सर्वमिदं ततम् ।
विनाशमव्ययस्यास्य न कश्चित्कर्तुमर्हति ॥२.१७॥

avināśi tu tadviddhi yēna sarvamidam tatam |
vināśamavyayasyāsyā na kaścit kartumarhati || 2.17 ||

विद्धि तत् तु vidhdi tat tu Know that (Ātma) avināśi अविनाशि to be the imperishable one न कश्चित् na kaścit No one अर्हति कर्तुम् arhati kartum can bring about विनाशम् vināśam the destruction अस्य अव्ययस्य asya avyayasya of this changeless one.

17. Know that (Ātma) to be imperishable one by which all this pervaded. No one can bring about the destruction of this changeless one.

So here, in this verse, one part of the verse is repetition that Ātma Nityaḥ is repeated once again. Ātma is eternal. But Kṛṣṇa presents this in a different language; instead of saying it is eternal, Kṛṣṇa says it is indestructible. You cannot destroy it. Tat avināśi. You can understand. Vināśi means perishable. Destructible. avināśi means indestructible. So when there is pot; its essence; its Ātma is what? Clay. Pot is what? Anātma. And clay is what? Ātma. Suppose you put down the pot which gets destroyed and which does not get destroyed, you know, the pot will get destroyed but the clay is not destroyed. The clay continues. Similarly here also, anātma can be and will be destroyed but ātma avināśi. And therefore viddhi; vidhdi means Arjuna you understand this clearly. Viddhi means you know this, you ascertain this, you internalise this fact.

And therefore, in the 2nd line, kaścit vināśam kartum na arhati. Therefore, nobody can destroy this ātma. kaścit vināśam kartum na arhati. Therefore nobody can destroy this ātma. Even the God cannot destroy. Even atom bombs cannot destroy. And therefore why are you saying Bhīṣma is killed; Drōṇa is killed, Bhīṣma is who? Ātma. Because this is discussion from which angle. Philosophical angle, Bhīṣma is nothing but ātma, Drōṇa is Ātma. So ātma is here; you are not going to destroy anything. So why are you crying?

Up to this is repetition. Then He adds another nature of Ātma. yēna sarvam idaṁ tatam. Now He says this whole creation is pervaded by this ātma. Tatam means pervaded, vyaptam. From this what does Kṛṣṇa say? Not only ātma is eternal, Ātma is also all pervading like space, ātma is all pervading. So if ātma is all pervading, how many ātmas will be there? It has to be just one, as one space is there; similarly one ātma alone is there, in you, in me, in an ant, in a plant, even in God; bodies are many but the ātma is one alone. Just as there is one space, in this hall, and if there are so many houses, there is one space, enclosed within every house but you do not count the spaces as, if there are five houses, you do not count as five spaces. Houses are counted and not the space; anātmas are counted; but ātma ēkaḥ

And that is why we say the Lord is in everybody's heart. So when you say, Lord is in everybody's heart, in what form? In the form of ātma alone, Īśvaraḥ is in every form. That is why we do namaskāra to everyone. The other people are not able to understand; how can man worship another man. In Indian culture, people doing namaskāra is so common.

Even unknown people come and do namaskāra to you. It is Indian culture. Once there is a kāṣāya vastram, I know that everyone respects and not only at home, the parents are worshipped, but for other people of other cultures and religions, this is unimaginable, that one person is doing namaskāra to another. So we had some westerners studying Vēdānta. They had a lot of difficulty to do namaskāra. And after 1 or 2 years, seeing all of us doing namaskāra, for us a namaskāra is every easy, in the morning, in the afternoon, in the evening, etc. Therefore after one year or two years, slowly they learn to do namaskāra and they say that they will do it in India; but when they go back, they would not do, it is considered a shocking action.

Why we are able to namaskāra to another human being; not because he is great, etc. if you are doing namaskāra to me, it is not because I am great. Behind this body also there is the ātma; which is the same in all, which is the Īśvaraḥ svarūpam, you are doing namaskāra to that only. If there is an ant or cow, you can do namaskāra to that also. The containers are different. But the content is the same, ātma is one and the same. So thus what all we have learned now.

Ātma nityaḥ, Ātma Satyaḥ, and Ātma sarvagataḥ.

More in the next class.

avināśi tu tadviddhi yēna sarvamidaṃ tatam |
vināśamavyayasyāsyā na kaścit kartumarhati || 2.17 ||

Lord Kṛṣṇa wants to persuade Arjuna to fight the Mahābhārata battle which is Arjuna's duty and for this purpose, Kṛṣṇa is teaching Arjuna from three different angles, first from philosophical angle Kṛṣṇa wants to convince Arjuna that he should fight. And then He comes down to ethical or moral-angle, dhārmika-dṛṣṭi and he establishes that Arjuna has to fight this battle. And finally He comes down to lōukika-dṛṣṭi, worldly standpoint and shows that Arjuna has to fight.

Of these three angles, first Kṛṣṇa takes up adhyātmika-dṛṣṭi and for this purpose, Kṛṣṇa is talking about the nature of the individual. And this is from verse No.12 to 25. And in this section, Kṛṣṇa does the ātma-anātma vivēka. This is to show that the individual is not the body, individual is not even the mind, but the individual is the ātma. And ātma and the nature of this ātma is being discussed in all these verses. Therefore what Kṛṣṇa expects Arjuna to understand is: "I am not this perishable body, which is a temporary assembly of five elements, I am not even this mind which is a temporary instrument, but I am the ātma tatvam, which is different from both". So naturally the question will come, if I am ātma, different from the body and mind, what is the nature of that ātma. And ātma svarūpam is being discussed.

First point that Kṛṣṇa highlighted in the 12th verse is that Ātma svarūpam is eternal. The body will perish one day, even the mind will be dissolved, during praḷayam; but if there is one thing indestructible; that is ātma svarūpam. Therefore, the first lesson ātma nityaḥ.

Then thereafter, Kṛṣṇa established, in the last verse we saw, in verse No.16 that ātma satyaḥ; that ātma alone is really existent; everything else depends upon ātma for its existence. To give an example: the clay alone is Satyam, all the pots do not have independent existence; therefore all pots are mityā. When we say, mityā, we do not negate the experience of pot; we do not negate the utility of the pot; but we only say that pot does not have an existence separate from clay. Similarly, the entire anātma is like pot; ātma is like clay the basic substance: without ātma, anātma cannot exist. When you say pot is: the very existence of the pot is borrowed from the clay. How do you say that? Remove the clay and see. When you remove the clay, pot cannot enjoy existence.

Therefore the second lesson that Kṛṣṇa gives about ātma is, ātma is Nityaḥ, is the first lesson Kṛṣṇa gave, second important point is ātma, satyaḥ. It is the only real substance and indirectly what Kṛṣṇa says is only if you hold on to reality you will find security in life. If you hold on to any unreal thing, then it will not be able to support you; one day or the other, you will be in trouble. Remember the example that if there is a chair made out of cardboard, that chair is attractive, it is wonderful, you can keep it in the showroom showcase also, and you can do everything, except one thing; What is that? You should not sit over that chair. What will happen if I sit? Try. You will break your head, because the cardboard chair does not have substantiality, solidity. Similarly, any anātma we lean upon, it being unreal, it cannot support; if you want lasting security, it has to be found in ātma alone. So therefore, lean on ātma, never lean on anātma.

But initially, a person may not understand ātma. Therefore, temporarily we use the word Bhagavān, do not lean upon the world; but lean upon Bhagavān. But when we come to philosophy, we say that Bhagavān is not elsewhere, that very Bhagavān is the very ātma. And therefore mōkṣaḥ is nothing but reliance on ātma. And bondage is nothing but reliance on anātma. But very careful, we do not say that we should hate anātma. Because hatred of anātma is as much a problem as attachment is. Just as I said, the cardboard chair need not be thrown away, you can love that chair, you can keep that chair; you can decorate that chair; everything you can do; but do not sit on the chair. Similarly, for security, depending upon the changing anātma will not give lasting security; for lasting security one should depend upon the ātma alone. And therefore ātma is called Satyaḥ, anātma is called mityā.

And in the 17th verse, which we had started in the last class, Kṛṣṇa gave another important lesson, yēna sarvamidaṃ tatam. So, that is ātma is all pervading. Previously it was said ātma is eternal; now He is saying that ātma is all-pervading. Eternal means not bound by time. It is there in the past, present and future. All-pervading means it is not limited by space; that means it is here, there, and everywhere.

Therefore Kṛṣṇa says avināśi tu tadviddhi yēna sarvamidaṃ tatam. Arjuna you understand that everything is pervaded by that Ātma and the beauty is when a thing becomes more and more pervading, it loses its rūpaḥ or state. An all-pervading thing has to be a formless thing. Isn't it? Anything limited is limited because of its boundaries alone. So the form of a thing, the limitation of a thing is determined by what: the boundary. What is the shape of this hall; is it square or rectangle. I ask? How do you determine; by looking at the boundary of this hall. Therefore the shape depends upon the boundary. If a thing does not have a boundary, the limiting walls are not there, what will be its shape? It will not have any particular shape, it has to be formless. Therefore, Kṛṣṇa says ātma is all-pervading; and therefore ātma is formless or shapeless.

Like what, like the ākāśa, or space. So ātma ākāśavat nirākāraḥ. ātma is formless like the space. And this is important to know because we always like to see the ātma. So people ask the question, if everybody has got ātma, how come I am not able to see? Our answer is we will not be able to see the ātma. We will be able to see the body, because it has a form. We will be able to see any external object, because it has form. We will not be able to see the ātma, not because it is not non-existent, but because it is formless. How do you know there is space? You do not see the space, but without seeing, we accept the existence of space. Similarly, we should accept the existence of ātma even though it is invisible. Therefore Kṛṣṇa says: yēna sarvamidaṁ tatam. Tatam means pervaded.

And then what will happen to the ātma when the body is destroyed? So we ask the question, what will happen to the space when this hall is destroyed? What will happen, the space also will be destroyed? No. When the hall is destroyed; this space will continue to exist. Only thing is: we will not be able to use this space perhaps, because a hall-space is useful; when there is no enclosure it is useless. Similarly, when the body is there, ātma is useful for transaction. When the body is gone, ātma continues but it is not available for transaction. And therefore Kṛṣṇa says asya vināśam kartum na arhati. Nobody can destroy this ātma. Even though the body can be destroyed. Up to this we saw.

अन्तवन्त इमे देहा नित्यस्योक्ताः शरीरिणः । अनाशिनोऽप्रमेयस्य तस्माद्युध्यस्व भारत ॥२.१८॥

antavanta imē dēhā nityasyōktāḥ śarīriṇaḥ |
anāśinō'pramēyasya tasmādyudhyasva bhārata || 2.18 ||

18. It is said – Perishable are these bodies, which belong to the eternal, imperishable and unobjectifiable Self. Therefore fight, Oh Arjuna.

So here Kṛṣṇa repeats the main idea given before. nityasya śarīriṇaḥ anāśinaḥ. These are all repetition of the previous ideas. Ātma is nityaḥ. It is eternal. And anāśinaḥ; therefore it cannot be destroyed by any means. And śarīriṇaḥ; it is intimately associated with the body. So śarīri means that which obtains within the body. śarīram means body, śarīri means that which is within the body.

So therefore the ātma is śarīri within the body and here "within the body" must be within quotation, because previously Kṛṣṇa said that it is all pervading. So here, within the body should be translated as "within the body also". Just as the space is all pervading and it is within the hall also, and the space within the hall is called hall-space. Similarly, the ātma within the body is called śarīri. Therefore, śarīri is the special name for the all-pervading ātma which is within the body. So this is the nature of the ātma and what about anātma? He says, imē dēhā antavantaḥ, whereas the bodies are all perishable. antaḥ means maraṇam. That's why Yama is called Antakāḥ. Anta means maraṇam or death, antavantaḥ, they have death. They are mortal. Therefore, as ātma I am immortal: as body I am mortal. And the wisest thing to do is to accept ātma as it is and to accept the body as it is. Never complain against the mortality of the body; gracefully accept the mortality of the body; whether it is Bhīṣma's body or Drōṇa's body or Karṇa's body or your mother Kunti's body or why, even Kṛṣṇa's body cannot be maintained eternally. That's why Kṛṣṇa has got a date of birth and Kṛṣṇa also has a date of death. Only thing is Kṛṣṇa's death, you do not say death: we give another name svargārōhanam. You may change the word, but the fact is what? Body will have to come and go. Therefore, Arjuna, why can't you accept this fact.

All these are the ideas given before. Now he adds, another important point in this slōkā and that is: apramēya; ātma apramēya; an important feature, nature of ātma. Pramēya means object of knowledge. Apramēya means never an object of knowledge. So apramēya means never an object of knowledge. Therefore, you can never know the ātma. You can never know the ātma. Then we will get a very big doubt: if we can never know the ātma, it may be non-existent. Then we say: No, it is existent also. If it is existent, I must be able to know it. No, you cannot know. Then it must be non-existent. No, it is existent.

So this is a quiz that we have to answer. What is that, which is ever existent but which can never be known. It is just like ~ I have given an example in Tatva Bōdha ~ if you have got a photograph, you see everything in the picture, so many people are there, chairs are there, but there is one person who very much existed there, but who is never in the picture. Quiz. He existed there, but not in the picture? Who is he? The one who has taken the picture. Suppose you say, Swamiji automatic camera suppose you use. I know that that question will come. Then I will have to change the question slightly. There is another thing, instead of person: there is another thing which very much existed there, but which never comes in the picture? What is that? Camera. So you do not require proof for the existence of camera, it is very much there, but it can never be seen in the picture. Similarly, the entire creation is like a photograph. Whatever you experience is like a photograph. And I say there is a thing which is not in the world of experience. It will never come. However much you struggle, it will never come in the field of experience; but whose existence can never be questioned. What is that? That is called the observer; the experiencer; the consciousness principle. And therefore Ātma is called Apramēya. Ever the experiencer, never the experienced. Ever the experiencer; never the experienced. Ever the dṛk, never the dṛśyam. Ever the subject; never the object. In Tatva Bōdha, I had given a few other examples also, with your eyes, you can see everything, except what? Your own eyes. You can never see your eyes; however powerful they may be. Do not say mirror again, mirror you will see the reflected eye. The original eye you can never see.

Dayānanda Swamiji used to tell: imagine Bhagavān has not created mirror. You know what will be the greatest tragedy. Other people may describe your face as the most beautiful face in the world. They can get away also even by telling a lie! OK. it may be true. Can say that your eyes are so wonderful? It is like a lotus petal. Imagine there is no mirror at all, there is no mirroring surface. I tell you eternally you will have to regret, what? I am not able to see my own eyes. Remember, eyes however powerful they are, they cannot see themselves. Similarly, consciousness or ātma I am as the eternal subject it is never pramēya. Therefore, apramēya ātma. Therefore what? tasmādyudhyasva bhārata. Therefore, Arjuna you are not killing Bhīṣma; not killing Drōṇa; not killing anyone, because ātma is not an object of destruction.

So what all things we have seen now? Ātma Nityaḥ, Ātma satyaḥ, ātma sarvagatḥ, ātma apramēya. In English Ātma is eternal, Ātma is reality, ātma is all-pervading; and ātma is never an object, but it is ever the subject.

य एनं वेत्ति हन्तारं यश्चैनं मन्यते हतम् । उभौ तौ न विजानीतो नायं हन्ति न हन्यते ॥२.१९॥

ya ēnaṃ vētti hantāraṃ yaścainaṃ manyatē hatam |
ubhau tau na vijānītō nāyaṃ hanti na hanyatē || 2.19 ||

यः वेत्ति yaḥ vētti The one who considers, एनम् ēnaṃ this Self (आत्म) – हन्तारम् hantāram to be a killer, च यः ca yaḥ and the one, – मन्यते manyatē who considers एनम् ēnaṃ this (Ātma) हतम् hatam to be killed, उभौ तौ ubhau tau both of them, न विजानीतः na vijānītaḥ do not know अयं न हन्ति ayam na hanti this (Self) does not kill; न हन्यते na hanyatē nor is (it) killed.

19. The one who considers this (Self) to be a killer and the one who considers this (Self) to be killed, both of them, do not know. This (Self) does not kill; nor is (It) killed.

Another important slōkā. Here ātma's nature is further described. And here Kṛṣṇa says ātma akartā and abōktā. Ātma is akartā: you can understand means what? Does not do any action. Not an actor; not the subject of an action. Abhōktā means ātma is not an object of any action also, but does not get involved in any action; does not take part. Not a participant. Like what? Our space again. The space has accommodated all of us.

Without space we cannot sit here. But space is not involved in any of our actions. Space is not the teacher. Space is not the student. Space is not any instrument also like pen or book; It never participates in any action, but without space, no action is possible. ākāśavat.

Or you can take another example. Prakāśavat. Like the light. In the sunlight, so many transactions or going. So a person might be selling some product outside; there is a buyer; there is a seller; there is money transaction; all the transactions take place in the light; but light itself is not a participant in any transaction. It is neither the seller, nor buyer, nor the bought material, nor the money. Can you say, after all, the light is not a participant. Remove the light. If you remove the light, transactions cannot take place. So therefore, like space; like light; ātma's presence is required for all transactions but ātma itself is not involved in any transaction.

If you take a cinema screen, on the screen all the cinema transactions take place, the hero comes, the heroine comes, villain comes, fight goes on, music, dance, all transactions goes on, the screen is not a participant in that picture. But since the screen is not participant, why can't we remove the screen. If the screen is removed, no picture can go on. Similarly ātma is uninvolved. akartā and abhōktā. And this idea, Kṛṣṇa presents in a different language. In a roundabout way. Kṛṣṇa wants to say, Ātma is akartā, means what? ātma does not do any job. And any job means what? it does not kill anyone. And again ātma is not a bhōktā means, ātma is not killed by anyone. So ātma is neither a killer of anyone; ātma is not killed by anyone.

This is the idea, Kṛṣṇa wants to convey. But He presents it in a different language. He says: suppose a person says Ātma is the killer and ātma is killed; that person is an ignorant person. That means what? If a person says ātma is a killer or killed, that person is wrong, means what? Ātma is neither a killer nor killed. That's what He says here yaḥ vētti hantāram. Suppose a person thinks ātma is killer, suppose a person thinks ātma is killed; killer means kartā, and yaścainaṃ manyatē hatam; suppose a person thinks ātma is killed, i.e., bhōktā; suppose a person thinks ātma is killer kartā, or killed bhōktā, what is the conclusion? ubhau tau na vijānītaḥ; both people do not know the fact. Both of them are wrong. So if both of them are wrong, then what is correct? He says nāyaṃ hanti. Correct idea is that ayam Ātma Na Hanti. Ātma does not kill anyone. In fact does not kill is not the word. Cannot kill anyone. Can space destroy anyone? So Vāyu of the Pañcabhuthās, Vāyu can destroy, Agni can destroy, jalam can destroy; even earth can destroy; by earthquake; but if there is one element, which cannot destroy anyone, what is that? It is the space. Similarly, ātma accommodates all, but does not and cannot destroy anyone. So Ayam; means ātma; Na hanti, does not kill. na hanyatē, is not killed also. And this has got lot of significance which Kṛṣṇa will bring out throughout the Gīta.

This is a crucial verse; in fact, many important ideas of the Gīta are based on this one verse. And one of the important derivations is that if ātma is akartā, it is free from all karma. And if it is free from all karmas, there is no puṇyam for the ātma; there is no pāpam for the ātma, there is no sañcita-karmā, there is no agami-karmā, there is no prārabdhā-karmā; all these are not there for Ātma. And if karmās are not there, there is no question of punarjanma also. Ātma never takes punarjanma. Why it does not take punarjanma? If it dies only; where is the question of rebirth. Since ātma does not die, it does not have janma, it does not have karma, it is free from all.

Then, why are we talking about various karmās, rituals, śrāddhāms, tarpanams; all for whom? They are all meant for sūkṣma-śarīram, which alone travels from place to place. Sūkṣma śarīram requires karma; sūkṣma śarīram has got punar-janma. Therefore, from that standpoint alone, all the śrāddhās tarpaṇams. That is why for a jñāni, there is no śrāddhās or tarpaṇah. In the case of ignorant person, the sūkṣma śarīram travel, therefore we have to do karma. In the case of a jñāni, there is no śrāddhām, there is no tarpaṇam. We only have a samārādāna day, we just remember that mahātma so that we will get his blessing. So there is no punarjanma for ātma. These are all the corollary Kṛṣṇa himself will tell later.

न जायते म्रियते वा कदाचित्

nāyaṃ bhūtvā bhavitā vā na bhūyaḥ |
ajō nityaḥ śāśvatō'yaṃ purāṇō
na hanyatē hanyamānē śarīrē || 2.20 ||

यं न जायते ayam na jāyatē This (Ātma) is neither born कदाचित् kadācit at any time वा म्रियते vā mriyatē nor does it die (at any time न भूत्वा) na bhūtvā For (this Ātma) will neither come to existence न अभविता वा भूयः na abhavitā vā bhūyaḥ nor will it disappear again (at another time). अयम् अजः नित्यः ayam ajaḥ nityaḥ This is unborn, शाश्वतः पुराणः śāśvataḥ purāṇaḥ and free from decay as well as growth. न हन्यते na hanyatē (It) is not affected शरीरे हन्यमाने śarīrē hanyamānē when the body is affected.

20. This (Self) is neither born at any time nor does it die (at any time). It will neither come to existence (at one time) nor will it disappear again (at another time). This is unborn, eternal and free from decay as well as growth. (It) is not affected when the body is affected.

This is another important verse. All these are highly philosophical verses; all taken from the Upaniṣads, and to highlight its importance alone, we find the very meter, of the verse is changed. Until now, the number of letters were less; now you find the verse is longer verse. That importance is shown here; and essence of this verse is that ātma is free from all modifications or changes. nirvikāraḥ ātma. Vikāraḥ means change; Nir means free from; nirvikāraḥ means free from change.

And the change is classified into 6 types; which we had seen in Tatva Bōdha: asti, existence in seed form; jāyatē, taking birth; vardhatē, growing vipariṇamatē, metamorphosis or changing apakṣiyatē, decaying that is old age; and vinaśyati perishes. Like a graph, changes happen. Gradual growth, up to 20th year or something; and thereafter between 20-50 there is neither growth nor decay; just almost the graph goes straight; after 40 or 50, it varies from individual from individual, for some it starts at 40, for some it starts at 50, but a time comes when the declension begins. Suddenly we begin to discover that we have many joints in our body. Previously we never knew; we were just rushing enjoying and very mobile. Now sitting down or not, sitting down and getting up becomes a project. It is a project we have to plan, and if you have to face in this direction, or that direction, etc. and we end up sitting in some other direction. This is all sign of what? Jarāḥ. And the end of jarāḥ is what? Maraṇam. All these six modifications are there for the body. Here Kṛṣṇa says ātma is free from all these six modifications; it is not born, does not grow, decay or die. That is the essence.

Look at the slōkā. na jāyatē, ātma is never born. Therefore, birth belongs to sūkṣma śarīram only and not the ātma. Na mriyatē, that na should be read twice. na jāyathē mriyatē, should not be read. Na jāyathē, na mriyatē; ātma does not die; kadācit, at any time. And why do you say so: ayam na bhūtvā; because it never comes to existence at a particular time; it is unborn; because it never comes to existence at a particular time; and na bhavitā; and it never stops to exist at a future time. That means it never begins its existence, it never ends its existence. And therefore, ajaḥ; ajaḥ, ātma is given the name ajaḥ; ajaḥ means birthless. And nityaḥ; it is also called nityaḥ, means deathless; so ajaḥ means birthless, nityaḥ means deathless;

Then śāśvataḥ; śāśvataḥ means it is free from decay; apakṣaya rahitha; it does not get old. And purāṇaḥ, it does not grow also. Vṛddhi rahitha. All the four modifications have been said; janma-rahithaḥ, vṛddhi-rahithaḥ, apakṣaya-rahithaḥ, vināśa-rahithaḥ; all these are not there. Not only that; na hanyatē hanyamānē śarīrē; when the body is afflicted by diseases etc. when the body goes out of shape because of diseases; certain diseases body bloates, in certain diseases, body shrinks. Different diseases attack the body in different forms. So when the body is hanyatē; hanyatē is afflicted, tormented by diseases, na hanyatē; the ātma does not go out of shape. Why ātma does not go out of shape? Can you guess? First there should be a shape! If there is a shape, it can go out of shape. So initially build up a shape; by dieting; by exercising; by doing this; and by doing that; our first aim is to create a shape. That itself often fails; and having created a shape, our next aim is to maintain it; both are very difficult; in the case of ātma, there is no question of creating a shape, no question of maintaining and therefore there is no question of losing also.

And therefore, ātma is free from vipariṇāma also. It is free from pariṇāma, or change. And therefore ātma is called Nirvikāraḥ. So what all we have seen? To go back: ātma nityaḥ, eternal; satyaḥ, is reality; sarvagathaḥ, it is all-pervading; apramēya; it is never known ever the knower; akartā, not a doer; abōktā, not an enjoyer; and now nirvikāraḥ, it is free from all modifications. These are the seven main features of ātma. And the following verses repeat this same idea, in different forms. The idea is the same. But Kṛṣṇa repeats in different forms; which we will see in the next class. Hari Om

Lord Kṛṣṇa is talking about the nature of the Self. Ātma svarūpam and how it is different from anātma, the body-mind-complex.

First He pointed out that ātma-nityaḥ, means ātma is eternal. Even when the body is born and gone, ātma continues to exist.

Next He pointed out that ātma satyaḥ, ātma is the reality, which means ātma exists independently; everything else depends upon ātma for existence.

Then next He pointed out that ātma-sarvagataḥ, which means ātma is all-pervading, like space, from which we come to know that even though bodies are many, the ātma which is behind everybody, the ātma is the same all-pervading one; therefore it has to be one only. Just as the all-pervading space is only one, similarly, ātma is all-pervading and advaitam.

Next He pointed out ātma apramēyaḥ. Ātma is never an object of experience; it is an experiencer of everything, without itself being experienced. Remember the example in a photograph; you will have everything, except the camera or the photographer. You know there is a camera; you know there is a photographer; but it never comes in the picture. Similarly, the whole world is a picture in front of you. You can experience everything, except one thing, i.e. you yourself. Therefore ātma is ever-experiencer, never the experienced. In Sāṅskṛit, apramēyaḥ; so nityaḥ, Satyaḥ, sarvagataḥ, apramēyaḥ.

Then Kṛṣṇa said ātma is akartā and abhōktā. It is neither a doer of any action and therefore does not reap the result of any action. karmābhi nāsti, karmaphalam abhi nāsti. Therefore, Ātma is beyond puṇyam beyond pāpam; therefore beyond sukham, beyond duḥkham; because sukham and duḥkham are karma-phalam only. Pleasure is puṇya karma-phalam; pain is pāpa-karma-phalam; ātma being beyond karma-phalam, it is beyond pleasure and pain.

And finally Kṛṣṇa pointed out that ātma is Nirvikāraḥ, which means Ātma is free from all the six modifications like birth, growth, change, decay, and death. Therefore there is no question of birth of ātma, growth of ātma, decay or death. That is what we saw in the 20th verse.

ना अयं भूत्वा भविता वा न भूयः ।
अजो नित्यः शाश्वतोऽयं पुराणो
न हन्यते हन्यमाने शरीरे ॥ २॥ २०.

na jāyatē mriyatē vā kadācit nāyaṁ bhūtvā bhavitā vā na bhūyaḥ |
ajō nityaḥ śāśvatō'yaṁ purāṇō
na hanyatē hanyamānē śarīrē ||2.20||

The beauty is ātma is intimately connected to the body; but whatever happens to the body does not affect ātma. Exactly like remember the example, the light is intimately associated with the body but whatever happens to the body does not affect the light pervading the body. Or take the example of a screen and the movie. In the picture, so many things happen; but whatever happens, the screen continues to be unaffected. So ātma is like screen, and anātma is like movie. Up to this we saw.

वेदाविनाशिनं नित्यं य एनमजमव्ययम् |
कथं स पुरुषः पार्थ कं घातयति हन्ति कम् || २ - २१ ||

vēdāvināśinam nityam ya ēnamajamavyayam |
katham sa puruṣaḥ pārtha kaṁ ghātayati hanti kaṁ || 2. 21 ||

पार्थ pārtha Oh Arjuna! कं सः पुरुषः kaṁ saḥ puruṣaḥ whom can that person यः वेद yaḥ Vēda who knows एनम् ēnam this (Ātma) to be अविनाशिनं नित्यम् avināśinam nityam imperishable, changeless अजम् अव्ययम् ajam avyayam birthless and decayless हन्ति hanti kill कां घातयति कं घातयति (and) whom can he instigate to kill, katham कथम् and how?

21. Oh Arjuna! Who can that person, who knows this (Ātma) to be imperishable, changeless birthless, and decayless, kill (and) whom can he instigate to kill, and how?

So what is the aim of a spiritual-seeker?: Vēdāḥ. Vēdāḥ means he must know. The main aim of the seeker is the knowledge of this Ātma. Here the word Vēdāḥ does not mean the Ṛk, Yajur, Sāma, and Atharva Vēda. There the word Vēdāḥ is the noun which refers to the scriptures; here the Vēdāḥ is a verb which should be translated as one should know; Vēdāḥ. The aim of the spiritual-seeker is to know. Know what? Ātmānam.

And what type of ātma you should know? Avināśinam nityam ajam avyayam. Avināśinam; we have seen before; indestructible. That which cannot be destroyed at all. And therefore only nityam. It is eternal. And Ajam and Avyayam. Ajam means unborn, without janma, and avyayam without decay like old age etc. So such an ātma one should know that is the aim of the spiritual seeker.

Now here, this knowing involves two stages. First stage is to separate the body and ātma the consciousness, because we think that consciousness is an integral part of the body, we have to first understand consciousness is not an integral part of the body but it is an independent entity. Just as remember the example: light is not an integral part of the hand; light is on the hand, it is intimately connected to the hand; but light is a separate entity. In the same way, consciousness pervades the body; it is intimate, but it is not an integral-part of the body; it is a separate entity. This is the first stage.

And having separated the body and consciousness, the next aim is asking the question which one of these two I am. Which one of these two, I should claim as myself? Until we come to Vēdānta, which one we have claimed? We have been claiming and we are even now claiming that this body alone I am. It is a very vehement claim. At least if it is so precious, it is fine. Thus it is a decaying matter and we are so much enamored and obsessed with this perishing body that we claim as ours. Therefore, our aim is what? Dropping this claim. Drop this claim on the body and claim the consciousness as myself. This is the biggest and toughest shift on the part of the seeker. Even understanding is relatively easier; but the shifting of the 'I' from the matter-bundle to the consciousness alone will take time. Which I have to separately sit, look at the body, and go on telling that this has been a temporarily borrowed from external matter; just like ice in one area solidifies and becomes an iceberg. Even though iceberg appears to be separate and different from water, what is iceberg? It is nothing but water. Born out of water, floats in water, and we do not know when it will dissolve. Similarly, in this matter-portion, there is a small iceberg called the physical body, which can melt at any time and merge back into the pañca bhūtāḥ. pañjabhūtēbhyāḥ jātam and pañjabhūtēṣu viliyatē. Therefore, the body belongs to the matter.

But I am consciousness, which is in the body and which will survive the dissolution of the body. So this training is called nidhidhyāsanam. Training in shifting the I; from matter to consciousness; from the changing anātma to changeless ātma. From the inert-bundle to the consciousness-principle. This shift-training is called Nidhidhyāsanam. And out of this nidhidhyāsanam, this shift becomes spontaneous and natural. Just as I am body is natural to me now; similarly, I am the ātma also should become natural and that is called here Vēdāḥ. Assimilated-knowledge one should have. And what is the advantage of the assimilated-knowledge.

Before assimilation, I used to say ātma is akartā, abōktā; but once I assimilate this knowledge, I no more say ātma is akartā, what will I say, I am akartā. So whatever features of ātma I had known, they will not be ātma's features; they all will be mine. So previously ātma is Nityaḥ, now what I will say? Aham Nityam, I am immortal. And I am reality. And I am all-pervading and I am ever the subject and I am free from six modifications and finally I am akartā and abōktā. That is what is said in the second line. Hey Pārtha, hey Arjuna, saḥ puruṣaḥ, how can that person be a kartha? Katham kaḥ. How can that person be a doer of any action? That person; which person, that person who has claimed ātma as himself. Therefore, jñāni is akartā.

And not only he is akartā; action is of two types. One is called direct-action and the other is indirect-action. Direct action is when I myself do the action; indirect action is when I instigate another one to do the job and both of them come under action; both of them will have karma-phalam. So when a person steals something; that is also crime. When a person engages someone to steal something, that person also has committed mistake.

So now when we say ātma is akartā, Kṛṣṇa says that neither it acts by itself nor does it instigate anyone to act.

And to indicate this we have two Sāṅskṛīt words; direct-doer, I am called kartha, if I am an indirect-doer; I am called a kārayitaḥ. kartha and kārayitaḥ. When there is a servant maid, you may not do work, sitting on the chair, you instruct, do that, do this. Mere presence of the boss, all the other work go on. So the boss becomes what? Not kartha, but kārayitaḥ.

Now what about ātma? Kṛṣṇa says it is neither kartha nor kārayitaḥ. Therefore, kathaṁ sa puruṣaḥ hantim. How can that ātma kill anyone and kaṁ ghātayatim? How can that ātma instigate anyone to kill? Here Kṛṣṇa is talking about killing action, context happens to be Mahābhāratha war. It is only a representative action; we can extend it to all other actions also. Therefore jñāni is akartā. And therefore only we call him a liberated person, because he does not have puṇyam; he does not have pāpam therefore he does not have punjarjanma also. All these are consequences.

वासांसि जीर्णानि यथा विहाय

न्यन्यानि संयाति नवानि देही || २- २२ ||

navāni gṛhṇāti narō'parāṇi |
tathā śarīrāṇi vihāya jīrṇāni
anyāni saṁyāti navāni dēhī || 2.22 ||

यथा yathā Just as नरः विहाय naraḥ vihāya a person gives up. जीर्णानि वासांसि jīrṇāni vāsāṁsi worn out clothes गृह्णाति gṛhṇāti and puts on अपराणि नवानि aparāṇi navāni other new ones, तथा tathā so also, देही विहाय dēhī vihāya this Ātma gives up जीर्णानि शरीराणि jīrṇāni śarīrāṇi – worn out bodies संयाति saṁyāti and attains into अन्यानि नवानि anyāni navāni other new ones.

22. Just as a person gives up worn out clothes and puts on other new ones, so also, this Ātma gives up worn out bodies and attains into other new ones.

So here Kṛṣṇa is talking about punarjanma and maraṇam. What is death and rebirth? And what happens at the time of death and rebirth. And what happens to ātma at the time of death and rebirth. So Kṛṣṇa says: death and rebirth are exactly like changing the clothes or dress. A dress is only a superficial covering on ourselves. Before we put on the dress, we existed and when the dress is on our body, we exist and even after one's dress is removed, we continue to exist and when one dress is removed and another dress is put on, the change belongs to the superficial layer called dress but the inner content remains the same. When you have changed your dress, I do not say you have changed. You can change only the superficial thing but not the essential factor. Similarly, every time a living being is born; it only means jīva comes freshly dressed. How long a person keep this dress? It all depends on different people. Some people change every two hours, depends upon the wardrobe, perhaps. Morning, evening dress, night dress; therefore varieties of dresses are there; so different people take to dresses and give up; similarly jīvās take the physical body, live there for some time and thereafterwards, discard the body. That is said here. jīrṇāni vāsāmsi vihāya. A person throws away dresses which are worn out. jīrṇāni vāsāmsi. Worn out clothes, a person gives up; Why, because it no more can serve its purpose.

And what does he do? He cannot go out without dress and therefore for the sake of transaction, he puts on another dress and goes out. So navāni aparāṇi gr̥hṇāti. Aparāṇi new clothes, other clothes, fresh clothes. He takes to go out. He goes to the green room, or dressing room and then quietly changes alone and at that time nobody can see him, then he comes out.

Similarly, what do we do? We mean, what every jīva does; this physical body is used for some time and after sometime, it is no more useful to the society as well oneself. It has become a burden. The vegetable like tubes all-over. So this person is surviving; no benefit to oneself or to others. Therefore what should we do? Body is discarded. So he says tathā jīrṇāni śarīrāṇi vihāya. Similarly, the old worn out clothes, the bodies are discarded by a jīva and once that body is discarded, just as the jīva goes to the green room when a dress is changed, he goes to the dressing room, nobody sees. Similarly the jīva is also invisible once the body is gone. The jīva continues but invisible, where he is: in the green room; green room of Bhagavān, who has got a big wardrobe, varieties of wardrobes. Varieties of dress. Means, manuṣya śarīram, donkey, monkey, human being, all kinds of bodies are kept there; and then what to do? Put on another dress; before you open the door and again putting on another body, the jīva comes out to the world; for what? Again transaction.

So therefore, tathā jīrṇāni śarīrāṇi vihāya, anyāni saṁyāti. So another new body. This jīva takes. This dēhī takes. And what will happen? Again transaction. Sukham, duḥkham, and again you throw away the cloth and take another one; thus punarapi jananam punarapi maraṇam; cycle goes on, on and on. This is the essence.

But here, we can look at this verse from two different angles. If you go back to Tatva Bōdha, we had talked about stūla śārīraṁ, sūkṣma śārīraṁ, kāraṇa śārīraṁ, and ātma. Four items we have talked about. At the time of death, which one gets destroyed among these four? We have to see. Stūla, sūkṣma (I hope you have not forgotten, you will be in trouble and I also will be in trouble), kāraṇa śārīraṁ and ātma. Of these four items; at the time of death the physical body alone perishes; which means the other three will survive the death of the body. Therefore, sūkṣma-śārīraṁ continues, which is nothing but the mind, along with the karma, vāsanās, all of the puṇyam pāpam. What about the kāraṇa-śārīraṁ? kāraṇa-śārīraṁ also will continue. What about ātma? When sūkṣma, kāraṇa-śārīraṁ themselves continue, what to talk of ātma; ātma will also continue. So this sūkṣma kāraṇa-śārīraṁ, I will together take it as sūkṣma-śārīraṁ. kāraṇa-śārīraṁ understood. Sūkṣma-śārīraṁ also survives, ātma also survives.

Then what will happen? This sūkṣma-śārīraṁ will travel to another place where it can take a body and experience pleasures and pain.

See that, you may ask; that is it is called sūkṣma-śārīraṁ. I do not see your mind; but do you have mind or not? Do not say, no. To say No also you need a mind. Therefore I do not see your mind, but non-perception is not non-existence. This should be very clear. Non-perception does not mean non-existence. Non-perception means what, non-perception. I do not see your mind; though I do view your mind. You do not have a mind is not the conclusion.

Similarly, after the fall of the body, sūkṣma śārīraṁ consisting of mind prāṇa etc. travels. Travels according to what law? The law of karma. If lot of puṇyams are there, then good śārīraṁ, puṇyēna puṇya lōkam, pāpēna pāpa lōkam, ubhābhyām manuṣya lōkam. Too much puṇyas; higher lōkas, too much pāpam, lower lōkas, if it is an equal mixture, manuṣya lōka. So we are all now in the mixture level.

Therefore, from the standpoint of sūkṣma-śārīraṁ; what happens after death? It travels. Whereas, from the standpoint of ātma, the consciousness, what happens after death; where does ātma travel? Ātma cannot travel because it is all pervading; we have seen and therefore, one body appears and it goes away; and another body appears as far as ātma is concerned, it remains without any change. And therefore, Dēhi remains; here Dēhi means ātma. In this verse, we are not discussing sūkṣma śārīraṁ, we are discussing ātma only; ātma remains the same when bodies appear and disappear.

It is exactly pulling down one particular house, and building a multistoried building. What happens to the space inside? The space does not travel from one place to another; the space continues to be the same. One building is gone. Another building has come;

similarly manuṣya śarīraṁ may go; ātma continues to be there; in the same place as the donkey body comes; or a clone. Now cloning has come. Another manuṣya śarīraṁ comes. What happens to ātma? Ātma remains. Another monkey śarīraṁ comes. Ātma remains. Thus, bodies appear and disappear; but ātma continues to be the same. Therefore, ātma does not have punarjanma or punar maraṇaṁ.

नैनं छिन्दन्ति शस्त्राणि नैनं दहति पावकः |
न चैनं क्लेदयन्त्यापो न शोषयति मारुतः || २-२३ ||

nainam chindanti śastrāṇi nainam dahati pāvakaḥ |
na cainam klēdayantiāpō na śōṣayati mārutaḥ || 2.23 ||

शस्त्राणि śastrāṇi Weapons न छिन्दन्ति na chindanti do not cut एनम् ēnam this पावकः pāvakaḥ Fire न दहति na dahati does not burn एनम् ēnam this आपः āpaḥ water न क्लेदयन्ति na klēdayanti does not wet एनम् ēnam this मारुतः च mārutaḥ ca Air also न शोषयति na śōṣayati- does not dry this.

23. Weapons do not cut this. Fire does not burn this. Water does not wet this. Air also does not dry this.

So here he says: even though ātma is intimately associated with the body, ātma does not get destroyed by anything; whereas body is affected by everything in the creation. So how is the body affected? Here Kṛṣṇa says, all the four elements can affect the body. Except ākāśaḥ, all the four elements can affect the body. So all weapons are made out of which element. Pṛthvi bhūmi, weapons like sword, knife, etc. they can cut the body. Pṛthvi can affect the body and similarly jalaṁ; water can drown the body to death; and fire can burn the body to death; and air can dry the body to death; dehydration. All the four elements can affect the body but none of them can affect the ātma. So śastrāṇi ēnam na chindanti. Weapons do not cut the ātma. And śastrāṇi represents bhūmi, the pṛthvi bhūtaṁ. Pāvakaḥ ēnam na dahati. Fire does not burn the ātma. Āpaḥ ēnam na klēdayanti. Water does not wet or drown the ātma. And finally; mārutaḥ na śōṣayati, the wind does not dry up or destroy the ātma. When there is too much of wind, even the skin goes dry and all those things we can see; so wind is so powerful that it can take away the content, essence and can even kill. Thus body will be affected by four elements not the ātma. These are all clarifications of the idea given before.

अयम् ayam This (Ātma), अच्छेद्यः acchēdhyah cannot be cut, अयम् अदाह्यः ayam adāhyaḥ this cannot be burnt अक्लेद्यः aklēdhyah cannot be wetted, च एव अशोष्यः ca ēva aśōṣyaḥ cannot also be dried, अयम् ayam this, नित्यः nityaḥ is eternal, सर्वगतः sarvagataḥ all pervading, स्थाणुः sthāṇuḥ changeless, अचलः acalaḥ immovable, सनातनः sanātanaḥ eternal.

24. This (Ātma) cannot be cut, nor burnt, cannot be wetted, and cannot be dried. This is eternal, all-pervading changeless, immovable, and unborn.

So the first line is the repetition of the previous ślōka, acchēdhyah; ātma cannot be cut by weapons; adāhyaḥ ātma cannot be burned; aklēdhyah ātma cannot be wet or drowned by water; and ātma cannot be dried up; cannot be destroyed and therefore what is ātma's nature? Nityaḥ. So you are immortal. The essence is that the immortality you need not get; immortality is your very nature. These are the innermost urge of everyone's thought. I should not disappear from the earth. One thing we cannot stand. I should not disappear. So we cannot physically get immortality, we try to become immortal through indirect methods; we give our names to our children or grandchildren; at least that way; or take photographs and hang all over; or start some institutions and name it after yourselves. We want to leave something and live on. This is the innermost urge. So mortality of other thing we are ready to accept. But I am mortal; I can never accept. Do you know why we are not able to accept it? Why we are not able to accept mortality? Because it is unnatural. We are naturally immortal and that is why, we are not able to accept mortality. If mortality is natural to us, we would have been comfortable. When somebody is happy, do we make any complaint? I am very much worried nowadays because I do not know why I am so much happy all the time. Morning I am happy. 11 o'clock I am happy. Night also I am happy. I do not know what has happened to me? No. Whereas, when unhappiness comes, you are not able to stand? So what is the rule? What is unnatural, you reject.

Even in the system, anything unnatural enters; if it enters the eyes, tear drops. If it enters your nose, by sneezing. If it enters your stomach, by purging, by sweat, by one method or the other. That's why organ transplant is a big problem because, the organ is an external intruder, therefore it rejects. Rejection is the biggest problem. Whereas if a lady carries her own child; becomes pregnant, the system does not do anything; it cooperates; why because it is natural. Very simple law. What is natural we will accept. What is unnatural, we will reject. Mortality everyone rejects. Nobody accepts mortality. Everybody wants to live a day more. From that it is very clear, mortality is unnatural and what is natural to me, is nityaḥ. I am ever there. What a great relief? I am there. Eternally there. Even though for other people, they may not like, but I am there. Nityaḥ means not bound by time.

And sarvagataḥ, not only I am eternal, I am also all-pervading. Not bound by space. I am timeless and spaceless; I am beyond time and space.

And therefore sthāṇuḥ; sthāṇuḥ means changeless. Since I am not bound by time, time cannot cause any change in me. In fact, every thing in the creation is torched and changed and made out of shape by what? Time only. As a baby, we were all nice to look at. Now out of shape. Where it should be broad, it is not broad, where it should be long, it is not; etc. all gone out of shape. We try our best to bring back to shape. Colour of the skin changes; colour of the hair changes; or the hair itself disappears; all caused by what? Time.

So if I am nityaḥ, that time cannot bring out any change; and therefore I am sthāṇuḥ; sthāṇuḥ means ever the same. sarvataḥ tiṣṭati iti stāṇuḥ. One of the names of Lord Śiva is sthāṇuḥ. Sthāṇuḥnāthaḥ. Some persons have that name. Sthāṇuḥnāthaḥ. But later sthakāra would go away and they will say thānu. Thānu is from sthānu. Stānu is the name of the Lord. In Kerala also there was a person called Pattam Thānu Pillai. Very famous person. Thānu pillai. Thānvīśvara. It is the name of the ātma.

And acalaḥ. Since I am not bound by time, I am changeless; since I am not bound by space, I am motionless. acalaḥ means I-am-motionless. Because only a limited entity can move from one place to another. Ātma cannot move from one place to another.

And suddenly you may wonder, Swamiji, you are moving, you are come from your place. Now you will go to some other place. How do you say you are motionless. When I say I am motionless, what is motionless, what is the meaning of the word 'I'? That should be very very clear. As the body, certainly it is anityaḥ, asthānu, calaḥ, etc. all those are there. But I the ātma is free from all of them; and therefore, it is called sanātanaḥ. sanātanaḥ; ever fresh. sanātanaḥ is ever fresh. That is why Hinduism is called sanātana dharma.

Because Hinduism deals only with two main topics. Entire Hinduism, topic is only two. One is dharmāḥ another is brahmaḥ. These are the only two topics of Hinduism. Pūrva bhāga of the Vēda talks about dharmāḥ, uttara bhāga talks about Brahman. That portion dealing with dharmāḥ is called religion; that portion dealing with Brahman is called philosophy. Religion deals with dharmāḥ; philosophy deals with Brahman.

And both do not change at all. Values are ever the same. Ahimṣa is a value for which century? Ahimṣa is, ahimṣa you know. Non-injury is a value during Śankarācārya's time? No. It is a valid 10 century B.C. also. What is the law? I do not want anybody to hurt me. Therefore I should not hurt anyone. I want everybody to tell me the truth. Therefore I should tell also the truth. Satyam, Ahimṣa; they are all called dharma, which is called Sanātanam.

What about Brahman? During Śankarācārya's time, Brahmaḥ was little small, and now it has become big? So Brahman also does not change. Dharmah also does not change. And therefore Hinduism is called Sanātana dharmah; that which teaches the changeless values of life and that which teaches the changeless truths of this creation.

And therefore this word Sanātanaḥ. Ever fresh; ever valid. That is why Gīta we are studying now also. Whereas physics, chemistry, etc. that we study, the parents are finding it difficult to teach the children, because the physics they studied, the chemistry they studied during their time is now changed. So all the other sciences seems to change from time to time. Theories are revised. Theories are discarded; many medicines are discarded. Discarded means what? From the western countries and it will come to the eastern countries. Whatever medicine they have found useless, they will come to our place! We will use it for some time and we will throw away. Therefore medicine changes, physics changes, chemistry changes. What does not change? Dharmah does not change. Therefore Vēdah can never become obsolete. Vēdah can never become obsolete. After another 20 centuries, Vēdah will be valid. That is why Vēdah is called Sanātanaḥ. Ātma is called Sanātanaḥ.

अयम् ayam This Ātma, अव्यक्तः avyaktaḥ is imperceptible, अयम् अचिन्त्यः ayam acintyaḥ this is inconceivable अयम् अविकार्यः ayam avikāryaḥ this, is unchangeable, उच्यते ucyatē (Thus) It is said तस्मात् tasmāt Therefore विदित्वा viditvā having known एनम् एवम् ēnaṁ ēvaṁ this (Ātma) in this manner, न अर्हसि na arhasi you should not. अनुशोचितुम् anuśōcitur grieve

25. This (Ātma) is imperceptible. This is inconceivable. This is unchangeable. (Thus) It is said. Therefore, having known this (Ātma) in this manner, you should not grieve.

In this verse Kṛṣṇa concludes the ātma svarūpam discussion. So this is just a winding up slōka and the main ideas are repetition which we have seen in the previous slōkas. Avyaktaḥ ayam. Avyaktaḥ means not available for the organs of perception. Indriya agōcaraḥ. Because the five sense organs can experience five sensory properties. The ears can perceive something which has got sound. The eyes can perceive something which has form and colour. The nose can perceive something which has smell. The tongue can perceive something which has taste. The skin can perceive something which has got touch.

What about ātma? aśabdamasparśamarūpamavyayaṁ tathā:'rasaṁ nityam agandhavacca yat. Ātma is free from śabda, sparśa, rūpa, rasa gandha. These five properties belong to matter. They belong to the pañca būthās, five elements. If you remember Tatva Bōdha, ākāśa has got śabda; vāyu has got śabda and sparśa; Agni has got śabda, sparśa, and rūpa; jalam has got śabda, sparśa, rūpa and rasa; pṛthvi has got śabda, sparśa, rūpa, rasa and gandha. Five elements have got these five properties. Matter alone has properties. And ātma being non-material, it can never be perceived. Therefore, avyaktaḥ.

And therefore only acintyaḥ. If I cannot perceive that, I cannot even conceive. Because all our concepts are based on our perceptual experience; when it is not perceptually available, how can you think of that? Try to imagine an ātma which is free from sound. People say that Swamiji in meditation I tried to imagine an ātma without sound, without form; I end up a total blank. Therefore you will arrive at only blankness; because mind cannot conceive of think of. Then how to think of? What you think of is not ātma.

Then what is ātma? The thinker of, is ātma. So it is never thought, but it is ever the thinker. Never the object. Ever the subject. Therefore, acintyaḥ. Then avikāryaḥ. It is free from the ṣaṭvikāras. These are all repetitions. We have seen these ideas before. That avyaktaḥ and acintyaḥ alone, previously called as apramēya. Apramēya is avyaktaḥ + acintyaḥ.

And therefore, Kṛṣṇa concludes: Arjuna having known these facts; what facts? You are ātma; I am ātma; Bhīṣma is ātma; Drōṇa is ātma; you cannot kill as ātma you cannot kill Bhīṣma or Drōṇa and by those actions you are not going to get puṇyam or pāpam and therefore why do you cry? There is no scope for crying at all. Tasmāt ēvam veditvā. Having known the ātma very clearly, what should you do? Śōcitum na arhasi. You should not grieve over any person. Nobody deserves grief in life. If you can help someone, do that; it is wonderful. But by grieving, you are not changing any fact. The mortal body is not going to come back by shedding tears; the immortal self is not going to die also;

therefore fact cannot be changed; see the fact as it is and whatever you have to do in a situation do, why do you cry? Therefore śōcitur na arhasi.

Now go back to the introductory verse: gatāsūnagatāsūmśca nānuśōcanti paṇḍitāḥ. Wise people never grief. If you understand this fact, you are also wise. Then why do you grieve at all. So grief is foolishness. Grief is ignorance. Grief is delusion.

Lord Kṛṣṇa wants to help Arjuna to get out of his sorrow and also make him fight this war. Because that happens to be his svadharma. And for this purpose, he is giving the teaching from three different levels, I said: one is adhyātmika dṛṣṭi, the philosophical level, the other is dhārmica dṛṣṭi, from moral level and the third is lōkika dṛṣṭi, from practical worldly level. Of this, the first approach is the philosophical approach in which Lord Kṛṣṇa gives him ātma jñānam; the true nature of every individual he talks about. And the main teaching is from verse No.12 and it is up to verse No.25, which we saw in the last few classes.

And through this teaching Lord Kṛṣṇa pointed out that our real nature is Consciousness; caitanya svarūpam and our physical personality; our emotional personality; as well as our intellectual personality; they are all only our incidental features; none of them is our real nature.

And then he talked about the nature of that caitanyam: first he pointed out that ātma is nityaḥ, eternal.

Then he pointed out: ātma satyaḥ, that consciousness is independently existent; it does not depend upon matter for its existence.

Then ātma sarvagataḥ, consciousness pervades everywhere; it is not a localised phenomenon; it is unlocated principle, unlike the body.

Then fourthly he said: ātma apramēyaḥ, that this consciousness can never be experienced as an object because it is ever the experiencer-subject. Apramēyaḥ.

Then fifthly he said: that this consciousness is Akartā, and Abhōktā; it does not perform any action and therefore does not have any puṇyam or pāpam; it is karma adhītaḥ karma phala adhītaḥ ca

And then sixthly and finally, Lord Kṛṣṇa said that ātma Nirvikaraḥ; this consciousness is not subject to any change.

Even when we talk about higher state of consciousness; people use these words higher state of consciousness; lower state of consciousness, etc. According to śāstras, there is no higher or lower state of consciousness, because if consciousness is also subject to states ~ higher and lower ~ it then indirectly means that it is subject to modifications.

Therefore, if at all we use the words the higher and lower state, it is not a state of consciousness, it is only a state of mind. The mind can be in a higher state, when the thoughts are noble. Sātvik. And the mind can be in the intermediary state, when the thoughts are rājasic. The mind can be in lower state, when the thoughts are tāmasic. Therefore the mind and thoughts can have superior and inferior states; there is no such thing called higher or lower state of consciousness: because, it is nirvikārah.

And Kṛṣṇa concluded this teaching by saying Arjuna you should understand that you are that ātma and not only you are that ātma, Bhīṣma is also that ātma alone, the body is only a temporary vesture. Vāsāṁsi jīrṇāni yatha vihāya; And Drōṇa is also ātma. Therefore there is no question of anyone killing anyone; or there is no question of anyone being killed by anyone. And once you understand this, you will be free from all guilt. And therefore Kṛṣṇa concluded saying in verse No.25, tasmādēvaṁ veditva. Having known that I am the ātma, nānuśōcitumarhasi. You should not grieve; you should not shirk your duty. Up to this we saw in the last class.

अथ चैनं नित्यजातं नित्यं वा मन्यसे मृतम् |
तथापि त्वं महाबाहो नैवं शोचितुमर्हसि || २ -२६ ||

atha cainaṁ nityajātaṁ nityaṁ vā manyasē mṛtam |
tathā'pi tvaṁ mahābāhō naivaṁ śōcitumarhasi || 2.26 ||

अथ च atha ca However, मन्यसे manyasē if you consider एनम् ēnaṁ this (ātma) नित्यजातम् nityajātaṁ to be constantly born नित्यं मृतं वा nityaṁ mṛtaṁ vā and constantly dying, तथा अपि tathā api even then, त्वम् tvam You अर्हसि न शोचितुम् arhasi na śōcituṁ should not grieve एवम् ēvaṁ like this, महाबाहो mahābāhō Oh Arjuna!

26. However, if you consider this (ātma) to be constantly born and constantly dying, even then, you should not grieve like this, Oh Arjuna!

In these verses, beginning from 26, Kṛṣṇa is giving a hypothetical argument. Suppose Arjuna does not accept this Vēdāntic-teaching. Because always the Vēdāntic approach is never to impose the teaching on any one. It is a clean-sharing of what the teacher knows with the student; the student has to be convinced and he must accept; but there is no question of imposition of the teaching. So Kṛṣṇa says: Arjuna you may not be able to accept this ātma. You may conclude that there is no such thing called ātma; because nobody has seen this ātma and you yourselves say that ātma cannot be seen also. Apramēyaḥ. Perhaps, the ātma may be an imagination and you may not be willing to accept that.

And there are so many other systems of philosophy also who does not accept this Vēdānta. And there are certain philosophy, certain system which accept an ātma within the body; like a branch of Buddhism; they accept that there is an ātma other than the body; but their philosophy is that the ātma is constantly changing, subject to birth and death. They believe in the ātma and they accept that the ātma is consciousness but they say that it is not eternal consciousness; it is a perishable consciousness. Arjuna you may believe in that ātma. Nitya-jātaṁ nitya-mṛtaṁ. It is called Kṣaṇika-vijñāna-vādaḥ, which says that there is an ātma, which appears and disappears, which appears and disappears, like that strobe light; it just burns off and on; or even car signal light. It is born and gone. Suppose you accept that philosophy.

Or there is another system of philosophy called the Cāruvāka philosophy. It is almost like modern science. He does not accept even a mind, because he asks for a proof for the existence of mind. He does not accept the mind; he does not accept intellect; he does not accept the ātma also. And according to that philosophy, this physical body alone is ātma. Ātma means what? The self. Therefore, he says Body alone is the ātma. Other than that there is nothing and there is no mind other than the body; therefore there is no one surviving the death of the body; therefore there is no heaven; no hell; therefore no travel after death; therefore he does not believe in karma, srāddham, previous janma, future janma, nothing he believes. He says: I am the body. What type of body? A temporary body and the body is ātma.

Kṛṣṇa says suppose you believe only in a temporary self, which is the body or the Buddhistic self. He says even in such a case, you should not get out of your duty. Why? He gives the reason. This is called abhupētya vādaḥ. Giving a hypothetical argument.

Atha ca. Arjuna, suppose you believe in the ātma; means your selves; which is nityaṁ jātaṁ, which is born constantly; and also nityaṁ va mṛtaṁ, and also it dies constantly; therefore Punarapi jananam, punarapi maraṇam, you believe in. According to Vēdānta, you do not have birth or death; but suppose you do not accept Vēdānta, and you say that I am subject to birth and death; he says even then, tathāpi tvaṁ naivaṁ śōcitumarhasi. Death should not be a cause of sorrow for you. So tathā'pi, Hey mahābāhō.

Hey Arjuna, tvam śōcitur na arhasi. You should not grieve. Why you should not grieve? Kṛṣṇa himself is going to explain further:

Verse 2.27

जातस्य हि ध्रुवो मृत्युर्ध्रुवं जन्म मृतस्य च |
तस्मादपरिहार्येऽर्थे न त्वं शोचितुमर्हसि || २-२७ ||

jātasya hi dhruvō mṛtyurdhruvaṁ janma mṛtasya ca |
tasmādaparihāryē'rthē na tvam śōcitumarhasi || 2.27 ||

हि hi Because, मृत्युः ध्रुवः mṛtyuḥ dhruvaḥ death is certain जातस्य jātasya for one who is born जन्म ध्रुवम् janma dhruvam and birth is certain मृतस्य च mṛtasya ca for one who is dead. तस्मात् tasmāt Therefore, त्वम् tvam you अर्हसि न arhasi na should not शोचितुम् śōcitur grieve अपरिहार्ये अर्थे aparihāryē arthē over this inevitable fact.

27. Because, death is certain for one who is born and birth is certain for one who is dead. Therefore, you should not grieve over this inevitable fact.

This is an important verse in which Kṛṣṇa gives a very very practical wisdom. You need not learn Vēdānta. You need not even believe in Ātma. Just have some common sense intelligence, you can live happily. And what is that common-sense intelligence? Kṛṣṇa says: Suppose Arjuna you take that you are the body, because you do not believe in a surviving mind, you do not believe in a surviving ātma, need not; suppose you are the body. So then you should learn to understand the nature of the body. You know that the body is born on a particular date, because you yourselves present the date of birth; wherever you go, the first thing is the date of birth; joining the school; company joining; anything date of birth is important. And from simple common sense experience you know: What? jātasya mṛtyuḥ dhruvaḥ. Learn to assimilate this; whatever is born will have to die one day. Just because I close my eyes, the fact is not going to be different. You cannot make the world dark by closing the eyes.

And that anything born is subject to death is proved by three: pramāṇās; pratyakṣa-pramāṇa tells me that daily reading the newspaper in obituary column somebody or the other is dying. Therefore, I know that there is no difference between the body of that person and this particular body that I have; or the body of my mother; or the body of my father; or the body of my wife; or the body of my husband; all of them are pañca-bhūtātmakam; and the other pañca bhūtā śarīraṁ is dying; that means every one of these bodies also has to die. This is pratyakṣa pramāṇām.

Not only pratyakṣa; anumānaḥ; inference also tells me that whatever has a beginning should necessarily have an end. yat kritakam tat anityam kritakatvat ghaṭavat. Whatever is a product will have an end. Therefore logic also tells me this body or Bhīṣma's body or Drōṇā's body, everyone will have to die.

And if you are not satisfied by perception and inference; the scriptures also clearly say; tat yathā iha karmacitō lōkaḥ kṣiyatē, ēvam ēva amutraḥ puṇyacitō lōkaḥ api kṣiyatē. Therefore, anything born out of karma; good karma or bad karma; it will have a beginning and end; the body is born out of karma and karma is like the oil when the oil goes away, is depleted; then the fire, the lamp also will go away. Similarly, life is like a lamp which is supported by the oil of Karma and every day, this karma is getting depleted; whether you remember it or not; whether you want to remember it or not; Arjuna, this is fact. jātasya mṛtyuḥ dhruvam. Meditate on this fact. Assimilate this fact.

And generally we do not mind applying this law, with regard to all other people, but we never want to apply this law to myself or the immediate surroundings. Anywhere death happens, we are all great philosophers. If we are born, death will happen! But what happens to the philosophy, when it happens somewhere around? That means I have not assimilated.

Assimilation of a law is applying that law in my life. Assimilation of a law is applying that law in my life. And as long as I do not do that, it is only unassimilated-knowledge. It is no more wisdom. Therefore Kṛṣṇa says jātasya mṛtyuḥ dhruvam. Dhruvam means definite. And that is why you will find in all purāṇic stories; that Rākṣasās doing tapas. This is the general trend of all stories. Whether it is Hiraṇyakaśipu or Rāvaṇa or Kumbhakarṇa, etc. any rākṣasā. And they will do sincere and serious tapas and make the Brahma appear. Then he will ask what varam he wants. Immediately he will blurt out. I want a boon that I will not die. Immediate reply of Brahma is what: that is not possible. This is the general trend. Thereafterwards, they try to get immortality by all other methods. I should not be killed during day time or night time. I should not be killed by animals. Not killed by weapons. All these rules they will ask. Bhagavān will remember the loophole and say OK.

Not like our Government; therefore Brahmāji or Viṣṇu or Śiva will thoughtfully OK and take Narasimha avatar and finish or Rāmāvathāram and finish and some avathāram and finish.

Throughout all these stories what do we learn? No one can escape death. Even when the Lord takes avathāra, the same story. Whether Rāma avathāra or Kṛṣṇa avathāra, there is a date of arrival and there is a date of departure. The only thing is you put in a nice language. svarga avarōhaṇam. If it is avathāra. If it is sanyāsi you say Samādhi. You may change the language, but the fact remains that the physical body will go; will have to go. And therefore, jātasya dhruvō mṛtyuḥ.

The other side of the coin is dhruvam janma mṛtasya ca. Death is never the end of a jīva. This is unique to our religion. So the other religions, they think human life is the only life and a person who dies, dhruvam janma mṛtasya ca.

In other religions, after death, a person will either go to permanent heaven, that means those people who follow their religion; and all other people like us, we will go to permanent hell. And Hindu teachers like us will have a special hell, because we are misleading all of you! They will all say that. We do not want to tell anything about it.

They have got the death and thereafterwards either permanent hell or permanent heaven; whereas in Hinduism, we say, death is never an end of the individual; he has got rebirth also. That is why capital punishment is possible in Hinduism because, in other religions, capital punishment is putting an end to the individual; you are not improving the individual. Whereas in Hinduism, even when the capital punishment is given, the Jīva can improve, in the next janma is there, because he has exhausted that karma, punishment he has got, he will get the better janma and at least he is purified by that. And therefore dhruvam janma mṛtasya ca. Rebirth is there certainly for a person who is dead; that is called punarapi jananam punarapi maraṇam cycle.

And therefore what is the first lesson you should learn in life; the first lesson to learn is accept life and death as an intrinsic part of the physical jīva or the physical body. And once you learn to accept them, there is no resistance towards them, the very resistance is called sorrow.

Therefore, tasmādaparihāryē'rthē na tvam śōcitumarhasi. Very very important line. Aparihāryē'rthē, a choiceless situation. Incurable situation. Remediless situation is called aparihāryaḥ artha. I would like to translate it as choiceless-situation. That means by using my effort, my will, my knowledge, or even by using God's grace I would not be able to change certain situation. We do not say all situations are choiceless, but there are many situations which are choiceless situations. And with regard to choiceless situation, what should we do. There is only one intelligent thing that you can do; and that is total surrender; total acceptance.

Accept the choiceless situation, is one of the important lessons of Gītā. And accept with understanding and not with murmuring, grumbling, crying, making other people also miserable. Not that way. Accept with maturity. Without complaint. Without irritation. Without getting angry with the whole world. When I do not accept a choiceless situation, I become angry with everyone. Even God and the planet and the world. These are all non-acceptance. And suppose a person says: I would love to accept but I am not able to accept what to do. I want to but I am not able to. Then what should I do. That is only one way; because you cannot change the choiceless situation is not going to change. If I am not prepared, there is only way out, that is prepare yourselves. If I am not prepared, learn to prepare and what is learning to prepare; first assimilate this fact by meditating on this fact; by dwelling on this fact; you assimilate and in addition to that, take the help of devotion of Lord; after-all according to Vēdānta Lord is nothing but your own higher potential or power, parā-prakṛti; it is called. By praying to the Lord, I am tapping my own immunity system; psychological immune system, my own inner power, my own inner potential, I am tapping. Therefore, by wisdom and surrender; by assimilation and surrender; strengthen the mind so that you can accept all choiceless situation.

If you study the life of an individual our own life you find choiceless situations are more than choiceful situation. That is more. That the repeated election itself shows how much choice you have got. Just if I study my life, my entire past is a choiceless situation. I cannot change my past. Whatever mistake I have done. My parentage, my date of birth, and my place of birth, my education and the family, the wife, husband, according to Indian law, husband and wife, are stuck. You cannot change. And the children and I might be born and brought up by someone other than my parents. I might have lost my father or mother early; or both of them early; or both of them might be there; I am born and brought out somewhere in the hostel or something. I might have lacked parental love; so many things could have happened. Including the ill-treatment by the parents. Or they need not directly ill-treat, they might have quarreled among themselves all the time, that is enough to disturb my psyche. All these things are my past. I cannot change. I should learn to accept my past and whatever damage is done to my mind, I can try to retrieve or change but the past cannot be changed. Therefore, 1/3rd is gone. Because past present future are there. Of the 3, 1/3 is gone.

What about present? Present is also choiceless situation. Present is that which is already present. Present means what? Present is that which is already present. That you are in the middle of this class, you cannot change that fact, because it is already an obtaining fact. Next moment, you want to sit here or not, that is your choice. But the present moment you are already here, you cannot alter the fact. And therefore, present is also choiceless. So 2/3 gone. How miserable we are you see. Three is there; and out of that two gone.

What is the next one? Future. With regard to future also, how much choice you have. There are many facts over which we have no choice at all. So we are only going to grow old only. Even though I would like to say that I am growing young, whether I like or not, old age, and death and the separation consequent separation, what all things will happen because of that, all of them are choiceless. And the weather, and the people and so many things are there and therefore a big chunk of the future also is choiceless. So therefore, past is choiceless, present is choiceless and part of future is also choiceless and where is the choice? A small part of the future. Whether to eat in the night or not. In that also, you have to eat whatever is served; that is a different matter. So therefore, whatever is available, you have to eat. You have got certain minimum choices to eat or not to eat, how much to eat etc. you can decide a few things. Therefore choiceful situations are few. Choiceless situations are many. Therefore the first lesson we should learn in life is to learn to gracefully accept the choiceless.

And there are certain situations which we can alter. Bhagavān has given us freewill; and even our fate can be changed in certain cases; that is why even the very 'Nombu' "Karadaiyan Nombu", the power of Sāvītri, is shown. Mārkaṇḍēya story is there; we have got enough stories in purāṇās to show that we do have some power over our fate and some part of fate we can alter. People repeatedly ask this question. Can fate be changed? For that the answer is: We ask a counter-question. Suppose you got to a doctor and ask, I have got some sickness. Can you cure it? What will the doctor say? Will he say: I will cure? No. Will he say I can't cure? No. Before answering he will say, I will see what type of disease is it is. And in certain types of diseases, he will say, nothing to worry. I can cure you completely. Only requires a mild surgery. If it is done, the rest of life, you will be fine. There are certain diseases, completely can be cured. Certain other diseases, he will say, there is no cure, but we have got certain medicines, using the medicines and certain disciplines, you can keep the problem under control and you can manage your life. Sugar, pressure, like that; you can manage to survive. And there are certain diseases the doctor will say, I have no cure; it is a written off case, you have six months to live. 8 months to live; you can do the prayers, go to whatever temples you want to go and come, etc. Thus depending upon the intensity of disease; either total cure, or partial cure or no cure.

Similarly, our fate is also of 3 types: certain type of fate, totally curable by doing remedies, prāyascitta, prayer, etc. And certain type of fate, you cannot totally cure; we can manage and certain type of fate, you cannot do anything. But the tragedy or the unfortunate thing, you do not know to which category your fate belongs. And therefore you assume that there is a remedy. And whatever remedy is prescribed, I take to that remedy and I should remember that, even when there is a remedy, it will take time, and until the remedy works, the situation is choiceless. After taking the medicine for 3 months or 6 months, the headache, the stomach ache may go. But until the remedy works, the situation is choiceless. Therefore, keep taking the medicine and accept the choiceless situation unless the remedy works.

And therefore, the most important attitude in life is acceptance of the choiceless and therefore Kṛṣṇa tells here, Hey Arjuna, aparihāryē arthē, with regard to the choiceless situation, which is called fact, tvaṁ śōcitum na arhasi. Do not grieve. If it is choiceful; act; if it is choiceless, accept. Therefore, your life is a series of actions and acceptance.

Where is the room for grief? Either you act, or you accept. Act or accept. Act or accept. One of the members in the family has got certain behavioral problem. Try to correct. Act. And you say Swāmiji, my husband is not at all changing. Then better accept. Why can't you talk to my husband, Swamiji? If I call your husband, he says, my wife is not changing? So therefore, what should I tell? Accept both. You accept him. Let him accept you. That is the only way. Na tvaṁ śōcitum arhasi.

भारत bhārata Oh Arjuna! भूतानि bhūtāni All beings अव्यक्तादीनि avyaktādīni are unmanifest in the beginning, व्यक्तमध्यानि vyaktamadyāni are manifest in the middle एव अव्यक्तनिधनानि ēva avyktanidhanāni and are unmanifest in the end का kā What (is the use of) परिदेवना paridēvanā गrieving तत्र tatra over them?

28. Oh Arjuna! All beings are unmanifest in the beginning, are manifest in the middle and are unmanifest in the end. What (is the use of) grieving over them?

So in this verse, Kṛṣṇa is explaining the phenomenon of birth and death, because when we understand birth and death very clearly; the sting, the impact of those two or their capacity to hurt us will be radically reduced. After all, ignorance creates lot of projections.

Somebody had nicely said: Ignorance is the darkroom in which all the negatives are developed. Think of it! Ignorance is the darkroom in which all the negatives are developed. In our mind also, all rāga, dvēṣa, kāmaḥ, krōdhaḥ, lōbhaḥ are very well developed, because it is tāmasa vyāptam, because of ignorance. Therefore Arjuna! Understand the phenomenon of birth and death, your fear would go away. Or at least, it would become less. And what is the understanding?

Really speaking, there is no question of destruction of anything or creation of anything. Total destruction does not exist; total creation cannot exist; because even according to the science, by the law of the conservation of matter and energy, you should know that “nothing is created, nothing is destroyed”. Even Bhagavān cannot create even a milligram of matter. We are ready to accept the omnipotence of the Lord. But our definition of omnipotence is: “an omnipotent one is he or she, who can do everything that is possible”. The very definition of omnipotence is capacity to do the possible. Creation of matter is impossible; which means even omnipotent God does not and cannot create even a milligram of matter. Then where is the question of janma and maraṇam? Birth and destruction. So it is not there?

Then what do you mean by birth and destruction? What it means is, changing from one form to another is called birth and death. Phenomenon is only one. One phenomenon is called birth from one angle, and it is called death from another angle. So when tomorrow is born, it is the death of today. When the water is evaporated into steam, the conversion is called death or destruction from the standpoint of water; it is called creation; from the standpoint of steam. And similarly, construction of this building, construction of this body; what is the birth and growth of this body? Destruction of lot of idlis and dosais and sambar is the creation. We do not talk about their destruction. Daily we are indulging in it. We are only seeing the construction of this body. So therefore, everything is changing from one form to another; the previous condition is called unmanifest condition; the present condition is called the manifest condition.

Therefore, he says, bhūtāni avyaktādīni. All the physical bodies existed before. All our physical bodies existed before. Even before the creation came. Praḷaya kālē. Before the big bang. To put in scientific languages. All our bodies existed. But in what form? Not in this form, but in potential form. You may call it energy. In Vēdānta, it is called Prakṛti. Prakṛti means the most rudimentary form of matter is called prakṛti which is not even energy, but further reduce the energy into the most fundamental form, because energy is at least there in four or five different forms. You have to condense all these energies and convert into one single basic form. That in Vēdānta is called prakṛti. Otherwise called avyaktaṁ, otherwise called Māya; otherwise called śakti, etc. Therefore our bodies existed; but in unmanifest form.

And now, in due course of time, all those unmanifest matter or particle, they have all condensed to form this physical body; which is in visible condition. Vyaktamadhyāni. For a few years. Maybe fifty, sixty, seventy, eighty, ninety, hundred, hundred ten, hundred twenty; I do not know what is the highest; you may break the Guinness Book of Records. Living for 150 years; a tortoise lives for 300 years. One may live like that. But one day, Avyaktanidhanānyēva, and again all these bodies will have to go back to invisible unmanifest condition.

So the conversion from unmanifest to manifest, is called janma, the conversion from manifest to unmanifest is called the maraṇam. We are only using two words; but the same set of matter is always there. And therefore Kṛṣṇa says, bhūtāni, means all beings here representing the bodies, śārīrāṇi, avyakta ādīni, unmanifest before, vyaktamadhyāni, is manifest in the middle, avyaktanidhanāni, again it will become unmanifest. So if you want example, like an arrow, travelling from that side of the hall to this side. Imagine it is going fast. Now beyond the enclosure you do not see, because it is all dark. Eternal distance, it is all darkness, you do not see; suddenly you see, the arrow coming. And if you take to travel from this area to that area, it may take a few minutes, and then again the other side, again unknown. What was I before my date of birth? I do not know. Thank God, I do not know. Not to be caught knowing! Again what is going to happen in after death, again I do not know; between two big Unknowns, there is a temporary brief Known existence. This is called Life. Tatra kā paridēvanā. So do not worry about that. Make use of the life, in the fullest form. Tatra kā paridēvanā. What is the use of worrying?

29. One sees this (ātma) as a wonder. In the same way, another one speaks about (it) as a wonder. Another hears of it as a wonder. Still, another ever understands it in spite of hearing.

So here Kṛṣṇa says: "Arjuna! Even if you are not able to understand this ātma and even if you are not able to believe in this ātma, or accept this ātma, I will not be surprised because this topic is extremely subtle, that it requires a lot of preparation for the understanding of this ātma". Therefore, He says, "ātma is a wonder; and ātma-jñānam is a greater wonder". Like they say, the theory of relativity, only a few people have understood it seems. So if this local-theory-of-relativity itself is like that, what to talk of the absolute-reality; which is beyond the sense-organs, which is supposed to be beyond the mind also; which is supposed to be beyond all concepts and therefore Kṛṣṇa says: the teaching itself is a wonder; in fact we need not keep this teaching secret because even if you tell everyone, it will remain secret. In that case, why should you not tell it? Therefore teach it. This is called open secret.

And why is this knowledge a very subtle and secret one? I will just give you a hint; then we will see the details of the ślōka later; only a hint now. This is a secret teaching because, all the time Kṛṣṇa is talking about the ātma; and as even Kṛṣṇa describes, we will think that Kṛṣṇa is talking about some object in the creation. When Kṛṣṇa says: it is Nityam, it is eternal, it is all pervading; as even we listen to that, we will try to imagine, where is it; could it be space?, how it will look like? So we will try to form concepts after concepts and there are some people who form a concept and hope to sit in meditation and think that one day that peculiar mysterious ātma will give darśan. And they will find that the more they meditate, nothing comes.

Now the snag is where? All the time, we should remember, ātma is not an object that is being talked about but it is the very subject about which Kṛṣṇa is talking. Therefore looking for the ātma is the basic mistake; this is called objectification-orientation. In Sāṅskṛīt it is called parōkṣa-buddhiḥ. Objectification-orientation: you imagine some mysterious Brahman; mysterious truth and look for some mysterious thing to happen in your meditation. Some people say: I am hearing some peculiar sound when I am meditating; Dayānanda Swami used to tell that, it must be that you are so much hungry; you think that it is ātma; it is simple internal disturbance. You should properly eat and start meditating! Some people say that they saw some ring, ring, etc. I saw flash appearing and disappearing; all the time we expect something to happen; either in the form of an event or in the form of an object and whatever you experience is not ātma because, it is an object. And when I negate everything, you tend to conclude that if you negate everything, then it must be śūnyaṃ; nothing is there.

Now the teacher has a very tough job; he has to negate everything and also tell that I am not talking about 'nothingness'. I have to tell that. Not only I have to tell, you should also understand and accept; both are necessary. I have to tell and you should understand and accept. Until that we have to work. Once it is understood, Kṛṣṇa says that this is the most beautiful thing to happen. Details in the next class.

All these verses, beginning from the 12th verse onwards, Lord Kṛṣṇa has been talking about ātma-svarūpam; what is the nature of ātma that is the real-Self; and how the ātma is different from anātma. Anātma meaning the body mind complex. And Kṛṣṇa had to differentiate Ātma and anātma because both of them are mixed together; they are not physically separate. And since they cannot be physically separated, we have a confusion and therefore Kṛṣṇa sorted this confusion by differentiating ātma, the consciousness from anātma, the body-mind-complex.

And Kṛṣṇa pointed out the anātma is not the real You, it is only a fake you; it is only a pseudo you; because it is temporary. You can use pseudo You, the anātma, for transactional purposes, but ultimately you have to recognise that I am someone different from the body-mind-complex. This wisdom of the real I is ātma-jñānam. This is called Self-realisation and this is called jñāna-yōgaḥ and this is called sāṅkya yōgaḥ, which is the title of the second-chapter.

And Kṛṣṇa wants to complete the discussion. In these two verses, 29 and 30, is the formal conclusion of the ātma-jñānam topic and Kṛṣṇa has introduced this topic to solve Arjuna's problem of sorrow. Because according to Vēdānta, ultimately, self-realisation alone can eliminate the problem of sorrow for good. Any other method can temporarily remove the sorrow or it can remove the sorrow to a limited extent; but the total removal is possible only through self-realisation. And therefore Kṛṣṇa has presented ātma-jñānam for śōka nivṛtti, freedom from sorrow.

And now concluding this topic in the 29th verse, Kṛṣṇa is talking about the glory of this knowledge. Ātma jñāna mahima, ātma-jñāna vibhūti, ātma-jñāna māhatmyam. What is the glory of this knowledge? We can talk about many glories, but Kṛṣṇa emphasises, what you call, the rareness or its uniqueness. This is the greatest wonder in the universe. Self-knowledge is the greatest āścaryam in the universe.

Now what does Kṛṣṇa mean by the word āścaryam or wonder? The idea is this. Every human being is knowingly or unknowingly looking for only certain fundamental goals in life. Even though superficially the goals are different; one may want success in business; another may want success in politics, another may want to extend his family; even though the goals are superficially different, fundamentally, the goals are the same alone. And what are they? A sense of fulfilment in life. So one wants it through knowledge; I mean material knowledge; one wants it through job or through politics, or through building things; various people use various methods but in and through everyone is seeking fulfilment in life.

And the second basic goal is a sense of discovery of security. There is the constant sense of insecurity in everyone. In fact when I do not have money, there is one type of insecurity; when I have lot of money, there is another type of insecurity. Insecurity varies, the type of insecurity varies; but it is constantly there. Thus, discovery of security. And finally, discovery of happiness; thus fulfilment, security, happiness etc. are the basic goals that everyone has.

And according to Vēdānta all these basic goals are represented by one word, i.e. ātma, or Brahman. In fact, Brahman or ātma is another word for fulfilment. It is another word for security. It is another word for happiness. Therefore, a person knowingly or unknowingly is seeking what? Ātma alone. If I ask him: Are you seeking ātma? He may say that I am not. But if I ask him do you seek fulfilment in life, he will say: Yes that is what I am seeking. Then we will say that is called ātma. Similarly, security is called ātma. Similarly peace is called ātma. Therefore in Vēdānta all people are seeking ātma alone.

And what is the greatest wonder in that seeking? The goal that is ātma which is sought after by everyone happens to be the very nature of the seeker. So the sought, that is the goal; which is called peace, security, fulfilment, etc. which is otherwise called ātma, the ātma happens to be one's own intrinsic self. In fact, in Sāṅskṛīt, the word ātma means Self; and therefore the greatest wonder is that everyone is seeking himself or herself without knowing that he is seeking himself or herself.

And since he does not know that he is seeking himself, he goes all over the world, in search of whom? In search of himself. So varieties of sciences he studies, varieties of business; varieties of accomplishment, varieties of this and that; all those things; not knowing that what he seeking is himself and when ultimately Vēdānta points out that what you are seeking is yourself; that discovery becomes the greatest wonder; I have been looking for myself only. But the unfortunate thing is for peace and security, we will seek everywhere in the world, except one place. The greatest hiding place you know what, is ourselves.

That is why they give this example, that a person was travelling in a train and it was a long journey. 3 days or 4 days journey. Trivandrum to Jammu or so; and this traveller was a business man. And he had lot of money; 500 rupee notes 100 of them; he was having. And daily morning he counts the money to make sure that the money is safe. And just opposite side there was another traveller; No.1 thief. His aim is, before we reach the destination the money should change the hands; not by donation; by other method. And therefore he plans that during the night when the other person is sleeping, I have to somehow steal the money. And then night throughout he searches all over; that man's pocket, under the pillow, suitcase, he searches and he is not able to find the money. Then he thinks perhaps it has been handed over. Next day morning; he comes; he wakes up and again this fellow is counting the money. It has become a big challenge for the thief; because he has successfully done it every time; but this time he is not able to do it. He thought that better luck, next nights; because there are four nights. Next day also the same thing; and again failure. Then the fourth day came, he could not find out and therefore he opened his mind; the thief: he said that I will tell my intentions; I am a thief and tried my best to take your money; I never succeeded; please tell me; it has become like a thriller, where did you hide the money? Then the businessman said: I hid in a place where you will never search. I hid the money in that place where you will never search. What is that? Under your own pillow. So what I do is, night before going to bed, you will go to the bathroom; therefore I hide under your pillow; then I feel it is the safest place for the money. Underneath and early morning you get up and go, I take away the money; that is all. Just as the thief never searched his own pillow; right from birth, we have never even remotely thought that peace is in us; security is in us; happiness is in us; even in our wildest dreams; we did not visualise.

And therefore bālastāvat kriḍāsaktaḥ; as a baby I thought it was in the toy; biscuits; when I grew up, biscuits continued but it is a different type of biscuit; gold biscuit; and thereafterwards one after the other, bālastāvat kriḍāsaktaḥ;

Taruṅstāvat taruṅī saktaḥ, vṛddastāvat cintāsaktaḥ; I tried it get it from my toys, from the spouse, from the children, from the grandchildren; from all over the world, I tried, I never tried one thing; I, and that is myself. And therefore, ātma happens to be the greatest secret.

Why it is the greatest secret? Because that is one which will never search for. When ultimately, the teacher says that you are what you are seeking, then it comes as a shock. And even when the Upaniṣads introduces ātma or Brahman, then also we think, I cannot be ānanda and security; we think ātma or Brahman is another object which is a source of joy. We think that it is another type of toy. Then again the teacher has to tell; never look for ātma, you will never come across; never look for Brahman, you will never come across. What I am saying is: you are that ātma or Brahman.

And therefore Brahman is not a new substance which is revealed by Vēdānta. Brahman is not a new substance revealed by Vēdānta; but it is a new status that I discover about myself. Until I come to Vēdānta, I have taken myself as insecure; I have taken myself as an unpleasant person; and Vēdānta removes that misconception and what it teaches us is that I have a new status: I am secure-I; pleasant-I; happy-I; fulfilled-I.

In the scriptures they give the example of Karṇa. When Karṇa goes to Kunti, Karṇa never thought he is the sixth Pāṅdava. You know the story in Mahābhāratha, that five Pāṅdavas are well known; Karṇa also is a Pāṅdava, or at least Kauntēyah; Kunti putrah; but Karṇa never knew. He thought that there are only five Kunti putrah. Imagine, Kunti tells him that there is a sixth Kauntēyah. There is six-sons for me. Then what will Karṇa ask? Where is he? He will ask. Imagine what Karṇa will think. He will never even in his wildest dream imagine that I am that: that ayam kauntēya asmi; that he has a very strong misconception that I am sūtaputra; Rādhēyah. Therefore when Kauntēyah is introduced; he will look around for the Kunti putrah. Then he will ask whether he is dark or fair. Whether he is tall or short. What is his age; have I ever met him; What can Kunti say: Can she say you have met him. Can she say that you have not met him? She cannot say you have met him or you have not met him. Because he is not a person to be met by Karṇa, because Kaunteyah happens to be Karṇa himself.

And therefore what is required is saying: That, the 6th one, you are looking for, is you yourself. When this revelation takes place, has Karṇa come to know about a new person? When Kunti reveals this fact, has Karṇa come to know about a new person? He has not known a new person, this is very old Karṇa.

But what he has come to know is, he has known a new status about an already known himself. It is only a recognition of a new status. Not even a new status. An old status, which was hidden from his vision; which he comes to know. And when he realises; is there anything in front of him? There is nothing new because she is talking about whom? Himself only.

And that knowledge is the most silent affair; I am Kunti putrah; which is of great consequence; Karṇa's greatest complex was that I am not a Kṣatriya. Kṣatriya blood was in him and all the time, Arjuna and others were teasing; I will not fight with you; because you are not a kṣatriya. Even Draupadi teases him; everybody teases him; Karṇa's biggest complex was I am akṣatriya; when Kunti uses the word, what happens; a misconception is gone; "I am a non-kṣatriya" notion is dropped and "a I am a kṣatriya" is owned up. Is there any physical change; no. Is there any mystic experience. No mystic experience. It is a simple and silent recognition of a fact.

But in TVs or movie, they will make a lot of noise; just to show that it has far reaching consequences; the moment Kunti makes this statement, there will be a daka taka katakada sound and they will zoom the faces and show it from a distance, etc. etc. and there will sweat in Karṇa face, and Kunti's face, because how to show in TV. Because the affair is a silent happening in the mind.

Similarly, here also aham brahmāsmi is a recognition of a fact about myself. Until now, I thought I am small. Until now, I thought I am insecure. And now I know security is my name. Fullness is my name; it is a silent dropping of a misconception which has got far reaching consequences, because thereafter, Karṇa could walk with his chest high. If Arjuna says you are not a kṣatriya; Karṇa can say, I am a kṣatriya.

Similarly, here also, a notion about myself is dropped. We are not coming across any new thing and therefore Self-knowledge is the greatest wonder, because whatever I seek, I am.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa says: kaścit ēnaṁ āścaryavat paśyati. So one student; one seeker sees this fact as a great wonder; because he wonders how I missed this fact all along. Even though we got a lot of clues in life. When we were children, we postponed our peace of mind for youth. All the children will think, you also would have thought, when you were young; I also thought; always envying the parents, because they need not study for exam; whereas he goes to office; and he does not do anything in office also perhaps!; does something and he comes and straight away falls in the sofa and switches on the 'Chitrahār' or ஒலியும் ஒளியும் oliyum oḷiyum or watches movies; no examination, no marks; no worries; therefore we always thought that parenthood could easily be the happiest thing. Now interview: we had pocket money, and so many other things; and no worries; we now envy our childhood days.

Now we again postpone. Waiting for retirement, Swamiji. And I plan to take voluntary retirement; so that I can spend more time. Many people have said that after retirement, I will be near you feet only!! What is this thing now? Before retirement, he was attending three classes; now he is hardly able to make to even one class. Not referring to anyone here. Remember. Because by example from some other class; so that I am not creating any doubt in anyone. Now he says when I was working, all jobs I could get done through the office. Now the thing is: the children are in America and we two are only there; and I have to do everything myself; the banks, post-office; I now feel that in the working days, I could have studied better.

What I want to say is that we always have been postponing security, peace, etc. and we have miserably failed like the horizon; it has been only receding further; it has been only a wild goose chase; the very fact that it is receding all the time; should have made us think. Is my direction of search the right thing? Because the direction, if it is right, after 20 years, I should have discovered peace. At least after 40 years I should have discovered; at least after 60 years, I should have discovered. The very fact that it has been receding, indicates that perhaps I may be searching in a wrong direction.

But the glory of māya is such that you will go on searching; we never wait even for a moment. By some puṇya if we come to Vēdānta, then alone discover and when we discover it is the greatest wonder. Sixty years I went after something which is in myself. Like that Brahmaṇa who went to the mahāmaham tank for bathing and then after bathing he found his ring was missing; therefore he wanted to search for the ring; and he found that the tank was too crowded for searching and therefore he thought that I will go to some other tank and search, because there is no crowd there. He therefore went and searched in the other tank and another person saw that this person is looking for something and asked him; this person said that he is looking for his ring; then he said I will also help you out, because Gīta says: karma-yōgaḥ self-less service, I will also join the search; the third person also joined; then the crowd has become 25. All are searching, in the very small pond; and then one intelligent person came and asked what are you searching; he said that my ring; where did you drop? In that tank; he said. Fools why are searching for that here; because it is very well lit and less crowded also. what type of approach it is. It is utterly foolish approach; but still people are so sheepish and everybody does the same thing; my great-grand father did that and therefore I also do; my father did; therefore I do; and the whole world; like a sheep is searching for fullness; security and peace in the world; what is the world? the free tank. Searching here I am searching everywhere and when I discover that it is here it becomes the greatest wonder. Therefore, kaścit ēnaṁ āścaryavat paśyati.

And āścaryavadvadati tathaiva cānyaḥ. Another person reveals this fact as the greatest wonder in the world.

And āścaryavaccainamanyaḥ śṛṅōti; one who listens to this fact and he also listens to as the greatest wonder. So listening to this teaching is wonder, seeing this fact is a wonder; revealing this fact to others is wonder. In the field of self-knowledge, everything is wonder. Kṛṣṇa borrows this idea from Kathōpaniṣad. In Kathōpaniṣad the same idea is given.

श्रवणायापि बहुभिर्यो न लभ्यः
शृण्वन्तोऽपि बहवो यं न विद्युः |
आश्चर्यो वक्ता कुशलोऽस्य लब्धा
आश्चर्यो ज्ञाता कुशलानुशिष्टः || १.२.७ ||

śravaṇāyāpi bahubhiryō na labhyaḥ śṛṅvantō:'pi bahavō yaṁ na vidyuh | āścaryō vaktā kuśalō:'sya labdhā
āścaryō jñātā kuśalānuśiṣṭaḥ ||1.2.7||

The teacher, the guru of this ātma is a wonder; the śiṣya who receives the knowledge is wonder; and among all these wonders, what is the greatest wonder; he says after listening to the teaching for such a long time, some people do not understand it; that is the greatest wonder. Because if we are talking about X, Y, Z, we can think, he does not understand. But all the time the scriptures are talking about what? Myself, which is ever-evident-conscious-principle.

Therefore, teacher is a wonder; knower is a wonder, and a non-knower, the one who does not understand is the greatest wonder. He says śrutvā'pyēnaṁ, even after listening to many years; kaścit naiva vēda; some people never understand; you know what is the block; the block is 'objectification-tendency'. We always want to either see the ātma or experience the ātma, as an object. Therefore, either I look outside or I look inside. I think ātma is either outside or inside that is the biggest misconception.

Then understand ātma is neither outside me, nor it is inside me, and what is it? Is it then Zero? Ātma is neither outside, nor inside me; it is Me. There is no preposition connecting ātma and myself. And that knack to get is, difficult for some people. Once we get a knack, it is a like a puzzle. Until you get that knack of fitting it properly, you will not be able to. But once you have seen the clue, it is the easiest thing.

Verse 2.30

देही नित्यमवध्योऽयं देहे सर्वस्य भारत ।
तस्मात् सर्वाणि भूतानि न त्वं शोचितुमर्हसि ॥ २.३० ॥

dēhī nityamavadhyō'yaṁ dēhē sarvasya bhārata |
tasmāt sarvāṇi bhūtāni na tvam śōcitumarhasi || 2.30 ||

भारत bhārata Oh Arjuna! अयं देही ayaṁ dēhī This Ātma, सर्वस्य देहे sarvasya dēhē (present) in every body नित्यम् nityam is ever अवध्यः avadhyah indestructible. तस्मात् tasmāt Therefore, त्वम् tvam you अर्हसि न शोचितुम् arhasi na śōcitum should not grieve सर्वाणि भूतानि sarvāṇi bhūtāni for the sake of any being.

30. Oh Arjuna! This Ātma, present in every body, is ever indestructible. Therefore, you should not grieve for the sake of any being.

After glorifying this knowledge, Kṛṣṇa concludes this ātma-jñānam topic in this slōka repeating or summarising what he has said until now. So what is this summary of this teaching? The lesson, the first lesson, is that the body is mortal subject to old age, disease and death. We do have a lot of power over these things to some extent; but we cannot conquer these three things. Old age is inevitable; disease is inevitable; and even if we avoid these two, death is inevitable. And once we are born here, we should be ready to accept this fact. And the most unfortunate thing is we do not know when the death is. That is why when Parīkṣit got the śāpa that within seven days he would die, people thought, or some people thought Parīkṣit is sad, but Parīkṣit said it seems that I am very happy. Because seven days I will live. That is guaranteed. For all the other people, since the time of death is not predicted, it can be any moment. And therefore, first be ready to welcome the death. This mental-preparation and this acceptance of physical-mortality is the first-lesson.

And what is the second-lesson? Behind the mortal-body, is the real I. The mortal-body is only the superficial-I, but the real-I is behind the moral body, which is called dēhī. Therefore dēhaḥ anityaḥ dēhī nityaḥ. And you have to extend this to Bhīṣma, Drōṇa, etc.

also. Once you are mentally prepared, their death will not shock you. Certainly, death will disturb the mind; after all we are human beings; death is a very big shock, especially when it is in very close quarters.

The study of Vēdānta and assimilation of Vēdānta may not and will not totally remove the disturbance, but it will become tolerable and manageable that I learn to accept it; it disturbs me for some time and I know that this is part of life and I have to continue my journey. Just because one member gets down from the train, the train cannot stop nor can my journey stop; I will have to continue the journey.

Therefore the greatest advantage is nothing shocks me. Maximum what happens is disturbance which is manageable disturbance. And therefore Arjuna you also assimilate this wisdom.

He says: ayaṁ dēhī nityam avadhyah; ayaṁ dēhī, means this ātma, which was described in all the previous ślōkas, like nityah, satyah, sarvagathaḥ, akartā, abōktā, in short the caitanya, the consciousness is Nityam avadhyah, ever immortal. It is ever indestructible. And where does it reside? Sarvasya dēhē. This permanent-ātma, indestructible-ātma is encased in the perishable body. Sarvasya dēhē vartataḥ bhārata. Sarvasya dēhē, vadhyah dēhē, the body which is mortal and having appreciated this fact extend the same law with regard to Bhīṣma and Drōṇa.

Our problem is what? Mortality we are ready to accept. But as long as it is taking place elsewhere. But what is really required is extend the law to everyone; whether it is close me or far away from me. And therefore Kṛṣṇa says: sarvāṇi bhūtāni śōcitum na arhasi. You should never grieve over any living being; over the death of any living being; over the old age of any living being; whatever help you can do to alleviate the pain you do, and if you can try to extend the life by giving medicine etc. If that is also possible, we should . After all everybody is perishable, therefore, why should I give medicine, do not ask. Be careful. Do not say that. Therefore that is not the argument. What is my duty, Kṛṣṇa is going to tell. We are going to discuss the duty in the following verses. My duty is helping the person to be happy and comfortable and make him survive as long as possible and in spite of all my efforts, when the death comes, then I am supposed to accept it as what? A fact of life. Therefore, never grieve. And grief is not going to change a fact. Grief is never going to change a fact.

स्वधर्ममपि चावेक्ष्य न विकम्पितुमर्हसि ।
धर्म्याद्धि युद्धाच्छ्रेयोऽन्यत् क्षत्रियस्य न विद्यते ॥२.३१॥

svadharmamapi cāvēkṣya na vikampitumarhasi |
dharmyāddhi yuddhācchrēyō'nyat kṣatriyasya na vidyatē || 2.31 ||

अपि च api ca Moreover, अवैक्ष्य स्वधर्मम् avēkṣya svadharmam considering your own duty also, अर्हसि न विकम्पितुम् arhasi na vikalpitaṁ you should not waver हि hi Because, क्षत्रियस्य kṣatriyasya for a warrior न अन्यद् विध्यते na anyad vidyatē nothing else is श्रेयः śrēyaḥ greater धर्म्याद् युद्धात् Dharmyāt yudhdāt than a righteous war.

31. Moreover, considering your own duty also, you should not waver. Because, for a warrior nothing else is greater than a righteous war.

With the previous verse, Kṛṣṇa concludes the discussion of ātma-jñānām or ātma-anātma-vivēka and Kṛṣṇa has given this as a medicine for Arjuna's sorrow; and not only for Arjuna's sorrow, Arjuna's delusion also. And what is Arjuna's delusion. Whether I should fight the war or not? That delusion also must go and Arjuna must be ready to fight this dharma-yuddham. Misplaced ahimsa is as worse as misplaced himsa is. So in the name of non-violence; Arjuna should not withdraw from the war, because the non-violent methods are exhausted for the sake of law and order or for the sake of dharma, a kṣatriya should be ready to take to even violent methods. Thus violence or himsa or yuddha as a last resort is a dhārmic method only.

And therefore, Arjuna should take to this war. And for this alone, Kṛṣṇa is approaching from three different levels; I said in the introduction, the first level, philosophical-level, in Sāṅskṛit it is called adhyātmika-dṛṣṭi; the second-level is ethical-level; that is dhārmica-dṛṣṭi; the final-level is empirical-level; that is loukika-dṛṣṭi.

With the 30th verse, the philosophical level discussion is over. And if Arjuna understands Kṛṣṇa's teaching, he does not require any other solution for his problem; but unfortunately many people find it difficult to grasp the philosophical teaching. It requires some amount of maturity. And if that maturity is not there; Vēdānta can be easily misinterpreted. Because in the previous verses, Kṛṣṇa said ātma is akartā and abhōkta and therefore it does not have puṇyam or pāpam, because it does not do any action. Then a person can easily argue, what? Go on doing all the akramam, and he can tell, after all I-the-ātma am akartā and abōktā. And just as Kṛṣṇa is asking Arjuna to fight, anybody can kill another person and say after-all body is perishable. One can quote this. Dēhī nityamavadhyō'yaṁ dēhē sarvasya bhāratha. After all body is mortal only. What is wrong in killing a person and I have not killed the real person; because he is eternal. Therefore every murderer can abuse the vēdānta teaching that abuse means a person has not understood Vēdānta; because real Vēdānta is never against dharma.

Vēdānta can really co-exist only with dharma and therefore Kṛṣṇa wants to come down to the next level, that from dhārmic angle also Arjuna fighting this war is proper. Bhīṣma is to be killed; not because his body is mortal; or Drōṇa is to be killed; not because his body is mortal; that the bodies are mortal does not mean we can go on killing everyone. Bhīṣma, Drōṇa etc. are to be killed because they are in the adhārmic group. Even though Bhīṣma himself may be great, even though Drōṇa himself maybe great; unfortunately, they have joined to Duryōdhanā; therefore from ethical angle, whether you know philosophy or not, does not matter, analysing from ethical angle, moral angle, you have to fight this war; and therefore, the dhārmic angle begins from verse No.31. This goes up to verse No.33. 31 to 33 is from dhārmic angle Arjuna has to fight.

So he says: svadharmamapi cāvekṣya na vikampitumarhasi. Arjuna, you might not understand ātma; does not matter. From the standpoint of your duty, svadharma, you should never have hesitation. You should never waver. You should not think that they are your gurus, they are elders; because dharma is more important, which is śāśvatam. Here Kṛṣṇa uses the word svadharma, which is a technical word and I would give a brief idea on svadharma. We would be discussing this topic later.

Dharma is classified into two types: one is called sāmānya dharma and another is called viśeṣa dharma. Sāmānya dharma, means universal dharma. It does not depend upon a person's varṇa, whether he is a brahmaṇa, kṣatriya, vaiśya, śudra, whether one is male/female, whether one is brahmachāri, gr̥hastha or vānaprasthi, or sanyāsi; certain sāmānya dharmas are there; general rules are there; yamās and niyamās; ahimśa is a sāmānya dharma; satyam, speaking truth is universal dharma; āsthēyam, not taking somebody else's property is a universal dharma, brahmacaryam, chastity is another universal dharma, aparigraham, simplicity is another dharma. By simplicity what we mean is that wealth must be equally distributed.

As somebody nicely said, nature has provided for human need; but nature has not provided for human greed; when there is human greed; one person has got too much food to eat; in fact, he dies of over-eating. And in another place, people do not have enough food to eat; that means there is an imbalance. And I should not be responsible for that imbalance; and when I have got more, I should be ready to share with others; that sharing tendency is called aparigraḥ. This is also universal dharma.

Then śaucam. Cleanliness is universal duty. Hygiene. I should keep my house, I should keep my dress, I should keep my office and also the road in front of me, generally, road in front of me is not mine we generally think; whatever I do not want, I put there. Therefore road in front of me, and the neighbouring house also. So śaucam.

Santōṣam, learning to be contented with what I have that is freedom from jealousy. Never compare. Comparison leads to jealousy, leads to competition; leads to all kinds of evils. Therefore, non-comparing mind. śauca, santōṣam.

Tapah, tapaḥ means self-discipline, indiscipline is the easiest thing; self-discipline is fundamental duty of human being, beginning from punctuality. Punctuality is a great virtue and it is divine and all, but if you are punctual, you are a human being only. That means if you are not, I do not want to fill up the blanks.

These are the basic qualifications. When I say I come at five o'clock, I come at five o'clock. It is natural. If people do not understand, I have to say 'sharp five'. Why all this; five means sharp. Next very sharp we have to say. Where is the end? Say it and mean it. I had kept a meeting and I made announcement two months before and people were coming and asking Swamiji, you never announced it again. Why should I announce it again? When I announced first time, I mean it.

Just because I did not announce second time; they are wondering whether it is there or not. See the akramaṇ. Times have come to this. Second time you did not announce, therefore I thought that it is not there. That means that if one announcement is made, it is not definite. The whole life has become like that. Someone used to say: I keep the clock 10 minutes ahead." Because I do not have confidence in myself. I know this is the time, and follow it. This is called self-discipline. Thought word, and deed, that is called tapaḥ, śaucam, santōṣam, tapaḥ.

Svādhyaya. Scriptural study is also samānya dharma. Everyone has to study scriptures. Scriptural teachers have to study more but all other people should study some basic thing because, scriptures tell you how to live a harmonious life. College will not teach you that; they will teach you how to earn money.

It does not teach how to treat your wife; many people do not know that fundamental thing. Because for marriage, no qualification is kept. If you becomes 20 or 25, you become ready for marriage. No other qualification. Therefore people do not talk about qualification; getting marriage requires greatest qualification. Otherwise you ill-treat the wife and children suffer because of that and ēvaṁ parampara prāptaṁ the child ill-treats his wife and like that it continues.

So therefore, scriptural study is for brāhmaṇa, kṣatriya, vaiśya, all the people have to study the scriptures. You should therefore not say, I do not have time. Better attend the classes regularly. So therefore, sāmanya dharma.

Then finally, Īśvara praṇidhānā, surrender to the Lord, is another samānya dharma for everyone. Just pañca-yama, pañca-niyamaḥ, daśa-samānya-dharma.

And then we have got viśeṣa-dharmāḥ; specific duties which will vary from group to group; whether he is a brāhmaṇa, kṣatriya or vaiśya, or whether he is a brahmacāri, gr̥hastha, or sanyāsi, whether one is male or female, and in the office also, what designation he has got; that is the duty of an individual depending upon his designation in life. And the viśeṣa dharma is called svadharmā.

I will discuss varṇāsrāma dharma later. According to varṇāsrāma dharma, brāhmaṇa has no right to fight a war. If brāhmaṇa fights, it is adharmā. If a brāhmaṇa finds injustice, he can only report it to the kṣatriya; just as we have no right to beat a thief or burglar. We have got a law and order department. Even if you catch a thief, you have to handover to the Police. We have no right to punish. It is illegal and improper. If the police beats, it is not a pāpam, it is svadharmā. If I beat him, it is violation of my dharma; I will incur pāpam for that. Even though what the other person has done is wrong, I have to do according to my designation only; and here Arjuna happens to be a kṣatriya; therefore within his svadharmā, fighting war is OK. And therefore Arjuna as a kṣatriya, you have to fight this war. Police cannot say, I want to follow ahimsa; therefore I cannot keep the lathi, etc. He has to keep a revolver, he has to keep a lathi, keep everything; why even our gods have got weapons. For putting it on our heads; when we do akrama, Bhagavān has to do that. So Arjuna, better be aware of your social duty. The details in the next class.

dharmyāddhi yuddhācchrēyō'nyat kṣatriyasya na vidyatē || 2.31 ||

Lord Kṛṣṇa wants to remove Arjuna's sorrow caused by attachment and also the Lord wants to persuade Arjuna to fight the dhārmic war; dharma yuddham and for this purpose, he is trying to convince Arjuna from different levels of discussion. First he took up the philosophical angle and that is adhyātmika dṛṣṭi; and he elaborately discussed ātma-anātma vivēka. And his argument was from the standpoint of ātma, there is no question of anybody killing anyone, because ātma is eternal; and from the standpoint of anātma or body, mortality of the body has to be accepted. Ātma is never mortal and anātma is ever mortal. And the one who owns up the immortality of ātma and the one who accepts the mortality of the body, that person is a wise man. And therefore Arjuna you should accept the mortality of Bhīṣma śārīram, Drōṇa śārīram, etc. and once you learn to accept that; there is no cause for grief at all. This was the discussion up to verse No.30.

And now from philosophical level, Lord Kṛṣṇa is coming down to ethical or moral-level which I called dhārmica-dṛṣṭi. From verse No.31 up to verse No.33, it is ethical-angle and Lord Kṛṣṇa points out that from dhārmica-dṛṣṭi also, Arjuna can and should fight the war. No doubt karma-śāstra says ahimsa paramō dharma. Non-violence is the duty, is a value to be followed by all. But at the same time, the same dharma-śāstras says that ahimsa is a sāmānya dharma, a general value, which has got exceptions; that means there are exceptional cases where violence is allowed; not only it is allowed, it becomes the duty of a ruler. Similarly, with regard to satyam also, truthfulness is the general rule; but there also they give exception in certain cases, when a person tells a lie, in extreme conditions or āpad-dharmaḥ; we have got a set of values called āpad-dharmaḥ, in crisis situation, asatyam is also accepted.

So thus for every general rule, there is an exception. So one should pay tax is general rule. But the government itself gives certain exception when the tax is exempted. For some people, everything is exempted. Govt. permitted exemption. Similarly we have to follow traffic rules, but there are exceptions, ambulance, the President's vehicle, or the Minister's vehicle, etc. they are exempted. Similarly ahimsa is a sāmānya-dharma, in Sāṅskṛit general rule is called utsargaḥ and exception is called apavādaḥ. Every utsargaḥ has an apavādaḥ.

Similarly Arjuna! The utsargaḥ rule you should not kill people, and apavādaḥ rule is killing is allowed for the sake of maintaining law and order. And there also, after trying sama, dhāna, and bēdha, after trying non-violent methods; if all of them fail, and for the sake of dharma, yuddha is required, dharma-yuddha is perfectly ethical only. And that is why the very word kṣatriya means kṣatāt, adharmāt trāyatē iti kṣatriya. Kṣatāt means adharma. A defect in society is called kṣatāḥ. That is why a full rice is called akṣatā. akṣatā means that which is unbroken; whole. kṣatā means broken or defective and it is adharma at social level, क्षत्रिया kṣatriya means adharmāt trāyatē.

And how do you protect the society from adhārma? Only by changing the adhārmic people, that is first attempt. Convert the adhārmic people into dharma and if they are not ready for conversion; eliminate the adhārmic-people. Therefore either convert the adhārmic people and if they are not available for conversion, eliminate the adhārmic people. I have given the example before, the amputation a doctor does. The aim of a doctor when a limb is defective is change the limb from unhealthy-limb to healthy-limb; but if the change is not possible and if that unhealthy limb is going to affect the whole body, what does the doctor do? Then amputation; that is capital punishment. Lord himself would say in the 4th chapter; - paritrāṇāya sādḥūnāṃ vināśāya ca duṣkṛtām. And therefore Arjuna, you come under kṣatriya group therefore you have to fight.

And this maintenance of law and order is not the duty of all the people. Just as here also, I have no right to punish a person who is a criminal who has done a crime; as I said the other day, if there is a thief, I can catch a thief and I can hand over the thief to the police but I have no right to punish the thief. Because he has stolen something, I tried to punish or hit, then I have done a crime; therefore I can be punished. Because the rule is that the department which has got the right to punish; they alone should punish and therefore punishment becomes svadharma of a segment of the society. Whoever is in charge of law and order, they alone have the right to punish and Arjuna being a kṣatriya, Lord Kṛṣṇa says that you alone has the right to punish, not only that you should punish.

And therefore, he says, svadharmamapi cāvēkṣya, considering your own jati dharma, or varṇa dharma, because Arjuna belongs to a kṣatriya -varṇa. So considering your varṇa dharma, na vikampitumarhasi. You should not act like a Brāhmaṇa. Brāhmaṇa should follow non-violence; Vaiśya should follow non-violence; śūdra should follow non-violence; kṣatriya should follow non-violence generally but he should take to violence in particular cases; therefore do not act like a Brāhmaṇa, act like a kṣatriya. na vikampitumarhasi.

Whereas when Drōṇācārya takes to war, Drōṇa is born a Brāhmaṇa, he is not supposed to take to violence. That is why in the middle of Mahābhāratha war, Bhīma and other people heavily criticise Drōṇa, you have violated your svadharma for which Drōṇa did not have any answer at all. Even though Drōṇa knows archery, even though Drōṇa alone has taught all other people, Drōṇa has a right to teach alone, but he has no right to take to yuddham. All the people criticised Drōṇa, and he does not have an answer. If Drōṇa fights, it is wrong; if Arjuna does not fight; it is wrong. Therefore, Arjuna, na vikampitumarhasi. You should not waver.

On the other hand, you should look upon this opportunity as a great blessing. Do not look upon the war as a tragedy, as a curse; but you look upon this war, as an opportunity to sacrifice your life for the sake of the dharma.

During our freedom struggle when our people used to go to jail, after coming out they used to claim as a great tyāgi; even now there are tyāgis still alive. They considered going to jail as a virtue, because, for any other purpose you go to jail, it is a blackmark but when it is done for the sake of noble cause, it becomes a great thing. Similarly, here also, dharmyāddhi yuddhācchreyo: 'nyat na vidyatē. There is nothing greater than a dharma yuddha; sacrifice of the life for the sake of dharma.

So dhārmīyam means moral; righteous; so there is nothing superior to a righteous war; for whom: not for a Brāhmaṇa, not for a vaiśya or śūdra, but क्षत्रियस्य kṣatriyāsya, for a kṣatriya, there is no better opportunity.

Verse 2.32

यदृच्छया चोपपन्नं स्वर्गद्वारमपावृतम् ।
सुखिनः क्षत्रियाः पार्थ लभन्ते युद्धमीदृशम् ॥ २.३२ ॥

yadṛcchayā cōpapannaṃ svargadvāramapāvṛtam |
sukhinaḥ kṣatriyāḥ pārtha labhantē yuddhamīdṛśam || 2.32 ||

पार्थ pārtha Oh Arjuna! सुखिनः क्षत्रियाः sukhinaḥ kṣatriyāḥ only fortunate लभन्ते labhantē get ईदृशं युद्धम् īdṛśam yudhdam such a righteous war, उपपन्नम् upapannam which has come to you यदृच्छया yadṛcchayā by chance, च अपावृतम् ca apāvṛtam and which is an open स्वर्गद्वारम् svargadvāram gateway to heaven.

32. Oh Arjuna! Only fortunate Kṣatriyas get such a righteous war, which has come to you by chance, and which is an open gateway to heaven.

The second line should be read as sukhinaḥ kṣatriyāḥ pārthaḥ; this is a rule for reading; after the two dots, whenever kṣaḥ letter comes, the two dots should be completely pronounced as ha: sukhinah kṣatriya pārtha is wrong reading; sukhinaḥ kṣatriyāḥ pārthaḥ. Not only in this context, in any context, whenever the two dots are there, in Sānskrit it is called visargha; whenever visargha is followed by kṣaḥ, the visargha should be completely pronounced.

We will get another case in the fifth chapter; labhantē brahmanirvāṇamṛsayāḥ kṣīṇakalmaṣāḥ; ṛsayāḥ kṣīṇakalmaṣāḥ; in ṛsayāḥ two dots are there; kṣīṇakalmaṣāḥ; ksha is there; ṛsayā kṣīṇakalmaṣāḥ is wrong. ṛsayāḥ kṣīṇakalmaṣāḥ.

Even for pronunciation the rules are there; Paṇini writes a special sutra for reading in this manner. sarbarē visarjanīyāḥ. Special sutra for reading of also. Therefore sukhinaḥ kṣatriyāḥ parthaḥ is the reading.

Now here Kṛṣṇa says: Arjuna you should look upon this opportunity as a great blessing. So you can find in certain countries or in certain communities, they talk about the suicide squad. Suicide squad for wrong reasons, which is a different matter. What is suicide squad? One set of people come forward and they say that we are ready to sacrifice our lives for the sake of our country. Here also for a kṣatriya he is ready to commit suicide; that is to sacrifice his life, he does not consider it a tragedy. Among the rajaputs family also, when there is an opportunity for wars, when the Rajaput princes comes and take leave of their wives; wives do not send them with tears; because those princesses also were Rajaput princesses; they had that blood in them; therefore they never cry, they only say that we have got an opportunity to sacrifice; do not sit here; therefore these ladies used to send: you go there and better die; we do not want you to be alive when there is a cause.

So this is the very blood and not an occasion for crying and he says: yaddacchayā upapannam, opportunity for a great sacrifice of your life has come yaddacchayā; by chance you have got it and not only that if you are going to sacrifice your life, you may lose on the earth, but from the śāstric angle, this is an opportunity to go to svarga. According to dharma-śāstra, when a person sacrifices the live for dharma, he gets the heaven. And that heaven is called veera svargha. Just as people go to heaven by doing rituals, the kṣatriyās also go to heaven not by doing rituals or anything, but by sacrificing their life itself, they get veera svarga. Therefore, Kṛṣṇa says this is svarga-dvāram. Dvāram, gateway, svarga the heaven. Dharma yuddhaḥ is a gateway to heaven.

And that too what type of headway. Apāvṛtam svargadvāram. It is an open door. Who will get such an opportunity? Sukhinaḥ kṣatriyāḥ īdrśaṁ yudhdam labhantē, only fortunate kṣatriya; blessed kṣatriyās alone will get such an opportunity, such a call for a noble cause. Therefore, Arjuna, do not miss this opportunity.

hitvā you will be forsaking, स्वधर्मम् svadharmam your duty च कीर्तिम् ca kīrtim and honour, अवाप्स्यसि पापम् avāpsyasi pāpam you will incur sin.

33. On the other hand, if you do not fight this righteous war, then, you will be forsaking your duty and honor, you will incur sin.

So Kṛṣṇa said that you have to fight this war by which you will attain heaven and suppose Arjuna argues I am not interested in heaven. I would like to live this life along with Bhīṣma, Drōṇa, etc. and I would not like to kill them and go to heaven. I am ready to sacrifice the heaven for the sake of Bhīṣma, Drōṇa, etc. For that Kṛṣṇa says: if you do not fight this war, not only you will not get the heavens; on the other hand, you are going to get hell only. You are going to get hell only because if a person renounces his duty, that omission of the duty is considered to be a pāpam according to śāstra. Pāpam is divided into two types, pāpam in the form of doing what should not be done: commission: is one type of pāpam. Doing what should not be done. In Sāṅskṛit it is called niṣiddha-karaṇam. Niṣiddha-karaṇam means doing what should not be done. Suppose the śāstras says: sūrām na pibhēt. One should not take liquor. In fact, one is not supposed to even smell. One should not even go near. Even smelling is considered to be a type of pāpam. Lower type of pāpam. And drinking is higher type of pāpam. Now this is niṣiddha karma, if a person drinks, then the pāpa is called niṣiddha-karaṇa rūpa-pāpam. In English, it will come under Commission; committing a sin, which is one type of pāpam.

There is a second type of pāpam and that is not doing what should be done. So we are supposed to pay the taxes. Suppose to pay the duty. If a person does not do that and then he is punished, he should not argue, that I did not do anything, (including "not paying the tax"), why are you punishing me, I did not do anything and after all not paying the tax also is not doing anything only; why are you punishing me; you should not ask; not paying the tax will come under another type of pāpam and what is that vihitha akaraṇam. So niṣiddha-karaṇam and vihitha-akaraṇam. So that is why

श्रवणनयनजं वा मानसं वापराधं ।
विहितमविहितं वा सर्वमेतत्क्षमस्व । जय जय करुणाब्धे श्रीमहादेव शम्भो ॥

karacaraṇa kṛtaṁ vākkāyajaṁ karmajaṁ vā |
śravaṇanayanajaṁ vā mānasaṁ vāparādhaṁ |
vihitamavihitaṁ vā sarvamētatksamasva |
jaya karuṇābdhē śrīmahādēva śambhō ||

There how should one understand. Vihitha-akaraṇam and avihitha-karaṇam cha; sarvam ēthat kṣamasva. If Arjuna does not fight this war, it will come under what type of sin?

Vihitha akaraṇam, in English it will come under Omission. Arjuna you would not get commission-sin; you will get omission_sin. In Sāṅskṛit it is called pratyavāya_sin. Vihitha-akaraṇam is called pratyavāya-pāpam.

And that is what is said here: atha cēttvamimarṁ dharmyaṁ saṅgrāmaṁ na kariṣyasi. Arjuna, if you do not fight this dhārmica yuddham; saṅgrāmaṁ is not a type of village, grāmaṁ village, good village! (not like that) like nyāsa, renunciation, sanyāsaḥ, total renunciation, saṁ means total (that meaning is not there). Saṅgrāmaṁ means yuddham, a righteous war, if you do not take to, then what are you doing: athaḥ svadharmam hithva, vihitha-akaranam kruthva, you will be omitting, shirking your duty and for that what will happen? Pāpam avāpsyasi. You will incur pāpam.

What is the consequence of pāpam? Suffering in this janma and if not in this janma, in the future janmas; in short naraka prāpti ēva phalam bhavati. Therefore, Arjuna you may not be interested in svarga, but at least to avoid narakam, you have to fight this war. Not only you will get narakam, kīrtiṁ ca hitvā, you will lose your name and fame also. About this Kṛṣṇa will explain later; so with this ślōka the dhārmic-dṛṣṭi is over. It started from verse No.31. And Kṛṣṇa's argument is that this war is ethical and therefore you should fight.

अकीर्तिं चापि भूतानि कथयिष्यन्ति तेऽव्ययाम् |
सम्भावितस्य चाकीर्तिर्मरणादतिरिच्यते || २-३४ ||

akīrtiṁ cāpi bhūtāni kathayiṣyanti tē'avyayām |
sambhāvitasya cākīrtimaraṇādatiricyatē || 2.34 ||

api ca अपि च Moreover, bhūtāni भूतानि people kathayiṣyanti कथयिष्यन्ति will impute tē ते your अव्ययाम् अकीर्तिम् avyayām akīrtim permanent infamy sambhāvitasya सम्भावितस्य For a person who has been honored, akīrtiḥ अकीर्तिः is worse atiricyatē अतिरिच्यते is worse ca maraṇāt च मरणात् than death.

34. Moreover, people will impute permanent infamy to you. For a person who has been honored, infamy is worse than death..

After having given the philosophical view and ethical view; now Kṛṣṇa is coming down further to loukika dṛṣṭi, empirical, pragmatic worldly angle. Some people may that I do not believe in puṇyam and pāpam. That is the present society; because puṇyam and pāpam happens to be adrṣṭam. Adrṣṭam means that which cannot be perceived by the sense organs, that which cannot be experimentally demonstrated even with telescope or microscope you cannot see puṇya wave; like ultra wave, puṇyam and pāpam you cannot see. It is not available for scientific establishment; it is only known through śāstra pramānam; therefore a person may say that I do not believe in puṇyam or pāpam; I do not believe in svargam and narakam; so then can I run away from this war? I do not believe in ātma, I do not believe in dharma, should I fight this war, if you ask, Kṛṣṇa says still you have to fight this war. Fight this war, why: if you do not fight this war, your status in society, your value in society, respect that you enjoy in society will come down. You lose your name and fame.

After all most of the people are interested only in their social status. All the time they are worried about, how the other people will think about me. Most of the time, the people will say; what will others think; even when my son or daughter does not want to get married; or they want to get married to someone else; whether they are interested in that or not is not the question; what others will think: Swamiji, we come from the Dikṣithar's family, etc. we belong to such a wonderful family; generation after generation we have lived certain thing now this son has given a wrong name to the family. Most of the arguments are what: not whether this is good or bad; that is not the question; how will I show my face outside? If there is some wedding function, there are people who do not attend functions thereafter; after some such event take place, they do not even go for temple functions; family functions; because they are bothered about; I am not saying right or wrong; I am just presenting objectively a case, that people are so much bothered about the social standing; social status in the family name and fame and as a kṣatriya; Arjuna has got a very strong rājasic ego and therefore he also will be bothered about his social status.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa argues Arjuna you have got such a name and fame; you are considered the greatest warrior in the world; not only you have won laurels on the earth, even Indra calls you for assistance and you often go to Deva Lōka and then why fight wars for Indra; all these glories you have and now if you had decided not to fight this war, it would have been OK; but you decided to fight, you came in front; and last moment you withdrew, and what will the people say: தொடை நடுங்கி Thoda nadungi. New title will you get. They will say; the moment Arjuna saw all these people, he could not stand, even though Arjuna may think that it is out of compassion; the society is not going to say so.

And they will spread all kinds of rumors and not only that poems after poems will be written also and even after 20 centuries people will talk about Arjuna, who ran away in the battle field. Arjuna! Do you want such a stigma in your name? It is said:

प्राणं वापि परित्यज्य मानम् एवापि रक्षन्थुः अनित्यो भवति प्राणहः मानस्तु आचन्द्रः तारखम् ॥

prāṇam vāpi parityajya mānam evāpi rakṣanthuḥ
anītyō bhavati prāṇahaḥ mānastu ācandraḥ tārakham ||

Generally people think mānam, the honor of the family, honor of the individual is more important than even life. How often we read in the newspaper: even teenagers committing suicide because in the SSLC or + 2, they did not get the rank. They passed; But they became second, etc. Because having got the rank all the time, one time they did not get. Or somebody running a company or something; all the money were lost; committing suicide. Why, because they consider mānam is more important; they are not able to withstand apamānam, and therefore they take away their life. Arjuna, if this is true for every ordinary individual, for you, Kṣatriyā how important it should be mānam. Do you to want to live with apamānam or do you want to fight and sacrifice life? Therefore he says, bhūtāni kathayiṣyanti, all the people will talk insulting you, belittling you, criticizing you and they will spread rumours, akīrtiḥmapi kathayiṣyanti. They will give you permanent apamānam or infamy which is avyayaṁ. Avyayam means it will be passed from generation to generation. So avyayāṁ akīrtim bhūtāni, bhūtāni, means human-beings they will spread. If you are unknown person in the world, whatever happens even if ill-fame comes nobody knows. But having got the name in the society, thereafterwards apamāna comes it is very very very excruciating painful.

Therefore he says sambhāvitasya having enjoyed the fame, as the greatest warrior the most courageous person having enjoyed the fame, suddenly being dropped down; akīrtim, illfame is maraṇāt atiricyatē is worse than death. And therefore Arjuna better die than live with ill-fame.

Verse 2.35

भयाद्रणादुपरतं मंस्यन्ते त्वां महारथाः |
येषां च त्वं बहुमतो भूत्वा यास्यसि लाघवम् || २- ३५ ||

bhayādraṇāduparataṁ maṁsyantē tvāṁ mahārathāḥ |
yēṣāṁ ca tvāṁ bahumatō bhūtvā yāsyasi lāghavam || 2.35 ||

महारथाः च mahārathāḥ ca (These) great warriors also मंस्यन्ते maṁsyantē will consider त्वाम् tvām you उपरतम् uparataṁ to have withdrawn रणात् raṇāt from this war भयात् bhayāt out of fear. भूत्वा बहुमतः bhūtvā bahumataḥ Having been honourable येषाम् yēṣām to them त्वं यास्यसि tvāṁ yāsyasi you will come लाघवम् lāghavam to disgrace.

35. (These) great warriors also will think of you as one who has withdrawn from the war out of fear. Having been honorable to such (warriors), you will come to disgrace.

Kṛṣṇa explains the same thing further. How apamāna will afflict Arjuna, if he goes away from the battle. When Arjuna withdraws from the battle; if at all he withdraws; his reason for withdrawal is not fear. In Arjuna's mind it may be compassion and respect for Bhīṣma and Drōṇa, but unfortunately, Arjuna's intention is not visible. Therefore the Society and the world will never know what Arjuna's intention was. Since it can never be known, there is enough hope for spreading all kinds of rumours. Even Arjuna's cause may be legitimate cause; Duryōdhanā's people are going to spread all types of rumours. That is why they say, all the journalist magazine people and all, all over the world, they have got a particular profession or method it seems; that whenever there is a well-known person, right from the President of the America (we do not know what is true and what is not true) what they do is: somebody brings some story; it may be fact, it may not be fact, it may be pure fiction also; immediately all the journalist people will contact that person and they say you tell the story, we will give you one million dollars and the magazine they will put such a such person did such and such thing and put a question mark at the end. They are fair. By putting a question mark, they say it may be true or it may not be true? What will be the public do? They will not remember the question mark. For them, it becomes a fact and once the name has gone, it is very very difficult to get back and having got the story, they go to that particular famous person and say, if you do not want the story to come, pay us so many millions of dollars. You had it; and it is at that time, this person begins to know that even fame is a curse. Till that time, he would have enjoyed the fame. When the other people like journalists start blackmail, then alone he would come to think that it would have been far better to be an unknown person to walk on the road. Or else, journalists would clamor you for sensational stories or pictures. You remember that girl, Diana. Where a person feels shame is a curse, and therefore here also Arjuna somehow or the other, you have got the fame and Duryōdhana people will blackmail you, they will get a wonderful opportunity to spread all types of stories about you.

And first thing they will say is what, bhayāt raṇāt uparatam. They will say Arjuna withdrew from the battle, only out of fear and how will you disprove the rumor, whether it is because fear or respect, nobody can understand because it is in your mind; how do people know. So maṁsyantē tvām mahārathāḥ. mahārathāḥ, all the great warriors in Kaurava side; they will all consider that you have withdrawn out of fear.

And not only that even Karṇa is waiting for an opportunity because he has been insulted all the time. In Mahābhārata if there is one person who faced insult all the time, it is Karṇa. All the Pāṇdavas, including Draupadi, has insulted even though kṣatriya blood is flowing in Karṇa, they have been telling that you are a sūtha puthrah. Insulted very often, and Karṇa is waiting for an opportunity; moment Arjuna runs away, Karṇa will say, "that he was surveying the army and he just saw me and I just stared at him and then he decided to withdraw". Therefore mahārathāḥ; Karṇadayaḥ; they will look down upon you. And yēṣāṁ ca tvaṁ bahumatō bhūtvā, until this moment, they were all respecting you; they were keeping you in awe and fear; from this moment onwards, you will become light in front of them. lāghavam yāsyasi. You will go to disgrace in their vision. And not only that:

अवाच्यवादांश्च बहून्वदिष्यन्ति तवाहिताः |
निन्दन्तस्तव सामर्थ्यं ततो दुःखतरं नु किम् || २ - ३६ ||

avācyavādāṁśca bahūn vadiṣyanti tavāhitāḥ |
nindantastava sāmartyaṁ tatō duḥkhataram nu kim || 2.36 ||

च ca Moreover, निन्दन्तः nindantaḥ ridiculing तव सामर्थ्यम् tava sāmartyaṁ your ability तव अहिताः tava ahitāḥ your enemies वदिष्यन्ति vadiṣyanti will utter बहून् अवाच्यवादान् bahūn avācyavādān many unmentionable words किं नु किम् nu What can be दुःखतरम् duḥkhataram more painful ततः tataḥ than this?

36. Moreover, ridiculing your ability, your enemies will utter many unmentionable words. What can be more painful than this?

Kṛṣṇa explains the same idea further; just to prick Arjuna. Kṛṣṇa's game is somehow or the other, he should make Arjuna fight this war. Therefore he is passing pain in Arjuna's mind by using strong words. tava ahitāḥ vadiṣyanti. ahitāḥ means śatravaḥ, your enemies, i.e. Kauravās, avācyavādān vadiṣyanti, they will utter words, spread rumours about you in such a language, that it is difficult for me to utter those words, unmentionable words, unmouthable words, they will utter against you. bahūn vadiṣyanti. And they have the advantage also because they are the rulers of the State.

After all, you are a non-entity in the forest; 13 years in the forest; and Duryōdhana has got the kingdom; he has got all the control over the people; all the fourth estate (newspaper, television, radio, all of them are in their hands) and therefore they can spread any rumor they want. Therefore, bahūn avācyavādān vadiṣyanti; tava sāmartyaṁ nindantaḥ; criticising or belittling your proficiency. Your skill in archery; they will be criticizing. tataḥ duḥkhataram kim. What is more painful than apamānam?

This argument you will find often given in the scriptures; in Rāmāyaṇa, Daśaratha refuses to give boon to Kaikēyi because he is ready to sacrifice everything but he does not want to sacrifice Rāma. Kaikēyi uses all the arguments; all arguments fail. Ultimately, Kaikēyi gives one argument and that argument is all your forefathers have kept their words; they are all known for their vākya paripālanam. Entire Raghu vaṁsa is known for vākya paripālanam, such a blotless glory they have maintained; if you withdraw your words, eat your own words, you will be the first person to bring a blot in your entire family. Do you want to sacrifice the name that you enjoy or do you want to go down the history as one who brought a blot in the blotless family of Raghu-vaṁsa?

The moment that apamāna word was given Daśaratha relents and says: Does not matter; he allows. Similarly Kaṁsa. He decides to kill Dēvaki because when aśarīri comes and tells that Dēvaki's 8th son will be his killer. Vāsudēva uses all the arguments to dissuade Kaṁsa and fails. All the arguments fail. Ultimately the powerful argument is this, bhavat yasācandramasau mā bhūta nava kalaṅō bhagini vadhēna. So your family has got wonderful name and fame, and down the history your name will go as the killer of your own sister; out of a fear of a son to be born. Do you want such an apamāna? The moment the word apamāna is given, Kaṁsa puts the sword inside.

And he says: OK I will try some other method. All over we find, for every human being, mānam is very important, apamānam they cannot withstand, especially for a kṣatriya, ego is very powerful, many wars have been fought, just because of this apamānam. If you read the history of so many countries in India, one rāja will ask another rāja, your daughter I want to get married; and that rāja will say no; I am going to give to another king or price. Immediately war starts. All for what; because that king insulted me by not giving the daughter. Yuddha. So you can imagine how much powerful the ego is. And Kṛṣṇa is using that weakness of a kṣatriya and he says tataḥ duḥkhataram nu kiṁ? What is more painful than apamānam? And therefore what should you do Arjuna?

हतो वा प्राप्स्यसि स्वर्गं जित्वा वा भोक्ष्यसे महीम् |
तस्मादुत्तिष्ठ कौन्तेय युद्धाय कृतनिश्चयः || २ -३७ ||

hatō vā prāpsyasi svargaṁ jitvā vā bhokṣyasē mahīm |
tasmāduttiṣṭha kauntēya yuddhāya kṛtaniścayaḥ || 2.37 ||

हतः वा hataḥ vā Killed, प्राप्स्यसि स्वर्गम् prāpsyasi svargam you will enjoy the kingdom वा vā or, जित्वा jitvā victorious, भोक्ष्यसे महीम् bhokṣyasē mahim you will enjoy this world तस्मात् tasmāt Therefore, उत्तिष्ठ uttiṣṭha get up कृतनिश्चयः kṛtaniścayaḥ having resolved युद्धाय yuddhāya to fight कौन्तेय kauntēya Oh Arjuna!

37. Killed, you will attain heaven. Or, victorious, you will enjoy this world. Therefore, get up, having resolved to fight, Oh Arjuna!

Therefore Arjuna if you do not want ill fame, and if you do not want narakam, better you fight this battle; hataḥ vā san svargam prāpsyasi. If you are killed in this battle; certainly you are going to get veera svargam. Either way it is gain. Suppose you do not die, but win this war; jitvā vā mahim bhōkṣyasē. You will get back the kingdom, which you were craving for the last 13 years; you were waiting, waiting and waiting and in the forest you had all kinds of sufferings; having enjoyed the comfort of a palace, living in the forest with all the mosquitoes and insects and all kinds of things, and there is no pure water, and there is no privacy; nothing is there; even for ordinary people, forest life is miserable, what to talk of a kṣatriya. You have been waiting for 13 years to get back the kingdom, you will get it back. Therefore either way, you are going to gain if you fight this war. Therefore, jitvā, victorious you will get the kingdom, you will enjoy the kingdom, killed, you will go to svarga.

And therefore Arjuna your decision must be tasmāt kauntēya uttiṣṭa. Therefore Arjuna first you get up. Because at the end of the first chapter, we have seen Arjuna dropped the bow and arrow and then rathōpastha upāviśat visṛjya saśaraṃ cāpaṃ śōkasamvignamānasaḥ. This is the last verse of the first chapter. He dropped the bow and arrow and he was sitting afflicted by sorrow; he was seated. First get up, then we will see what has to be done; Kṛṣṇa is afraid that after getting up, Arjuna may run away, so he adds: yudhdāya kṛtaniścayaḥ. For running also he has to get up, therefore Kṛṣṇa wants to make sure, yudhdāya kṛtaniścayaḥ having decided to fight. So kṛtaniścayaḥ; having taken a resolve to fight this war; Arjuna may you get up. So with this the third level of argument is also over.

So what are the three levels. Adhyātmika-dṛṣṭi; dhārmica-dṛṣṭi; and lōukika-dṛṣṭi. philosophically speaking, you have to fight; ethically speaking you have to fight; from worldly angle, to save your honour, you have to fight. And therefore, Arjuna fight this war.

And now having given all these arguments, Kṛṣṇa gives one advice to Arjuna: How to fight this war. Because we have got duties and generally we divide the duties into two types; one is pleasant duty and the other is often unpleasant duty. That is why whenever there is a function, they will say that it is my pleasant duty; to introduce the speaker, etc. or it is my pleasant duty to give the vote of thanks, etc.

The words pleasant duty makes it clear that there is another duty called unpleasant duty. How to do the pleasant duty everybody knows. One need not talk about it. Because it is pleasant. But the problem is with unpleasant duty. Therefore how one should do the so-called unpleasant duty; how should you do that: that is given in the 38th verse:

सुखदुःखे समे कृत्वा लाभालाभौ जयाजयौ |
ततो युद्धाय युज्यस्व नैवं पापमवाप्स्यसि || २-३८ ||

sukhaduḥkhē samē kṛtvā lābhālābhau jayājayau |
tatō yuddhāya yujyasva naivaṃ pāpamavāpsyasi || 2.38 ||

कृत्वा kṛtvā Regarding सुखदुःखे sukhaduḥkhē happiness and sorrow, लाभालाभौ lābhālābhau gain and loss, जयाजयौ jayājayau victory and defeat समे same alike, ततः तुज्जस्व tataḥ yujyasva prepare युध्दाय yudhdāya for war. एवम् ēvam In this manner, न अवाप्स्यसि na avāpsyasi you will not incur पापम् pāpam sin

38. Regarding happiness and sorrow, gain and loss, victory and defeat alike, prepare for war. In his manner you will not incur sin.

So in this verse, Lord Kṛṣṇa concludes his first phase of teaching; and he is introducing the next phase of teaching. Therefore, this is the transition slōkā; and this happens to be the introduction to the next topic; which is known as karma-yōga, which is another important topic of the Bhagavad-Gīta; jñāna-yōga or saṅkya-yōga has been very clearly talked about; from verse No.12 to 25; he clearly discussed the philosophy and hereafterwards he wants to enter into religion; as I said, the entire Vēdāh is divided into two portion; religion and philosophy. Religion is a way of life; philosophy is the right view of life. And the philosophy part is over, now the religion part is coming. Vēdā antha is over; Vēdā-pūrva is coming; jñāna-kāṇḍam is over; karma-kāṇḍam is coming; Brahma-śāstram is over; dharma-śāstram is going to come.

How to act in the world? Kṛṣṇa says most important aspect samatvaṃ yōga ucyatē. If a person has to efficiently act in the world, most important characteristic is learning to be balanced in mind; therefore, samatvaṃ as karma yōga is being introduced in this slōkā which will be elaborated in the later verses; those details we will see in the next class.

Arjuna was suffering from the problem of saṁsāra, because of which he had a big conflict in the battlefield and he was not able to decide, whether he has to fight the dharma yuddham or not. And not only he had this delusion with regard to dharma-adharma; he was afflicted by intense sorrow also and the only good thing that Arjuna did was he surrendered to Lord Kṛṣṇa accepting his helplessness.

Now it is Kṛṣṇa's responsibility to rescue Arjuna and Kṛṣṇa has two-fold job; one is he has to remove the problem of sorrow, śōka-nivṛtti and also he should convince Arjuna that this Mahābhāratha-Yuddhah is dharma-yuddhah and therefore, it does not come under violence but it is only proper to fight for the sake of dharma.

And Kṛṣṇa begins to convince Arjuna giving arguments at different levels; we saw that Kṛṣṇa gave arguments from 3 different levels; the first level of argument was adhyātmika-dṛṣṭi; from philosophical-angle. From this angle, he talked about the true nature of the individual and how the true nature is free from all the action and therefore there is no question of proper-action or improper action; because from the standpoint of this true nature, he does not do any action at all. So when there is no action at all, where is the question of propriety or impropriety? This is from philosophical-angle.

And later Kṛṣṇa feels that everybody may not be able to appreciate this stand and not only that it may be even misinterpreted by people and therefore Kṛṣṇa decides to come down and again argue the case from the stand point of ethics, which we called dhārmica dṛṣṭi, and from ethical or moral angle, Kṛṣṇa established that it is Arjuna's duty to fight.

And having talked about dhārmica-dṛṣṭi, Kṛṣṇa later comes down further. Even if a person is not able to appreciate ethics, even if a person does not believe in puṇya-pāpam; still from worldly angle, loukika dṛṣṭi or from social angle, or from empirical-angle, also Arjuna has to fight this war; otherwise he would lose his name and fame. And therefore, whether Arjuna looks from philosophical-angle or whether Arjuna looks from ethical-angle; or worldly-angle; Arjuna, you have to fight this war.

And thereafter, Kṛṣṇa concludes this facet of discussion in the 38th ślōka in which he talks about the attitude with which Arjuna has to fight this battle. And this is not only from Arjuna's angle, this is from the standpoint of every human being, what should be the attitude when he does the duty; and that attitude he presents in the 38th verse. And that is samatvaṁ. Kṛṣṇa will be emphasising this value more and more throughout the Gīta. Samatvaṁ means balance of mind. That means, not being carried away by any situation in life. Even in the worst crisis, the capacity to remain cool.

The samatvaṁ is very important because a person's thinking power will be functional when the mind is samaḥ. When the mind is viṣamaḥ, disturbed, the first thing what happens is the discriminative power goes, for not only the decisions will go wrong; still worse, the man will lose the capacity to learn from every experience. As they say, the very life is like a university. That every experience can teach us a lesson; especially tragic experiences teach much more than happy experiences.

As they say, a knife can be sharpened only when it is rubbed against a rough surface. When the knife is rubbed against a sponge, nothing happens but when it is rough surface; it increases the shine and sharpness. Similarly, we can learn much more from adverse circumstances than happy circumstances and if I have to learn valid lessons from such experiences, I should be able to have a relatively calm mind and therefore, Kṛṣṇa emphasises the capacity to maintain the emotional balance is the most important virtue that is required.

As somebody was telling that previously they thought that Intelligence Quotient, called IQ is responsible for the success of a person but later they are finding that more than IQ what a person requires is EQ. You know what EQ. Emotional quotient is.

If EQ is not healthy enough, a person will be easily disturbed and a disturbed person cannot perform well, even though he is very sharp in intellect. Like a student, who has studied very well and look at the examination paper and first question he does not know. In fact all other questions he knows well and enough choices are there; nothing to get panicky, but if he sees the first question and he does not know that, then he can become jittery and second question he knows the answer, but because of the disturbance he forgets that and when he forgets the answer the second question, he is more disturbed. Then the third question even though he is very sure, he will certainly forget. Whereas, even if he has not studied that well. If the EQ is very well, he will write whatever he knows well.

And therefore EQ is more important for human success than IQ. And in fact too much of IQ can make a person cranky also. Therefore, Kṛṣṇa says that I am not interested in your IQ, I am interested in your EQ. EQ in Gīta is called samatvam. Therefore he says: sukhaduḥkhē samē kṛtvā, prepare yourselves to build your EQ. And what is that sukha duḥkha experiences. As we know, that no human being can permanently expect success.

You ask any tennis player in the French open or a cricket player; nobody is always successful.

And therefore hundred percent success is not possible. Therefore, Dayānanda Swami nicely says: Success in life is nothing but the capacity to face success and failures. A successful person is one who knows how to face success and failure without being too much emotionally disturbed and therefore Kṛṣṇa says as an active person doing your duty, samē kṛtvā, learn to keep your mind in balance. In sukham and duḥkham, comfortable and uncomfortable situations. Then next, lābhālābhau, lābhā means profit, alābha means naṣṭa, whether it is gain or loss, nobody gains all the time, nobody losses all the time, both come together in life; then jayājayau, jaya means success, ajaya means failure.

This is very important verse. Kṛṣṇa does not teach how to succeed all the time. Kṛṣṇa never teaches how to succeed all times, Kṛṣṇa only says you should learn how to face both success and failures. Therefore, jaya-ajaya. And you have to include all the other pairs of opposites, like māna-apamāna, janma-maraṇa, growth and decay, summer and winter, therefore 44% centigrade, as well as the other temperatures; all of them; samē kṛtvā. Learn to face equally. That is not to be carried away by them.

Having prepared the mind, tatha, yuddhāya yujyasva. Thereafterwards, Arjuna get ready to do your duty. In this context to fight this legitimate proper or moral yuddha. naivam pāpamavāpsyasi. If you work with this attitude, you will never have a spiritual fall. Material ups and downs you may not be able to avoid; materially ups and downs will come; but if you have a proper attitude, spiritually you will never have a downfall. You will only grow. Even from the worst experience, you will learn a lesson. What is the lesson? That I expected such a thing, is not the mistake of the world, it is my mistake.

So, if I expected a person to come and help and if he does not help me, I can look at the situation from two angles; I can find fault with that person, who cheated me, or I can find fault with myself, that I expected such a thing to happen. That I was not prepared to face the other thing. In my lack of preparation, is exposed by this bitter experience. That is why somebody nicely said. Adversity introduces a person to himself. Every adversity exposes my limitations. And therefore pāpam na avāpsyasi. You will learn from every experience.

एषा तेऽभिहिता साङ्ख्ये बुद्धिर्योगे त्विमां शृणु |
बुद्ध्या युक्तो यया पार्थ कर्मबन्धं प्रहास्यसि || २ - ३९ ||

ēṣā tē' bhihitā sāṅkhyē buddhiryōgē tvimāṁ śṛṇu |
buddhyā yuktō yayā pārtha karmabandhaṁ prahāsyasi || 2.39 ||

एषा बुद्धिः ēṣā budhdiḥ This knowledge, अभिहिता ते abhihitā tē imparted to you (till now), साङ्ख्ये sāṅkhyē deals with sāṅkhyā. तु शृणु tu śṛṇu Now, you listen to इमाम् imām this (following teaching) योगे yōgē which deals with Yōga. युक्तः यया बुद्ध्या yuktaḥ yayā budhdyā Endowed with this knowledge प्रहास्यसि prahāsyasi you will give up कर्मबन्धम् karmabandham all the bonds of Karma पार्थ pārtha Oh Arjuna!

39. This knowledge, imparted to you (till now), deals with sāṅkhyam. Now, you listen to this (following teaching) which deals with Yōga. Endowed with this knowledge, you will give up all the bondage of Karma, Oh Arjuna!

So this ślōka is a transit verse. Kṛṣṇa is changing from one topic to another; and Kṛṣṇa points out that here, until now hey Arjuna, I talked about jñāna-yōgaḥ. Jñāna yōgaḥ, ātma anātma vivēka, which is the main topic that has gone by from verse No.12 to 25, which is the central theme of the previous portion, viz., self-knowledge. That is discovery of the fact that I am an independent one. Discovery of self-dependence or freedom from external dependence to be happy; that self-discovery is called ātma jñānam. Here Kṛṣṇa calls it sāṅkhyam.

Therefore, eṣā budhdiḥ abhihitā. Here the word sāṅkhyam means ātma. sāṅkhyam, is equal to ātma. The word sāṅkhyam, means upaniṣad. saṁyak kyāyatē, ātmatatvam yasyām sa sāṅkhyā, means the Upaniṣad. sāṅkhyam means the truth which is revealed in the upaniṣad and what is the truth revealed, the truth of myself, the ātma. Saṅkyam means ātma, and buddhiḥ means knowledge, buddhiḥ in this context means knowledge; not intellect; so sāṅkyē buddhiḥ means ātma jñānam. So until now, Hey Arjuna, I have given you self-knowledge.

Now hereafterwards, I am going to give you another knowledge, what is that? yōgē imām budhdiḥ śṛṇu. Here after, I am going to deal with Karma-Yōga. Here the transit is from jñāna-yōga topic to karma-yōga topic.

And why does Kṛṣṇa introduce Karma-Yōga topic here? Kṛṣṇa has previously said that jñāna-yōga alone frees a person from sorrow; it is the only remedy for sorrow, the disease called sorrow. gatāsūnagatāsūmśca nānuśocanti paṇḍitāḥ. Without self-knowledge one cannot get out of grief. So if jñāna-yōga is the means of liberation, and Kṛṣṇa has taught jñāna-yōga, why should he teach Karma-yōga at all? Is karma-yōga another means of liberation? No; that cannot be said so, because Kṛṣṇa clearly says, jñānam alone is the means of liberation.

Therefore, there is no other alternative method of liberation also. Then why should Kṛṣṇa come to karma-yōga? The reason is this. That even though jñāna-yōga is the only means to liberation, everybody is not fit to enter jñāna-yōga. It requires certain preparation; just as we have entrance exams to enter IIT or MBA or any other American university; one has to pass that entrance examination; which is the qualification. Similarly, one cannot enter jñāna-yōga without initial preparation.

And Kṛṣṇa is going to present karma-yōga as a stepping stone to enter jñāna-yōga. So thus the entire teaching is going to be: Follow karma-yōga, which will be taught in the following verses. Prepare your mind, and thereafter go to jñāna-yōga and be liberated. Jñāna-yōga is impossible without karma-yōga and karma-yōga is incomplete without jñāna-yōga.

So generally there is a misconception that in Kali-Yuga, jñāna-yōga is very difficult. And it is accepted in all the scriptures also. In Kali-Yuga, jñāna-yōga is very difficult. It is true. But what people say is: since jñāna-yōga is difficult, try some other yōga. But what Kṛṣṇa says is: if jñāna-yōga is difficult, you cannot try some other yōga because, some other yōga cannot give liberation. Jñāna-yōga is the only method. If jñāna-yōga is difficult in kali yuga, what should you do? Make jñāna-yōga easy. If jñāna-yōga is difficult, you should find out methods of making jñāna-yōga easier. And how can you make jñāna-yōga easier? By preparing the mind.

And therefore, karma-yōga will make jñāna-yōga easier, so that you will begin to enjoy jñāna-yōga. Like mathematics. For many people, mathematics is allergy. But for many other people, mathematics is halwa. That means, mathematics by itself is neither easy or difficult. Then what is mathematics is mathematics; it is neither easy or difficult. If my mind is prepared, it is easy; if it is not prepared, mathematics is difficult. For the problem is not with mathematics, but problem is with my mind. And therefore, jñāna-yōga is neither easy nor difficult. It all depends upon what type of mind you have. Therefore, Kṛṣṇa is going to teach karma-yōga, by which you are going to love Vēdānta. Or else, for any dry subject, they will name it as Vēdānta. Vēdānta has become an example for any dry subject, See the situation!

So Vēdānta will not appear dry, you will find it most relevant teaching in this world, most enjoyable teaching in the world, is Vēdānta. How to make it so; by following karma-yōga. And therefore, yōgē, Karma yōgē, Imam, means this teaching śrṇu.

And then what will happen? budhdyā yuktaḥ; once you learn this science of karma-yōga; and not only learn but also practice this karma-yōga, then what will happen? karmabaṁdham prahāsyasi. You will easily destroy all your shackles born out of karma; karmabaṁdham prahāsyasi. You will attain liberation. By liberation you do not think some kind of a posthumous business, going to some lōka after death, going to forest, etc. liberation means freedom from all kinds of emotional problems; anxiety, fear, depression, worry; all these are called saṁsāra; liberation means enjoying a wonderful mind. A mind which does not have the problem of all these common saṁsāric problem; like depression, etc. are not there. That mōkṣa you will attain.

This is the introduction to karma-yōga. Here afterwards, Kṛṣṇa will give an elaborate introduction to karma-yōga, which we will read.

Verse 2.40

नेहाभिक्रमनाशोऽस्ति प्रत्यवायो न विद्यते |
स्वल्पमप्यस्य धर्मस्य त्रायते महतो भयात् || २ -४० ||

nēhābhikramanāśō'sti pratyavāyō na vidyatē |
svalpamapyasya dharmasya trāyatē mahatō bhayāt || 2.40 ||

iha इह In this field asti na abhikramanāśaḥ अस्ति न अभिक्रमनाशः there is no failure; विध्यते न प्रत्यवायः vidhyatē na pratyavāyaḥ there is no adverse result अपि स्वल्पम् api svalpam Even a little bit अस्य धर्मस्य asya dharmasya of this discipline trāyatē त्रायते protects (one) महतः भयात् mahataḥ bhayāt from the great fear (of saṁsāra) .

40. In this field there is no failure; there is no adverse result. Even a little bit of this discipline protects (one) from the great fear (of Saṁsāra).

So in these verses, Kṛṣṇa is glorifying karma-yōga. Even though he has not clearly defined karma-yōga, he is glorifying it. What exactly is karma-yōga, we will be seeing later; but to put it in a nutshell, karma-yōga is that way of life, in which we grow internally more and we give importance to inner growth more than external accomplishment.

Because the basic philosophy of Gīta is this: the peace of mind does not depend upon what you have; on the other hand, peace of mind depends upon what you are: This is the basic philosophy of Gīta; our general misconception is that our happiness, our security, etc. depend upon what we have; and we think that the more we have the more secure we are; but Bhagavat Gīta says: it is the biggest misconception.

In fact, those people who have more, they alone require maximum security, greater the person, the more number of black cats! So the President; he has got lot of money, position, possession; everything is there. Therefore we think that peace and security is directly proportional to what we have; Kṛṣṇa says that is the biggest myth. Peace and security depends upon what type of personality you enjoy; what type of inner growth you enjoy. And in our culture, you find that some of the greatest people enjoyed greatest happiness.

सुर मंदिर तरु मूल निवासः
शय्या भूतल मजिनं वासः |
सर्व परिग्रह भोग त्यागः
कस्य सुखं न करोति विरागः ||१८||

sura maṁdira taru mūla nivāsaḥ
śayyā bhūṭala majinaṁ vāsaḥ |
sarva parigraha bhoga tyāgaḥ
kasya sukhaṁ na karoti virāgaḥ ||18||

So saints and sages, they did not possess anything; but still they had maximum security and maximum peace. And therefore karma-yōga is a life style in which we focus more on inner growth and comparatively the outer accomplishments are subservient to the inner growth. Not that we ignore external possessions; we respect money; we respect possessions; we respect status; all of them are respected; but when there is a comparison between inner growth and external accomplishment; a karma-yōgi focuses more on inner growth. And if he is asked to choose one of these two, he will choose inner growth more. And such a lifestyle is called karma-yōga.

The details we will be seeing later; but here the glorification we are going to see: Kṛṣṇa says: ihābhikramaṇāśō:'sti. Iha means in karma-yōga, there is no such thing called failure. A karma-yōgi never feels that he has failed in life, because even though he might be a failure from the worldly angle, because he failed in business or he lost money or he lost something, he lost job, the world may say he is a failure, but a karma-yōgi is going to look from the stand point of the lessons, the valid lessons, he learned from such experiences and since he feels lessons are very valid and important, while the world says he is a failure, he says I have got lot of inner growth, that I consider as success. And therefore, a karma-yōgi does not know failure. Abhikramaṇāśaḥ means failure.

Similarly, pratyavāyō na vidyatē; pratyavāya means adverse result. From material angle, any action can have positive result or adverse result. When I do a business, if I get profit, it is called positive result; if I lose my money, it is adverse result. So when there is some disease, I take to medicine, if the disease is cured, positive result; sometimes the disease is not cured; I get another disease. I took my medicine for headache, and I got stomach-ache also. That is called pratyavāya.

From material angle actions will have positive and negative result, but for a spiritual person, action will have only positive result because from any experience a karma-yōgi learns. A person who learned music for seven years and then he said I learned an important lesson that music does not come for me. That is valid thing. At least hereafter he will not disturb the neighbors.

Therefore, any experience he will positively interpret and grow; that is what is called building castles with the stones thrown by other people. Karma-Yōgi always builds inner castles. Therefore pratyavāyō na vidyatē. There is no adverse result.

And not only that; svalpamapyasya dharmasya; even if he practices to a limited extent, to that extent, he will get proportional result; whereas, in the case of material result an action can produce a result only when it is completed. This is the normal rule. Suppose I am digging the well: I dig 10 feet. So I have dug 10 feet, let me get a little water; No, I have to complete the job and reach the layer where the water is available; unless I complete the job, I will not get the result.

Normally, from material angle, a karma will produce result only when it is completed but in the case of karma-yōga, whether the action is completed or not, inner growth will take place whether the action is done one fourth, whether the action is done half; whether the action is done three-fourth; the karma-yōgi will get the benefit.

I will give you a solid example. Then it will become clear. Suppose a person wants to chant Viṣṇu Sahaśranāma and somebody asks what is the purpose? Then he says I have consulted some astrologer and the astrologer has said that you should chant the Sahaśranāma so many times. And that too at this particular time; and you should offer such and such naivēdhyam and you should give such and such dakṣiṇa, etc. and then you will get the result. Then the Viṣṇu Sahaśranāma chanting is called a sakāma karma; meant for material result.

And suppose another person is chanting the same Viṣṇu-Sahaśranāma; and I am asking for what purpose you are chanting; is it for this purpose or that purpose, he says: I am not expecting any material benefit out of it; and I am purely chanting for the sake of inner growth. Then the difference will be: in the case of the first person, he will get the result only when he does the chanting as many times as prescribed. Suppose that person has said 11 times, and he chants, 10 times, no benefits. He has prescribed this much amount of naivēdhyam, all prescribed, and he gives only 3/4 of the naivēdhyam. I get 3/4th result. No. Either you complete it and get the full result or you do not complete it and get no result.

So in the case of material result, only when you complete the job you will get the phalam whereas when you are chanting the Sahaśranāma for inner growth, you need not complete it. Suppose you have chanted only 10 slōkās or 200 nāmās, (do not take advantage of this statement!) So whatever amount you chant, even if one nāma, you will get the result. Therefore, Karma will produce the result only when it is completed; in the case of karma-yōga even alpa will produce the result. And therefore he says: svalpamapyasya dharmasya.

And not only that; when a person wants material results, the chanting also should be proper. If you use a Tamil book on Viṣṇu Sahaśranāma, finished! There every letter is advaita. Tamil is the best advaita!! ka, khaa, gha, etc. only one kha. So you if you do not pronounce the letters properly, no result. Not only no result, sometimes, adverse result. Whereas when you are chanting for purification of mind, even if you are chanting wrongly, the benefit is supposed to accrue. Thus what Kṛṣṇa wants to say is sakāma-karma will have to be completed to produce the result, Niṣkāma-karma or karma for inner-growth will give the result anyway. So svalpamapyasya dharmasya, even a little bit of karma-yōga, mahataḥ bhayāt trāyatē; from saṁsāra, the great fear called saṁsāra. From that saṁsāra, the karma-yōga will protect a person. And therefore Arjuna be a karma-yōgi.

व्यवसायात्मिका बुद्धिरेकेह कुरुनन्दन |
बहुशाखा ह्यनन्ताश्च बुद्धयोऽव्यवसायिनाम् || २-४१ ||

vyavasāyātmikā buddhirēkēha kurunandana |
bahuśākhā hyanantāśca buddhayō'vyavasāyinām || 2.41 ||

कुरुनन्दन kurunandana Oh Arjuna! एका ekā (There is only) one व्यवसायात्मिका बुद्धिः vyavasāyātmikā budhdiḥ clear understanding इह iha in this field. हि hi However, बुध्दयः budhdayaḥ the notions अव्यवसायिनाम् avyavāsāyinām of those whose without clarity बहुशाखाः bahuśākhāḥ are many-branched च अनन्ताः ca anantāḥ and endless

41. Oh Arjuna! (There is only) one clear understanding in this field. However, the notions of those without clarity are many branched and endless.

One of the problems that we face while we read our scriptures is that there are countless number of spiritual sādhanas prescribed. Unlike the other religions, which appears to be very simple or simplistic; they just give you certain dos and do nots ~ 10 commandments or something ~ therefore, it appears to be less complicated, whereas when you want to read our scriptures it seems to be very very complex. The scriptures themselves are so voluminous; the vēdās, the ithihāsās, the puraṇās, their commentaries, sub-commentaries and in all of them, varieties of sādhanas are prescribed. So in some place, they talk about pūja; some place you talk about japa; some place they talk about meditation; some place they talk about bhajans; some place they talk about pilgrimage.

So thus as many scriptures are there; so many sādhanas are there; and if you look at the various, the television programs also, in one place Prahlāda caritram will be there; Dhruva caritram will be there, and in each one, you will find one one sādhana. In one place they will say, he did not do any sādhana, singing, music itself gave liberation. Mōkṣa he got singing. You have to do dhyāna for mōkṣa in another place. In another place, it is said that you do not do anything; do your duty at home. Dharma-Vyādha story. They will give that story. Butcher got liberation. Just by butchering. Therefore you also will get. Thus there are so many sādhanās mentioned; we do not know, what are we supposed to do.

Read the last page of the Hindu, one day they would have reported that just 'Who I am enquiry' you do, instant liberation. Another day in the same Hindu, they will say that you will have to raise the kuṇḍalini from behind. And another day they will say, that you will have to utter, Sri Rāma Rāma Rāmēthi, Ramē Rāmē Manōramē. Utter Rāma-nāma only once enough, etc. You will get mōkṣa. They will say Dhruvaḥ and Prahlada and all those people went to forest and did tapas and all. Now I am confused, what should I do?

So therefore, if we have to successfully pursue spirituality we should have a clear idea of every sādhanā and its role. If I do not know the role of each sādhanā, I do not know how to use it, I will only abuse it. And here Kṛṣṇa says, karma-yōgi is one who has got a clear understanding about the sādhanas that he has to practice. And that clarity regarding the means and the ends; sādhyā, sādhanā viṣaya niścaya jñānam. The clarity regarding the means and the ends.

And even in the means and ends, we have got intermediary ends as well as ultimate ends. So when a person wants to go to Delhi and he wants to go to airport or railway station, the ultimate destination may be Delhi; but for the time being the destination is airport or railway station; that is intermediary end. And to go to the railway station, he might have to go to the auto stand or the taxi stand; and then the taxi stand becomes what? Another intermediary end. Next end is the railway station. Ultimate end is New Delhi. So he should know what is the immediate end and what is the ultimate end and that is called vyavasāyātmikā buddhi. Clarity regarding what I want in life. Many people you ask, what you want, they will scratch their head; I do not know what I want; first I thought I want this and I am not very sure, this or that; very clear understanding.

And what is that understanding? Kṛṣṇa does not say; but we should know; the ultimate goal is freedom; because whether you like or not, everybody is instinctively working for freedom alone. Even a child you watch, it holds on mother's hand until its legs are strong; the moment legs are strong, the child will drop the mother and run away. The child also wants freedom. Animals also want freedom. Here what do we mean by freedom? Not external freedom to run away; but inner freedom. What is that inner freedom? I should be happy with myself without depending upon any other human being or his behavior or his presence or absence. Because ultimately, the basic formula is sarvam paravaśam duḥkham, sarvam ātmavaśam sukham; dependence is sorrow, independence is happiness. And therefore my goal is freedom.

Now the next question is to get that freedom what is the means? Karma-yōgi has studied and analysed enough and he has recognised this fact that the freedom is already natural to me; it is only I have not claimed that freedom; therefore, jñānam is the sādhanā for discovery of that freedom. Therefore freedom is the goal, jñānam is the means. So some kind of a picture has come.

Then he recognises that for jñānam, any knowledge, I require a prepared mind; whether it is physics knowledge, or chemistry or any other knowledge. If I have to study M.Sc physics, I should have at least B.Sc. physics, even if it is of the third class. Distinction is not necessary. If I have studied some other subject and go to M.Sc. physics, I would not get anything. Any knowledge requires preparation. Self-knowledge requires tremendous preparation, which we call as jñāna-yōgyatha. Ultimate goal is freedom; for that I require jñānam. For that I require jñāna-yōgyatha. Fitness of the mind.

Then the next question is: for that jñāna-yōgyatha, what should I practice? And for that alone, Kṛṣṇa gives karma-yōga; consisting of varieties of actions. The details of which again we will be seeing later. Karma-yōga position is it gives jñāna-yōgyatha.

Therefore what is my vision? Take the path of karma-yōga, take jñāna-yōgyatha; then go to jñānam and discover the inner freedom. And whatever religious practice I do whether it is pūja, japa, dāna, yajña etc. will come under karma-yōga; the purification of mind. So there is no confusion. He knows where he is now, he knows where he has to be next, and he knows what is the ultimate goal and Kṛṣṇa says that this is vyavasāyātmikā buddhiḥ. Clarity regarding my priorities of life and this understand is ēkā. It is one. It is unchanging. Here ēkā, unswerving. Apādhyah. Even if somebody comes and tells something, he will not be confused; whereas, most of the other people, who are not karma yogis, they have no idea about spirituality. At least if they were nāstikās, they would not waste their time in religious practices, but the so far, half-belief āstikās are wasting their time. Who is religious but does not know what he is doing for what? And therefore, most of the religious practices will become waste of time because he does not know how to use that.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa says, avyavāsāyinām, those who do not have clarity regarding means and ends, bahuśākhāḥ, many branched, they will listen to somebody's discourse and suddenly they will start bhajans. Then they heard somebody else say that this is the quicker method: raising the kundālini. They will start kundālini-yōga. Then somebody comes and tells, you have to study Gīta. They will come for 4 days. And next. Who am I, Who am I enquiry, and thus they are neither here or nor there; they are only on confusion. Who says: Not I, Kṛṣṇa says. bahuśākhāḥ. Utter confusion, and often they end up as nāsthikās, because when religion is not properly understood, and when a person does not get the benefit, he will not blame his lack of understanding, he will blame the religion. "I also did so many things: No result, except that I got cold" would be his statement. That means if you are religious you should not have cold. What logic is this, I do not know? Some silly logic. So thus he will not know how to look at religion, he will end up often a nāstika also.

He would have been doing something, fearing the parents only, and not out of his conviction. In his heart, religion goes. And remember, if such a thing happens, the problem is not with religion, the problem is that we have not clearly understood what it is. When you want to practice computer, there is a training course, 6 or 9 months, you learn how to operate. Spending Rs 10,000 or 20,000. First you learn, then you operate; any machine, even tennis. Seems to be very simple, even that requires training; whereas we practice religion, without learning, anything about religion. If you operate computer without knowing what it is, you would not get the benefit; the computer would also go. Similarly practicing religion without some learning of scriptures is most ridiculous thing; often producing adverse results; adverse effect.

In those days, the basic learning about religion was given in brahmacarya āśrama. When they had this schooling, they have to learn the basics of religion; but unfortunately that is not there. Therefore many people do not value and those people who practice also, they do not know what is what. Therefore Kṛṣṇa criticises them; bahuśākhāḥ and not only they have many branches; anantāḥ ca. Countless notions they have. Which we can learn from the type of questions they ask; countless notions they have regarding god, regarding world, regarding karma, regarding pūja, regarding dress, countless question; because the basics are not clear. Budhdayaḥ avyavāsāyinām.

More we will in the next class.

After talking about Jñāna-Yōga, which was given from verse No.11 to 25, now Lord Kṛṣṇa wants to concentrate on karma-yōga. And before starting the topic of karma-yōga, Kṛṣṇa wants to make certain general observations regarding karma-yōga and karma-yōgis and afterwards he will introduce the proper karma-Yōga.

In the first, i.e. the fortieth verse, Lord Kṛṣṇa glorified karma-yōga, by pointing out that it never has got failure, because karma-yōga is primarily meant for inner growth and whatever be the external consequences of the action, a karma-yōgi will inwardly grow, which means he gets the capacity to learn from successes also and to learn from failures also, to learn from gain as well as loss, to learn from mānam as well as apamānam and since a karma-yōgi learns and grows, there is no question of failure in karma-yōga.

And next in the 41st verse, which we have just completed, Lord Kṛṣṇa glorified karma-yōgi, by pointing out that he has got a very clear picture about the goal of life, and his priorities in life are very clear and therefore he knows what are the immediate goals and what are the long-term goals and what is the ultimate goal, which he has gathered not only from the experiences in life but also with the help of the scriptures he has understood; and what is the clear thinking, that a karma-yōgi enjoys? Kṛṣṇa does not say that in the verse. Śankarācārya brings out that clear thinking and that is he knows the ultimate goal is inner freedom alone.

All human-beings are working for this inner freedom only; by inner freedom, I mean the psychological freedom, the emotional freedom. And he is very clear that this inner freedom or mōkṣa is param puruṣārtha, and he has also understood that this can be attained by self-discovery alone. Just as a child by discovering strength in its legs, learns to drop all the hold of the mother, and learns to walk by itself, by developing strength in its feet or in its legs, similarly, my mental feet, my emotional personality, should discover sufficient strength that I do not depend upon any external factors, to be secure, to be comfortable, to be happy.

So this discovery of inner strength is called ātma Jñānam and he is very clear that the Jñānam is the only means to attain or discover that freedom. And he is also very clear that this Jñānam cannot come or take place unless I have prepared my mind for that discovery and therefore my immediate goal is discovery of the qualification or acquisition of those qualifications, which we call in śāstra, Jñāna-Yōgyatha. So these stations are very clear. I have to go to Jñāna-Yōgyatha station; from there I have to go the penultimate station called Jñānam and from that I acquire the mōkṣa.

And how to reach the Jñāna-Yōgyatha station? For that he is very clear that I have to lead an active religious life, known as karma-yōga; an active involved committed wholehearted religious ethical life; I had to lead, which is otherwise known as karma-yōga. Thus through karma-yōga I attain Jñāna-Yōgyatha. From there, I go to Jñānam, and from there I go to mōkṣa. This is the route map through which I have to travel. This is very clear in his mind. And this clarity Kṛṣṇa calls as vyavasayāthmika buddhi. Very clear about what he wants.

Whereas in the case of the all the other people, who are not karma-yōgis, the problem is they are religious, alright, but they are not very sure about what they have to do. Therefore, anybody prescribes any sādhanā, they will practice that sādhanā for a week, and listen to some other mahātma talking about some other sādhanā, practice that for another week, and they listen to some other person prescribing some other sādhanā, practice for another week; ultimately they will be going round and round, not able to reach anywhere, utterly confused. And therefore Kṛṣṇa criticises them, bahuśākhā anantāśca buddhayō'vyavasāyinām. These confused, confounded people have got so many ideas regarding religion and spirituality, many of them wrong ideas, many of them are incomplete ideas, and therefore bahuśākhās, multi branched. And anantāśca; and infinite, because even though the fact is one, confusions are many. Errors can be many. 2+2, the right answer is only one; but how many wrong answers are there? Infinite wrong answers are there; and therefore anantāśca. Up to this we saw.

पार्थ pārtha Oh Arjuna, अविपश्चितः avipaścitaḥ the unintelligent ones वेदवादरताः vēdavādaratāḥ who are enamoured of the Vedic statements (of the ritualistic portion), स्वर्गपराः svargaparāḥ who are votaries of heaven, वादिनः इति vādinaḥ iti who always न अस्ति अन्यत् na asti anyat there is nothing else कामात्मानः kāmātmānaḥ and who are full of desires प्रवदन्ति pravadanti speak याम् इमां पुष्पितां वाचम् yām imāṃ puṣpitāṃ vācam such flowery words क्रियाविशेषबहुलाम् kriyāviśēṣabahulām which are full of specific rites प्रति भोगैश्वर्यगतिम् prati bhōgaiśvaryagatiṃ for attaining pleasure and power जन्मकर्मफलप्रदाम् janmakarmaphalapradām and which lead to further births, the results of actions व्यवसायात्मिका बुद्धिः vyavasāyātmikā buddhiḥ Clear understanding न विधीयते na vidhīyatē does not take place समाधौ samādhau in the mind भोगैश्वर्यप्रसक्तानाम् bhōgaiśvaryaprasaktānām of those who are attached to pleasure and power अपहृतचेतसां तया apahṛtacētasām tayā and whose minds are carried away by those (words).

42-44. Oh Arjuna! The unintelligent ones who are enamoured of the Vēdic statements (of the ritualistic portion), who are votaries of heaven, who always argue that there is nothing else and who are full of desires speak such flowery words which are full of specific rites for attaining pleasure and power and which lead to further births, the results of actions. Firm knowledge does not take place in the mind of those people who are attached to pleasure and power and whose minds are carried away by such words.

So in these three verses, Lord Kṛṣṇa is strongly criticising those people, who are confused people, who do not have clarity regarding the ultimate goal, i.e., non-karma-yōgis or I will call them karmis to contrast them with karma-yōgis; these people can be called karmis.

To understand these three verses, we should have a little bit of background; so I will briefly mention that here. Later, in the 17th chapter, Lord Kṛṣṇa is going to divide all the human activities into three types known as sātṛvika-karmāṇi, rājāsa karmāṇi and tāmasa-karmāṇi. And according to Kṛṣṇa sātṛvika-karmās are those which will benefit the maximum number of people, which can be termed as selfless actions, which takes into account, the welfare and wellbeing of other people; non-self-centred action. Self-less actions. These are called sātṛvika-karmāṇi.

Then the second type of action, Kṛṣṇa mentioned is rājāsa-karmāṇi, which actions are purely individual oriented, purely self-centred action; the person is not bothered about anybody else; whether they are harmed or benefited, he does not bother, I should get the benefit. These are called selfish action; in Sāṅskṛīt, rājāsa-karmāṇi.

And third type of actions, Kṛṣṇa mentions is tāmasa-karmāṇi, in which a person is not only selfish but for the sake of fulfilling the selfish ends, he does not mind harming other people also and therefore they are krura-karmāṇi, which involve hurting other people. Thus harmful actions are called tāmasa-karmāṇi. Thus we can divide all the actions into three, selfless actions, selfish-actions and harmful actions.

And in terms of the growth of an individual, what is the contribution of these three types of action. In terms of the growth of the individual, what is the contribution of each of these three types of actions?

The scriptures point out that the sātṛvika karmas primarily contribute to the inner growth of the human being. The primary benefit of all the sātṛvika karmās is the inner growth, which you can call purity, which you can call as Jñāna-Yōgyatha, and these sātṛvika karmās may produce outer benefits, material benefits also but material benefits are secondary. Primarily they produce inner growth, but as a by-product, they produce material growth.

Then we come to rājāsa-karmāṇi, they also contribute to the growth of a person, but the proportion is different, all the rājāsa-karmāṇi, primarily contribute to the outer material growth of a person; he will be able to accomplish a lot in the material sense of the terms, but in terms of spiritual growth, its contribution is minimal; it is only a slow growth.

Whereas the third type of karmās are tāmasakarmās, for a person is harming another person, and through that harmful action, he may get material benefit; because corruption, through scams, through cheating, through adulteration, through bluffing, through all these things, certainly a person does all these things for material benefits only; the tāmasa karma may contribute to material benefit but the scriptures point out that in terms of inner growth, not only they do not contribute, but they pull a person down spiritually; that means he does not grow; he does not remain in the same place; not even status-quo but that person is going away from the inner growth.

This is one point we have to remember; sātṛvika-karmāṇi predominantly contributes to inner growth; rājasā-karmāṇi contributes to inner growth in a limited way only; and tāmasā-karmāṇi retards the growth; it pulls down.

Then the second most important information that we have is the real peace and happiness of a person primarily depends upon the inner growth alone and not the external growth. No doubt, the external growth in terms of material accomplishments will give some joy and peace, nobody says No, but the primary contribution to peace and joy is contributed by inner growth alone; which means suppose there is a person who does not have inner growth; but even if he has got all the external gadgets, he cannot enjoy life, because he will have conflicts because he would have gone against the conscience. So when the inner growth is stunted the external things cannot give peace and joy, whereas when the inner growth is there, whether the external things are there or not, a person can enjoy peace and joy. This is the basic information kept in mind when karma-yōga is being taught.

First we should know the three types of karmas, in terms of the inner growth; second we have to know that inner growth alone primarily contributes to the peace of mind of a person. Having kept this lesson in mind, in these three verses, Kṛṣṇa strongly criticises those people who are committed to rājasā-karmāṇi. Kṛṣṇa criticises who are committed to rājasā-actions, which means who are interested in their own personal benefit and that too material benefits alone. And they do not care about any other thing. And such selfish people are criticised strongly.

Kṛṣṇa does not criticise here tāmasā-karmāṇi, that is to be understood. When rājasā karma itself is criticised, what to talk of tāmasā-karma? So tāmasā-karma brings a person down, rājasā karma does not bring down a person, but rājasā-karma keeps a person without spiritual growth.

And therefore those actions are criticised here. So we will have to take the words from all the three verses; because all these three verses put together is one grammatical sentence; it is a very long Sāṅskṛit sentence; therefore I will be taking the words from various places; and rearranging for the sake of understanding.

First is criticism of selfish people. Who are they: Selfish-cum-materialistic people. Who are they: 42. 1st line, last word. avipaścitaḥ. They are unintelligent people. They are unintelligent people, indiscriminate people. What do you mean unintelligence or non-discrimination?

Unintelligence here is thinking that material accomplishments alone can make the life successful. That material accomplishments alone can make the life successful; wealth alone can accomplish everything. This notion is called here avivēkaḥ. Whereas the conclusion of the Gīta is material accomplishment alone cannot give that. As they say money can buy bed, but money cannot buy sleep. Money can buy food, but money cannot buy hunger. Money can buy people, but it cannot buy love. So thus money can buy many things, but there are many important things in life, which money cannot buy. If I do not understand that, I am avivēki and these people think, artha-kāma are the ultimate puruṣārtha. So No.1, avipaścitaḥ, avivēki, artha kāma prādhānaḥ prēyārthinaḥ, avipaścitaḥ.

Then, the next criticism Kṛṣṇa gives is vēdavādaratāḥ. In the vēda, especially the karma kāṇḍa portion of the vēda, there are so many rituals prescribed for material end. In the vēdas, and that too in the karma kāṇḍa portion of the vēdas, there are innumerable rituals prescribed for material benefits. One popular hōma, which you would have heard and attended in many places, is āvahanti hōma. Many people do that.

I should get a lot of wealth. Not only money, but also annam. pānam, vastram; there is a ritual. Since the vēda itself prescribed the ritual, it is very clear, material needs would have to be fulfilled. Vēda does accept money is required; food is required; clothing is required. House is required; vēda is not against material accomplishments. Vēda prescribes.

But what vēdah says is that your life cannot be totally dedicated to these accomplishments alone; the same vēdah talks about the emotional growth, the intellectual growth, the spiritual growth and these selfish materialistic people, they do not read those portions of the vēdah. Satyam vadaḥ. It is on the other side; they will not see. Even if they see, they will do Satyam 'Vadham' (to kill). Dharmam-cara, svadyāyān mā pramādaḥ; you should study the scriptures. Many people think that if I am studying Gīta, I am doing a great thing. Vēdaḥ does not consider so; just as if a child is going to school, you do not consider it as a great accomplishment; going to school is the fundamental need of a child. Similarly, vēdaḥ says, learning Gīta is the fundamental necessity of every human being. Because going to school, takes care of salary. But Gīta alone takes care how to face unemployment; what to do when you do not get employment; or when you lose employment?

The situations in life, as I said the other side, the emotional quotient can be handled; the school would take care of the intelligence quotient; Gīta alone can take care of your EQ. EQ. Not emergency quota in the Railways. EQ, the capacity to maintain the mental balance in ups and downs. That being equally important, svadhyān mā pramāda; Gīta study is compulsory. So come to the classes, regularly. So it is important. But these unintelligent people do not read these portions; they only read about the āvahanti hōma, this hōma, that hōma, etc. In this temple or in that temple and they are committed to material pursuits. vēdavādaratāḥ, means rājasa karma ratāḥ, sakāma karma ratāḥ. This is the second criticism.

Third one is nānyadastīti vādinaḥ. When we talk about nobler things in life, about morality, about ethics, about God, about religion, about service, all the other topics when I raise, they are not interested in those things; they consider life is only; as they say in Hindi: kāvō, pīyō, maja karō; (in Tamil how to translate, I do not know). Eat, drink and be merry. Therefore, Anyat dharmakyaḥ, mōkṣarkya va, puruṣārtha va na anyath, na asthi ithi vadhina. Na anyat sreyō vēdayanthē pramūḍhaḥ. Upaniṣad uses a stronger word. They are all pramudhā, means what, mūḍhaḥ, fools, pramūḍhaḥ, the filtered ones; In Tamil வழக்கட்டின முட்டாளர் vaṭikaṭṭina muṭṭāḷ. nānyadastīti vādinaḥ. No.3.

What is the 4th description? kāmātmānaḥ. Verse 43, 1st word. They are embodiment of materialistic desires. They are embodiment of physical pleasures; they are embodiment of sensory pleasures. And again what Kṛṣṇa criticises here is not pleasures. You should always remember that vēda itself talks about material pleasures; but what is criticised here, giving predominance, undue importance to the sense pleasures; at the cost of inner and spiritual growth.

That is why he uses the word, kāma ātmā hanaḥ, that means that if you take all the sense pleasures and give hands and legs, they are embodiment of that; kāma ātmā hanaḥ. They have a very big list of pleasures. What to do? What is your ambition? He will give list and list and list. Even by mistake, they do not include dharma or mōkṣa in it. And in this list, what is highest, they have svargaparā. The heaven is the ultimate goal. Just as we have got America as the ultimate goal for many youth; by hook or crook, 3 months visa, or 9 months visa, by somehow or the other, settle there. Just as people are rushing to some such place, in those days, they were interested in svarga. Because that is described as nowadays they prescribe America. Everything good. This is good. That is good. Roads are fine. etc. Like that svarga is supposed to hundred times superior to America. So therefore the only difficulty is: first qualification to go to svarga is: we have to die. To go to America, you need not do that. That is why, they are rushing to America, these days. Everyone wants svarga. Svarga.

These are the five descriptions of the selfish-materialistic people who can never become karma-yōgi. And what do they do?

Again come back to 42nd verse, 1st line, pravadanti. Not only they are selfish and materialistic, they spread their philosophy to everyone. And always materialistic philosophy is attractive. So even if we are little bit religious, constant association with that person, our intention is to convert him but in the process, we get converted, because materialism is Māya, remember Māya is more attractive than Brahman. Māya is always more attractive than Brahman. Materialism is always more attractive than spiritualism. Therefore, if somebody repeatedly says; why should you go to Gīta now itself. You should become a grandpa or grandmother, then you can take up Gīta. What happened to you? What is wrong with you? I heard that you are going to Gīta classes and all. If somebody asks you 4 times like that, you will start doubting and think that you are doing some wrong, etc. As such, people coming to Gīta is difficult. Added to that, if people ask you consistently, four times, then it is finished!! Like the donkey story. And you will wonder, after retirement, we will see.

So therefore, these people spread their philosophy unasked, like the advertisements coming inside the news, etc. Every five minutes there is some advertisement, just as advertisement people advertise, these people talk about these things; pravadanti. What type of talk these people give. Kṛṣṇa describes the speech of these selfish-materialistic people, so that we will be forewarned. So that śāstra, you can avoid friendship with such people, that is like a bait; and the fish is attracted by the beautiful bait they have kept, fish goes and bites and gets hooked. Similarly, if you have too much materialistic friend, unknowingly you will be drawn. That is Śankarācārya warns in Bhaja Govinda and says: satsaṅgatvē nissaṅgatvaṁ. Choose your friends also.

And therefore here Kṛṣṇa says: puṣpitāṁ vācaṁ pravadanti; their speech is very flowery, very eloquent; very attractive, very tempting, very seducing; like the advertisement; you buy these, free plastic spoon; one day it will not last; If you buy soap powder, in which the plastic spoon price is included. All the people go there, they are interested in the spoon, than the powder itself.

Similarly, here also, puṣpitāṁ vācaṁ; flowery speech. And then, verse 43, first line, last word, janmakarmaphalapradaṁ vācaṁ. They speak of such activities. In fact, next word, we will see and come back to this word as it is easier to understand. Kriyāviśēṣabahulāṁ vācaṁ pravadanti; we will see this first. They talk about varieties of projects and projects. You take up this project, and you do not have expenditure at all and this much profit; and take that money and put in this project and it will bring this much money and project after project, they will talk about, kriyāviśēṣabahulām, full of saturated with varieties of actions or projects.

In the vēdic parlance, it is varieties of rituals, in the modern parlance, it is varieties of ambitious projects. And ultimately, what is the casualty; Gīta Class. Therefore, no time. Saturday and Sunday are also busy. Extra money. And therefore you will not drop anything. If you do sandhyā vandanam even by mistake at all, it will also go. If not the prayer is the casualty. Or the Gīta is the casualty, why because he has got 25 hours of work in a day of 24 hours. Kriyā-viśēṣa-bahulām. Full of varieties of activities.

And they will lead to what? Janma-karma-phalaprādām. They do not know that one action will lead to another action, which will again suck you into another action, and you get into a whirlpool of action and you go round and round, and you have entered into it; and like Abhimanyu, you know how to enter, but you do not know, how to get out.

Even though I know I am too much involved, I should reduce ~ many people confess; Swamiji, somehow I have been caught up in all these, I am not able to come out ~ I plan to come to the class, but not been able to come. Before that Yama is planning something and the man is out. So thus he knows he is in a cakram and he does not know how to get out of that; and then what happens? He dies. Then what next? Punarapi jananam. And there also; again the same cakram.

पुनरपि जननं पुनरपि मरणं
पुनरपि जननी जठरे शयनम् |
इह संसारे बहुदुस्तारे
कृपयाऽपारे पाहि मुरारे ||२१||

punarapi jananam punarapi maranam
punarapi janani jathare shayanam |
iha sansare bahudustare
krpayā:pāre pāhi murāre ||21||

Now Gīta does not say that you should not get into action; but what Gīta says is you get into, but you should also know how to gradually get out also, so that you can involve and dedicate yourself in higher-pursuits. That's why we have got the four āśramam concept; brahmacharya, grhastha, vānaprastha and sannyāsi. A person gradually gets into, grows and gets out. Not that a person physically takes to sanyāsa, do not get frightened; whether a person physically renounces or not, a person should be able to get into and get out. If I myself get out, it is victory; if Yamadharmarāja pulls me out, it is pain. Therefore, instead of Yama pulling you out, why can't you yourself grow out. And therefore, these people do not know that: janma-karma-phala-pradām vācam; they speak of only such activity which will lead a person from action to action and birth to birth. Birth represents finitude, mortality.

And all these are meant for what? They do not present these activities for purity of mind; if they are prescribing activities for mental-purity, they are sātṽica karma, but these selfish-people never prescribe anything; even if they prescribe any religious- action, it is also meant for material-profit; that is commercialisation of everything.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa says; bhōgaiśvarya-gatiṃ prati. Their target are only two: one is called Bhōga, which means kāma puruṣārtha, enjoyments and aiśvarya; means arta puruṣārtha; bhōga-īśvarya, arta-kāma puruṣārtha; money and pleasures are only their target. And such words, all meant for even if they talk about the temple, they will say that if you go to that temple on seven Fridays, or three pournamis, you will get all the things which you desire. How convenient?

You go to this temple, this will happen. You go to the Śani temple, that will happen. You go to the Durga temple, that will happen. We are so catholic, that we include, Annai Velankani and Nagur, all for what? None of them for development of love or compassion, but for only money, money, money and money alone.

And what will happen to them? Kṛṣṇa further criticises them in the 44th verse, bhōgaiśvarya-prasaktānāṃ; not only they talk about arta-kāma, for others, but they are totally involved in, totally attached to arta-kāma alone, prasaktāḥ, means totally attached.

And they are attached to such an extent that, tayā'pahṛta-cētasām, gradually, they find that they cannot fulfil the desires by legitimate methods; because the mind can develop desires in geometric proportion. One desire to 10, 10 to hundred, hundred to thousand. Therefore the increase of desires is very fast; but the fulfilment of desires is very slow. Then a time comes, when the desires are so compelling and I do not have a legitimate method of fulfilling them and when legitimate methods are not available; what do I do? Slowly put our signature in the wrong place. I begin to take to adhārmic methods; gambling; all kinds of evils start; therefore, Thaya apahṛta-cētasām, their sense-of-conscience, sense-of-discrimination, sense-of-propriety; sense-of-honesty, sense-of-justice, all of them will go away. If we are seeing corruption, corruption is not done by illiterate-people, educated-people are doing, and there is no question of conscience pricking at all.

So we have reached such a state; that it is done and always the answer, when everybody is doing, what is wrong, if I doing? Autoricksaw people tell, the politicians and the bābus, take Rs.100-Rs.120 crores; I am only asking Rs. 2 extra. He also justifies what he does, only in terms of the rājā; because yathā rājā, tathā prajā. And in democracy, yathā prajā, tathā rājā, because you get a government that you deserve. Because one of us is only ruling; one from among the idiots? How will he be? He will be Mahā-idiot. Therefore, apahr̥ta-cētasām, conscience is stifled, suppressed, stunted; therefore, vivēka-śakti goes away.

And in the olden days, they talked about pāpam, and people believed and avoided akramams. Now they say what is puṇyam and what is pāpam? Who has seen? There is no scientific-proof for puṇyam and pāpam. On the other hand, they will argue; see that chap, who had done all akramams and is living a fine life. They have some examples also and if I say that you will go to narakam, who knows such a narakam is there, and if I go to narakam, I would not be remembering all these things; and even if I go to narakam, I would not be remembering all these, because I would have dropped this body ~ how would I know I am that one. You have got enough arguments to do akramams. To do krama is difficult. To do akrama we have got enough excuses; and Kṛṣṇa is referring to them: apahr̥ta-cētasām.

And for such people, vyavasāyātmikā buddhiḥ, na vidhīyatē; means Nāsthi. Such people do not have clarity-of-thinking; they do not have clear-priorities-of-life; they are not very sure about the goals-of-life also; and clear thinking, they do not have where, samādhau; here the samādhau, means mind. Samādhi should be understand here as mind. So in their mind, or in their intellect, there is no-clear-thinking at all, which is proved by all these three verses. Thus Kṛṣṇa has criticised, selfish-materialist-people who can never become Karma-yōgis.

Now who can become Karma-yōgis is the next question? Kṛṣṇa is going to talk about that. These are all preparation, OK.

Verse 2.45

An important slōka, who can be a karma-yōgi. What is the personality of a karma-yōgi? What is the thinking pattern of a karma-yōgi; what is the goal of a karma-yōgi. What is the attitude of a karma-yōgi towards sense pleasures? That is being said here:

Traiguṇyaviṣayāḥ vedāḥ. Here, triguṇya means material-accomplishment. Trigūṇya means the material-goals-of-life; viṣayāḥ, such subject matter is there; in the vēdas. Kṛṣṇa says; Hey Arjuna Veda does talk about material accomplishment; Vēda does not condemn them totally. Vēda approves of material accomplishment; sensory pleasures.

But what should a karma-yōgi do? Hey Arjuna, nistraiguṇyō bhava. A karma-yōgi or you should not be enamoured by overwhelmed by such material pleasures, mentioned in the Vēdas. That means that they should not be given over importance in life. They have their role, kāvyā-śāstra vinōdēna kālō gaccati dhīmatām. In our culture, there was provision for entertainment; music was there; dance, fiction, drama, etc. everything was there; it was all allowed; but what vēda asks is whether that is the primary thing of life or whether they should be subservient to some other higher goal. Remember my example, to eat curd rice, we do use pickle; there is no taste in that curd rice; bland, therefore little kāram, there is no harm in having pickle, but you should very clear, whether pickle is the side-dish for curd rice, or curd rice is the side-dish for the pickle. If the priority is not clear, you will be in trouble. Similarly, arta and kāma are approved accepted puruṣārtha but life cannot be dedicated totally to their pursuit alone. Therefore constantly I should remember, dharma and mōkṣa are mukhyam, but all the time I cannot pursue dharma alone, therefore I require a relaxation, I require what is recreation; I require vihāra; to use the 6th chapter, yuktāhāravihārasya yuktacēṣṭasya karmasu. We do require entertainment. And in the vēdic days, there they had vēdic entertainment, and in these days, we have got the modern entertainment; which are dhārmic and which will not pollute the mind of the people; entertainments are welcome; but do not be carried away by them. Like the children seeing the cartoon network. All the mothers complain. Because it is a 24 hours. Earlier, they used to close. Now they do not close. You have to close. And the child does not know; where to put an end; Mother is very clear; she is very wise. yuktāha with regard to that. She knows that cartoon the child can see; but he has to learn the school lessons. And when all the time, the child learn for some entertainment, it can see; but the child does not know whether cartoon is mukhyam or school-study is mukhyam. And we complain that the children do not know but Kṛṣṇa says: Why children, the grown up people themselves are not very clear; whether money and pleasures are alone important; or Gītā Study or dharma, pūja, prayer, dhyanam, etc. Therefore, get caught like that. Nistraiguṇyō bhava means niṣkāṁō bhava. niṣkāṁō bhava means: do not give undue importance to arta-kāma fulfillment. There should be some alright; Nistraiguṇyō bhava, nirdvandvō bhava; all very beautiful slōka; Let arta-kāma be subservient to mōkṣa; that is the first advice.

What is the second advice? Nirdvandva-bhava; dvandva means opposite experiences. Opposite experiences means, comfort and discomfort, healthy and sick condition; all the astrologers say you know; Śani peyarchi, Guru peyarchi, etc. 2-1/2 years it would be like that. Thereafter you will get accustomed; thereafter it will go; some other will come; therefore, the stars keep moving and all the industries are down; and we keep hope after hopes that will improve.

In our tradition, when ups and downs come, a practice called parihāra-karmāṇi is there; very very common. The moment consistently things go wrong; catch an astrologer; or catch a vastu-śāstri, it is becoming popular. One day someone told me that Swamiji, there is one particular window in that room in that particular place and therefore I am getting tooth ache, it seems; I am asked to shift the window; What I am saying is: vastu-śāstri comes with his version; palmistry comes with its version; astrologer comes with his own version; etc. They all prescribe what: pariharā karmāṇi. Whether this person's lot improves or not; those people really thrive well. Now Kṛṣṇa says, if you are going to do parihāra to everything; including for mosquito bite, etc. then you will have lifelong parihāra-karmāṇi only because, so many akramams we have done in our past life, consistently. So for that akramams, if you are going to do parihārams now, there would not be much time. So, in case of very important things you may do parihāram, but learn to strengthen your personality to accept minor difficulties; convert them into pinpricks, by strengthening your mind by immunising your mind; learn to transcend the opposite experiences; nirdvandvō bhava. Learn to accept the pairs of opposites, unless it is too grave that I cannot pursue anything, I cannot pursue even mōkṣa, such extreme cases only. Therefore the aim of a karma-yōgis should be what? Reducing the parihāra-karmāṇi.

And if totally later he can eliminate, it is good, but reduce parihāra karmāṇi or prāyascitha karmāṇi. Nistraiguṇyō-bhava means reducing kāmya-karmas, nirdhvandvō-bhava means reducing prāyascitta-karmas. Learn to accept.

More we will in the next class.

After talking about the jñāna-yōga, which is the direct means of liberation, now Kṛṣṇa is going to talk about karma-yōga, which is for preparing the mind for jñāna-yōga. If a person's mind is prepared for jñāna-yōga, he does not require karma-yōga; but if the mind is not prepared, a person has to go through karma-yōga; and in 99 percent of the people, preparation is not there; therefore, karma-yōga is compulsory.

And in this 45th verse, which we are seeing, Kṛṣṇa gives the basic principle of karma-yōga. He puts the foundation for karma-yōga and also how a karma-yōgi looks at his life and his goal of life. First He said traiguṇyaviṣayā; vēdās do talk about lot of activities for the fulfilment of arta and kāma; arta means wealth, kāma means pleasures or entertainment. Vēdā does talk about a lot of activities, purely meant for fulfilling our need of arta-kāma and this Kṛṣṇa calls traiguṇyam and then Kṛṣṇa says Nistraiguṇyō bhava; do not be carried away by the pursuit of arta-kāma alone; money and entertainment cannot be considered the ultimate-goal-of-life. No doubt they are necessary; but more than that, we, the human-beings are born for some other higher purpose and that higher purpose is inner growth. Because ultimately, the peace of mind does not depend upon what we have; but peace of mind depends upon what we are. So if a healthy inner growth is there; even if wealth is not there; a person can enjoy and even if wealth is there; he can enjoy both the presence and the absence of wealth; but if the inner growth is not there; then the wealth cannot offer much to that human being.

And therefore, Arjuna you should not consider arta-kāma as the primary goal of life, let it be secondary or subservient. If arta-kāma should be subservient, then it should be subservient to what? What should be the primary-goal; and that is nothing but dharma and mōkṣa. Dharma means inward-growth; inner-health; mental-health is dharma. And mōkṣa is spiritual-wisdom. Therefore, inner growth leading to spiritual-wisdom should be the primary goal and therefore Nistraiguṇyō-bhava; transcend the lower goals.

And as Śankarācārya says, niṣkāmo-bhava; reduce those activities, which are meant only for arta-kāma, or to put in technical language, reduce kāmya-karmas; reduce rājasa, tāmasa karmas; let there be an increase in sātāvika karmas. So rājasic-karma, I hope you remember, is a karma in which I am the only beneficiary, tāmasa-karma is a karma, in which I am the beneficiary and others suffer; but sātāvika-karma is the karma in which not only I am the beneficiary; there are so many others; that self-less-action is sātāvika-karma; selfish-action is kāmya karma; Nistraiguṇyō-bhava, niṣkāmo-bhava; which means reduce money-oriented action. Kṛṣṇa does not say: drop money-oriented action; but Kṛṣṇa says the whole-time and energy should not be spent for this alone.

And then He said: nirdvandvō bhava. And even if you reduce your kāmya-karmas, even if you reduce the arta-kāma pursuit, you are going to face so many ups and downs in life; brought out by the prārabdha-karma. Because of the past karmas that we have done, whether we invite or not; whether we work for it or not; we are going to go through ups and downs in life; we are going to go through pairs of opposites; known as dvandvās. Dvandvās means māna-apamānah, lābha-naṣṭa, jayā-apajaya, all these things are called pairs, nirdvandva-bhava means strengthen your mind to such an extent that you can withstand most of the ups and downs of life.

And what is the advantage of this strengthening. If I do not strengthen my mind, for every pinprick, for every small problem, I look for remedial measures in the śāstra called prāyascitta karma. For even small cold, I will go to the astrologer and ask for this remedy and that remedy and not only that; once you go, the tendency, just as coffee addiction; initially you will go for an important purpose, and thereafter for a less important purpose, and like that, and thereafter for anything and everything, go to vāstu śāstra, go to astrologer; but becoming addicted and putting our life into the hands of somebody else totally, that is also not a healthy thing and therefore reduce prāyascitta karma and do not seek remedy for anything and everything; learn to withstand.

सहनं सर्वदुःखानामप्रतीकारपूर्वकम् |

sahanaṃ sarvaduḥkhānāmapratīkārapūrvakam |
cintāvilāparahitaṃ sā titikṣā nigadyatē || Śankarā's Vivēkacūdamāṇi 24 ||

All the time some planets or other planets will be presiding over our life. All planets will bring in some good also. All planets would bring some pinpricks also. Whether it is Śani pēyarchi or Guru pēyarchi. Some pēyarchi. Not that we disrespect that, not that we disbelieve astrology; it is a traditional śāstra, what we say for anything and everything. Even for medicine also, even doctors say that do not take medicine for anything and everything; if you start depending upon external help, naturally your immune system will not have an opportunity to fight and grow strong.

That is why if the immune system is to be activated, what do they do? They themselves inject that particular disease, so that the immune system is activated. Just as the physical immune system is activated only when we face situation, similarly the mental immunity also will be activated, only when we allow some problems to come. We did not work for problem; anyway they are bound to come: We need not ask; Oh, Lord give me problems so that I can become strong, etc. We need not ask; they themselves will come because we have done enough akramas for Bhagavān to give us problems. So whatever trouble comes, we learn to face it; this is called nirdvandvō bhava; try to maintain equanimity; do not dissipate your energy in kāmya karmas and prāyascitta karmas. In fact, the whole principle of karma-yōga is saving mental energy.

Therefore, nirdvandvō bhava. And if you have to withstand all these, you require another important guideline to be followed: nityasattvashthō bhava. May you maintain your satva gūṇa. Satva gūṇa stands for Vivēka-śakti. Vivēka-śakti stands for discriminative-power; maintain your discriminative knowledge; and what is the discriminative knowledge; in life dharma and mōkṣa, are more important than arta and kāma. And dharma and mōkṣa alone primarily decide my security and peace-of-mind; arta and kāma are only contributory factors; they should not be given more importance than they deserve.

So this awareness, that dharma mōkṣa are more important. That is called nityānitya vastu vivēkaḥ. Spiritual growth is more important than material growth. This awareness of giving importance to spirituality is satva gūṇaḥ. Therefore may you maintain that. And how can you maintain that? Only by, all the time associating myself with such sources of knowledge; either reading those books, which highlight, focus the importance of inner growth; or being associated with mahātmās, who do not possess much, still they are very happy or being associated with friends who value spirituality more than other things, which we generally call satsaṅghas. Reading sacred books, mingling with sacred people or mingling with even seekers; as Śāṅkarācārya said: satsaṅgatvē nissaṅgatvaṃ, nissaṅgatvē nirmōhatvam. When a person for example; when all over the houses, they have television, children will think that life is impossible without television. Cannot imagine. I am not asking you to sell your Television. What I am telling is just how we use certain things, initially we use it and thereafterwards we need it; thereafterwards without that we cannot survive. So this is a shackle which I myself have put. But a few years before, during the younger days of most of us, including mine, we never had even radio or television or fans. So therefore it is mind which is capable of doing that. I do not say that therefore we should go back to 12th century and sell off all those things, but we remember that it is not impossible to live without them.

And therefore, satva-gūṇaḥ means that mental-strength, dharma-mōkṣa is more important that we should we and only when we move with those people, who are happy without most of the things, which we consider as inevitable, still they are happy. Once we see them, we know that: Oh! So we can be happy without that. So therefore, satsaṅgaḥ is the best method of maintaining satva-gūṇaḥ. Nityasattvasthō niryōgakṣēma.

And another important concern that we all have is about yōgaḥ and kṣēmaḥ; worried about the basic needs of life for survival. Because we know that we need certain things for our survival and acquiring those basic things for our security is called yōgaḥ. Aprāpṭhasya-prāpti. Acquiring those things which we do not have; and which are required for our survival. Food, clothing, shelter, medicine, so many things are there.

And kṣēmaḥ means having acquired the need for our security, I am worried about preserving them; prāpṭhasya-rakṣaṇam kṣēmaḥ; Aprāpṭhasya-prāpti yōgaḥ, in English, Acquisition, prāpṭhasya-rakṣaṇam: preservation and maintenance. Even if I do not want luxurious things, minimum things I need for security the minimum varies from individual to individual.

And what Kṛṣṇa says: the concern for the Yōgaḥ Kṣēmaḥ takes lot of your energy. What will happen to me in old age? And whether the children will protect; and we do not have total faith in our children, because we are worried and say that even though my child is good, I do not know who will come as the spouse of the child. My son is very good; after that daughter-in-law came, he has totally turned away. Or my daughter is good; but after my son-in-law came, she has changed her mind. So I do not know what will be his mind.

And therefore even though I have children, I want to have my own security and all those things I want to keep, I tell you any amount of security we have, the sense of insecurity cannot go away because insecurity is ultimately an inner feeling which has nothing, which has no connection with what we possess, or what we have. In fact, after the medical field has advanced so much, there are treatments for which you can spend 20 lakhs or 30 lakhs; 40 lakhs, marrow transplant, etc.

So I can now always worry about that disease for which the medical cost may run to 30-40 lakhs. What will I do? And even if I have all the money, what is the guarantee that like Rāmāyaṇa. Daśaratha, had wonderful children; but at the time of death, not a single one was around; therefore what security we have? We know that every water lorry on the road is a potential threat. Last week only when I was coming to the class, just somebody died hit by water lorry; you might have read in the newspaper; later I came to know that it is a young boy of 17 years. And for no mistake of his that he has been hit. And then nobody was around. I am not you going to frighten you or anything; what you call it security, is it real security? It is doubtful. If we have too much of money, that itself will become insecurity because in many states, rich people's children are kidnapped and ransom are asked. Then the rich people are worried; if we are poor, this problem would not have been there; where is the question of kidnapping or anything. So I tell you, if you a politician, you are the maximum insecure person, proved by the black cats, white cats, red cats, etc. All kinds of cats are around, where is the question of security. And Prime Minister can be killed by her own security itself. So therefore Kṛṣṇa says no doubt you work for your security; but the ultimate security does not come from what you possess; it comes from only your inner strength; and inner strength has to be either wisdom or devotion; and until wisdom comes; devotion to the Lord; the Lord is there to give me strength to face. Remember this one slōka.

तेषां नित्याभियुक्तानां योगक्षेमं वहाम्यहम् || ९-२२ ||

tēṣāṃ nityābhilyuktānāṃ yōgākṣēmaṃ vahāmyaham || 9.22 ||

Have you local yōgākṣēmaṃ, keep it; LIC. So therefore have your local yōgākṣēmaṃ , nothing wrong; but the real yōgākṣēmaṃ is the Lord's alone. Therefore transcend your worry about yōgākṣēmaṃ, to be a karma-yōgi. Otherwise, you will have no time for spirituality, because the mind will be always thinking about what about tomorrow; what about tomorrow; what about tomorrow.

And therefore, niryōgākṣemaha bhava. Go beyond the yōgākṣēmaṃ . Drop your concern about your yōgākṣēmaṃ by surrendering to the Lord. Devotion is the only remedy. So have an ista devatha and invoke the iṣṭa dēvathā in the heart and tell yourselves, even if nobody in the world is around me, because every time, you cannot take your family members all over; even if nobody is around me, my iṣṭa devatha, the Lord is within me. So that is devotion.

If you do not have devotion to iṣṭa dēvathā, you have to invoke your own inner strength, that we have the potential to face the problem. Face in your own potential strength. After all, God according to Vēdānta is within you only. Either believe a God outside or believe in a God inside. Inside God means infinite potential, when the crisis comes. Therefore surrender to that; either to the inner God or to the outer God. That is only way to drop your worries. We will face. Will cross the bridge when it comes; after retirement, what? Why to worry now itself and get tired? So tired, and later retired; Why do you do that: drop your worry. Niryoḡakṣemaha-bhava.

And finally, ātmavān-bhava. ātmavān means be alert in your life; do not be carried away by circumstances; do not lead a mechanical-life; just because people are doing certain things; mechanically going through education and getting a job, etc. Getting employed, getting married, getting children and why do all things, because my forefathers did; Like that do not lead a sheepish life; let your life be a deliberate one.

apramattaḥ bhava. Śankarācārya writes; apramattaḥ-bhava, do not be careless. So be alert. Do not forget your goal. It is like a long journey you take. So in between so many intermediary stations come, you get down and most of the people they have to get down, you have to stretch the legs and all, invariably whatever thing is sold there you have to buy and eat; you cannot cross the station without eating something from the station; even though pantry car is there in the train itself; let him do it; he buys the dōśa, gives the money, gets the change, all these things he does, but whatever he does, one corner of the mind, there is the awareness, I am on a long journey, this is an intermediary station, I have to get into the train and travel further.

Just as you remember, that I am in the railway station and I have to go back, similarly remember earning, getting married, working in company, they are all intermediary stages, nothing is an end in itself, end is totally different from all these. That is why we call it brahmacharya āśrama, gr̥hastha-āśrama, āśrama means a stage of life. Therefore, never get carried away by any particular pursuit; this is called alertness. In Vedānta śāstra, it is called cittaḥ-samādānam. Citta-ēkagram thu sal lakṣyē, samādānam ithi spudam. Being aware of the goal. So this is this sign of a karma-yōgi. The attitude of a karma-yōgi. The outlook of a karma-yōgi. Arjuna you also be a karma-yōgi.

विजानतः ब्राह्मणस्य vijānataḥ brāhmaṇasya For a wise brāhmin सर्वेषु वेदेषु sarvēṣu vēdēṣu (the benefit available) in all the Vēdās तावान् tāvān is the same यावान् as अर्थः artaḥ the benefit उदपाने udapānē (available) in a pond सर्वतः संप्लुतोदके sarvataḥ samplutōdake when there is flood everywhere.

46. For a wise Brāhmin (the benefit available) in all the vēdās is the same as the benefit (available) in a pond when there is flood everywhere

So here Kṛṣṇa talks about the reward for a karma-yōgi, so that once Arjuna sees the benefit of karma-yōga, he does not mind to put forth any amount of effort to attain that goal. Just as they say, showing the carrot in front, so that you will go after that. Otherwise one will wonder, why to take to karma-yōga, being deliberate all the time, remember all the time, is'nt it better to have a loose-life, to do whatever I feel like doing. So always loose life is tempting, because there is no energy involved in it. But karma-yōga is an alert life, certainly energy is involved in life and therefore something must be there to tempt and therefore Kṛṣṇa shows the reward and he says the reward is mōkṣa; infinite ānanda. It is worth the effort.

If a person is climbing Everest even though he knows the amount of trouble involved, the risk involved, money involved, why does he go? Because he is aware of the reward, the thrill, that he gets when he does that. Therefore, he does not mind any amount of struggle. Here also once you know the goal, certainly, you will know it is worth the effort.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa defines the mōkṣa in this slōka. So he says the ānanda, the fulfilment that a person enjoys through spiritual wisdom is all encompassing fulfilment, in which all the worldly pleasures are included. So through worldly achievements, money, status, position, children, wife, all these things are going to give certain ānanda, certain fulfilment. Kṛṣṇa does not deny that fulfilment. But what Kṛṣṇa says is when you seek mōkṣa, you are not losing worldly pleasures because, all the worldly- pleasures are included in mōkṣa. You are not missing anything. But if he is a sannyāsi, who has left everything and that too in a young age and goes, the world will feel sympathy. Pāvam, nobody, no children, etc. etc. Certain idioms, etc. Therefore, what a drag life it must be. Cannot have a new fashionable dress! Even hairstyle change not possible. No hair. Therefore no hair style difference. Nothing new is possible. So what a drag, meaningless-life should be even though world feels; what he gets includes all the pleasures that all the people can get.

And therefore, Kṛṣṇa gives a beautiful thing, Karma-kāṇḍa talks about varieties of rituals for worldly pleasures. Karma-kāṇḍa talks about varieties of rituals for worldly pleasures. Kṛṣṇa says each pleasure is a finite pleasure. Money pleasure, wife pleasure, child pleasure, status pleasure; they are all, pariccinna sukham and the jñāna-kāṇḍa, the final portion the vēda talks about an ānanda, mōkṣa which comes under infinite pleasure. And within the infinite pleasure all the finite pleasures are included; and therefore, he does not miss anything. It is not that if you get dharma, you miss mōkṣa; if you get mōkṣa, you miss dharma; it is not.

In dharma-arta-kāma, mōkṣa is not included but in mōkṣa, dharma-arta-kāma are included. In finite, infinite is not included, whereas in the infinite, all the finite things are included. Therefore, it is worth the effort.

And to convey this idea, Kṛṣṇa gives an example of a small pond of water, udapānam, a small pond of water, which may supply you drinking water, that only. Because only a few liters are there; and also sarvataḥ samplutōdakē, means a huge lake, pure water lake. Not salt water; pure water lake. So in America they say that they have five big lakes, Superior.... all pure water lakes and some of them are close to oceans, so big it is. Now Kṛṣṇa says: what you can get in the lake, those benefits cannot be got in a pond of water; but if you have a huge lake, then whatever benefit you can get through the pond, that can be gained through the lake, in addition to those benefits, drinking, washing the vessels, not only that, you can fulfil, but even other benefits, snānaṁ you can do, swimming you can do, you can irrigate, all kinds of things you can do. Therefore benefit of pond is included in the benefit of lake; but the benefit of lake is not included in the benefit of pond; in short, finite is included in the infinite, but infinite is not; therefore dharma-arta-kāma are included in mōkṣa, but mōkṣa is not included in the other three.

This is the essence. Look at the slōkā. This is also an important slōka very often quoted. Udapānē arthaḥ. In a pond; arthaḥ, certain benefits are there; like you can drink water, or you can wash, maximum you can bathe also; but that much only you cannot use for irrigation, etc. That is why in many houses, one for plants and other things, one for washing vessels, one for drinking, one for cooking, different sources of water, each one is finite, if you misuse it. Whereas if you have one lake, it can be used for watering the plants; cleaning the whole house; taking bath, even guests can be allowed. Nowadays in Madras, to have a guest, one has to think repeatedly, because of water shortage. Alternate days only supply. Here Kṛṣṇa says udapānē whatever limited prayōjanaṁ is there,, all those benefits can be obtained in a lake, sarvataḥ samplutōdakē. Whole put together in one word. sarvataḥ samplutōdakam. Which means Tatākam, a lake, a huge reservoir of pure water; in that not only you can get the finite benefits, but you can get more also.

Similarly, sarvēṣu vēdēṣu yāvān arthaḥ; in the entire ritualistic portion, here vēdās means karma kāṇḍa, kāmya karma, in that varieties of benefits are said, dānyam danaṁ, paśum, bahuputralābham; you can have all kinds of things. Whatever ānanda is promised through these rituals, all these ānanda can be gained by; gained in the mōkṣa. mōkṣa we have supply. Gained in the mōkṣa; belonging to whom, vijānataḥ, belonging to a wise man. So mōkṣa is compared to the reservoir of water, whereas money, family, office and factories and big positions all of them compared to various udapānams, we do not know when they will dry. Like the present government. We think the PM of India are big and all, tomorrow he may not be there. Therefore the ponds are dryable ponds, whereas this is only the eternal source. And therefore, sarvēṣu vēdēṣu yāvān arthaḥ, whatever benefit is acquirable through vēdic rituals all can be acquired through one mōkṣa jñānam. Therefore Arjuna, you have to choose mōkṣa if you are intelligent and for mōkṣa you require karma-yōga and therefore better be a karma-yōgi.

Brāhmaṇasya; brāhmaṇa should be understood as a vivēki, a discriminative-person. So later we will be seeing that brāhmaṇa can be by profession, a person can be a brāhmaṇa taking to priestcraft, or by birth a person can be a brāhmaṇa, and finally by gūṇa a person can be a brāhmaṇa. Here the word brāhmaṇa does not refer to jāti- brāhmaṇa, does not refer to karma brāhmaṇa but does refer to the gūṇa brāhmaṇa. Therefore a cultured discriminative gūṇa brāhmaṇa through his vijñānam knowledge will get the ultimate fulfilment.

karmaṇyēvādhikārastē mā phalēṣu kadācana |

ते ते You have अधिकारः adhikāraḥ a choice कर्मणि एव karmani ēva over action alone; मा कदाचन फलेषु mā kadācana phaleṣu never over results. मा भुः कर्मफलहेतुः mā bhuḥ karmaphalahetuḥ May you not be motivated by the results of actions मा ते अस्तु mā tē astu May you not have सङ्गः saṅgaḥ an inclination अकर्मणि akarmani towards inaction.

47. You have a choice over action alone; never over results. May you not be the motivated by the results of actions. May you not have an inclination towards inaction.

This is another important verse. Very often quoted, which gives the principles of karma-yōga. The wisdom behind the karma-yōga is given here. What attitude or what understanding a karma-yōgi has with regard to action and results. Because in karma-yōga, most important thing is two things. We act in the world; Karma is important. And whatever karma you do, it is going to produce a result, karma-phalam is important. And I should have a healthy attitude towards both karma and karma-phalam to be a karma-yōgi. And if I should have a healthy attitude, I should have a proper understanding of both, because attitude depends upon my understanding. Without understanding something I can never have a proper attitude. Suppose I introduce a new person, and ask you what is your attitude towards him? Do you respect him, etc. do you revere him or look down upon him; what is your attitude? You cannot have any attitude with regard to an unknown person; but suppose you start moving with that person, and you come to know that he is a person of virtues; a person of ideal; then naturally; you develop respect towards the person. Respect is born out of what? Your knowledge about the person. But suppose you come to know that he is a corrupt person, cheat, etc.; then naturally you are not going to develop a respect for that person, again it is based on your understanding.

That's why Swamiji always says: Without a cognitive-change, an attitudinal-change is impossible. And in life, what primarily matters is attitudinal-change and for the attitudinal change, the foundation is cognitive-change. And by cognitive-change, what we mean is a change-in-our-understanding-of-the-thing. And therefore Kṛṣṇa gives two important principles here.

Arjuna, tē karmaṇi adhikāraḥ asti. First you understand as a human being, you have a freewill. This is one of the important verses which establishes freewill on the part of human beings. In the case of animals, they lead an instinctive life, they have a programmed life, they cannot have a goal and work for that; you interview a cow or a dog and ask what are your future plans? Football players, tennis players introduced, cinema actors, politicians, what are your future plans? It will bark twice; not only future, the present also. Because it cannot have a goal, it cannot have a judgment, it cannot work consistently for that; because that is what animal life is.

Human being alone has that power to learn from experience and also accordingly project and have appropriate goals and work for it; these are all because of human freewill, freewill means choice.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa says; tē adhikāraḥ asti. Certainly you have a choice with regard to the action that you want to do. Whether it is secular or sacred. Loukikē vā vaidhikē va karmaṇi, thava adhikāraḥ asti. you have a choice. And that means what you should be a responsible person to use the choice judiciously intelligently. Just as the politician says that you have got the power to vote. You have the power and therefore use it properly. First use it; and then use it properly. Therefore, tē karmaṇi adhikāraḥ asti. But phalēṣu kadācana; mā adhikāraḥ asti. With regard to karma-phalam, you do not have a choice. With regard to karma-phalam, you do not have choice; therefore you should know what is choice-full and you should know what is choiceless. So that when there is a choice-full situation, it is my English word, you should know which is choice-full and choiceless, so that when it is a choicefull situation, you will intelligently operate that and with regard to choiceless situation, intelligently you accept that. And for acceptance whatever preparation is required, that also you will do. So with regard to choiceless situations, I should not try to influence and with regard to choice-full situations, I should not blindly accept lying down.

Where choice is there; you can use. Why should you forgo that privilege Bhagavān has given? Where privilege is there; better you use it. Where privilege is not there, better accept. For that you should know, where it is there; where it is not there; Therefore karma-viṣayē adhikārah asti, karma-phala-viṣayē, adhikārah nāsti. Use your fullest choice before you take any course of action; do not blindly jump into any action; but at the same time, be intelligent enough and strong enough to accept the result.

Here we have to understand an important point; with regard to the result, when Kṛṣṇa says you have no choice, what Kṛṣṇa means is you do not have total choice with regard to result; he does say zero choice; but what he says is you do not have total choice; you have got; you are only a contributory factor, you are only one of the contributory factors with regard to a result of action. Like tilling the land, sowing the seed, are contributory factors in producing the crop; but tilling the land, and sowing the seed and putting the fertilizers, they are all contributory factors, but they are not the only factors that determine the result, because a cyclone can come at any time. That also determine the result. Therefore, I do not say you do not determine; I do not say, you totally determine, I only say that you partially determine the result; therefore, the ultimate is not totally in your hand. Therefore do not be totally pessimistic; therefore do not be totally optimistic also; be a rational.

Suppose we are collecting some funds. There is a fund raising for some function; and somebody wants to give hundred rupees, and asks. Do I decide the total collection? I say that you do not decide the total collection; because total collection is decided by so many other people also. Therefore I tell him that you do not decide the total collection. And then can we say that you do not decide at all; totally you do not decide; can I say; suppose he hears that. He says that I do not decide; therefore I do not give; I go to the next person and he asks the question do I decide the total collection. He says that if he does not decide, he will also not give; if everyone refuses to give money, there would be no collection at all, what to talk of total collection; therefore, whenever a result is decided by a group; whenever a result is decided by a group, an individual is neither totally responsible; at the same time, an individual is not totally useless also. So does he have power; he has power; does he has no power; can you say; he has no total power also.

So suppose we take an alphabetic letter "A". A asks the question. Do I decide the words in a book, an alphabet asks? Do I decide the word in a book, I say that No the word cannot be decided by you alone; because near the letter A, I am going to put T, it becomes AT, if I am going to write M, it becomes AM, therefore A cannot totally decide what the word is; it all depends upon what? What the other letter is going to be.

Then hearing that the alphabet says; since I am not going to determine the word, it seems that I do not have any power, therefore I will go away from the dictionary. Similarly B asks, and it finds that it cannot determine the words. All the alphabets go. Now where is the dictionary? Alphabets do contribute, but at the same, a single letter cannot contribute.

This is what the conflict between fate and freewill. Human being wants to know whether I decide my future and he wants a black and white answer; one person says I do not decide my future at all; he is called a fatalistic person; nothing is in my hand; another person says I alone determine everything; he is an arrogant person; fate is right, or freewill is right; if we ask, what should be the answer? You play a role, but you do not play the total role. Similarly, here also Kṛṣṇa says; just because I say your karma-phalam is not under your control, it does not mean that your efforts are useless; what I say is your efforts do contribute to determine the result; just as every alphabetic letter is important; just every individual contribution is important; just as every individual vote is important; every individual's action is important. But at the same time, but when you use the vote, it is very important, but the party that comes to the power may not be the party that you have voted for.

At the same time, we cannot say that therefore I do not vote. You vote, and pray that the party you want, to come to power. Similarly, Kṛṣṇa says, do not stop actions; at the same time, do not expect that whatever result you want that alone will come, that also you do not think. Do your action, it is very very important; but be prepared for any type of the result, which is determined not by you alone, but determined by so many other factors. Therefore, this mental preparedness to receive any result is intelligent attitude. As they say, hope for the best, but be prepared for the worse. And therefore Kṛṣṇa says phalēṣu kadācana adhikaraḥ mā. You cannot determine the result. At the same time, akarmaṇi saṅgaḥ mā. At the same time, do not think that your actions are waste. Even though a single vote, does not determine the result, single vote is not waste. Even though single contribution does not determine the totality; single contribution is not waste. Even though single alphabet does not determine the word, single alphabet is not a waste. Therefore, your action is very important, but at the same time, be aware that the result may not be to your expectation. Therefore, as even you do your action, mentally tell. Oh Lord! Give me the strength to accept the consequences gracefully. Oh Lord give me the strength to accept the consequences gracefully therefore Kṛṣṇa says saṅgaḥ akarmaṇi mā tē astu. Do your actions, as there is choice, but result is choiceless; strengthen your mind. Then ma karmaphalahēturbhū. This is another important part of karma-yōga, about which we will see in the next class.

After introducing karma-yōga in these verses, now in the 47th verse; Lord Kṛṣṇa is presenting the principles of karma-yōga, which is an important verse, very often quoted. We were seeing the meaning in the last class; tē karmaṇyēvādhikāraha asti. Through this line, Lord Kṛṣṇa points out that we all do have a freewill to determine what type of action we have to do in life. We have the capacity to think; Lord has given us discriminative power and we have got the capacity to act also, because the Lord has given the karmēndriyāṇi, to implement what we want to do. Of course, we are not omnipotent to accomplish anything and everything but within the limited power, we can accomplish many things; and therefore you have a choice over the action. karmaṇi adhikāraḥ asti. Here adhikāraḥ should be taken as choice; indicating freewill.

Then Lord Kṛṣṇa points out phalēṣu kadācana; adhikāraḥ mā asti; adhikāraḥ, we have to repeat here also, phalēṣu adhikāraḥ, that we have an adhikāraḥ, choice over the action. Lord Kṛṣṇa is explicitly pointing out that we have something called a freewill. And therefore Arjuna make use of the privilege called freewill which is unique to human beings, which is denied to animals and plants, which is otherwise called puruṣārtaḥ; and because of that alone, the four puruṣārtaḥs, called Dharma, Artha, Kāma, and mōkṣa are possible; make use of this unique privilege.

That is why in Sāṅskṛit, the word puruṣārtaḥ has two meanings; one meaning is freewill; and another meaning is the human goal; both meanings are there; because where freewill is there, there alone a goal is possible, where there is no freewill, there is no question of accomplishing any goal. Therefore since freewill and goals are interconnected, in Sāṅskṛīt, one word is used both for freewill as well as goal. Thus dharma-arta-kāma-mōkṣa are also called puruṣārtaḥ, the effort that we put forth to accomplish that; that freewill is also called puruṣārtaḥ; and therefore They Puruṣārtaḥa asti. Arjuna you accept that.

At the same time, phalēṣu kadācana; adhikāraḥ mā (means nāsthi) you do not have a choice over the result. This line can create confusion in the mind and we can easily misinterpret this line; it is often misinterpreted. When Kṛṣṇa says: I do not have a choice over the result; many people think, result is already pre-destined by God. And they think that since the result is already predetermined; my effort has no result or no benefit at all; all our actions are only dummy actions; everything God has already determined before; this is called determinism, or fatalistic approach and the root for the fatalism is the misinterpretation of this line, because Bhagavān says 'You have no choice over results'; many people think results are already determined by God; we are helpless.

Like certain companies, if they have some vacancies; already they would have chosen somebody; just for the sake of record, they give advertisement; advertisement is only eyewash; and it is only dummy; already the person is chosen. Similarly the fatalistic people think that even before we do the action or in spite of our action, the result is already determined by the Lord or destiny and therefore we are totally helpless individual and in support of this determinism and fatalism, they take this line, mā phalēṣu kadācana; you cannot chose your result.

But unfortunately, this is a wrong interpretation, what Kṛṣṇa wants to say is this; when He says you do not have a choice over the result, Kṛṣṇa does not mean that your efforts are waste, because no effort of anyone can be a waste because, Karma should necessarily produce a result, according to the quality and quantity of karma. Therefore, whenever I do any action, from minutest, biggest and appropriate result, according to the law of karma, is definitely produced. But what Kṛṣṇa wants to say is: the result produced is not determined by your effort alone; your effort does contribute to the result; but the result is not determined by your effort alone; there are so many other factors which contribute to the results of action. Therefore, your effort is one of the contributory factors; your effort is neither totally useless; nor does your effort totally decide the action. If this particular class should go on now, certainly my arrival here plays an important role; should I come here or not? I should come to this class. should you come or not; you also should be there; without the student, nagnaḥ śramaṇāḥ dēṣē, rajakaḥ kim kariṣyati? One guru thanked the śiṣya that I am able to enjoy the status of a guru only because of the śiṣya. kim vadiṣyanti, kariṣyanti vāktāraḥ, srōtā yatra na vidyatē. Where will, what will the lecturers/speakers will do if the listeners are not there. Therefore I should come; you should also come; example, nagnaḥ kṣapanāḥ dēśe, rajakaḥ kim kariṣyati. One washerman settled in a village, and later found that it is a village of digambara jains. Digambara Jain village, what will be washerman do?

Like that, if this class is going on, I am not the total decider, I am contributing by my arrival and you are very much contributing by your arrival, in spite of the rain; (I admire all of you, because you have so much of jijñāsā). In spite of rain, your arrival and our arrival alone is not enough; there are other factors which are required for the continuation of the class. What factors? Very evident; and therefore, I am contributing certainly for the class; you are certainly contributing and the corporation or the electricity is certainly contributing; similarly, with regard to every karma; I do contribute for the result but I am not the only contributor.

And the contention is my contribution is called freewill, the contribution of all other factors, i.e. all of you, electricity, and whatever other factors are required, all other countless factors, other than me, we called as fate or God's will. Therefore, electricity, from my standpoint, your arrival is a fate, and the electricity is fate, and all the other external factors are called fate, and my contribution is called freewill, and therefore the class is a result of both the freewill that is my contribution as well as the fate which is the contribution of all other factors in this creation.

And therefore when Kṛṣṇa says, you do not determine the result, what He means is, you alone do not determine the result, so many other factors determine. And if you can predict all other factors, then certainly you can predict the result also; but unfortunately, how many factors are involved; I do not know at all. That is why the meteorologists are trying to predict the rain; after a lot of research, and when they say that there will be no rain, we can definitely take the umbrella. Even though they say that 160 factors, 170 factors they take into account, but there are so many hidden factors, unknown factors, and there are so many other known factors, but uncontrollable factors.

We know rain is one factor which will determine our Besant Nagar class, because it is in the open. Even though it is a known factor, it is unfortunately uncontrollable factor. Thus there are so many unknown factors and known uncontrollable factors; therefore I can never predict the result and therefore the result that I am going to receive happens to be unpredictable.

Therefore once you know that it is unpredictable result, do not make your happiness dependent on unpredictable things of life; this is a simple lesson that Kṛṣṇa is teaching. Do not make your happiness depend upon unpredictable factors, because if your happiness is dependent on unpredictable factors, the happiness itself would become unpredictable.

And if happiness is unpredictable, your very life is unpredictable; therefore, let the result be a by-product for you; but what you should focus is the growth, the experience, the enjoyment that you will get as the reward of the very performance. Learn to enjoy the very action itself; and be ready to learn from the experience and that if you focus on these particular factors, the results; positive or negative; will not have a big role in deciding your happiness of life. It is like a person who wants exercise for the body; and plays a game of tennis. Now the very play is giving the reward, he enjoys the very playing of the game, and he is definitely improving his physical health, and what is going to be result of the game, that is insignificant for him. One day he wins, another day, another person wins; but he is playing not for the victory in the game, but the very enjoyment in the playing and very exercise that he gets. Similarly if I can convert every action into the very reward, I enjoy doing what I am doing, and I enjoy learning just as tennis gives physical health, my action gives mental health and growth, then the result will become what? An incidental by-product.

So I conducted a pilgrimage to Amarnath 10 Years before or so. I never knew it is such going to be such a tough journey, I took 90 people also; and average age of the group is 70. So I never knew that; out of sheer ignorance I just took, and we all came back in one whole piece and thank God Lord Amarnath. Even before we left for the camp, I told all the campers, nearly 90 to 100; that the temple has got an ice liṅgam, whose existence depends upon the weather condition, unlike our Ratnagiriśvara, he will be always there; but Amarnath Īśvara is ice liṅgam, so if it is too much hot, then the liṅgam will melt; So we are spending so much money, 3 days we have to walk, height is 14000 feet and all kinds of struggles we should have: karmaṇi ēva adhikāraḥ, whether the liṅgam would be there or not, be mentally prepared.

But one thing the whole journey is wonderful because all over the Himalayan ranges snow covered peaks; the nature is sheer beauty that is wonderful. Therefore, if you decide to enjoy the journey, enjoy the atmosphere, the peaks, snow, etc. whether the Lord will be there or not, it will not be primary for you. Otherwise, the very temple will be enjoyable for you, be mentally prepared, I warned.

And as our ill-luck would have it, the liṅgam was practically not there; it was just a small mound like. Now I saw so many people profusely crying. Swamiji, in spite of so much tired, no proper food, no proper toilet. I went to one āśramam, and asked where is the toilet. That local Svāmi, he showed the hand. Then I walking, walking, nothing is there.

Later I understood, outside his āśrama, whole world is toilet. So no toilet, no food nothing is there; there is no Lord also. This is the problem, if you are not prepared; enjoy the journey. I enjoyed the journey.

I did not miss it because I was mentally prepared. Similarly, in every action, enjoy the action, enjoy the experience, enjoy the growth, that you will have; then that inner growth will become success, external material accomplishment or failure will become insignificant; the world may judge from the standpoint of external accomplishment; I should learn to judge my life from the standpoint of the internal accomplishment. And therefore Kṛṣṇa says; mā phalēṣu kadācana; external accomplishment is not in your hands; whereas inner growth is in your hands alone.

And therefore, karma phalē hētuḥ māhu. May your motive not be heavily on the external accomplishment. When you are working in the world, let not your focus be on the money-gained, name-gained, the status-gained, etc. which is going to be unpredictable. Karma-phalam here means material-gain, hētuḥ, motive, May not your motive be material-gain. And if that is the motive, what will happen? If the material-gain is there, you will be on the top of the world, and when it goes down many companies and all, and even big big countries are falling flat, they say industries are dull, this is dull, that is dull, etc. One person who used to be on top

māḷika mukaḷil keṛrunnatuṃ bhavān; toḷil- māṛāpp keṛrunnatuṃ bhavān

Poonthanam says in the Jñāna-pāna, Oh Lord one day you keep a person on the top of a palace, and on the next, you make him a beggar on the street. Therefore, if you depend upon external-unpredictable-factors, your life would be full of ups and downs; therefore do not make your fulfilment depend on that. mā karmaphalahetuḥ bhuḥ. Then what should be the focus? The focus should be the very action, the very experience that you are going to get. At the same time, mā tē saṅgō'stvakarmani.

When I face a few failures in life, my tendency will be to become fatalistic, to become frustrated, and to drop all the actions. Because the possibility of failure comes when I am acting in the world. Therefore, I have decided to avoid failures in life. How? Do not attempt anything. Be lazy and after 10 years tell everyone that "I never failed in life". What did you do? Nothing. So, therefore, do not take to inaction also. There is an advantage in inaction; what is the advantage, you never fail. But there is a very big disadvantage in inaction and that disadvantage is that you lose an opportunity for inner growth. Because action alone can give the initial spiritual growth. Kṛṣṇa will tell in the 6th chapter,

योगारूढस्य तस्यैव शमः कारणमुच्यते || ६-३ ||

yōgārūḍhasya tasyaiva śamaḥ kāraṇamucyatē || 6.3 ||

An active life also contributes to growth, a withdrawn life also contributes to growth. Therefore activity is also important, withdrawal is also important. What activity can contribute, withdrawal can never contribute and what withdrawal can contribute, activity can never contribute. That's why in our śāstra they say pravṛtti is also important; nivṛtti is also important, and therefore Kṛṣṇa says in the 6th chapter, the initial stage of spiritual growth is only in action and interaction. That is why they kept gṛhastha āśrama as a compulsory āśrama for everyone because in that alone, there is scope for action and inter-action. And also they kept vānaprastha āśrama, and sanyās āśrama, representing nivṛtti; what nivṛtti can give, pravṛtti cannot give. In fact, if you want to attend the class, what you have to do; nivṛtti, you dropped all your actions, so family, whatever duties, whatever actions are involved, whether it is in your work, in your family, in fact, you are all sanyāsis now. nivṛtti. Therefore learning takes place in a quiet, non-extrovert mind. Therefore, Arjuna action is also important, withdrawal is also important.

First stage of life, action; second stage of life, withdrawal. And Arjuna, you are in the first stage; therefore, akarmaṇi saṅgaḥ mā astu. May you never get out of society. Even if you do not get married, if you at least be a brahmacāri and do some service. And that is why Swami Chinmayānanda made all those people who joined his āśrama, he gave the knowledge, training and all, and then he said to all the people, you should all straightaway, when they are youngsters, they cannot take to gṛhastha-āśrama, they have not served in the world at all, that growth you will never get if you remain in the āśrama, therefore, get out; go to the society and serve the society, in whatever way you can; at least by propagating the scriptures; this becomes another type of gṛhastha-āśrama for us, where the children are the students. Therefore the idea is pravṛtti is important. Therefore Arjuna! Do not run away from your responsibility; at the same time focus on inner growth, not external.

योगस्थः कुरु कर्माणि सङ्गं त्यक्त्वा धनञ्जय |
सिद्धयसिद्धयोः समो भूत्वा समत्वं योग उच्यते || २-४८ ||

yōgasthaḥ kuru karmāṇi saṅgaṃ tyaktvā dhanañjaya |
siddhyasiddhyōḥ samō bhūtvā samatvaṃ yōga ucyatē || 2.48 ||

धनञ्जय dhanañjaya Oh Arjuna! योगस्थ yōgastha abiding in Yōga, त्यक्त्वा tyaktvā giving up सङ्गम् saṅgam attachment, भूत्वा समः bhūtvā samaḥ and remaining the same सिद्धसिद्धोः sidhdyasidhdyōḥ in success and failure, कुरु कर्माणि kuru karmāṇi perform actions समत्वम् samatvam Equanimity उच्यते ucyatē is called योगः yōgaḥ Yōga

48. Oh Arjuna! Abiding in Yōga, giving up attachment and remaining the same in success and failure, perform actions. Equanimity is called Yōga.

Therefore, Arjuna act in the world, by having proper-attitude towards material gain. And what is the proper-attitude that should become subservient to inner growth. And what is the advantage of this change of attitude; the advantage is material gain and material loss will not create a big turmoil in your mind. Because you do not give more focus to it than it deserves. You are focusing on inner growth and therefore you do value money and material but it is only subservient; that means it loses its capacity to disturb the mind too much.

That is why even though ten people fail, in a particular field, all the people are not uniformly-agitated. So one person is flat, and he thinks of committing suicide. Another person is disturbed, he does not have sleep for days together; there is another person who always says in life, failure will come; I have learnt a valid-lesson as they talk about that Greek philosopher, "What? to So What?" indicating inner-maturity. Ok I have learnt the lesson. Like the executive who was very successful. They interviewed him and asked; what is the secret of your success?. And he said 'Right-Decision'. And then they asked the question; what is the secret of your right-decision? He said 'experience- in-life'. What is the secret of your experience-in-life; He said 'wrong-decisions'. Therefore, even though you may consider it as 'wrong-decision', it is an experience.

And therefore, this mental balance because of the appropriate focus on inner growth is called Samatvam. Therefore, Kṛṣṇa says, samatvam yōgaḥ ucyatē. The one who values the inner-growth more than external-accomplishment and therefore the consequent mental balance. He gets a great profit; then also he will not lose his balance. There is a big loss; then also he does not lose his balance. They say like the Sun.

उदये सविता रक्ताः रक्ता च अस्थमये तताः ॥ saṃpatau ca vipatau ca, mahatām ēka rūpakā । udayē savitā raktāḥ, raktā ca asthamayē tatāḥ ॥

Simple subhāṣithāms which they teach in the fifth standard and sixth standard Sāṅskṛit class. Wonderful subhāṣithās are there. Saṃpatau ca vipatau ca, mahatām ēka rūpakā, in prosperity and in adversity, the great people enjoy mental balance. Like what udayē śaraṇam anviccha Take refuge बुध्दौ budhdau in Karmayōga फलहेतवः phalahētavaḥ

Those who are motivated by results कृपणाः kṛpaṇāḥ are unfortunate.

49. Oh Arjuna! Action (with motive) is indeed far inferior to Karmayōga. Take refuge in karma-yōga. Those who are motivated by results are unfortunate.

So here Kṛṣṇa is contrasting two types of people; one is the karmi and another is a karma-yōgi. Karmi is one who gives importance to the material accomplishments alone; we can call him a materialist who does not value inner growth or spiritual growth at all. And therefore naturally, when the action produces the result, he goes to the top; otherwise he is flat; people die of heart-attack caused by sometime success also; sometime failure also.

Recently when India won cricket match against Pakistan, which nobody thought; which we successfully fail, consistently fail, and that too a high scoring match, this person was so happy, he got heart attack and died. So therefore both extremes are dangerous; ati sarvatra varjayēt. This materialist gets kick in success also, kick in failure also, both are extremes, and therefore he suffers; whereas a Karma-yōgi is one who is balanced both in success and failure; therefore Kṛṣṇa shows the contrast.

Hey Arjuna, karma dūrēṇa hyavaramḥ. The karma of a materialist is far far inferior; far far, it is a great life threatening action. Inferior to what? Buddhi-yōgāḥ, the karma-yōga done by a karma-yōgi. Here Buddhi-yōga, means karma-yōga. And why is karma-yōga called Buddhi-yōga, because the main feature of karma-yōga is not in action; the main feature of karma-yōga is in the attitude, in the value, what I focus on. So the difference is not in action but in attitude; therefore karma-yōga is alternatively called Buddhi-yōga.

Therefore, Kṛṣṇa says, Karma of a materialist is far inferior to the karma-yōga of a karma-yōgi. And therefore what should you do buddhau śaraṇamanviccha. Therefore Arjuna take resort to karma-yōgaḥ. Buddhau means once again Buddhiyōga, and Buddhiyōga here means karma-yōga; may you take resort to karma-yōga attitude. Proper attitude; proper perspective you have.

Otherwise what will happen? Phala-hētavaḥ; those people who do not have this attitude and those who are utterly-materialistic, they are called phala-hētavaḥ, who are material-result-oriented; so phala-hētavaḥ, refers to the people who are the material result oriented; they are kṛpaṇā, they are unfortunate people, they grow thru tremendous anxiety; tremendous stress, strain and therefore Arjuna! Take to karma-yōga.

50. Oh Arjuna! Action (with motive) is indeed far inferior to karma-yōga. Take refuge in karma-yōga. Those who are motivated by results are unfortunate.

So here, the result of karma-yōga is pointed out. So बुद्धियुक्तः buddhiyuktaḥ, means a karma-yōgi, who has got a proper buddhi; means proper attitude, proper perspective, the one for whom the priorities of life are very clear, that very cleared-visioned person is called buddhi-yuktaḥ; a karma-yōgi.

What will happen to him? Ultimately, he will become a jñāna-yōgi. Because karma-yōga will have to lead to jñāna-yōga, because a karma-yōgi will learn lessons from life, and sooner or later, his mind will ask for something, which is lasting and permanent. Because he alone analyses life's experiences thoroughly and he will discover sooner or later that I am seeking permanent happiness from impermanent things; which is a mistake. Even a person who is successful wins 10 Wimbledon titles, is going to lose the 11th which is going to make that person miserable. One who hits two centuries, he is also miserable because he could not hit the third century. Therefore he soon discovers I am committing a mistake and the mistake is seeking permanent happiness from impermanent things. I am seeking security from insecure things and I am seeking fulfilment from finite things; therefore my search itself is in a wrong direction. And sooner or later, he will come to the appropriate source, which will talk about the permanent thing; secure things; the infinite things and coming to that line is called jñāna-yōgaḥ.

Every karma-yōgi will come to jñāna-yōga one day or the other; and once he comes to jñāna-yōga and discovers his true nature, then he transcends all the karma-phalās; therefore Kṛṣṇa says sukṛta-duṣkṛtē jahāti. He discovers his original-nature, which is the ātma-svarupam, which we saw in the jñāna-yōga portion of the Gīta, i.e. verse No.12 to 25 we saw; he discovers his-own-higher-nature, which is free from all the puṇyam and pāpams.

And therefore, he gives up sukṛtam; sukṛta and duṣkṛtam, as a result of self-knowledge; which is the result of jñāna-yōga; which is a result of karma-yōga. The stages are karma-yōga ~ jñāna-yōga ~ jñānam ~ sukrutha duṣkṛtam tyāga. Renunciation of all - transcending puṇya-pāpa, which is called mōkṣa. Remaining in karma, a person can never transcend; like a person in a whirlpool; he will be going round and round and one day he himself will ask, what is the benefit of all these things; previously I was in rat race; now he asks the question; why be a rat at all.

That will come. So therefore, Arjuna, tasmādyōgāya yujyasva. But to come to that jñānam, now you have to do action. You cannot say that I will leave everything now itself. Like the boy who says- ultimately I have to come out of the college; so why enter at all? That is not proper logic; we have to enter the college; and come out of the college; throughout life it is like that; enter karma, grow, and come out of karma.

And therefore, yōgāya-yujyasva. May you take to karma-yōga and yōgaḥ karmasu kauśalam. And karma-yōga is nothing but efficient performance of action is called karma-yōga. Efficiency in action; skill in action; is karma-yōga; and what do you mean, skill in action; it has got a technical meaning, which Śankarācārya explains, which we will see, in the next class.

tasmādyōgāya yujyasva yōgaḥ karmasu kauśalam || 2.50 ||

Kṛṣṇa presented the karma-yōga in a nutshell; in verse No.47 and 48; and Lord Kṛṣṇa himself will elaborate this topic of karma-yōga in the next chapter. The entire third chapter is going to be devoted to the topic of karma-yōga. Therefore we can say that the entire third-chapter is a commentary upon two verses: that is the 47th and 48th verses. Here in these two verses, Kṛṣṇa does not exhaustively discuss karma-yōga but He only hints at the important aspect of karma-yōga.

In the third chapter, we will be seeing that karma-yōga consists of two portions, one is karma and another is yōga. By karma we mean proper action; appropriate action; right action; legitimate action; or technically sātvic action. This aspect of karma-yōga, Kṛṣṇa has not brought out in this chapter; He will talk about in the third chapter only; what is proper karma.

Then there is a second part for karma-yōga; that is the yōga part and this word yōga indicates proper-attitude when we are doing the action. There also a proper-attitude is required; as a kartā; as a doer-of-the-action; I should have a healthy-attitude; that is why they say, if you are doing a particular job which you do not like, and daily eight hours and every week five days, and every month, four weeks, and 25 or 30 years you work in a firm, doing a job you do not like; then certainly you can never have a healthy- attitude towards your action; it will be a boredom and that itself will spoil your mental- health which will ultimately affect your physical-health also. Therefore, a healthy- attitude is possible only when I love whatever I do. It should never become a drudgery.

Therefore, as a kartā, I should have a proper-attitude; and not only that for every- action that I do, I myself will have to reap the result. The boss may congratulate me; the boss may appreciate me; the boss may give me increment; or the boss may snub me and also promote somebody who may not work at all. That man may be expert in buttering. Therefore, as a bhōktā, I am going to receive the result of the action, and then also, I should have a healthy-attitude in receiving the result or the consequences. That means every moment I am a kartā, or I am a bhōktā, either facing karma or facing karma-phalam; the healthy-attitude towards the action and the result is called yōga.

Thus karma-yōga consists of healthy-action and healthy-attitude. Proper-action and proper-attitude. Of these two aspects of karma-yōga, Kṛṣṇa does not deal with proper-action in this chapter; that He will discuss in the next chapter; He is only dealing with proper attitude, that too not elaborately, just He is showing the direction.

And what is the proper-attitude? Samatvaṁ yōga ucyatē; the mind must not be a disturbed mind. If I do not love a job, my mind is in strain and if resist the karma-phalam, then also the mind is strained. Therefore, a strained-mind is not a karma-yōgi-mind, it is a mind in stress and that is why there are lot of articles; how to manage the stress. If you read in Gīta, it is free of cost; but if you go to some such course, you have to pay through your nose; for one hour talk, they will charge of Rs.10000 and feed you some Taj Coromandel food, perhaps. But these are what is said by Kṛṣṇa alone. Therefore, samatvaṁ yōga ucyatē.

Thus Kṛṣṇa briefly dealt with karma-yōga in the two seed verses; these are bīja-slōkas, 47 and 48, details we will get in IIIrd chapter. Now from the 49 verse onwards, Kṛṣṇa is talking about the benefit of karma-yōgaḥ.

The immediate benefit is peace-of-mind; there is relaxation; there is no tension; there is no-stress; there is no-strain; therefore only even family relationships will improve because when there is a stress-in-one-field, it will certainly overflow into another-field. You have to get to angry on somebody. When there is a pain inside, I am looking for a victim. Now, for a karma-yōgi, nobody is a victim. Therefore, the immediate-benefit is relaxation, peace of mind. But Gīta is not meant for immediate benefit; Gīta is talking about the ultimate benefit also. And what is the ultimate-benefit? The mind becomes more and more refined, citta-śuddhiḥ increases; and what is the sign of citta-śuddhiḥ; interest in self-knowledge will increase. Previously, the topic of self-knowledge is not appealing, it is not attractive, it is too dry a subject but when the mind becomes purer and purer,

सर्वसङ्कल्पसंन्यासी योगारूढस्तदोच्यते || ६-४ ||

yadā hi nēndriyārthēṣu na karmasvanuṣajjatē |
sarvasaṅkalpasannyāsī yōgārūḍhastadōcyatē || 6.4 ||

In the 6th chapter, Kṛṣṇa calls that person yōgārūḍha; when philosophy or self-knowledge appeals to him. And once it begins to appeal; wherever, whatever, he goes, only that topic will fall in his eye. Previously when we read the newspaper, you only see wherever bumper sale is taking place, 30% reduction is going on, that will fall in your eye; there may be hundreds of spiritual-discourses, articles and spiritual-items in the paper; but that would not be sighted by you. Now you will find such books, such titles will appeal; such discourses will appeal, sooner or later, you would come to an appropriate person; tat vijñārtham gurumēvābhi gacchēt.

When a person comes to a guru, and he has graduated from karma-yōga to jñāna-yōga; religion to philosophy, vēda-pūrva to vēda- antha; karma-kāṇḍa to jñāna-kāṇḍa; and once he discovers the self, then he is free from all the bondage; buddhi-yuktō jahātīha ubhē sukṛta-duṣkṛtē. So the benefit of karma-yōga is ultimately liberation.

And what are all the stages that one will go through is going to be explained in the next slōkā, verse No.51 and there in the 50th verse, Kṛṣṇa gave a second definition to karma-yōga and that is yōgaḥ karmasu kauśalam.

First definition was samatvaṁ yōga ucyatē; balance of mind is karma-yōga. Not by withdrawing from action. Balance of mind, amidst action. Now he is giving a second-definition; karmasu kauśalam yōgaḥ. Skill in action is yōgaḥ. So what is that skill-in-action? In the last class I raised this question and left. Do you remember? What is skill-in-action?

Here by the word skill, Kṛṣṇa does not mean expertise in the performance-of-action; anybody can be a skillful-expert if only he repeats the action again and again; even coffee cooling is a skill. If you are not habituated, only 1/3 cup of the coffee will be there in the end. Go to the teashop and see; find that the tea will fly from the davarā to the glass almost horizontally. The law of gravitation being violated. Rubberband like expansion and contraction. If you have not seen, go to any Kerala tea shop. That is 'skill-in-action'. Therefore, that is not here.

Śankarācārya gives a beautiful definition; if proper-attitude is not there; karma can lead to more and more strain and tension. It can lead to more and more saṁsāra, but karma-yōgi is one who uses the very same karma and uses it to attain liberation. A binding karma, a karma-yōgi converts into liberating-karma. And this conversion is not by changing-the-action, but the conversion is purely brought out by changing-the-attitude.

It is like using cobra-poison to make a medicine. Normally the cobra-poison is the cause of death; but if it is appropriately used you can create medicine out of it and save a person. Similarly, karma is like cobra-poison, because if a person does not know how to handle the karma, it can create such an amount of tension and destroy him. Whereas a karma-yōgi uses the karma-yōga to produce citta-śuddhiḥ and attain immortality. Therefore, skill is conversion of binding-karma into liberating-karma, by a change of attitude. Skill is conversion of binding-karma into a liberating-karma by the change in attitude. bandhaka karma śōḍakatvēna, athavā mōkṣa pradatvēna pariṇiyatē, because of the attitude. Therefore, karma-yōgi is skillful.

Now in the 51st verse Kṛṣṇa is going to talk about the various stages that a karma-yōgi has to go through.

Verse 2.51

कर्मजं बुद्धियुक्ता हि फलं त्यक्त्वा मनीषिणः |
जन्मबन्धविनिर्मुक्ताः पदं गच्छन्त्यनामयम् || २ -५१ ||

karmajam buddhiyuktā hi phalam tyaktvā manīṣiṇaḥ |
janmabandhavinirmuktāḥ padaṁ gacchantyanāmayam || 2.51 ||

त्यक्त्वा tyaktvā having given up फलम् phalam the result कर्मजम् karmajam born of action, बुद्धियुक्ताः buddhiyuktāḥ (Become) wise. जन्मबन्धविनिर्मुक्ताः

janmabandhavinirmuktāḥ freed from the bondage of birth, हि गच्छन्ति hi gacchanti verily, they attain पदम् padam – that goal अनामयम् anāmayam which is free from evil.

51. Having given up the result born of action, karma-yōgis (become) wise. Freed from the bondage of birth, verily, they attain that goal which is free from evil.

So what are the stages a person must go through to attain liberation through karma-yōga. The first stage is buddhiyuktā; one should have proper-attitude towards life and the various experiences that come. So, here buddhi means proper attitude. Here buddhi means bhāvana.

That is born out of right-discrimination; without discrimination healthy attitude cannot come, and what is the discrimination, spiritual-growth or inner-growth is as much important or more important than material-growth and accomplishment. Initially when we enter life, we value Artha and Kāma more and more; money and pleasures more and more; that is an immature-mind, when the mind gets vivēka; not that it throws away artha-kāma, they are very much part of life, they are very much accepted by the śāstra, but a person begins to consider dharma and mōkṣa as more important than artha-kāma. So, there is a balance of artha-kāma and dharma-mōkṣa. Artha-kāma represents external accomplishments or viṣaya-sukham and dharma-mōkṣa represents ātma-sukham; to remember the Upaniṣad introduction.

That is why in Navarātri also we worship for 9 days; 3 days we worship Durga, another 3 days we worship Lakṣmi and last three days we worship Saraswati. It indicates how vēdic-culture gives importance all the three. Durga stands for Śakthi, therefore health and strength are important; vēdānta never says you should ignore the body; therefore take care of the body; feed the body; give the required comfort to the body; if there are diseases, treat the body; health must be given importance.

And the next 3 days Lakṣmi is worshipped, it indicates never ignore the value of wealth. Money is also extremely important; we never look down upon money, if we look down Lakṣmi-dēvi, we will never worship. If we step over a coin or rupee note, we consider that it is an insult and we touch and also we just ask for pardon. And that is why traditional people will not keep the money in the back-pant-pocket, because it is the supposed to be lower-area, aśaucam. Upper-area is śaucam. I am talking about the attitude. Why? Because money is Lakṣmi-dēvi. Even Lord Viśṇu does not put in his jeans, he keeps it on the chest. Therefore, our culture never looks down upon material progress. Therefore Lakṣmi-dēvi is important.

And on the last 3 days, we worship Saraswati, which stands for knowledge, both material, more than that spiritual-knowledge also. Therefore Navarātri indicates balanced growth, outward and inwards. So a karma-yōgi gives importance to artha-kāma alright; but more than that he gives importance to dharma-mōkṣa, because ārtha-kāma is superficial, it will come and go; whereas dharma-mōkṣa are enduring. And because of this vivēka, nitya-anitya vivēkaḥ, śrēyaḥ, prēyaḥ vivēkaḥ, he has got a proper-attitude towards life; and what is the attitude; inner growth is equally or more important than money and pleasures. This is called buddhi-yuktāḥ.

And once he has got a healthy value, then karmajaṁ phalaṁ tyaktvā. Here karmajaṁ-phalaṁ means the material results of karma; material results of karma; tyaktvā, he gives up and here giving up means, he is not overly concerned about the material benefits of action. That he considers as a secondary benefit, an avāntara-phalam. Primary benefit which he focuses upon is the inner growth ~ money will come and go; name will come and go, others will acknowledge or not; no doubt they are important, but they are secondary. This is called karmajaṁ phalaṁ tyaktvā; not giving over importance to the material results, but giving more importance to inner growth. This is the second-stage.

Then what is the third stage? manīṣiṇaḥ bhūtvā. So the first two stages are not sufficient to attain the ultimate goal; a person has to come to jñāna-yōga, finding out the true-goal- of life.

What is inner-growth? Many people often ask the question? What is the goal of life? What is the purpose-of-life? Everyone is asking? Not in the first-stage; but after 75 years. Why was I born? at 99!! At least then, good! So this is one of the basic question often asked; what is the purpose? What is the goal?

I say that if you are not able to find out, look at the nature, you can easily find out. Take any animal or plant. What does it do? It grows. It is a natural-process, the seed becomes sprout, it becomes a plant; it becomes a tree. So the very natural programmed goal of every plant is growing, growing, growing and while they grow, they contribute to the creation in the form of leaves and in the form of fruits; and in the form of everything; they contribute and after reaching their highest-growth; they whither and perish. Similarly the animals also, they grow and grow and grow and reach the maximum growth and then they whither away. If this is the natural-goal of every animal and plant, I also being an integral-part of the creation; my goal also should be what? Grow to the maximum.

But there is a slight difference between animals and human beings. Animals and plants have to grow only physically. They have to grow only physically. For them mental and intellectual-growth are neither possible nor do they work for that. They do not have those problems. And therefore they have to grow physically only; whereas in the case of human beings, physical-growth of course is required; and we do that efficiently, perhaps, sometimes growing more than required, therefore, there is no problem with the physical- growth, but all very successful or over successful. But, since our more than plants and animals, we do require corresponding growth at mental-level; emotional-level; which I would call as universal love, universal-compassion, the capacity-to-share; this is vasudaiva-kuṭumbhakaṁ attitude. Ayaṁ-nijō-parō-vētti, gaṇanā laghucētasām, udāra caritānāṁtu vasudaiva kuṭumbhakaṁ.

The universal love is emotional growth and similarly, we should attain maximum intellectual growth also, which is discovery of answer to the fundamental questions: Who am I? And what is this world? And is there a God? And who is that God? These are the three basic intellectual questions which will rise in the mind of every human being. And unless I discover this, I cannot attain maximum intellectual-growth, or you may call it spiritual-growth, that I cannot attain.

And therefore, a karma-yōgi has to not only grow physically but also emotionally, but also spiritually or intellectually, and that is said here by the word, manīṣiṇaḥ-bhūtvā. Manīṣi means jñāni. Manīṣa means ātma-jñānam. Śankarācārya wrote a work called Manīṣa pañcakaṁ; five verses on Manīṣa. Manīṣa means jñānam. Manīṣi means jñāni. So one should attain this knowledge also, which is called jñāna-yōga.

That is the next stage. And then what is the final stage? Janma-bandha-vinir-muktāḥ. As the result of this knowledge, they are freed from all the shackles of saṁsāra, and shackles can be presented in different ways; the first chapter of the Gīta; bandha was presented as rāgaḥ, śōkaḥ and mōhaḥ. Do you remember? Rāgaḥ is attachment; śōkaḥ means anxiety or grief; and mōhaḥ means conflict. We can say this is the shackle. Or you can put the very same shackle in philosophical language; janma-maraṇaṁ; - punarapi jananaṁ, punarapi maraṇaṁ, punarapi jananaṁ jaṭharē śayanam.

This transmigration, repeated births and deaths or mortality can be called a shackle. And this karma-yōgi becomes a jñāna-yōgi, becomes jñāni and becomes mukṭha. And how long he will enjoy that. As long as he is alive, he will enjoy this freedom. What a beautiful life it will be. I continue to be in the world and world continues to be the same; but I am not afflicted by; affected by the various events of life. In fact Kṛṣṇa himself will talk about the state of such a person at the end of this chapter, sthita-prajñasya. So, Ups and Downs do not affect him. This is jīvan-mukti. So the inner-freedom, mental-freedom while living. Where the mind becomes a light and enjoyable too.

Aśāntasya-manōbhāraḥ, when there is no peace of mind, the mind itself becomes a burden. We can face everything in life, except one thing. What? My own mind is burden to me. If anybody else is a burden, you can think of getting away from that. If the place Madras is burden, one can shift to Bangalore or Hyderabad. Any other thing in the world is a bhāram for you, you can get rid of. Now people get rid of even spouses.

What would you do, if your own mind is a burden to you? Wherever you go, the mind also comes. You may go to Mānasarōvar and worry about the situation of Madras coovam. Therefore the greatest tragedy is my own mind becoming my enemy. jīvan mukti is that state, when the mind is the lightest one; and not only the lightest one, it is a beautiful instrument, which is the gift of the Lord, which enjoys love, compassion, relaxation, ānanda etc.

And this jīvan mukti he enjoys as long as the prārabdha karma allows and once that karma is exhausted, anāmayam padam gacchanti. This person merges into the Lord or Brahman which is called vidēha-muktiḥ or Īśvaraḥ aikyaṁ. So here padam means the ultimate-goal of Brahman or Īśvaraḥ and which is anāmayam. Anāmayam means free from all kinds of evils.

So thus this is a beautiful comprehensive verse, beginning from karma-yōga then to jñāna-yōga then to jīvan-mukti and finally vidēha-muktiḥ. The details Kṛṣṇa himself will give later. Because you should remember, the entire 2nd chapter is a summary of the entire Gīta. So every idea mentioned in the 2nd chapter, Kṛṣṇa himself is going to blow up in the 3rd, 4th, etc. up to 17th chapter, it is the blowing up of the 2nd chapter. Then in the 18th chapter, again he will condense the entire Gīta. Therefore all these ideas Kṛṣṇa himself with elaborate later.

यदा ते मोहकलिलं बुद्धिर्व्यतितरिष्यति |
तदा गन्तासि निर्वेदं श्रोतव्यस्य श्रुतस्य च || २ -५२ ||

yadā tē mōhakalilam buddhirvyatitariṣyati |
tadā gantāsi nirvēdam śrōtavyasya śrutasya ca || 2.52 ||

52. When your intellect goes beyond the mist of delusion, then, you will attain dispassion towards what is yet to be heard and what is already heard.

So these two verses, 52 and 53, are elaboration of the previous verse, i.e., again the stages are presented. So what will karma-yōga do? How it will take to jñāna-yōga and how jñāna-yōga will liberate a person. Like 2 halves. One half karma-yōga to jñāna-yōga and another jump, jñāna-yōga to mōkṣa. 2 jumps. In the 52 slōkā, 1st jump is given; 53rd slōkā, the 2nd jump. So what will this karma-yōga do?

Kṛṣṇa says buddhiḥ mōha-kalilam vyatitariṣyati. The intellect will cross over its confusion. Intellect will get clarity-of-thinking. Intellect will be able to know the priorities-of-life, because before that, mōkṣa is only a vague-concept. They think mōkṣa is only as a goal of a few sanyāsis, who have failed in other fields of life. Jobless people, unsuccessful people in the exam, no one married them; some failures, especially if they are young. If old, the children rejected, therefore sanyāsa. Generally people think mōkṣa is a goal of a few sanyāsis who have nothing else to do in life.

This is called buddhi's confusion. Not knowing what is mōkṣa. We think mōkṣa means going to forest only or putting on kāṣāyam only growing a long beard only. It is not like that. Mōkṣa is inner maturity. To understand this you will take some time. Therefore, Kṛṣṇa says that Buddhi will get over the confusions regarding the priorities of life; confusions regarding the value of mōkṣa.

And the confusion is between what and what? Whether artha-kāma is the ultimate-goal or dharma-mōkṣa is the ultimate-goal. And if both of them are important, which should be given, more importance. Regarding these things vivēka is called mōhaḥ, and this mental confusion alone is called kalilam; Kalilam means the dirt, the impurities. Intellectual impurity regarding course of life; regarding the priorities of life; and this confusion the intellect crosses over the more a person becomes a karma-yōgi; the more a person leads a religious life.

Then what will happen? Tadā gantāsi nirvēdam. When this conflict goes away, when nityā-anitya vastu vivēkaḥ comes; then the natural consequence is vairāgyam or dispassion. Nirvēdam means dispassion. Dispassion towards gantāsi-nirvēdam. This karma-yōgi will develop dispassion towards what: śrōtavyasya-śrutasya; all external dependences. All external dependences, all anātmas; śrōtavyam, those external-factors or sources-of-security which are mentioned in the ritualistic portion of the Vēdas. Ritualistic portion talks about so much external-security; you can get a nice house, you can get a nice svarga-lōka, you can get nice children, you can get nice job; all these are promised; they will come under what? All external support. And they are very good initially. But as a person becomes wiser and wiser, he understands any dependence is risky; remember the coalition government. When it will fall, they do not know; because dependent. If you do not have majority, blackmail. Everything in the creation will threaten, even if it is going to be there; at least we will have the anxiety whether we would lose it. That is why any telegram comes; it can be any news. Telegram you do not know. But invariably mind thinks somebody out. Telegram means out? Why can't it be a very good news? But human mind is such that it knows that external things are always unpredictable and therefore there is constant fear. Therefore karma-yōgi is one who understands, external dependence means fear; total fearlessness can come only when I learn to depend upon myself.

Or maximum if you want to have an external dependence; one concession, that is dependence on God. So therefore, learn to switch your dependence from the world to God and finally from God to myself. Thus the one who understands dependence is risky, not physical dependence, that we cannot avoid; psychological dependence is risky, therefore he does not want to hold on to that; that is called nirvēdaṁ. Dispassion towards external holds.

And when we say dispassion, we do not mean, hatred, we continue to love, we continue to help others, only we do not want to seek help from them. It is not hatred but it is learning to be independent and not only towards the things which are śrōtavyam, mentioned in the scriptures, śrutasya ca and also the external dependences which are already known to us. In short, towards all the known and unknown external dependences, he develops dispassion and he wants to become independent. This is the benefit of a religious life. This is the first stage.

Then what is the second stage?

यदा yadā When ते बुद्धिः tē buddhiḥ your intellect श्रुतिविप्रतिपन्ना śrutivipratipannā which is (now) confused by listening (to various means and ends) स्थास्यति sthāsyati abides (later) समाधौ samādhau in the Ātma अचला acalā without doubt निश्चला niścalā and without error, तदा tadā then, अवाप्स्यसि avāpsyasi you will attain योगम् yōgam Yōga.

53. When Your intellect, which is (now) confused by listening (to various means and ends), abides (later) in the Ātma without doubt, and without error, then, you will attain Yōga.

So when a person gets more and more interested in independence or self-dependence, the scriptures themselves come and say: "Really speaking you need not depend on any external factor. You have got within yourself an eternal source of security; an eternal source of fullness, an eternal source of ānanda, that source is within you yourself". Just like a person having water, right under his own property, struggles to get it from outside and miserably fails, corporation water does not come, lorry man does not bring, all kinds of problem and somebody comes and tells, why do you struggle, under your own property, there is a perennial source of water.

Similarly, somebody comes and tells, your innermost nature is ātma, and which ātma is source of security; source of love; source of ānanda, why can't you tap that eternal source and the advantage of that is once I have got my own perennial source of water, not only I need not get from outside, I can start distributing also. Thus imagine a life where you ask everyone do you love me? Do you love me? And they are not openly telling. You have a doubt whether really this person loves me or not and instead of going with a begging bowl to everyone, give me security, give me love, the happiness, peace and the other person refuses to give or blackmails you; (if you do it or do not do it, father or mother will not talk to you type). So blackmailing is our philosophy! Now imagine a state where I no more ask anyone: Do you love me? On the other hand, I say, whether you love me or not is your problem; but I have got an infinite-source of love within me, because of which I can unconditionally love you in spite of your deficiency. In spite of your weaknesses, in spite of your ugly look (you can keep it that way also).

So therefore, there is a big switchover, that is the discovery of pūrṇatvaṁ, abhyatvam, ānandaḥ, etc. from oneself. And this is called self-discovery. This confused mind, which was struggling where to turn to get some love and care, Swamiji, no one is enquiring about us? 3 days cold. No one enquired? I do not want anything? I did not ask anything. I did not ask to be taken to such and such people. So many people are eagerly waiting for some care and love. And this mind which is struggling and turning towards all directions to get a drop of miserable love, which does not come; like the local tap; that intellect is called śruti-vipratipanna. The mind which is totally deluded because of hearing various śruti vākyas, the statements of the ritualistic portion of the vēdās, which talk about various external-sources; his mind is confused, that mind comes to jñāna-kāṇḍa, and instead of going to external-sources, it decides to go to inner-source.

And what does it discover; yatha samādhau sthāsyati. Here the samādhiḥ means ātma. Very careful. Normally samādhi has got different meaning. Here the word samādhi, ātma; what type of ātma, pūrṇa ātma; ever secure ātma; ātma which is an embodiment of love; What is love? Pūrṇatvaṁ expressed outside is love; fullness expressed outside is love.

That is why you see in your life, suppose you have succeeded in something, or you have accomplished something, the child has got rank, and you have completed the house, or you are playing a game, you have won, whoever it is, whoever has won the world cup. You will find, you are so full because of any accomplishments, if anybody commits any mistakes, you will forgive. On the day of accomplishment, your heart is so full; a full heart forgives everyone, you will not get angry that day, you will give ten rupees extra to the auto driver, if he asks for only five; other days you will shout on the top of your voice. Only sharing, forgiving, tyaga, etc. because Ahaṁ-pūrṇaḥ. But it is only for one day; temporary-accomplishment.

But in the case of pūrṇatvaṁ, which is discovered through wisdom, imagine that state of mind, continuing permanently. It is not a unknown state of mind; everybody has experienced pūrṇatvaṁ; when they accomplish that job, when they got a child; or when they got a promotion; or when they won that particular game, everybody has temporarily-experienced the pūrṇatvaṁ, when love flows, when forgiveness comes, when compassion is natural. Extend it timewise, permanently, it is there; that is the state of mind of a person who has discovered pūrṇatvaṁ.

Therefore, Kṛṣṇa says: samādhau sthāsyati pūrṇē, abhayē, adryśē, anātmē, aniruddē, anilayē, abhayam prathiṣṭām vindatē. Athāsou bhayam gathō bhavathi. Upaniṣad beautifully describes that state of mind; what type of discovery it is. Ātma jñānam it is. Acala, Niścalā, sthāsyati.

Two words are said here; which have got technical-significance. Self-discovery or self-knowledge should be free from two obstacles. Self-discovery or self-knowledge should be free from two obstacles; this topic we will discuss elaborately later; I am just giving you a hint here.

One-obstacle is doubt regarding my pūrṇatvaṁ; am I pūrṇa ātma? One doubt in that respect. That is called saṁśayaḥ.

The second-obstacle is the habitual-notion that I require external factors to be happy. Very strong notion.

Like a person who smokes cigarette for years, he cannot imagine a life, without smoking. Even though millions of people are happily surviving, they are not even aware of the existence of that and he himself before he started smoking; he never missed it; but having been used to that; he cannot even imagine a life without that few grams of tobacco. He is param brahma; but depending upon a few grams of tobacco. Infinite, depending upon this finite thing; for another person, it is coffee. Similarly, we have a notion that we cannot be full and complete without certain factors, that habitual notion, does not go away so easily, even after self-discovery that vāsana lingers.

Like the flower vāsana, or onion vāsana, even after removing that, smell would be there; Days together. Like that, the notion that I need things to be happy; that is called viparyayaḥ.

First one is called saṁśayaḥ; second one is called viparyaḥ. These two are powerful obstacles to knowledge, therefore, even after gaining knowledge, one should eliminate these two.

For that appropriate exercise are given. That we will discuss later. When a person has removed these two obstacles, the self-knowledge is complete. And therefore Kṛṣṇa uses two words, niścalā tiṣṭhati, acalā tiṣṭhati. niścalā, saṁśayaḥ rahitha tiṣṭhati. acalā means viparyaḥ rahitha tiṣṭhati and such a person is called sthira-prajña. Sthira-prajña, the one who does not depend upon anyone, except himself. By himself, his true self. Self with capital S. And then and then alone, tadā yōgam avāpsyasi. And then and then alone, a person attains yōga, which means mōkṣa. A person attains freedom; freedom from what: freedom from begging. Internal-bankruptcy. Even though we have got a lot of money in the bank, mentally, emotionally; we are bankrupt; asking for this person that person, etc. when that goes away, that is called freedom.

With this Kṛṣṇa concludes his essence of the Gītā teaching; consisting and karma-yōga and jñāna-yōga. Now that the teaching is over, Kṛṣṇa allows Arjuna to ask any question if he wants.

Because Vēdānta is not a matter of belief, but it is a matter of understanding; wisdom; and once the question of understanding comes; doubt should not be there; in the mind of the student; therefore Vēdāntic-ācārya allows the student to raise any question. And Arjuna is going to come up with a question, which we will see in the next class.

[śrutivipratipannā tē yadā sthāsyati niścalā |

With the 53rd slōka, Lord Kṛṣṇa concludes his teaching to Arjuna and in this portion, beginning from the 11th verse onwards, Lord Kṛṣṇa has summarised the entire vēdic-teaching; which teaching talks about the spiritual life of a seeker as designed by the vēdās and we can say this portion is the essence of vēdic-teaching; and all the later chapters, that is from the third chapter up to 18th chapter is only a buildup; magnification of this particular teaching alone, consisting of karma-yōga sādhana and jñāna-yōga sādhana and therefore this portion is like a foundation upon which 16 storied building is going to be raised from the third chapter to 18th chapter.

And therefore, we should remember this portion very well; from verse No.11 to 53, we should regularly read and we should be in touch with the content of this portion. In fact, the benefit that we derive from the later chapters is directly proportional to your familiarity with this portion. If you are going to forget this portion, the later chapters will not give that much impact. On the other hand, if you remember this portion, that is second-chapter, verse No.11 to 53, if this is very well studied and remembered, we have a very strong foundation that the later 16 chapters will be very interesting and well assimilated. And therefore, try to read this portion off and on and remember the ideas in this portion;

And as I said, the topic discussed in this portion is two-fold; karma-yōga and jñāna-yōga. Karma-yōga is a religious way of life; in which we give importance to spiritual-progress in life; and material-progress is considered subservient-to; secondary-to; spiritual-progress. Such a life is called religious-life or karma-yōga. More details we will see in the 3rd chapter. Once a person goes through such a religious life of karma-yōga, the mind will become sufficiently mature to go into jñāna-yōga which is nothing but study of my own true nature.

And this jñāna-yōga also was given from verse No.11 to 25; where Kṛṣṇa clearly pointed out that I am not the body, which is only a medium for interaction with the world; I am not the mind also, which is also another medium of interaction. Just as a spectacle has got two goggles, the body and mind are like two media with which I interact. At the time of sleep, both the media, the body and the mind are resolved temporarily; and our transactions with the world stops.

But even when the transactions stop, I continue to exist as a conscious being; a non-transacting conscious being. And Kṛṣṇa's contention is this conscious being is my true nature, this body-mind media are only incidental instruments. As long as they are there, I will transact with the world. When they are folded, I will stop my transaction; transactions will come and go, but I the pure conscious being will never come and go: na jāyatē mriyatē vā kadācit; acchēdyo'yamadāhyo'yam aklēdyō'sōṣya ēva ca. That pure conscious being is my nature, this recognition is called self-knowledge.

And this self-knowledge alone liberates a person from the fear of death; from the fear of old-age, etc. because I know that body is not myself; it is a shell which I make use of. And therefore, jñāna-yōga will lead to self-discovery.

So thus the entire vēdic-design-of-life is practice karma-yōga, prepare the mind, practice jñāna-yōga, discover the self and thus be free from all-limitations and limitations-caused problem. This is the essence of the Gīta. This is the essence of the vēdās also.

And Kṛṣṇa will elaborate these two topics only; karma and jñānam, these two topics alone will be elaborated in the following chapters. And before elaboration Kṛṣṇa gives a chance to Arjuna for any clarification, if he wants to have. And therefore there is a temporary silence and Kṛṣṇa wants to know whether Arjuna has to ask for something; and Arjuna also was waiting for an opportunity.

At least he does not interrupt Kṛṣṇa. Arjuna is seasoned enough for Kṛṣṇa to stop his talking. And now Arjuna is going to raise a question, which is the fourth and final topic of the second-chapter. And what is going to be Arjuna's question, we will see verse No.54.

अर्जुन उवाच |
स्थितप्रज्ञस्य का भाषा समाधिस्थस्य केशव |
स्थितधीः किं प्रभाषेत किमासीत् ब्रजेत किम् || २ -५४ ||

Arjuna uvāca
sthitaprajñasya kā bhāṣā samādhisthasya kēśava |
sthitadhīḥ kiṁ prabhāṣēta kimāsīta vrajēta kim || 2.54 ||

54. Arjuna asked – Oh Kṛṣṇa ! What is the description of a wise man who is established in the Self? How does a wise man speak? How does he sit? How does he walk?

Arjuna is a very practical person. He wants to know whether there will be any practical benefit of these spiritual-sādhana. He is not interested in mere academic-knowledge, he does not want to say "I also have studied the Gīta "; that is not his intention; he wants to know whether there will be a transformation in my life? Whether I will get any benefit out of this Gīta study, because especially nowadays, people consider time as very valuable; in fact, many people keep the board also: 'Time is money'. Therefore, if I, a big executive!, has to spend so many hours to come and study the Gīta, I want to know whether I will have any practical-benefit. Do not promise me some svarga and all, I am not very sure that it exists or not; and that too after death, how can I verify, if it is not there, I cannot come back to question you also and ask you: 'please give me back my time'; I cannot ask; therefore I want to know whether I will get any benefit here and now.

And for that purpose, Arjuna puts a question, suppose there is a person, who successfully goes through both the stages of spiritual-sādhana; that is, he follows a religious-life of karma-yōga, and he prepares the mind, and then he withdraws from all activities and embarks upon self-enquiry; and let us assume he is able to discover the Self. And not only this knowledge he gets very vaguely, but he gets a conviction in this teaching; he is totally satisfied with this teaching; suppose there is such a person whom we call a jñāni. And Arjuna gives a special title for this jñāni; he calls him sthita-prajñasya; prajñāḥ means a jñāni. Then sthita-prajñasya means the one whose knowledge is free from all doubts; free from all vagueness. And such a person of conviction is called a sthitha-prajñā.

And he gives another title to this person; samādhistaḥ; the one who is ever established in his true nature; samādhi means ātma; I told you in the previous verse itself, samādhi here does not mean trance. In this context, samādhiḥ means ātma, samādhistaḥ means ātmaniṣṭhā, the one who abides in his true nature. And what do you mean abiding in true nature? It means the one who does not forget his real nature, even during day-to-day-transactions, because the problem that a student faces is while studying the scriptures he accepts the fact that I am different from the body; I am different from the mind, I am satcidānanda ātma; everything he nods very well; fully accepted and admired. But the problem is, the moment he puts on the chappal, then the relatively egoistic-petty-worldly-bankrupt-personality comes and then all the transactional-problems also come. Therefore, it is not enough, that I know my nature, this knowledge must help me in the day-to-day transactions; this non-forgetfulness of this teaching; and this teaching being available during day-to-day transactions; especially when there is crisis; especially when there are problems, this knowledge must bless me; help me to remain cool and tranquil.

And such a person for whom knowledge is easily accessible. Such a person is called samādhistaḥ. The one who never forgets his nature. The second-title, sthitha-prajña, then samādhistaḥ.

Then a third title is also given for a person who has successfully passed through these two stages and that is sthitha-dhīḥ. Sthitadhīḥ is the same as the same as sthitha-prajña. means jñānam. Sthitha-dhīḥi means a person of clear knowledge, doubtless knowledge. For him this knowledge is a fact. It is not information coming from scripture, it is not hypothesis given by some Swāmi, but just as 2+2 is 4, is a fact for me. Similarly, I am the ātma must be (hasta āmalakavat) it must be a fact for me. Such a person is called sthitha-dhi.

So all these three words talk about a jñāni. Sthitha-prajña; samādhistaḥ; sthitha-dhīḥi.

Now Arjuna wants to know what is the description of a jñāni? Hēy Kṛṣṇa, please describe the characteristic of such a jñāni.

Kā bhāṣā? Here bhāṣā means description. Not language. What is the language of a jñāni? Whether he will talk only in Sāṅskṛit or some other dēva bhāṣā!! It is that the language he uses; bhāṣyathē ithi bhāṣā. Description of a jñāni; you please give so that I can decide whether to become a jñāni or not. Is it worth the effort or not. If it is not, I will withdraw from the next class. So let me be practical. Therefore, kā bhāṣā?

And kiṃ prabhāṣēta. How will he talk to other people? Is there any difference in the way he communicates with others; will he talk at all. Whether he will become a mouni; realised and mouth gets shut! Will he talk, if at all he will talk, how will he talk? Is there any change in his talking? kiṃ prabhāṣēta?

And kimāsīta. How will a jñāni sit? Poor Arjuna does not know what will be a difference between a jñāni and an ajñāni and therefore he thinks that there will be some physical-difference; Whether he will sit in śirsāna or padmāsana, or without touching the ground; or will he lying on, like that Bhīṣma, in śaraśayya. Katham āsīta, or will he sit at all? Will he be walking always? In fact, if you go to Badrinath, Kēdarnath, you can see all varieties of people, doing all kinds of things, by sanyāsis, not knowing what to do with their sanyāsa.

If there is no Guru, sanyāsa-āśrama is the most dangerous āśrama. Not knowing what to do, they will do all kinds of thing. One person does not want to sit at all. Therefore, on the top branch of a tree, he has hung; a cradle and he uses that as a prop and he permanently stands there. And the legs have become so swollen, and sleeping also he sleeps over that only; and in front he has put a cloth, for getting some money from people. Having taken sanyāsa-āśrama, does not know what to do with their time, scriptures are there to guide; gurus are there to guide; if one does not have scriptural-guidance or guru's-guidance, they will do all kinds of torturous-things, and not reaching anywhere and thereafterwards they take to drugs also; like ganja, haffin, etc. Freely available in Uttarakāśi.

Because generally people think that a jñāni must be an abnormal-case. If he does everything like any other person, he must not be a jñāni. He is also seeing with his eye. Some change must be there. At least minimum a long thādi. Thus people expect, all kinds of physical changes and therefore Arjuna also got some misconceptions like that.

Therefore he asked the question, kimāsīta? Will he sit? And if at all he will sit, how will he sit? And vrajēta kim? Will he walk, and if he is going to walk, how will he walk? Whether he will walk with the hands, upside down? How he will walk? All kinds of doubts, Arjuna asks.

In short, he wants to know how does a jñāni conduct himself in the world? What is his state of mind, how does he transact with people, and worldly people will continue to be the same, how will he react to different types of people, and different types of behaviour. So in Sāṅskṛit we call it sthitaprajña-lakṣaṇāni. All in one word. Sthita-prajña-lakṣaṇāni. Lakṣaṇam means the characteristics of a sthita-prajña.

This is Arjuna's question. For which Kṛṣṇa is going to give an elaborate answer from the next verse onwards.

Verse 2.55

श्री भगवानुवाच ।
प्रजहाति यदा कामान्सर्वान्पार्थ मनोगतान् ।
आत्मन्योवात्मना तुष्टः स्थितप्रज्ञस्तदोच्यते ॥२-५५॥

śrībhagavānuvāca
prajahāti yadā kāmān sarvān pārtha manōgatān |
ātmanyēva"tmanā tuṣṭaḥ sthitaprajñastadōcyatē || 2.55 ||

55. The Lord Answered – Oh Arjuna! satisfied in himself by himself, when one gives up all the desires obtaining in the mind, then, he is said to be (a man) of firm knowledge.

An important portion of the 2nd chapter. Sthita-prajñā portion. Very often quoted by Śāṅkarācārya and other ācāryas. It is very important because once we know the characteristics of a jñāni, we have a model to guide us in our spiritual-sādhanā. Therefore, this description serves as a guideline to all the seekers in sādhanā.

Therefore Śāṅkarācārya says. Yāni sthita-prajñasya lakṣaṇāni tāni mumukṣōhō sādhanāni. Whatever is the natural trait of a jñāni, they will serve as an example for the other people so that he can also try to acquire those traits. Therefore, it is an important guideline for every sādhanaka.

And the second-benefit of this portion is wise-people can check up themselves and see to what extent they have got the benefit out of this study. Because often people ask this question, Swamiji how do I know whether I have become a jñāni or not? If I am already a jñāni, I can stop coming to the next class!! Will there be any physical-indication? Halo will be there? Will there be some such halo. So regularly I can watch for it. Will there be any physical change at all. How am I to know, whether I have reached the goal. Will you give a certificate? To whomsoever it may concern; the bearer of this letter is a sthita-prajñā and therefore hold him in respect and if possible, do some pāda-pūjā, etc. How am I to know whether I am a jñāni or not? If there is any such doubt, you can easily check up by studying these verses. Because Kṛṣṇa tells, the characteristics of a sthitha-prajñā. I can compare myself and see whether I am getting closer to that model.

But one important statutory warning. Use this portion only to judge YOURSELVES. Do not go with this to check others; this man has not become. Do not give certificate to others; especially to your family members. This portion must be utilised only for changing ourselves. Therefore this portion is very important for every seeker. Sthitaprajñā-lakṣaṇāni.

Then in this portion itself, Kṛṣṇa discusses another topic also; and that is sthita-prajñā sādhanāni, which means what are the sādhanas to be practiced to become a sthira-prajñā.

Two portions. One-portion is what are the natural traits of a person who has already become a sthiraprajñā; and second-topic is: What are the disciplines or sādhanas to be practiced to become sthira-prajñā?

So regarding the sādhanas, I have to give you some note, because Kṛṣṇa does not discuss all the important sādhanas elaborately; but he discusses only certain sādhanas.

So he has already hinted that everybody has to go through karma-yōga and jñāna yōga. There is no choice there. Now this jñāna-yōga that a person has to go through is presented in three stages in the scriptures.

Jñāna-yōga consists of three stages. The first stage is called śravaṇam. Śravaṇam means receiving the scriptural teaching, which means no self-study allowed. So it should be scriptural teaching and that too I should not study by myself, I should receive it from a competent person; otherwise I will get into all kinds of wrong interpretations and problems. Because there is a particular method of extracting the meaning out of the scriptures. For details we will be seeing in due course. This first-stage is Śravaṇam, receiving the scriptural-teachings from a competent-guru.

And this receiving of the scriptural-teaching will reveal my true nature; this will help in self-discovery. Because the scripture and Guru are like mirrors. For what purpose do we use the mirror; we know that I cannot see my forehead directly ~ have you tried to see your forehead directly? ~ if you try you will have only headache, you can never see your own forehead; however powerful the eyes are. Therefore, what do you do? You use a mirror. And even though you are looking outside into the mirror, actually what you are seeing is not the external-mirror, but with the help of an external-mirror, you are seeing your own face or your own-forehead.

Similarly, if I have to see my real self, the local mirror is for seeing the physical body, if I have to see my real self, I should use a special mirror and this special mirror is guru śāstra -upadēśa. This scriptural teaching is a verbal mirror that if a student appropriately uses this teaching, it will help in discovering my real nature.

Therefore Śravaṇam removes self-ignorance. Śravaṇam helps self-discovery. Śravaṇam serves as a mirror to see my real-I. This is the first stage of jñāna-yōga. And these stages are mentioned in the Upaniṣads themselves. ātmā vā arē, srōtavyaḥ, mantavyaḥ, nidhidhyasitavyaḥ. Upaniṣads makes it very clear. Receive the teaching.

Then comes the second-stage of jñāna-yōga. As even I am receiving the teaching, several doubts come in my mind, because the teacher does not want the student to believe what he says; it is a not matter of believing but this is called a matter of knowing. Where knowing is involved, buddhi is involved; and buddhi will not accept something unless it is convinced. It should be logical. It will be keeping with my day to day experience. If I say this is an elephant, what do you do? Swamiji, it should be right? I can take a stick and say that you nod your head. If I threaten that you should say that it is an elephant. If you say OK. OK, I will accept and you force and say: Repeat my words, this is an elephant.

But that does not constitute knowledge, because of in your heart of hearts you will be sympathizing with me and tell: what has happened to Swamiji; till now he has sensible; now he is starting unconnected things. We will go home and pray for Swāmiji's Intellect.

You can deceive everything in the world, except your intellect. If your intellect is not convinced, let even Bhagavān come and say, you will not accept. Therefore, this is matter of knowing, not believing; and therefore the guru allows the student to think rationally whether his intellect is able to accept this knowledge. And if there are any doubts, regarding this teaching, the guru allows to raise any number of doubts, Vēdānta class is one place, where there is no question of threatening, forcing, brainwashing, conditioning, etc. it is not communism we are doing, it is the knowledge of my real nature.

Therefore the second-process of jñāna-yōga is asking my own intellect honestly, am I convinced? Of what? I am not the body, I am not the mind; but I am the eternal-consciousness functioning through the body and mind. And until the student is convinced, the guru is ready for any amount of discussion. And this interaction and clarifying all doubts is called mananam. This is the second-important part of jñāna-yōga; mananam.

By mananam, I remove all the intellectual obstacles. With this the knowledge has been converted into conviction; it is no more mere vague hypothesis or idea, but is a fact for me.

And then comes the third stage. Up to this I have only handled my intellect; asked whether the intellect is able to accept it; and there are no more intellectual-problems, but that is not enough. This intellectual-knowledge must be converted into emotional-strength. This intellectual-knowledge, must be converted into emotional-strength; psychological-strength, because it is our emotional-personality which is predominantly transacting in day to day life. If you just study your life, very rarely we use the intellect. When studying in college, whether we used it a little itself is a great doubt, and that too whether it had any effect in my system is a great doubt. Only one thing was to by-heart it upside down and write it and forget it. We will get the degree.

Therefore, we very rarely use early morning; if we see, it is our emotional-personality that is predominant, we are disturbed when coffee did not come, disturbed because the bus did not come; or start the car and it does not start at all; or while going on the way, somebody overtakes your vehicle, or the road is dug and office you go, the business is dull and find throughout I am agitated or I am jealous and depressed, I am anxious and I am angry and I am irritated, you find throughout the day, it is a series of emotional-interaction. So if I do not strengthen emotional-personality, the knowledge will remain isolated and in my day to day situation, I would continue to be as bitter as before. Every-moment-disturbed, every-moment-irritated, afraid, angry, frustrated, worried, with all kinds of complexes.

Therefore, if I should enjoy emotional-freedom, then I should free myself from all the unhealthy emotional-responses. I should be free from all unhealthy-emotional responses. Emotional-immunity is very important.

Or else you will say 'aham brahmāsmi' crying. Then immediately say that my daughter is like this or my son is like that, etc. One man came, very big position in Larsen & Toubro, or some company. Just came, the very great intellectual high IQ; I said the other day, high IQ is there, he enjoys a very important position; drawing 5 or 6 figures salary, but there is some misunderstanding, communication gap with his wife or child, he is so much upset and worried, he came to my room, and he asked, shall I close the door, I said OK, and after closing, he cried for 15 minutes non-stop, I do not even know for what. I have not seen him earlier; thereafter he calms down. It is not that he is not intellectually-strong, well educated; occupying position; his problem is IQ; EQ is waiting in Q!. It is not there at all. Only God will know when he will get.

Therefore, any amount of IQ, intellectual-understanding will be useful only when you convert it into emotional-strength, a rock like mind, which can withstand all kinds of weather. This conversion of IQ into EQ, intellectual-knowledge into psychological-strength is very important; otherwise the knowledge does not help practically.

This conversion is like going from one country to another country. You have got plenty of rupees in America. You might be the richest person, the rupees will not be useful there. You have to convert it to dollars. If you come here from there, you convert from dollars to rupees. Correspondingly change. Corresponding exchange. Similarly, here also knowledge must be converted into mental-strength.

This is the third and final and important-stage which is called nidhidhyāsanam. I have to study what are my emotional-weakness. Many people have so many varieties of complexes. Therefore, what all complexes, I have and in the light of knowledge, I should see all these unhealthy-responses are meaningless one, born out of ignorance. Somebody said that all the negative emotions are developed in the dark room of ignorant mind. All negatives are developed in the dark room. Similarly in us also, all the negatives, kāmaḥ, krōdhaḥ, lōbhaḥ, mōhaḥ, madaḥ, mātsaryaḥ, rāghaḥ, dvēsaḥ, bhayaḥ; all negatives are developed in the dark mind of ignorance. And once a person has gone through the third stage of nidhidhyāsanam; then, he has converted his jñānam into sthira-prajña.

Through śravaṇam and mananam, he gets prajña; through nidhidhyasanam, he converts prajña into sthita-prajña.

Therefore Kṛṣṇa wants to deal with two topics in this portion and one topic is how to convert prajña into sthitaprajña and another thing is after converting into sthira-prajña what type of mind you will enjoy. That mind is called jīvan-mukti.

In fact, jīvan-muktiḥ is a light-mind, enjoyable-mind, lovely-mind. A mind which is not burdensome. Many people think jñāni means no mind; jñāni has no mind; and he keeps on talking all thoughtless talks, how will it be; and moreover somebody else is taking notes of it 😞. Better than that, one can go to the mental hospital and take notes! 😊. Therefore jñāni is not without mind; jñāni is free from burdensome-mind; ignorant-mind; problematic-mind is not there; and his mind is so light; that he is not aware of its presence.

Is this not true? Any part of the body that is healthy, you are not aware of it. Isn't it like that. If all the knee joints are working, you will not be aware of its existence. But when it has started giving problems, then you will become aware of it. Then it will draw your attention and tell you; 'take care of me; take care of me'. Whatever is fit, you do not feel its presence. There is a Chinese proverb; when the shoe fits, shoe is not known at all. You feel that you are walking with bare feet. Similarly you feel the presence of mind as long as there are worries and anxieties and fears. For a jñāni, since all these are not there; it is so light, you will not feel its presence; therefore it is said, jñāni has manō-naśa. But really speaking, it is not; jñāni enjoys a wonderful mind. What is that wonderful-mind; Kṛṣṇa is going to tell that.

Now look at the ślōka. What is the first trait of a jñāni? It says: ātmanyēva''tmanā tuṣṭaḥ. Very important line. Very important line. Ātmanyēva''tmanā tuṣṭaḥ. Jñāni is one who is happy with himself. He is self-sufficient. He does not require any external-factor to be happy. He might require external-factors to provide food, that is a different-thing; physical-dependences may be there; for food, clothing, shelter, but as far as his emotional being is concerned, he is not going to go with a begging bowl; asking each and every one, whether you will take care of me. As I said the other day, his life is for giving love and care, but his life is not for begging for love and care. What a wonderful attitude. As long as I beg, there will be sanctions. You know what is sanctions. Constant blackmail. Like minority governments trouble will be there. You are never at ease with yourselves.

And jñāni's advantage is ātmanyēva'tmanā tuṣṭaḥ. If you come, come, if you go, go. Not only with regards to things and situations; with regard to beings also. Why, even with regard to his own physical body. He does not depend upon even his physical condition; if I am going to depend upon my physical-condition; my old age, I cannot accept my grey hair, or I cannot accept my bald head; I cannot accept my wrinkles, my happiness is dependent on physical-condition.

Jñāni is one, who does not depend upon any factor. Why? He has got indigenous happiness. That is why, people say, we are not bothered about sanctions, we are all self-sufficient. Politicians they say, we are OK. So this is the first indication of jñānam. Self-sufficiency. Self-contentment.

And once there is fullness within myself, what is the natural consequences? Kṛṣṇa says sarva-kāma-tyāga. Renunciation of all expectations. All desires, because desire is born out of what?

Vēdānta has diagnosed the problem, why the desire comes? Very simple. It is like a person, looking for a walking stick. Why does he look for a walking stick? Because his legs are not strong enough, to stand on their legs, and therefore to complete myself, I require a stick. Similarly when I do not see myself as a complete person, and I think that only when there is a house, or a wife, or a child, that too a male child, (all girls, one boy at least, or else my life is incomplete), children are there, but grandchildren are not there; my neighbor has got it; but I do not have it; therefore it makes me incomplete; something or the other desire is there; my eyes see the apūrṇatvaṁ.

Kāma is not a disease in itself; it is a symptom of the sense of incompleteness. And in the case of a jñāni, he never sees himself as incomplete, ātmanyēva'tmanā tuṣṭaḥ. Therefore I do not require anything to complete myself. I may use the things of the world; but I do not need those things. I have often said, using a thing is different from needing a thing. Like a person who goes for morning walk; they use a baton; a small 1 foot or 1-1/2 thing which is usually used by the policeman, just keeps it for stylish walk, the stick he uses, but does not need it as a prop. How do you know that? Because even when the stick falls; nothing happens; he is able to retain his balance. Whereas when he uses a walking stick as a support, he needs that support; the moment that support falls, he also falls.

Jñāni also may have people around him; or various other things also; for a jñāni all of them are like what? The small 2 feet baton, which he just enjoys waving. But for all other people, every object, is a mental walking stick. If it falls, shattered. That thing falls, he is shattered; this thing falls, he is shattered. So Kāmaḥ means dependences born out of sense of incompleteness. And all these dependences sarvan kāman prajahāti because of his mental strength.

And where are these kāmās. Manōgatān all these countless numbers, wriggle in the mind, like worms, they are wriggling all over, torturing inflicting pains, and all those cleaned up, not because he forced the desire away, that is called suppression, forcibly saying no to things is suppression; dropping of the desire must come out of the discovery of pūrṇatvaṁ. It should naturally happen. Like when the fruit comes, all the flower petals, they fall away. Similarly, all these desires should fall, because of the discovery of pūrṇatvaṁ.

And this is called kāma-tyāgaḥ; this is the second trait of a sthita-prajña. First trait is he is happy with himself; not that he will be laughing alone, do not think like that! He is not a mad person. He smiles alone, walking. Inside there is a sense of pūrṇatvaṁ. Expressed when people are around, unexpressed when there is nobody. More in the next class.

We have come to the 4th and the final topic of the second-chapter, viz., the topic of sthiraprajña. And this topic is given as an answer to Arjuna's question and Arjuna's question is: suppose a person goes through all the sādhanas prescribed in the scriptures, and becomes a jñāni, well established jñāni, how will he face the situations of life, and how will he respond to various situations of life. In Sāṅskṛit, we say sthita-prajña lakṣaṇāni. Lakṣaṇam means a natural trait. Spontaneous-trait is called lakṣaṇam. What is the lakṣaṇam of sthira-prajña?

And before a person becomes a sthira-prajña he has to go to three stages of life; the first stage is by following a religious lifestyle, by following a life of karma-yōga, he must purify the mind, which is the first stage of citta śuddhi. Otherwise called jñāna-yōgyatha prāpthiḥ. So through karma-yōga one has to become jñāna-yōgaḥ, which is the first stage,

And thereafter he has to study the scriptures especially the vēdāntic-scriptures he has to systematically and consistently study under the guidance of a competent Guru which is called śravaṇa mananam, which is the second-stage and through this stage, a person becomes prajñaḥ.

So first stage is jñāna-yōgyatha, and then by receiving the teaching from a competent ācārya, he should become a prajñā, which means he has got conviction in the teaching of the vēdānta.

But even this prajñā status is not enough, because the knowledge remains at the intellectual level and therefore in the third stage, he has to convert the intellectual knowledge into emotional strength, because throughout the life, it is our emotional personality that is interacting.

If you analyse our life from morning till night, every situation is only straightly attacking our emotional personality either creating irritation or creating depression or jealousy or anger; it is our emotional personality which is standing out. Even when we come to the class, and somebody comes late, and crosses you and sits in right in front of you and he is a taller person; so you have chosen a vantage point, coming early at 5.30 itself, a person comes at 6.45 and sits right on your lap; then you may feel so irritated till the class is out. You do not listen that day. That means more than the intellect, it is the emotional-personality which is bearing the brunt of every situation.

And if that emotional-personality is not transformed, knowledge will be there at one level, but in my day to day life, I may go through the turmoils I went through before. And therefore, if Vēdānta should be of any practical use, I have to spend time, converting this knowledge into emotional strength, which is called prajñāḥ to sthira-prajñāḥ.

That means my whole personality is soaked in this knowledge to such an extent, that to every moment, this knowledge is available to help me out, especially when there is crisis in life. Who wants Vēdānta when everything is going well? Everybody is happy; even without Vēdānta. We require when there is crisis.

And this process of converting prajñā into sthira-prajñā, jñānam into jñāna-niṣṭa is the third stage and that person who has purified; who has gained the knowledge and who has derived emotional strength from that knowledge, such a person is called sthira prajñāḥ; such a person is called jñāna-niṣṭa, such a person called ātma-niṣṭa; such a person is called jīvan-mukthaḥ. He has insulated himself, like a person who has insulated his hands and legs can touch a live wire and it will not shock him.

Similarly this person has insulated himself by jñānam glove; the glove of jñānam he has used on himself; nothing in life shocks him. And Arjuna wants to know what is the conduct of such a person.

And Kṛṣṇa has started giving the answer from 55th and first main definition that he gives is: ātmanyēva'atmanā tuṣṭaḥ; jñāni is independent of external-factors to be happy; to be happy fulfilled; he has attained emotional independence. Physical-dependence everybody has got; there is dependence on food, clothing, shelter, we are not talking of physical dependence, emotionally jñāni is independent of external-factors, he is happy with himself. And when there is emotional-independence, he does not want to hold on to anything, just as a person who has a broken leg is physically dependent on a wheel chair or a walker or a stick, how long he will hold on to this walker. Until he finds strength; once he has got strong legs, it is impossible for him to hold on to the stick. Naturally, he drops the stick and that is called sarva kāma tyāgaḥ. Kāma means: walking sticks, emotional walking sticks are kāma. House is an emotional-walking-stick; people all the time smiling at you is an emotional walking stick, (if somebody does not smile at you on a day, you are upset). The smile normally is two inches and today it is only one inch, I am upset; all these are emotional walking sticks you hold on to. When I do not depend upon any of those factors, I am a free person and therefore pūrṇatvaṁ leads to kāma tyāgaḥ.

This is the trait of a jñāni. Therefore he says Sarvān kāmān prajahāti. Here kāma does not mean desire; but here kāma means OK desire also we can take, also the desired object; both of them. We can take the primary meaning itself; desire. And where are they? In the mind wriggling like worms, wherever we go, we may be in Kailas Manasarovar, we cannot drop it, it follows us everywhere, disturbing all the time. Therefore, he says, Sarvān kāmān prajahāti, yatha when a person is able to do that, manōgatān kāmān. Because of what? Not grapes are sour renunciation; two types of renunciation are there; one is I tried; the grapes are sour; and I am not able to reach and therefore I gave up; but that giving up is not real one; because the desire continues potentially, somebody plucks it and brings, I jump at it.

Like somebody going to Rishikesh because of some problem at home. One month there, and they will comeback. Therefore it is not born out of suppression; oppression or because of somebody's word, it should come out of maturity; and one who is mature and desireless is sthira prajñāḥ.

Therefore the first definition is one who is independent; the second definition is one who is desireless.

Now here, the word, desireless must be understood very clearly. Because in the śāstras, they talk about two types of desires, one type of desire comes under 'allowed'. Like cholesterol, there are two varieties: HDL and LDL; one of them is allowed variety, not only allowed, it is good also they say. Another one is only dangerous. Similarly, among desires also we have got allowed-one and not-allowed-one.

Therefore we should clearly know what is allowed so that we can happily enjoy those desires. What are those desires which are allowed; they are those desires which fulfill 3 conditions; if those three conditions are fulfilled; those desires are allowed. What are they? All the 3 are important conditions.

1. They must be legitimate-desires. One is legitimate-desire, which we call, dhārmic-desire. Like a desire of a parent that a child should grow well. And the child should be well-educated. And I should be able to do my duty towards my children, and I want to fulfill my duty, which is a very very legitimate desire; śāstrās allowed desire; in fact I have to fulfill them; that is legitimate. Similarly I want to buy a house, I want to buy certain things, by earning money legitimately, that is also legitimate. Only when I try to steal, that is problem. Therefore the first condition is legitimate.

2. The second-condition is moderation. What we mean by 'moderate' is this; when a person's worldly desires go to such a level, that his whole life is dedicated to only material-pursuits, that he has no time to contact his spiritual-center. Because śāstra says however much you are busy, you must be able to spend some time to contact your spiritual-personality; invoke your spiritual-personality, you should be able to allot some time for spirituality. It may be study of scriptures, it may be reflection on what you have studied, or it may be a reading a spiritual book, or it may be interacting with a spiritual-person, it is not enough that you spend time only earning money and providing for your family, you should have time for invoking the ātma. Because every human being is a mixture of both spiritual and material-personality; a life dedicated to only material gains is a lop-sided approach.

And therefore if the desires go beyond a limit, that is so much absorbed, he goes out of the spiritual center, he loses the spiritual balance, it is a dangerous life. A person going round and round when the speed reaches a particular intensity, the centripetal-force they say, you know, that takes him out of the center which is not good.

Whatever you do, I must be able to remember that these are all impermanent and these are all incidental, whether it is body or money or all these things, our real pursuit and real personality is the spiritual.

Therefore the second-condition is what? Providing time for spirituality; you do anything. You have hundred factories, we do not care, you travel all over the world. We do not care; Vēdānta does not want to restrict you; but what Vēdānta says is whatever you do like a cyclist, whatever you do. You should not forget the center of gravity, the balance. Because that is your core personality. Therefore, let not your worldly roles carry you away from the real center.

Therefore what is the second-condition of desires? Have any amount; but you should have, what time; quality-time for spiritual-invocation; śravaṇam or mananam or nidhidhyāsanam, about which we will see more; in fact that your finding time for Gīta class itself is great. Otherwise, you will be without time for that also. You will say that I have to go there; go here, etc. etc. Therefore minimum you should keep coming to Gīta class. Let me make sure that I can talk to you. Or else it would be off the hands. So this is the second condition. Fulfill all your desires; wonderful; legitimate-desires; wonderful; but have time for spirituality. Some prayer; more about I will discuss later; some basic spiritual disciplines, Kṛṣṇa himself will talk about. We should find time for that. Now minimum is continuing the Gīta class. Ok. More I will tell later. This is the second-condition.

3. The third-condition is very important-condition. All these desires: that is the moderate and legitimate desires should be non-binding desires; which is very difficult but important condition. I will explain it. The third condition, convert your desires into non-binding desires, or to put in another language, convert your desires into preferences.

What are the differences between non-binding and binding desires? The answer is this. When a desire is a binding desire; it has the potentiality to upset you to afflict you, because when I have a binding desire, naturally I tried to fulfill that desires, but whether the desire will be fulfilled or not, is not totally under my control. As we saw before, karmaṇyēvādhikāraṣṭē mā phalēṣu kadācana. I can have wonderful plans for my child. What all he should do? He should become a doctor, an engineer, this, that, etc. And he should earn 5 or 6 figure salary, and when I am old, he should take me around the world, all these plans and this body is interested in totally something else. I want to become Tendulkar. I am not saying it is wrong. He has got a totally different desire or he becomes a sanyāsi.

So every sannyāsi's parents had wonderful dreams about their child, so therefore, any dream can be shattered because we are not omniscient and omnipotent; that means a binding kāma is a bomb; a time-bomb which can disturb me at any time. And therefore you have to defuse that bomb; by proper understanding and what is that understanding; I have got this desire; and I will work for that very well also; and I will seek the grace of the Lord also; but in spite of all these things, there are chances that they are not fulfilled or they are not fulfilled to the extent that I want. And when such a situation happens, I am mentally prepared to take that also. This mental preparedness is defusing the bomb. This mental preparedness even when you plan to watch a TV programme, football match, or US Open final, or Wimbledon final or a movie, whatever it is; prepared from early morning, with popcorn, because you cannot watch the TV without doing anything most important preparation, you have to keep on putting, as if in a waste paper basket, just push it; all things you have sure that no guest comes, you switch on, power goes away. Be ready every time you plan for a TV programme. Be ready, when you plan for a class. We can try, we can also think, this mental-preparation; born out of wisdom, is converting the kāma into non-binding-kāma.

And in śāstra, such a kāma is called śuddha kāmaḥ. Śuddha kāma is a desire which fulfils these three conditions. Condition No.1 legitimate; condition No.2, moderate, condition No.3 non-binding. And if all these 3 conditions are there, and that kāma is śuddha-kāma, you have any number of śuddha-kāmās, no harm. Even jñānis have śuddha-kāmās, because of the desire of Śankarācārya alone, he could write a Bhāṣyam. He wanted to bless the humanity, help the humanity; it was also a desire. Why Śankarācārya, even Bhagavān had a desire, Vēda itself says: Sō kāmayatha, Saḥ means Bhagavān, Bhagavān when he got bored, when he was sitting alone thought one day that he will create a drama;

सोऽकामयत । बहु स्यां प्रजायेयेति । स तपोऽतप्यत । स तपस्तप्त्वा । इदं सर्वमसृजत । तैत्तिरीयोपनिषत् षष्ठोऽनुवाकः॥

In that particular context only Śankarācārya writes a beautiful bhāṣyam; he asks a question; if Bhagavān also has a desire, isn't he also bound. Here in the second-chapter, jñāni is defined as desireless, how come the vēdās say that Bhagavān has desires. Śankarācārya himself raises this question and he answers saying that Bhagavān's and jñāni's kāmās are śuddha-kāmāḥ; they are fulfilled, wonderful; not fulfilled, OK. It is like a cricket game; you always remember this example, a five match series is there; three matches they have won and wrapped up the series; and how will they play the 4th and 5th match. That is called jñāni's-lakṣaṇā.

If you want to understand a jñāni, just watch the 4th match; in the 4th match they will play well. Enjoy the game. So many records have to be broken. The 7th catch behind the wicket. 27th catch before the line, statistics, they work for the statistics alright; ātmanyēva'tmanā tuṣṭaḥ. Victory is bonus. No victory; Cup is with us.

This is jñāni. For those people, only the 4th match is like that; for a jñāni, the whole-life is like that; he plays very well; not that he is so full that therefore he is without motives;

no, the 4th match they play very well. Similarly, jñāni has got motive coming from him to work hard; but that motives is without a sting. So whatever happens, it does not hurt him. And therefore, prajahāti yadā kāmān means prajahāti yadā aśuddha-kāmān; jñāni renounces all aśuddha-kāmās; whatever kāmās he has, they are śuddha.

This is an important verse. Whole section is important. Why I say this is important is rest of the verses are all commentary upon this verse alone. This is sūtra ślōkaḥ and all the other verses are vyākhyāna ślōkaḥ.

Verse 2.56

56. One who is free from craving amidst pleasures, whose mind is unperturbed in troubles and who is free from attachment, fear and anger is said to be a sage of firm knowledge.

So how does a jñāni respond to situations in life. And that too unfavourable-situations. So from this it is very clear that jñāni also cannot avoid unfavourable-situations. Not that by becoming jñāni, I can avoid painful or difficult situation, because jñāni or ajñāni, we are all born with our own prārabdha-karma; very birth is because of prārabdha; so until death happens; puṇyam and pāpam are going to affect; jñāni may not create fresh puṇya-pāpam; he does not acquire āgāmi-karma, I hope you remember āgāmi, sañcita, etc. (or else I have to take it as my Karma). So jñāni does not add to his fresh karmas, āgāmi karmas, remember whatever karmas he has acquired, when he was ignorant before, they are going to impinge on him in the form of favourable and unfavourable situations. When they come, what happens? He says; anudvigna-manāḥ. Jñāni's-mind is so emotionally-strong and he has got a shock-absorber called jñānam. He has insulation called jñānam; or with a good shock absorber. How will it be when we travel in our roads? The disturbances are minimal So disturbances are minimal.

How do you know that? We can easily grade. All these things do not suddenly happen. It is all a gradual growth; as even we learn to assimilate this teaching; the mind does not become strong overnight; but it becomes gradually strong. How to measure the strength of the mind? Is Gītā really going inside me, how to know? I will give you a measuring method; again I warn you this must be used for measuring yourselves; not your friend or family members; it is abuse; just to check yourselves; or introspection.

The number of things or the frequency of mental-disturbances becomes lesser and lesser. Previously in a day, 10 times 15 times I get disturbed because of son's behavior, wife's behavior, daughter's behavior, policeman's behavior, that person's behavior, the number of things that disturb you that becomes lesser and lesser; that means the frequency of mental disturbance should become lesser gradually. In fact for some people once in a while, they are calm! Generally they are irritated or irritable. They are just waiting to jump. Once in a while irritated. Therefore the frequency should become lesser. You can have a diary also. Just note the frequency. I do not mean anger alone. Any emotion.

Second thing is the intensity of the mental-disturbance. How to measure the intensity of mental disturbance? When it is of lesser intensity, it just creates a small ripple of reaction in the mind, and then it goes away. But when the intensity of the mental disturbance increases, then it begins to overflow into our vāk, the organ of the speech, that the words also are affected. I use powerful words, and hurt other people, I curse, I do this, I shout all those things. That is the mental disturbance is overflowing into manāḥ into vāk. And if it is still more intense, from vāk-indriyaṃ it overflows to the physical-body also that the body is shivering and some people feel heavy gasping and all, some people gnash their teeth, lips are shivering, as Arjuna said:

वेपथुश्च शरीरे मे रोमहर्षश्च जायते || १-२९ ||

sīdanti mama gātrāṇi mukhaṃ ca pariśuṣyati |
vēpathuśca śarīrē mē rōmaharṣaśca jāyatē || 1.29 ||

When there is lesser intensity, mind alone is affected; when there is more intensity, mind and vāk are affected; when there is maximum intensity, it affects manāḥ, vāk and kāya; śarīram. From that we can know to what extent assimilation is taking place. So what is the second test? Intensity; What is the first test? Frequency.

So what is the third test? When I am disturbed or affected by an adverse or unfavourable situation, how much time I take to recover or come back to balance. The recovery period. The balancing period. So when the intensity is more, and the weakness of the mind is also more, when I have a strong weakness; then it does not recover; becomes a trauma even. It is so deep, that the whole day I am upset and sometime whole-week I am upset; sometime whole month I am upset, sometime whole year I am upset; sometime whole decade I am upset; sometime whole life I am upset; that is the recovery-period that also should become lesser and lesser; this is the sign of knowledge getting converted into emotional strength, more emotionally strong the mind is, the lesser will be these three. These three means what. The frequency, the intensity and the recovery period of the mental disturbance.

And a jñāni is one who has got a good strong mind. Therefore duḥkhēṣvanudvignamanāḥ. Similarly, the disturbance can be because of unfavourable-situation. Sometimes the disturbance can also be because of favourable-situation also. That is also an excitement. Excitement can be because of negative things. Excitement can be because of positive things also. I told you the other day. One person was contesting the elections; 27 times he failed; but still like that Robert Bruce; he just and he never thought that he will win the 28th time. He himself got so excited that he got heart attack and died. Heart attack can come because of positive excitement also. Therefore Vēdānta says both types of excitement are not healthy. Both types are not healthy; because even biologically it is not good to get over excited.

So who is a jñāni? sukhēṣu vigatasprahaḥ. Even when there are favourable conditions, he is not carried away; vigatasprahaḥ. He is dispassionate; he is balanced. And in short, vītarāga-bhaya-krōdhaḥ; so vīta means free from, free from these basic emotional-problems; first one is rāgaḥ; emotional-dependence or attachment; which is the basic problem, we saw in the first chapter itself, if you remember the very definition of saṁsāra; I told three; do you remember; rāgaḥ, śōkaḥ and mōhaḥ; first one is rāgaḥ, rāga means not Kāmbhōji, Kalyani, Tōdi etc. this is Vēdānta-rāga, means attachment; So jñāni is free from attachment. And when we say attachment free from love, it is different from love; love is a positive wonderful trait which Vēdānta glorifies, but attachment is that which is criticised by Vēdānta.

And I told you three differences; remind you briefly. Attachment comes out of weakness or dependence. Weak-mind, that is depending which is expressing in the form of attachment and since it is based on dependence, attachment is always expecting. In attachment I always think what I will get out of this relationship. I am not much bothered about what the other person gets; what will I get; therefore it is more self-centered; more expectation based; it comes out of a strong weak mind; whereas love means a mind that which comes from a strong mind. Therefore, love comes out of mental strength; therefore it is not primarily based on what I alone get; but I equally interested in what the other person gets out of relationship. That is the first difference. Expectation based. Another is: It always think of what I can get. The other one thinks what I can give. One is getting-based; another is giving-based.

The second-important thing is in attachment, I want to get the benefit from the other person, I want to control the other person, because it is for my benefit I am keeping the relationship and therefore I want to keep control; it is control-based. I never want to give freedom to the other person; whereas in love, I basically understand that everybody is seeking freedom; just as I do not want to be controlled by anyone; it is improper for me to control everyone; therefore the relationship should lead to the freedom of the other person; in love my goal is giving more and more freedom to the person loved. In attachment the goal is controlling more and more of the other person. Bear-hug. And kill the person because of that possessiveness. Very difficult. This is second difference. Here we say jñāni has got love; but what Kṛṣṇa says he is free from rāgaḥ. Details we will see in the next class. Hari Om.

In the final part of the 2nd chapter, Arjuna wanted to know about the sthitha-prajñā or sthiraprajñā, the one who has got Ātma jñānam, and the one who has assimilated this ātma jñānam. How does such a person conduct himself in his life; and when different occasions come, in what way his response is different from an ordinary ajñāni? In short to put in simple language: is there any practical-benefit for Gīta study, because nobody is interested in studying Gīta merely for academic-benefit. We want to know whether there will be any practical benefit in life. This is Arjuna's question for which Kṛṣṇa begins his answer from verse No.55 onwards and this goes on till the end of this chapter, this is the well-known sthitha-prajñā portion of the Bhagavat Gīta, a very important portion, worth getting by heart and remembering.

And in the last class, I pointed out that a person comes to the level of sthira-prajñā by going through two stages. The first stage is a religious life; known as karma-yōga, by which he attains a pure mind which we call jñāna-yōgyatha. Everybody has to necessarily go through this religious life of karma-yōga, to prepare the mind.

And the second-stage is consistent and comprehensive-study of the scriptures which is a compulsory-process, every seeker has to go through which is technically known as Vēdānta śravaṇam and mananam, about which I will elaborate later; or in a simple language, vēdānta-vicāraḥ, scriptural-analysis. This is also a compulsory stage of sādhana. Otherwise called jñāna-yōga also; nobody can escape.

Even though there is a very wide misconception that in Kaliyuga we can avoid jñāna-yōga; in Kaliyuga we can avoid scriptural-study and attain the goal through alternative methods; that is not traditionally accepted; it is not scripturally-accepted; nobody can circumvent jñāna-yōga.

Therefore the second-stage is jñāna-yōga, otherwise called śravaṇa-manana, otherwise called Vēdānta-vichāraḥ. In fact, what you are doing now is jñāna-yōga, systematic, consistent-study of the scriptures. It is not a stray talk on a stray subject. We are developing systematically. Such a study is called jñāna-yōga.

And by this jñāna-yōga a person becomes a prajñāḥ or jñāni. So by the second-stage, a person becomes prajñāḥ; otherwise called jñāni; through which there is an intellectual-conviction regarding the teaching of this scriptures and that intellectual-conviction is that I do not need any external help to be complete. I must be convinced because at present our strong notion is: "To be happy I require so many things around". And this is so strong that we are not even ready to question this basic premise but Vēdānta attacks the basic premise and asks the question: "Do you really require things to be happy?; I do require things for survival.

We are not mixing up survival-requirement and happiness; and if security-requirement and if survival-requirements are identical, all rich people who have got all the gadgets and houses, they must be the happiest people. In fact, many of the richest people committed suicide out of frustration. So from this it is very clear that we should not mix up survival-requirements and happiness-requirements. We have a notion that we require too many things to be happy. By systematic-vēdāntic-study, I should be intellectually-convinced that I do not require anything to be secure; to be fulfilled; to be happy; to be fearless; to be anxiety free and to be self-sufficient. This is an intellectual-transformation which Dayānanda Swamiji called (in our last series of talk, "Need for cognitive change". It is a cognitive process, which we call intellectual-conviction.

So jñāna-yōgyatha to prajñāḥ - two stages and then we have to go to the third stage, where this intellectual-conviction should be converted into emotional-strength; emotional-immunity; because it is the emotional-personality which is facing the brunt of various situations, that is why most of the time, even though our IQ is very high; as I said the other day, but EQ is terribly wanting. Very intelligent-person but most of the time upset because the set-up is not alright. Set up changed, what happens? Set Up. Up Set. Therefore the moment there is a slightest disturbance in the set up; the class is changed from the ground to the temple, it is enough for some people to get disturbed. Therefore, I should have that emotional-strength not to get upset by the set-up and this conversion of intellectual-conviction into emotional-strength is called the process of nidhidhyāsanam, which Kṛṣṇa will talk about briefly in this chapter and Kṛṣṇa will talk about it elaborately in the 6th chapter. Therefore karma-yōga, then jñāna-yōga; then Nidhidhyāsana. Preparation of mind, intellectual-conviction, emotional-fortification.

And a person who has successfully gone through these three stages has gone from jñāna-yōgya to prajña, to sthira-prajñāḥ.

And how does he respond to the situation? What are his natural traits Arjuna wanted to know. Kṛṣṇa is enumerating them. The first-thing that He said was prajahāti yadā kāmān; all-expectations are dropped. Because expectations come out of self-insufficiency, I look for a crutch because I am not able to stand on my own feet. Suppose you have to get up; there are some people who look for wall to get up they look for some hold, they do not have enough strength, therefore I look for a wall. Therefore every expectation comes out of an incomplete-mind. A non-self-sufficient mind can be an apūrṇa mind; therefore a jñāni is one who does not have expectation from a thing; from a being; from a set up.

This is called kāma-tyāgaḥ. This is the first-trait of, natural-trait of a jīvan-muktha. And because of this natural-trait, what difference do we find; Kṛṣṇa himself tells later, when the expectations are not fulfilled, I am bound to get upset. So every expectation is a risky thing because every expectation is potential sorrow. I expect my son to be like this; my wife to be like this; my daughter to be like this; I do not want anyone as they are or he is; I want everyone to behave as I want. What about myself? I will behave as I like. Wonderful philosophy! I do not want anybody else to expect anything from me; because I want my freedom; but as long as the others are concerned, everything they do: getting up, doing this, doing that, doing this, in everything, I have expectations, one millimeter different from that; I am terribly upset. If at all I ask somebody to do something, if I am suggesting it for the other person's improvement, it is not expectation. If I ask anyone to do something, for the other person's improvement, it is a non-binding-expectation; but if I want somebody to do something, so that I will be comfortable, it is a hooked-expectation, it is a poisonous-expectation.

What is the difference between a poisonous-expectation and a non-poisonous expectation? If it is a non-poisonous one, if I suggest, if you do this it is good for you; and if you do not do this, you be ready for facing the consequences. It is non-poisonous expectation; its fulfilment and non-fulfilment do not disturb me.

Poisonous-expectation is: I do not ask the other person for something for their own good; even though I tell that it is for your betterment, etc. (it is a bluff, with capital B), I will be happy only if you do that. How do I know that; if that person does not do that; I am tremendously upset; this is called saṁsāra. And jñāni is one who has suggestions for everyone, who has advices for everyone, who has got recommendations-for-everyone; but who has expectation-from-none. N.. O.. N.. E. none. Not nun. Expectation from Nun is also a problem!! 😊

Therefore the first-benefit is what? Drop the expectation. It cannot be forcibly dropped. Do not try to push away your expectation; it will never succeed; it will never fade; expectation should naturally drop, because of the discovery of pūrṇatvaṁ through knowledge. It is not that you are going to push the darkness straightaway, suppose you try to sweep off darkness; it will never work. You light up the lamp; darkness will go away.

Never attack the expectations directly; you can never succeed. Go to the root cause of the expectation. The root cause is: I feel that my pūrṇatvaṁ depends upon this type of behavior from these people. Therefore, self-incompleteness is the cause of expectations; and by wisdom and wisdom alone, that has to be knocked off and that is called kāma nāśaḥ. No.1.

Then the second-natural trait that Kṛṣṇa presented is: ātmanyēva'tmanā tuṣṭaḥ. He could drop all expectations because he is full and complete by himself. Not because. The moment you add one because; suppose I say that I am full and fine, because my son listens to whatever I say; that means what? As long as my son listens to what I say, I am happy. The moment he changes, you will ask: My son did this!?! The moment you hear the news we are very sure that everybody else would do and not my son. And one day the shocking news comes and shattered; therefore if I say I am full because of something, there is potential danger; jñāni is one who says I am full because I am 'I'. Fire is hot because of what? What will you answer? Because it is fire. If I say why is water hot; there is a reason for water being hot; because it is in contact with something and the moment it is because of something, if and when that condition goes away, water will go cold. Similarly as long as my happiness depends on external factors, I am in potential danger; jñāni's happiness is because of what: 'I am happy' because that is my nature. And how did he know that? Because of consistent, jñāna-yōgaḥ. Therefore what is the second-trait. Ātma-tuṣṭi. Self-sufficiency.

Then in the 56th slōka, the third-natural-trait; in Sāṅskṛit it is called lakṣaṇam; the third sthiraprajñā lakṣaṇam was pointed out; and what is that? Samatvam, equanimity; poised-state-of-mind, in spite of external-turbulences. The mind is generally calm; the disturbances gradually recede.

I gave you three experiments to find out whether I am getting emotional-strength through Gīta Study; 3 experiments I gave. Do you remember?

Look at the frequency of the disturbance; how often you are disturbed during the day; you can start a diary also; initially you will have to ask the question the other way around; how often I was peaceful. Or else the diary will not be enough. So start with when was I peaceful. Between 2 and 3. When I was sitting in meditation or when others were sitting in meditation I get peace! That's why I always say that you should all practice meditation; because, if not you; whether it helps you or not, it will help others; they will get peace of mind when you meditate. At least some time they will be peaceful. Initially we start with higher frequency. Then frequency is reduced.

The second is intensity of emotional-disturbance. How do you know the intensity? In intense-disturbance it is not only attacking the mind, it affects my expressions and even it flows into my physical-body; physically I am disturbed as Arjuna was. And when the intensity is less, physical-disturbances are less, but verbally I go on talking, sometime even when nobody is there; lonely, alone, talking to oneself. So much inside. And when still lesser intensity, verbal and physical expressions are gone; it is at the mental level, the disturbance, you do not disturb others. It is a silent-disturbance. So intensity is less, and Finally the recovery time also becomes lesser. Previously the disturbance flows into hours; why hours, days and months and years and sometime decades, even after 25 years, if one utters the name of that person, one gets disturbed. 'That day he did like that! I can never forgive him'. And sometime they tell about that person to me; they will start cursing me also! From third-person, they start abusing you. It might be extreme agitation. He might be criticizing someone. But he/she, they will start telling, and in the end they will start telling: Where is YOUR buddhi, as if I am at fault! 😊. And I am fearsome that somebody nearby will listen to this and think it is about me!! 😊. And if I ask them to stop, they will get too wild also, because they are agitated so much. I pray that at that time, nobody should be around. They say: You do not have any sense at all. You do not keep quiet, etc.!! 😊. They are talking about their father-in-law of mother-in-law!! Temporarily I become the mother-in-law of that person!! 😊.

So therefore recovery-period also becomes less and less; frequency, intensity, and recovery time of emotional-disturbances become less and lesser and lesser and a time comes, which is practically Nil or it is almost insignificant. Kṛṣṇa will tell in the 6th chapter, guruṇā'pi duḥkhēna vicālyatē. Even the greatest tragedy in life, for one second he may ask: Whaaaaaaat? Next moment he will say: So-What? Only two words: from Prajña to Sthira-prajña. When he says Whaaaat?; you will think that he is going to have an attack; but he immediately says: So-what: I will recover and carry on life. So Kṛṣṇa said: duḥkhēṣvanudvigna-manāḥ; the unfavourable situations do not disturb his mind too much. And also sukhēṣu-vigatasprhaḥ; and he is not carried away by favourable situations also, because we should remember when there are favourable-situations we can enjoy; there is nothing wrong in it; but even when we enjoy favourable-situations, we should know that this is also subject to arrival and departure. We should not forget the truth of anything; once the discriminative power is clouded; it is getting carried away. Even pleasurable situations should not cloud my discriminative power; What is the discriminative power? Every situation in life, is subject to arrival and departure. Therefore, I do not want to become an addict to favourable situation also, so that when the favourable situation also goes, I am ready to face that also. That is called sukhēṣu vigatasprhaḥ. Is not carried away; he enjoys, but not carried away. Up to this we saw in the last class.

And then in the 2nd line, he adds some more. The first line is samatvam. So this is the third trait of the jīvan-muktha. Sthira-prajñāḥ, he says, vīta-rāga-bhaya-krōdhaḥ. Every verse is very important, because it is useful for self-introspection. So rāgam means attachment; dependence is called rāgaḥ, which is the fundamental trait of saṁsāraḥ. In the first chapter I said rāgaḥ, śōkaḥ and mōhaḥ; but here Kṛṣṇa is presenting differently. There rāgaḥ, śōkaḥ and mōhaḥ; here it is rāgaḥ, bhayaḥ krōdhaḥ; another route of saṁsāra; both are saṁsāra; one is one route of saṁsāra. Another is another route. Rāgaḥ means dependence, attachment, psychological-leaning.

What is wrong with that? What is wrong; bhayaḥ, the more I am dependent, the more I feel insecure. The more I am dependent, the more I feel insecure, because, whatever I depend upon in the world that itself is insecure. Other than God; other than God, every blessed thing in the world is insecure by itself. And the fundamental mistake I commit as an insecure person, I am trying to hold on to another insecure. Insecurity plus insecurity is equal to security? What arithmetic I do not know: insecurity plus insecurity is equal to more insecurity. Insecurity-squared.

This is the fundamental mistake in our very approach to life. That is why we are not able to solve our problems, not because we lack our effort; we lack direction; it is like a person, he wants to go to Mahārāja. Not departmental store. And then says: Swamiji I walked for hours and never reached; Bhagavān is without compassion. He is always to blame! I have done so much and achieved nothing. In which direction you walked? So if you walk in the wrong direction, not only your effort will not reach you to your destination, on the other hand, you are going away from destination.

That is why, we use the word prayatnaḥ in Sāṅskṛīt. yatnaḥ, means effort. That 'pra' prefix is very important. Pra means proper direction. In English also proper is coming.

Proper. What is proper? Right direction. What is right direction? A insecure person should hold on to, if at all he wants to hold on to, he should hold on to secure one. If you want to hold on to, you have to hold on to secure Tamarind branch. Not mango branch; that tamarind branch is Bhagavān.

Until you discover security in yourselves, hold on to the ever secure Lord. But an unintelligent-person, neither discovers security in himself or herself; nor tries to hold on to the Lord but he goes on holding on to more and more insecure ones; like a drowning man holding on to a grass. This is called rāgaḥ. Unintelligent-dependence is called rāgaḥ. It will only increase insecurity. Therefore the consequence is what? Bhayam.

What should I do? Instead of feeling secure, I am worried about security of the companion. And the companion is worried about my security. And both of them are worried about the security of the next one. Whole-thing goes like that. Yathra Yathra rāgaḥ, tathra tathra bhayam. This is our basic emotion. There is constant fear; running in our mind. That is why any telegram comes, what will be think first; Who is out? Yathra Yathra telegram; thathra thathra, somebody out. We have generalised that rule. Why can't you think about a wonderful news? Why because, that indicates what is there in our deep subconscious. Therefore, rāgaḥ leads to bhayam.

Then what is the next one? Krōdhaḥ. Anger. Directly proportional to rāgaḥ is anger. Because when I want to hold on to something, I find that there are so many obstacles to that. And every obstacle makes me angry. I want that person to be with me whereas that person wants to be away from me. I get angry. Therefore, rāgaḥ leads to bhayam. Bhayam leads to anger. These three are as though brothers; and jñāni has got out of rāgaḥ; because of his self-sufficiency, he does not have emotional dependence. Where rāgaḥ nāsthi, tathra bhayam nāsthi. Abhayam prathiṣṭām vindatē. By mōkṣaṁ we are thinking that we have to go to some other lōka; by mōkṣaṁ we think that we have to wear kāvi, mōkṣa m means we think what one has to grow the beard; it is not like that. Kṛṣṇa defines mōkṣa m as abhayam. Taittiriya Upaniṣad defines mōkṣaṁ as:

यदा ह्येवैष एतस्मिन्नदृश्येऽनात्म्येऽनिरुक्तेऽनिलयनेऽभयं
प्रतिष्ठां विन्दते । अथ सोऽभयं गतो भवति ।
यदा ह्येवैष एतस्मिन्नुदरमन्तरं कुरुते ।
अथ तस्य भयं भवति । तत्त्वेव भयं विदुषोऽमन्वानस्य । तदप्येष श्लोको भवति ॥ १ ॥ इति सप्तमोऽनुवाकः ॥

yadā hyēvaiṣa ētasminnadṛśyē:'nātmyē:'niruktē:'nilayanē:'bhayaṁ pratiṣṭhām vindatē | atha sō:'bhayaṁ gatō bhavati |
yadā hyēvaiṣa ētasminnudaramantaram kurutē |
atha tasya bhayaṁ bhavati | tatvēva bhayaṁ viduṣō:'manvānasya |
tadapyēṣa ślōkō bhavati || 1 || iti saptamō:'nuvākaḥ ||

As long as there is self-ignorance, bhayam cannot be avoided. Self-knowledge is the only way to fearlessness. Therefore, what is the third? Not fourth, fifth and sixth trait of a jñāni is freedom from rāgaḥ, fear, and anger. Rāgaḥ, bhayaḥ krōdhaḥ abhāva. Vītaḥ means freedom.

As even we describe the benefit of Gīta study, very tempting isn't it. That is Kṛṣṇa's aim. You should be tempted to study Gīta, because of the benefit is what: freedom from anxiety, anger, fear etc. How wonderful it is. Freedom from fear, freedom from emotional dependence, and such a person, sthitadhīr-munirucyatē. Such a person is a muniḥ, a sage.

So therefore whether a person is sage or not, does not depend upon his external attire; when we say sage, we think that he is in forest, jaḍa should be there; he should be sitting with closed eyes; he should have beard; he should have a 'T'-danḍa ' etc. This is the picture we have. Kṛṣṇa says external-transformations do not guarantee freedom from saṁsāra; but the internal-transformation gives freedom and one who has brought about internal-transformation; he is a sage, even though he is a family man, even though he is very much world of activity; he might be coated, booted and suited; but still he will be a Muniḥ. Mananāt muniḥ. Muniḥ means one who has got the right knowledge. Mananāt muniḥ.

And how did he become muniḥ? Because of sthithadi. Because of his knowledge. What type of knowledge? That knowledge which is converted into emotional-strength. Sthithadi, is another word for sthiraprajñā. Not only he is intellectually strong; which means that if anybody questions his basic philosophy, he is able to intellectually defend; because our scriptures are dealing with knowledge, not belief; knowledge means clarity. Let anybody ask any question; he has got the understanding. Not only he is intellectually sound, but he has converted it into emotional strength, that he enjoys peace of mind also.

यः सर्वत्रानभिस्नेहस्तत्प्राप्य शुभाशुभम् |
नाभिनन्दति न द्वेष्टि तस्य प्रज्ञा प्रतिष्ठिता || २-५७ ||

yaḥ sarvatrānabhisnēhastat tat prāpya śubhāśubham |
nābhinandati na dvēṣṭi tasya prajñā pratiṣṭhitā || 2.57 ||

यः yaḥ He anabhisnēhaḥ is unattached सर्वत्र sarvatra everywhere न अभिनन्दति na abhinandati neither does he rejoice न द्वेष्टि na dvēṣṭi nor does he hate प्राप्य prāpya on facing तत तत् शुभाशुभम् tat tat śubhāśubham various favourable and unfavourable conditions तस्य प्रज्ञा tasya prajñā His knowledge प्रतिष्ठिता pratiṣṭhitā is firm.

57. He is unattached everywhere. Neither does he rejoice nor does he hate on facing various favourable and unfavourable situations. His knowledge is firm.

Continuing with the same topic; Sthiraprajña lakṣaṇāni, Kṛṣṇa says a sthiraprajña is one who is sarvatra anabhisnēhaḥ. The one who is free; one who is not hooked to any person, any situation or any object; whereas ajñāni is one who has got gum all over the body; suppose you do an abhiṣekaḥ with gum; imagine that; (you do not have to do the abhiṣekaḥ!); what will happen, wherever you go, you are stuck or that sticks to you. Similarly now our mind is so much gummed, in Sāṅskṛit the word snēhaḥ has two meanings; one is gum; which sticks; snēhaḥ. Also in Tamil. Therefore in Sāṅskṛit, gum is snēhaḥ, any oily substance; any sticky substance is called snēhaḥ; and attachment is also called snēhaḥ. So sarvatra-anabhisnēhaḥ means, his mind is so weak, that anywhere he goes, he wants to hold on. Anything, including a particular place in the class. If he sits 4 days in a place in the class, he will start telling that it is his place. This is temple. He makes other person get up. Unless he sits in the place, he cannot listen to the class. Can you imagine? He takes coffee for a few days and says from emotional-dependence, it has become a biological-dependence; headache. Anything and everything, we get stuck. Jñāni is one who moves with all people; who loves everyone, he enjoys the company; but at the same time, he does not get stuck to anyone. That is why in those days; he is called paramahansa-parivirajakācārya. He freely moves, loving everyone, but one not stuck to anyone and this psychological freedom is called anabhisnēhatvam. That emotional freedom. Like certain gadgets which has got so many attachment, with screws and the screw, you can attach and you can also detach. You can detach and keep it. But there are some things which are riveted firmly. You cannot remove it.

Similarly, jñāni is one who can screw anywhere and who can unscrew. He will be coming and he will be going too. He enjoys the company of everyone but he does not miss anyone. But somebody asks: Do you miss me? He may tell yes, just not to hurt the other person. Because now the regular time, the thing is we feel wanted; that somebody should miss us. Everyone wants it written in the letter and told in the phone: that I am missing you very much. Then only happiness. Jñāni does not miss anyone; for the sake of encouraging others, he will tell without you the class is not good. So he will feel that he is very important. vip. He will think that vip. I can be important or insignificant. So therefore sarvatra-anabhisnēhaḥ.

And tattat prāpya śubhāśubham. Again this is important. Even a jñāni faces external favourable and unfavourable situations, because a jñāni may not acquire fresh puṇyam pāpams, but a jñāni also was ajñāni before. He was a saṁsāri before in this janma itself or at least in the previous janmās. All those previous puṇya pāpas are not going to leave a jñāni. Do you remember what karma it is? In Tatva-Bōdha, it is said prārabdha karma.

He does not acquire āgāmi karma, but he has to face prārabdha-karma. It is like switching off a fan, even after you switch off the fan, because of its intensity of the movement, the fan continues for some more time; similarly even after jñānam, the prārabdha karma continues for some time; therefore even jñāni faces what: favourable and unfavourable situations; Kṛṣṇa calls them śubhāśubham prāpya. Śubham means favourable; aśubham as unfavourable. Some people glorify this jñāni; you are wonderful, you are doing great service; whereas some other people may criticise; these people are not productive citizens of the country; useless for anything; they do not work in the world at all; and they are setting a wrong example also; emphasising all these nivṛtti, etc. and all those things and there are many people, even now that they think that it is vēdānta which is responsible for Indian problems. Even now, there are people to criticise. Therefore they may criticise all these people who are propagating Vēdānta. Therefore glorification comes; criticism also comes; there is health; there are sometimes diseases also; all these comes; what is his attitude. Nābhinandati na dvēṣṭi. He is not carried away by favourable situations and he is not over-agitated by unfavourable situations also, which is the same as samatvam, which was mentioned before.

Therefore this slōkā is almost the repetition of the previous slōkā, samatvam. But here we should understand a very important thing. When we say a jñāni, a person of wisdom is not disturbed by situations and the people's proper-conduct as well as their improper-conduct, this is often misunderstood by people. They argue: Swāmiji, if we are going to accept all the situations without any reaction, then people think that we are too innocent a person and they begin to exploit you. If we keep quiet, they make us a doormat. So therefore do you mean to say that I should meekly surrender to all the situations and keep the balance of mind; does not it make me a weaker person. Previously I reacted to the situation and therefore I could stop the misbehavior of that person and if I am not going to react: yaḥ sarvatrānabhisnēha, nābhinandati na dvēṣṭi; they will think that I am a simpleton. Instead of taking me as a simple person, they will say I have tons of simplicity that I am a simpleton.

Now Vēdānta does not say that you should meekly surrender to all unfavourable situations or improper behavior. Vēdānta does not say that. In fact, in the very Bhagavad-Gīta itself, Kṛṣṇa is asking Arjuna to fight adharmā. Vēdānta does not mean just blind acceptance of whatever Akrama is done by other people or injustice by done others.

What is vēdānta trying to say? We should clearly understand that for any situation, we can have three types of responses. For any situation, we can have three types of responses; one is impulsive-reaction; in which there is no time; there is no thinking;

there is no planning, there is no buddhi-involved without using discrimination or anything immediately I react to the situation that impulsive-reaction is one possibility.

And the second-possibility is meek surrender to the situation, whatever abuse the other person does; I meekly surrender and I do not take any step to remedy that. It is unintelligent-inaction. It is unintelligent inaction; generally we swing towards these two extremes. One is impulsive reaction, where thought is not involved; another is unintelligent inaction born out of weakness.

And vēdānta says both are equally bad. Impulsive reaction is bad because it affects me, myself, because any reaction disturbs the mind and if I continue that mental-disturbance for long time; it will create stress in me and I am going to suffer from many physical-diseases. Therefore, impulsive reaction may get things done, because the other people get frightened and you may get your things done; but the side effects are more terrible. There may be immediate positive-benefit but there are long-term negative benefits like antibiotics, when we take them indiscriminatingly at the first sign of a disease.

Antibiotics, is like many of the powerful drug which may immediate give me relief, but it is going to damage my vital organs. Any impulsive-reaction is like a powerful drug, which has got long-term adverse result; mental and physical; and many people think impulsive reaction is strength; but it is not strength, it is seeming strength; but it is real weakness alone. Lack of self-control it shows, and weak surrender to the situation or inaction is also improper, because we have to suffer injustice; nowhere śāstra it is said that we should meekly suffer or surrender. Therefore, both are improper.

Then what does śāstra say? Avoid impulsive-reaction; avoid unintelligent inaction; but take to intelligent action; giving sufficient time; sufficient thought. Study the situation, and see whether there is a remedy or not; for certain situations there are no remedy at all; if it is a choiceless situation, strengthen your mind to face the situation; you have got so many methods, which we will discuss later. Therefore, if it is a choiceless-situation, do not try to change the situation, which is not going to work, because it is choiceless-situation. If you ask me: can't we change choiceless-situation. I would say the definition of choiceless situation is what cannot be changed.

Therefore be intelligent. Intelligent response is that I do not waste my time to change that; I would put forth effort to strengthen my mind so that the impact of the choiceless situation is insignificant or nil. That is called intelligent-action. And if it is a choiceful situation, I think very well what remedy has to be taken; and after sufficient-thought, I very carefully deal with the situation; sometimes Sāma, sometime dāma, sometimes bhēda, sometimes danḍa. If we have to punch the nose, do it consciously. Do not miss the nose! What śāstra says is do not do it impulsively. Let it be a thoughtful-action like a Court which gives even capital punishment if required; it is thoughtfully-done, after enquiry into the affairs sometime; for seven years, 10 years, and then punishment. Do what is required. Let it not be-impulsive. And that is a jñāni and Kṛṣṇa also is a jñāni and that is why he tried with Duryōdhanā all the legitimate methods, when they all did not work, he consciously decided: Arjuna kill Duryōdhanā, no other method; and if Bhīṣma and Drōṇā unfortunately joined to the wrong party, you have to fight them. This is action.

Therefore what is vēdānta; avoid impulsive-reaction, avoid unintelligent-inaction; but take to thoughtful-action; and thoughtful-action is two-fold; if the situation is choiceless, the intelligent-action is to strengthening myself; if the situation is choiceful-situation, the intelligent action is changing the situation itself. Do some parihāra; go to some place and do some hōma, etc. Nothing wrong; śāstra itself has provided. Use parihāra. If everybody says you have to live with that, do not go on complaining, you learn to live with that particular situation. And that is sthira-prajñāḥ.

More in the next class.

ॐ

Arjuna asked a question to Lord Kṛṣṇa. What is the lifestyle of a sthira prajñā; how does he conduct himself and how does he respond to different situations in life? And sthira prajñā is one who has attained self-knowledge. We should remember that in the context of Vēdānta, the word jñānam can refer to only one thing and that is self-knowledge; a karma-yōgi also has got knowledge; the knowledge of karma-yōgaḥ e has got. Because of that knowledge alone, he is able to practice karma-yōga, but even then, we do not call a karma-yōgi a Jñāni. Because karma-yōgi has the knowledge of karma-yōga only but the word Jñāni can be used only for one who has got jīvātma-paramātma aikya-jñānam. Karma-yōgi only surrenders to the Lord; but he does not know that I am Brahman and therefore here the word sthira prajñā refers to only that person who has the knowledge; who has the knowledge Aham ātma asmi and the nature of that ātma as described in the previous verses. From verse No.12 to 25, we talked about the nature of ātma; the one who knows I am that ātma, which is akartā; which is abhōkta; which is ēkaḥ; which is sarvagataḥ; which is nityaḥ, that ātma I am. I am the eternal imperishable and full ātma, the one who knows he is called a prajñāḥ.

And it is not enough that one gains that knowledge. As I said in the last class, that this knowledge which is intellectual in nature, has to be converted into emotional strength. Without this conversion, my emotional personality will remain fragile; knowledge will remain in the intellect, but mind will continue to be vulnerable to situations. I will continue to have all the emotional problems like anger, jealousy, depreciation, anxiety, fear; all of them, and at the intellectual-level, I am Brahmāsmi I will tell. This split-personality is of no use. Therefore, this intellectual-knowledge should be converted into emotional-strength; such a person is called sthira-prajñāḥ. And naturally, the knowledge has trickled down into his emotional-personality. Therefore, he knows and he feels that I am ātmani ēva ātmanā tuṣṭaḥ, which means I do not miss anything in life.

Only when I have a feeling of incompleteness, sense of incompleteness, I miss things in life; this missing alone becomes a desire. What I miss in life, I desire. Some people miss a companion, therefore I would like to get married; that is how a miss becomes a Mrs. Why, as a miss, she missed something and therefore, it becomes a Mrs. hoping that things will be better. Then what happens we have to ask her only. Therefore, missing things makes me seeking for things; and from that seeking all the later problems, successes and failures. But in the case of a sthira-prajñā, he does not miss anything. Therefore, what is the basic trait of a sthira-prajñā, ātmana ēva ātmanā tuṣṭaḥ; I am happy as I am. This is the first-trait.

And the next-trait is: because I am happy as I am, I do not require things to complete me; I may possess things, but I do not need things; there is a lot of difference between possessing a thing and needing a thing. When I possess a thing, I am not bound by that; but when I need a thing, I am not possessing it; in fact, I am possessed by it; you know who is a possessed person. Therefore, when I need a thing, I am possessed, when I do not need a thing, I may be a possessor, be a possessor; no problem, but never be a possessed. And this is called sarva kāma-tyāga, no more need for things.

Then the third-trait that Kṛṣṇa mentions is samatvam. So he has got an emotional balance, in spite of the situations turning favourable and unfavourable; therefore the third trait is samatvam.

Then the fourth-trait is vītarāgaḥ; freedom from rāgaḥ; otherwise called Vairāgyam. Does not emotionally depend upon anything. Emotional dependence is the biggest problem.

And then the next-trait is when there is no emotional dependence. There is no fear; I may lose, I may lose, directly proportional to the dependence is the constant fear of losing things. Jñāni is one who is ready to lose anything at any time. That preparedness to lose anything is the inner strength.

Therefore, vairāgyam, next one is abhayam. He is fearless.

Then the next-trait that Kṛṣṇa said, because of the absence of emotional dependence and fear, he is free from anger; anger is the converted form of desire; Kṛṣṇa will tell in the third chapter, anger is the converted form of desire; when I expect something there is potential anger. Any expectation is potential form of anger because, the moment that expectation is threatened, it gets converted into anger; whoever be responsible for that, anger will turn to towards that person.

Even that very person whom I depend upon, he has been assisting me so much, and because of him I am very very happy, and that person says I want to go away. Until now, I had tremendous so-called love for that person; the moment that person wants to be independent of me, I get angry with him; because since I depend upon that person, I expect that person to depend upon me; I never want to give freedom to others; why, because I need them to depend on me. If anybody says: I am happy without you also; we cannot stand. We want everybody to say: I am missing you; I am missing you. You have to keep on telling that; without you I am fine if you tell, we will get doubts. What is the reason? There must be something. Some story. So therefore, the next problem is what? Anger. Rāgaḥ bhayaḥ krōdhaḥ, they go together; Jñāni is free from all these three. And therefore only:

यः	सर्वत्रानभिस्नेहस्तत्तत्राप्य	शुभाशुभम्
नाभिनन्दति	न द्वेष्टि तस्य प्रज्ञा प्रतिष्ठिता	२ ५७	-
yaḥ	sarvatrānabhisnēhastat	tat prāpya	śubhāśubham
nābhinandati	na dvēṣṭi tasya prajñā pratiṣṭhitā	2. 57

No situation, favourable or unfavourable will carry him away. He is neither lost in a happy situation, nor he is lost in an unhappy situation. Getting lost in a happy situation is: thinking that it will always be there; getting lost in a happy situation is: thinking that the happy situation will be eternally there; an intelligent person, a Jñāni is one who will enjoy a happy situation, but he knows that any situation is fluctuating one; that is, his intellect is not clouded by happiness. And at the same time, when a tragedy comes also, he is not totally lost; suddenly turning philosophical, what is life for? Suddenly he will start talking philosophy. Vazhvē-Māyam. All meaningless. I will go as a sanyāsi, etc.; he will say only for a day; start looking for āśrama, something like that; when something happens saying that life is meaningless, that again shows that I am carried away by a particular situation, life is always meaningful; no person can make my life meaningless because of his or her disappearance; because I have to find my own growth; whether other people are there or not.

To say that my life is meaningless, because that person has left me; again shows clouded thinking. As Swami Chinmayānanda beautifully says: We have all come alone; and we have to travel alone; and ultimately we have to go alone. Alone to the Alone, All Alone is Life. Because our intimate feeling, we will never be able to share with anyone and therefore to say that life is meaningless when some tragedy happens; that is also clouded thinking; and when everything is fine, to forget God and religion, spirituality, because things are fine, that is also clouded thinking. Jñāni is not carried away by any situation. Up to this we saw.

58. Moreover, when he completely withdraws the sense organs from the sense objects just as a tortoise (withdraws its) limbs, then, his knowledge (becomes) firm.

Up to verse No.57, Kṛṣṇa talked about a person who has attained knowledge and who has converted the knowledge into emotional strength. Not only he has become prajñāḥ, but he has become a sthiraprajñāḥ; there is a mental transformation also. Not mere cognitive change; but there is an emotional transformation also. Such a person is sthira prajñāḥ.

Now from the 58th verse, Kṛṣṇa is changing the topic. And that topic is: how can a person convert the knowledge into emotional strength. How can a person convert the knowledge; which knowledge? The Self-knowledge. What is Self-knowledge? Which has already been discussed from verse No.12 to 25; Kṛṣṇa assumes that we remember that portion.

For you also, whatever I say will be meaningful only if you remember that portion; if you do not remember, go back, read, and again continue it to be meaningful, the essence is Aham pūrṇaḥ. I am full and complete. I do not want anything to be complete. This self-knowledge, a person has received; it is a cognitive change, it has to be converted into mental-strength; how to convert?

In the previous slōkās, we talked about a person who has already converted. Here afterwards, Kṛṣṇa is going to talk about a sādḥaka who wants to convert the knowledge into emotional strength. How to convert; Kṛṣṇa is going to talk about three exercises or three sādhanās, or three disciplines to convert the self-knowledge into emotional strength. What are those three disciplines? I will briefly mention. Then we will see in the verse.

One thing which is very important is Nidhidhyāsanam. In English, Vēdāntic-meditation. Nidhidhyāsanam or Vēdāntic-meditation. And what do you mean by Vēdāntic-meditation; dwelling upon the teaching, which says I do not depend on anything to be happy. I have to see that part of the teaching again and again. That Aham Ātma Asmi, Aham pūrṇaḥ Asmi, Aham śuddhaḥ Asmi; Aham Nityaḥ Asmi, I do not have mortality; so the idea is we have been thinking that we need things and people to be emotionally full and complete; and we have never questioned that assumption.

Like a smoker, who uses the cigarette for some time, 10 years, 15 years, he cannot imagine a life without cigarette; for him life is impossible without that two-inch-of-substance. And he even refuses to think that even before he started smoking; he has happily survived and there are millions of people who are happy or even happier without smoking. But he refuses to think. That is called, we get used to a particular way of life and we never question that assumption. Similarly, we think that life is complete only when certain things and people are around and without them life is impossible we think; and that vāsana is so stronger, I have to break that vāsana; by repeatedly asserting I do not need the so-called people and situations to be happy. If I have to experiment I can go alone to āśrama and some place; some people have been practicing going as a couple, and now they believe that they cannot go alone; go a āśrama and stay for a week and in fact you will find that you are happier. You do not have to tell that in your home after coming back! So you will find that you are really happy. You do not need/ Thus, I have to break my rut-of-thinking and I should tell that I can be without any body. I may need things for physical survival; food, clothing and shelter for survival, but to be happy psychologically I do not need anything, I need only myself. Go on repeating this and get practice. This is Nidhidhyāsanam. Owning up independence. Like a baby, which thinks that it cannot walk without holding on to the mother; or while holding the cycle, somebody has to run behind, holding the cycle, and afterwards what that does person do is to only run behind without holding the cycle! But what you have been feeling that he is holding the cycle. Thereafter someday he says that he never held the cycle and that I have been driving the cycle on my own only. Thereafter he stops and asks. It is a psychological feeling. Therefore, I have to break that; breaking exercise is called Nidhidhyāsanam, for which the support of Vēdānta also is there; which says: you are not the physical body; physical body has dependence, you are not the mind, you are not the intellect; you are the ātma which is ever independent; this practice is called Nidhidhyāsanam. This is exercise No.1, which is the main exercise.

That means that you should not stop with listening to the class; and thereafter you think of Vēdānta only next Sunday at 6.30 p.m., If the class is there. It should not be like that. You have to go back home, sit quietly and spend some time:

मनोबुद्ध्यहंकारचित्तानि नाहं
न च श्रोत्रजिह्वे न च घ्राणनेत्रे
न च व्योमभूमिः न तेजो न वायुः
चिदानंदरूपः शिवोऽहं शिवोऽहम् ॥ १ ॥

manōbuddhyahamkāraccittāni nāham
na ca śrōtrajivhē na ca ghrāṇanētrē.
na ca vyōmabhūmiḥ na tējō na vāyuh
cidānamdarūpaḥ śivō:'ham śivō:'ham ॥ 1 ॥

There are so many Nidhidhyāsana slōkās written by our ācāryās; which you may know or may not know; but essence of the teaching I have to dwell upon. Just listening is not enough. That is called Nidhidhyāsanam.

Then Kṛṣṇa adds two more exercises. One exercise is Indriya-Nigrahaḥ. Indriya-Nigrahaḥ means Regulation of the sense-organs. Regulation of the sense-organs; because until the knowledge become steady and contributes to emotional-strength, we should not go through violent-emotions. Violent emotions are detrimental to the assimilation of Vēdānta. Violent-emotions are detrimental to Vēdāntic-assimilation; therefore until the knowledge takes root, it has to be protected like a plant; when a plant is planted, initially it is not strong; any goat can come and eat; therefore, they keep protection; how long; until the plant becomes a very very strong tree. Once the plant has become a tree, then goat cannot destroy, you tie even an elephant, it cannot shake the tree.

Until the knowledge becomes well steady, one should not allow violent emotions. And emotions come through what? Through the five sense organs; because the world enters through five sense organs into the mind; and it is this world in the form of śabdaḥ sparśaḥ, rūpaḥ, rasaḥ, gandhaḥ. The fivefold world is gate-crashing into my mind; so the five-fold world including the bell ringing, they all gate crash into the mind through the five doors; and any of them can disturb the mind. Therefore, I should use my discrimination; and wherever the world can disturb the mind, avoid such forms, such smells, such taste, such touches, such sounds, one should avoid. This is called Indriya-Nigrahaḥ.

Never get into arguments. Argument is one thing which can very much disturb the mind. In many houses, the problem is there are so much frequent arguments on silly matters. In fact, the normal talking itself is argument. Anybody says anything I contradict. Why, because you say that and therefore I do not agree. Argument is a very highly disturbing thing. And often arguments are for things which have no relevance; atom bomb whether we should have blasted or not; whether we should have or not is a different matter, as it has already taken place; and there is nothing to be gained by arguing now.

Now why should you have another nuclear-explosion at home, over that? Already Pokhran is over; why do we argue? You can just exchange, share; you agree or disagree, but converting it into a heated argument and ego gets well bloated; that is all dangerous. Anything that provokes, rāgaḥ, krōdhaḥ, dvēṣaḥ, kāma, lōbhaḥ, mōha, those provoking things you avoid. If the other person argues and you are getting emotionally disturbed, just tell him that I am not ready for exchange, because my mind is disturbed, as Swami Chinmayānanda nicely writes: "In argument more heat is generated than light". What we want is enlightenment; light is knowledge; in argument nobody learns anything. Everybody wants to establish their own ego only, I do not learn anything because; I do not listen at all; then how to learn; when the other person is arguing; I am planning my answer; and when I am talking he is planning his answer; both of them are not listening. So whenever you get such an occasion, tell I am sorry, I am not interested and still he continues to talk, quit that place, that is called, Indriya-Nigrahaḥ. Never allow violent emotions. This is indriya-nigrahaḥ.

Then the third exercise that Kṛṣṇa prescribes is Manō-Nigrahaḥ; Manō-Nigrahaḥ means regulation of the thought process. You started talking to someone, and he entered into argument; even though you did not want; he entered into argument, and he said it is non-sense, etc. He said nonsense. Now I have such an ego that I cannot take, the word nonsense from that person; and I have quit that place, I did not want to get into argument further; but even though I have physically quit, I go on meditating upon Nonsense Nonsense. He said: I am nonsense. Therefore dwelling upon such an event, and building upon that; first time when he said nonsense I did not get that much annoyed; but I again and again re-lived that life, and that is my son; my own son; or my son-in-law or somebody or the other, I again and again create that set up and again and again re-live those words, and as even anger become very big built up. Any emotion is a buildup.

No event can produce an emotion in one second. Even the most tragic event when we listen first it is an information. It is a cognitive process that is taking place. It never produces emotion. I live it; it happened; Money gone; what I will do tomorrow; Money gone; what I will do tomorrow. Money gone; what I will do; I go on dwelling upon that; only after dwelling upon for hours or days or even for weeks; that becomes such a powerful emotion of anger, frustration, depression, and therefore every emotion is thought buildup.

One thought is not an emotion. Thought build up is an emotion. Thought build up is in my hands. So I can refuse to buildup that line of thinking; and that is called mental regulation. If an event causes emotional build up, I will set aside that event; after one month or two months, when I can have sanity; if I want to learn something from that event, without emotional disturbance, I bring that event; and I study and I learn a valid lesson and then forget it. Any event which creates emotional build up I keep aside; I do not dwell upon that. This is called Manō-Nigrahaḥ.

And if Indriya-Nigrahaḥ and Manō-Nigrahaḥ are practiced, the benefit is mind will not have violent emotions and when the mind is steady, then alone the knowledge will get absorbed into the sub-conscious like the pickle, that is why it is called: ஊறுகாய் ūrukāy; ஊறின காய் ūriṇa kāy, ஊற போகின்ற காய் ūra pōkiṇra kāy. In Tamil, special compound for all the three tenses; Similarly, like the pickle, we have to float in the knowledge, and it has to penetrate into every cell of your body; then alone it will transform my life.

Thus the three-sādhanās are required; Nidhidhyāsanam, indira-nigrahaḥ, and Manō-Nigrahaḥ. In English: dwelling upon the teaching, regulating the sense organs and regulating the thought process.

Of these three processes, Kṛṣṇa is highlighting the sensory regulation first from verse No.58 onwards up to 61. Four verses deal with sensory regulation. This is for whom: who has become a prajña but not a sthira-prajña. A sthira-prajña does not need sensory regulation. Why, because his knowledge is so firm, that nothing can disturb him; he has become a tree, but prajña is a plant; therefore the prajñah plant will have to follow these three disciplines; sthira-prajña need not follow them.

So therefore, Kṛṣṇa gives an example here; for sensory regulation; what is the example? The example of a tortoise; A turtle; it can easily be killed; because it does not have any special weapon in its hand to strike back. Every other animal has got horns or nails or something, where tortoise does not have any weapon to fight back; therefore in any situation it can be easily killed. Therefore Bhagavān has given it a protective armour; a thick shell is given. You cannot do anything to the shell. Therefore what does the tortoise do? It freely moves about. Sight-seeing it goes and the moment it sees a slightest danger, it does not have the strength to fight, and therefore it withdraws the four legs and also the head; all the five things which are outside; all those five limbs are withdrawn. Five-number is important; sense organs are also five. Therefore four legs and one head; all the five limbs are withdrawn; how long? Until the threat is there. The moment the threat is gone, again it puts out and it starts its journey.

Similarly, a prajñā can transact with the world freely but the moment, he sees there is an occasion where the rāgaḥ, dvēṣa-kāma-krōdhaḥ may be provoked or invoked, where the ego can become stronger; because a non-argumentative person also will become argumentative, if the other person starts argument; this is a very interesting experiment to do and watch. Normally, you may not be arguing type. But there are some people. They provoke. And unknowingly you will find that you are in argument and once you get into it, it is like you cannot go back. Like toothpaste. Once it comes it, it cannot push back inside. So remember the toothpaste, once you gets into argument, it is extremely difficult. So prevention is better than cure; and once you get into; if you successfully withdraw, it is a great accomplishment. Very wonderful experiment; very interesting thing, you can watch, right from this evening; generally happens every day at home in the evening. Therefore, you can see that how situations carry you away.

And therefore, he says: kūrmaḥ aṅgāni saṁharatē; kūrmaḥ is a tortoise, saṁharatē, withdraws its five limbs, sarvaśaḥ, from the five directions, When? Not all the time ~ you cannot say that you will walk with closed eyes ~ even after walking with open eyes you get into accidents ~ therefore not always ~ when there is a possible distraction. So TV has got so many programs. There are so many wonderful programs; but there are so many terrible programs; which can pollute my mind. I can decide not to see that; instead of seeing that and trying to control the mind; why: prakṣalanāti pañkasya dhūrāt, asparśa nam varam, it is better to prevent rather than trying to what you call; filter in the mind. Similarly the books that you read; there are wonderful books; there are terrible books; which are all gossip books. Star-dust; it makes us dust; most of the books are filmy gossip, which has no benefit at all; and we try to imitate them also; tens of problems; what I read; what I see; type of friends that I have; the type of movies that I go; I do not know whether there is any movies worth seeing; but even if some are there; I have to be choosy, with regard to my sensory interactions.

Therefore, like the kūrmaḥ withdraws; in the same way, indriyāṇīndriyārthē'bhyaḥ. Similarly a prajñāḥ is one who withdraws the sense organs from the sense objects judiciously, intelligently; because always prevention is easier. Just saying No to Drugs. Say No to Drugs. Because the first time, it is easy to say No; the second time that has become stronger and I have become weaker. The third time whether it is a drug, liquor, or cigarette or anything; first time saying No, I am acting from strength; second time that has become stronger; and I have become weaker. That is why Rāmāyaṇa, Vāli is the example for every sensory addiction. Because Vāli, as long as he is not in front, no problem; the moment he is in front, half of the strength goes to him. Similarly, every addictive thing, as long as it is not in front; I am strong, once they are in front; half of the strength is gone; therefore do not confront them. Say No in the beginning itself and therefore: yahaḥ indriyāṇi indriyārthēbhyaḥ saṁharatē tasya prajñā pratiṣṭhitā bhavati. His knowledge would become a sthira-prajñā.

विषया विनिवर्तन्ते निराहारस्य देहिनः |
रसवर्जं रसोऽप्यस्य परं दृष्ट्वा निवर्तते || २-५९ ||

viṣayā vinivartantē nirāhārasya dēhinaḥ |
rasavarjaṁ rasō'pyasya paraṁ dṛṣṭvā nivartatē || 2.59 ||

विषयाः viṣayāḥ Sense objects रसवर्जम् rasavarjam – except the fancy (for them) विनिवर्तन्ते vinivartantē drop off देहिनः dēhinaḥ for a person निराहारस्य nirāhārasya who is not enjoying them. अस्य रसः अपि asya rasaḥ api Even this fancy of this person निवर्तते nivartatē drops off धृष्ट्वा परम् dhrṣṭvā paraṁ after seeing the supreme

59. The sense objects except the fancy (for them) drop off for a person who is not enjoying them. Even this fancy of his person drops off after knowing the supreme.

Here Kṛṣṇa says addiction to anything is of two types; one is the sensory addiction; and another is mental addiction; mental addiction is deeper than sensory addiction. Therefore, even if a person gives up a sensory addiction, but still mental addiction lingers for some time. That is why many people quit certain habit; but maintaining that is an extremely difficult job during that period; alcoholics during that period must be extremely careful; because once he violates, again he will get back to the old addiction.

And therefore, Kṛṣṇa says even after removing the sensory addiction, one has to be very careful; because the mind has got that weakness; therefore any time a person can again get into that weakness; and therefore, he says; viṣayā vinivartantē; the sense objects remain away for a person who has renounced them; the sense objects of addiction, any sense objects; of addiction, remains away for a person who has renounced them.

How they remain away? Physically away from them; but rasavarjam; except the mental fancy for those objects; even though physically one is away, mentally there is fantasy going; imagination going; that is there. Many people become Sanyāsis and go to Rishikesh and Uttarakāśi and all, and thereafterwards they envy every gr̥hastha who is visiting and they feel that they have committed a mistake. Kṛṣṇa is going to talk about that in the fourth chapter also; many people become physical sanyāsis, but mentally they are dwelling upon only worldly pleasures; such people are called hypocrites; they will face more problems.

It is better that a person remains in the world and become a mature person and grows out of it. That is why we say growing out is more important than suppression; suppression is dangerous; growing out is very important; and therefore, until a person grows out, the rasa continues; rasa means what fancy; the desire; the craving; the yearning; the urge continues, only the sense objects are gone; and when will this also go away; he says; asya rasaḥ api nivartantē; even this craving for sense pleasures will go away, when it is replaced by when the mind's vacuum is replaced by spiritual ānānda.

A superior ānānda. The śāstra gives such an ānānda. In fact, many people think that a sanyāsi who has left everything is to be sympathized. Pāvam; he has left everything and come. We do not know what has happened; No TV, no movie, etc. Even varieties of dress is not there; he cannot wear; one dress he has wear and get bored. Everybody sympathizes; because they think that the regular worldly pleasures are not there; he does not have; but the ānānda that he can get through śāstra; the vidya ānānda that he can derive is much much much more higher than the petty, paltry miserable pleasures. But until that spiritual ānānda is discovered, that yearning will continue.

So param̐ -dhṛṣṭvā; parā-darśanaṁ, means the ātma-jñāna-dṛṭikaraṇam, so when this spiritual knowledge is well assimilated; he gets such a joy, that in front of that joy, all the other worldly pleasures are insignificant; Kṛṣṇa said in one of the previous-slōkās. When a person has got a lake full of water, why should he go after miserable corporation water; which may come, which may not come. You open the tap, anyone of the five elements will come; sometimes water comes; sometimes air comes; just the sound, that is vāyu tatvam; sometimes stone, mud, all those things also come; pṛthvi tatvam, ākāśa tatvam is always there. So anyone of the tatvam is always there. Whether water will be there or not we do not know. How long we should go after that; until you discover that lake which never goes dry.

And therefore paraṁ -dhr̥ṣṭvā; after discovering the ānanda in himself; nivartantē, no more craving. That does not mean that he should not be happy; in worldly occasions; this is also very much misunderstood; suppose a person is happy in himself; and there is some occasion for external happiness. Somebody calls him for a wedding; somebody says I have got a child, etc. It is a happy occasion for sharing; and many people think that Jñāni should not smile. Because he should not be happy in worldly happiness. Somebody cuts a joke, and this man should keep the high chin. So spiritual ānanda does not mean that we should not enjoy the worldly pleasures; I mean legitimate; it only means that I should not lean on them; they are all bonus ānanda; it comes and it does not come; I am happy. Remember the example; when there is a five match series; and we have already won the first three matches; already to start; the fourth match whether we win or not, no problem; we win, I would not say I am not happy, already we have got the happiness of winning the three matches; No. I enjoy that. But that does not mean when it goes away, I become miserable. And therefore Jñāni enjoys the world also; but the worldly enjoyment is a bonus to him; he does not depend on that. So therefore he says rasavarjaṁ rasō'pyasya paraṁ dhr̥ṣṭvā nivartatē.

यततो ह्यपि कौन्तेय पुरुषस्य विपश्चितः |
इन्द्रियाणि प्रमाथीनि हरन्ति प्रसभं मनः ॥२-६०॥

yatatō hyapi kauntēya puruṣasya vipaścitaḥ |
indriyāṇi pramāthīni haranti prasabhaṁ manaḥ || 2.60 ||

कौन्तेय kauntēya Oh Arjuna! हि hi Indeed प्रमाथीनि pramāthīni the powerful sense organs इन्द्रियाणि प्रसभं हरन्ति indriyāṇi prasabhaṁ haranti forcibly carry away मनः manaḥ the mind अपि विपश्चितः पुरुषस्य api vipaścitaḥ puruṣasya of even a wise man यततः yatataḥ who is striving.

60. Oh Arjuna! Indeed, the powerful sense organs forcibly carry away the mind of even a wise man who is striving.

So here Kṛṣṇa says sense regulation is not that easy. Sense control is not that easy; from which we should learn two lessons. One lesson is if he fail initially, we need not feel guilty, because it is so powerful that a person is bound to fail in that attempt and therefore one need not feel bad; but at the time, Kṛṣṇa wants to teach another lesson also; since they are so powerful, it requires lot of alertness. Therefore, one side we should know that if you fail, we need not feel guilty, and another lesson we learn is that we need not feel guilty; but at the same time, we should be alert. Therefore alert with regard to our sensory operation; what we talk; what we hear, what we move with regard to all of them.

Therefore Kṛṣṇa says indriyāṇi pramāthīni; the sense organs are very very, very very powerful. They are like the churning rod; pramāthī, like the churning rod (math) used for churning the curd; that is pramāthī in Sāṅskṛit, math is also Sāṅskṛit word; it is derived from the Sanskrit word math; 9th configuration, parasmai pada, mathanāti, mathanitaḥ, mathanītā; to churn; so mathi, means a churner; a churning rod, pramāthī; very powerful churning rod. What is the powerful churning rod, a sense organ is a powerful churning rod; and how many churning rods, we have, five of them.

And these five rods, churn what? Manaḥ. So they can churn the mind into violent disturbance, how we are disturbed by one person using a word; lifelong we remember. He said that; he said that; he said that; In fact most of the problems are words, words, words. The eyes and the ears are the most powerful. The nose, tongue and the skin is not that powerful or dangerous; the ears and the eyes are most powerful; therefore he says manaḥ haranthi; they can take away your mind from Vēdānta; you might have heard the class for one hour without distraction. While getting up, if someone says something, you get upset that he said that to me, the listening Vēdānta for one hour has gone waste. One word can disturb us violently and it can make us forget everything that we have learned. And therefore Kṛṣṇa says manaḥ haranthi, it takes away the mind from where; the Gīta teaching; the upaniṣadic lessons that I have learnt; I forget and temporarily I become a violent animal; either a tiger or a scorpion, a snake or anything, scolding, and they suddenly ask, what use of going to Gīta etc. which makes me more angry. Then they will pull the swamiyar; what did he teach, etc. that is another problem; do not pull my swamiyar. So therefore if we are not alert, mind can become turbulent; and if the mind becomes turbulent, Vēdānta is gone. Therefore, as much as possible, try to keep the balance, so that Vēdānta goes inside. Hari Om

In this final portion of the 2nd chapter, Kṛṣṇa is dealing with two topics, one is sthira-prajña-lakṣaṇāni and the other is sthira prajña sādhanāni.

Sthira-prajña-lakṣaṇāni means the natural behaviour or traits of a person who has assimilated the teaching. So the prefix 'Sthira' is used to indicate the assimilation of this teaching. Just as assimilated-food alone will nourish a person; similarly the assimilated-Vēdānta alone will be of practical use. And as I said in the last class, this assimilation is converting the knowledge at the intellectual level into emotional strength; an emotionally strong mind which will not be swayed by kāmaḥ, krōdhaḥ, lōbhaḥ, mōhaḥ, madaḥ, mātsaryaḥ; such an emotionally strong mind is called sthira prajñā mind. And how he will conduct himself; this is one topic.

And the second topic is how the knowledge should be converted into assimilation. First the knowledge has to be gained only in one way and that method is listening to the scriptures from a competent guide. There is no other method of receiving knowledge; knowledge is received only by listening to the scriptures from a competent guide. Kṛṣṇa will tell this in the 4th chapter.

तद्विद्धि प्रणिपातेन परिप्रश्नेन सेवया । ... ॥ ४.३४ ॥

tadviddhi praṇipātēna paripraśnēna sēvayā |.... || 4.34 ||

And this receiving or reception of the knowledge is not enough; one has to work within himself; guru cannot help in this matter; guru can go only up to the transference of the knowledge; but the conversion of knowledge into emotional strength; the śiṣyā alone has to do. Guru can only encourage. Now the question is what should I do to convert this knowledge into assimilation or emotional strength. In Vēdāntic language it is called Nidhidhyāsanam.

Here Kṛṣṇa prescribes three disciplines for assimilation. And the first discipline is sensory restraint. Sense mastery. Sensory regulation. What is the purpose of sensory restraint? Because sense organs are like doors through which alone the world enters my mind. My mind does not have direct access to the world. It can never contact the world directly; it requires five-fold channels; the world enters either in the form of sound, through my ears; or in the form of smell or taste or touch; the fivefold universe enters my mind through the five-fold entrance gates. And every part of the universe, śabda, sparśa, rūpa, rasa or gandha is capable of entering my mind and agitating me. One word from my son at the wrong time, wrong place (I told him not to go, and he said that he will definitely go; it is just, Vēdāntic speaking, a sound disturbance). As you call a big cause of upset is nothing but a few words and words are nothing but disturbance in the sound; those words, like a bug, enter through the ears and whether the son intended or not, I do all kinds of commentary; even Śankarācārya would not do so much vyākhyānam; we do all kinds of things; my son said so; my son, my husband, my father, (main commentary, sub-commentary, tippani, footnotes, etc. you insert) after three days, it becomes such a mental breakdown. What is responsible? A few words from a person. Similarly, forms and colours, therefore the world is capable of disturbing the mind; and when the mind is disturbed; it cannot retain the Vēdāntic knowledge, required for assimilation. It is a freshly made flooring. When they have put the flooring freshly, it is not yet set; therefore what should you do; until it sets, the flooring has to be protected. But once the floor has become strong; let even an elephant walk; nothing will happen. Similarly when we receive the knowledge it is like fresh flooring and you have to allow that knowledge to set in; any disturbance in the mind it can disturb the knowledge itself.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa's advice is to avoid violent emotional turbulence. And the cause is the five sense organs, which let the world indiscriminately; but that does not mean you have to close the sense organs, because sense organs are required for transactions, we need not close them; we need not indiscriminately use them; Kṛṣṇa says intelligently use the sense organs. This is called regulation of the senses; which is called Damaḥ.

And in the 60th verse Kṛṣṇa said this exercise is not that easy, sense organs are very much disturbing; they are pramāḍini, they are very very powerful; which means one has to be very alert with regard to that. Therefore, Kṛṣṇa uses the word 'yatataḥ api'. Even a person who has a value for sensory restraint, if he is negligent for a moment, the sense organs drag. That is what they philosophically present in Rāmayaṇa; Sītā was very much with Rāma, which is the Brahmānanda, which is the spiritual truth. Mārīcha, the golden deer, represent the sensory attraction. Sītā is naturally with Rāma; in spite of Rāma being around, one moment Sītā also got fascinated by golden deer; and what is the consequence, the golden deer has its own method of dragging, dragging, dragging, and the ultimate result is permanently, or at least Sītā lost Rāma for a long time. Rāma represents spiritual ānanda. Similarly even though ātma is with us all the time, the golden deer of the world can trap me; and therefore be alert. Up to this we saw.

And Kṛṣṇa uses even one more word; vipaścitaḥ; vipaścitaḥ, even for a learned person; he has studied the Gītā; he has studied the scriptures; but even an informed person in a moment of weakness can be distracted and therefore let us be alert.

तानि सर्वाणि संयम्य युक्त आसीत् मत्परः ।
वशे हि यस्येन्द्रियाणि तस्य प्रज्ञा प्रतिष्ठिता ॥ २.६१ ॥

tāni sarvāṇi saṁyamya yukta āsīta matparaḥ |
vaśē hi yasyēndriyāṇi tasya prajñā pratiṣṭhitā || 2.61 ||

संयम्य saṁyamya Having restrained सर्वाणि तानि sarvāṇi tāni all those (sense organs), युक्तः आसीत् yuktaḥ āsīta the Yōgi should remain मत्परः matparaḥ with (the thought of) Me as the supreme (goal) हि hi Because प्रज्ञा तस्य prajñā tasya the knowledge of that (person) यस्य yasya whose इन्द्रियाणि indriyāṇi sense organs वशे vaśē are under control प्रतिष्ठिता pratiṣṭhitā (becomes firm)

61. Having restrained all those (sense organs), the self-controlled should remain committed to My pursuit. Because, the knowledge of that person, whose sense organs are under control, becomes firm.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa advises; Hey Arjuna, tāni sarvāṇi saṁyamya āsīta; therefore may you keep all the sense organs as your instrument, you do not be enslaved by them; let them be your instrument; when you are driving a car, the wheels of the car should move; according to what you want it to do; not what they want to do; imagine while you are going, the wheel decides for itself ~ while taking the dog for a walk, it will just take you around ~ wherever something is there ~ after sometime you wonder, whether you are taking the dog for the walk or the dog is taking the man for a ride. Which is the master which is the slave, we do not know.

Similarly, the sense organs are like such dogs; we are supposed to lead them; but often they lead us and therefore do not allow that to happen. So sarvāṇi tāni saṁyamya; restrain them, not suppression. Suppression is totally against the psychology. Suppression is a dangerous exercise. Therefore what we are talking about is not suppression but mastery. What is the difference between suppression and mastery? In suppression, I follow because some else has told me. I am not convinced; somebody else said today is Ekādaśī, there is no cooking in our house; therefore no food for you. Not that I value Ekādaśī; food is not cooked; nowhere else it is available around and therefore I do not eat; here the restraint is not based on my will and understanding but it is imposed on me; imposed denial is suppression.

But when I value Ekādaśī and when I value Upavāsa, and when I want to do spiritual sādhana, and even when the food is available around, I decide not to take, that does not come under suppression; but it is transcending; it is growing out; it is mastery. So the Damaḥ of the Bhagavad-Gīta is not sensory suppression; but it is sensory mastery; mastering over them Arjuna you have to do; because, yasyēndriyāṇi vaśē, because the person who has kept the sense organs under his control, for such a person, prajña pratiṣṭhitā bhavathi, the spiritual knowledge is assimilated very fast. Vēdānta becomes more and more meaningful. Self-knowledge becomes more and more relevant. So here prajña means ātma jñāna will become pratiṣṭhitā. With this first exercise is over. And that is sensory control. Damaḥ.

Then in this verse itself Kṛṣṇa introduces the second discipline also. 3 disciplines I have told you. Second is being discussed. What is that? In the first line, Yuktaḥ Matparaḥ Asītā. When the sense organs are withdrawn from unnecessary pursuits we have lot of extra time. Because most of the time goes for only TV serials or for many people TV surfing. Surfing means, going from 1 to 100 channels and again from 100 to 1. Like sea surfing. When I do not have any of those distractions, there is lot of time at my disposal and I do not know what to do with that time. And a mind which does not have a healthy pursuit can become a dangerous mind; because an idle a mind, you know, is a devil's workshop.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa warns, by avoiding unnecessary pursuits, you get extra time, use that extra time to dwell upon me that the truth revealed in Vēdānta. Therefore Mat paraḥ means dwell upon the teaching. Dwell upon me, so Me indicates two things; one is Kṛṣṇa as a saḡuṇa Īśvara; an avatāra, so that you can meditate upon Kṛṣṇa, Rāma or any deity or you can also meditate upon Kṛṣṇa as the very ātma of yourselves. Because in Vēdānta, Kṛṣṇa does not want to reveal himself as a person, but in Bhagavad-Gīta Kṛṣṇa reveals himself as the very ātma of everyone.

Even in the Bhāgavatham, Kṛṣṇa reveals only in that form to Gopis, that is why the Gopis themselves declared Na kalu gōpikām Nandanō bhavān, akila dēhinām antharātma dṛk. Wonderful lines, Gopis tell; Hey Kṛṣṇa, you are not the son of a particular person, but who are you? Akila dēhinām antharātma dṛk, you are the inner self of everyone. And it is that Kṛṣṇa paramātma that is revealed in the Gīta, and it is that ātma dhyānam Kṛṣṇa is prescribing here; Therefore Matpara means see Me in yourself as the very ātma. manōbuddhyahamkāraccittāni nāham Cidānaṁdarūpaḥ śivō:'ham śivō:'ham. So do ātma dhyānam. And if you do not know the ātma, then you can do Kṛṣṇa dhyānam as a person. Therefore, matparaḥ, ātma dhyāna parāha āsīta. This ātma dhyānam is also not easy. Therefore Kṛṣṇa says yuktha: with discipline, with integration you practice ātma dhyānam. Because otherwise the mind is generally extrovert mind. Extrovert mind has to be withdrawn and set upon the ātma. This is second disciple called Nidhidhyāsanam or ātma dhyānam.

And if you ask what is the ātma you have to go back to the 2nd chapter beginning verse No.12 to 25, Kṛṣṇa has elaborately defined the ātma in 13 verses. Therefore, may you dwell upon that teaching. So thus two disciplines have been talked about.

Now comes the third important discipline to assimilate Vēdānta. What is that?

ध्यायतो विषयान्पुंसः सङ्गस्तेषूपजायते ।
सङ्गात् संजायते कामः कामात् क्रोधोऽभिजायते ॥२.६२॥

dhyāyatō viṣayān puṁsaḥ saṅgastēṣūpajāyatē |
saṅgāt sañjāyatē kāmaḥ kāmāt krōdhō'bhijāyatē || 2.62 ||

पुंसः puṁsaḥ For a person द्यायतः dyāyataḥ who constantly dwells on विषयान् viṣayān the sense-objects सङ्गः saṅgaḥ a fancy तेषु tēṣu towards them उपजायते upajāyatē arises सङ्गात् saṅgāt From fancy कामः सञ्जायते kāmāḥ sañjāyatē desire is born कामात् kāmāt From desire क्रोधः अभिजायते krōdhaḥ abhijāyatē anger arises.

62. For a person who is constantly thinking of the sense objects, a fondness for them arises. From fondness desire is born. From desire anger comes.

From this verse onwards, Kṛṣṇa is going to talk about another important discipline; that is thought discipline, which is more difficult; the first one is relatively easier, it is sensory discipline, it is a gross organ, therefore you can discipline it very easily, if you do not want to see something, you can go out of that place. If you cannot go out of that place and you do not want to see, you can close your eyes. You can close your ears. Therefore, at least physically restrain the sense organs, but mind is not like that; the mind can go anywhere at any time, in the middle of the class also, it can have a beautiful walk on the beach and come back. So therefore, thought discipline is very difficult, but it is extremely important; which is called samaḥ or manō-nigrahaḥ.

And to highlight the importance of thought-discipline, Kṛṣṇa says what will be the harm if you are going to allow the thoughts to move around as they want. If you let your mind loose, what will happen? The damage, Kṛṣṇa is talking about. What is the damage?

When you are interacting with the world, so many things enter your mind through the sense organs. Even though you practice sensory discipline, in spite of the disciplines, things enter your mind. You may not be thinking about it; and it is just the neighbors are talking about it and it is heard by you. I do not want to see a cinema magazine; but in the road, there are cinema posters. What can be done? So you cannot totally avoid the world entering your mind.

And when you move away from that object, the objects must have gone away from your sight, but the mind can dwell upon the object. Any object; anything; and this is called viṣaya-dhyānam. The mind has a tendency to dwell upon one thing or the other in the world, which thing has entered through the sense organs. This is called viṣaya dhyānam and the interesting thing is Īśvara-dhyānam is extremely difficult whereas in viṣaya dhyānam we are all experts. For that one need not sit in padmāsana or other postures are not necessary. Wherever you go you are in samādhi of that thing only. Either money dhyānam or house dhyānam, or this or that. Therefore Kṛṣṇa says, the first thing that happens in a loose mind is viṣaya dhyānam; viṣaya means any sense objects.

And according to Vēdānta, at this level itself a person should use his discrimination and ask the question whether it is worthwhile dwelling upon that object. Whether it is healthy to think of object constantly. Whether it is healthy to fantasize. And if he is alert and intelligent, he can nip in the bud itself, because the first thought is always feeble. It is very very easy to distract the mind from the first thought but if a person does not use the discrimination, that thought goes on, on and on, in the mind; like a feeble wave or like a ripple becoming a huge wave, a feeble thought can become a powerful one.

And what is the second stage? That is going to come, because of that. Tēṣu saṅgaḥ jāyatē. You begin to develop a fancy for that object; it is a feeling, it is wonderful, it is attractive, it is beautiful, or it is a source of joy, which according to Vēdānta is a misconception, because according to Vēdānta, world is neither a source of joy nor a source of sorrow. Then what is world? World is world. World is only world. We alone categorise world as source of joy and sorrow. That is why when our children are playing the western music, in front of parents who are used to pakka carnatic music, which is noisy and jumping, for them it is a source of ānanda, but for the parents, it is a source of what? Headache. So whether the western music is source of joy or sorrow. It all depends on how I am trained and how I look at it.

Therefore the first mistake I commit is, whenever I dwell upon something for a length of time, the mind has a tendency to appreciate it. Even a particular advertisement tune, you may not like it. In a 30 minute serial, 25 minutes advertisement, 5 minutes only the serial; you go on hearing the advertisement song repeatedly and without your knowing itself, you start singing that advt song. You hated it and you are singing it. You do not know. The mind has got that capacity. Therefore you say, it is wonderful, appealing and that attitude is called saṅgaḥ.

Therefore Kṛṣṇa says viṣaya-dhyānat, saṅgaḥ-jāyatē. A fancy for that. Here also there is no problem. You are only saying that it is wonderful. Bhagavān's sṛṣṭi is beautiful. That rose is very nice. Nothing wrong. You are only appreciating ईश्वर विभूति Īśvara vibhūti. Glory of the Lord. But the problem is the mind goes on picturing; if that rose is in hand, how it will be; or for some people it is in their mouth; there is no restriction on what to eat!! So therefore I begin to look at my own position along with that object and then I begin to feel that I am more complete if that object or a person or anything is there in my hand; saṅgaḥ is there, but fine there.

But the next stage, along with me, it looks nice; from nice, it goes to worth having, we will not leave it at that. Again you go on dwelling on that. Then you begin to say mentally that I want it; I want it; I want it; a stage comes when like the stubborn children, I want it come what may. I am prepared to sell everything I have, but I want it; and then still I continue; I want it and I want it, then a stage comes when I begin to say, without that, I cannot live. I cannot survive; without that object, without that person, without that situation, I cannot live; this is the height of fancy; which is called kāmāḥ.

Kāmāḥ means I am totally trapped and enslaved. I even forget the Vēdāntic-teaching that I am full and complete, without any other thing in the world. I do not require any object at all to be full and complete, I have heard this teaching but still I forget everything and I conclude that without that I cannot survive. This is called kāmāḥ. Therefore Kṛṣṇa says saṅgāt kāmāḥ sañjāyatē, a deep yearning, a deep desire is born. So viṣaya dhyānam to viṣaya saṅgaḥ, viṣaya saṅgaḥ to viṣaya kāmāḥ. So then what will happen?

Kṛṣṇa says: kāmāt krōdhō 'bhijāyatē. Problem is getting more serious. From kāma desire, any route we can take. Two routes are possible.

Because the desire may be fulfilled, then it is one route, or the desire may not be fulfilled; then there is another route.

Kṛṣṇa is going to talk of the second route, if the desire is not fulfilled what will happen? Because there is heavy competition for everything. We have marked it, we wanted to purchase it; by the time, we go back with the money to the shop, the salesman will say: just now only somebody purchased it; then, why not give me another piece; sorry, that was the last piece. So therefore there is a heavy competition for everything and therefore often our desires are not fulfilled; unfulfilled desire; thwarted desire, gets converted into anger. In fact, anger is desire itself in a different form.

Therefore Kṛṣṇa says kāmāt; from the obstructed desire, anger is born. And whoever is going to obstruct, I want to destroy that person. In business field and all, what all things they do to destroy the competitor. They even physically liquidate the person by engaging gūndās and all, all because of what? they want their business to succeed and the other person's destruction. Therefore, remove, liquidate. All that a strong desire can make a person do everything.

Now what about the other route? Kṛṣṇa does not discuss it here; we can know; suppose the kāma is fulfilled. What will happen? We think we will be happy; Never. we look for the next higher stage, if I have hundred, I want thousand; if I have a thousand, I now need a million; there is no limit to the desire. Fulfilled desire lead to greed. That is how the gamblers get sucked into gambling. Somehow there is some psychology; initially they will succeed. Then they are attracted by that; then why we should go to ordinary people. Dharmaputra himself just got victimised. In fact one of the lessons taught by Mahābhāratha is gambling is one of the biggest weakness or the worst weakness, which can destroy even a dhārmic person. Even a Dharmaputra can get lost, because of the weakness; Dharmaputra accepts his weakness. Similarly, we have to learn kāma can lead to lōbhaḥ. But Kṛṣṇa does not talk about that; kāma is not fulfilled, it will lead to anger.

So 4 stages; viṣaya-dhyānam, viṣaya-saṅgaḥ, viṣaya-kāma, you should not say viṣaya krōdhaḥ, only krōdhaḥ. What happens then?

क्रोधाद्भवति सम्मोहः सम्मोहात्स्मृतिविभ्रमः ।
स्मृतिभ्रंशाद् बुद्धिनाशो बुद्धिनाशात्प्रणश्यति ॥२.६३॥

krōdhādbhavati sammōhaḥ sammōhāt smṛtīvibhramaḥ |
smṛtibhramśād-buddhināśō buddhināśāt praṇaśyati || 2.63 ||

क्रोधाद् भवति krōdhād bhavati From anger arises सम्मोहः sammōhaḥ delusion सम्मोहात् sammōhāt from delusion (results) स्मृतिविभ्रमः smṛtīvibhramaḥ the loss of memory स्मृतिभ्रंशात् smṛtibhramśāt the loss of memory (results) बुद्धिनाशः buddhināśaḥ loss of discrimination बुद्धिनाशात् प्रणश्यति buddhināśāt praṇaśyati he perishes.

63. From anger arises delusion. From delusion (results) the loss of memory. From the loss of memory (results) the loss of discrimination. Because of the loss of discrimination he perishes.

Now krōdhād sammōhāt bhavati; when the mind is in the grip of anger, discriminative power is lost. The sense of decency is lost; I forget who I am; and I forget who is the person in front of me; that person must be an elderly person; may be father, mother, guru, or grandfather; all these things are covered because of sammōhāḥ; sammōhāḥ, means non-discrimination.

Śāṅkarācārya writes elsewhere buddhaḥ puruṣaḥ gurumapi akṣipati; even he may strongly scold his own guru; forgetting he is a person to be worshipped; mātaram api tāṭayati; there are children who even hit their mothers in a fit of anger; they forget that; later they may regret or apologise, but during that moment, that person is mad; that is why in America, another word for anger is madness. When they say I am mad at you, first time when somebody told me I could not understand the usage; they mean that they are angry at you, it is a right translation because at the time of anger, we are mad completely. Therefore, sammōhāḥ bhavati; a temporary madness comes.

So what? Sammōhāt smṛtīvibhramaḥ, when there is temporary madness, all the learning that I have acquired, they all will not be available for me.

So for what purpose do I study the Gīta? Not for world advertisement; not for time pass; not for any other purpose, I want the teaching to help me when there is crisis.

Otherwise I will be like Karṇa. Karṇa had all the mantras, all the extraordinary mantras, but he had a śāpa, that at the crucial moment, you will not remember them. Like some of our children; only in the examination hall, they will forget the answers; before and after they will answer properly. What is the use? Especially in our system, which is memory based. So therefore all my Gītā, Upaniṣad, everything is blocked; the computer virus has come. What is virus after all; somewhere I read; virus. v means vital; i means information; r means resources; u means under; s means siege; virus is a short form of vital information resources under siege means the information which I have stored, they are not available for me. Remember, anger is virus for our brain computer.

Therefore Kṛṣṇa says, saṁmōhāt-smṛtibhramaḥ, means the entire knowledge is temporarily lost. And thereafter he can remember, he will quote the slōkās also. When? Afterwards. What is the use of studying the Gītā and its meaning? Therefore, the next stage is loss of memory.

And then suppose still he is not warned and he does not take steps to remedy the situation, then what will be next fall? Smṛtibhramśāt-buddhināśaḥ; once the knowledge is obstructed, then the discriminative power is permanently lost. Previously saṁmōhāḥ word was used, which is temporary loss of discrimination; whereas buddhināśaḥ; used now it is permanent loss of discrimination. That is a point of no return; previously there was some hope, now there is no hope at all; because buddhi does not function for him;

So what? Kṛṣṇa says, buddhināśāt praṇaśyati. The loss of discrimination is the loss of human life. The loss of discrimination is the loss of human life because I stop to be a human being once I lose my discretion. A donkey also brays whenever it wants to. It is not going to consider that there is a class happening here; what it wants to do, it does; suppose I am also a donkey; suppose I felt like shouting at my son or wife, and I shouted; then what is the difference between a cow and me. So I should feel like shouting; and I should be able to swallow the whole thing; or I should be able to postpone the whole thing; that I will think and shout properly. But let it be thoughtful. When I think and do deliberately, it makes me a human being; if I do things impulsively, I stop to be a human being; stopping to be a human being is losing the four puruṣārthās, dharma, arta, kāma, mōkṣa. Because the four are called puruṣārthāḥ, the goal of a human being. And once I am going to be without discrimination, I am no more a puruṣa, which means I do not have any puruṣārtha, which means this human life is a waste, I have to hope for another human life and I do not when it is going to come; இப்பிறவி தப்பிநால் எப்பிறவி வாய்க்குமோ ippiṛavi tappināl eppiṛavi vāykkumo. Therefore Kṛṣṇa strongly warns, do not be impulsive, be deliberate in every action, in every thought.

This is called the ladder of fall; the ladder of human fall. What are the stages; viṣaya dhyānam, saṅgaḥ, kāmaḥ, krōdhaḥ; saṁmōhāḥ, smṛtibhramśāḥ, buddhināśaḥ praṇāśaḥ ~ 8 rungged ladder of human fall. What is the beginning of this fall? Viṣaya dhyānam. Blindly dwelling upon any object. So therefore Arjuna, master your mind.

tranquility

64. But, moving amidst (unavoidable) sense objects with sense organs which are under his control and which are free from likes and dislikes, the self-controlled one enjoys tranquility.

Now Kṛṣṇa comes back to sense control once again to highlight the importance of sense control; even though all the three are equally important, Kṛṣṇa gives importance to indriya nigrahaḥ. Therefore He says; indriyaiḥ viṣayān caran; so may you perceive the sense objects through the sense organs, it does not matter, because you cannot close the sense organs totally, and therefore use it; not that you can close your eyes and ears and walk on the road; as it is with open eyes, you are in danger. Therefore allow the sense organs, but what is important? rāgadvēṣaviyuktaiḥ, a sense organ which will not easily develop rāgaḥ or dvēśaḥ for anything; It should be so alert that it should not form rāgaḥ or dvēśaḥ for anything; rāgaḥ is because of the misconception that this is an object of joy; dvēśaḥ is because of the misconception that it is an object of sorrow; never allow that misconception to be developed; appreciate the rose is wonderful; why should I have only in my pocket.

And there is a beautiful land; why should I buy; there are so many people; people possessions; I want that person to be...; I want to control the people; so that is all because of rāga-dvēśa sahita indriyāni, never allow the sense organs to develop. So even a particular place you sit, it is best that once in a while you change; or else you will claim it as 'yours' and ask the other person to get up. It is all Bhagavān's place and people are coming and sitting; it is fine; but after some time, I have to sit there; then only it is felt that you 'hear' the Gīta. This is again addiction. In fact, never get addicted to anything. This is the principle.

Therefore, rāgadveṣaviyuktaiḥ indriyaiḥ, let the sense organs be addiction free. Not only it should be free from this weakness; ātma-vaśyai and let the sense organs obey your mind; your discrimination intellect; ātma here means buddhi. Vaśyai means under the control of ātma vaśyai indriyaiḥ, operate with those sense organs which are obedient to your intellect. Yesterday they have put; you should know, what the evils of alcohol are. It is clearly put. Now my buddhi reads it, it has understood it; and then once it is very clear, śāstra also prohibits it; doctors also write it is not good; then I should have the power never to touch it; No. And it is the easiest to say No first. But the second time like Vāli, that becomes more powerful and I become weaker. Third time that is still more powerful, I am weaker. And a person who has taken it for sometimes, then he had it; he can never get out of it; And then he says it is prārabdham. See the akramaṁ. What has this to do with prārabdham? It is my abuse of the power given to me; therefore the intellect says: liquor is not good. Very simple, I say No. smoking is not good; I say no. Beef eating is not good; I say No. Similarly everything I should be able to say No and follow it. That is called the life of mastery. Therefore ātma vaśyaiḥ vidhēyātmā; vidhēyātmā means a person of self-control. Self-discipline, self-integration. So here also ātma means the instruments; not the satcidānanda ātma; ātma represents the mind.

Therefore vidhēyātmā, vidhēyātmā means disciplined, obedient, the one who has got obedient set of organs. And such a person prasādamadhigacchati. The greatest advantage is that there are no more violent disturbances in the mind. Even though there is some kind of argument, at home, as the argument is getting heated up, and the sound is rising, and more heat is produced than light, and the words are becoming less and less decent; as even the situation changes, he is able to feel the pulse and he will say that you are angry or I am angry; this is not an ideal condition for discussion. Discussion is for exchanging information; not for scolding each other and if information has to be exchanged; the mind should be calm enough to receive the message; a disturbed mind can never receive any message; the moment slightest disturbance is taking place, a Vēdāntin will sense it; red light begins to burn and he says: Let us stop the discussion now. Either I say I am angry, therefore I will stop; or you are angry and I do not want to increase your anger. Let us again discuss tomorrow or day after. We will find that no situation goes out of his hand. The very nice experiment you can watch. And the greatest advantage, if we have avoided arguments for a long time, then within five minutes you can get back your composure and read something. But if you have not done that, argue for 15 minutes, some people 500 minutes also, now the lengthier the argument is, the more time it takes to compose the mind; and therefore a Vēdāntic student very very alertly avoids. And what is the advantage he has; prasādamadhigacchati. prasādamadhigacchati; prasādaṁ not vadai, chundal, not that prasādaṁ, prasāda here means śānthyā; prasannathā; vadai may give śānthyā; that might be the reason why it is called prasādaṁ also!! When the things comes from Bhagavān and when we eat that, we feel a śānthyā, peace, therefore indirectly they are called prasāda. In Sāṅskṛit. प्रसद "sad' root, is to become tranquil. prasīdatī. The word prasīdatā, you would have heard in prayers; prasīda; to be pleased, to be satisfied; to be calm, so prasādaḥ is abstract noun of that; calmness of the mind. And we generally think, when we stop an argument, we think it is because we are wrong; it does not mean to stop an argument, that I am conceding victory for him and that I am accepting that he is on the right side; No. Even if I know 100% that I am right; still I can stop the argument, not because I am doubtful, but because that person is no more ready to listen to me; therefore I can even say OK, you can think that you are right; nothing wrong in it; we will postpone it. Just because I stop it does not mean I have failed. Only the other person has failed to receive the message. And therefore, avoidance of mental turbulence is very important for the assimilation of this knowledge; and therefore Kṛṣṇa says prasādaṁ adhigacchati.

More in the next class.

ॐ

Arjuna wanted to know about sthira-prajñāḥ, i.e. a person who has received self-knowledge and who has assimilated the self-knowledge. Such a person is called sthitha-prajñā. And Kṛṣṇa divides this topic into two portion, one is the natural behavior or traits of a sthitha-prajñā; how will he conduct himself in day-to-day life; and the second-part is how can a person become a sthira-prajñā, to put in Sāṅskṛit; sthithaprajñā lakṣaṇāni and sthithaprajñā-sādhanāni.

First sthitha-prajñā-lakṣaṇās were talked about in which Lord Kṛṣṇa pointed out that a sthitha-prajñā is happy with himself. He does not depend upon any external conditions for happiness. And he pointed out he has got equanimity in all situations; he is free from attachment, fear, anger, etc. Just the natural trait of sthitha-prajñā were pointed out; then Kṛṣṇa has now changed the topic to sthitha-prajñā-sādhanāni, how to become a sthitha prajñā.

And to become a sthitha-prajñā first a person has to become a prajñāḥ; without becoming a prajñāḥ, there is no question of becoming a sthitha-prajñāḥ. How to become a prajñāḥ Kṛṣṇa does not discuss; we have to supply that; prajñāḥ means the one who has received self-knowledge. And self-knowledge can be received only by two sādhanas; first listening to the scriptures from a competent ācārya; which is known as Vēdānta śravaṇam. Without Vēdānta-śravaṇam, without Gīta or upaniṣad-śravaṇam, there is no question of receiving the knowledge.

And it is not enough that one receives the knowledge, he has to eliminate all the doubts which are possible. Because wherever there is a question of knowledge, there can always be doubts, because intellect cannot know anything without raising doubts. It is a natural trait of any intellect to raise doubts with regard to any topic it studies; including Vēdānta or self-knowledge. And as long as doubts are there, knowledge is not knowledge, because doubtful knowledge is as good as ignorance. And therefore not only one should receive knowledge, one should remove all the doubts that come in the mind, either by one's own reflection or by raising questions to the ācārya. Arjuna himself raises many questions to Lord Kṛṣṇa because this is a not matter for belief; but this is a matter for conviction. And this removal of doubt is called mananam; śravaṇam, and mananam will make me a prajñāḥ. Śravaṇam and mananam will make me a prajñāḥ, which means a person who has gained the knowledge without any doubt. The one who enjoys doubtless knowledge.

Kṛṣṇa wants to point out that doubtless knowledge alone is not enough, because it will remain at the intellectual level only and the life situations are faced by emotional personality predominantly. It is the emotional mind that faces the situation; that is why we say several times that I know that worry is not useful. I have understood that worry will not change the situation; but even though I know I should not worry; I am not able to avoid worry. That means intellect tells something, the mind does quietly the other. Therefore, transformation in the intellectual-personality is not enough; we require a transformation in the emotional-personality also.

Transformation at intellectual level, is called a cognitive-change. That is required; but it is not enough that we have that change; that knowledge must be converted into emotional-strength; so that whatever be the situation that come, I can emotionally remain a balanced-person. Attachment is an emotional-problem; that is why even a highly educated person, he might be intellectually-strong, but emotionally he is weak. Depression is an emotional-problem. Jealousy is an emotional-problem; anxiety is an emotional-problem; Insecurity is an emotional-problem; even great intellectuals can face this problem; and therefore not only intellectual-transformation is required through the study; we have to bring out the necessary emotional-transformation, which will convert me from prajñā to sthira-prajñāḥ.

And how to transform this prajñāh into sthira prajñāh is the discussion of Lord Kṛṣṇa from verse No. 58 onwards. That is topic; how to convert the Gītā study into emotional strength. It is not enough we stop with attending the classes; which will bring out an intellectual change; you begin to know what is body, what is mind, what is ātma, what is world, all these things become very clear in your intellect; but that is not enough; it should give me the strength.

And Kṛṣṇa prescribes three-exercises for this conversion of the knowledge into strength. And what are those three exercises?

No.1 sensory control. Sensory regulation. Sense mastery. By 'sense' we mean the five-fold sense-organs, and sense-regulation is required because without the sensory-regulation, the whole world can enter our mind without the permission. So when we build the house, we do not want anybody to enter the house, what do we do? We have a door, we close it; and in some houses, not only a door is there; there is a watchman also. Not only there is door and watchman, they put a board also No Admission Without Permission.

If the local house has got so many gates, what about our inner house called the mind which has got five openings in the form of five sense organs? Kṛṣṇa says you should be able to close the door at the appropriate time and there must be a board also: No admission without permission. Any sound should not enter; any form should not enter; I should be able to have a detector before anything enters. And if I am not going to do that, Swami Chinmayānanda nicely says: The place would be like a public-toilet. How all types of people enter and dirty the place; similarly all types of rubbish will enter through the sense-organs and it would have entered in the morning but that it can be so powerful that even during the night, that word that person used, that picture that you saw there; that will go round and round and round in the mind; therefore, sense-regulation is very important.

And next-exercise that Kṛṣṇa prescribes is equally important; in spite of our sense-control, still certain things may enter our mind. Not that I wanted to hear the conversation; but because the ears are open, without any plug, even though I do not want certain things may enter, while I am travelling. Similarly, even though I do not want, certain forms and colours may enter. Once the world has entered, in spite of my careful living, then what should I do. Kṛṣṇa says what has entered your mind already; you cannot stop. Because it has entered.

Then what you can do? Whether that thought should be allowed to control. Whether we should re-live the conversation; some rubbish-conversation happened; should you replay it again and again; a particular picture I saw; whether it should be revive it in my mind; the continuation of a thought pattern is in my hands.

Often the arrival of a particular thought is not in my hand. Sometimes without my own knowledge, certain thoughts arise in my mind; surprising me myself. Kṛṣṇa says: Does not matter; it might have come from outside or it might have come from your own sub-conscious mind; let that rubbish thought come, does not matter; but you decide whether you should allow that thought pattern to continue. Use your will-power to nip that thought in the bud itself. This discipline is called thought-discipline or mind discipline, otherwise called Samah. Sense-discipline is called damah, mind-discipline is called samah; these two exercises are extremely important for a Gīta student.

Then Kṛṣṇa says these two alone are not enough, there is a third exercise also which is very important, and what is that?

Dwelling upon the teaching that we have received from the ācāryaḥ. Dwelling upon the teaching, which has been received during Śravaṇam, I have to revise either in the form of reading; or in the form of writing; you can write down notes, that is why writing notes is wonderful, even though you may never read again. 🤔😊. And even though other people may not be able to read your handwriting, because you yourselves are not sure, even though nobody may read, the very writing process is dwelling upon the teaching. Or find someone to share, and give a very hot cup of coffee so that they do not run away; and then you tell whatever you know. So in one form or the other, re-live the śravaṇam. Reliving the śravaṇam is called nidhidhyāsanam. Re-living the class, is called nidhidhyāsanam; which is an extremely important exercise.

Therefore we have to spend time either on the same day or before coming to the class; just quickly revise the portion; not for examination sake, not that I am going give you pass mark or rank, not talking as a college lecturer, I am talking from a different angle, because re-lived-śravaṇam, helps in assimilating. Once I do this assimilation, it gradually brings a transformation in the mind. Our own students say; giving happiness to the ācāryaḥ, they say, Swamiji I may not be able to claim I am a jñāni, I may not be able to claim that I am a jīvan muktha, I may not be able to claim that I am a sthira prajñah, but I can say that previously for small incidents I used to worry for days together, now for big incidents, I worry only for a day or a few hours. Thus the Gīta is capable of strengthening the mind.

And therefore the third exercise is called Nidhidhyāsanam. Dwelling upon the teaching; even though all the three exercises are important. In this context, Kṛṣṇa emphasises sense control more. In this context, Kṛṣṇa highlights the sense control. That is what we were seeing in all these slōkās. In the last slōkā we saw, that is 64th slōkā:

रागद्वेषवियुक्तैस्तु विषयानिन्द्रियैश्चरन् ।
आत्मवश्यैर्विधेयात्मा प्रसादमधिगच्छति ॥ २.६४ ॥

rāgadvēṣaviyuktaistu viṣayānindriyaiścāran |
ātmavaśyairvidhēyātmā prasādamadhigacchati || 2.64 ||

When you allow the sense organs to move in the world, let it be like a cautious driver. He may increase the speed of the vehicle, 50kms, 60kms, 70, but there is a difference between a rash driver and a cautious driver. A rash driver increases the speed and he does not have a control over the vehicle; gets into accidents; whereas a cautious driver, he may go faster, but at any moment, he will be able to put the brake or even change the course of the vehicle.

Similarly, remember your body is like the vehicle, your sense organs are like the wheels of the vehicle, your mind is like the steering. This is the example given in the Kathōpaniṣad. Body is the car, sense organs are the wheels, and mind is the steering; never lose the control over the mind steering; never lose the control over the sense organ wheels, never lose the control over the body-car.

And if a person is able to live such a disciplined life; prasādaṁ adhigacchati. The advantage is that he is able to maintain the equanimity of mind; he is free from violent emotion and as I said the other day, the frequency of violent reactions will become lesser and lesser. And also the intensity becomes lesser and lesser; and the recovery period also will also become lesser and lesser. Not that they are totally eliminated overnight, but I can manage my emotions. Therefore Arjuna practice these three. Up to this we saw.

प्रसादे सर्वदुःखानां हानिरस्योपजायते ।
प्रसन्नचेतसो ह्याशु बुद्धिः पर्यवतिष्ठते ॥२.६५॥

prasādē sarvaduḥkhānām hānirasyōpajāyatē |
prasannacētasō hyāśu buddhiḥ paryavatiṣṭhatē ||2.65||

प्रसादे prasādē When the mind is tranquil हानिः hāniḥ the destruction सर्वदुःखानाम् sarvaduḥkhānām of all miseries उपजायते upajāyatē takes place हि hi verily बुद्धिः buddhi

the Self knowledge अस्य asya of this प्रसन्नचेतसः prasannacētasah serene-minded (person) पर्यवतिष्ठते paryavatiṣṭatē becomes firm आशु āśu soon.

65. In tranquility, the destruction of all miseries takes place. Verily, the Self-knowledge of this serene-minded (person) becomes firm soon.

Here Kṛṣṇa points out what is the advantage of enjoying an equanimous mind. Prasādaḥ, I told you in the last class, in this context means, samatvam. Not the regular meaning of prasāda we receive from the temple. That is the extended meaning but the regular meaning of the word prasāda is prasanna-cittam, śāntiḥ. Samatvam. Poise, Balance, Equanimity is called prasādaḥ.

And in this verse Kṛṣṇa says: prasādaḥ will produce two fold benefit. What are the two fold benefits? The first benefit is duḥkhā nam hāniḥ. The destruction of all sorrows. So samatvam will remove all the sorrows; which means samatvam bring in happiness or joy.

Because here the idea is: we need not bring happiness from the outside world. According to Vēdānta, we need not bring happiness from the outside-world because the outside-world does not have happiness to give me. The outside-world does not have even an iota of happiness to give me. So therefore, the outside-world cannot give happiness no.1 and No.2 the outside-world need not give happiness, because we ourselves are the source of happiness. Like the bone that is bitten by a dog. When the dog bites the bone, you know the bone does not have even a drop of blood. The bone is as dry as bone. That's why we say when anything is dry is bone-dry. But still the dog bites the bone and the bone hurts the very mouth of the dog and blood comes from dog's own mouth. And dog uses a funny logic; what is the logic? Before biting the bone, no blood; after biting the bone; blood; therefore, bone is the source of blood. We say this is dog-logic.

But Vēdānta says that we are not better off. After using a sense-object, we enjoy happiness. Before using that we do not have happiness. Therefore we conclude the objective-source of happiness. Vēdānta says every object is like the bone. It does not have even a droplet. Sense-objects only are responsible in bringing out the happiness which is our own. And how does the sense-objects bring out the happiness; just by removing all our mental-disturbances temporarily.

Therefore, mental-disturbances are blocking our happiness; by sense-control and mind-control, when the mental disturbances are removed, when the blocks are removed, our own ātmānanda manifests and therefore Kṛṣṇa says: prasāde sarva duḥkhānām hāniḥ bhavathi. Once the disturbances are gone, in the previous slōkā he said: śānthim prāpnōti. That will come in the next slōkā; śāntimāpnōti. Therefore, joy does not come, from outside; it comes from oneself. This is benefit no.1. That is joy or ānanda.

What is the 2nd benefit? Kṛṣṇa says; prasannacētasah, when the mind is calmer, buddhiḥ paryavatiṣṭhatē; self-knowledge becomes well-rooted; it becomes stronger and stronger; it becomes well assimilated. And you should remember that the amount of food that I consume is not important, but it is the amount of food that I assimilate that is important; because eaten food does not nourish me; but it is the assimilated-food that nourishes me, and when the mind is calm, the knowledge gets assimilated.

Therefore he says, buddhiḥ, buddhiḥ means jñānam. Prajñāḥ. Will become paryavatiṣṭhatē; means it will get converted into sthira prajñā. And what is the difference between prajñā and sthira-prajñāḥ? As I said, it is available during our day-to day-life; to face the difficult situation.

Verse 2.66

नास्ति बुद्धिरयुक्तस्य न चायुक्तस्य भावना ।
न चाभावयतः शान्तिरशान्तस्य कुतः सुखम् ॥२.६६॥

nāsti buddhirayuktasya na cāyuktasya bhāvanā |
na cābhāvayataḥ śāntiraśāntasya kutaḥ sukham || 2.66 ||

66. Knowledge does not arise for the undisciplined (one). Contemplation is also not (possible) for the undisciplined (one). And, there is no peace for the uncontentplative (one). How can there be happiness for the peace-less (one)?

So in this verse, Kṛṣṇa is highlighting the śamaḥ and damaḥ exercises; the sensory-control and mind-control are highlighted; and he points out that these two disciplines are important at every stage of spiritual-sādhana.

I hope you remember the three words; śravaṇam means listening to the scriptures; don't you require mind control; imagine you have come to this talk, your buddhi has decided well; instead of spending the time in any useless pursuit, your intellect has concluded that Gīta -śravaṇam is very beneficial. Therefore your judgment is very good. And you have come to this place, but still it is not enough that you have a good judgment; you require a cooperative-mind which should be in this temple; first in the temple, otherwise the mind can be all over the world. Not only it should be in the temple, there also it can be wandering all over; it will be thinking, who all have come; how they have come; there also it can go anywhere; therefore the mind must be available; I told you that one old lady attended my classes long before; one day she brought a safety pin. I do not know what is the purpose. Swamiji for adjusting angavasthram so often, I thought that I will give you the safety pin, so that you can talk without disturbance. Means she has not heard anything. She has only observed my angavasthram. So therefore, if the mind is not behind your ears; from 6.30 to 7.30, every minute, and Gīta -śravaṇam is different from Rāmāyaṇa śravaṇam.

Rāmāyaṇam even if you do not have concentration, you can leave the topic in between and wander all over and still come back, Rāma will be in the forest; because he was there in 14 years, and you can pick up the thread. This is tight subject, with concentration you listen itself whether you understand or not, it is doubtful; if the concentration is not there, how tough it will be? Therefore every moment, every stage is a built-up logic. And how Gīta is developed, that is how upaniṣad is developed, therefore I require a mind.

I remember, when we were at Uttarakāśi, Swami Chinmayānanda had taken us for a camp. And then we had in Uttarakāśi, there is a military camp. The officers also were interested in listening to Swamiji. They were all seated. Then the military people came, with their heavy boots, and all those things, etc. Naturally imagine there was a set of people walking across and all the students turned. Then Swamiji said: Stop it: he wanted to give an equal shock. He said that Vēdānta students must have

काक दृष्टि भग ध्यानम् श्वान निद्रा ततैव च ।
अल्पाहारम् जीर्ण वस्त्रम् एवम् विद्यार्थि लक्षणम् ॥

kāka dr̥ṣṭi bhaga dhyānam śvāna nidrā tataiva ca |
alpāhāram jīrṇa vastram ēvaṁ vidyārthi lakṣaṇam ||

Who is a student? Kāka-dr̥ṣṭi, concentration like crow. Eye. Bhāga-dhyānam. Like a crane which is on the shore of the river, looking for fish; the fish comes and it just puts its beak and brings out. Bhāga-dhyānam. Śvāna-nidrā; like a dog only he should sleep. short sleep only; alpāhāram, very difficult, alpa-āhāram, adhika-āhāram means you will dose; jīrṇa-vastram; simple-life, simple-dress, not a flashy-life; ēvaṁ vidhyārthi-lakṣaṇam.

Swamiji used to tell, let anybody walk across, even if somebody gets up and walk across, your eye should not move, right from the beginning to end; Can you do that? Try? If you can do that, you have got concentration. Therefore, for listening you require śamaḥ and damaḥ, and for reflecting over that, you require śamaḥ and damaḥ, and later for nidhidhyāsanam; for dwelling upon and assimilation; you require śamaḥ and damaḥ; therefore Arjuna, build up these two values first and foremost. Without mind and sense control, spiritual progress is impossible. And a person who has the sensory and mind control, is called yukta-puruṣa. Yuktaḥ means a person of śamaḥ and damaḥ. And ayuktaḥ means a person without śamaḥ and damaḥ.

And here Kṛṣṇa says ayuktasya, buddhihi nāsti. The one who does not have mind and sense control, buddhihi hi nāsti; means śravaṇam and mananam are not possible. To put it in Gīta language, prajñah is not possible. Buddhihi nāsti, means prajñāḥ-nāsti. Śravaṇa manana janya prajñā na sambhavathi. Not only śravaṇam and mananam not possible, ayuktasya bhāvanā api nāsti. Without sense-control and mind-control, bhāvanā means nidhidhyāsanam; otherwise called Vedāntic-meditation; this is very big topic; I have not elaborated on this topic. We will have to study this in detail. And we will be doing that in the 6th chapter of the Gīta, the entire 6th chapter, consisting of 47 or so verses, deal with bhāvanā or nidhidhyāsanam only. In English we can translate it as Vedāntic-meditation. Ātma-dhyānam. How to do that? Kṛṣṇa will say. Here Kṛṣṇa says that Nidhidhyāsanam cannot be practiced without mind and sense control; OK.

And if a person does not practice śravaṇa, manana, nidhidhyāsanam, then what will be the consequence? abhāvayataḥ śāntiḥ nāsti. For a person, who does not practice these three; śāntiḥ hi nāsti; peace-of-mind is never possible. So remember, Gīta study is not an academic-pursuit. Is not mere a college like study; even though our class, even I use the word class, many people say that I should use the word 'Discourse' or 'Pravacanam' 'Upanyasam'; but I carefully avoid those words because here teaching is involved, concentration is involved, there is connection between first class and 2nd class, and therefore, it is a built-up study, it is as though an academic-study, but at the same time, the purpose is not academic-degree; but the purpose is total-transformation of the way I look at life; the way I look at the world; the way I look at myself; and that transformation brings peace-of-mind.

So therefore, Gīta study appears academic; but the benefits are totally practical benefit, and what is the practical benefit? śāntiḥ. Therefore Arjuna, if you want permanent peace of mind, study and assimilate the Gīta. Therefore He says, abhāvayataḥ śāntiḥ nāsti.

And aśāntasya kutaḥ sukham; without peace of mind, where is the question of ātma-ānanda; because ātma-ānanda can reflect only in a calm mind. Just like if you want to see your reflection in a mirror, or in water, what type of reflecting surface you require? Imagine, the mirror is going up and down. And you want to look at your face; you cannot; the mirror must be clamped; then only you can see your face. Similarly ātma-ānanda can be reflected only in an undisturbed-mind; and if the mind is going to be disturbed, Kṛṣṇa says aśāntasya kutaḥ sukham. How can the ātmānanda reflect?

Just as the example of the mirror is not my example; it is given in the śāstra itself. Yathā adarśathala prākyē, paśyat ātmānam ātmani. Just as in a clean surface, I can see my face, similarly in a calm mind, ātmānanda can be appreciated; and without that ānanda is never possible.

Or even if you get peace of mind through other methods, they will never be permanent- peace of mind. Other than knowledge, you adopt any other method, you go to an āśrama; Swamiji I went to the āśrama, and so wonderful; I could feel the vibrations of that saint; and that place is so calm and quiet; I enjoyed peace of mind; enjoyed; what tense; what tense? Past tense; that means what? It is past and now I am tense, the ānanda peace is past and I am tense! Any other method you use, it is temporary peace, whereas ātma jñāna, the beautifully says, tēṣām śāntiḥ śāśvāthi. This ātma jñānam alone will give śāśvāthi śāntiḥ, na itharēṣām. The other people can get temporary peace, but they will never get permanent peace. Kathōpaniṣad beautifully presents. Therefore, Kṛṣṇa asks how you can get peace and joy.

इन्द्रियाणां हि चरतां यन्मनोऽनुविधीयते । तदस्य हरति प्रज्ञां वायुर्नावमिवाम्भसि ॥ २.६७ ॥

indriyāṇām hi caratām yanmanō'nuvidhīyatē |
tadasya harati prajñām vāyurnāvamivāmbhasi || 2.67 ||

हि hi Verily, तद् मनः tad manaḥ that mind यद् अनुविधीयते yad anuvidhīyatē which follows चरताम् इन्द्रियाणाम् caratām indriyāṇām the wandering sense organs, हरति प्रज्ञाम् harati prajñām carries away अस्य asya the wisdom of that person वायुः इव vāyuḥ iva just as the wind नावम् nāvam the boat अम्भसि āmbhasi on the waters.

67. Verily, that mind which follows the wandering sense organs, carries away the wisdom of that person, just as the wind (carries away) the boat on the waters..

So Kṛṣṇa emphasizes sense control in these following two slōkās also, 67 and 68. He says: If sense control is not there, damaḥ is not there, it will not allow the ātma jñānam to arise in the mind; even if I choose to listen to the talk of mahatmas, my sense organs, roving eyes, wandering eyes, and wandering ears, will not allow me to listen to consistently; that jñānam does not arise at all. So there will be gaps. Like certain types of old cassettes. You repeatedly use it again and again. You play it, 2 words will come, then gap, then some old lecture will come, or go on and off. Similarly, the mind remembers certain things and sometimes the problem is they remember only the joke part; and then I ask for what purpose the joke was said; they say that is what is forgotten; remember jokes are like pickles, they are meant for eating the main dish; you eat only the pickle and leave out the main dish; what terrible thing it will be! Similarly, jokes do not have a primary value, it is meant for receiving the Gīta. Therefore the mind should remember the joke alright, but it should remember context for which it is said; and therefore, a wayward sense organ will not allow the knowledge to take place and not only that even if the knowledge takes place somehow; the wayward sense organs will rob away that knowledge. At crucial moments, when I require that knowledge it will not be available, it will take away the jñānam.

Therefore, he says, indriyāṇāṃ hi caratām yanmanō'nuvidhīyatē; suppose the sense organs are wandering. So here caratām, like a grazing cow, which moves all over, similarly suppose the sense organs are wandering all over, without my permission; I choose to look in the direction, wonderful; but without my will, if they wander, that is what is dangerous. And here caratām means they decide to go anywhere, and behind the sense organs, manaḥ anuvidhīyatē. Suppose the mind also wanders along with that. Like that cinema song they sing.

kaṇ pōṇa pōkkile maṇam pōkalāmā? maṇam pōṇa pōkkile, maṇitaṇ pōkalāmā?

If sense organs are wandering and along with that the mind is also wandering, what will it do? Wandering mind and sense organs will not allow the knowledge to take place; and even if the knowledge comes, they will rob away the knowledge; they will not allow the knowledge to remain with me. Therefore He says: Tat asya prajñām harati. So Tat means the wandering mind and the sense organs, the wayward mind and sense organs tasya prajñām harati. It will rob, carry away the ātma-jñānam and that is why, while receiving the knowledge during śravaṇam, and if it is not available during the day to day affairs, the robber has taken away.

And to convey the idea, Kṛṣṇa gives an example. What is the example? Suppose a person is travelling in a boat. And he is supposed to decide to direction of the travel; he should have oars; he should have controlling things must be there; and he must direct the boat, and if he is not going to control the boat, what will happen? The wind which is blowing will take the boat in any direction it wants. And wind is not going to get permission from me; whether to go to the west, or east, it is not going to ask me, wind will take in various directions; sometime the wind may take the boat to whirlpool or dangerous place and the boat may even capsize.

Therefore just as the wind takes away the boat and destroys the boat and the traveler. Similarly, the wayward mind and sense organs carries away the boat of knowledge and along with knowledge, it destroys the individual also. Buddhināśāt praṇaśyati. Therefore here He says; vāyurnāvamivāmbhasi.

So Vāyu is compared to the wayward mind and nāvam the boat is compared to the jñānam; knowledge is called boat; sarvam jñāna plavēnaiva, vṛjinam santhariṣyathi. Knowledge is compared to a boat because knowledge takes a person across the ocean of saṁsāra. A Wayward mind will destroy the boat of knowledge; and when the boat of knowledge is destroyed, I, the traveller, also am destroyed. All because of what? Lack of mind and sense regulation. Therefore Kṛṣṇa is going to conclude;

Verse 2.68

तस्माद्यस्य महाबाहो निगृहीतानि सर्वशः ।
इन्द्रियाणीन्द्रियार्थेभ्यस्तस्य प्रज्ञा प्रतिष्ठिता ॥२.६८॥

tasmādyasya mahābāhō nigṛhītāni sarvaśaḥ |
indriyāṇīndriyārthēbhyastasya prajñā pratiṣṭhitā || 2.68 ||

महाबाहो mahābāhō Oh Arjuna! तस्मात् tasmāt therefore, प्रज्ञा तस्य prajñā tasya the knowledge of that person यस्य इन्द्रियाणि yasya indriyāṇi whose sense organs सर्वशः निगृहीतानि sarvaśaḥ nigṛhītāni are completely withdrawn इन्द्रियार्थेभ्यः indriyārthēbhyaḥ from the sense objects प्रतिष्ठिता pratiṣṭhitā becomes firm

68. Oh Arjuna! Therefore, the knowledge of that person, whose sense organs are completely withdrawn from the sense objects, becomes firm.

So Kṛṣṇa concludes sthira-prajñā-sādhanāni topic here. He says; Tasmāt; since sense-control plays a very very important role in spiritual-growth, yasya indriyāṇi nigrahīthāni, the seeker's sense-organs must be restrained.

And I would like to repeatedly remind you that Kṛṣṇa is not prescribing suppression of sense organs. Always remember that is a very big misconception that suppression is prescribed in eastern culture. There is always the psychologists in the West are studying the eastern religion. Psychologists have come with an observation that suppression is extremely dangerous. And in our religion repeatedly we talk about indriya-nigrahaḥ, sense-control, mind-control; and they mistake the control as suppression; and they are warning the people that the religion is prescribing suppression which is extremely dangerous for psychological help and therefore they are prescribing a new system: Do not suppress; Let go.

Now the Eastern system says: Letting go is equally dangerous. If suppression is dangerous, expression, violent and uncontrolled-expression is also dangerous; what Gīta prescribes is neither suppression nor unintelligent expression; what Gīta prescribes is intelligent-regulation. Stopping the river is also dangerous; because if you stop a river, there will be flood; and if you let the river flow in its own direction, then also it becomes waste of water; because it will go into the ocean. Therefore, neither stop the river, nor allow the river to flow into the ocean.

What do you do; dam the river and channelize the water in the direction that you want. Gīta neither prescribes suppression nor uncontrolled expression, Gīta prescribes channelization of sensory-energy. Channelization of mental energy, because even scientists say that we are not utilising our full mental and intellectual energy. It is all dissipated. By this regulation, we are only tapping our full potential. Nigrahaṇam here means channelization. Direction. Intelligent use of mental-energy, which we had as a children, you would have seen children's concentration. If an ant is running, children will follow the ant. Nirvikalpaka samādhi we had all practiced. Only ant-samādhi. We have the capacity. In between the mother calls or anybody walks, the child would not know. We have all that capacity. In the name of growth, we have lost that concentration. Also the photographic mind; the children just pick up the advertisement song seeing it once; If only Gīta is taught, they will pick up that also.

Now for us Gīta also will not come and also advertisement song. Not that we do not have, we have not used that faculty. Therefore, a person, a seeker should master the sense organs. Tasya prajñāḥ pratiṣṭhitā. Then he can receive the knowledge and the knowledge will be well assimilated also. More in the next class.

We are in the final portion of the 2nd chapter, dealing with sthitha-prajñāḥ, which means a person who has attained self-knowledge, and who has assimilated the self-knowledge; converting the knowledge into emotional strength.

And in this sthira prajñā or sthitha-prajñā-portion, Kṛṣṇa presents two topics, one is how can a person convert prajñāḥ into sthitha-prajñā; that is sthitha-prajñā-sādhanāni, i.e. how to become a sthitha-prajñā.

and then the next topic is sthitha-prajñā-lakṣaṇāni, what are the natural traits of a person who is established in this knowledge.

Of these two topics, sthitha-prajñā-lakṣaṇāni was discussed from verse No.55 to 57, and then sthitha-prajñā-sādhanāni from verse no.58 to verse No.68. So first three verses on lakṣaṇāni and then 11 verses on sādhanāni.

Now from the next verse onwards, i.e. the 69th verse onwards Kṛṣṇa is again reverting back to the topic of sthitha-prajñā-lakṣaṇāni once again; what are the natural traits of a person who is established in this wisdom? That means that person for whom all the sādhanas are over; that person who is no more a sādhanaka; in Sāṅskṛit we say that person is a siddha-puruṣaḥ. The difference between sādhanaka and siddhā is: sādhanaka is one who is in the process of transformation; whereas siddhā is one who has accomplished complete transformation. And it is this siddha-puruṣaḥ that Kṛṣṇa is going to talk about in the following four verses 69 to 72, i.e. the end of this chapter. We will read verse No.69.

या निशा सर्वभूतानां तस्यां जागर्ती संयमी ।
यस्यां जाग्रति भूतानि सा निशा पश्यतो मुनेः ॥२.६९॥

yā niśā sarvabhūtānām tasyām jāgarti saṁyamī |
yasyām jāgrati bhūtāni sā niśā paśyatō munēḥ || 2.69 ||

संयमी saṁyamī The sage जागर्ति jāgarti is awake तस्याम् tasyām to the ātma या निशा yā niśā which is night सर्वभूतानाम् sarvabhūtānām for all beings पश्यतः मुनेः paśyataḥ munēḥ For the wise sage सा sā that (world of duality) is निशा niśā night यस्याम् भूतानि yasyām bhūtāni to which bhūtāni all beings जाग्रति jāgrati are awake.

69. The sage is awake to the ātma which is night for all beings. For the wise sage that (world of duality) is night to which all beings are awake.

All these are important verses, which are often quoted, especially verse No.69 and 70. In these two verses, Kṛṣṇa is talking about the glory of a sthira prajñāh who is established in self-knowledge. And to talk about the glory of such a person, Kṛṣṇa is comparing this jñāni to an ordinary ajñāni in the verse. Therefore a clean contrast between jñāni and ajñāni are saṁsāri and muktha-puruṣaḥ; this contrast is given.

And the idea that Kṛṣṇa wants to convey is this. That is both a jñāni and ajñāni face the same world. It is not that they are going to face a special world, which is going to be all fine; it is not so; the world is going to be the same. The world cannot be changed. The people are also going to be the same; because Vēdānta does not attempt to change the world; because it is impractical. Vēdānta does not attempt to change the people-around, because it is again impractical. Vēdānta's attempt is only to change the way that I look at the world; the way that I look at the people; the way that I respond to situations; and therefore, since a vēdāntin never accomplished any worldly changes, the world is going to be same, corrupt world and with lot of problems, cheating people, lying people, misbehaving people; insulting people, all the people would be the same for a jñāni also.

And more than that even a jñāni has got prārabdha; because jñāna will not destroy prārabdha. We saw in Tatva Bōdha, jñāni destroys his past sañcita-karmas, jñāni avoids fresh āgāmi karma, but jñāni also has to face prārabdham, which means ups and downs in life, which are going to continue for a jñāni also.

So the next question is: if both ajñāni and jñāni live in the same world, then what is the difference in their response? And Kṛṣṇa is going to point out in this slōkā, the response is going to be diagonally opposite, because of the change of perspective. And Kṛṣṇa is going to give an example, which we will study later, but I will give you another example, which is relatively simpler.

Imagine two people are seated on the beach. Both of them are looking at the ocean. Both of them are seeing the waves rising and setting; getting destroyed. What both of them see is the same; that is the waves. But imagine one person knows that the truth of the wave is water, and there is no such thing called wave at all. So one person has got wave-wisdom and that wisdom is wave is nothing but name and form; the truth is nothing but water. Therefore one person sees the indestructible water; that is immortal water and he does not focus upon the perishable or changing waves. Therefore one is absorbed in immortal truth which is non-dual, advaita, nitya jalām; one person is absorbed in that truth because water is only one.

And imagine another person who does not know the truth of the wave and therefore absorbed in the superficial names and forms only and therefore he takes wave as the reality. And when I am absorbed in the waves, I am going to see the perishable waves; and not only that, when the new wave is born, I am very much happy, and I even celebrate the birthday of the wave, and every day I cut the cakes also, distribute gifts also, because I am absorbed in the mortal wave. Not only I am absorbed in that, I even form relatives and friends; because in the invitation it is also written with best compliments from friends and relatives; each one, one one wave.

So I see mortality, I see plurality. Both are looking at the ocean. One sees dvaita-anitya-taraṅgāni. Can you understand? Dvaita means pluralistic, anitya means perishable, taraṅgāni means waves; whereas another person, has focused upon the advaita-nitya-jalam. Just you have to change the 'a'; dvaita-anitya-taraṅgāni is the ignorant person's vision, and what is the wise-person's-vision? Advaita-nitya-jalam.

And because of the change of perspective, what is the difference in the response? When the ignorant person is attached to the pluralistic perishable waves, the tragedy is: when every wave is born, it touches the ceiling with happiness; when the wave perishes, he is going to be shocked by that event. He is very gloomy. My wave is gone. And I have been so much attached. This is my tatta-wave, this is my grandchild-wave; this is my wife-wave; husband-wave; there is crying all around. Whereas in the neighborhood, there is the other person, who sees that the birth and death belong to only to the superficial name and form, the content, the essence does not have mortality, therefore he is absorbed in immortality; therefore, there is neither elation in the birth of a wave nor is a depression in the death of a wave. Therefore one is absorbed in advaitam, immortality; another is absorbed in dvaitam, mortality.

Similarly you can take another example of a movie and the characters in the movie. Initially when you go to the theatre you see only the truth of the white pure screen and you know that the screen alone is there. And once the movie begins the characters come; the hero comes, the heroin comes, and of course there is villain and there is climax and all those things, gradually I am absorbed in the pluralistic superficial shadows of characters. No character is there, other than shades of light; and so much I am absorbed in the superficial character that I lose sight of what? The truth behind the characters, which is nothing but the white screen; which is advaitam and the moment I lose sight of the screen, the characters which are nothing but shadows, shadows become reality. And when the villain is trying to cheat the hero and shoot from behind, even we feel like shouting to the hero to look behind for the attacker-villain! So we are so much absorbed. Do not we know that there is no hero, no villain, no shooting, nothing is there; but it is capable of making us forget the truth of the screen and get lost in the superficial shadows.

So one who knows that everything is screen, he is not carried away by the movie; he appreciates the movie, he might even what you call appreciate the acting of the hero or heroine, but once he comes out of the movie; he says the heroine died very well. That means she acted very well. You are not carried away by these scenes there. But the moment the screen is forgotten, the movie moves you; that is why it is called movie; movie is one, movathi ithi movie!

So therefore what are the two-dṛṣṭis? Advaita-dṛṣṭi, and dvaita-dṛṣṭi; jñāni has got advaita-dṛṣṭi, which is the essence of the creation. Behind all the varieties of ornaments, gold is one. Behind all the types of furniture, wood is one. Behind all the types of waves, water is one. That non-duality one who does not forget, he has got advaita-dṛṣṭi; he does not see birth and death. Whereas the one got dvaita-dṛṣṭi, he is going to cry of and on. Therefore, ajñāni has got dvaita-dṛṣṭi, jñāni has got Advaita-dṛṣṭi; where? Not in a different place, both of them live in the same world.

I gave you two examples. Now Kṛṣṇa is going to give another example in this verse. I will briefly discuss, then we will go to the slōkā proper. In this verse, an ignorant person is going to be compared to an owl or ஆந்தை āntai, which is a type of bird which keeps awake during the night and which is awake to the night-life alone. Therefore ajñāni is compared to an owl by Kṛṣṇa. And jñāni is compared to a human being. Very careful. Jñāni is compared to a human being; and ajñāni is compared to an owl. Two comparisons.

And two more comparisons we should remember. The day time Kṛṣṇa is going to compare to advaitam. Day time is compared to advaitam, and the night time is compared to dvaitam. So jñāni is equal to human being; ajñāni is equal to owl; day is equal to advaitam and night is equal to dvaitam. With these four comparisons, we have to understand the slōkā.

Now let us see. I will give some statement. See whether you are able to understand. No.1 statement. A human being is awake to the day and he is asleep to the night. Human being is awake to the day; awake means aware of; and he is asleep to the night. One statement.

And the second statement, an owl is asleep to the day, and is awake to the night; An owl is asleep to the day and awake to the night. Just now replace properly. Equation if you put correctly, the slōkā would be simple.

No.1. Human being is awake to the day. Human being is comparable to the jñāni and day is equal to what? Advaitam. So human being is awake to the day; that means a jñāni is awake to the advaitam; and he is asleep to the night, means he is asleep to dvaitam. So a jñāni is awake to advaitam and asleep to dvaitam.

What is the significance here? He is absorbed in advaitam and dvaitam is superficial for him. Like the beach man. He is absorbed in the non-dual water; that the waves coming and going does not disturb him. Therefore what is the first statement? Human being is awake to the day, and asleep to the night, is equal to jñāni being awake to advaitam and asleep to the dvaitam.

Now let us come to the next statement. An owl is asleep to the day, meaning not aware of the day; an owl is asleep to the day, and awake to the night. How will you compare? What is an owl? An ignorant person. Compare properly. An ignorant person is asleep to advaitam, the day, an ignorant person is asleep to advaitam, and he is awake to what? He is awake to dvaitam. This is the essence of the slōkā. Jñāni is awake to advaitam and asleep to dvaitam; and ajñāni is awake to dvaitam and asleep to advaitam.

In Tamil it is said: மரத்தை மறைத்தத்து மாமத யானை; மரத்தில் மறைத்தத்து மாமத யானை marattai maraittattu māmata yāṇai; marattil- maraittattu māmata yāṇai. The whole thing is put in a simple language. There was a wooden elephant and it was made so realistically that from distance, it looks like an elephant, even though actual-elephant is nothing but name and form; the content is wood-alone, an ignorant person was not aware of the wood; therefore when he missed the wood, what he was seeing? The elephant; what type of elephant; the frightening elephant and he was about to run away also. Then the wise man says: Do not run away: I will take you near the elephant. This person said near the elephant! Do not worry. I have got the mantra jalaṁ; elephant will do nothing. Then he goes near the elephant and ask this person to touch it and see; and then he appreciates the wood, which is the content, what type of wood? Harmless-wood, he appreciates and at once the frightening-elephant has disappeared from the mind. One sees the elephant and misses the wood and another person sees the wood and not misses the elephant; he dismisses the elephant. There misses and here dismisses.

Similarly, the world is now a frightening thing for an ignorant person; he feels that whole world is there only to affect me; whole world is there only to give me trouble; that this world is a frightening thing for an ignorant person; whereas for a wise person, the very same world is harmless wood; or harmless Brahman, or beautiful God: sarvaṁ śivamayam jagat; sarvaṁ viṣṇumayam jagat; sarvaṁ brahmamayam jagat. When you see the Viṣṇu or Śiva, you miss the jagat and when you see the jagat, you miss the Viṣṇu or Śiva. The world is harmless nāma rūpaḥ. This is the example.

Now look at the slōkā. sarvabhūtānāṁ yā niśā. So sarvabhūta refer to the ignorant human beings; for the ignorant human-beings yā niśā; yā means advaitam; the advaitic truth is like night; they are asleep to that. For all the ignorant-people advaitam is like night, that means the advaitam is like day-time, to which they are asleep; niśā means asleep to. Niśā one should translate correctly. They are asleep to the advaitic truth.

And tasyāṁ saṁyamī jāgati, and saṁyamī means a jñāni, the wise person is awake to that advaitam. So tasyāṁ means advaitam, jāgati means awake. So the wise man is awake to that advaitam, and to that advaitam, all the ignorant people, which ignorant people; owl like ignorant people; they are asleep to the advaitam day. Then yasyāṃ jāgrati bhūtāni, all the ignorant-people are awake to yasyāṃ refers to dvaitam; so all the ignorant-people are awake to dvaitam are awake to plurality, are awake to superficial nāma rūpaḥ, and what is jñāni doing there? sā paśyatō munēḥ niśā. To that plurality, to that dvaitam, jñāni is niśā. Niśā means asleep to that. So in short the essence is jñāni is absorbed in advaitam, ajñāni is absorbed in dvaitam. Jñāni sees immortality everywhere; ajñāni sees mortality only. And when I see immortality, there is no question of birth and death and crying, whereas for the ajñāni there is birth of somebody and death of somebody and therefore constant crying. This is example No.1. Day-night example or human being-owl example.

Now Kṛṣṇa is going to give another example.

आपूर्यमाणमचलप्रतिष्ठं
समुद्रमापः प्रविशन्ति यद्वत् ।
तद्वत्कामा यं प्रविशन्ति सर्वे स शान्तिमाप्नोति न कामकामी ॥ २.७० ॥

āpūryamāṇamacalapratiṣṭham
samudramāpaḥ praviśanti yadvat| tadvatkāmā yaṃ praviśanti sarvē
sa śāntimāpnōti na kāmakāmī || 2.70 ||

सर्वे कामाः sarvē kāmāḥ All sense objects प्रविशन्ति यम् praviśanti yam enters him तद्वद् यद्वत् tadvad yadvat just as आपः प्रविशन्ति āpaḥ praviśanti waters enter आपूर्यमाणम् āpūryamāṇam the full, अचलप्रतिष्ठं समुद्रम् acalapratiṣṭam samudram calm ocean सः आप्नोति शान्तिम् saḥ āpnōti śāntim He attains peace, न कामकामी na kāmakāmī not the seeker of sense-objects.

70. Just as waters enter into the ocean which is being filled from all directions and (yet) is unaffected, in the same way, all sense objects enter the wise man. Such a person enjoys peace; not one who desires sense objects.

So in this verse another example is given. Which is a simpler one. For understanding previous slōkā, you should remember four comparisons. Jñāni is compared to human being. Ajñāni is compared to an owl. Day is compared to advaitam and night is compared to dvaitam. One has to remember all these four and understand it. The example is for simplification and this example makes things tougher.

Vyāsācārya wanted to write Mahābhāratham, there was this condition, he called Vināyaka to be his scribe; and then he said that I will go on dictating, you should write.

Then Vināyaka said it seems: I am a fast writer; I know shorthand; therefore you should continuously dictate. If you stop, my writing, then I will not be with you. Continuous you have to give me work. Then Vyāsācārya has to compose and dictate. It is not already composed. So Vyāsācārya said it seems that: I will do that. I will put a condition for you also. You should not blindly write. Often the stenographers and typists, (do not mistake me), they have to do a fast work and therefore they cannot think while writing. This I remember very much, because previously I used to give a summary of every chapter in typed sheets. Therefore I used to ask a student to type it. In the fifth chapter, the whole chapter is renunciation chapter. The typed sheet came and I found that everywhere where renunciation comes, he had typed remuneration!! Through remuneration alone mōkṣa will come. He cannot think of the meaning. He is doing fast.

Therefore Vyāsācārya seems to have said that you should not be like that and when you write you should understand the meaning you write. So what Vyāsa used to do; he used to compose and dictate, suppose he wanted to think and write, he will compose one slōkā, which is a little bit difficult. Then Vināyaka has to scratch his head and understand. By the time he understands, Vyāsā would have composed 100 or 1000 slōkās. Therefore such slōkās are called granthi slōkās. Granthi means knot. Knotty slōkās. Knotty also naughty also.

So we find that 2nd chapter 16th verse, nāsatō vidyatē bhāvō nābhāvō vidyatē sataḥ, is a naughty/knotty verse. And you can find in Śankarācārya's Bhāṣyaṁ also that in such slōkās more.

And this slōkā is another knotty/naughty verse. Then the next knotty verse we get in the 4th chapter, karmaṇyakarma yaḥ paśyēdakarmaṇi ca karma yaḥ. The one who sees action in inaction and inaction in action, he is wise. What did you understand? That is it. Then thereafter in the 9th chapter, there is a knotty verse. Mastāni sarvabhūtāni, na cāhaṁ matsthāni sarvabhūtāni na cāhaṁ tēṣvavasthitaḥ; na ca matsthāni bhūtāni paśya mē yōgamaīśvaram. All the beings live in me, all the beings do not live in me. What do you understand? He is contradicting himself.

So thus yā niśā is a knotty verse, because he has to remember four comparisons, therefore Kṛṣṇa wants or Vyāsa wants to make the next one simple.

Here jñāni is compared to the ocean. What is the glory of the ocean? It is ever full. It is pūrṇam. We can have dry rivers, like most of Tamil Nadu rivers. We will call it river, but children might be playing cricket there; or some slum colony would have come up there; we say there is a river; so the rivers are not always full; they are full and dry also. Similarly tanks, similarly wells; but what is the glory of ocean, it is ever full and it is independently full. Its pūrṇatvaṁ, its fullness does not depend upon any external factors. Rivers do not fill up the ocean; the rains do not fill up the ocean, suppose the rivers claim I am pouring into you, therefore you are only full, suppose a river-ocean dialogue goes on and a river says because of me flowing into you alone you are full, what will ocean say? It would not even argue; it would just smile. Because ocean knows the very river is born out of me alone, from me alone, water has been evaporated, because of me alone clouds are formed; because of me rains pour, because of me alone, rivers are formed, and rivers are entering me; I do not depend upon rivers, but rivers depend on me.

Therefore what are the two glories of the ocean? It is pūrṇam and it is also svatantram; it is independent. Rivers'-arrival also does not bother the ocean, rivers'-non-arrival also does not disturb the ocean. Are you coming, come, not coming, do not come. And not only that, even the quality of rivers. Gaṅga also enters into ocean, Yamuna also enters into ocean, our Koovam also enters into ocean; whereas ocean is ever the same; it does not get polluted that easily.

In the same way, jñāni's mind is ever full; its fullness is not because of family condition; it is not because of somebody admires; it is not because somebody respects; it is not because somebody obeys. That is river mind. I am very happy because my children obey me. For how many days? Until the children grow. Even now, the children do not need to grow! The moment they change the attitude, I am shattered. The moment they become independent, I am shattered. I want them to be permanently dependent on me.

Thus all the ajñānis have got well-mind; tank-mind; lake-mind; and river-mind; they are never full; and even if they are full, it is dependent on external factors; therefore they are all saṁsāris. Jñāni's mind is so pūrṇam, wonderful experiences come, fine. No wonderful experiences; fine, mānāpamānayostulyastulyō mitrāripakṣayōḥ samaduḥkhasukhaḥ svasthaḥ samalōṣṭāśmakāñcanaḥ śubhāśubhaparitāgī. We saw in the second-chapter itself, in the previous verses. If you remember, that is to be noted here:

यः सर्वत्रानभिस्नेहस्तत्तत्प्राप्य शुभाशुभम् |
नाभिनन्दति न द्वेष्टि तस्य प्रज्ञा प्रतिष्ठिता || २-५७ ||

[yaḥ sarvatrānabhisnēhastattatprāpya śubhāśubham |
nābhinandati na dvēṣṭi tasya prajñā pratiṣṭhitā ||2-57||](#)

maṅgala-experiences come; so called amaṅgala-experiences come, māna comes, apamānacomes, success comes, failures come, in all of them, he is samaḥ. This is the beautiful example.

Now look at the slōkā. First example is described. Samudram, the ocean is, ever full, and independently full. And acalapratiṣṭham, and ever remains undisturbed by the arrival or non-arrival (departure also you can say, because in form of evaporation, water goes) so acalapratiṣṭham, ever steady, ever magnanimous, ever peace, ever full, ever undisturbed; and this great ocean आपः āpaḥ praviśanti, varieties of rivers enter the ocean. And even when all these situations, events happen, Samudra is pūrṇamadaḥ pūrṇamidaṁ. It is always full.

Now we have to connect it to the jñāni. Similarly, yaṁ kāmāḥ praviśanti, so the jñāni's ocean-like mind is there, into which kāmāḥ; here kāmāḥ refers to sensory experiences, the world of sense objects enter, śabda, sparśa, somebody says you are so wonderful, you are great, because you gave some donation, you think that they are glorifying you, it is only for the money, next day if you do not give, they will curse you. So therefore you will find that they will scold you; you just listen; therefore some people glorify, some criticise, so kāmāḥ means the world of sense objects, praviśanti, they enter, the full mind of a jñāni.

And what is the condition of his mind? Sa śāntimāpnōti, he enjoys an unruffled mind, a full mind, a poised mind, he enjoys all the time. And na kāmakāmī, not the ignorant person, who is heavily dependent on the external factors. So kāmakāmī means, dependent-people, seekers of external-approval. After buying even a dress, constantly you have to ask, whether it is good, whether it is good, whether it is good, etc. Ask some people. Some people expect that they should be asked: where did you buy. So they will walk here and there before you. So better ask it. They will walk up and down, expecting you to ask. Where did you buy, how much you paid etc. and if that approval is not there, they are shattered. Even the small things people are flattered; or otherwise they are shattered. This is kāmakāmī, whereas the other person is neither flattered nor shattered. Ever samaḥ.

This is the 2nd example. Very often quoted example. This slōkā is worth remembering. Once in a while, we may get a doubt, whether I am in a jñāni or in ajñāni category, because you have been listening to the Gīta for quite long!! And some ask the Swami also, whether they have become a jñāni!! How to ascertain? Remember this slōkā and think of the mind, when somebody flatters you and look at the mind when someone criticises you. That is the litmus test to know where I stand.

विहाय कामान्यः सर्वान्पुमांश्चरति निस्पृहः । निर्ममो निरहङ्कारः स शान्तिमधिगच्छति ॥२-७१॥

vihāya kāmān yaḥ sarvān pumāṁscarati niḥsprhaḥ|
nirmamō nirahaṅkāraḥ sa śāntimadhigacchati||71||

विहाय vihāya Having given up सर्वान् कामान् sarvān kāmān all sense objects, सः पुमान् saḥ pumān that person, यः चरति yaḥ carati who moves निस्पृहः niḥsprhaḥ without craving निरहङ्कारः निर्ममः nirahaṅkāraḥ nirmamaḥ and without the notion of 'I' and 'mine' अधिगच्छति adhigacchati enjoys शान्तिम् śāntim peace

71. Having given up all sense objects, that person, who moves without craving and without the notion of 'I' and 'mine', enjoys peace.

Kṛṣṇa continues with the topic of the jñāni's state of mind. From this it is very clear that any mystic experience is not mōkṣaḥ but enjoying a poised mind alone is called mōkṣaḥ. And this poised mind is not unknown to you; we do have a poised mind with regard to neighbours' problem.

Therefore, what is jīvan muktiḥ? Everyone knows. With regard to neighbors problem, how you are jīvan muktaḥ, extend it to your problem; you are able to have the same state of mind. You are able to look at the neighbours' problem. Or your problem also on par with that. not that you are going to ignore, you will help your neighbour, friend or relative, you do everything, but whatever you do, in your heart of hearts, you are not upset, you are objective, that whenever they have the problem, they ask for your suggestion, that they know that you are objective and when I have a problem I ask my neighbors suggestion, I know he is objective. If I can enjoy the same objectivity with regard to my problem also; I am a jīvan muktaḥ. Therefore it is a known state of mind, it has nothing to do with mysticism or mystery, is a known state of mind, only thing is that state of mind comes and goes, in the case of jñāni it is a persistent one.

Therefore, Kṛṣṇa describes: yaḥ pumān sarvān niḥsprhaḥ; So pumān here refers to jñāni, so jñāni is one who is niḥsprhaḥ, not dependent on any external factors to be happy; he does not reject them, not that he physically renounces them; he handles all of them; he enjoys all those relationship, but he is not attached or dependent. Therefore, as long as such things and relationship is available; wonderful, it is available, but if those things are not available, I may like to continue the relationship but if the other person breaks the relationship; what can I do? Because relationship depends on two people. I may love to have relationship with the other person; that person cuts.

Nowadays, divorce has become a very big problem. The husband does not want; but the wife wants. Or wife does not want or husband wants, the psychologists say that break is a shattering experience, which is very difficult to get over.

One of the biggest trauma, when the husband and wife get separated; why because the relationship depend upon two people; therefore, as long as I depend upon another person, there is an eternal risk; I am ready to love the other person, but I do not want to depend upon other person loving me. If the other person loves me, wonderful; and if he does not like my nose, what can I do? So love is dependent on the nose, simple-nose, flat-nose; what can one do? Because now the look of the person has become very important, beauty parlors are coming all over, previously females only had them, now men are very much bothered about the look, the teeth-alignment and then you even the newspapers there are separate column; I have sent my photos, should I have long hair or short hair. I have carefully made up the other person does not like my nose, what can I do. The other's person loves me for infinite reason, and they may drop the love, what I can I do. I keep loving. In fact, I live in the world to give love; not to seek love.

That is a jñāni. So nispr̥haḥ. Not seeking anything from others; kāmān sarvān vihāya; kāmā means sense objects; so giving up the dependence on sense objects and people, with total detachment, a jñāni moves in the world, nirmamō nirahaṅkāraḥ, nirahaṅkāraḥ means without body identification. He does not even depend upon the body because body is born out of the five elements and the body depends upon these five elements for its survival and anytime this body will be claimed by these five elements. But the nature may not like that it has to go back. Therefore, he does not have identification or dependence on even the body. Body-identification is called ahaṅkāraḥ, nir-ahaṅkāraḥ means free from that. And therefore only nirmama, without any ownership. Because I do not own anything in the world, I am only temporarily using things in the world; I only temporarily use things in the world; the moment I have ownership (flat, remember, it is a good example) you are flat. Therefore, it is called ownership flat. But for the worldly sake, have the ownership papers, etc. that is not wrong; but in the mind, remember you own nothing, even this physical body you cannot own, because the nature takes this back, whenever it wants, not whenever I want. When I cannot claim my body, how can I claim the land and waters. Therefore, jñāni remembers that I am not the body, and nothing belongs to me. With this attitude, the one who enjoys the things as they are available, and sa śāntimadhigacchati, he enjoys life thoroughly. He enjoys life thoroughly. And now Kṛṣṇa gives the last verse of this discourse.

एषा ब्राह्मी स्थितिः पार्थ नैनां प्राप्य विमुह्यति ।
स्थित्वाऽस्यामन्तकालेऽपि ब्रह्मनिर्वाणमृच्छति ॥ २.७२ ॥

ēṣā brāhmī sthitiḥ pārtha naināṃ prāpya vimuhyati |
sthitvā'syāmantakālē'pi brahmanirvāṇamṛcchati || 2.72 ||

पार्थ pārtha Oh Arjuna! एषा ēṣā This ब्राह्मी स्थितिः brāhmī sthitiḥ is Brahmi sthitiḥ प्राप्य एनाम् prāpya ēnām Having attained this, न विमुह्यति na vimuhyati one is not deluded. स्थित्वा अपि sthitvā api Being established in this अन्तकाले antakālē even at the time of death, ऋच्छति ब्रह्मनिर्वाणम् ṛcchati brahmanirvāṇam he attains oneness with Brahman..

72. Oh Arjuna! This is called brāhmī sthitiḥ. Having attained this one is not deluded. Being established in this even at the time of death, he attains oneness with Brahman.

So Kṛṣṇa states that this state of mind is born out of thorough understanding of Vēdānta. Without Vēdānta jñānam; without ātma jñānam; we cannot accomplish this state of mind. That is why he is called sthira prajñāḥ. Therefore, this state of mind; this perspective of the world; born out of clear knowledge of who I am, as described in verses 12 to 25 of this chapter; I hope you are revising those verses; the entire Gīta foundation is those few verses; therefore revise it again and again; Gīta 2nd chapter 12 to 25; based on that knowledge, he enjoys that state of mind, which is called brāhmī sthitiḥ; Brahman state; otherwise called sthira prajñāḥ; otherwise called jīvan muktiḥ, so ēṣā brāhmī sthitiḥ pārtha; and what is the glory of it? ēnām prāpya nainām, not the telugu, it is Sāṅskṛit, na plus ēnām prāpya na vimuhyati. Once a person attains this state of mind, thereafterwards there is no fall back into saṁsāra; there are no more conflicts in life as Arjuna had in the battlefield.

Until jñānam comes, conflicts are inevitable. To do or not to do; To be or not to be. To marry or not to marry; every stage there is a question. Conflicts are not there in him. And not only that. Asyām sthitvā, he enjoys state of mind, called jīvan muktiḥ, how long; as long as he lives in the world, as long as there is prārabdham.

And what will happen to him when prārabdha is exhausted? At the time of death, what will happen to him? Antakāle: 'pi brahmanirvāṇamṛcchati. He will attain vidēha-muktiḥ or merger into param brahma. Which means he will not have punarapi-jananam, punarapi- maraṇam-cycle, the sthula-śarīram; the sūkṣma-śarīram, the kāraṇa-śarīram, all the three-bodies merge into totality. In the case of ignorant-people, physical-body alone merges or is destroyed. The other two bodies travel, whereas in the case a jñāni, the other two bodies also merge; that is technical explanation.

But for our simple knowledge, we can say brahmanirvāṇam means freedom from punar-janma; he is one with the Lord, which is otherwise called vidēha-muktiḥ and Kṛṣṇa says for this freedom. You can attain knowledge at any time. You can get the knowledge as a youth, as a middle aged person, even during the fag end of the life, you get this knowledge, and mōkṣaḥ is assured. Thus with the jīvan-muktiḥ and vidēha-mukti, Kṛṣṇa concludes this sthira-prajñā topic, which is the final topic of this chapter.

Hari Om.

Thus in the Upaniṣads of the glorious Bhagavad-Gīta, the science of the Eternal, the scripture of Yōga, the dialogue between Sri Kṛṣṇa and Arjuna, ends the second discourse entitled: Sāṅkya Yōga.

034 CHAPTER 02, SUMMARY

Today I would like to give the summary of the 2nd chapter of the Gīta. The second-chapter can be broadly divided into four parts; the first part is from verse No.1 to 10, which is Arjuna śaraṇagathi part. Then is the second part, from verse No.11 to 38; which is jñāna-yōga part; then comes the third part, from verse No.39 to 53, which can be termed karma-yōgaḥ; and finally from verse No.54 to 72; end of the chapter, can be called sthira prajñā portion. So Arjuna śaraṇagathi, jñāna-yōgaḥ, karma-yōgaḥ and sthira prajñā, these are the four parts of the 2nd chapter.

Now I will briefly sum up the 4 topics discussed in this chapter. This Arjuna śaraṇagathi, we can understand only if you remember the topic of the first chapter. This portion is more an extension or a continuity of the first chapter. In the first chapter, we saw that Arjuna discovered the problem of saṃsāra, in the oddest place, the battlefield and we saw what is the problem of saṃsāra; it is nothing but the problem of rāgaḥ, śōkaḥ and mōhaḥ.

Rāgaḥ meaning the problem of attachment; this is not Arjuna's problem, this is the human problem; the object of attachment will vary from individual to individual, but the problem of attachment is universal. And this is the fundamental human problem, which Arjuna had all the time but he discovers the problem with its intensity in the first chapter; kṛpayā parayā''viṣṭō. Vyāsācārya uses the word kṛpa. Kṛpa here means attachment.

Once a person has this attachment, then there is the natural consequence called sorrow, which was called viṣādaḥ. Grief. The grief because of two reasons, when I am attached to something, I never want to lose that particular thing. I want that particular thing or person to be eternally with me. I intellectually know that it is against the law of creation; but I forget that universal and I want the object of attachment to be with me; I never want to lose that object. And once I try to hold on to that object, any type of loss of that object; whether it is actual loss or even an imaginary loss of that object; I will not be able to withstand.

And Arjuna was intensely attached to Bhīṣma, Drōṇa, he had not lost them; but he visualises this war and also possible death of these people and he continuing to survive without these people. The very imaginary loss of Bhīṣma, Drōṇa etc. Arjuna is not able to withstand and therefore he goes through the problem of sorrow, not born of actual loss, but born of imaginary loss. This is the second problem of saṁsāra. Śōkaḥ.

Then the third problem is once the mind is under the grip of rāgaḥ and śōkaḥ, it loses the capacity to judge things properly; it loses the capacity to discriminate between right and wrong; what is dharma and adharma, which is called mōhaḥ; dharma-adharma avivēka. Incapacity to decide what is the right course of action or we can say, human conflict. And therefore the third problem of saṁsāra is mōhaḥ or conflict; this rāgaḥ, śōkaḥ and mōhaḥ, which is otherwise called saṁsāra; Arjuna intensely faces in the first chapter.

Not only he faces or discovers this problem, he also tries to solve the problem by himself and therefore he gives a big lecture to Lord Kṛṣṇa. In fact in the first chapter, the roles are reverse, Arjuna gives a sermon to Lord Kṛṣṇa. And poor Kṛṣṇa had to listen to Arjuna's teaching. Prārabdha did not spare Kṛṣṇa.

Kṛṣṇa withstands all this nonsense; Arjuna says that it is not proper to fight this war, and it is adharma and therefore I will run away from this battlefield and Arjuna tries to solve the problem by himself and Kṛṣṇa keeps quiet because if Arjuna is going to solve, why should I poke my nose into his affairs and get cut. And this is how the first chapter ends. Arjuna discovers the problem and tries to solve the problem by himself; with this first chapter ends.

In the 2nd chapter, we get the continuity; since Arjuna has not surrendered to Lord Kṛṣṇa, Arjuna has not felt the need to seek external help, Kṛṣṇa chooses to remain silent. And in the beginning of the 2nd chapter, we find, Arjuna discovers the helplessness; which is called in Sāṅskṛīt, kārpaṇya dōṣaḥ.

Unless we discover the helplessness, we will never surrender to the Lord. We will use the word, I surrender, as Dayānanda Swamiji says that daily during Arathi, you will say; tan man dhan sab kuch terā, I surrender my body, my wealth, everything to you. And it is all mechanical verbal surrender; it is never real surrender; because, next day, again he repeats it second time. How many bodies you have got to surrender? Yesterday only you gave the body. And the poor Lord tries to find out, what is he offering the next day! From that it is very clear, surrender is more a lip service, real surrender takes place only once because in that surrender, the surrenderer himself is gone, no more there to surrender again next day. Therefore, real surrender we do not have. Arjuna also discovers the helplessness and really surrenders because when the surrender follows discovery of helplessness, then and then alone, it becomes true surrender. Therefore,

Therefore in the first chapter Arjuna discovers the problem and tries to solve the problem.

In the second-chapter beginning alone, Arjuna discovers the helplessness or kārpaṇyam and once the helplessness is discovered, then what is the natural consequence: like a drowning person, who wants to hold on to anything available; Arjuna looks around; thank God, he is lucky, if we look around, the other people who are in front, who are around, are equally drowning. They are like the straw, if you hold on to them, and both of you will drown.

Arjuna was lucky, he had pārthāya pratibōdhitām bhagavatā nārāyaṇēna svayam, he had Lord Narayana himself under his feet. And therefore, Arjuna surrenders to Lord Kṛṣṇa. Just the key verse in this portion is:

कार्पण्यदोषोपहतस्वभावः

पृच्छामि त्वाम् धर्मसंमूढचेताः ।

यच्छ्रेयः स्यान्निश्चितं ब्रूहि तन्मे

[kārpaṇyadōṣōpahatasvabhāvaḥ
pṛcchāmi tvām dharmasāmmūḍhacētāḥ |
yacchreyaḥ syānniścitaṁ brūhi tanmē](#)

And the last line is crucial.

शिष्यस्तेऽहं शाधि मां त्वां प्रपन्नम् ॥ २.७ ॥

śiṣyastē:'haṁ śādhi mām tvām prapannam ||2.7||

I am surrendering at your feet; that means what? I am not going to suggest any solutions. I am going to empty my mind, so that you can fill up my mind with your wisdom. So the primary sign of a disciple is empty the mind and hand over the empty mind; do not say already it is empty, if it is already empty, no problem, generally people have so many false notions, by reading all kinds of books and independent philosophies they have; all these are false notions; prejudices, all these things are to be given up, which alone is indicated by shaving the head, when a person takes sanyāsa. Sanyāsa-āśrama; he shaves the head, shaving the head is removing all the notions, every hair represents one false notion. How much hairs?

So many false ideas we have got and in fact with that false ideas, we listen, not only we listen, we judge the teacher with those false ideas, and we even filter the teachings with our own prejudices. And that will not work. Arjuna, keeps aside all of them, he says; so the Arjuna, the yajamāna, the battlefield he entered; as yajamāna, the yajamāna is converted into śiṣya; and the moment Arjuna becomes a disciple, Kṛṣṇa who is a driver; an ordinary driver, he gets converted into the Pārthasārathy, gets converted into Gīta upadēśa karta, Krishnam vande jagat gurum. After this particular verse, kārpaṇyadōṣōpahata, Kṛṣṇa becomes Pārthasārathy, Kṛṣṇa becomes a jagat guru, only after this verse.

That means what? A jñāni becomes a guru, not because of jñāni's choice, but because of the choice of the other person. As long as I do not want to learn, even the greatest jñāni cannot help me; the moment I open my mind, and that is indicated by sāṣṭāṅga namaskāra. That is first job, a śiṣyā should do, to indicate his humility, to indicate the emptiness of his mind, the first job he should do is to tadviddhi praṇipātēna, in the 4th chapter he talks about that. First humility should be shown by sāṣṭāṅga namaskāra. An arrogant intellect will find it extremely difficult to do namaskāra and Arjuna is the most arrogant person in the world because he is a Kṣatriya, a Dhananjayā, so many names and glories and wealth and position and beauty and wives; Arjuna such a person but he surrenders. People often ask the question?

Why did Kṛṣṇa teach Arjuna, not Dharmaputra, not Bhīma, not Nakula, Not Sahadeva, Not Bhīṣma, Not Drōṇa, and people scratch their head trying to find out an answer. The answer is very simple, Arjuna was taught because he asked for it. Very simple. Dharmaputra never said śiṣyaste:'haṁ, Bhīṣma, never said śiṣyaste:'haṁ, Arjuna said śiṣyaste:'haṁ; if Duryōdhanā had said śiṣyaste:'haṁ, Kṛṣṇa would have taught him also.

So thus between the first verse and tenth verse, we find Arjuna getting converted into discipline, then the channels of communication is open and therefore, from the 11th verse of the Gīta, the actual śāstraṁ takes place. Up to 2nd chapter, 10th verse, Gīta śāstraṁ has not taken place, it is Upōdgadha prakaraṇam, it is only introduction. The actual śāstra begins from the 11th verse. This is the essence of Arjuna Śaraṇagathi.

Now we will go to the 2nd topic of the second-chapter. From verse No.11 to verse No.38. This portion is the central or main theme of this chapter; viz., jñāna-yōga, otherwise known as sāṅkhya yōga; both are synonymous. Jñāna-yōga and sāṅkhya yōgaḥ are synonymous; that this portion is important; we can easily know because the second-chapter is titled sāṅkhya-yōgaḥ.

And what is the gist of this portion we should remember; not only now, throughout the Bhagavat Gīta, you should remember this portion, therefore you have to keep on reading this portion again and again. Because this is the foundation stone upon which all the other chapters are developed.

Therefore this portion from 11 to 38, especially from 11 to 25, that portion is very very important portion which has the essence of all the upaniṣads. And what is the theme of this portion?

Kṛṣṇa discusses the essential nature of every individual. What is jīva-svarūpam? Who am I in reality? Kṛṣṇa has to talk about that because, unfortunately we do not have a very clear idea about ourselves; we have taken ourselves for granted that we never want to know who we are and we are spending all our life, studying physics, chemistry, economics, dance, music, plan; we do research about everything, except ourselves, because we think we know. Kṛṣṇa wants to remove that notion tell Arjuna, better you know what you are.

And in this portion Kṛṣṇa shows that individual is not the physical body. Thinking that I am the physical body is the biggest misconception we are born with. And the next misconception is, I am the mind with which I transact with the world. So this body and mind are considered falsely as ourselves; Kṛṣṇa says you are not so:

वासंसि जीर्णानि यथा विहाय नवानि गृह्णाति नरोऽपराणि ।
तथा शरीराणि विहाय जीर्णान्यन्यानि संयाति नवानि देही ॥ २.२२ ॥

vāsāṁsi jīrṇāni yathā vihāya navāni gr̥hṇāti narō'parāṇi |
tathā śarīrāṇi vihāya jīrṇāni
anyāni saṁyāti navāni dēhī || 2.22 ||

This body is only a temporary dress that you make use of which you will discard at the time of death. And if you have got any doubt with regard to the fact that of this statement, you study your own sleep state; in the state of deep sleep, you are never transacting through your physical body but still you are existent as a being. I do not function through my physical body. When I wake up, I use this body, and when I go to sleep, I keep my physical body aside as it were; And not only the body is kept aside during sleep, even the mind is not operational during sleep; thus body and mind are like the two goggles; two glasses of the spectacles; I use them for transaction before going to bed I remove. It is used and removed. Similarly, body and mind are only media of transaction you are not them.

Then the next natural question is if I am not the body and mind, then who am I? Then Kṛṣṇa reveals that you are the consciousness principle; cit rūpaḥ tvam, caitanya svarūpaḥ tvam; jñāna svarūpaḥ tvam, vijñāna svarūpaḥ tvam; prajñāna svarūpaḥ tvam; all are synonyms; cit, caitanyam, jñānam, vijñānam, prajñānam, all these mean the same in this context; consciousness.

Then the natural question next is: what is exactly consciousness? What is this caitanyam? So this we discussed in the class; which you should remember, all the time. What is this consciousness; remember the important point;

Consciousness is not part of this body; not product of this body; and not even a property of this body; it is neither a part; a product; or a property of this body.

Then point No.2 I said, the consciousness which is not part or product or property of the body is an independent entity which pervades and enlivens this body. It is an independent entity, which pervades and enlivens the body. Point No.2.

And the next point I said was; this consciousness which pervades and illumines this body is not limited by the boundaries of this body. It is beyond the boundaries of the body. This is the third point.

Then the 4th and final point that we saw was that this consciousness which is beyond the boundaries of this body continues to survive, continues to exist, even after this body collapses. These are the four main points we should remember.

And to remember I gave you an example; which you should remember; just as the light which are you are experiencing on the hand, is not part, product or property of the hand; it is an independent entity, which pervades and illumines the hand, the light is not limited by the boundaries of the hand and the light continues to survive even after the removal of the hand. The only difference is what: when the hand is there; light is visible; and when the hand is removed; light continues but you are not able to see that. This consciousness-principle, otherwise known as Dēhi; otherwise known as śārīri, otherwise known as ātma, is your true nature.

Kṛṣṇa talked about 6 main features of this ātma. In the portion from 11 to 25 Kṛṣṇa talked about six main features of this ātma.

The first feature is ātma is Nityaḥ. You can understand. Nityaḥ means it is eternal. Body is not, mind is not; but ātma, the caitanyam is eternal.

Then the second feature that Kṛṣṇa conveyed is ātma Satyaḥ. Ātma satyaḥ, which means it is a reality; not a reality, the reality, which exists independently, whereas everything else is dependent on the ātma.

नासतो विद्यते भावो नाभावो विद्यते सतः ।
उभयोरपि दृष्टोऽन्तस्त्वनयोस्तत्त्वदर्शिभिः ॥ २.१६ ॥

nāsatō vidyatē bhāvō nābhāvō vidyatē sataḥ |
ubhayōrapī dr̥ṣṭō'ntastvanayōstattvadarśibhiḥ || 2.16 ||

One of the very important verse of this portion. Śankarācārya writes a very elaborate commentary on that. Ātma satyaḥ.

Then the third important feature that Kṛṣṇa presents ātma-sarvagataḥ. Consciousness is all pervading. The only difference being, it is contactable, whereas outside the body, it is not visible; like what the hand; light is visible upon the hand, because of the availability of the reflecting medium; beyond the hand the light is, but not vyaktaṁ. In Sāṅskṛit we have a good word. Light is vyaktaṁ upon the hand, it is avyaktaṁ beyond the hand. Caitanyam is vyaktaṁ in the body; but outside it is not vyaktaṁ. Therefore the third feature is ātma sarvagataḥ. Like electricity is evident where the light is; but in between in the wire, electricity is, but not visible.

Then the fourth feature Kṛṣṇa presents is also important; this is the foundation chapter, Kṛṣṇa only presents the words; but the details Kṛṣṇa will build up, like the newsreader, headlines; and then the elaboration. Second chapter is headline chapter; he only shows the direction. Apramēyaḥ.

And what do you mean by that? Ātma is ever the experiencer; never the experienced. It is ever the experiencer; it can never be experienced. Anything that you experience in life is called anātma. And ātma is ever the subject; never the object. Remember a camera, the camera can click and take the pictures of every blessed thing, except what? The camera itself. Every photo proves the camera, but the photo does not include the camera. Every experience proves the ātma, but no experience includes the ātma.

Therefore I am ever the seer, never the seen. This is called apramēyaḥ. This is the fourth feature.

Then the fifth feature that Kṛṣṇa gives is ātma akartā-abhōktā; (we have include both together) which means it never does any action; therefore, it does not reap the result of any action. Akartha means no connection with karma; abhōktā means, no connection with karma-phalam. Karmabhi nāsti phalam api nāsti. Karma karmaphala athīthaḥ ātma. That is why it is said

न पुण्यं न पापं न सौख्यं न दुःखं
न मंत्रो न तीर्थं न वेदा न यज्ञाः .
अहं भोजनं नैव भोज्यं न भोक्ता
चिदानंदरूपः शिवोऽहं शिवोऽहम् ॥ ४ ॥

na puṇyam na pāpam na saukhyam na duḥkham na maṁtrō na tīrtham na vēda na yajñāḥ.
aham bhōjanam naiva bhōjyam na bhōktā
cidānamdarūpaḥ śivō:'ham śivō:'ham ॥ 4 ॥

So it is neither a doer nor an enjoyer. This is the fifth feature. Then the 6th feature is ātma nirvikāraḥ. Na jāyatē mriyatē vā kadācit nāyam bhūtvā bhavitā vā na bhūyaḥ.

This is an important concept or important feature. Kṛṣṇa himself wants to underline. Therefore he changes the meter of this slōkā. Suddenly he changes the meter. It is a long meter. That you will get a jerk. Just to wake you up. Kṛṣṇa changes the meter.

Nirvikāraḥ, free from all six modifications; the modifications being, potential existence, birth, growth, change, decay and death. Which we saw in Tatva Bodha. asti jāyatē vardhatē vipariṇamatē apakṣiyatē vinaśyati. These are called six fold modifications; ṣaṭ vihāra rahitāḥ. And Kṛṣṇa wants Arjuna to recognise this ātma and not only the ātma should recognise, the most important thing is I should learn to claim this ātma as myself; and I should learn to look upon the body and mind as incidental instruments, which is a temporary gift from the Lord. And instruments will go away, daily during the night, it is temporarily lost; but later the body will be taken permanently once I know that I am not the body, they are only instruments, then I do not have abhimāna, and therefore the mortality of the body, old age of the body, do not torment me. So this is jñāna-yōga portion. Knowing the ātma and claiming the ātma as myself.

And Kṛṣṇa presents this jñāna-yōga as a permanent remedy for all problems. This is the second topic.

Then the third topic is karma-yōgaḥ, from verse No.39 to 53. Even though jñāna-yōga is permanent solution, there is a problem that since jñāna-yōga is a subtle topic, it is not that easy for everyone to comprehend. Kṛṣṇa himself tells that:

आश्चर्यवत्पश्यति कश्चिदेनमाश्चर्यवद्भवति तथैव चान्यः ।
आश्चर्यवच्चैनमन्यः शृणोति श्रुत्वाप्येनं वेद न चैव कश्चित् ॥ २.२९ ॥

āścaryavatpāśyati kaścidēnam āścaryavadvadati tathaiva cānyaḥ | āścaryavaccainamanyaḥ śṛṇōti
śrutvā'pyēnaṁ vēda na caiva kaścit || 2.29 ||

Ātma is such a topic that you can study about it for 25 years and still successfully be ignorant of what that ātma is. Karma-yōga I understood. Viśva-rūpa understood. First chapter understood well. Who blew which conch, etc. Bhakthi understood. But one topic not understood. What is this ātma; that means it is the subtlest topic. A person will find it difficult, unless he prepares the mind; therefore Kṛṣṇa wants to consider those people, like people wanting reservation, so that everybody comes to the level; who find jñāna-yōga true dry, too irrelevant or too difficult for grasping. Kṛṣṇa says: do not worry; drop jñāna-yōga; do not bother about that. Then what to do: jñāna prāpthiḥ, if it is not there, work for jñāna-yōgyatha prāpthi. Get jñāna-yōgyatha. How to get? Practice karma-yōga.

Then Kṛṣṇa briefly talks about karma-yōga and what is the essence we saw; proper-action plus proper-attitude is equal to karma-yōga. Proper action plus proper-attitude is karma-yōga.

Now we should know what is proper action? Later Kṛṣṇa divides the action into three types; the best one, the mediocre, and the worst one. Uttama, madhyama, adhama, known as sātāvika, rājasa and tāmasa.

What is the best action, which is appropriate for karma-yōga? Sātāvika karma. What is sātāvika karmā? An action in which the beneficiaries are more in number. Not I alone am the beneficiary. I also am included; but the beneficiaries are more, the more the beneficiaries are, then the greater the action is; which they call in the śāstra, Nişkāma karma. That is I have got an expanded mind, whatever I do, I take into account not only myself, if I take into account, the entire family, my mind is expanded a little more, I take into account the entire village, still expanded; I take into account, the entire society, the entire nation, the entire world, why the entire environment, environment-friendly action. That is called ideal karma-yōgaḥ. Like throwing the dirt from my house outside my house. Therefore sātāvika action is selfless-action. That is uttama.

As somebody said a child was reading a book: How to bring up children; then the parent asked; you are a child now; why do you read this now. Then the child replied, I am reading to check whether you are bringing us up properly!

Therefore, the children can criticise after you do everything and therefore it may be a thankless job; so whatever may be the consequence; take it as prasāda.

Therefore what is proper attitude? Doing action, as offering to the Lord and receiving the result as the prasāda; as the gift of the Lord. These two put together is karma-yōga. More details we will be seeing in the third chapter.

And then Kṛṣṇa talks about the benefit of this karma-yōga; not that karma-yōga will give mōkṣaḥ, it should be very clear; Kṛṣṇa or śāstra never accept karma-yōga as a means of liberation. So then what is karma-yōga meant for? It is to give jñāna-yōga yōgyatha prāpthiḥ. It will make me fit to enter jñāna-yōga.

यदा ते मोहकलिलं बुद्धिर्व्यतितरिष्यति ।
तदा गन्तासि निर्वेदं श्रोतव्यस्य श्रुतस्य च ॥ २.५२ ॥

yadā tē mōhakalilarṃ buddhirvyatitarīṣyati |
tadā gantāsi nirvēdaṃ śrōtavasya śrutasya ca || 2.52 ||

To put in Tatva Bōdha language, one will get sādhana-catuṣṭāya-sampathi by karma-yōga. So this is the third topic from verse No.39 to 53.

And then from 54 to 72, we get the fourth topic; which is also important topic, that is sthira-prajñā or sthitha-prajñā, both are same. And what do you mean by the word sthira- prajñā. A person who has successfully gone through karma-yōga and jñāna-yōga. And therefore who has clearly gained self-knowledge; that I am the ātma, I am not the body and mind. Not only he has got this knowledge, he has assimilated this knowledge and he has converted this intellectual knowledge to emotional strength. Because without emotional strength you cannot face the crisis of life; therefore knowledge must be converted into emotional strength; first become prajñāh, then you become stira prajñāh. Prajñāh means intellectual knowledge he has; sthira prajñāh means not only intellectual knowledge but emotional strength to face life.

And in this sthira-prajñā-portion we have got two sub-divisions; one is how to become sthira prajñā, that is one topic.

That is after learning Vēdānta, how to convert into emotional strength? Because in the class by studying the Gīta, I can get the knowledge; people intellectual knowledge, I do understand; Swamiji but worry is not leaving me. That means by śravaṇam, you get only prajñāḥ.

We have to initiate and work independently, guru is helpless. Guru can only convert a person into prajñāḥ. Ajñāḥ to prajñāḥ. Ajñāḥ is ajñāni. Guru will convert ajñāḥ into prajñāḥ; but guru cannot do anything to convert prajñāḥ into sthira prajñāḥ. That effort śiṣyā has to take separately. Otherwise knowledge will remain in one corner. Like water and oil and the life's problems, like love; hate; anger, greed, etc. will continue making life more miserable, because people will say: What is the use of attending to Gīta pravacan, all useless teachings, etc.

So therefore that effort has to be śiṣyās. So therefore first sub-division how to become sthira-prajñāḥ and second sub-division is if I have become a sthira-prajñāḥ, what transformation would have taken place in my life.

In Sāṅskṛit we say sthira-prajñā-sādhanāni and sthira-prajñā-lakṣaṇāni. First we will take up the sādhanāni. How to convert your Gīta study into emotional strength.

Kṛṣṇa prescribes three exercises; or three disciplines; exercise not lifting hands 1, 2, 3, etc. mental-exercises. What are those three?

No.1 indriya-nigrahaḥ; sense-mastery. Which should be there even before coming to Gīta. But we always come through back door. So Kṛṣṇa says if you have not done that sādhanā already, better you concentrate on that. And why sense-discipline is important? If that is not there, what enters your mind through your sense organs you would have no control and if every rubbish enters your mind, the world can disturb your mind; a disturbed mind cannot assimilate the Vēdānta. Therefore discipline No.1 indriya nigrahaḥ. Not suppression. Remember, it is regulation; channelisation. Direction, because suppression is as dangerous as free-let-go-philosophy.

Then the 2nd discipline that Kṛṣṇa emphasis is manō-nigrahaḥ; thought-discipline; varieties of thought occur in my mind; so certain thoughts are deliberately entertained by me; but many of the thoughts are not deliberately entertained; thoughts come just as they like; in between class, so many thought. In Dhyāna so many thoughts come unwontedly over which we do have control because thoughts are determined not only by our sub-conscious or unconscious, our previous janma can decide our thoughts. People say: Swamiji sometimes I get such dirty and rubbish thoughts which I have never thought in this life; I fear it. Only saving grace is that nobody will see what is happening in my mind.

Now Kṛṣṇa says: do not bother about the arrival of thoughts, because that is not under your control; because past you cannot change. But you can do and what you should do, is; let that come; coming is not under your control; but whether I should patronise those thoughts, perpetuate that thoughts or not I can consciously decide. Indriyasyēndriyasyārthē rāgadvēṣau vyavasthitau..... (2.34). certain thoughts will come; but make sure that you decide whether to perpetuate it or not. If it is not healthy for absorption of Vēdānta, nip it in the bud; do not feel guilty for its arrival, deliberate from nipping it in the bud. Manō-nigrahaḥ.

Third and final-discipline is nidhidhyāsanam. Dwelling upon this teaching, as often as possible. It may be reading the book or it may be sharing your thoughts with somebody else, or repeated listening in one form or the other; with closed eyes or without closed eyes; open eyes, dwell upon the teaching. If these three you are ready to do, gradually you will get assimilated.

More details Kṛṣṇa will give in the 6th chapter. 2nd chapter is only introduction to the whole Gītā. By this one will become sthira-prajñāḥ.

And the next topic is sthira-prajñāḥ-lakṣaṇāni. Once I have assimilated, then what transformation it will bring about; Kṛṣṇa gives many slōkās, I will emphasize two points.

First thing is Freedom from binding desires born out of self-sufficiency, self-fulfilment. This knowledge will give me such a mental fulfillment that I do not have any binding desires; whatever I want to do thereafter, they are only preferences, I will like to do them, and if they are done and successful; fine; if they are not fulfilled, also it is fine. They are called non-binding desires. So all binding desires are gone; all binding desires are gone, only non-binding desires if any, which are harmless. And this is because of what self-sufficiency. We can call it pūrṇatvaṁ. I do not miss anything in life.

And the 2nd important trait of this assimilation is samatvam or equanimity of mind, which means freedom from rāgaḥ, bhayaḥ krōdhaḥ, etc.; turbulences caused by fear, turbulences caused by anger, by jealousy, all of them do not come to me; I enjoy samatvam, in spite of ups and down in life; therefore constant tranquility, is the second benefit and to convey this idea, Kṛṣṇa gives the example of the ocean, just as the ocean is ever full, irrespective of rain and irrespective of rivers, merging into the ocean or not. Therefore pūrṇatvaṁ and samatvam are the main traits of sthira-prajñāḥ. And Kṛṣṇa concludes the chapter by saying that this sthira-prajñāḥ is a free bird, wherever he goes he never faces any conflict; not only he enjoys freedom while living; he enjoys freedom after death also; both jīvan-muktiḥ and vidēha-muktiḥ.

With this fourth and final topic of the 2nd chapter is over. Even though 4 topics are there, jñāna-yōga being the central theme, the chapter is called Sāṅkya-yōga.

अर्जुन उवाच
ज्यायसी चेत्कर्मणस्ते मता बुद्धिर्जनार्दन । तत्किं कर्मणि घोरे माम् नियोजयसि केशव ॥३.१॥

jyāyasi cētkarmaṇastē matā buddhirjanārdana |
tatkiṁ karmaṇi ghōrē mām niyōjayasi kēśava ||3.1||

अर्जुन उवाच Arjuna uvāca Arjuna asked जनार्दन janārdana Oh Kṛṣṇa ! चेत् cēt If बुद्धिः मता ते buddhiḥ matā tē – Self-knowledge is considered by You ज्यायसि कर्मणः jyāyasi karmaṇaḥ to be superior to action, तत् tat then, किं नियोजयसि माम् kiṁ niyōjayasi mām Why do You engage me घोरे कर्मणि ghōrē karmaṇi in this cruel action, केशव kēśava Oh Kṛṣṇa?

1. Arjuna asked – Oh Kṛṣṇa! If Self-knowledge is considered by You to be superior to action, then, why do You engage me in this cruel action, Oh Kṛṣṇa?

The third chapter of the Gīta begins with a question from Arjuna, which is based on the teaching given in the 2nd chapter. Arjuna is confused with regard to Kṛṣṇa's teaching, even though Kṛṣṇa has been very clear. Arjuna's confusion is because of the following reason. In the 2nd chapter, Kṛṣṇa began the teaching with jñāna-yōga or self-knowledge. He said:

अशोच्यानन्वशोचस्त्वं प्रज्ञावादांश्च भाषसे
गतासूनगतासूंश्च नानुशोचन्ति पण्डिताः ॥२.११॥

aśocyānanvaśocastvaṁ prajñāvādāṁśca bhāṣasē
gatāsūnagatāsūṁśca nānuśocanti paṇḍitāḥ ||2.11||

The main statement being: paṇḍitāḥ na anuśocanti, the wise-people do not grieve in life. Through this Kṛṣṇa emphasised the point that the wisdom alone is the remedy for the problem of grief, and from that we get a corollary that ignorance alone is the cause of the grief. This is the foundation of vēdānta. Ajñānāth-Duḥkam, jñānāth-sukham. Ignorance causes sorrow; knowledge gives happiness or freedom from sorrow.

Thus Kṛṣṇa has emphasised jñānam in the very beginning of the teaching. And at the end of the second-chapter also, Kṛṣṇa has emphasised jñānam alone; talking about sthira-prajñā elaborately. Arjuna's question was about sthira-prajñā which means a man of clear knowledge; and Kṛṣṇa spent 17-18 ślōkās or more to talk about the greatness of a jñāni and he concluded saying:

स्थित्वाऽस्यामन्तकालेऽपि ब्रह्मनिर्वाणमृच्छति ॥२.७२॥

[ēṣā brāhmī sthitiḥ pārtha naināṃ prāpya vimuhyati |
sthitvā'syāmantakālē'pi brahmanirvāṇamṛcchati ||2.72||](#)

Thus a jñāni will never have delusion in life. Not only a jñānam is a solution for sorrow; jñānam is the medicine for conflicts in life also. And in the first chapter we saw, Arjuna's primary problems were these two; sorrows and conflicts and in the second-chapter beginning, and at the end of the chapter, Kṛṣṇa said that jñānam is the common medicine, for both the problems, for sorrow and mōhaḥ, delusion. Therefore, naturally Arjuna gets the idea that we should work for the jñānam medicine.

And naturally, how do we get jñānam. Only by going in search of the source of knowledge. Either going in search of a guru; or going in search of a gurukula. So therefore pursuit of jñānam, knowledge is presented as the remedy for the problem of saṃsāra. In the beginning of the 2nd chapter AND in the end jñānam is emphasised, but in the middle of the second-chapter in the Kṛṣṇa talks about karma very much.

मा कर्मफलहेतुर्भूर्मा ते सङ्गोऽस्त्वकर्मणि ॥ २.४७॥

[karmaṇyēvādhikārastē mā phalēṣu kadācana |
mā karmaphalahēturbhūrmā tē saṅgō'stvakarmaṇi || 2.47 ||](#)

योगस्थः कुरु कर्माणि सङ्गं त्यक्त्वा धनञ्जय ।
सिद्धिं असिद्ध्योः समो भूत्वा समत्वं योग उच्यते ॥२.४८॥

[yōgasthaḥ kuru karmāṇi saṅgaṃ tyaktvā dhanañjaya |
siddhyasiddhyōḥ samō bhūtvā samatvaṃ yōga ucyatē ||2.48||](#)

In this middle portion, Kṛṣṇa strongly advises Arjuna that Karmāṇi kuru. Arjuna! perform action. Thus in the beginning and end; jñānam is glorified and in the middle Kṛṣṇa is talking about karma; therefore Arjuna's conflict is: "should I go after jñānam or should I dedicate my life for karma. should I follow jñāna-yōga, or karma-yōga should I follow?"

And between these two, Arjuna naturally has an inclination to give up the karma here; because in this context, because the Karma which he has to do here is extremely unpleasant. Therefore he is looking for an escapism-route. Because here not a happy war; even though normally Arjuna loves to fight, because he is a kṣatriya and he is a great archer; in fact his hands itches for fighting; when for 13 years he was in forest; he was waiting for this Mahābhāratha war. Even though normally Arjuna likes fighting, here in front, Bhīṣma, Drōṇa etc. are standing; therefore he does not like to do karma, and therefore he is looking for an escapist route.

And in the 2nd chapter, Kṛṣṇa has talked about the glory of jñānam. Therefore, Arjuna feels that it is a nice opportunity; I will drop the bow and arrow and say Hey Kṛṣṇa, you have said jñānam is only remedy; therefore I want to go to some gurukulam, and study Gīta, Upaniṣad, etc. In fact, more than studying Gīta, etc. what he wants is to get out of war.

Even while Arjuna feels that he should run away from the battlefield, Arjuna remembers Kṛṣṇa's advice; yōgasthaḥ kuru Karmāṇi. Arjuna you should do your duty, which happens to be fighting the war here. Therefore Arjuna feels that Kṛṣṇa is a confusing teacher. Because we are experts in blaming others. As somebody said: To err is human, to put the blame on someone is more human. 😊

Therefore, Arjuna finds fault with Kṛṣṇa instead of finding fault with himself; Arjuna says: Hey Kṛṣṇa you are confusing me. How are you confusing? You are glorifying jñānam as the best; not even the best, the only remedy for sorrow and conflict and having glorified jñānam you are advising me to do what: to do karma. Arjuna jñānam is great. Therefore do karma. How is this? It is like saying; here is Rs.100; 100 rupees note, and then I say Rs.500 is more valuable; therefore take the 100 rupee note. How will this be? It sounds ridiculous; contradictory, unintelligent; Hey Kṛṣṇa you are doing the same thing; you glorify the jñānam and ask me to do karma.

But we should know whether Kṛṣṇa has confused Arjuna or not. Let Arjuna blame Kṛṣṇa, but we should not join Arjuna. Therefore we should make a study of the 2nd chapter to find out whether Kṛṣṇa has really confused Arjuna. You find that Kṛṣṇa has not confused.

In fact the confusion is because of improper grasping. In fact, this is a widely prevalent confusion also. People always ask the question. Karma-yōga is superior or Jñāna-yōga is superior? And some people add two more yōga. Or Bhakti-yōga is superior or Rāja-yōga is superior? Later so-many God-man, they add some more yōga; kuṇḍalini -yōga is superior or something else? So we want to compare and find out which one is superior so that we can follow whichever is the best; which is presented as different paths to mōkṣa. Karma-yōga path, jñāna-yōga path, bhakti-yōga path; rāja-yōga path; all paths leading to one goal; we will choose which one is better. This approach is very very prevalent. Arjuna also commits the same mistake. He compares karma-yōga and jñāna-yōga and he wants to dump one of them as superior. His claim is: the jñāna-yōga is superior method and therefore we should take to jñāna-yōga so that we can avoid karma also.

Here alone we should very very clearly grasp the śāstric-essence. We should never compare karma-yōga and jñāna-yōga; because comparison is possible only where there are options. Comparison is possible only where there are options; and from the second-chapter; if you clearly study, karma-yōga and jñāna-yōga are not optional sādhanās. On the other hand, both of them are equally important for every individual. Karma-yōga is the first-stage of sādhana, which makes a person fit for jñāna-yōga. It is like asking whether you want; what you call primary school or secondary school. Is there a choice? You have to go only one after the other; without going through the one, the second is impossible; that is why I said before, karma-yōga is incomplete, without jñāna-yōga; jñāna-yōga is impossible without karma-yōga. This Kṛṣṇa had made very clear in the 2nd chapter.

तदा गन्तासि निर्वेदं श्रोतव्यस्य श्रुतस्य च ॥२.५२॥

yadā tē mōhakalilam buddhiḥ vryatitariṣyati|
tadā gantāsi nirvēdaṁ śrōtavasya śrutasya ca||2.52||

Arjuna, initially you have to go through karma-yōga and prepare the mind. Mōhakalilam vyatitariṣyati; purify the mind; it is like washing the hand, before eating. Suppose someone asks; should I wash the hand or should I eat first. What will you say? should I wash the hand or should I eat the food; suppose I say eat the food, that means what; you will eat the food and not wash the hand; which is dangerous; and therefore I say you wash the hand; and you wash and go away. So what choice is there between washing and eating? Karma-yōga is washing, jñāna-yōga is eating. When I say jñāna-yōga is eating, do not think that from next class, you will get meals! So washing and eating are equally important. Then somebody says; both are important and therefore I will eat first and then wash the hand later! Therefore washing before eating is important; after eating one has to wash is a different matter. Therefore karma-yōga and Jñāna-yōga are must for everyone. Therefore there is no choice.

And when Kṛṣṇa advised Arjuna to do karma, not as an option, but as a preparatory step; therefore Kṛṣṇa's advice is: Arjuna: Do karma; purify, gain knowledge and be free. This is the essence of Gītā. Act, purify, know and be free.

This Kṛṣṇa has made very clear. No confusion. Arjuna did not listen properly and therefore he mistakes Kṛṣṇa. This is called filtered-listening. This is one of the greatest problems any student will face; when he comes to the class, he wants to listen certain things; because already he has formed a clear-cut philosophy, like some people say: in Kali-Yuga, Bhakti will only work and not Jñāna-yōga; something like this has gone into his head; karma-yōga will not work in kali-yuga. They will say for emotional-people jñāna-yōga will not work; Bhakti-yōga will only work. In Bhakti-yōga, you should cry. As such you are crying. You have to add a little more; bhakti-yōga is crying and already you are crying; like that we have got some fixed notion; and we listen with a filter in our brain; and whenever Swamiji tells which already we have thought of; Swamiji talked nicely today; because whatever he had thought of; Swamiji talked about. Then children and parents listen: when both of them are listening to the class, whenever I criticise the parents sometimes; the children note that very well. And whenever I criticise the children, the parents will note. This is called filtered-listening.

Arjuna wanted to avoid karma and therefore he did not listen properly. Kṛṣṇa's advice was karma is necessary and then jñānam is necessary.

And based on this wrong grasping, Arjuna puts this question; but the greatness of Kṛṣṇa is: Kṛṣṇa does not blame Arjuna. He does not say that you have not listened properly. Can't he do that, because the śiṣyā is blaming the guru? The greatness of the teacher is he listens to the question as though it is a fresh and intelligent question; even though it is born out of improper listening; Kṛṣṇa never blames; He teaches the whole thing once again, elaborating the importance of karma-yōga.

Thus you will find the third-chapter will elaborate karma-yōga portion, the 4th and 5th chapters will elaborate jñāna-yōga portions. With this background, we have to study Arjuna's question.

Arjuna uvāca. Arjuna asked. What did he say: Hey Janārdhana buddhiḥ jyāyasi karmaṇaḥ. Buddhiḥ means ātma-jñānam, self-knowledge. In Sānskrīt almost every word has got different meaning in different contexts, because Sānskrīt is a live language, where different suffixes and prefixes are used to one root and each affix has got a different meaning according to context. Buddhiḥ is derived from the root bud; to know and a suffix has been added thi, buddhi plus thi; this suffix according to context can mean different things; either it can refer to an object of knowledge; thi refers to the object, bud means to know, buddhiḥ can refer to an object of knowledge; buddhiḥ can refer to instrument of knowledge; buddhiḥ can refer to knowledge itself; whether it is object; whether it is instrument, whether it is knowledge itself, we have to see the context to know.

In Tamil when we ask: புத்தி இருக்கா? Buddhiḥ Irukka; in that place; buddhiḥ refers to the instrument of knowledge; but in this context the word buddhiḥ does not refer to instrument but it refers to knowledge itself. Jñānam and that too what jñānam. Ātma-jñānam. This ātma-jñānam is karmaṇaḥ-jyāyasi. Appears to be superior to karma. From your second-chapter teaching, it appears Oh Kṛṣṇa, that jñānam is superior to karma.

Why, because you have praised jñānam in the beginning, you have praised jñānam in the end also and you have presented jñānam as the remedy for sorrow and conflict and therefore I assume that jñānam is superior to karma. And then Arjuna says this is not my presentation; you yourselves have said that and he quotes; iti tē matā; this is your teaching.

And then what mischief you are doing? After glorifying jñānam, repeatedly, and talking so high of the sthira prajñā, you are asking me to do what? Mām ghōrē karmaṇi niyōjayasi. Instead of inspiring me to go to some āśrama and study the scripture, you are asking me to go to where? The battlefield and you are engaging me in action and we all know that action does not produce any knowledge.

That is why we call it karmēndriyāṇi; karmēndriyāṇi cannot produce any knowledge; if you have got any doubt, daily morning wash your room for 1 hour, and see what is the new knowledge you have gained or you want to know when is the Tamil Nadu express coming to Chennai Central. You have to gain the knowledge. You do half an hour running. Will you get this knowledge? Karma cannot produce jñānam. So you are glorifying jñānam and you are engaging me in action, which is of no use at all.

And there too, if the action is a noble action, it is a pleasant action, it will be fine. Like people come to the vote of thanks, and say that it is my pleasant duty, and he will not finish, and every one of the audience wants to rush back home, but this chap goes on talking and cashing on the nice chance to speak in front of the audience. He goes on and on, because it is a pleasant duty for him but it is an unpleasant duty for the audience! So we know that certain actions are unpleasant and certain actions are pleasant. For Arjuna if it were a pleasant action, it would have been fine. But you are engaging me in what action; ghōrē-karmaṇi, bloody action; because it involves blood flow; that too not killing Karna, which would have been fine, but in front of his mental eye, he is seeing his dear Bhīṣma and dear Drōṇa are standing. Therefore, how can I think of killing them. Therefore, mām ghōrē karmaṇi Kim-niyōjayasi. Kim means tasmāt. Why do you contradict yourselves? Glorify one thing and engage me in another thing. So Janārdhana and Kēśava are names of Lord Kṛṣṇa.

व्यामिश्रेणेव वाक्येन बुद्धिं मोहयसीव मे ।
तदेकं वद निश्चित्य येन श्रेयोऽहमाप्नुयाम् ॥३.२॥

vyāmiśrēṇēva vākyēna buddhiṃ mōhayasīva mē|
tadēkaṃ vada niścitya yēna śrēyō'hamāpnuyām||3.2||

इव व्यामिश्रेण iva vyāmiśrēṇa though seemingly contradicting vākyēna वाक्येन statements, मोहयसि मे बुद्धिम् mōhayasi mē buddhim You are confusing my intellect इव iva as it were. वद निश्चित्य vada niścitya Tell me definitely एकं तत् ēkaṁ tat one of those two येन yē na by which अहम् aham I will attain आप्नुयाम् श्रेयः āpnuyām śrēyaḥ (the supreme) good

2. Through seemingly conflicting statements, you are confusing my intellect as it were. Tell me definitely one of these two by which I will attain (the supreme) good.

Arjuna continues with the same topic. He says: vyāmiśra vākyēna you are using. Vyāmiśra-vākyam means contradictory statements; confusing statements. And what is the confusion here; you glorify jñānam and ask me to vote for karma. Election speech, this party is very good; therefore vote for the other party; that is called vyāmiśra-vākyam. So Hey Kṛṣṇa, you are supposed to be sarvajña-Īśvara; in the first chapter, I found that I was confused and to remove my confusion, I approached you and instead of removing my confusion, you have added one more confusion. Earlier I had the only confusion whether to fight or not; but now the confusion is whether it is karma or jñāna; this is another confusion. Therefore through contradictory statements; buddhiṁ mōhayasī. You are confusing my intellect. Here the word buddhiḥ should be taken as intellect. In the previous slōkā we translated buddhiḥ as knowledge; in this slōkā, we should translate as intellect. In every language, the words will have different meanings; it is true for Sānskrīṭ also. That is why Guru is required. Or else, you will get everything wrong.

But here, Arjuna uses an important expression, which is to be noted; He says you are using contradictory statements as though; that as though is very important, here Arjuna does not want to say that Kṛṣṇa is contradicting himself because Arjuna has total faith in Kṛṣṇa. How can my guru, my friend, the Lord Karuṇāmūrti confuse me. Therefore I do not want to say, you are contradicting me, it appears, as though you are contradicting. That means, in the previous slōkā, he blamed Kṛṣṇa, but by that time, Arjuna recovers himself, and puts the blame on himself; you will not teach wrongly, but I have understood wrongly. It is my mistake; this is called vinayaḥ; this is called humility; this is called faith in the teacher. Guru is illogical. That means improper attitude. That is called lack of śraddhaḥ. But at the same time, we also want it should not be blind swallowing of the statements also; because the Guru has said, it appears illogical to me; but still OK, I accept, why, because my Guru said.

If I blindly accept also, it is not proper, if I feel there is illogicality I should not swallow that. If I swallow that it is called blind faith. At the same time, I should not blame the scriptures and the teachers that is illogical; then what should I do? Instead of swallowing the seemingly illogical statement, I tell my teacher: for my understanding it appears illogical; I know that you will not be illogical; which means I have not grasped properly; therefore I would request you to teach again; and again listen; and after grasping I see whether there is any illogicality. But again if I see illogicality, what should I do? Ask again. And again ask again. How many times; until you grasp properly.

And how do I know whether I have grasped properly. When I grasp properly there will not be illogicality. There is no illogicality in our scriptures; in fact we have got one separate text called Brahma sūtrā, which is called nyāya prasthāna, which is exclusively meant for logical analysis of scriptures. Therefore, other people might have; other religions might have illogicality; because of their emphasis of faith; but in our scriptures we do not emphasis faith alone, but we emphasis understanding only. Therefore ask any number of questions; until you are convinced.

And therefore Arjuna instead of blaming Kṛṣṇa he shows his śraddhaḥ and says: Kṛṣṇa you are confusing me as it were. Through contradictory statements as it were. Two as it were.

And therefore what do I want? I won't reject you; ēkaṃ vada niścitya. Very clearly. Yēna, Therefore tell me very clearly one of the sādhanās. Either stress karma so that I will fight; or stress jñānam so that I will go away from here and look for knowledge, but your stressing both of them and that too glorifying knowledge and asking me to do karma, I do not want; tell me one thing for sure. So ēkaṃ vada niścitya very clearly. Yēna; So that by following that one path, I will either follow karma or jñāna. Swamiji, no classes are required; just tell me what I should do after getting up daily. Like that; 108 toppukaranam. We would have used the intellect in our college days; that is doubtful, because our system is memorising system; By mistake if we have used, after that there is no scope for using at all; most of the jobs are monotonous, rote jobs, where thinking is not required at all. One job we have to repeatedly do; and then we are so tired after office hours, that we do not want to think, we only want to read either star dust, or some kind of dusty book, or we want to watch ஒலியும் ஒளியும் oliyum oḷiyum.

We have not used our intellect to think in our life; which has become a big tragedy. And whenever there is a problem, they want to go to Swamiji, they go and ask him whether to buy the house in Adayār or Anna Nagar. This Swamiji should advice! 😊. Even for buying a house, or whether I should wear this dress or that dress, Swamiji should give a commandment, 10 or 20 commandemnts, so that I need not think; whereas in Vēdānta we emphasise vivēka. Śankarācārya wrote a book called Vivēkacudāmani, because we are only different from animals, only because of that faculty. If we removed that also, what happens? We are manuṣya rūpēṇa mṛgāscaranthi. Therefore Kṛṣṇa does not want to advice.

Therefore our primary importance in our scriptures is advice initially, but after some time, stop advising. Dayānanda Swami says: The bane of our culture or many cultures is advice-giving, value-preaching. In preaching and advising I only ask you to do a series of things; but in that you do not use your thinking capacity; what is required is teaching; and when I tell Satyam vadha, Swamiji says; it is teaching. But if I tell you, what is the glory of speaking truth; what are the plus points of speaking truth; what are the minus points of speaking truth; and convert it into your value; then I tell you I have given you knowledge, hereafter you decide whether to speak the untruth. I do not want to decide for you; I want only to pass some knowledge. Therefore Swamiji says preaching is initial and superficial; teaching alone will have long-term effect. But in Army, Arjuna is used to Left Right, Left right; this blind army discipline, Arjuna wants Kṛṣṇa to say jñānam or karma, so that 18 chapters are not necessary. And we also have to study them now!!

In our school days we used to say; Tennyson could not keep quiet and he wrote poems and that we have to study! Could he not have kept quiet? Like that if Kṛṣṇa had said: Arjuna fight; 18 chapters not required; but Kṛṣṇa does not want to preach; Kṛṣṇa does not want to advice; Kṛṣṇa wants to teach; in teaching alone, transformation takes place. And once a person is transformed; he knows how to decide; otherwise for everything right from Anna Nagar house to Adayār house, he will go guru for consultation. Guru becomes a consultant. An advisor.

So therefore Kṛṣṇa does not want to do that; but Arjuna is asking for that; ēkaṃ vada niścītya yēna Aham śrēyō'h āpnuyām. I will blindly follow. I am yours obediently. Yours obediently will follow your advice so that I will get śrēyah, i.e. mōkṣa. And unfortunately, mōkṣa is not through action; mōkṣa is through knowledge alone.

श्रीभगवानुवाच śrībhagavānuvāca – The Lord said: अनघ anagha Oh sinless one! अस्मिन् लोके asmin lōkē in this world, द्विविधा निष्ठा dvidvidhā niṣṭhā two fold discipline प्रोक्ता मया proktā mayā has been initiated by Me पुरा purā in the beginning (of creation) ज्ञानयोगेन jñānayōgēna in the form of Jñānayōga साङ्ख्यानाम् sāṅkhyānām for the Sāṅkhyās कर्मयोगेन karmayōgēna and in the form of Karma-yōga योगिनाम् yōginām for the householders.

The Lord said:

3. On sinless one! In this world, twofold discipline has been initiated by Me in the beginning (of creation) in the form of Jñānayōga.

One statement that Dayānanda Swamiji repeats often; He says: A value is a value only when the value of the value is valued by you. Just looks like quibbling with words; but if you really understand that, there is an important thing. A value is a value only when the value of the value is valued by you. So if I say Satyam vadha, and you do not have value for that, then you are never going to follow. In preaching I am only talking about the value; I am not conveying the value of the value. So a preacher conveys the value, which one already knows in fact; a preacher conveys the value. A teacher conveys the value of the value.

Conveying a value takes half a minute. Communicating the value of the value requires lot of talking. Similarly I can just say; karma-yōga is this; jñāna-yōga is this; this is preaching; but if I have to tell why karma-yōga and jñāna-yōga are both important; why there is no option between these two and why karma-yōga should come first; and why it should be followed by jñāna-yōga, if I tell you why, why, why, why, etc. it is not preaching; it is teaching. We have had enough of preaching; we require teaching; that is what Kṛṣṇa does in Gīta. Therefore Kṛṣṇa is not going to advice Arjuna. He is not going to say: I am telling; go and fight; he is going to say why karma is important. So he starts with this slōkā; this is a very important slōkā; this is the foundation for the third chapter.

ज्ञानयोगेन साङ्ख्यानां कर्मयोगेन योगिनाम् ॥३.३॥

[loke'smin dvidvidhā niṣṭhā purā proktā mayā'nagha |
jñānayōgena sāṅkhyānām karmayōgena yōginām ||3.3||](#)

Śankarācārya quotes this very often in his commentary. What is the idea conveyed here; we should understand essence very well. What the scriptures point out is, that with regard to the sādhana; karma-yōga sādhana, and jñāna-yōga sādhana, there is no option at all. Everyone has to go through karma-yōga first; like washing the hands, prepares me for eating; but washing the hands does not remove my hunger; karmayōga prepares me for knowledge; karma-yōga does not remove the problem of saṁsāra; therefore we should remember, karma-yōga can never give liberation; but at the same time, karma-yōga alone can give preparation for jñāna-yōga. That is what I said that day. Jñāna-yōgyatha-prāpthi will come through karma-yōga.

And we all are born, Ayōgya. Do not think badly. We are all born ayōgya; ayōgya means unfit for jñāna-yōga. How do you know; very simple, the scriptures themselves present jñāna-yōga only at the end of the vēdās. If we are all fit for jñāna-yōga, we can start with jñāna-yōga, then jñāna-yōga will be pūrva-bhāga and karma-yōga will not be antaḥ-bhāga, because after jñāna-yōga, karma-yōga is not required. Therefore the whole vēda will be jñāna-yōga only. The very fact, that the jñāna-kāṇḍa is at the very end of the vēda shows that vēdā wants us to prepare us for that, which means we are all unprepared.

And of course, there are exceptions to the rules; when I say we are not prepared, it means 99.99% is not prepared for jñāna-yōga; therefore everyone requires karma-yōga and when there are exceptions. Śāstra says in the case of those exceptions, they can straight away go to jñāna-yōga. People say Ramaṇa Mahaṛṣi; the very young age, he was interested in vēdānta, and then he went to Thiruvannamali and in fact he never did any karma and he got enlightenment, they say. You cannot say that I will also do that and go wearing a loin cloth. That is only what is remaining to be done by you!!

So therefore what worked for Ramaṇa need not work for all people. In fact, will not work for all people, he is more an exception, than rule; he is more a spiritual-genius than an ordinary-person; just as a Rāmanujam was a maths genius without going through the regular thing; his teachers themselves did not understand what he was telling; Even now research is going on. He had said that he will not go to school, whereas in our case, it is not coming even after going to school!! By going to school, he does not get and he refuses to go to school and wants to become a Rāmanujam. How foolish it is; never quote the exception.

Therefore we have got mahātmas, who never went through all the stages; but what śāstra says that they went through the earlier stages in their earlier life and they would have gone through karma-yōga, in previous janma. Therefore brought forward a/c it has come. So in every janma we have a b/f of 65 paise to our credit. All the b/f is in the debit. For them b/f is very high; and therefore, we all should go through karma-yōga, which means religious-life, the details will be given in this chapter. Then once we have prepared the mind, thereafter, we have to necessarily go through jñāna-yōga and attain liberation. This is one lesson that we should remember. For karma-yōga and jñāna-yōga sādhana, there is no option; everyone should go through both.

The next lesson that we should understand is: parallelly the scriptures talk about two types of life styles also; called āśramas; parallelly, and in this particular slōkā, Kṛṣṇa uses the word niṣṭa; the word niṣṭa in this slōkā means āśrama or life-style. And we have got four āśramas mentioned in the śāstrās; for us all the four āśramas not relevant now; but two āśramas are relevant; gṛhastha-āśrama m, a householders-lifestyle and sanyāsa-āśrama, a renunciate's life-style. An active social-lifestyle and a relatively-passive and secluded-life-style.

And the scriptures point out that of these two āśramas known as gṛhasthā-āśrama and sanyāsa-āśrama; otherwise called pravṛtti-niṣṭa or nivṛtti-niṣṭa, of these two āśrama, one āśrama is designed for karma-yōga, and another āśrama is designed for jñāna-yōga. And what are the āśramas you can easily guess. Grihasthāśrama is designed for karma-yōga, it is activity-pradhāna. Karma-pradhāna-āśrama. We do not say jñānam is impossible. You are all grihasthās, you are coming and learning; you are primarily designed for karma, jñānam is not impossible. Similarly, sanyāsa-āśrama is primarily designed for knowledge; in that also, karma is there to a limited extent; one is karma-pradhāna-āśrama and another is jñāna-pradhāna-āśrama; gṛhasthā-āśrama and sanyāsa-āśrama.

Now once you have understood these two lifestyles; now based on this, we can see that a human-being can lead his life in three different ways; a human being can lead his life in three different ways; what are the three different ways?

One-way that is visualised by the scriptures is go to the gṛhastha-āśrama m and follow karma-yōga; 3 routes I will tell; go to gṛhastha-āśrama, follow karma-yōga and purify; then what? And there switch over to sanyāsa-āśrama and follow jñāna-yōga and be free. This is one route. Gṛhastha āśrama, karma-yōga, switch over to sanyāsa-āśrama, follow jñāna-yōga and be free. This is one route.

The second-route is what? Go to gṛhasthā-āśrama; follow karma-yōga, purify, thereafter continue in the gṛhasthā-āśrama itself, you need not change the āśrama, you need not take ochre robes, you need not switch house, remain in gṛhastha-āśrama itself; but gradually change your emphasis and go to jñāna-yōga. So enter gṛhastha-āśrama, follow karma-yōga, purify, continue in the gṛhastha-āśrama; follow jñāna-yōga, and be free. So you will be what? Gṛhasthā-jñāni. But you have to follow both karma-yōga and jñāna-yōga and you can continue in gṛhasthā-āśrama. Is it not good news?

First route I told you, you were all upset. Do not be afraid. First route is the four-āśrama method; it is called samuccaya-method; vikalpa-samuccaya method. Going through the āśrama also and going through the sādhanā also. The second one you do not change the āśrama, you can do all your sādhanās in the one gṛhasthā-āśrama itself.

And what is the third-route; you can guess. Without going to gṛhasthā-āśrama, straight away take to sanyāsa. Sanyāsa-āśrama. But in sanyāsa-āśrama also, you have to follow karma-yōga; where the karmas are unique to sanyāsa-āśrama; he cannot do rituals and all; Sanyāsi cannot do rituals; he cannot run a factory or he cannot do anything. He is begging; how can he run a factory. He cannot do annadānam because he himself is a bikṣāmdēhi. Therefore for a Sanyāsi, for purification, the grihasatha's-karmas are not available, for want of resources, because in Sanyāsa-āśrama, he is designed for knowledge, he cannot do the karmas of the gṛhasthā. How he has to manage; he has to do certain other karmas, like what, japa, (for that money is not there). Kṛṣṇa himself says in the Gīta : Yajñānām japa yajnōsmi. Agni is not. No dakṣiṇa for the guru. He can do japa. Or he can do guru-śuśrūṣā. Serving the guru. Thus he can follow certain other activities exclusively prescribed for sanyāsis, and by following that he has to purify; that alone is indicated in the danḍa, chāturmāsya, and all Sanyāsi do certain pūjas and rituals, etc.; they are all meant for what. If they require what you call purification, they can concentrate on those karmas. And in the sanyāsa-āśrama, he has to follow the sanyāsa-āśrami's karma, purify the mind and after purification, what should you do; he has to go after jñāna-yōgaḥ. And there he will become jñāni; what type of jñāni? Sanyāsi-jñāni he will be.

Now the three routes you have understood. Two routes from the Gṛhasthā-āśrama or the two yōgas in the Sanyāsa-āśrama itself. Otherwise what to do, in gṛhasthā-āśrama, follow karma-yōga, switch over to sanyāsa-āśrama and follow jñāna-yōga. Follow any route, but what is compulsory, but the sādhanās you have to follow.

That is why I gave the example; that suppose you have got a screw driver and a knife; screw-driver is meant for driving the screw, not people. Driving the screw; and knife is meant for cutting vegetables. Suppose you have some fruit and you do not have a knife but you have a screw driver; somehow manage to cut even though screw driver is designed for driving the screw; you can manage to cut.

And similarly you want to drive a screw and screw-driver is not there; only knife is there; we all have it but will not be available when required. You just take the knife and you can screw. Similarly, gṛhasthā-āśrama is karma-pradhāna; but you can gain in jñānam in gṛhasthā-āśrama but you have to go through a lot of problems. Similarly sanyāsa-āśrama is jñāna-pradhāna but that also can be used for purification. Therefore use the āśramas appropriately; and follow both the sādhanās and be free.

Therefore Arjuna you require karma-yōga. And for that you have to do your duty. And your duty is fighting. Not your duty, it is Arjuna's duty. So do not go home and say that Swami said "Fighting is your duty" and start fighting with your wife. It is Arjuna's duty. Therefore take the bow and fight.

श्री भगवानुवाच ।

loke'smin dviddhā niṣṭhā purā prōkktā mayā'nagha |
jñānayōgena sāmkyānām karmayōgena yōginām || 3.3 ||

After listening to the Lord's teaching in the second-chapter, Arjuna gets a doubt regarding the role of karma-yōga and that of jñāna-yōga. Arjuna thinks that there is a choice between karma-yōga and jñāna-yōga and a person can choose any one of these two as a means of liberation. This is biggest mistake that Arjuna has committed because Kṛṣṇa has never provided them, presented them as two optional methods of mōkṣaḥ.

As I have repeatedly said before, all the scriptures are uniform in one opinion and that is: there is only one means for liberation and that means is jñānam and jñānam alone. Taṁ ēvam vidvān amṛta iha bhavati. nānya panthā ayanāya vidhyatē. Vēdā is very clear; there is no other ānyaḥ panthā; panthā means path or means. Therefore there is no question of alternate means of liberation and therefore there is no question of choosing one of them.

And therefore everybody has to go through jñāna-yōga before attaining liberation; if not now, later. But before going to jñāna-yōga, before the pursuit of jñāna-yōga, a person has to make himself qualified for the pursuit and for acquiring those qualifications karma-yōga is prescribed in the śāstrās.

And therefore since everybody has to prepare; everybody has to go through karma-yōga; everybody has to prepare the mind; then everybody has to go through jñāna-yōga and attain liberation. Therefore there is no choice between karma-yōga and jñāna-yōga. Both of them are equally important. One indirectly leads to liberation by preparing the mind, other directly leads to liberation by removing ignorance. Therefore karma-yōga to jñāna-yōga to mōkṣaḥ; this is Kṛṣṇa's prescription.

But Arjuna does not get this properly, and therefore Arjuna again puts a question: tell me which one of these two I should follow: And Kṛṣṇa does not want to blindly command Arjuna. Kṛṣṇa wants Arjuna to clearly understand what is what and therefore he begins the teaching once again.

And as I said, here Kṛṣṇa introduces two things; one is the sādhana and another is lifestyle. Sādhana is called yōga and the lifestyle is called niṣṭa. And Kṛṣṇa wants to point out with regard to yōga or sādhana you have no choice, everybody requires karma-yōga plus jñāna-yōga is equal to mōkṣaḥ. But the scriptures do talk about two types of lifestyles also which are known as niṣṭa. And what are those two lifestyles?

Pravṛtti-mārga, an active life in society, which is pravṛtti mārga, otherwise called gṛhastha-āśrama. And the other is called nivṛtti mārga, a life of withdrawal, a life of quietitude, which is called sanyāsa-āśrama. And taking these two āśramas into account, and taking these two sādhanas into account, a person can have three life styles; which I discussed in the last class. There are three possibilities in person's life. One is the ideal possibility as envisaged by the śāstra.

And what is that ideal-method; first a person should take to gṛhastha-āśrama, which is ideal for the karma-yōga; because gṛhastha-āśrama is designed in vēdic-system for the pursuit of karma-yōga, because karma-yōga requires possessions; any karma, any project you have, you require money, you require place, you require man power. Therefore Grihasthāśrama is an ideal āśrama, because Vēdā allows a gṛhastha to own things, own money, have a set-up, have the people around, which is ideal for undertaking activities.

Thus Vēdā expects a person to follow gṛhasthā-āśrama, take to active way of service, contributing to the society and in the process, refine the mind; remove the sharp edges of the personality; like kāmaḥ, krōdhaḥ, lōbhaḥ, mōhaḥ, etc. It is ideal for polishing. Just as a knife is sharpened in a rough surface; only in the rough and tumble of life; the mind gets mellowed; matured.

And then the very same Vēdā says, having gone through gṛhasthā-āśrama and prepared; Vēdā says may you change the āśrama; from gṛhastha-āśrama to sanyāsa-āśrama, and sanyāsa-āśrama is specifically designed for knowledge, because in Sanyāsa-āśrama, a person is free from all responsibilities; he is not supposed to have any relationship with anyone like wife, husband or children; therefore, no more responsibilities. And he is asked not to possess anything; because once he possesses he has to think of managing the possessions, finding the financial resources to maintain, yōga and kṣēma, is a burden. Yōga is acquisition, kṣēma is preservation. A sanyāsi is asked not to own anything. Aparigrahaḥ. Even the dress etc. they say, sanyāsi should not have varieties of dress; then he has to think, for this Deepavali which dress to buy, and he has to scratch the head. And he has to see where 20% rebate, where 35% rebates is available. For a sanyāsi, no such option is available. And also no option to buy the shampoo, which hair oil, he need not plan, because no hair at all. Which beauty shop to go, he need not, he is told only two things, either grow your hair or remove your hair. In between no this cut and that cut, everything is cut off.

Similarly, varieties of duties prescribed are also suited for jñāna-yōga only. For a gr̥hastha, pārayaṇam is Rudram, Camakam, sūkthāni, etc. For a sanyāsi, daily pārayaṇam is upaniṣad, brahma-sūtrās, bhāṣyam, etc. Even the daily karmas are designed for the pursuit of jñāna-yōga; and therefore, and jñānam does not require any expenditure.

Karma requires expenditure, jñānam does not require any expenditure; even for food he is not supposed to have a kitchen to cook. That is why sanyāsi is called niragniḥ. He should not have fire around. Agni represents rituals and kitchen. Once kitchen comes, you have to plan how to ward off the cockroach; cockroach dhyānam.

Then what to do for food? Vēdās says that whenever you are hungry, go to some house and say bhavathi bhikṣāṃ dēhi; eat whatever gets and finish off the job. Therefore Vēdā said a life of pravṛtti-mārgaḥ for karma-yōga, nivṛtti-mārgaḥ for jñāna-yōga; this is one route: ideal;

Then I said there is a second-optional-route; take to gr̥hastha-āśrama, follow karma-yōga, and thereafterwards continue in gr̥hastha-āśrama and manage to follow jñāna-yōga. There will be obstacles will be there; when you want to attend the class, there will be an important wedding; or the in laws will be visiting the house, anybody else you can ignore; in laws are important people. You cannot ignore.

Therefore in gr̥hastha-āśrama, jñāna-yōga can be managed; manage and gain knowledge. Remember the example, with a screw driver, you can cut the banana. But you will have to manage. With a knife you can drive a screw; but you have to manage.

Therefore what is the second-option? Take to gr̥hastha-āśrama, follow karma-yōga, continue in gr̥hastha-āśrama, and follow jñāna-yōga as you are doing right now, jñāna-yōga continuing gr̥hastha-āśrama; this is the second-option.

And the third-option which Kṛṣṇa is not going to favor. Kṛṣṇa favors the first two option; the third option Kṛṣṇa does not favor. Skip gr̥hastha-āśrama and straight away take to sanyāsa-āśrama; and in sanyāsa-āśrama, scope for purifying the mind is minimal.

Because he cannot serve the society; because he does not have the resources to do karma; or the resources to do danaṁ, or any kind of activities. Therefore a sanyāsi has got only a minimum possibilities to purify the mind, but there also he can manage. Just as a gr̥hastha can manage jñāna-yōga, a sanyāsi will have to manage karma-yōga somehow; by doing japa (for japa, no money required), he has to purify the mind through japa, and āśrama service, guru pada sēvanaṁ, like that something and do he has to purify the mind and then in sanyāsa-āśrama itself follow jñāna-yōga and attain liberation.

In the first method, one will follow both āśrama; in the second method, one will follow gr̥hastha-āśrama only, skipping sanyāsa; in the third method, one will follow sanyāsa-āśrama only, skipping gr̥hastha-āśrama; and of these three, Kṛṣṇa favors the third one, the least. He says the third method is highly risky; therefore Arjuna, take the first or second method; either way, you have to continue a gr̥hastha. Therefore do not run away from the battlefield; continue to be a gr̥hastha; purify and know. This is going to be the teaching. Now look at the ślōka 3:

He says: dvividhā niṣṭhā mayā prōkṭā; two types of lifestyles, we are not talking about the sādhanas, two types of lifestyles are prescribed by me; purā, long before I have talked about that. So where did the Lord talk about that; long before, we have to supply, Vēdā dvāra, through the Vēdās, because remember, Gīta has come only to revive the vēdic-sampradāya, the vēdic-lifestyle, the vēdic-teaching. Gīta does not have any new thing to be taught; Gīta is only to revive the Vēdās. Therefore Kṛṣṇa says, I myself have revealed these two lifestyles through the Vēdās. When? In the beginning of the creation. Because according to tradition, it is said when Bhagavān creates this world, simultaneously he gives the Vēdās also. And whom does he handover to? Who is the first disciple of the Lord? Brahmāji, the chaturmukha Brahmā is the first disciple. If you remember the purāṇa, it is said that from Viṣṇu's navel, a lotus comes, that is why he is called Padmanābha, and upon the lotus, Brahmāji appears and Brahmāji does tapas, and a result of that, the Lord gives the vēdic wisdom to Brahmāji.

यो ब्रह्माणम् विधदाति पुर्वम्, योवै वेदांस्व प्रहिनोति तस्मै; तदुगुम् देव अत्म बुद्धि प्रकाशम्, मुमुक्षुर् वै शरणमहम् प्रपद्ये.

yo brahmāṇam vidhadāti purvam, yōvai vēdāmsca prahinōti tasmai; tadugum dēva ātma buddhi prakāśam, mumukṣur vai śaraṇamaham prapadyē.

The Lord creates Brahmā and parallelly the Lord creates the world, brings out Brahmā from his navel, and parallelly gives the vēdic-teaching also. And that is why Brahmāji has got four heads; representing the four Vēdās.

And in those Vēdās themselves pravṛtti and nivṛtti-mārgaḥ are talked about; therefore Kṛṣṇa says Arjuna I am only talking about the same thing now also. So dvidhā niṣṭa purā sṛṣṭi ārambē mayā prōktā; it was given by me through the Vēdās, hey Arjuna, Anaghā; is the name of Arjuna; aghā means impurity; or anaghā means sinless; pure one. So pure minded Arjuna, these two lifestyles I have introduced. asmin lōkē; among the human beings. The animals do not have four āśramās; they do not have any problem. Only the human-beings have got these two main āśramās.

And what are they; sāṅkhyānām niṣṭa; one is the lifestyle of sanyāsi. Here sāṅkhyā means sanyāsi, nivṛtti mārgaḥ; and for those sanyāsis, what is the life style? Jñāna yōgēna, which is governed by the pursuit of knowledge. One is the life style of a sanyāsi, which is governed by the pursuit of knowledge only; he does not have any duty. And that is why when a person takes sanyāsa, he removes his sacred thread, and the Gāyathri also he renounces which he took with so much reverence at the time of upanyanam ceremony and which he is supposed to have protected, throughout his brahmacarya and gṛhastha-āśrama, and even that Gāyathri mantra, he simplifies and converts into Ōmkāra. And so that he does not require much time to repeat the Gayathri.

Gāyathri has got three lines; each line is simplified into one one letter. Tatsavithurvarēṇyam is simplified into A; bhargōdēvasya dhīmaḥ is simplified into U, dhiyō yōna pracōdayat is simplified into uM; A plus U plus uM is OM. Therefore even he does not require much time to chant gāyatrī, so that all the time is available only for one purpose, like a government's giving grants to scientists.

In any advanced country, which promotes science, which creates maximum noble laureates, what do they do? The government as well as the industries give any amount of money and research facilities to the thinking brains; why does the government do? Why does the industry do that? because if the scientists is free from all the burden of earning money, day in and day out, he can spend only on one thing; research, research, research. They won't even prescribe even the time; in big universities in the middle of a night, if a scientist wants to go and do something; it is open.

A society which provides maximum-benefit to a thinking person is an intelligent society; vēdic-society was an intelligent-society; they said sanyāsi need not earn for his livelihood; sanyāsi need not earn for his food; for his clothing; for his shelter; they said let a sanyāsi dedicate his life to his study and propagation of scriptures and it is because of a such a society, we have got a literature and literature. In fact, what Vēdānta I am teaching you now, it is only topmost layer, I am teaching you. We have a got depth, which are meters and meters down below; even the so-called brahma sutra I am teaching is only a tip of the iceberg.

How come without all the printing press and all those things, we have got so much literature? Because Vēdā gave importance to knowledge and provided all the facilities. It said you should not bother about politics. Sanyāsi does not have a vote. Sanyāsi should not join any group. Nothing except research, research, there it is external research; here it is research into one's own true nature. There is a book called Gīta Bhāṣyam. Even now it is available. It is never sold; it has got 8 or 9 commentaries of Gīta. We do not have time even to read one commentary; what to talk of writing commentary.

I told you I got a book consisting of 4 volumes of Brahma-sūtrā. And I thought I will keep that book at least as a sample, because it contains the Brahma-sūtrā; Brahma-sūtrā has totally 555 sūtrās. Sūtrā means cryptic sayings. And when I was brushing through, at the end of the 4th volume, each book is a pillow size, with 9 commentaries or 8 commentaries, the 9th commentary is the summary or gist of the first 8 commentaries; and at the end of the 4th volume, it is written, with this the commentary on the 4th sutra is over. Iti Chatu-sutri samapathaḥ. There are 555 sūtrās in Brahma sūtrā. How could they write so much; because Vedic society allowed these people to dwell deep into tarkā, mīmāṃsa, vyākaraṇa, all of them?

And therefore, Kṛṣṇa says; sāṅkhyānām; for those Sanyāsi, a life style is designed, which is governed by what: jñāna-yōga, commitment to knowledge. But all the people cannot be scientists; they do not have inclination; we cannot even read.

Then what about others? Kṛṣṇa says: yōginām, for the other set of people, who are extroverts, who wants to be in the society, who dread free time, because for those extrovert people, even one holiday is a big burden; they have to plan now itself; which movie to go, which video tape one should bring; which house we should go, or whom to invite to our house, etc. In Śivarātri, extra movies are put. A mind which is not committed to knowledge, for that mind, time will hang; if no activity is there.

Therefore Kṛṣṇa says for those people, Yōginām, for the active people, karma yōgēna. I have prescribed a life style governed by karma-yōga, governed by pañca mahā yajñās; about which we will talk later, governed by an active life of contribution; active life of service; So both lifestyles are there.

न कर्मणामनारम्भान्नैष्कर्म्यं पुरुषोऽश्रुते । न च संन्यसनादेव सिद्धिं समधिगच्छति ॥३.४॥

na karmaṇāmanārambhānnaiṣkarmyaṃ puruṣō'snutē|
na ca sannyasanādēva siddhiṃ samadhigacchati||3.4||

अनारम्भात् कर्माणाम् anārambhāt karmāṇām By avoiding action, पुरुषः न अश्नुते puruṣaḥ na aśnutē a person does not attain नैष्कर्म्यम् naiṣkarmyam liberation एव सन्यसनात् च ēva sanyāsanāt ca by mere renunciation also, न समधिगच्छति na samadhigacchati one does not attain सिद्धिम् siddim liberation.

4. By avoiding action, a person does not attain liberation. By mere renunciation also, one does not attain liberation.

Kṛṣṇa's contention is whatever be the lifestyle you choose, you have to necessarily go through two sādhanas; one is purificatory sādhana, which requires activity; and another is the sādhana of study; svādhyaya pravacanē ca; which is now becoming obsolete now. That is why if you tell anyone now that you are attending Vēdānta classes; they raise their brows; Vēdānta? Class? What is there to learn? And many students tell that they have been attending my classes for years together; what is there so much to study? They do not even know what is there to study. So therefore study of scriptures and that too a systematic study of scriptures which requires a deep thinking is an important aspect of life; which is now being forgotten; we are trying to revive that.

And thereafter they say, Swamiji I never thought, that so much meaning is there in it; so much there is to study to be done; you are explaining one slōka for more than 20 minutes; one slōka you take for 40 minutes; which means that I am taking only one portion of the commentary; if I have to take all the 9 commentaries on one slōka, one slōka itself will take 10 classes to 15 classes.

In the āśrama when we were studying the bhāṣyam, some of the bhāṣyams like sarva dharmān parithyajya, kṣētrajñam chapī mam viddhi, karmaṇya akarmaya paśyēt; Śankarācārya's bhāṣya is itself so deep, it takes 15 continuous days to complete one mantra. Śankara bhāṣyam alone; and for that Śankara bhāṣyam, someone writes 15 lines for one line of Śankara bhāṣyam.

You can study the entire life and you have exhausted one hundredth of our scriptures. Not even one hundred. Therefore there is so much in our śāstrās that is also equally important. So first Kṛṣṇa wants to emphasize the importance of karma. Later he will emphasize the importance of jñānam also. First karma's importance He want to emphasize and therefore He says; Arjuna, you should not avoid karma; action.

And for this he wants to give three reasons, why karma should not be neglected. Why action should not be neglected.

The first reason he gives in this slōka is that by avoiding action, or giving up action, you cannot get mōkṣaḥ. You cannot avoid saṁsāra. You cannot get peace of mind by running away from duty and family. Because it is always, இக்கரைக்கு அக்கரை பச்சை. அக்கரைக்கு இக்கரை பச்சை (That bank is more greener than this bank). Like that when we have so much duties and responsibilities, we always tell Swamiji, I am want to run and come to the Āśrama. And Swamiji will say, I will be the victim! because "your āśrama" he says. Your saṁsāra may go, but for Swamiji saṁsāra increases/begins.

So therefore, whenever we have problems we think running away is the solution, it will give peace of mind, but according to sāstra, the problem is not external, the problem is internal. An ignorant mind will suffer saṁsāra, wherever it is. A knowledgeable mind will enjoy peace, wherever it is. The problem is inside but the biggest mistake we commit is we think the problem is family, therefore we have to go away.

Therefore, Kṛṣṇa wants to remove that notion first, by giving up karmas, you are not going to get mōkṣaḥ, peace of mind. So he says, na karmaṇāmanārambhāt, we have not read the slōka, karmaṇāmanārambhāt, by avoiding activities, responsibilities; duties; service; anārambhāt; puruṣaḥ na aśnutē; a person cannot attain mōkṣaḥ. Naiṣkarmyam is a technical word which means mōkṣaḥ or peace of mind or śānti. By renouncing action, you are not going to attain mōkṣaḥ.

Then Arjuna may get a doubt: what is that; there are several scriptures mantras which say that through sanyāsa mōkṣaḥ can be attained. There are certain statements. That is why, we always say we should never study the scriptures independently because there are confusing statements all over. So here Kṛṣṇa says, by renunciation you are not going to get mōkṣaḥ. But there are statements which say through renunciation you can get mōkṣaḥ. What is that mantra? It is a well-known mantra; you must be familiar; na karmaṇā na prajayā dhanēna, tyāgē naikē amṛtatva mānaśuḥ. tyāgēna amṛtatvamāśuḥ. Arjuna might think that Kṛṣṇa is contradicting the vēdic statement.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa wants to clarify. He says, wherever it is said that there is mōkṣaḥ through renunciation, Kṛṣṇa says that there we should add an expression Jñāna sahita tyāgēna amṛtatva mānaśuḥ. Mere renunciation or detachment cannot give liberation; it should be blessed with, supported by jñānam. How do we know that; because another Upaniṣad mantra clarifies that; it comes in that section itself.

वेदान्त विज्ञानसुनिश्चितार्थाः सन्यास योगाद्यतय शुद्धसत्त्वाः ।
ते ब्रह्मलोके तु परान्तकाले परामृतात्परिमुच्यन्ति सर्वे ॥ 2 ॥

vēdānta vijñānasuniścītārthāḥ sanyāsa yōgādyataya śuddhasattvāḥ । tē brahmalōkē tu parāntakālē parāmṛtātparimucyanti sarvē ॥ 2 ॥

There it is said sanyāsa is great; but not mere ochre robes, not mere āśrama vāsa, not mere running to Himalayas, but Vēdānta vijñāna suniscithārtha, sanyāsa will work only if it is backed by scriptural study. Minus scriptural study, sanyāsa can become a big problem, about which Kṛṣṇa will tell later.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa clarifies in the second line, sannnyasanādēva, by mere renunciation, by mere ochre robes wearing/donning, siddhiṃ na samadhigacchati. A person can never acquire mōkṣaḥ. So siddhi means mōkṣaḥ here. So the first line naiṣkarmyaṃ and in the second line, siddhi, both these words are synonymous words, which mean mōkṣaḥ.

Therefore what Kṛṣṇa wants to say is that Sanyāsa does not guarantee mōkṣaḥ. And if sanyāsa can guarantee mōkṣaḥ, the easiest job is what; give free sanyāsa, by making everyone stand in a line, like the free-upanayana, free-wedding, etc. like that conduct a mēla, Sanyāsa-mēla, like the loan-mēla, etc. and bring some 100-200 ochre dhoties and distribute. And when you go out, you are all liberated; why study Gīta?

Therefore Kṛṣṇa says sannnyasanādēva, ēva is important here, what is that ēva, i.e. mere renunciation cannot give mōkṣaḥ. Then what gives; knowledge alone gives mōkṣaḥ. This is the first argument.

Then he is going to give the second argument in the next slōka.

Verse 3.5

न हि कश्चित्क्षणमपि जातु तिष्ठत्यकर्मकृत् ।
कार्यते ह्यवशः कर्म सर्वः प्रकृतिजैर्गुणैः ॥३.५॥

na hi kaścit kṣaṇamapi jātu tiṣṭhatyakarmakṛt |
kāryatē hyavaśaḥ karma sarvaḥ prakṛtijaigunaiḥ | 3.5 |

हि hi Indeed न कश्चित् na kaścit no one जातु जातु तिष्ठति jātu tiṣṭati can ever remain अकर्मकृद्त् akarmakṛt without action अपि क्षणम् api kṣaṇam even for a moment. हि hi because सर्वः sarvaḥ everyone अवशः avaśaḥ is helplessly कार्यते कर्म kāryatē karma made to do action गुणैः guṇaiḥ by the gunas प्रकृतिजैः prakṛtijaiḥ born of prakṛti.

5. Indeed, no one can ever remain without action even for a moment, because everyone is helplessly made to do action by the gunas born of prakṛti.

So Kṛṣṇa's main aim is to point that by giving up duties or actions, you cannot get mōkṣaḥ. So the first argument is because sanyāsa does not guarantee liberation. Now the second argument He gives in the slōka is that it is impossible to give up all action. The first argument is giving up action does not guarantee liberation.

The second argument is giving up of action is impossible, because everybody will be forced to do some action or the other, governed by his character and therefore Kṛṣṇa says kṣaṇam api akarmakṛt na tiṣṭati. A person cannot remain action-less, even for a moment. You may give up physical actions, the more you give up physical action, and the mind becomes proportionately doubly active. You know that when you try meditation, when you try japā; normally mind moves slow; but when you sit for japā, you will find the mind seems to be so agile and active. And runs all over the world within a second; So therefore as Kabirdas or somebody said, in the tongue the nāmas of the Lord rolls, and in the hand, the mala rolls and the mind rolls all over the world. All are rolling. Tongue rolls, hand rolls, mind also rolls.

Therefore jātu kṣaṇam api; even for a moment, a person cannot remain quiet; why it is so; because prakṛtijaiḥ guṇaiḥ kāryatē. Every person is forced to do one action or the other, by the three guṇas of prakṛti. So prakṛti means māya, which is the basic cause of the creation; prakṛti or māya is the basic cause of the creation; and this māya has got three guṇas and therefore these three guṇas pervade the creation. If you make an ornament out of a lump of gold; whatever be the composition of the gold; that will be composition of the ornament also. If the composition has got 6% impurity, copper or silver; the ornaments also will have.

The rule is: kāryē kāraṇa guṇāḥ anuvartatē; the traits of the kāraṇam; the cause; will be there in the effect also. The traits of the parents will be there in the child also. We say it is genetic. So there is a predisposition of certain tendencies, including diseases. Similarly, if māya has got three guṇās, the whole creation also has got three guṇas; mind or the intellect, everything; the only difference between the human-beings is the proportion of the three guṇās; satva pradhāna he will be; raja pradhāna he will be; or tama pradhāna he will be; governed by these three guṇās, everyone will engage in one activity or other and Kṛṣṇa says, human-beings are helpless.

Therefore avaśaḥ; avaśaḥ means helplessly kāryatē; he is pushed into one activity or the other; that is why interestingly, if you want to observe yourselves, even when we attend some class, or lectures or anything; there also the hands and the legs would not be keeping quiet; or else we will be biting the nails, or we will be rolling the pencil or the pen, etc.

The best thing is to distribute some pamphlet at the beginning of the lecture and get it back at the end of the lecture; you will find it would have gone through all the forms; ships, birds; boat; some would have teared into hundred pieces; and if you are sitting on a lawn, you would be plucking the grass, and eating it too! Last janma would have been a goat or cow; so the old vāsana is showing up. Or we will be breaking the twigs around, you would be doing something or the other. Why? That is the nature of the mind. Therefore, it is impossible to give up action; maximum you can do is to reduce or redirect the action; in karma-yōga Kṛṣṇa's aim is channelisation of our energy. That is why our children also will ask; especially in front of Swamiji, the children finds difficult to sit squatting or folding the hands, etc. the child does listen properly, but we forget that it is not children problem, you yourselves try to sit hands and legs tied in a place! How can we expect the child to do? Therefore our aim is not stopping the action, our aim is directing the action.

Even in meditation, many people try to stop the thought, which is the biggest mistake one can do, because mind also cannot stop, because mind is not meant for stopping. Mind is meant for functioning. Therefore, Vēdāntic-meditation is not stopping the thought; not stilling the mind; but again directing the mind. Any type of meditation that we prescribe involves the appropriate thought.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa says that if you try to give up your action, wherever you go, you will start fresh action. If you become a sanyāsi and go to Rishikesh and if you are an rājasic person, your leadership qualities are there, you will form of sanyāsi association. Rishikesh Sanyāsi association. And there you will do well only. Rakta dan, hospital, etc. If he is a commercial minded person, he will start a rudrakṣa business. He will get Rūdrakṣā from Indonesia and thereafter he will give up sanyāsa or he would fight with the Government. Government should give some land for the sanyāsis free of cost; agitation in front of the Parliament at Delhi; he will be sitting there; Sanyāsa ochre robes would be there; but he would be into some mischief. Therefore, Arjuna why do you do that; better do what you have to do. Therefore, prakṛti jai guṇai, hyavaśaḥ kārya kāryatē. This is the second- argument.

So what are the two arguments? Argument no.1: by giving up actions, you do not get mōkṣaḥ or peace; the second argument is that you cannot give up action.

Now comes the third argument:

Verse 3.6

कर्मन्द्रियाणि संयम्य य आस्ते मनसा स्मरन् ।
इन्द्रियार्थान् विमूढात्मा मिथ्याचारः स उच्यते ॥३.६॥

Karmēndriyaṇi saṁyamya ya āstē manasā smaran |
indriyārthān vimūḍhātmā mithyācāraḥ sa ucyatē || 3.6 ||

संयम्य saṁyamya Having restrained कर्मन्द्रियाणि karmēndriyāṇi the sense organs (of action), सः विमूढात्मा saḥ vimūḍhātmā that deluded person यः आस्ते yaḥ āstē who remains स्मरन् इन्द्रियार्थान् smaran indriyārthān dwelling on the sense-objects मनसा manasā mentally, उच्यते ucyatē is called मिथ्याचारः mithyācāraḥ a hypocrite.

6. Having restrained the sense organs (of action), that deluded person who remains dwelling on the sense-objects mentally is called a hypocrite.

So the third argument that Kṛṣṇa gives here that the giving up of action is a highly risky affair also. Instead of promoting self-knowledge and mōkṣaḥ, it can become counterproductive also. Because a person can fully dedicate himself or herself to the pursuit of Vēdānta only when he has transcended the worldly pursuits or worldly desires. Everybody has got certain natural needs; so they talk about the hierarchy of needs; first the need is for survival; food and clothing; and thereafter the need is for entertainment; thereafter the need is to be wanted; I want to love someone and I want to be loved by someone. I need someone to constantly ask: how are you? And they should constantly ask me about my cold, when I get. If no one calls you, you get into depression. Saying that no one cares for you.

Human mind have got different levels, gross needs for self-respect, needs to be doing something in the society, so that the society will remember me; or at least build a house and put your name. Put a tube light and advertise your name, to such an extent, the light itself is not visible. These are means to be wanted, to be respected; that is why when children grow and become independent, many parents cannot withstand; until now they were wanted by the children; and now the children are capable of taking their own decisions; and especially they chose their partner also, then everything is finished; and then we have different type of needs, for recognition, accomplishment, etc. and a person has to go through them and accomplish some self-respect, as they say, the ego has to ripen before the ego falls.

And the ripening of the ego and the growth of the ego takes place only in the society, by achieving something, at least minimum marrying and getting a few children. That is an accomplishment. And if these basic needs are not fulfilled; and a person renounces and sits quietly in a place, the mind will be thinking of those things. Perhaps I could have married. Perhaps I could have remained in Grihasthā āśrama. Or perhaps when he sees some nice family, envy that I do not have a nice family.

And in our society, the peculiar thing is sanyāsa mārḡa is one way traffic. You know one way traffic. From Grihasthā, sanyāsa-āśrama is possible, but not the other way around. Brahmācāri to Grihasthā is possible. But a gṛhastha cannot again become a Brahmācāri. A gṛhastha can become a sanyāsi; but a sanyāsi cannot become a gṛhastha. That is why Dayānanda Swamiji was telling; when he went to Uttarakāśi, he met so many sādhus, sanyāsis and he was talking with them, they were talking about his future programmes, Swamiji said: I want to take sanyāsa. Many of those sanyāsis were telling: Do not take that decision; you know: somehow after a fight with the wife, I had taken sanyāsa; because one day early morning coffee was delayed; and now first day Himalayas and Ganges wonderful and fine and think that this is the best place for stay for life; but second day, third day, fourth day, the same Gaṅga, same Himalayas, and if you ask for bhikṣā, the bhikṣā would also be the same; unlike in your homes, where it is different on different days. There will be no choice.

They said do not jump into conclusion we are regretting; there are some people who come back also. And therefore if the mind has the ego has not become mature; it can miss many things in life, because sanyāsa-āśrama is an āśrama in life, in which you are learning to be self-sufficient physically and psychologically and even when people come, they will come with their problems, they will never ask, what problem you have Swamiji? Does anyone ask? May be, you will start from tomorrow. You all come with pressure with all the problems.

So therefore Kṛṣṇa says if the mind is not ready for sanyāsa it can have a double life. Externally there is detachment; mentally the person may be dwelling upon only worldly thing and such a life is a life of mithyācārah. Hypocrisy.

Then it will be only at the mental level, and whatever desire he has, he cannot fulfill, because in sanyāsa-āśrama does not allow that particular thing, it is not allowed; therefore the pressure may mount in the mind; either he may go crazy or he may give up sanyāsa. Sanyāsa to sanyāsa! Therefore Arjuna it is risky to straightaway go to sanyāsa-āśrama; skipping gṛhastha-āśrama.

ॐ

कर्मन्द्रियाणि संयम्य य आस्ते मनसा स्मरन् ।
इन्द्रियार्थान्विमूढात्मा मिथ्याचारः स उच्यते ॥ ३.६ ॥

[Karmēndriyaṇi saṁyamya ya āstē manasā smaran |
indriyārthān vimūḍhātmā mithyācāraḥ sa ucyatē ||3.6||](#)

Lord Kṛṣṇa is clarifying Arjuna's doubt regarding karma and jñānam and I pointed out that karma and jñānam are equally important; therefore there is no choice between karma-yōga and jñāna-yōga. Everybody has to go through karma-yōga first which is the only means of purifying the mind and thereafter everyone has to necessarily go through jñāna-yōga, which is the only means of liberation. And by jñāna-yōga what we mean is study of the scriptures under the guidance of a guru. Guru śāstra upadēśa śravaṇam is called jñāna-yōga and everyone has to go through that also.

And even though there is no choice between these two sādhanas, Kṛṣṇa pointed out that there is a choice with regard to the lifestyle that a person chooses, it can be either grihasthāśrama or sanyāsa-āśrama and whether a person is a gṛhastha or sanyāsi, both of them will have to purify the mind first by doing their respective karmas and both of them will have to go through jñāna-yōga. Therefore the choice is between grihasthāśrama and sanyāsa-āśrama. There is no choice between karma-yōga and jñāna-yōga.

And since there is a choice with regard to the āśrama, the life style that a person has to take to, the question may come which āśrama we can choose. Because there is a choice with regard to the āśrama; certainly the question will come, which āśrama should we choose.

And according to Kṛṣṇa there is no uniform answer to the question because it will depend upon the type of the seeker; so the śāstra never uniformly point out that Grihasthā āśrama is better. Śāstra does not uniformly point out that sanyāsa-āśrama is better, because it depends upon the type of seeker, just as a doctor cannot prescribe uniform medicine to all people; it will depend upon the type of patient.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa makes a general observation with regard to the āśrama and what is that observation. Between the āśramas; sanyāsa-āśrama is more difficult. It is not meant for majority of people; it is only meant for minority; Kṛṣṇa will point out that in the fifth chapter, sanniyāsastu mahābāhō duḥkhamāptumayōgataḥ.

Either it is better that a person continues in grihasthāśrama throughout the life, or if at all a person is interested in sanyāsa, according to scriptures, let him go through gṛhastha-āśrama and thereafter let him go to sanyāsa-āśrama. Direct sanyāsa-āśrama;

skipping gṛhasthā-āśrama; Kṛṣṇa says, is meant for only a minority. And therefore, Kṛṣṇa feels in the case of Arjuna also, it is better that he continues in the Grihasthāśrama for getting some more maturity. Thereafter, he can think which one is better; and therefore activity is more safer, than withdrawal.

And to establish this view, Kṛṣṇa gave three reasons in the last three slōkās, 4, 5, and 6, he gave three reasons in support of karma.

What are those three reasons? The first reason is Arjuna, by avoiding karma, you are not guaranteed liberation; escaping from your duty, you are not going to get peace of mind; because our general tendency is to think so; when we have lot of responsibilities and anxieties, we always think that if I give up all those responsibilities and settle somewhere, where I do not have any action to do; we may conclude, we generally conclude, no action means peace of mind. Kṛṣṇa says inaction does not guarantee peace of mind.

Then the second reason Kṛṣṇa gave is that inaction is not totally possible. Because every person has got a svabhāva, which is governed by the three guṇas and everybody has got the pressure of these three guṇas, making him to do one activity or the other. Therefore it is impossible for majority to sit quiet, if you have any doubt, try to go to an āśrama and stay there for a week or so, without doing anything. People take tape-recorder, and some cinema songs, or something. Remaining quiet is impossible.

That is why, they tell a story also. In a temple, there was a sanyāsi sitting; without doing anything; and from the temple naivaidyam they were giving to the sanyāsi as a bhikṣā. And a new temple officer came. And he wanted to bring out changes and improve the situation and all and to cut costs, etc. and he wanted to establish himself and therefore he saw how many people are sharing the food; then they had prepared a list of all the employees, and at the end they listed out the name of the சும்மர் இருக்கிற ஸாமியார்; simply-sitting sāmiyār. Now this officer said: what is his business. Why should you give to this sāmiyār. Then he said: I am not going to do that; then he met the pūjāri, etc. who said that the officer should talk to the sanyāsi, as they respect him. Then he approached the sanyāsi and said that he is doing nothing for the temple and yet he is eating from the temple, etc. Then the sāmiyār said: Doing nothing is doing a great thing. And this officer said he can also do that. He was challenged by the sanyāsi to sit only for one week at least near him and doing nothing. And then the officer said what is the great deal. And the next day he also went and sat. Half an hour over, one hour, then he slowly he started getting restless and was looking here and there and then he got up to help someone; Then this sāmiyār told him to sit down and do nothing. And after 2 hours, he became so restless; he ran away and said to the priest, that here-afterwards, the simply sitting sāmiyār should get double the quota. Now only I knew that it is more difficult than doing. And therefore, it is impossible to give up action because svabhāva pressurises.

And the third reason is not only inaction will not give mōkṣa; not only inaction is impossible; even if you manage to remain quiet, it can become a risky proposition. Why it is risky; because when you do not have anything to do; normally at least for a gr̥hastha, so many responsibility, therefore something to worry is there; and his mind is always preoccupied. When there are no responsibilities, when there are no goals in life; no plan, nothing is there, the mind is idle, and he is not going to meditate upon the self, because he does not know what, he does not know what the Self is; if he knows what the Self, he is a jñāni, so when a person without even ātma jñānam, remains quiet without doing anything, he cannot think of ātma also, and he does not have any project to think of, healthy project to think of, he has got an idle mind, an idle mind is an ideal for a devil's workshop. All the suppressed desires come up and especially when he looks up and sees that so many people are going after so many variety of enjoyment, since he cannot do it physically, because he has become a sanyāsi; because the society does not accept that, and therefore he does not do anything physically, then whatever he is missing physically he begins to fantasies; he begins to imagine; and the mind goes on imagining, the thought becomes more and more powerful; and a time comes, either he violates the sanyāsa-āśrama dharma totally; or his mind gets deranged, because of suppression. Even psychologists say suppression is more dangerous than violent expression.

So what vēdānta talks about is transcending the worldly desires; not suppressing the worldly desires. Parīkṣya lōkān karmacidān brāhmaṇān nirvēdām āyāt; getting vairāgyam is growing out of worldly desires. But this person is not growing out; but he is suppressing and therefore Kṛṣṇa calls him a mithyācāraḥ. Outside he is a Swami, he is declaring himself to the world that I am only thinking of dharma and mōkṣaḥ, that is the declaration through this vastrā, and outside he declares one thing and inside his mind is in arta-kāma. Thus there is a double personality; split personality and therefore he is called a mithyācāraḥ. Arjuna why should you be a mithyācāraḥ, because there is a strain in the personality.

And therefore, Kṛṣṇa said, which we saw in the last class, karmēndriyāṇi saṁyamya, because he has put on the ochre robes, he cannot go after pleasures like a worldly man, because ochre robe is meant for withdrawal, karmēndriyāṇi saṁyamya; he physically withdraws from sense pleasures, but manasa indriyārthān smaran, he is cheating the world and he is cheating himself. Because of the complacency that what I am thinking of, the Society does not know. The Society thinks he is in the highest meditation and does namaskāra and goes. But he alone knows what he is meditating upon.

One of the ācāryās says like the fish which moves in the pure water, but it consumes only rubbish in the water. That is why the fish is a cleaner. It is moving in water and whatever rubbish falls, it eats. Similarly I am in an atmosphere of āśrama; and dress also indicates that, but mentally I am consuming something else, and such a life is such a person is a mithyācāraḥ, and such a person is vimūḍhātmā, a deluded person, a split personality, a confused personality, he is not very clear what he wants in life.

So indriyārthān, should go with manasā smaran. Indriyārthān vimūḍhātmā mithyācāraḥ sa ucyatē. He is a hypocrite.

And therefore the third reason is what? Inaction is dangerous and therefore Arjuna do not think of sanyāsa; do not think of inaction, think of an active life; how to do that? That is going to be given in the next slōka No.7.

Verse 3.7

यस्त्विन्द्रियाणि मनसा नियम्यारभतेऽर्जुन ।
कर्मन्द्रियैः कर्मयोगमसक्तः स विशिष्यते ॥३.७॥

yastvindriyāṇi manasā niyamyārabhatē'ṛjuna |
karmēndriyaiḥ karmayōgamasaktaḥ sa viśiṣyatē||3.7||

अर्जुन Arjuna Oh Arjuna तु tu But, नियम्य इन्द्रियाणि niyamyā indriyāṇi having restrained the organs (of knowledge) मनसा manasā by the mind, सः यः saḥ yaḥ he who आरभते ārabhatē pursues कर्मयोगम् karmayōgam karma-yōga कर्मन्द्रियैः karmēndriyaiḥ with the organs of action अस्कतः asktaḥ without attachment विशिष्यते viśiṣyatē excels

7. Oh Arjuna! But, having restrained the organs (of knowledge) by the mind, he who pursues karma-yōga with the organs of action without attachment excels.

So therefore what is the ideal āśrama, according to Kṛṣṇa? It is Grihasthāśrama, a life in society, where there is a scope for contribution, so that I can cleanse myself; Grihasthāśrama, while it is an ideal āśrama, for fulfilling artha kāma desires, parallelly it is an ideal āśrama for service to the society. Śāstra prescribes gṛhastha-āśrama, not merely for artha kāma; artha kāma is only secondary and subsidiary. That is why they say:

इयं सीता मम सुताम् सहधर्मं चरि तव ।
प्रतिच्य चैनम् भद्रमं ते पाणि गृण्णिश्व पाणिना इति ॥

iyam sītā mama sutām sahadharma cari tava |
praticya cainam bhadramam tē paṇi gṛṇṇiśva pāṇinā iti ||

So wife is called saha dharma cārani, which means one gets married not for primarily fulfilling the artha kāma desires, but it is only for primarily fulfilling service to the society;

my contribution to the society; parallelly I also fulfil my personal desires in a legitimate manner. And therefore, Kṛṣṇa says it is better one is in society.

And what should he do in Society? What type of life he should lead; he says, indriyāṇi manasā niyamyā. As a gṛhastha, as an active-person in society, let him regulate his sense organs first; even though gṛhastha is given a freedom to fulfil his artha-kāma, ārtha-kāma means what, artha means security, money, possessions, house, status etc. name, fame, they are all security; and kāma means entertainment. So śāstra gives freedom to fulfil the artha-kāma-desire only in Grihasthāśrama and not in sanyāsa-āśrama and sanyāsa-āśrama is exclusively meant for fulfilling mōkṣaḥ desire only. Not for fulfilling artha-kāma desire. Therefore let a gṛhastha fulfil his worldly-desires but under one condition; what is that; indriyāṇi niyamyā; by regulating the sense organs, which means, without violating dharma, morality.

Everybody is given freedom to enjoy physical-pleasures; sensory-pleasures, intellectual-pleasures, emotional-pleasures; you want to go to a movie and enjoy, nothing wrong, not three movies a day, but once in a while, if it is a safe movie; that is not for sanyāsi; that is not meant for the sanyāsi; therefore you fulfil that, but before fulfilment ask the question, is it legitimate, is it moral or is it in excess. Even a legitimate fulfilment of desire should be within moderate limits. അധികമായാൽ അമൃതവും വിഷം adhikamāyāl amṛtavuṃ viṣam. Even amṛutham in excess is poison.

The legitimate-fulfilment of pleasures cannot be beyond limits. That is why I gave the example of pickle; pickle is allowed, if you do not have BP of course, pickle is allowed, but you should know what is the main dish, what is the side dish. You should not take the pickle as the main-dish, forgetting the main dish. Similarly, ārtha-kāma should not be primary, dharma should be primary; giving must be primary, taking must be lesser; always the account must show that what I have contributed is more what I have consumed is less. That is called a dhārmic-puruṣaḥ.

And therefore, regulating, avoiding-indulgence. Avoiding-excesses, sensory-excesses. and how do you control the sense-organs; manasā; manasā means by discrimination, by discrimination, what is right, and what is wrong and what is moderate and what is not moderate, the intellect must assess and judge and decide; controlling the mind; controlling is not suppression. Controlling is regulating. Remember the example of a river; if you stop a river, it is suppression; the water will increase, increase and increase, the pressure will mount up a time will come when it will break the bund and flood the whole place. At the same time if you do not stop the river, the water may be wasted, it may just flow into the ocean without benefitting anyone; that is also wastage of water.

So that is also not correct; stopping also is not correct; and what is the correct thing; regulation of water, dam the river alright, but you have to channelize the water in an useful direction.

Similarly, Vēdānta does not ask you to suppress; at the same time, vēdānta says do not violently allow the sense-organs to: கண் போன பொக்கிலெ மனம் போகலாமா, மனம் போன பொக்கிலெ மனிதன் போகலாமா; kaṇ pōṇa pōkkilē manam pōkalāmā, manam pōṇa pōkkile manitaṇ pōkalāmā; (should the mind uncontrollably follow whatever the eyes see; and should a man uncontrollably follow his uncontrolled mind?) So do not allow that to happen. That is excess.

At the same time do not suppress; that is also not correct; that is called regulation; channelization, and having mastered managed the sense organs, jñānēndriyani, what should he do, karma-yōgam ārabhatē; one should take to karma-yōgaḥ. A gṛhastha, a person who is active in society, should take to karma-yōga; what is karma-yōga, we are going to see hereafter. Kṛṣṇa is giving the introduction. He should take to karma-yōga.

And that too how? Asktaḥ, without getting attached to anything. So whatever he uses, he uses with mastery; he does not consider anything that he uses as an end in itself; whatever he uses is a means; according to śāstra, even gṛhastha-āśrama is not an end in itself. Getting a wife or husband is not an end in itself; because both of them are not permanent. By holding on to them, I am not going to retain; either I have to grow out of my need for family members; if I do not grow out, Yamadharmā rāja will forcibly snatch them away from me; before Yamadharmā Rāja chooses to snatch, I decide to grow out of them; so that when Yamadharmā Rāja comes and calls, before he snatches, I tell you, take it; and there is no need to snatch. I am ready to come. So that is called detachment. Growing out of anything that I use.

This is called asktaḥ and such a person who follows karma-yōga is viśiṣyatē; he excels. He excels whom, he is superior to a sanyāsi who chooses sanyāsa without getting maturity and gets into trouble; neither he is able to fulfil his worldly-desires; nor he is able to spend his lifetime in vēdānta śravaṇa manana nidhidhyāsana.

Sanyasa-āśrama is wonderful, if we love vēdānta. sanyāsa-āśrama is horrible, if you do not love vēdānta. And therefore, a gṛhastha is superior to an immature-sanyāsi.

Verse 3.8

नियतं कुरु कर्म त्वं कर्म ज्यायो ह्यकर्मणः । शरीरयात्रापि च ते न प्रसिद्धं येदकर्मणः ॥३.८॥

niyatam kuru karma tvam karma jyāyō hyakarmanah |
śārīrayātrā'pi ca tē na prasiddhyēdakarmanah ||3.8||

त्वं कुरु tvam kuru Perform नियतं कर्म niyatam karma the obligatory action, हि hi for कर्म ज्यायः karma jyāyah action is superior अकर्मणः akarmanah to inaction. अपि च शरीरयात्रा api ca śārīrayātrā Even the maintenance of the body न प्रसिध्येत् na prasidhyēt would not be possible तē ते for you अकर्मणः akarmanah from inaction.

7. Perform the obligatory action, for action is superior to inaction. From inaction, even the maintenance of the body would not be possible for you from inaction.

So in the previous slōka, Kṛṣṇa said: karma-yōga is ideal, it is best for majority. But always śāstra give exception to a few, who can skip the gr̥hastha-āśrama and directly Brahmacharya to sanyāsa, śāstra gives as an exception. And exception is always exception, it cannot be taken as the general rule. And according to śāstra, even that exception, really not an exception.

If a person avoids the gr̥hastha-āśrama and takes to sanyāsa-āśrama and he is able or pursues spirituality and attain mōkṣah, really speaking he has not skipped gr̥hastha-āśrama; śāstra says, you know the answer, he has already gone through the gr̥hastha-āśrama in the previous life; and he has served the society and he has purified the mind and he is born with a pure mind; therefore naturally it has got inclination for vēdānta; why vēdānta? Vēdānta alone, it has inclination. Therefore there also we are not circumventing or avoiding gr̥hastha-āśrama; it is brought forward. That is it. Kṛṣṇa has talked about karma-yōga in the 7th slōkā.

Now from the 8th slōkā, Kṛṣṇa wants to talk about what is karma-yōga, which we are repeatedly saying karma-yōga, karma-yōga. So what is karma-yōga? Kṛṣṇa had briefly defined karma-yōga in the second-chapter;

कर्मण्येवाधिकारस्ते मा फलेषु कदाचन ।
मा कर्मफलहेतुर्भूर्मा ते सङ्गोऽस्त्वकर्मणि । २.४७ ॥

karmanyevādhikārastē mā phalēṣu kadācana |
mā karmaphalahēturbhūrmā tē saṅgō'stvakarmaṇi || 2.47 ||

योगस्थः कुरु कर्माणि सङ्गं त्यक्त्वा धनञ्जय ।
सिद्धिं असिद्ध्योः समो भूत्वा समत्वं योग उच्यते ॥ २.४८ ॥

yōgasthaḥ kuru karmāṇi saṅgaṁ tyaktvā dhanañjaya |
siddhyasiddhyōḥ samō bhūtvā samatvaṁ yōga ucyatē || 2.48 ||

In the two slōkās, 47 and 48 of the 2nd chapter, karma-yōgaḥ has been summarised. In the 3rd chapter Kṛṣṇa is going to elaborately discuss from verse no.8 up to verse no.20.

So this chapter is therefore famous or well known for this particular section alone; and because of this particular section, this chapter itself is called karma-yōga. The following portion is therefore the most important.

Now as I said, as I had said very often, Kṛṣṇa gives the Gīta teaching only based on the vēdic-teaching; Kṛṣṇa does not have any new thing to offer; it is giving to old-teaching itself in a modern form; because compared to the time of the vēdās, the time of Gīta is modern; compared to the time of the Gīta, our time is still modern; therefore you may change the example, tape-recorder example, Śankarācārya would not have given; cassette he will not say; therefore TV and cinema example. Certainly Śankarācārya would not have talked in English. We change the language, we change the example, perhaps we have printed book and we have a got a modern pen; and some people are also recording perhaps; we can change all these; but the content of the teaching is vēdic alone. So vēda itself has talked about karma-yōga in the karma-kāṇḍa section and there is a famous mantra occurring in the Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad, and Īśavāsyā Upaniṣad, which is the basis, for the third chapter.

In the Īśavāsyā Upaniṣad the mantra is:

कुर्वन्नेवेह कर्माणि जिजीविषेच्छतं समाः ।
एवं त्वयि नान्यथेतोऽस्ति न कर्म लिप्यते नरे ॥२॥

kurvanneveha karmāṇi jijīviṣecchatam̐ samāḥ |
ēvam tvayi nānyatheto:'sti na karma lipyatē narē ||2||

Very important mantra in Īśavāsyā. And in Bṛhadāraṇyaka, there is a mantra, तमेतं वेदानुवचनेन ब्राह्मणा विविदिषन्ति यज्ञेन दानेन तपसानाशकेन ४.४.२२

Taṁ ētaṁ vēdānuvacanēna brāhmaṇavividiṣanti yajñnēna dānēna
tapasānāśakēna;

These two mantras are the basis for the entire karma-yōga and Kṛṣṇa also is talking based on that.

So what is karma-yōga? I will generally discuss first and thereafter we can go to the slōkās proper.

I had briefly discussed in the second-chapter; that also you can remember. I said karma-yōga consists of two portions; one is karma and another is yōga. Karma is one word; yōga is another word; karma means proper action. So one of the criteria for karma-yōga is that the action must be proper action; what is proper action, we will see later; karma is here proper action.

Then the second part of karma-yōga is yōga. And the word yōga means proper attitude; towards what. towards the action and not only the action; towards the result of action also; that is more important; so proper-attitude towards action and result is called yōgaḥ.

Now we will take each part, each segment for study. What is proper action?

The scriptures divide action into three varieties; sātvikam-karma, rājasam-karma, and tāmasam-karma.

- Sātvikam karma is the best action; which is ideal part of karma-yōga and
- rājasam karma is only mediocre, secondary; and
- tāmasam karma is the worst.

And therefore according to scriptures, a karma-yōgi's life should dominate in sātvic-actions; and the rājasic-actions must be lesser and tāmasic-action should be either zero or minimum. OK.

Now the next question is: what is sātvic-action? Each one we will analyse. We have to understand it clearly. The first one is; sātvic-action.

In simple language, we can translate sātvic-action, as any action in which more number of people get benefit. I may also be a beneficiary; there is nothing wrong, if I also get the benefit but the benefit does not come to me alone; but the number of people that benefit is much much higher; like a business man who gets lot of profit; and he enjoys the profit, benefit but equally he shares the wealth with the society. And when a person shares his wealth with the society, even sanyāsis will bless him, may you get more profit; you know why, our āśrama would also get! So everybody will bless him for more and more profit. Somebody said I want to get lot of money; is it wrong? I said nothing wrong; get lot of money; but give lot of money also, so that others bless you. If you want to enjoy that money for yourselves only in a dark room, nobody will bless you. Therefore sātvic karma is an action in which the beneficiaries are maximum; we call it niṣkāma karma; self-less activity.

And then rājasic-karma is selfish activity in which the beneficiaries are minimum; minimum means what; myself and my two; myself and my family I keep. There are still worse cases; family also is not included. Myself alone. beneficiaries become lesser and lesser, and even with family members he does not want to share; and he goes to court to claim the property; there are cases where brothers themselves quarrel for property;

you can imagine the state of mind, when I cannot share with the family itself; question of sharing with the society does not arise at all.

Rājasic-karma is madhyama-karma; selfish-action is secondary.

And tāmasa-karma, is harmful-karma, for my benefit, I hurt others; I am not bothered about what happens to others, even when I play the radio or TV, I do not even consider whether the neighbours will be disturbed or not; you see in India, full that only. Everywhere mike is blaring. And nobody wants to consider the other people's-convenience and they say it is Viṣṇu Sahasranāma. Whether it is Viṣṇu Sahasranāma or Lalitha Sahasranāma, it is all the same; disturbance is disturbance. I am sitting in meditation and I do not want to get any other thing; Viṣṇu Sahasranāma is great; but not at the time of meditation; I am ready to chant Viṣṇu Sahasranāma when I want; when I want to meditate, I do not want any disturbance. If someone is playing Viṣṇu Sahasranāma cassette loud, that is an obstacle for me. Just because it is a temple, it does not mean that people can blare forth and disturb; any action that disturbs others, is tāmasam-karma.

In Sānskrīt, selfless-action is uttamam; selfish-action is madhyamam; and harmful action is adhama; a karma-yōgi's life should be such that it abounds in sātvic-karma and it has got minimum of tāmasic-karma.

Now let us go further; if sātvic-karma is niṣkāma-karma, what am I supposed to do as niṣkāma-karma; what am I supposed to do? The śāstra itself prescribe those sātvic-karmas; śāstrās prescribes them as a compulsory-karma, everybody has to do; you can do any amount of sakāma-karma alright; but śāstra says your life should have the sātвика-niṣkāma-karma also.

And what is that; śāstra says; pañca-mahā-yajñāḥ; comes under sātvikam-karma; And they are the best because, they produce spiritual-progress very fast. Double-promotion, triple-promotion in sātvic-karma.

in rājasam-karma, the progress is very slow; and in tāmasam-karma, there is not only no progress, it is going away from mōkṣaḥ.

Therefore sātvic-karma is superior, because it purifies the mind; it cleanses; it is like soap for the mind; special detergent for the mind; rāgaḥ, dvēṣaḥ, kāma, krōdhaḥ, etc. it washes off with acid.

Now the question is what are the pañca-mahā-yajñās, all of which are equally important. Śāstra does not give them choice, but they give them as compulsory, according to our capacity, śāstra does not enforce, but according to our capacity it should be there;

The first mahā-yajña is dēva-yajña. Our life should have certain religious-activity. However busy you are, a portion of the day must be necessarily allotted for worship. What type of worship you do, we do not care; it all depends upon your background, your varṇa, your āśrama, your parentage, since some people may know, some person may know; vēdic-rituals, a person may do agnihōtra, another person may do sandhya-vandana, because we have been initiated because he has been taught. Another person may not know agnihōtra or sandya vandhana, he may go to temple, or he may chant Rāma nāma. He may do this or that. He says: Swamiji, can I chant while I am travelling in the bus, etc. They are all additions. There must be some exclusive-time allotted because then alone I know, then only it means that I have respect for dēva-yajña. Suppose some guests have come, in your house, how will you talk with him. Will you talk to him, cleaning your house; if you are going to do some work and talk to him, isn't it an insult? Similarly, if you are going to do puja, japa, etc. only doing some other job; then that is not the real one; we should first give some time for japa or puja or anything and after doing that regular mantra japa, then if you are chanting while going to office in the bus, or chanting while you are sitting doing no other thing, etc. that should be all additions; but they can never replace exclusive-allotment for the dēva-yajña. So let us call it prayer; you may call it ritual; you may call it prayer. One should do.

Then the next one is called Pitṛ-yajña; which means worship of the forefathers; our scriptures consider it extremely important; worship of the forefathers; according to our tradition; family to family; in forefathers have practised in a particular way, therefore, that also should be done, one has to allot some time. I heard day in America, mothers'-day, fathers'-day, in all cultures it is there. If you are allotting time for everything and if you cannot allot time for your forefathers, because of which we are solid 80 kgs sitting here, because of them, we are ungrateful people; not fit to be called even a human-being. And therefore, pitṛ-yajña, any type of worship, according to the family tradition. srāddham, tarpaṇa, different things are there; they are all important.

then the third one is called; ṛṣi-yajña; or Brahma-yajñaḥ; offering to, or worship of our scriptures; because of which alone our culture, our tradition is so glorious, if Indian has got some name, not because of anything; because other than religion and philosophy, in everything we are a big zero. Nothing we are excelling. Only we have got the oldest Ṛg-Vēdā; yet he does not know what it contains; Yajur-vēda; we have only that thing to claim; therefore we have a glorious tradition because of the scriptures and the ṛṣis have dedicated their life to give us the scriptures; therefore I have to do something to preserve and propagate the scriptures; either directly or indirectly. So which will come under; this is called ṛṣi-yajña; pārayaṇam, daily pārayaṇam of sahasranāma, or Gīta, or Upaniṣad or some Tamil prayers; allotting some time for the study of scriptures; just read the bhāgavatham from beginning to end; with translation; it is wonderful. Read the Rāmāyaṇam from beginning to end; just at least one page per day; not the 24,000 slōkās; therefore the study of scriptures, in fact, what you are doing now is Brahma yajña.

It is repeated several times, to indicate that we are all responsible not only for receiving the scriptural-knowledge and it is our duty to hand it over to the posterity, future also. We need not sit in the hall and lecture; if every parent, shares the traditional-wisdom, with their children, and in every family, in India, the culture was transferred only in the families. Everything from the Patti, patta, appa and amma; we learn all the purāṇās, through our parents; Now they say: Swamiji now we do not have time; and therefore we have purchased the Amar Chitra Katha and given the children; and then thereafter the children know more than the parents.

We have a duty to preserve and propagate our scriptures; Brahma-yajña means daily vēda-pārayaṇam or any smṛti, itihāsa puraṇa, anything, that is Brahma-yajña and it has got a ritualistic form also, many people nowadays practice a five minute ritual; in which I remember the scriptures, Ṛg vēdam tarpayāmi, yajur vēdam tarpayāmi, sāma vēdam tarpayāmi, Atharvaṇa vēdam tarpayāmi, ithihāsa purāṇam tarpayāmi, kalpam tarpayāmi, vyākaraṇam tarpayāmi. Even grammar we worship; not only we offer puja to all these scriptures, we also say sarvān ṛisīm tarpayāmi. The ṛṣis who have contributed to that; we also add, sarvān ṛṣī pathnigum tarpayāmi. Or else the feminist movement would come and start an agitation! Therefore along with the ṛṣis, were happily married also, therefore ṛṣis is also worship, ṛṣi-pathni also I worship. This is called Brahma-yajña; no choice, compulsory. The amount of time you may spend; it may vary. Even if it is five minutes, enough.

Then the fourth-yajña, Manuṣya-Yajñaḥ; all types of social service comes under manuṣya- yajña; all types of social service; whether it is poor-feeding; or building orphanages, during Deepavali, you always get advertisement, in some orphanages, which asks for donations, etc. some of you may also go through and give sweets etc. to the children, old people etc. give some dress to those people, even those people asks you not to bring anything, and not bring money, but spend some time with them. etc. they are all thirsting for somebody's love; they are only asking for time, 15 minutes; similarly, some old age homes are there; there I contribute, I build schools or anything; connected with the society; secular it is. Not temple connected; social service; all of them will come under manuṣya yajña; and vēda considers primary manuṣya yajña as anna dhānam, or giving or feeding the people, who do not have the facility. Poor feeding is considered a very very sacred thing. This is manuṣya-yajña.

And remember, people ask the question when the śrāddha comes; can I do poor feeding; this is invariably people ask; the śāstra say that poor feeding is manuṣya-yajña; sraddha-tarpaṇādi is pitṛ-yajña; one cannot replace the other; only one can be added to other; but one can never replace the other; if one can be replaced, śāstrās would have said either or; like in examination; they never said that; the pañca-mahā-yajña is said in the vēda; not in the smṛthis; pañcava yēde mahā-yajña; satati prajayanthē, satati san tiṣtantē; dēva yajña, pitṛ-yajñō, manuṣya yajñō, bhūtha yajñō, brahma yajña iti.

And Vēdā itself defines all the pañca-mahā-yajñaḥ. It is there social service; they think that it is a new concept we have to learn from Christian missionaries; we have to learn; people say. In the Vēdā it is said we have, we are not following; that is all; the fourth one is manuṣya-yajña;

The fifth one is called; bhūtha-yajñaḥ; and all environmental protection will come under bhūtha-yajña; so all animals should be respected. That is why we have got different deities having different animals as vāhanās. Once you see them as the vāhanās, then you will develop a reverence for them. Therefore reverence for life; then reverence for even plants; you can cut a tree; but if you are forced to cut a tree; minimum you have to plant a tree; maximum anything. Now they are talking about environmental protection; tree planting, etc. Vēdā says:

Asvathō vada vrikṣa candana taru; kalpadrumō..., a list of trees are given and kurvantu no maṅgalam; early morning I remember all those representative trees; and I remember how they are contributing for my survival; and that is bhūtha-yajña and again feeding them, taking them, SPCA, Blue Cross; if you are doing anything through anyone of them, that will come under bhūtha-yajñaḥ.

In Śakuntala, Kālidāsa writes, when Śakuntala wants to go away from the Kaṇvā āśrama, he takes leave of the people there; then she takes leave of even the plants and the deer; there is a deer; very dear deer for Śakuntala; and when she is going, finally it is pulling her dress; and Śakuntala gives a special attention to that deer; and thereafter Kaṇvā address all the trees;

भो		भो:		सन्निहितास्तपोवनतरवः		।
पातुं	न	प्रथमं	व्यवस्थति	जलं	युष्मास्वपीतेषु	या

ādhyē va: kusumaprasūtisamayē yasyā bhatyutsavaḥ
sēyam yāti śakuntalā patigrham sarvairajujñāyatām | 4.9 ||

Listen! listen! yē neighbouring trees of the penance-grove. She who never attempts to drink water first, when you have not drunk, and who, although fond of ornaments, never plucks a blossom, out of affection for you, whose greatest-holiday [highest-joy] is at the season of the first appearance of your bloom, even that same Śakuntala now departs to the house of her husband. Let her be affectionately-dismissed by (you) all.

Kaṇvā addresses all the plants and tells: Oh Trees, Śakuntala is going away; till now she was taking care of you; you are like her children; and please give her blessing and send off. And he writes and it seems all the trees bend their head.

And now they say scientists say plants have got feeling; it responds when a person goes to cut the tree; and when another person goes to what you call water the tree; the plants have got different responses; and therefore respect for the environment; taking care of them. That comes under bootha yajña and all the pañcayajñās are not optional; but they are compulsory; they are called sātṅvika karma; once a person who leads such a life; he always gives more to the society than he takes and such a person is no more a burden to the society; he is a blessing to the society. when the plants people are cutting, everybody says do not cut the plant; plant more trees; but when it comes to human beings, what do we say: reduce the population; we always vote for less human beings; who is saying that; human being; from this it is very clear, that plants are satvic ones, and the human-beings are tāmasic ones; every human being is a burden to the environment; whereas every plant is a blessing to the environment. What a life we lead; karma-yōgi is not like that.

Lord Kṛṣṇa talked about the importance of karma up to the 7th verse; and now from the 8th verse onwards, up to 20th verse, the Lord is dealing with the important topic of karma-yōga, and because of this is central theme of this chapter alone, this chapter is known as karma-yōgaḥ; therefore this is a very important portion not only of the third chapter but of the entire Gīta; this portion is important; Kṛṣṇa deals with karma-yōgaḥ.

And in the last class, I was introducing the topic and I pointed out that karma-yōga consists of two parts; one is karma and the other is yōgaḥ. The word karma here means proper-action; and the word yōga here means proper-attitude; and I was discussing proper-action in the last class and I said that the actions are divided into three types in the śāstrās; which we will be seeing in the 17th chapter; and those three types of actions are sātvikam- karma, rājasam-karma and tāmasam-karma.

Sātvik-action is that action in which the beneficiaries are more number of people; I may be a beneficiary or not; even if I am the beneficiary of that action; there are more number of other people also who benefit from the action; therefore, we can define sātvikam karma as niškāma-karma; selfless action, where I give more and take less. So in sātvik karma, when I take the final account, I find that I have taken less and I have given more.

According to our scriptures, the one who takes more is a failure; the one who gives more is success. According to many other - in the office, if I can do minimum action or no action and if I can get maximum money out of it, I consider it as a successful deal, whereas according to Śāstra; the whole thing is the other way round, if I can give more and take less; it is a successful spiritual deal, because the śāstrās say: na karmaṇā na prajāyā dhanēna, tyāgē naikē amrutatva mānaśuḥ. Therefore, sātvik-karma is selfless action, in which I may be a beneficiary but there are more other beneficiaries also.

The second type of karma is rājasam karma; in which other beneficiaries are lesser and lesser, I am the greatest beneficiary; it is a selfish-action, I am bothered about myself; or maximum I include நாம இருவர்; நமக்கு இருவர் (We two and ours two). Maximum four. Not even the parents. Husband nuclear family. So therefore I do not even want to take care of my parents; if I can manage by sending them to some old-age-home; and just manage sending from Rs.500 and Rs.1000 and get rid of them, that is ideal. In one old age home, the authorities were telling, that when they sent a letter informing the death of the parent, they say we do not want to spend money and come all the way; you just do the disposal job also; and whatever money you spend, we will reimburse. We do not want to take the trouble. Therefore a lifestyle in which I do not want to include even my parents, brothers or sisters, maximum included is wife and children; that short-sighted frog-in-the-well, limited mind attitude is selfish action, rājasam karma.

And tāmasam-karma is the worst type of action in which, while I am benefitting, while other people do not get any benefit, but other people are positively harmed. In rājasam-karma also I am selfish. In tāmasam-karma, I am selfish, but what is the difference? In rājasam-karma, I benefit, other people do not benefit; but they are not harmed; whereas in tāmasic-karma, I get the benefit, and at the cost of other people's benefit and therefore it is harmful action. Selfless-action is sātvic, selfish-action is rājasic harmful action is tāmasic.

And the śāstra says sātvikam-karma produces maximum and quickest spiritual progress; it is fast progress. In rājasam-karma, spiritual progress is slow; and less. In tāmasam-karma, spiritual progress is nil; not only it is nil, the person is spiritually falling down; a man of tāmasic action may be materially successful; because by cheating others; by adulteration; by bluffing, by doing all those things, he may amass wealth; therefore the world may think, he is materially a successful person, but the śāstrās say, spiritually he is going to fall down, he is getting more and more away from the śāstra.

Therefore, what should be aim of the karma-yōgi? He has to increase the percentage of sātvik-karma, reduce the percentage of rājasam-karma and then third avoid (you cannot say reduce) possible tāmasam-karma. This is called proper-action.

And the śāstra itself defines the sātvikam-karma, which promotes spirituality very quickly; that sātvikam-karma given in the śāstra itself which I discussed in the last class, in the form of pañca-mahā-yajña. My contribution to the deities in the form of daily worship, my contribution to the forefathers in the form of my prayer; like shrādda, tarpaṇam, etc.; my contribution to the scriptures in the form of studying the scriptures and handing over them to next generation. Then my contribution to fellow human-beings in the form of all types of social service and finally my contribution to the environmental, the ecological balance, that will come final; bhūta-yajña, in which I am aware of the plant life; the animal life; and I want to respect them; I want to worship them.

In Hinduism, almost every creature is worshipped from snake onwards; birds are worshipped, reptiles are worshipped, animals are worshipped; plants are worshipped; that is my contribution to the so-called lower beings; these put together is pañca-mahā-yajña. Therefore, Kṛṣṇa says Arjuna, if you are a karma-yōgi, concentrate on the pañca-mahā-yajña; you might have selfish desires; fulfill them alright, but predominantly it should be a life of contribution; which is proper action; I have only talked about first part of karma-yōga; that is proper action. Pañca-mahā-yajña, sātvikam-karma; niškāma-karma.

What is the second part of karma-yōga? Yōga; which is proper attitude. Even the best action will not give me any benefit; even the best action will not give me any benefit, if I am going to look down upon the action and I am going to do it; In Tamil they say: கட்டுன என்று; after cursing and muttering and murmuring. Many people they say that October-November, is a problematic month, month of festivals, etc because it is a month of expenditure; those people who are bothered about budgeting are bothered about the extra expenses; they are unhappy Dīpāvali means this and that; expenses; and this function and that function; expenses; they think in terms of expenses, and consider it as a burden.

If we are going to do it half-heartedly, it is not going to give any benefit; the attitude must be what? Every action should be taken as an offering to the Lord, which is called Īśvarārpaṇa-buddhi. Every action that I do, sātvikam or even rājasam, for example, when I am serving the society, do some service to the society; there also, I do not consider it as my contribution and develop arrogance, I am humble and I am grateful to the Lord that I have got an opportunity to serve the Lord, which is in the form of all these people. Daridra-Nārayana; it may be a daridra but I should see him as Nārayana; I am giving to that not to a daridra; but daridra-Nārayana. We have got the expressions like Nara sēva; Nārayana-sēva; mānava-sēva is mādharma-sēva. This is Sānskrīt sēva; which is service. Therefore the attitude must be I am offering this to the Lord; Kṛṣṇa is going to talk about this in detail; and I am only giving you a bird's eye view; in the 9th chapter Kṛṣṇa will say;

यत्करोषि यदश्रासि यज्जुहोषि ददासि यत् ।
यत्तपस्यसि कौन्तेय तत्कुरुष्व मदर्पणम् ॥९.२७॥

yat karōṣi yadaśnāsi yajjuhōṣi dadāsi yat |
yat tapasyasi kauntēya tat kuruṣva madarpaṇam || 9.27 ||

Even your eating, offer to the Lord who is in the stomach.

कायेन वाचा, मनसेन्द्रियैर् वा, बुद्ध्यात्मना वा प्रकृतेर् स्वभावात् । करोमि यद् यत् सकलं परस्मै, नारायणायेति समर्पयामि ॥

kāyēna vācā, manasēndriyair vā, buddhyātmanā vā prakṛtēr svabhāvāt |
karōmi yad yat sakalam parasmai, nārāyaṇāyēti samarpayāmi ||

So thus all our prayers indicate that it is not for verbal repetition, it is to bring an attitudinal change; even the kāyēna vācā is being chanted as a muttering. It is not for chanting; it refers to our bhāvana; our attitude. Even your doing the most mundane job of cleaning your desk it is an offering to the Lord; once I take it as an offering to the Lord, I will do it wholeheartedly; because I will not do anything inferior to the Lord.

If it is for the boss, you may think, this is enough; and therefore you may not be wholehearted; and it is hole-hearted!; but if you are offering to the Lord it should be wholehearted; therefore what is the attitude, Īśvarārpaṇa -buddhi, when I do the action; as a kartā. And most important thing is one more attitude, whatever I do is going to produce a consequence. Whether it is selfless-action, or selfish-action. Even if you are doing selfless-service in the society; people will criticize; people will say you are doing that so that you may appear in the photograph; so that you will appear in the newspaper or your name will be mentioned in the vote of thanks list. For name and fame you may be doing; public may criticize. Or as people often say; Swamiji, it is thankless job; what is the use of dying for that person? I do not know what is the consequence that is going to come from my action; and therefore, Kṛṣṇa says whatever be the consequence; your attitude must be what? Prasāda buddhi. I accept it as the prasāda from the Lord. So as a kartā I have Īśvarārpaṇa - buddhi; as a bhoktā, I have prasāda-buddhi; when I am doing, offering, when I am receiving the karma phala, it is prasādam; karmaṇi Īśvarārpaṇa-buddhi; karma-phalē prasāda-buddhi; this attitude is called yōgaḥ. So yōgaḥ karmaṇi Īśvarārpaṇa-buddhi; karma-phalē-prasāda-buddhi.

And if I entertain this attitude, what is the advantage I will have? If I entertain this attitude, what is the advantage I will have? There is a great advantage. If I am going to take all my actions, as an offering to the Lord, I am not going to see whether it is a pleasant-action or unpleasant-action. because in life; we have to do many actions; and many of them are compulsory duties, and all duties are not going to be pleasant; there are going to be some duties which are not that pleasant; if I have to take care of my old parents or elderly person; who is not that well, it is a duty; but it is not going to be a pleasant one; because expenditure is involved; physical strain is involved; and he slightly prays for the speedy death of the person; that person is suffering; so at least Oh Lord let him relieve; Let the Lord relieve him; what this person really wants is his release; it is a painful thing. Thus in life, there are many many unpleasant actions; and for many people going to office regularly is unpleasant. That is why Friday comes, kuṣi; special bloom will be there in the face, because of the week end; then Sunday evening gloom, because of the coming Monday.

The housewife has also similar complaint. Cooking, Cooking for the 3 times, 365 days in a year, within the four walls of the house, no entertainment, etc. etc. I want to go out. Therefore the 'going-out' wants to 'remain-in', the 'remaining-in' wants 'to-go-out'; both are unpleasant.

And for Arjuna now, the duty is what, fighting the Mahābhārata war, which is not a pleasant-duty at all, it involves killing the near and dear ones. And therefore, when I have Īśvarārpaṇa -buddhi, the advantage is I will not divide my duty as pleasant or unpleasant. No division should be made. Both are what? Offering to the Lord. Once I look upon every action as an offering, I do not do it grudgingly; therefore what is the benefit of Īśvarārpaṇa -buddhi, there is pleasantness in any kind of duty. Kṛṣṇa calls it samatvam. No work being done murmuring, mumbling, grumbling. Not only he is unhappy, he is freely distributing unhappiness to anyone going nearby. If anyone stands near him for five minutes, our face will also droop. There is no enthusiasm. There is no pleasantness. Whereas Kṛṣṇa defines Karma-yōgi as mukta saṅgo: 'nahaṃvādī dhṛtyutsāhasamanvitaḥ (18.26). A karma-yōgi will have a lot of utsāḥ; with a smile. Therefore, that smile should be in the face; that is why Swami Chinmayānanda used to give one advice; easiest advice, but most difficult, you just try to follow only one rule; that the motto given in the school to the children. Keep smiling; it looks so simple, but it is one of the important thing, whatever you have to do, be pleasant. Therefore, Īśvarārpaṇa-buddhi, makes the mind samāḥ.

Similarly, prasāda-buddhi has also got an advantage, because when the result is favourable, then everybody is happy; but the problem is when the result is not favourable; I am going to react to that, criticise all the star in the world, all the deities in the world, it is all unjust, you will always find that suppose there is some contest is there; Bālavihar contest, or the like, Gīta chanting, etc. I find often mothers coming and complaining; that girl, or that man's child did not get the first prize, the judges were partial. And when are the judges impartial; only under one condition; when, my child gets the first prize. So the human tendency, whenever I do not get the expected result; I look upon God as unjust. And I tell Swamiji, I am a such a great bhakta, and I never killed even a fly, I go to the temple very frequently; I have not told a lie, which itself is a lie; everything and why Me? Why am I going through this suffering and therefore Bhagavān is unjust.

So if I have got prasāda-buddhi, how do I take; whatever Bhagavān gives is the just result. It is what I deserve. And if I have been extremely-good and I am suffering-now, we say that we are extremely good now, assuming that it is true, which is doubtful; I am extremely-good now, but śāstra says the result that I experience is not the results of the present-actions only; some of the results that I receive come from pūrva-janma-karma and do I know what akramams I have done in my pūrva-janma. As somebody said, we have all been doing akramams in kramam. So therefore I do not know what are all the karmās in my lot; whatever I get is the just result; therefore what Bhagavān has given me, I accept, as they have one rule in cricket, once the umpire says, you are out, what is the batsman supposed to do. If he hesitates, and if he throws the bat and he mumbles, all these things, he will be called and warned and what is the rule, implicit-obedience. If you can accept the local umpire who commits full of mistakes only, why can't we accept the universal-umpire who does not require a third-umpire, because His eyes are everywhere, and He gives 'out' correctly? So if any of is 'out', in cricket, only you get out of that field, but here 'out' is different; we have to just vacate the place, including death, diseases, old age, association, disassociation, whatever Bhagavān gives, it is a just-thing, and I accept that. And if I do not have the inner-strength to accept that, I pray to the very same Lord:

Oh! Lord, Give me the strength to accept and this acceptance of the result without resistance is called prasāda-buddhi and the advantage of prasāda-buddhi is again samatvam. Thus both Īśvarārpaṇa -buddhi and prasāda-buddhi, here the word buddhi means the attitude; normally buddhi is intellect, here buddhi is attitude, Īśvarārpaṇa -buddhi, the attitude of offering to the Lord; prasāda-buddhi means the attitude of prasāda; prasāda cannot be translated; it is difficult. So the English word for prasāda is prasāda; receive it as prasāda. 😊.

So these two attitudes give what? Samatvam. That is why in the 2nd chapter, Kṛṣṇa said, samatvam yōga ucyatē. Do you remember? The definition of proper-attitude is a balanced mind born out of Īśvarārpaṇa and prasāda-buddhi; thus proper action, plus proper-attitude is equal to karma-yōga.

And what is the benefit of this karma-yōga? Material benefits may come, may not come; karma-yōga does not guarantee material benefit, it may come, generally it will come, that is the bye-product of karma-yōga. Generally, but we are not supposed to concentrate on the bye-product; if you are concentrating on the bye-product, it is no more bye-product; it is the main product. Therefore, material-prosperity is a bye-product; we are not supposed to concentrate on it, the primary-result of karma-yōga is what? Very fast spiritual-progress; and what is the sign of spiritual-progress? Interest in self-knowledge; spiritual progress how can I know; I begin to love self-knowledge; and I will also easily grasp self-knowledge. This is the bird's eye view of the karma-yōga. With this background, we will go slōkā by slōkā; every slōkā is a gem.

So Kṛṣṇa says: look at the 8th slōkā; akarmaṇaḥ karma jyāyaḥ. Arjuna, action is always superior to inaction. Action is always superior to inaction; because as we saw in the previous slōkā; in inaction, the mind is idle and an idle mind is a devil's workshop. Only a jñāni can remain without action, because his mind has no problem, but whereas as far as an ajñāni is concerned, if he is idle, and if he tries to remain alone, withdrawn from the society; the very same aloneness will only create fear and loneliness. Therefore, whenever a place is a quiet place, you will find two people will have two types of response. One will say that it is quiet like āśramam. Another person will say it is quiet like a cremation-ground or burial-ground. Quietness remaining the same, the one who has got a mature-mind, he enjoys that, he calls it aloneness; whereas the other person who is not prepared, the very same thing is what? Loneliness. Externally both are same; but internally, it is dangerous for an unprepared-mind, therefore Kṛṣṇa says; action is superior to inaction.

And not only that; look at the second line; akarmaṇaḥ śarīrayātrā'pi ca tē na prasiddhyēd. If you resort to inaction, even living in the world will become impossible. If you resort to inaction; śarīra-yātrā, even the journey of life, even the procurement of the minimum needs like food, clothing and shelter, even that is not possible, if you do not take to action. And suppose a person argues. I need not act for procuring the minimum needs. I already have got pūrvika wealth. Suppose a person says, all that I have to do is to eat to the nose-full, and take rest, if I have to eat I have to take rest, after some rest, I have to eat; for that śāstra says, even if you have got everything provided you have to act in the world at least for maintaining your physical-health; otherwise cholesterol will get deposited all over, the person who has got the car and the other facilities, the doctor will say, keep the car at a long distance and walk.

At least to maintain your health you will have to work, you have to act and therefore Kṛṣṇa says, even for livelihood you have to work in the world, Arjuna, tvaṁ karma kuru; you do action; and what type of action, niyataṁ karmam kuru; you do those actions, which are prescribed in the scriptures as compulsory actions. And what are those actions? All the selfless actions called pañca-mahā-yajñās are prescribed by the scriptures; as compulsory action. Everyone has to contribute to the world; whether you earn, whether you enjoy, you eat, you do whatever you love to do, you want to enjoy dance, music, you do, may you pursue arta-kāma; nothing wrong, but one compulsory-thing is, you have to contribute to the Society. In what way, you contribute, depends upon your facilities, your resources, if may be financial contribution, it may be vidyadhānam, it may be anna dānam, it may be time dānam; in America, they used that word; thank you for giving me your Time; only when they come and talk to me for fifteen minutes (we do not have that practice!), thank you for the 'Time', then only I understand giving time to someone and listening to whatever he says; it may be useful or not; that is a different thing, but I listen to someone, I have not given money or solution or anything; what I have given, I have given some time from my life; that is also dhānam. If you smile at someone, that is also a dhānam. If you smile at people, I tell you people, please come from miles to get a smile. So therefore contribute at all the five levels and Kṛṣṇa calls it niyataṃ karma.

Now here we have to note a very significant thing. The sātvikam-karma or pañca-mahā-yajña can be seen from different angles; and it is given different names, indicating the significance of that particular angle. Now these compulsory duties, here Kṛṣṇa calls niyataṃ. Niyataṃ means it is the commandment of the Lord. It is the commandment of the Lord. That means what, there is an element of fear involved in it, because the moment you call it a commandment, if you do not do it, there will be punishment; like the laws of the Government.

Even though the laws are meant for our own well-being only, but the laws are looked upon as the laws of the ruler, and we have to necessarily follow them and if you violate the laws, whether it is laws of the tax, you have to pay the tax. If you do not do that, you will have punishment. You have to follow the traffic rules, if you violate that, the stop line, at the signal. If you cross the stop line, Rs.50 penalty. See all these laws are meant are for our own wellbeing. If we are mature enough, we will follow by ourselves; but an immature person never follows the law by himself or herself; and therefore what do we require? Threatening and punishment. Similarly, any mature person will naturally do pañca-mahā-yajña. Any mature person will naturally do pañca-mahā-yajña; because he knows that he has got duty to the world, and not merely rights.

As Kennedy or somebody said, 'Do not ask what your country has done to you; ask what you have done to the country'. Any mature person will naturally ask the question, what have I done to the religion, to the forefathers; to the country, parents? And therefore, a mature person will naturally do; an immature person will not naturally do and therefore our scriptures threaten the humanity by saying you have to compulsorily do pañca-mahā-yajña.

And if you do not do these karmas, what will happen? Punishment also is prescribed. It is called omissions of your duty. Just as we use the word commission and omission, vihitam avihitam vā, sarvam ētat kṣamasvā, jaya jaya karuṇābdē, śri mahādeva saṁbhōḥ. Vihitam avihitam means what? Not doing what is to be done and doing what is not meant to be done; that is one mistake, omitting what I have to do. Therefore the scriptures say whoever does not do pañca-mahā-yajña will get a special-pāpam. There are other regular pāpams for other successful acts; there is a special-pāpam for the omission of the pañca-mahā-yajña, and that pāpam is called pratyavāya-pāpam. Pratyavāya pāpam. If I do not contribute at these five levels, I am incurring pratyavāya pāpam, which means I am spiritually falling down. I am getting more and more away from mōkṣaḥ.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa uses the language of threatening; Arjuna, niyatham, my commandment is karma-yōga, therefore better you do it, he is saying that with a stick in hand, as if it is a stick treatment! Just as, only when the police man stands, we will follow the traffic rules; then also he will look and left and right and quietly sneek the signal. Only when there is the police, only when there is punishment, only then the immature persons will follow. Therefore, the scriptures use the language of threatening, karma-yōga, one should follow or otherwise he would incur Sin. Therefore, Arjuna, niyatham Kuru. The word niyatham is otherwise translated as Vidhi or vihitam. All the three are same. Vidi or vihitam or niyatham. Here it is the language of fear that Kṛṣṇa is using. Better you do. Better you obey my commandment.

Verse 3.9

यज्ञार्थात्कर्मणोऽन्यत्र लोकोऽयं कर्मबन्धनः । तदर्थं कर्म कौन्तेय मुक्तसङ्गः समाचर ॥३.९॥

yajñārthāt karmaṇō'nyatra lōkō'yaṁ karmabandhanaḥ |
tadarthaṁ karma kauntēya muktasaṅgaḥ samācara ||3.9||

अयं लोकः ayam lōkaḥ This world कर्मबन्धनः karmabandhanaḥ is bound by actions अन्यत्र anyatra in the case of any (action) other than कर्मण् यज्ञार्थान् karmaṇ yajñārthān an action meant for Yajña समाचर samācara (Therefore) Perform कर्म karma action तदर्थम् adartham for that sake मुक्तसङ्गः muktasaṅgaḥ without attachment, कौन्तेय kauntēya Oh Arjuna!

9. This world is bound by actions in the case of any (action) other than an action meant for Yajña. (Therefore) Perform action for that sake without attachment, Oh Arjuna!

So in the previous slōkā, Kṛṣṇa presented karma-yōga as Īśvara-ajñā, Īśvara-vidhi, one has to follow; otherwise you will incur sin; the language of fear is used. In fact, it is not correct; because psychologically it is not healthy to cause fear. That is the new research that is telling; they are advising all the parents and teachers, never use fear as a method of making the child obedient; because in fear, the mind is crumbled; the mind cannot grow or learn; that is why in America and all, that parents cannot beat the child. And then all the children are given a particular number; to ring it and the parents are immediately arrested. Previously the parents were threatening, now the children are threatening the parents; because they say corporal-punishment is extremely bad for the growth of a mind of a person. Threatening is extremely bad; and therefore, one should avoid using that if at all necessary, it should be used only extremely sparingly, sāma dana, bhēda, and only the last is danḍa. Because the side effects are dangerous; even though it looks simpler, because by frightening the child, you can get things done easily. Even when the child cries, they use the language, if you cry, again I will beat you. Now the child immediately stops. They say that the child has not stopped crying; but pushed the crying into the subconscious mind; you have not stopped the child from crying; it stores like bank deposit; it stores all the crying in the sub-conscious and wait for a future opportunity and such children who have suppressed all the crying, they alone in future cry for anything and everything. No reason is necessary; only we Swami come to know because they all will be coming and start crying. Therefore by frightening you can get things done, but it is not the right method, but in inevitable cases, sparingly it can be used, like Pethadine-injection, only very very, when it is extremely necessary.

So thus previously karma-yōga was talked about as what? Īśvara-ajñā, where fear was used, now Kṛṣṇa improves the version you need not take it as Īśvara-ajñā. When you are immature I called it Īśvara-ajñā, soon you should change your attitude; do not be a God fearing person; you might have heard this idiom, God-fearing person; we think that this is a good quality; but fear whether the fear of husband, or parents, and rarely fear of wife; or fear of anyone, any fear is bad including God fear. So initially you are a God fearing person, later convert karma-yōga into God-worship and from this angle, it is called Īśvara-Yajñāḥ.

First we said Īśvara-ajñā (to create fear), now it is said Īśvara-Yajñā, look upon karma-yōga as worship of the Lord. That Lord who has given everything to you free of cost; wonderful body, wonderful world, five sense organs are there; five sense objects are there; you have got hunger, food is there; you have thirst, water is there; you have buddhi, I suppose, and we have got enough field for discoveries and discoveries and discoveries. Anything you naturally need, Bhagavān has provided. As somebody nicely said, we have got enough for man's need, but we do not have enough for man's greed.

Whatever is need, it is provided; therefore why can't we worship the Lord for all these gifts he has given.

And therefore he says, Yajñartham karma. Karma-yōga is for the worship of the Lord. It is converting the very life into a pūja. Normally what do we do; pūja means 15 minutes, what we do in the early morning, pañcāyathana pūja, we think that pūja is a 15 minutes ritualistic job, done unwillingly, but Kṛṣṇa says you may do the pūja that pūja in the beginning, but ultimately the real pūja is convert your very life into a pūja. yadyatkarma karōmi tattadakhilam śambhō tavārāadhanam.

आत्मा त्वं गिरिजा मतिः सहचराः प्राणाः शरीरं गृहं

yadyatkarma karōmi tattadakhilam śambhō tavārāadhanam || 4 ||

Oh Lord, let my very living become an offering to you.

जपो जल्पः शिल्पं सकलमपि मुद्राविरचना

japō jalpaḥ śilpaṁ sakalamapi mudrāviraṇā gatiḥ prādakṣiṇyakramaṇamaśanādyāhutividhiḥ | praṇāmassaṁvēśassukhamakhilamātmārpaṇadr̥śā saparyāparyāyastava bhavatu yanmē vilasitam ||27||

Śankarācārya tells in his Soundaryalahari, Oh! Mother, wherever I go, take it as pradakṣiṇam (you may be doing the passport office pradakṣiṇam), or you are searching for address, convert everything as a pradakṣiṇam. And whatever you are eating; make into an offering prānāya svāha,... brahmaṇē svāha.

And therefore what is karma-yōga? Work is worship, is karma-yōga.

Then we may ask the question, I can worship in the early morning, because the Lord is in the temple, but how can I convert the office work into worship, as the Bhagavan is not there? Kṛṣṇa says: You fool. Only in some other religion, God is sitting somewhere. So you have to look up and say Bhagavānē, etc. But in Hinduism Bhagavan is not located in Vaikunṭha or Kailāśa, but according to Hinduism, the very world is the Viśva rūpaṁ, manifestation of the Lord. bhūḥ pādaḥ yasya nābhīrviyadasuranilaścandra sūryau ca netre, whole universe is Bhagavān, therefore jagata īśadhī yukta sēvanam! aṣṭamūrtibhṛd dēva-pūjanam || World is God. Therefore to offer your work to the Lord, you need not come to the temple, look upon the very office as the Lord and offer it to the Lord through bhāvana. Your attitude; therefore he says, Yajñārtham karma, karma-yōga is a yajña.

And what is the advantage of this attitude? Kṛṣṇa says anyatra ayam lōkaḥ karmabandhanaḥ; anyatra, otherwise, threatening. If you do not convert your action into worship, then what will happen? Karma bandhanaḥ, every action will become a bondage for you.

Action as worship is not a bondage, in fact it leads to liberation, action as worship is not a bondage, in fact it leads to liberation, whereas action which is not a worship, is cause of bondage. Why it is the cause of bondage? Because I will have tensions, whether it will work properly, there is a constant anxiety; whether the child will get admission or not; whether I will be able to go to America or not, whether I will be able to win the contract or not.

Every action is a poison for us, because every action causes stress and strain. Now what they are talking all over is that the life style of an individual nowadays is a such a stress; that so many people are talking about stress management; so many management they talked about and now stress management and this person who conducts the stress management is stressed about how to conduct the stress management. It should work properly and everyone should come, and what is the seminar; stress management. They say the stress is causing, such an amount of problem, by the age of 40, almost all executives are spend force, that they get all kinds of psychosomatic diseases because of tremendous tension. BP is up. Sugar is up. All kinds of things are up and down; cholesterol is up. And he has got high salary alright, but he cannot enjoy even good food. I have told you. he cannot take salt; because of BP; he cannot take sweet; because of sugar; he cannot take sour things because of ulcer; puli is not there; what to eat? Pumpkin juice, three times daily!! For what purpose you are earning; if minimum you cannot eat well, why should I earn a salary of Rs.50,000 a month. Therefore if you want to earn and eat well, remove the stress and that you can do only under one condition; what is that? Convert your life into worship and tell yourselves whatever comes, prasādaḥ.

Hari Om.

ॐ

Lord Kṛṣṇa is discussing the important topic of karma-yōga from various angles. Karma-yōga, we saw consists of two parts; one is the performance of appropriate action. As I said Sātvika-karmāṇi and Sātvika-karmas are those actions in which I contribute more to the world than I take for myself. That is in the form of pañca-mahā-yajña, in which I contribute at different level that is proper action. And along with that Kṛṣṇa pointed that there should be proper-attitude also, and by proper-attitude we mean that every action is dedicated to the Lord as an offering, as Īśvarārpaṇa -buddhi, and all the consequences of the action are received without any resistance or without any criticisms; all the karma-phalams are received with prasāda-buddhiḥ. So when these proper actions and proper-attitude join together it is called karma-yōga and this karma-yōga, Kṛṣṇa is looking from various angles.

The first angle in which Kṛṣṇa presented karma-yōga is as a commandment of the Lord, that there is no choice with regard to karma-yōga, that this is the ājña of the Lord; that this is the vidhi of the Lord, nobody can escape. And by saying that this is an ajña what Kṛṣṇa means is if we do not follow a life of karma-yōga it will come under the sin of omission; it will come under akaraṇam; vihitha-akaraṇam and for the omission, there will be a pāpam called prathyavāya-pāpam. Therefore, whoever does not perform pañca-mahā-yajña, is incurring a sin of prathyavāya which will pull him spiritually down. And therefore, to avoid the pāpam at least, one has to take to karma-yōga. This is the first angle, karma-yōga as Īśvarā's commandment, and failing in karma-yōga a person will be punished. This is karma-yōga presented as a threat. In this a fear is involved, but still for immature people, fear has to be given.

As I said, the government has to give punishment to those people, who violate the laws of the land. If all the people are mature, we do not require force of law; we do not require police people at all, punishment is required when the people are immature. Therefore Kṛṣṇa also uses the technique of threat and punishment and says: Better you follow karma-yōga or else you will be punished and what is the punishment; saṁsāra kārāgraham; the imprisonment called saṁsāra is the punishment; And once a person is evolved enough, and once he does not require punishment or threat; then the very same karma-yōga can be seen from another angle. And that is the second angle which we are seeing.

Here Kṛṣṇa does not present karma-yōga as a commandment of the Lord; He presents karma-yōga as a worship of the Lord. An expression of gratitude towards the Lord; an expression of gratitude out of love and not out of fear. Previously karma-yōga as out of fear, that is why people use the expression, that he is a god-fearing person. He follows all the value, he does not cheat people, does not tell lies; he is god-fearing person that means that he does not follow values out of maturity, but he follows out of fear. But it is still better to follow values out of fear, rather than not following the values at all.

Therefore in the second stage; Kṛṣṇa says: do not follow karma-yōga out of fear, but follow it out of gratitude towards the Lord. The more you appreciate the Lord, the more you appreciate the gift of the Lord, the more you appreciate the harmony and beauty of creation, the more you want to express your gratitude; I do not whether you read in today's newspaper that in America, that one old person has gone by rocket a second time; some Glenn or someone and he has given a beautiful statement, the one who appreciates the creation, he cannot but believe in God, and he cannot but pray to Lord. He is a scientist; he has got a mature mind; the more we appreciate the beauty of creation; natural expression is gratitude and that is what we call as worship. Therefore in the early morning the moment we get up:

समुद्र वसने देवी पर्वतस्तन मन्डले ,विष्णुपत्नि नमस्तुभ्यम् पादस्पर्शम क्षमस्वमे ।

samudra vasanē dēvī parvatastana maṇḍalē, viṣṇupatni namastubhyam pādasparśama kṣamasvamē |

My gratitude begins right at the beginning of the morning, before I step over the earth, I just ask for forgiveness, it is a beautiful creation of the Lord; unfortunately I have to step on the Mother Earth; for that I ask for forgiveness. What an amount of appreciation? And then when we go river to take bath or when we open the tap, river or what? When you open the tap,

गंगेच यमुने चैव गोधावरि सरस्वति ,नर्मधे सिन्दु कावेरी ,जलेस्मिन् सन्निधिम् कुरु ।

gaṅgēca yamunē caiva, gōdhāvari sarasvati, narmadhē sindu kāvērī, jalēsmin sannidhim kuru |

I appreciate the beautiful water, one of the most wonderful chemical products of the creation, is water. The more you think of the glory of water, the more you feel like offering prostration. If you are doing sandhyavandhana till now, by mistake perhaps, there also;

आपो वा इदं सर्वं विश्वा भूतान्यापः प्राणा वा आपः
पशव आपोऽन्नमापोऽमृतमापः सम्राडापो विराडापः
स्वराडापश्छन्दाँस्यापो ज्योतीँष्यापो

सत्यमापः सर्वा देवता आपो भूर्भुवः सुवराप ओम्. ॥

āpō vā idaṃ sarvaṃ viśvā bhūtānyāpaḥ prāṇā vā āpaḥ paśava āpō:'nnamāpō:'mṛtamāpaḥ samrāḍāpō virāḍāpaḥ svaraḍāpaśchandāṃsyāpō jyōtīmśyāpō yajūṃśyāpaḥ
satyamāpaḥ sarvā dēvatā āpō bhūrbhuvāḥ suvarāpa om||

-(Maha Narayanopanishad: Twenty Nineth Anuvaakam)

Translation.....

“Verily all this is water. All the created beings are water. The vital breaths in the body are water. Quadrapeds are water. Edible crops are water. Ambrosia is water. Samraat is water. Viraat is water. Svaraat is water. The metres are water. The luminaries are water. Vēdic formulas are water. Truth is water. All deities are water. The three worlds denoted by bhuh: bhuvaha: and suvaha: are water. The source of all these is the supreme denoted by the syllable Om. ”

I am supposed to have forgotten, because long before I did sandhyā vandhanam. So therefore, I take water in the hand and being conscious of the wonderful product. In fact, if they want to look for life in any planet, they look for water only. Because the water is the basic of life; and we have got so much plenty, we even let the water, into the ocean. One rainy season, only one week; full of water. If the rain is not there; what the problem is: Therefore I do not take the gift for granted; spend a few minutes looking at the water. And similarly: namō brahmaṇē, namastē vāyō, tvamēva pratyakṣam brahmāsi. I do not take the oxygen for granted. If you have any doubt, regarding the value of oxygen, close your mouth and nose for a few seconds, you will know.

Therefore, vēdic life is intense awareness of the environment. So appreciation of the earth. Appreciation of the water; appreciation of the air; appreciation of fire; agnimīlē purōhitam, yajñasya dēva mṛtvijam. In almost every ritual, it begins with the prayer to the Agni, fire. And also the most important element is ākāśaḥ, which accomodates us very well; therefore during sandhyavandhanam, I offer my prostrations to ākāśa also; prācyai diśē namaḥ | dakṣiṇāyē diśē namaḥ | pratīcyai diśē namaḥ | udicyai diśē namaḥ | ūdvāyai nama: | adharāya namaḥ | antarīkṣāya namaḥ | bhūmyai nama | brahmaṇē nama: | viṣṇavē namaḥ | mṛtyatē namaḥ

All the five elements are the gifts of the Lord and therefore I am intensely aware of them and I do not have to produce them, I do not want even to purify them; what I have to do is if I do not pollute them, such a life itself is the greatest offering to the Lord. Bhagavān says you need not maintain the creation, you will only mess it; I know how to do that; if you do not disturb the harmony, that is the greatest offering you can give to me; therefore convert your life as an offering to me: it is called yajñāḥ. And any life which violates this beautiful harmony and rhythm, Kṛṣṇa says: that is bondage to entire humanity; that will destroy the humanity.

Therefore, he says, yajñārthāt karmaṇa; let your life be an offering to the Lord; let your work be a worship. And if it is not so, ayaṁ lōkō karma-bandhanaḥ. An action which is not meant for Īśvarā-worship; all such actions are only bondage. That is the beauty. Action can be binding action; action can be liberating action. Like cobra poison. The poison can kill a person within a few minutes, cobra poison. But the very same poison, in certain places, they extract and make medicine out of it, the very same poison, if handled properly, it can become a saving medicine. So therefore, tell me whether poison is a killer or a savior? What will be the answer? It depends upon how you handle. Similarly action is a saviour, or a binder, a killer or spiritual destroyer.

Kṛṣṇa says that action by itself, neither binds nor liberates, but it all depends upon how you handle the action; action minus devotion, is bondage. Action plus devotion is a liberator. This is the basic principle of karma-yōga. Action plus devotion is a liberating factor. Action minus devotion is a mahā-binding factor. That is why Kṛṣṇa says in the later chapter:

पत्रं पुष्पं फलं तोयं यो मे भक्त्या प्रयच्छति |
तदहं भक्त्युपहृतमश्रामि प्रयतात्मनः ॥ ९.२६ ॥

[Patraṁ puṣpaṁ phalaṁ toyāṁ yō mē \(this is most important\) bhaktyā prayacchati |
tadahaṁ bhaktyupahṛtamaśnāmi prayatātmanaḥ ||9-26||](#)

Action plus devotion is called yajñāḥ, action minus devotion is called karma. Action plus devotion is equal yajñāḥ, action minus devotion is karma; yajña liberates karma binds; karmaṇa bādhyatē janthu. Śāstra itself says: karmaṇā badyatē jantuḥ. Therefore he says ayaṁ lōkaḥ karmabandhanaḥ. Therefore, Arjuna, tadarthaṁ karma kuru samācara. Therefore may you do all your actions as a worship of the Lord.

So do not bother whether your family people acknowledge or appreciate. Family members may not acknowledge or appreciate your services; often they use the expression, it is a thankless job; it is an idiom; whatever you do, there is no appreciation; especially in our culture, it is supposed to be your duty; therefore nobody appreciates anybody's contribution. OK, if they do not appreciate, it is OK. We, with magnifying glass look for minute defect. A may cook and serve for years together; no dish is appreciated; but if there is slight less salt, they will not tell that, after saying that the other dish is good; whatever is tasty is never recognised; whatever is not up to the mark; that too the tongue is terrible tongue; that is criticised. Similarly, the Government. We are very good criticising the Government, but we never ask the question, how do I live?

So therefore, your job, your work, may not be appreciated; if you look for appreciation, you lose your interest; if you are doing it as an offering to the Lord, the very action will give you happiness. It has nothing to do with others' appreciation. The very action is a satisfaction. That is why we use the expression: māmōpātta-samasta-durita-kṣaya-dvārā śrī-paramēśvara-prītyarthaṁ. I am happy that I have done this as an offering to the Lord. And if people appreciate, it is a bonus; but here it is very important.

We are not supposed to expect appreciation; the śāstra's commandment one should understand clearly. We are not supposed to expect appreciation from the family members; so we have no right to expect appreciation. But at the same time, śāstra advises every family member, that your duty is to appreciate others' contribution. What some people are telling is: I would not appreciate, because it is said that in Gīta that no one should expect appreciation. Very careful, they should not expect appreciation, but it is my duty to appreciate every contribution of every member of the family. They should not ask but you should give the appreciation. Therefore, wife should not ask for appreciation from the husband; but the husband should appreciate. Similarly husband should not expect appreciation from wife, but wife should . And the teacher should not expect appreciation (I will also tell about me!), from the students; but it is the students' duty to appreciate, which is done in the form of namaskāra, reverence, etc. Similarly, throughout our culture is unique, you have no right, but you have got duties and duties alone.

And the beauty is: the beauty of duty is when you do your duty, the other people will get their right. When you do your duty, the other people will get their right. Therefore our society is duty-based society; and Dayānanda Swami beautifully says; where duty is emphasised, humility will come, whereas where right is emphasised, there fight will come; court will come; divorce will come; all these things will come. And therefore, Kṛṣṇa says tadarthaṁ karma kauntēya. You do what you have to do; as an offering to the Lord and that too how, muktasaṅgaḥ samācara, without expecting anything in return. Muktsaṅgaḥ; without bothering about the consequences.

सहयज्ञाःप्रजा सृष्ट्वा पुरोवाच प्रजापतिः ।
अनेन प्रसविष्यध्वमेष वोऽस्त्विष्टकामधुक् ॥३.१०॥

sahayajñāḥprajā sṛṣṭvā purōvāca prajāpatiḥ |
anēna prasaviṣyadhvameṣa vo'stviṣṭakāmadhuk ||3.10 ||

सृष्ट्वा प्रजाः sṛṣṭvā prajāḥ Having created human-beings सहयज्ञाः sahayajñāḥ along with Yajña पुरा purā in the beginning of creation प्रजापतिः prajāpatiḥ the creator उवाच uvāca said प्रसविष्यध्वम् prasaviṣyadhvam “May you prosper अनेन anēna by this. एष अस्तु ēṣa astu May this be इष्टकामधुक् iṣṭakāmadhuk a source of all desired objects वः vaḥ for you."

10. Having created human-beings along with Yajña in the beginning (of creation), the creator said – "May you prosper (Yajña) by this. May this (Yajña) be a source of all desired objects for you."

So such a life of sacrifice is prescribed by the vēdās themselves for the harmony and progress of the society. Such a life of contribution; such a life of sacrifice; such a life of sharing called yajña way of life, is prescribed by the vēdās themselves, for whose benefit? For our own benefit.

And that is why we say that the vēdās are like a manual, which has come along with the creation itself. I have talked about this before, whenever a company brings about a product, and you buy the product, along with the product, you get a manual. Even you buy a simple eye-drops or ear drops. Nothing is there. Simple common sense you can know it. But there will be small pamphlet in 25 languages; in English, Malayalam, Hindi, Tamil, Arabic - in all languages, because we are a secular country - and they will say: Remove the cap, press the bottle, put the cap and keep it in a cool place. Like that, you will find instructions. Why are there instructions? Because the manufacturer alone will know what is the ideal way of handling his product. And if he is giving instructions, not for his own benefit, it is only meant for the benefit of the user. And by following the instructions, who is going to get the benefit, I am going to get the benefit.

That is why tell; just a joke, Doctors should not mistake. A patient went to the doctor after a few days and said My disease is cured; I followed the instructions given in the medicine bottle, very clearly; and what was the instruction? Keep the bottle tightly corked; I kept it nicely corked, I never used it, and I got well.

So therefore, using the instructions; by using the instruction, I am going to get the benefit. Similarly who has manufactured this world? Not any one of the human beings. Human beings cannot create anything except some confusion.

They cannot create anything, and that too this wonderful-world, no ordinary human-intelligence can create, we are not even able to fully understand the creation, where is the question of creating this world. Therefore we say, Bhagavān has created this world and he has given this world for our use and therefore Bhagavān feels that there should be a manual given to the human-beings, so that he will know how to live in the world and get maximum benefit out of the world. Maximum-benefit means what? Dharma-artha-kāma, even mōkṣaḥ-puruṣārthaḥ, he should attain. If Bhagavān does not give the manual, we do not know how to handle the world, as we are seeing how our life is environment-unfriendly-life it is; now they are coining the word, eco-friendly and eco-unfriendly; and we only are polluting this creation; creating ozone holes; creating all kinds of problems, destroying whom? Ourselves only, therefore we do not know how to handle the world, as they tell:

நந்த வனத்தில் ஒரு ஆண்டி; நாலாறுமாதாமாய் கூயவனை வேண்டி; கொண்டு வந்தான் ஒரு தோண்டி;
கூத்தாடி கூத்தாடி போட்டு உடைதாண்டி;

nānta vaṇattil oru āṇṭi; nālārumātāmāy kūyavaṇai vēṇṭi; koṇṭu vantān oru tōṇṭi; kūttāṭi kūttāṭi pōṭṭu uṭaitāṇṭi

I do not want to translate, you will know the meaning. Similarly, if I do not know how to handle this world, I will make this world, the cause of my own destruction; and therefore, along with the creation; Bhagavān gave out the vēdās also:

यो ब्रह्माणम् विदधाति पूर्वं ,यो वै वेदागुंश्च प्रहिनोहिति तस्मै ।

yō brahmāṇam vidadhāti pūrvaṁ, yō vai vēdāguṁśca prahinōhiti tasmai ।

And what are the vēdās; they are the manual who prescribe a life of harmony, called yajñāḥ. And here Kṛṣṇa says; follow the manual and lead a life of yajñāḥ, you will prosper; otherwise you will be the cause of your own destruction. So that is said here; prajāpatiḥ prajā sṛṣṭvā; prajāpatiḥ, Lord Brahma, created all the living beings, including the human beings.

All the living beings, including the human beings, the Lord created when, Pura, long before, adau, at the time of śṛṣṭi; and thereafter, he called the human being alone and gave the vēdās to the human beings; the vēdās were never given to monkeys, donkeys, cows, none of them; you know why, because they do not have a freewill to abuse. They do not have a freewill to abuse; they are all programmed creatures; therefore the life of all the animals will be in keeping with dharma. No animal will violate; what you call, the harmony of the creation; no plant will violate the world harmony. And that is why you will find any forest will be in perfect harmony until fill up the blanks; we enter. If we enter, it is gone; after that the forest cannot survive. As long as we do not enter the ocean; there is perfect harmony. They say there is a particular type of rodents, creatures known as lemmings; somehow they know when their population reaches beyond a limit; once the population reaches that limit, it will create an eco-imbalance and somehow they know that; again instinctive; and what they do it seems, just certain number of those creatures will commit suicide, so that there is a balance in their number. And that too sacrifice; ātma-tyāga for the sake of the universal harmony. And we also talk about balance of human population and we say; you all die; and I will have children, as I need children for my home and it is not necessary for other houses; utterly selfish people we are.

Therefore God need not give vēdās to animals; because they are programmed to follow universal harmony. Whereas in the case of human beings, God has given a freewill. It is a great blessing also; it is a terrible curse also. Like any faculty. Any faculty in the creation is neither good nor bad, it depends upon how we use this faculty; atomic energy is good or bad; what will you say; you cannot say so; you cannot say either way; it all depends upon how we use it; it can be a power generator. In fact, because of Akalpakaṁ alone, we are getting power; and a few days before, we know what happened; breakdown; power went; it is wonderful but at the same time, the same atomic energy alone destroyed millions of people in Hiroshima and Nagasaki. Any power.

Similarly, human-beings have got tremendous intelligence and freewill. With this we can create a heaven in the human society or we can create a hell also.

Swami Chinmayānanda used to tell a beautiful example; that there were two rooms; in both rooms, some people were there; they had a peculiar condition, that they cannot bend their hand; and food was available; and they have to use the hand alone, they cannot put their mouth directly in the vessel as it was deep inside the vessel, etc. and therefore in one room the people were trying to take and eat, and they could not eat; and therefore they were starving and were about to die also. They were trying; but in the neighbouring room, they were hearing music and all; seems to be enjoying; they also have the same problem; and when they went to their room, they found that each person was taking the food and feeding the other; wonderful; and not in this room; even if I die, I will not feed you. This is called selfishness. Therefore, a human being can lead an ideal life of giving and sharing. So therefore the freewill is there only for the human being, and therefore he can get the greatest benefit of mōkṣa; or he can create a hell also.

And therefore Arjuna, anēna prasaviṣyadhvam. Anēna means with the life of karma-yōga; with the life of yajña, which is given out in the vēdic-manual; which is given along with the creation, by following that; prasaviṣyadhvam, may you prosper.

That is what somebody wrote: that what is the difference between a life of competition and a life of cooperation? He says competition is a deadly thing to the society; because once there is a competition, there is only selfishness; I do not want to share any knowledge with the other company. One country does not want to share the scientific advancement with the other company; America put sanctions; I will not give you, I will only keep it. Therefore in competition, we turn selfish; we do not share whatever we have; whereas in cooperation alone, there is growth.

Generally people think, in competition, the best comes out of human beings. Only when there is competition, the best comes, they say; but we say, the worst comes in human beings; That is why even in sports, when there is heavy competition, there is cheating; there is a drug; all those things because somehow I want to win; Vēdā says competition is a disease called mātsaryam. Among the six evils of kāmaḥ, krōdhaḥ, lōbhaḥ, mōhaḥ, madaḥ, mātsaryaḥ. Mātsaryaḥ is the evil of competition. Vedā says competition should be replaced by cooperation. I should be happy when the other person also thrive. I should not become jealous when the other person thrives. Therefore He says, Anēna prasaviṣyadhvam; through karma-yōga, may you all uniformly prosper and may this be ēṣa iṣṭakāmadhuk astu. iṣṭakāmadhuk means, kāmadhēnuḥ; kāmadhēnuḥ is a mythological cow, a heavenly cow; like kalpaka vṛkṣaḥ and what is the uniqueness of kāmadhēnuḥ; the very word shows kāmam kāmam dhōgdi iti kāmadhēnuḥ; whatever you desire; the kāmadhēnuḥ gives out; the local cows can give you only milk. But kāmadhēnuḥ while milking you desire anything; instead of milk, coco-cola, it will come when you milk. Badam kir will come; and not only liquids, even the solids. You want a house, you want a van, a vehicle, children, kāmam kāmam dhōgdi iti kāmadhēnuḥ. It can fulfil all your desires. After the class, do not ask where that cow is; It is a heavenly cow; remember; what do you mean by kāmadhēnuḥ?

It is a symbolic expression of human intellect; in fact, human intellect is kāmadhēnuḥ, because with the human intellect, we can accomplish anything and everything; look at the scientific progress; what all things have become possible; something happens somewhere, a cricket match; sorry I made you remember, and now you will miss the class; cricket match between India and Zimbabwe; you can just sit here and watch. So when we said Vyasācārya could see the war, sitting in the palace, a few years back before the discovery of television, it was considered a cock and bull story but now it has become possible; you can watch; internet and computer, you need not travel anywhere; in a 4 x4 room and you can do everything. All because of what, only one faculty; human intelligence. Apply appropriately, it is kāmadhēnuḥ for you. And what all it can milk: artha, kāma, dharmāḥ and not only it can milk dharmārtha-kāma, and if you are sufficiently intelligent and mature, it can give you ultimately mōkṣa also. And thus, intelligent way of living is kāmadhēnuḥ. Karma-yōga is kāmadhēnuḥ. And therefore Kṛṣṇa says, yēṣaḥ karma-yōgaḥ yēṣaḥ yajña iṣṭa kāmadug vahaḥ; vahaḥ means for you, astu.

And that is why Vedā is not against material progress also. We do not curse television. We do not curse computer, we do not curse the discovery of cars and the discovery of what you call rockets and all; whereas some people say that, that is all materialistic progress. As a spiritual-seeker, I need not condemn them; they are all gifts of the Lord. In fact, we are ourselves using them. I heard Maharshi Mahesh Yōgi has a vēdic channel. Why do we criticise science. Vēdā is never against science. On the other hand, we welcome, so that after some time, we can have the class as a computer/internet classes. In rainy season, you need not come and you can sit at home and listen at your own timings. Why should I criticise computer; or anything for that matter? What Vedā says is if you are committed to material progress only and if you do not parallelly bring the spritual growth also, the very same materialism can become deadly. Because every human being is a mixture of matter and spirit; anātma and ātma; growth in life should be a well balanced growth. And what is well-balanced growth? Scientific progress also must be there; economic progress also must be there; these are all wonderful things. But let them not become an obstacle to the spiritual growth also.

And what is the spritual growth; the ultimate growth is discovery of the fact that I am the ātma which is the substratum of the whole universe; infinite expansion is spiritual growth. Physically you cannot expand beyond a limit. Better you do not expand beyond a limit; therefore it will become unwieldy, therefore physically you cannot and better not expand beyond a limit; mentally also you cannot expand beyond a limit; intellectually also you cannot expand beyond a limit; total expansion infinite growth is possible only spiritually therefore cater to spritual growth while you are pursuing material thing.

And such a balanced pursuit of material, dharma-arta kāma, as well as self-knowledge is called karma-yōgaḥ. Therefore, ēṣaḥ karma-yōgaḥ, vahaḥ for you, be a kāmadenuḥ.

Verse 3.11

देवान् भावयतानेन ते देवा भावयन्तु वः ।
परस्परं भावयन्तः श्रेयः परमवाप्स्यथ ॥३.११॥

dēvān bhāvayatā'neṇa tē devā bhāvayantu vaḥ |
parasparaṁ bhāvayantaḥ śreyaḥ paramavāpyastha ||3.11||

भावयत bhāvayata May you nourish देवान् dēvān the gods अनेन anēna by this (Yajña)
ते देवाः tē devāḥ May the gods भावयन्तु वः bhāvayantu vaḥ nourish you (in turn). भावयन्त परस्परम् bhāvayantaḥ parasparam (Thus) nourishing each other अवाप्स्यथ avāpyasyatha you will परं श्रेयः paraṁ śrēyaḥ supreme good.

11. May you nourish the gods by this (Yajña). May the gods nourish you (in turn). (Thus) nourishing each other, you will attain supreme good.

So continuing with the same concept of Yajñāḥ; karma-yōga as yajña, Kṛṣṇa says by following karma-yōga yajña, you are propitiating the gods of the creation; you are propitiating the dēvathās.

And who are the dēvathās; according to the Śāstra, dēvathās are presiding deities over the natural forces. So when I lead a life of harmony, I am propitiating the dēvathās; who are the dēvathās; Indra, the Lord of rain and thunder; Varuṇa, is the Lord of the oceans. Similarly, Yamaḥ, Prajāpati, you take every dēvathās is nothing but natural forces; that means what? The nature will be propitiated by harmonious life. That means what, the nature is not violated. And when I propitiate the Gods, in return, what do I get? The Gods are going to give you plenty; So you and the creation should not be enemical, you are not fighting with nature; but you are living in cooperation with nature. This is another uniqueness of our scriptures. Science approaches nature as something to be conquered; they always uses the expression, conquering nature; conquering Mt. Everest. Just climbing is conquering.

We never should think like that at all. We need not conquer. Nature is not our enemy. World has not come to give us problems. I and world should live in harmony, and therefore there should be progress at both levels.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa says propitiate gods, which are in the form of nature, and what will they do in return? Tē dēvā bhāvayantu vaḥ; they will please you by giving you plenty of rains; seasons will come in properly; rains will come properly; in scientific language, what do they say; if you lead such a life, in which the ecological harmony is destroyed, then they say that the seasons will be violated, you won't get enough rain. They use scientific language; you cut the trees; and then the rains will not come properly and they will give the scientific reasons for that.

Same idea the śāstra will put in a different language, every tree is like the body of the Lord. In fact, in bhāgavatham, every tree is compared to the hair on the body of the Lord. Every river is compared to the blood vessels of the Lord. So if the rivers are stopped, it is like what; blocking of the arteries and veins; then you will have to go in for bypass surgery, called disease. Similarly they say when you are polluting the river, you are polluting the blood of the Lord. When you are blocking the river, you are blocking the blood vessels of the Lord, language is religious language, but the ultimate result is what? Respect nature; live in harmony with nature. What you call as ecological harmony; we call as karma-yōgaḥ a. Therefore, anēna karma Yōgēna dēvān bhavayataḥ; may you propitiate the dēvas; and that is why Kalidāsa writes a mangalāṣṭākam. It is a beautiful slōka, he addresses all the trees;

जम्बूनिंबकदंबचूतलरलाः वृक्षाश्च ये क्षीरिणः

Early morning I remember all the trees and offer my namaskārams to them. I know how the trees are important.

I offer my prostrations to all the rivers; I offer prostrations to all the plants; I appreciate the role of everything and I take a vow that my life will be in harmony with nature. And therefore he says; parasparaṁ bhāvayantaḥ; thus mutually propitiating you propitiate the nature, and the nature propitiates you; or in religious language, you propitiate the gods, and the gods will propitiate you; bless you, and what is God's propitiation? Seasons will come properly, rains will come properly, crops will be aplenty; parasparaṁ bhāvayantaḥ, mutually propitiating, paraṁ śrēyaḥ avāpyastha; may you accomplish all welfare, all welbeings. And paraṁ śrēyaḥ, includes caturvidhaḥ puruṣārthaḥ.

You can accomplish, dharma-arta and kāma, and even for economic prosperity, karma-yōga is required. That is what the UNO made a study; food organisation, they made a study and what they found was we have got enough food for all the people to eat well; they have studied the total food production of the world and the total needs of the world and they have found that there is so much surplus that nobody need starve. But our greatest problem is not the lack of food, but the lack of proper distribution or sharing. In some places, people are dying of starvation. Another place, people are dying of obesity. Obesity is the cause of death in some advanced countries. Constantly eating; the only part of the body active is the hand and mouth. Eating and eating and therefore out.

Adyatē adīcya bhūtāni. Śāstra says you eat food, and it will nourish you; but when you overeat, the same food destroys you. Therefore, food is consumed by the human-beings in limited measure but the very same food is the consumer of the human being when it is taken beyond a limit. Upaniṣad says Adyatē, it is eaten by human being; adīcya bhūtāni; food eats, if it is overeaten. Therefore our problem is not, not the lack of food, everything is plenty; as somebody nicely said, we have enough for human need; but we do not have enough for human greed. Therefore do not be greedy, if you get more, you share; you contribute; such a life of contribution sacrifice giving, sharing is karma-yōga.

And by karma-yōga may you attain all the four puruṣārthaḥs.

Hari Om.

040 CHAPTER 03, VERSES 11-13

ॐ

Lord Kṛṣṇa is looking at karma-yōga from various angles. We have already seen the general definition of karma-yōga which is nothing but proper-action plus proper-attitude is karma-yōga. And what is proper action? Selfless-action in which I contribute to the world more and I take only less from the world: is called selfless-action, sātvic karma, and selfish-action is an action in which I do not want to give anything free to the world. Whatever I do, I want to convert into some benefit for me. I cannot imagine giving anything free to the world.

So selfless-actions or selfish-actions, both of them Kṛṣṇa allows for a person but what he says; selfless action must be predominant in a person's life. Selfish-action, a person cannot avoid; because he has to work for protecting himself and his family. But what Kṛṣṇa says is selfless-action must be predominant; selfish-action must be lesser; and harmful action should be totally avoided.

And whether one performs a selfless or selfish-action, the attitude must be appropriate and the appropriate attitude is: dedicating both the action, selfless or selfish-action, dedicating both of them to the Lord: Īśvarārpaṇa-buddhi and if I am receiving anything in return, I receive it not as my accomplishment, I receive it as the gift of the Lord, prasāda-buddhi.

So thus proper-action plus proper-attitude is karma-yōga we saw. And this karma-yōga Kṛṣṇa is looking at from various angles. The first angle through which Kṛṣṇa studied karma-yōga is as a commandment of the Lord. Vihitam of the Lord. Vidhi of the Lord. Niyatam of the Lord. And Bhagavān has compulsorily enjoined a karma-yōga way of life and if a person refuses to live a life of karma-yōga, then Bhagavān threatened that person with imprisonment, which is called prathyavaya pāpam. Whoever does not follow karma-yōga way of life, he is incurring a special pāpam called prathyavayam and imprisonment that he undergoes is called saṁsāra-kārāgraḥ. The jail called saṁsāra. And therefore Kṛṣṇa wants, at least out of fear of punishment, you should follow karma-yōga. This is the first angle of looking at karma-yōga.

Then Kṛṣṇa looked at karma-yōga from another angle; because in the first angle, there is a disadvantage because a person is following karma-yōga out of fear. Fear is never a healthy emotion.

As somebody nicely said, fear is the dark room in which all the negatives are developed. Fear is the dark room in which all the negatives are developed. For developing film negative, they used a dark room. Similarly, fear is a dark room in which all the negatives, means negatives emotions are developed; that is why the psychologists say never try to discipline your children through fear. Fear is a terrible method of disciplining your child, because your child may follow discipline out of fear, but your child's mind will never progress, when there is fear. And such children when they grow up, they will become terrible husbands and they will become terrible fathers and they will become terrible teachers. So if there are terrible husbands and fathers and teachers, the mistake is not their own, the mistake is only of their parents, because they disciplined the child out of, or through the means of fear.

But of course sometimes in extreme cases, we might have to use the punishment method also. But what śāstra wants is that this method must be used only extremely, sparingly. Like certain powerful medicines like pethadine, etc. a doctor will not that easily use, but when there is no other way, he uses, but only very sparingly. Similarly, Kṛṣṇa also uses the method of fear to make a person follow karma-yōga but Kṛṣṇa feels that this method should not be followed for long. Sooner or later, a person should follow karma-yōga; not out of fear of God, but out of love of God. Out of reverence towards the Lord.

And this karma-yōga performed as a worship of the Lord is called yajñaḥ. Karma-yōga performed out of fear is called ājña; karma-yōga performed out of reverence is called yajña. And in this, I convert every one of my actions into worship of the Lord; because as Swami Chinmayānanda nicely said: What Bhagavān has given to you is Bhagavān's gift to you, whether it is the body or the world. And what is your gift to the Lord; because whenever we receive a gift, we want to reciprocate; in Marriages, etc. If somebody has given you a gift costing Rs.250; this person notes it in his diary, when that person's son's marriage comes, he reciprocates, by giving another gift, which is around Rs.250. Not more. And to avoid this problem, some people write in the invitation card, please avoid presentations; because our culture says when you receive something you have to reciprocate.

Therefore, what Bhagavān has given to you that is the body and the world, they are Bhagavān's gift to you and what is my reciprocation. Swami Chinmayānanda nicely says: What you do with Bhagavān's gift; what you do with Bhagavān's gift is your gift to the Lord. Bhagavān has given the body gift, with this body, I can thoroughly enjoy the life; as they say, eat, drink and be merry. When Bhagavān sees that I am using the body for indulgence, Bhagavān is very very unhappy as it were, and if I use this body for parōpakārahṁ;

परोपकाराय फलन्ति वृक्षः परोपकाराय धूहन्ति गावहः ।
परोपकाराय वहन्ति नद्यः परोपकारार्थम् इदं शरीरम् ॥

parōpakārāya phalanti vrikṣaḥ parōpakārāya dhūhanti gāvahaḥ |
parōpakārāya vahanti nadhyaḥ parōpakārātham idaṁ śarīram ||

Parōpakārāya phalanti vṛkṣaḥ; the tree produces lot of fruits, and all for what purpose; only to gift to the world and even if somebody throws stone at the tree, in return the tree gives only fruits. Parōpakārāya dhūhanti gāvahaḥ; the cow produces milk all for sacred purposes; our coffee, our tea, our rudrabhishekam. Parōpakārāya vahanti nadhyaḥ; the rivers carry water; all for blessing the society only. From looking at the nature, we can easily understand why Bhagavān has given this body; therefore paropakarātham idaṁ śarīram.

Therefore when I utilise my body to serve the world; when I utilise the mind to give love to others; when I utilise my intellect to share my knowledge with others, that will become the worship of the Lord. And for this worship of the Lord, I am going to get the greatest benefit and what is the benefit? Kṛṣṇa said that

देवान् भावयतानेन ते देवा भावयन्तु वः ।
परस्परं भावयन्तः श्रेयः परमवाप्स्यथ ॥३.११॥

devān bhāvayatā'neṇa tē devā bhāvayantu vaḥa |
parasparam bhāvayantaḥa śreyaḥa paramavāpyastha || 3.11 ||

When you lead such a life of yajña, then in return you get all the four puruṣārthās, even if you do not ask for it; you will get the puruṣārta. Param śrēyaḥ avāpyasyatha. Therefore what is the second angle of karma-yōga? Convert life into a worship of the Lord. Up to this we saw.

Verse 3.12

इष्टान् भोगान् हि वो देवा दास्यन्ते यज्ञभाविताः ।
तैर्दत्तानप्रदायैभ्यो यो भुङ्क्ते स्तेन एव सः ॥३.१२॥

iṣṭān bhōgān hi vō dēvā dāsyantē yajñabhāvitāḥ |
tairdattānapradāyaibhyō yō bhun̄ktē stēna ēva saḥ ||3.12||

देवाः dēvāḥ The gods, यज्ञभाविताः yajñabhāvitāḥ- who are nourished by Yajña दास्यन्ते हि वः dāsyantē hi vaḥ will indeed give you इष्टान् भोगान् iṣṭāna bhōgān all the desired pleasures सः य भुङ्क्ते saḥ ya bhun̄ktē He, who enjoys तैर्देवान् tai dēvān their gifts अप्रदाय apradāya without offering एभ्यः ēbhyaḥ to them एव स्तेन ēva stēna - is verily a thief.

12. The gods, who are nourished by Yajñas, will indeed give you all the desired pleasures. He, who enjoys their gifts without offering to them, is verily a thief.

Here Kṛṣṇa says when you lead such a life of worship, the Lord will bless you with everything that you want. If you say that I am not interested in dharmārtha kāmāḥ; then the very same karma-yōga will bless you with mōkṣa. If you are interested in dharmārtha kāmāḥ; then the very same karma-yōga will bless you with dharmārtha kāmāḥ. Thus karma-yōga is a double edged sword, which can give you both material benefit and spiritual benefit; it is like a two-in-one instrument; we have a got a radio also; you have got a record player also;; If you switch on the radio, the radio song will come; if you switch on the record player, that music will come.

Similarly karma-yōga is two-in-one, it will give both prosperity: material and as well as the spiritual growth; but which one do you want is your choice. Because everybody may not be interested in mōkṣa. There are many people who even now say Swāmiji; Gīta class I will come, it is OK, but I want to make it clear, I am not after mōkṣa and all. I have got so many responsibilities to discharge; now only I have two small children; I have to educate them; I have to settle them, so many duties to discharge; how can I shirk those duties and work for my mōkṣa. Kṛṣṇa does not criticise those people; if you do not want mōkṣa, there is nothing wrong.; If you are interested in dharmārtha kāmā, there is nothing wrong; but the only condition that Bhagavān puts is: fulfil your dharmārtha kāmā through karma-yōga method not through any what? Corrupt way of life.

Through legitimate method, through legal methods, through ethical methods fulfil your goals, never take to shortcut methods becoming quickly rich, doubly rich, do not do that. Therefore he says, dēvāḥ dāsyantē; the various deities of the creation, like Indra, Varuṇa, Agni, etc. they will give you everything that you want. dānyam danam paśum bahuputra lābham śatasamvastsaram dhīrgamāyuh. In every ritual, the priest will tell this without fail, whether he recites the necessary mantras or not, and that too he will tell it very loud so that it falls in our ears; dānyam danam paśum bahuputra lābham śatasamvastsaram dhīrgamāyuh, (now ēkaputra lābham ēkaputri lābham) satha śatasamvastsaram dhīrgamāyuh.

Here Bhagavān says all the deities will bless you with all these gifts. When? yajñabhāvitāḥ; when the presiding deities are worshiped through karma-yōga. When these deities are worshipped through karma-yōga, then they will bless you. For example, when I follow karma-yōga, I do not exploit the nature. A karma-yōgi will never exploit the nature, to feed his greed; when a karma-yōgi does not exploit the nature, then the natural rhythm, natural-harmony is maintained which will result in the seasons flowing properly. That is why at the end of every pūja, we say: kālē varṣatu parjanya, because our whole life is dependent on rains alone; if there are no rains, ativṛṣṭi or anāvṛṣṭi, famine is definite. The entire economy will be in doldrums; if we do not have proper seasons; therefore we say kālē varṣatu parjanya. For what purpose? Pṛthvi sasyaśālīni. Let the earth have plenty of greenery.

I do not know whether you read a recent news item. When the green goes from the city it is red. When the green goes from the city, it is red, meaning, when the greenery goes from the city, the lungs of the city is damaged; the air pollution is going to increase and it is going to become red, meaning it is danger. And therefore pṛthvi sasyaśālīni.

Then what is the consequence? Dēśōyam kṣōbharahitā, let the country be free from famine and it will happen, only when brāhmaṇasantu nirbhayā. When the brāhmaṇā, means cultured educated followers of the vēda are able to boldly follow the dharmic way of life.

Now if I want to lead a corruption free life, I feel I am a black sheep and all the other people laugh at me (are you a great sanyāsi, who never tell a lie). Are you a big person? Thus all the people tease me, if I choose to follow a corruption free life, a society is a healthy society when the dharmic people are able to follow dharma fearlessly. And therefore Kṛṣṇa says: dēvāḥ iṣṭān bhōgān dāsyantē, follow karma-yōga; Gods will bless you with all the puruṣārthaḥs.

Then we may ask a question; why should I accept a God? Because after all when I am going to do action in the world; the very action is going to produce the result; When I sow the seed, the earth has the capacity to produce the sprout, the seed has the capacity to sprout. Therefore the available laws of the nature itself are able to give me the karma-phalam. When the world is capable of giving karma-phalam, why should I accept a God as the karma phala dātā.

For that question, we answer: Remember, whenever I do an action, the action produces the result, it is not because of my glory. No doubt, I have worked hard; I have tilled the land, I have put fertilisers; I have watered, I have put pesticides, I have done everything; therefore no doubt, I have worked hard to produce the crops, but remember our scriptures say that this result is possible because of the laws of nature. Because of the laws of nature alone, I am able to accomplish everything; no doubt a scientist has discovered this microphone and because of that, I am able to happily address all of you without throat problem. Imagine if this mike does not work.

Now it certainly shows the greatness of the human intellect, but remember, if the microphone has been invented by someone, it is only because the possibility is already there in the creation; the law of magnifying the sound. This law no scientist has invented. Similarly if television is possible, no doubt the ingenious human intellect has discovered this television; but remember; the possibility of television is there in the creation. These possibilities alone we call, natural laws and no human being can produce even one natural law. If I have not produced the natural laws, somebody else must have produced these natural laws, and the producer of these natural laws, is called God or dēvatha.

Therefore every time I enjoy something, I have only tapped the natural laws and I am grateful to the dēvathās for putting that law in the creation. And the greatest beauty is no animal can invent those natural laws or discover those natural laws; Bhagavān has blessed me with a wonderful intellect and Bhagavān has blessed the world with infinite natural laws; my intellect is also Bhagavān's gift; the laws are also Bhagavān's gift. My glory is what? Neither the production of the intellect, nor the production of the laws, my glory is what? The tapping of the laws.

Therefore Kṛṣṇa says every time you tap a law, remember the Lord who has placed that law in the world. And that is why, in our culture, even before eating the food, we have got a prayer. Om bhūrbhuvassuvaḥ; or; brahmārpaṇam brahma havi; some prayer or the other is there; why should I pray to the Lord? After all I have produced the food through my effort; or I have purchased the food; producing or purchasing the food; why should I worship the Lord? What is the principle of worship? The production is possible because of the law of production.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa says you need not do anything, whenever you enjoy anything, remember, the Lord who has made that enjoyment possible. I do not want any money, you need not give me anything; close your eyes for 2 minutes and remember that Dēvatha because of whom alone that natural law is there; because of which law alone, I am enjoying the benefit. Even our physical health is only because of a series of bio-chemical laws. When I eat my food, I only dump all types of food, because there is no tax and the mouth is open and we go on putting in and never bother about what is happening inside and there is a wonderful law because of which the food is digested and all the nutrients are separated and they are transported to every part of the body, the waste is segregated and every day without fail; the waste is removed. And even every disease is possible only because of bio-chemical laws. If there is temperature in the body, I curse the rise of temperature, but if I remember the Lord, that is also a grace of the Lord, because there are certain toxins in the body, and the natural system wants to destroy those toxins by raising the temperature. And if there is a block in the throat; you cannot put the bottle brush and clean it, it will be terrible; so therefore we should have an ingenious method of clearing the throat and therefore Bhagavān has made the wonderful method of cough; when you are coughing, never curse the Lord; glorify the Lord.

Every disease is because of bio-chemical laws; I have never produced any law; I am only trying to handle and tap the law; and never forget this fact; and if you are forgetting this fact; you never express your gratitude towards the Lord, Kṛṣṇa says that you are a thief No.1. Look at the second line; tairdattān; by the dēvās varieties of blessings are given, dharma, arta, kāma, mōkṣa, food, clothing, shelter, what are all these; tairdattān; God has given. How has God given; remember, indirectly making the laws for tapping, and when you are enjoying those benefits, what should they do; you should say: Thanks to the Lord.

And if you do not do the thanks giving, you are an ungrateful-person; ingratitude is the worst weakness of a human being. The śāstrās say that for all the pāpams there is prāyaścittam, there is one pāpam for which there is no prāyaścittam and that is the pāpam of ingratitude. kritagnē nāsti niṣkritihīḥ. Kritagna means for an ungrateful person, niṣkritihīḥ hi nāsti; there is no prāyaścittam.

And that is why even in the western-culture they say whatever you take you say thanks. And whatever you return, you write, returned with thanks. Suppose you do not inform the other person, and make use of his possessions, making use of somebody else's possession, without informing and without expressing gratitude that is called what; theft; if your pocket has no money; suppose you want money, certainly you can borrow the money, nothing wrong in it, if the other person is ready to give; you ask and he gives and when you take that money you say very many thanks; and later when you return the money, if you return, because nowadays the bank loans, no returns.

Recently I read a news item which was a very very painful news item. The temple has got many lands and properties; the kings have built the temples and also they have given landed property for the temples; so that the temples can be maintained; and the people take those temple lands and do you know what is the rent, one paise for square feet. So we are taking the Lord's land; this person has become so insensitive, so gross, so criminal minded; and all these people are not illiterate people, they are educated people and using the temple lands and taking the land for re.1 as rent Rs.2 rent etc. and do you know what is the still painful news, even that Re.1 rent, they have not paid for last so many decades. So you can imagine to what extent human mind can go. To be a criminal, I need not murder a person or steal somebody else's wealth; if I am using temple land or for that matter any other land, even take a rented house and I know Dayānanda Swamiji says; people take house on rent and refuse to vacate it. They say that you yourselves find another house for me. Not that this man has done good to me. I want him to find a house for him. This poor fellow has to do all the things because, this poor man wants to get that person somehow or the other; that the rent should be of this range and the location should be in this area; all kinds of conditions to vacate, his own house. And Kṛṣṇa says all these people are ungrateful people and therefore they are thieves.

Therefore tairdattān ēbhyaḥ apradāya. ēbhyaḥ means dēvēbhyaḥ. apradāya means reciprocation, without reciprocation, if you enjoy the worldly benefits, then you are No.1 thief. And what is the reciprocation. Bhagavān does not want money in return. He just asks you just to do naivēdhyam before eating. That is why in our culture, whatever you cook, you are supposed to place in front of the Lord. Oh Lord, because of you alone, I have this food. And when I keep the food in front of the Lord, it is for what; Nivēdanam, means not offering; only acknowledgement. It is not offering, because I very clearly know Bhagavān is not going to take; even the smallest portion. Suppose Bhagavān begins to eat your naivēdhyam, even a small bit, then from tomorrow we will be careful, as we now know that Bhagavān does not eat it. So boldly, not because we are large hearted and all, but because Bhagavān does not take. Therefore Bhagavān says, you need not give, just say a thanks, do a namaskāram. Therefore tairdattān apradāyaibhyō yō bhukṅtē stēna ēva saḥ; that is why we say in our culture, that every moment of our life is a life of reverence.

This is one of the uniqueness-of-Hinduism and all-other-religions. They divide the life into two: secular-life and sacred-life; going to office and all other works, they consider secular; going to the temple or church or mosque, they consider as sacred; but in our Indian-culture; there is no secular/sacred division, because every-action is a sacred action. Every car driver or bus driver before starting his car, he does namaskāram. Before you start a factory, you break a coconut. Before you construct a building, you do a bhūmi pūja; our whole life is one of reverence alone. And a non-reverential life is karma. Reverential life is karma-yōgaḥ.

यज्ञशिष्टाशिनः सन्तो मुच्यन्ते सर्वकिल्बिषैः ।

yajñāśiṣṭāśinaḥ santō mucyantē sarvakilbiṣaiḥ |
bhuñjatē tē tvaghaṁ pāpā yē pacantyātmakāraṇāt || 3.13 ||

सन्तः santaḥ Those noble ones, यज्ञशिष्टाशिनः yajñāśiṣṭāśinaḥ who partake of the sacred remnants of Yajñas, मुच्यन्ते mucyantē are freed सर्वकिल्बिषैः sarvakilbiṣaiḥ from all sins. तु ते पापाः tu tē pāpāḥ those sinful ones ये पचन्ति yē pacanti who cook आत्मकारणात् ātmakāraṇāt for their own sake भुञ्जते अघम् bhuñjatē agam partake of sin

13. Those noble ones, who partake of the sacred remnants of Yajñas, are freed from all sins. But those sinful ones, who cook for their own sake, partake of sin.

Now Kṛṣṇa is looking at karma-yōga from a third angle. So the previous two angles are karma-yōga as Lord's commandment' the second angle is karma-yōga is worship of the Lord, yajñāḥ.

Now in this slōka, Kṛṣṇa looks at karma-yōga as a spiritual-purifier. Citta-śōdhakam; karma-yōga as citta-śōdhakam. So this one can appreciate only when he is a seeker of mōkṣa. This angle can be appreciated only when one is a seeker of mōkṣa. How? When I am seeker of mōkṣa, I know that there is only one means of attaining mōkṣa; and that means is spiritual wisdom or ātma-jñānām. Without ātma-jñānām, one can never attain mōkṣa: nānya panthā ayanāya vidhyatē.

Then the scriptures point out that even though ātma jñānām alone can liberate you, ātma-jñānām can take place only when the mind is pure. Without mental purity, ātma-jñānām is never possible. That is why, in a temple also, before I install the Lord, there are so many rituals, purifying the place. Similarly when I want to study the vēda, vēda is a sacred literature; I want to keep the vēda in my mind; and that cannot be done unless I purify myself. And that is why before starting vēdic study, they have got a series of rituals called upanayanam ceremony. What is upanayanam ceremony? Cleaning the body, cleaning my mind; to install the vēda mantras. Without purification, if I install the vēda mantrās, instead of vēda purifying me, I pollute the vēda. That is why they say upanayanam is important for vēdic chanting; people ask who can chant the vēdās; who cannot chant the vēdās; why do you say men alone can learn; ladies cannot learn; they ask umpteen questions; the criterion is not men or women; the idea is even a pucca brāhmaṇa cannot learn the vēdās, if he has not gone through the purificatory process, which is called upanayana saṁskāraḥ; saṁskāraḥ meaning purificatory process. Therefore, in our culture, any thing you do, you have to purify.

Even if you want to paint the wall, what do they do first? Have you seen? First they will use the sand paper to remove the previous thing and thereafter only they will paint. Similarly, ātma-jñānam can come only if the mind is scrubbed of rāgaḥ, dvēṣaḥ, kāma krōdhaḥ, lōbhaḥ, mōhaḥ, madaḥ mātsaryaḥ and for purifying the mind, you cannot use the local sandpaper; as they have a bhajan song;

மணி வெளுக்க சாணயுண்டு, தொல் உண்டு; வஸ்த்ரம் வெளுக்க, maṇi veḷukka cāṇayunṭu,.. tol unṭu; vastram veḷukka... so many things, different things are there; மனம் வெளுக்க வழியே இல்லை. Manam veḷukka vazhiyē illai. In fact மனம் வெளுக்க, we have a special sand paper, that is called karma-yōga sand-paper.

So a seeker is interested in this inner purification; he is not bothered about material prosperity. Karma-yōga may fetch material prosperity or not, karma-yōga, people may ridicule saying that you are the only foolish person, trying to follow the values of life; you should know how to பொழைக்க pozhaikka. It is a nice word, to say that you should know how to be corrupt. So therefore, people may appreciate my karma-yōga way of life, they may say I am a simpleton, they may say that you have lost all the prosperity because of values; they may say you can never earn money following values; the whole world considers him a failure; because the world's definition of success, is material prosperity. Minimum 3 cars, 3 houses, one in Madras, one in Kodaikanal or in Yercaud, a few industry.

The world considers success as material prosperity; whereas karma-yōgi does not consider material prosperity as success; not that he is rejects material prosperity, it may come; it may not come; but his focus is on inner purification. Material prosperity is secondary result; which may or may not come; the primary result is citta śōdhakam, mukthi sādhakam.

ईश्वरार्पितं नेच्छया कृतम् ।
चित्तशोधकं मुक्तिसाधकम् ॥ ३ ॥

[Īśvarārpitaṁ nēcchayā kṛtam |
cittaśōdhakam muktisādhakam || 3 ||](#) - Upadēśa Sāram of Ramaṇa.

If you dedicate your life to the Lord, and if you consider material-prosperity as subservient to spiritual-growth; then your karma-yōga will lead to mental-purity; which mental-purity will promote mukti-sādhakam. And therefore the third-angle is karma-yōga as inner-purifier. And that is why we say there is no failure in karma-yōga, which we saw in the second-chapter.

नेहाभिक्रमनाशोऽस्ति प्रत्यवायो न विद्यते |
स्वल्पमप्यस्य धर्मस्य त्रायते महतो भयात् ॥ २-४० ॥

[nēhābhikramanāśō'sti pratyavāyō na vidyatē |
svalpamapyasya dharmasya trāyatē mahatō bhayāt || 2.40 ||](#)

You define failure only from the standpoint of material accomplishment and non-accomplishment; you started a business, you got profit, you are considered success. You got loss, it is considered a failure; but in the case of karma-yōga, the inner purification takes place whether you earn profit through your business or whether you lose through your business.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa says, yajñāśiṣṭāśinaḥ santah; those people who convert their life into a worship, and receive the consequence as Īśvarā-prasāda, yajña-śiṣṭām; yajña-śiṣṭām means Īśvarā-prasāda; śiṣṭām means remnant. If some human-beings eat and leave something in his plate, that is called yecchil, that we are not supposed to eat; but when we offer something to the Lord or a mahatma, after you offer to the Lord or offer to a Mahatma and when you take back the very same thing is not called yecchil, it is yajña- śiṣṭām; prasādaḥ; those who take all the karma-phalams as yajña-śiṣṭām, all the karma-phalams as prasāda, and eat that, eat means enjoy, experience that, what is the benefit of that? Sarvakilbiṣaiḥ-mucyantē; he becomes free from all the pāpams. He becomes free from all the pāpams.

Very interesting; suppose you buy a book, and something is written on the book, somebody has written something on the book, then that book is already utilised; then that utilised book is called a second hand book; and therefore either you give that book back or ask for a lesser price. But the interesting thing is, you buy a book and if there is a Mahātma around, you hand over the book and Swamiji, just put your signature. Would it not become second hand or become lesser values? When it comes from a mahātma or Lord, it becomes greater; when it comes from anybody else, it becomes second hand.

Similarly, even a sweet prasāda, when it comes from the Lord, even if you are a diabetic person, we will still consume a little, because it is Venkitajalapathi laddu; and it will only reduce my disease; any other sweet will only increase the disease, but when Venkijalapathi prasādam (not to eat the full laddu ~ very careful, not to eat the football size laddu saying that I have the prasāda-buddhi). Prasādam should always be a little only.

Then what is the benefit? Sarvakiḷbiṣaiḥ mucyantē. But if you do not offer to the Lord, tē pāpam bhuñjatē; if they enjoy their life without offering to the Lord, without acknowledging the Lord's grace; if a person consumes anything, in fact, even at home and all, when we take medicine, for fever, etc. they have got one medicine, they have one dasamoolariṣtam; for everything from burn to jaundice; you will have body pain all over, they will not allow you to drink that easily; one is forced to sit up, and that too sit up facing the Lord, and then you take the medicine. Even that medicine is a law of the Lord, if a medicine has a curing property, it is Bhagavān's gift; therefore I consume medicine as Īśvara-prasāda. If I do not do that, Kṛṣṇa uses a strong word, you are a pāpi.

Hari Om.

ॐ

Lord Kṛṣṇa continues with the topic of karma-yōga. He was looking at karma-yōga from different angles. Firstly he pointed out karma-yōga as a way of life, which is prescribed by the Lord as a commandment. Just as they talk about the Ten Commandments. Here also karma-yōga is given by the Lord as a commandment, as ājña or vidhiḥ and Kṛṣṇa said that if a person does not follow a life of karma-yōga; for violating the Lord's commandment, one would incur the pāpam called prathyavāya pāpam. It is where we look at karma-yōga as ājña.

Thereafterwards the very same karma-yōga was seen from a different angle. Here we do not look upon it not as a ājña of the Lord; but only as a suggestion/request from the Lord. The Lord has requested us to lead a life of harmony; I have given you this wonderful creation. In return I do not want you to do anything to me, but I only request you to maintain the harmony of the creation, even if you are not interested in the world, still you have to maintain the harmony of the world for the sake of the other living beings. And therefore a harmonious life is only an expression of gratitude towards the Lord; it is only a form of worship of the Lord; thus karma-yōga can be seen as Īśvara Yājñāḥ.

Thereafter Kṛṣṇa looked at the same karma-yōga from yet different angle, it is neither seen as ājñā or yājñāḥ but here Kṛṣṇa looks upon karma-yōga as a spiritual sādhana. Neither as a commandment of the Lord, nor as a worship of the Lord, but a spiritual sādhana by which I purify my mind. It is not that I am obliging the Lord, I am not doing a favor to the Lord by following karma-yōga, I am only favoring myself.

And what is the benefit that I am getting through karma-yōga? That benefit Kṛṣṇa is saying in the thirteenth ślōkā, yajñāśiṣṭāśinaḥ santō mucyantē sarvakilbiṣaiḥ. yajñāśiṣṭāśinaḥ means the one who looks upon karma-yōga as a worship of the Lord and he takes all the consequences as Yājñā prasādaḥ. Yajñāśiṣṭam means yajñā prasādha and when he receives the consequences as prasādha coming from the Lord, it is not a mere ordinary food, but the very same thing, it may be in the form of food or any type of karma-phalam also; when I accept it as prasādaḥ, mucyantē sarvakilbiṣaiḥ. All the pāpams from the head, from one's inner personality will go away. So kilbiṣaiḥ means pāpam.

And how do you define pāpam in the vēdāntic contest? Anything that obstructs self-knowledge is pāpam. According to vēdānta anything that obstructs my spiritual pursuits is a pāpam. Even if I have got lot of riches and sense pleasures, and because of those sense pleasures, I am lost in the world and I do not come to Vēdānta, then the scriptures point out that even though the very sense pleasures are pāpam. Even money is considered a pāpam if I am going to be lost in the money, and I am not going to pursue spirituality.

On the other hand, even poverty is considered puṇyam, if poverty leads to self-enquiry, because of poverty a person is able to spend more time in spirituality, then poverty is a blessing. Therefore we define puṇyam as whatever promotes spiritual growth and we define pāpam as whatever obstructs spiritual growth. This is called kilbiṣam in the ślōkā and all the pāpams go away.

And what is the primary obstruction for spirituality? According to the scriptures, the primary obstruction is mōhaḥ or delusion. Avivēkaḥ. What do you mean by delusion here? Seeing the external world as a cause of happiness or a cause of unhappiness; that is delusion. According to vēdānta, the external world is neither a source of happiness nor a source of unhappiness; because if you say the world is source of happiness, then the other people who are living in the same world and suffering, you cannot explain why they are suffering. For example, if a particular music is source of happiness, then whenever that music is played all the family members must be happy, but we see once the music is played the teenager is on the top of the world, because it is latest pop, noisy music, which will even create a crack in the wall, such a music it is; he jumps, he has kept and then he dances, and he enjoys. But the very same music, when the parents listen to, who are interested in classical carnatic music, they will say: கண்டறாவி curse themselves for the kind of son born to them.

Now tell me, the music is the source of happiness or unhappiness. It cannot be either. Extending this principle, Vēdānta says world is neither sukha hētuḥ nor is the world duḥkha hētuḥ. As long as you are finding fault with the world and as long as you are trying to change the world to improve your happiness, you are in delusion. And even if you are going to make certain adjustments with the world, you are never going to be permanently happy, something or the other is going to affect you. And this wrong thinking is called mōhaḥ.

And this delusion must go away and I should understand that it is not the world that gives me joy or sorrow, it is my attitude towards the world which is responsible for happiness or unhappiness. It is my attitude towards the world which determines sorrow or happiness and therefore what is required is not a change in the world but a change in my attitude.

And any attitudinal-change, any perspective-change is brought about by knowledge alone. Knowledge alone changes my attitude; therefore ultimately, what I require is knowledge; instead of finding fault with the world and once I turn towards knowledge, then I have become a spiritual-seeker. And whatever helps this misconception or delusion which makes me go after the world and which makes me chase the world is called mōhaḥ, and that is why Śankarācārya wrote a work called Bhaja Govindam which was called Mōhaḥ-Mudgaraḥ. Mudgaraḥ means hammer. உலக்கை olakkai. Mohaḥ Mudgaraha means a work which will hammer and destroy your delusion. There he takes up each thing; whether money gives you happiness; he analyses, whether the family members are giving happiness he analyses.

यावद्वित्तोपार्जन सक्तः
स्तावन्निज परिवारो रक्तः |
पश्चाज्जीवति जर्जर देहे
वार्ता कोऽपि न पृच्छति गेहे ||५||

yāvadvittōpārjana saktah
stāvannija parivārō raktah |

paścājjīvati jarjara dēhē
vārtāṁ kō:'pi na pṛcchati gēhē ||5||

All family members are wonderful; as long as you are a productive member in the family. The moment you are retired, then the attitude changes; the earlier extra service is gone and now you have to help yourselves.

Thus Śankarācārya takes up everything; what is family; what is money; what is life; and he removes delusion with regard to each thing; and this delusion will go away only by karma-yōga. And therefore Kṛṣṇa says yajñāśiṣṭāśinaḥ santaḥ; a karma-yōgi will get out of this delusion and will understand that what I require is knowledge, not changing the people around; not changing the world.

On the other hand, bhuñjatē tē tvaghaṁ pāpāḥ; Kṛṣṇa criticises those people who are not karma-yōgis, who do not contribute anything to the world; those who are selfish people, he strongly criticises here; yē ātmakārāṇāt pacanti. Those people who cook for themselves.

Here cooking represents all the actions; cooking for myself, means I do not want to share anything with other people; as I had said before, pañca-mahā-yajña, one of the mahā-yajña is manuṣya-yajña, which means sharing at least food or money with other people, and according to our tradition, we should never eat food, without giving, without feeding at least one person. And that is why Kāñci Śankarācārya suggested that the பிடி அரிசி திட்டம். Pidi arisi thittam; if you cannot call a guest; and feed regularly, at least before cooking, keep some rice separately and every month or once in 6 months, you give that rice to some place, where it will be cooked and distributed; so annadānam is considered a very very important thing and if I do not share and eat myself, yē ātma kāranāt pachanti. Who cook and enjoy themselves; tē aghaṁ bhuñjatē; Kṛṣṇa uses a strong word, they are not eating food at all; they are eating only concentrated pāpam. So every morsel they are eating, it is not sambar rice, it is not rasam rice; it is not curd rice; it is pāpam in different forms. So aghaṁ bhuñjatē and they are becoming what: pāpāḥ, and which means those people are becoming only pāpis, which means they are getting more and more away from spiritual knowledge. A selfish person goes away from spiritual knowledge, a selfless person goes towards spiritual knowledge.

अन्नाद्भवन्ति भूतानि पर्जन्यादन्नसम्भवः ।
यज्ञाद्भवति पर्जन्यो यज्ञः कर्मसमुद्भवः ॥३.१४॥

annādbhavanti bhūtāni parjanyaḍannasambhavaḥ|
yajñādbhavati parjanyaō yajñāḥ karmasamudbhavaḥ|| 3.14 ||

भूतानि bhūtāni All beings भवन्ति bhavanti are born अन्नात् annāt out of food अन्नसम्भवः annasambhavaḥ food is born पर्जन्यात् parjanyaāt – out of rain. परजन्यः भवति parajanyaḥ bhavati rain comes यज्ञात् yajñāt out of Yājñā यज्ञः yajñaḥ कर्मसमुद्भवः karmasamudbhavaḥ is born out of Karma.

14. All beings are born out of food. Food is born out of rain. Rain comes out of Yājñā. Yājñā is born out of Karma.

So in the previous slōkā, Kṛṣṇa talked about karma-yōga as a purifier. I used the Sānskrīt word śōdhakam; otherwise called pāvanam or pavithram. Thus karma-yōga as ājñā we have seen; karma-yōga as yajñā we have seen; karma-yōga as a śōdhakam, as a purifier we have seen.

Now Kṛṣṇa is studying karma-yōga from a fourth angle; how versatile is karma-yōga, the more you analyse, the more beautiful is the concept of karma-yōga; what is the fourth angle; in these two slōkās, fourteen and fifteen, Kṛṣṇa presents karma-yōga as dharmāḥ; karma-yōga as dharmāḥ. And what is the meaning of the word dharma? Dhāraṇāt dharma, that which maintains the harmony of the creation is called dharmāḥ. A way of life, by which I maintain the harmony of the creation. As I had said in one of the previous classes, we are not isolated individuals, whether we like or not; we are integral parts of the creation; our life is interconnected with fellow human beings; our life is interconnected with animals; our life is interconnected with plants, our life is interconnected with forests; our life is interconnected with the rivers and oceans; our life is interconnected with environment; our life is interconnected with the seasons.

And as I said before, all the other living beings, other than the human being, they all are programmed to live a life of harmony. Plants will not create environmental problem or disharmony. Animals will not create disharmony; because they are all instinctively made to live a life of harmony. But only the human-beings have been given a unique power called free will and he has been given the buddhi śakti and since his intelligence is very powerful, he can either destroy the whole creation, or he can create a heaven out of this wonderful creation; making also human-beings, human-beings alone mars. If the earth can be destroyed, it will be only by human beings. Even if tigers go berserk, nothing will happen. There are two sets of tigers. One set of tigers, human-tigers, they can create problem; they can explode the atom bombs; but the local tigers, the animals, whatever they do, they cannot destroy the earth. Whereas, human-beings can do that.

Therefore Kṛṣṇa says Arjuna you may not believe in God; does not matter; you may not believe in mōkṣaḥ. You may not believe in puṇya. You need not follow karma-yōga for the sake of purification, you need not follow karma-yōga, to worship God. You need not believe in God. You need not do karma-yōga as a commandment of God; but still even if you are an atheist person, since you have to live a life of karma-yōga, to maintain the harmony of the creation. And even the worst atheist who does not believe in God and dharma and puṇyam and pāpam; he will have to believe; why believe? He has to accept the harmony of the creation, because science every moment is proving that the whole creation is inter-connected.

Therefore we cannot lead a life of irresponsibility. We should be responsible citizen. And to indicate the harmony of the creation, Kṛṣṇa knows that everything that happens in the creation is a cyclic process. Cycles indicate balance indicate harmony.

A simple example that we all know is what: we require oxygen to breathe in; without oxygen we cannot survive. Therefore naturally, when there are many people in a city, we breath plenty of oxygen in, and we give out carbon dioxide, a time will come when the balance is disturbed. Then Bhagavān has made a wonderful arrangement. What is that arrangement? The plants, the tree are there; wonderful, they need carbon dioxide and they release oxygen; thus we have got a beautiful cycle of oxygen and a beautiful cycle of carbon dioxide. We have not produced this cycle; we find this cycle is already existing; man and nature are inter-connected.

But what will we do? The brihaspathis! 😊 This wonderful brihaspathis, in the city population will go on increasing, and when more human population is increased, should not the trees also increase! Very simple, even a little intellect is enough. But we do just the opposite; all the individual houses surrounded by trees, they are all destroyed and that one house is given to the promoter and there are 32 flats in that area. And the trees I cannot keep. Similarly, all over the promotion of concrete houses, just go on and the trees are cut, then what happens, the cycle is broken; and who is going to be the sufferer? We are going to be the sufferer.

Therefore, cycle indicates harmony. There is nitrogen-cycle, there is carbon-dioxide-cycle, there is water-cycle, even water is a beautiful-cycle. Cycles are required in the creation because of one law and what is that law? Law of conservation of matter and energy. Therefore, we can never produce anything infinitely as we are producing somewhere else, it has to be done. And here Kṛṣṇa is taking one cycle as an example. We have got many cycles in the creation; but Kṛṣṇa takes one such cycle as an example to show how harmonious the creation is; and what is that cycle; look at the slōkā;

Annādbhavanti bhūtāni. All the living beings are born and sustained by Annam alone. Without food, we cannot survive. It is not a great scientific reality; we know very well, and if you have got any doubt, do not eat for a few days; perhaps you may not be alive to come and tell me. Therefore,

अन्नात् रसनैव भूत्वा, अन्नात् रसनैव वृद्धिम् प्राप्य अन्न रूप पृथिव्याम् विलीयते ;यद् अन्नमय कोशः

annāt rasanaiva bhūtvā, annāt rasanaiva vṛddhim prāpya anna rūpa pṛthivyām viliyatē; yad annamaya kōśaḥ

This body is born out of annam. So bhūtāni, here bhūtāni, means living beings, they are all born out of annam. Annam does not mean rice alone; any form of food; then how annam come; parjanyaḥ anna-sambhavaḥ; because of rain alone annam comes; without annam, without rains, we cannot produce annam. We might have enough seeds alright; seeds alone are not enough, we require rain.

So therefore Kṛṣṇa says parjanyaḥ anna sambhavaḥ and one year there is no rain; then the Kāvēri dispute becomes more intense. In the year when the rain is plenty, there is no talk of Cauvery water, as they have enough water and they want to give and we also have got enough water, we just release it into the ocean. So no காசி முச்சு; therefore there is no discussion, no tribunal. But one year, there is no rain, there would be in so many problems, even wars can take place, in fact I read somewhere in future some of the wars between countries may be caused by water problem. Water may become the cause of some of the wars. Already there is war between Karnataka and Tamil Nadu, caused by water only. Therefore rain is the greatest blessing of the Lord, because of which we are surviving. When the rain comes, we curse; we complain; but the rain is not there, we will know. And therefore, Kṛṣṇa says beings are born out of annam, annam is because of parjanya.

And how does rain come; can human being produce rain? I read somewhere that the science is so much advanced that they can produce rain. So first I thought Not Bad! That science seems to be so wonderful, because now there is some hope that iodide, silver iodide crystals, if they take in a helicopter and they spread, and the rain can come, I read. So I was so happy; like when I heard about the test tube baby; that we have learned to create babies in test tubes and take a test tube and take some silver nitrate and sodium chloride and heat, and you will get a baby, I thought. Thereafter they say it in small letters, you require a father, you require a mother and then you can produce the test tube baby. Therefore remember, even if you can prepare test tube babies, remember we require the gift of nature. I thought the scientists are producing the rain. They say that if there are clouds, எப்படி! How is it! If there are clouds, they will produce the rain.

Remember I am not criticizing-science. I am an admirer-of-science. I am a student of science. While talking about scriptures, do not mistake me, I am not bringing down science; because even this particular technique is a great blessing because, because of this particular procedure they are able to make the cloud pour the rain in a particular area; otherwise the rain may go to the ocean. Certainly that scientific advancement is a great blessing; we are not belittling. But what we are saying is that science is wonderful; still it can never replace nature. And therefore, parjanya is a natural phenomenon we require.

Now the question is, what is responsible for rain? What is responsible for rain? Kṛṣṇa says yajñādbhavati parjanyaḥ. Here the word yajñāḥ means apūrvam or adṛṣṭam, because of invisible factor yajñāḥ, adṛṣṭam; invisible favourable factor called yajñāḥ, sometimes it is called puṇyam, sometime it is called adṛṣṭam, sometime it is called apūrvam, here the word yajñāḥ means because of the puṇyam alone, rain comes.

Then we may wonder, what are you talking, because of puṇyam rain comes; it looks like a cock and bull story; how do you say puṇyam produces rain; if you have to understand puṇyam in scientific-language; remember puṇyam or adṛṣṭam means the cosmic-balance or harmony; only when there is a harmony-in-nature; only when there is balance-in-nature; the rain will come at the appropriate time; because the seasons are indicative of natural-harmony. The seasons are all always indicative of natural-harmony; therefore in our tradition, they always took rain as the acid test for universal-balance; ecological-balance; because in those days, the scientific-language was not available. Therefore they call it puṇyam, but nowadays because of the advancement of science, we can use the language, when you are cutting the forest, naturally the clouds are not formed properly, therefore the rains do not come; therefore deforestation or that is the cause; or pollution is the cause, they say; Nowadays you use the word of ecological balance or harmony; in those days, they called it yajñāḥ.

And therefore yajñādbhavati parjanyaḥ. So are you now able to see the connection. Living beings are born because of annam. Annam is because of rain; rain is because of harmony; balance of nature.

Then the next question, how do we maintain the balance of nature? How do we create the balance of nature? Kṛṣṇa gives the answer yajñāḥ karma-samudbhavaḥ. One maintains the balance of nature only by karma-yōgaḥ. Only by self-restraint. Only by avoiding the exploitation of nature. Only by revering the creation. Only by respecting nature, we will maintain the balance; as I said the other day, I need not bring about harmony of nature, because nature is already harmonious, what I have to do is, I should avoid disturbing the harmony.

Like some people at home, when you are working, they will come to help you; and create such a mess and leave; and you say that the best service you can do is go and sit outside. There are some people who do service by doing, there are some other people; their best service is non-interference. Similarly Bhagavān says, you need not bring in harmony of creation; creation is already harmonious, by your interference you do not destroy the harmony, do not pollute water, do not pollute air; Na Niṣṭi Vēth. Na sa muthra puriṣam kuryāt. Na niṣṭi vēth. Na vivasanāyāth. Guhyō vā ēśō agniḥ.

Even Vēdā mantra tells when you go to a tank or a river, how you should treat; first we do is to put the leg; just testing; in Gaṅga we want to find whether it is chill. Whereas in our tradition it is said, never put the leg first; go and pray to the river; river is the lifeline of any civilization. All civilization have come only in the river shore; banks of river; therefore first you namaskāra; Gaṅgē ca Yamunē caiva, and then do prōkṣaṇam; and thereafterwards, you enter the water, and there also napsu muthrapuriṣam kuryāt. Do not pollute the river; Na Niṣṭi Vēth. Some people have got, especially we have got the habit of spitting. Every two minutes, we have to spit. Especially for the people who take pan, betal leaf-eaters; etc. still worse; and you see them taking bath every other minute, they spit into the river; na Niṣṭi Vēth; na vivasanasyath. Guhyō vā ēśō agniḥ. How you should respect a river? How should you respect ocean? How you should respect air, fire? And therefore, a life of reverence, a life of karma-yōga will maintain the cosmic-balance.

And that is why, they have a saying in Tamil, நல்லார் உருவர் உளரேல்; nallār uruvar uḷarēl; if there is one good person who has respect for nature, the creation, then at least for his sake, there will be rain. It seems in Tirukural, there is one full adhikāram, which talks about the வாண் சிறப்பு vāṇ ciṟappu, the glory of nature, and how one rain for this person, one rain for that person, they say rain will come properly, if we have got reverence towards nature; and reverence towards nature is called karma-yōgaḥ. And when I say nature it includes animals, humans, plants, also. And therefore, balance is produced by what, karmasamudbhavaḥ. Karma means karma-yōgaḥ.

So now what are the layers? We are born out of food; food is because of rain; rain is because of cosmic harmony, cosmic harmony is because of karma or karma-yōgaḥ. That means the ultimate cause of human-beings is karma-yōga alone. So from karma alone, through various layers, the living beings are born. From karma alone, through various layers, the living beings are born; that means I or my existence is dependent on karma.

Then from where does karma come? From where does karma come; ultimately the karma has to come from me alone; therefore I am born out of karma, and the karma is born out of me; thus I and my karma are inter-dependent; therefore if you have to live in the society; you have to keep contributing to the society; only then the cyclic is complete, and every time I eat, I am taking and every time I work, complete that cycle, by a life of contribution.

So yajñāḥ karma-samudbhavaḥ and you have to add one line, karma bhūtha samudbhavaḥ, the karmas are born out of living beings, then the cyclic is complete.

Verse 3.15

कर्मब्रह्मोद्भवं विद्धि ब्रह्माक्षरसमुद्भवम् ।
तस्मात्सर्वगतं ब्रह्म नित्यं यज्ञे प्रतिष्ठितम् ॥ ३.१५ ॥

[karma brahmōdbhavaṁ viddhi brahmākṣarasamudbhavam|
tasmāt sarvagataṁ brahma nityaṁ yajñē pratiṣṭhitam||3.15||](#)

विद्धि viddhi know that कर्म ब्रह्मोद्भवम् karma brahmōdbhavaṁ Karma is born out of the Vēdā ब्रह्म अक्षरसमुद्भवम् brahma akṣarasamudbhavam Vēdā is born out of the Lord तस्मात् tasmāt Therefore, ब्रह्म सर्वगतम् brahma sarvagatam the Vēdā is all-pervading नित्यं प्रतिष्ठितम् nityaṁ pratiṣṭhitam (and it is) always employed यज्ञे yajñē in Yājña.

15. Know that action is born out of the Vēda. The Vēdā is born out of the Lord. Therefore the Vēdā is all-pervading (and it) is always employed in Yājña.

How do you know which karma maintains the balance of the creation; and which karma violates the balance of the creation? This is a problem, because we human-beings have got only a limited intellect. Therefore I never fully know which action is ultimately good for humanity and which action is not good for humanity; I do not know.

And that is why, if you see, again the scientific study, you would have been reading in the newspapers, so we produced lot of chemicals called chloro-flouro-carbons. CFC. which we widely use for so many things including the refrigerator and you know how important the refrigerator is. Because of the refrigerator only the ladies are able to cook once a week only; lot of advantage!; and I heard in some places, once a fortnight; some places once in a month; and put everything in packets and put the dates; so refrigerator it is extremely important for us; and we started using the CFC and at that time, we never knew what would be the consequences. After several years, they discovered that it is going to the atmosphere and it is reacting with the ozone layer and the ozone layer is getting depleted; which is dangerous for our survival. Because ozone layer is a beautiful gift of the Lord, because when the sun's rays comes to us, it gives a lot of nourishment alright; but it also gives lot of poisons also; toxins also, and what a beautiful brain Bhagavān has got; there is toxin alright; but there is a filtering layer also.

Therefore even the meteorite cannot affect us; why because it gets burned out in the atmosphere itself. Now the ozone filters ultra violet rays and others; so that we are safe. And we brihaspathis, what do we do; create something and create a huge hole and we have to find out what should we do to replace that. That means what? We did not know what is harmful to ourselves.

Similarly I read elsewhere; when the population of the automobiles increase, then the greenhouse gases, there are certain gases called greenhouse gases, carbon monoxide etc. and when they go to the atmosphere, there is a special effect called greenhouse effect; because of which the temperature in the earth increases. So automobiles increase on the road; the consequence is increase in temperature on the globe as a whole. So when the temperature increases, the polar icebergs (not near us, somewhere), melts and naturally the oceanic water level increases and because of that so many problems, so many countries on the shore are affected; can we easily see the connection, flooding of certain countries and increase of the automobiles? We do not see the direct connection but a lot of study and lot of suffering and lot of years later, we come to know that some of our actions are harmful to ourselves.

And why we are not able to know that? Because of the limitation of human-intellect. Certain medicines we discover, certain pesticides; DDT and after using for several years, they themselves ban; or they send to India. All the things banned in Europe and American countries are dumped in India, and we are so wonderful people, and we start using. So thus everything that we invent, we do not know whether it is good or not; because we have got limited knowledge.

Therefore śāstra says do not depend upon human intellect; depend upon the scriptures; which talk about a way of life, which is meant for universal harmony. Because scriptures are not the products of human intellect. Unlike science. Science is called paurūṣeyam śāstram. Scriptures are called apaurūṣeyam. They are not the inventions of human beings' intellect. They are the revelations through the ṛṣis.

Therefore Kṛṣṇa says: Be humble and follow the life style prescribed by me. You might not know the scientific-reason, behind religious-practices, you can do research alright; and after 10 years, or 20 years, you might discover the scientific principle; but until then, have faith in the scriptures and follow the lifestyle prescribed by the scriptures. Even leaves likes Tulsi and bilva etc. we just make use of it, without knowing its value; medicinal value. Then suddenly we discover the value only when an American takes a patent on Neem. We have been using this neem for millions of years; but we did not know; we use vilvam; we do not know; we use rudrakṣa; we do not know; whatever śāstrās say, it is keeping the global harmony, not only individual, but the global harmony in view.

And therefore who is the author of karma-yōga; Kṛṣṇa says karma brahmōdbhavaṁ viddhi. Harmonious lifestyle is taught by the vēdās. So here the word brahma means vēdās. So karma, harmonious life, a religious lifestyle, we come to know only by the study of the scriptures.

And how do the vēdās know; after all, they are all invented by some ṛṣis; if we ask, Kṛṣṇa says; never take the vēdās as the inventions of human intellect; because any invention of human intellect will have its own minus point; that is why one will do a research and get a PhD. And another will refute that theory and also get a PhD. Both will get PhD. It is very useful for PhD. Whereas you find the vēdic-teaching not 100 years old; many of our theories and all refuted within 10 years; and nowadays, even 10 years are not required, because research is going all-over, that one theory is negated the next moment; but vēda has withstood the test of time; we do not know whether it is 5000 years or old or 10,000 years old; even now vēdās can stand the challenge of science. Even the vēdās can stand the challenge of science. If we find a defect in the vēdās, it is only because we do not know how to understand it. Simple coconut oil; for some days only criticism. And now it is good, best, etc. Nindā sthuthi. Nindā sthuthi. Confusion. Now whether it is good or bad. Similarly tea. Some say it is bad; some say it is very good; confusion. Alcohol, some sthuthi; as such it is a problem; little bit is good they say; now how do we know what is good for me; what is not good for me; so our traditions says follow the vēdās. நம்பினார் கெடுவத்தில்லை. Nambinar keduvadillai. You will be wonderful.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa says brahmākṣarasamudbhavam. Vēdā is not invention of human intellect; vēda has come out of akṣaram. Akṣaram means Bhagavān. Brahma means vēda; Very careful, brahma means vēda and akṣaram means Īśvara; brahmākṣara-samudbhavam means vēda has come out of the Lord.

Then how come we say that the ṛṣis have given out the vēda. You know the answer I have told you before. Ṛṣis have not invented the vēdās; ṛṣis have served as a medium for receiving the vēdic-teaching, exactly like the TV set; the TV set does not produce the music. Television set does not produce the music; music has been already transmitted elsewhere; the television set is serving only as a medium for the manifestation of this music. This is only a receiving set; transmission is elsewhere; thus every ṛṣi is like a TV set; every ṛṣi is a radio set, he has not invented, he has only served as a medium. Suppose if we ask, Swamiji why can't I be a medium when I close my eyes, I do not get anything; I get only the headache; I do not receive or mantra, etc. Remember, television set is specially prepared, anything cannot be received; similarly we should also specially prepare ourselves by tapas, by dhyānam, etc. the ṛṣīs have prepared themselves; but we say why should we become ṛṣīs. Already they have become; when food is there in the fridge, why should I cook. I just go and enjoy. Similarly, we need not become ṛṣīs. Ṛṣīs have already received it and out of compassion, brought down for our use; therefore let us study the vēdās and get the benefit of the teachings.

Hari Om.

042 CHAPTER 03, VERSES 15-19

ॐ

Lord Kṛṣṇa is talking about the importance of karma-yōga; looking at karma-yōga from different angles; first he looked at it as a commandment of the Lord; Īśvara-ājñā; then he looked at it, as a worship of the Lord; Īśvara-yajñaḥ, then he looked at it; as a means of spiritual purification; citta-śōdhakam; and now he is looking at the same karma-yōga as dharmāḥ; a way of life; which helps in maintaining the harmony of the creation.

And Kṛṣṇa talked about in the last slōkā that everything is a cyclic process and any cycle will be completed only when receiving from the world is followed by giving unto the world also. If I am only going to receive things from the world, without giving importance to giving or sharing; naturally the cycle is incomplete; and once the cycle is not completed, then there is the violation of universal harmony, then there is a stagnation which is not good for the physical health; psychological health; spiritual health, the economic health; at any level it is not good. Even from a simple angle of eating; we can easily understand this principle. If I am only going to consume food, then only taking takes place; which means I am only receiving energy from the world; and proportionally if I am not ready to spend the energy or work, which they call exercise in some form or other, again I am violating the natural cycle; I am physically consuming, but I am not giving.

So imagine a person goes on eating 3-4-5 times or permanently throughout the day and proportionately he does not work, then the cycle is broken; there is stagnation. And the stagnation alone comes in the form of fat, or cholesterol, then the doctor says you park the car 1 km away from the office; and walk to the office; So you do some jogging or something or the other; again what is happening is: the doctor is talking about maintaining the harmony and what is harmony, proportionate to the food that I consume, I have to give out also.

This can be extended at all levels; with regard to knowledge also; if I am receiving knowledge; then proportionately I should share my knowledge with others also; and that harmony is talked about svādhyāya pravacanē ca. This is harmony at knowledge level. I receive knowledge; I have to give knowledge; and that is why in those days they threatened also; if you learn any science or art, and you die without sharing that knowledge with anyone, they say that you will become a Brahma rākṣasā. For the pāpam that you have committed, Brahma rākṣasā will be hanging upside down, etc. they frighten. Whether we become a Brahma rākṣasā or not, we do not know; but the principle is what? Whatever I take, proportionately I should give also. Knowledge level there should not be stagnation. Energy level there should not be stagnation. Emotional level also, if I am receiving love from everyone; they are there must be a proportionate giving of love to others; thus at every level, dharma harmony or the cyclic process should be maintained.

So when there is stagnant pool of water and a river is flowing, which is a healthy place to take bath; we know that the flowing river is healthier; whereas a stagnant pool is not a healthy place. From that it is very clear; that nothing should stagnate; everything should flow; that means what? I should never own anything.

Whatever I receive, I should hand over to others, I should share with others; whether it is money, or energy or knowledge or love, or anything for that matter; I should be like the bank of a river; that the water comes; knowledge comes; money comes; whatever comes; I hand over to the next person; and that person also does not keep; and he again shares with others; this principle of giving is meant for maintaining the harmony.

So the principle of karma-yōga is: Give to maintain harmony. And that has to be told because giving is not natural. Grabbing is natural; If anything is distributed; suppose there is a book distributed freely; we won't even bother, what language it is; it may be in Russian; as somebody said in Malayalam; വരവല്ലേ, എന്തുവേണമെങ്ങിലും വന്നോട്ടേ! (Varavalle, enthu venamengilum vannotte); meaning if it is income, receipt, let anything may come; it is welcome; he was taught; വരവ് varavu is good; വരവ് varavu is income, ചിലവ് chelavu is bad; expenditure is not good; and he went to the astrologer for the first time; the astrologer said: that ശനിയുടെ വരവാണ്; śaniyudē varavānu; meaning śani is coming; he knows only one law; varavalle, വരവല്ലേ, എന്തുവേണമെങ്ങിലും വന്നോട്ടേ!. So our natural law is whatever is freely distributed, received; and later we can review it; at least it will be useful for packing the peanuts. That is the idea; therefore śāstra need not teach us to take; śāstra has to teach us to give; that is why they say:

वक्ता शतसहस्रेषु, दाता भवति वा न वा ॥

śatēṣu jāyatē śūrah, sahasrēṣu ca paṇḍitāḥ |
vaktā śatasahasrēṣu, dātā bhavati vā na vā ||

Among hundreds of people, you can find one courageous person. Śatēṣu jāyatēśūrah; sahasrēṣu ca paṇḍitāḥ; among thousands of people you can find one true scholar; scholarship is still rarer; vaktā śatasahasrēṣu; among hundred thousand; among lakhs of people, you can find one good communicator; scholarship is easier; but sharing that difficult knowledge with others is still rarer. Therefore among lakhs of people, there will be one communicator; but what about a true giver? dātā bhavati vā na vā.

In the entire creation, to find a true giver who wants to share with others; there may be a person or may not a person; and therefore karma-yōga is in short: give. Na karmaṇā prajāyā danēna tyāgē naikē na amṛtatva mānasu.

Only if I train myself to give things; ultimately in the wake of self-knowledge, I can give up the very ahaṁkāra itself, the ego itself; initially I give up my mama-kāra, that is called danaṁ; and later I can give up ahaṁkāra; karma-yōga is mama-kāra tyāgaḥ; jñāna-yōga is ahaṁkāra tyāgaḥ; and therefore Kṛṣṇa said ēvaṁ pravarthitam cakram. So in this manner, there is harmony in the creation, and this harmonious life alone is taught in the vēdās; and the vēdās have been given out by the Lord himself; so karma brahmōdbhavaṁ viddhi, brahmākṣara-samudbhavam. This life of sacrifice; this life of sharing has been taught by the vēdās; which have been given out by Īśvara. Up to this we saw in the last class.

Now we have to see the second line. Kṛṣṇa says: tasmāt sarvagataṁ brahma; and therefore the vēdic-teaching is all over, it is all pervading; wherever the vēdic sampradāya is there; there the vēdic-teaching is prevalent; tasmāt sarvagataṁ brahma. Brahma means the vēdās; the vēdic-teaching is all-pervading in the vēdic society; and especially it is prevalent where: nityaṁ yajñē pratiṣṭhitam; wherever yajñaḥ is going on; wherever there is sacrifice; wherever there is sharing, wherever there is danaṁ, the vēdic-teaching is predominantly present; yajñē pratiṣṭhitam.

Verse 3.16

एवम् प्रवर्तितं चक्रं नानुवर्तयतीह यः ।
अघायुरिन्द्रियारामो मोघं पार्थ स जीवति ॥३.१६॥

ēvaṁ pravartitaṁ cakram nānuvartayatiha yaḥ |
aghāyurindriyārāmō mōghaṁ pārtha sa jīvati || 3.16 ||

इह iha In this world, सः यः saḥ yaḥ he who न अनुवर्तयति na ānuvartayati does not follow चक्रम् cakram this (cosmic) cycle प्रवर्तितम् pravartitaṁ which is initiated (by the Lord)

एवम् evaṃ in this manner, अघायुः aghāyuh is a sinful इन्द्रियारामः indriyārāmaḥ and sensual person, जीवति मोघम् jīvati mōghaṃ He lives in vain, पार्थ pārtha Oh Arjuna!

16. In this world, he, who does not follow the (cosmic) cycle which is initiated (by the Lord) in this manner, is a sinful and sensual (person). He lives in vain, Oh Arjuna!

So Kṛṣṇa pointed out that karma-yōga is giving-oriented; the importance is for giving; and not for taking. Whereas karma is taking-oriented; this is the difference between karmi and karma-yōgi. A karma-yōgi measures his success in terms of his capacity to give; the more he can give, he considers himself to be a successful person; whereas a karmi measures his success in terms of his capacity to grab, hoard, amass and possess. Therefore if I die with plenty of money, a karmi will consider a successful life; whereas a karma-yōgi will consider success as that in which he may die a pauper, but he has given everything that he has; you look at our purāṇās; you will find any person who has sacrificed and who has given, he is glorified; whether it is Śibi Chakravarthy or whether it is Buddha you take; anyone who is glorified is not a materially rich person; but a person who has given up. That is why somebody nicely said; the essence of Gīta, you can easily understand by reversing the word; Gīta. Gīta Gīta Gīta Gī.....tā. tā.. gī, what is the essence of Gīta; tāgī; Tyāgi is a successful person. And therefore Kṛṣṇa strongly criticises a person who has taken more and given less; he says all such people are sinners; because they have consumed more and shared less. Therefore he says; एवम् प्रवर्तितं चक्रं evaṃ pravartitaṃ cakraṃ; in this manner, in the manner of give and take, the universal cycle is maintained.

So cakraṃ means the universal cycle or harmony is maintained in this manner; in which manner? In the form of taking and giving proportionately, why proportionately, even more of giving; and yaḥ na anuvartayati. Suppose there is an immature person; selfish-person; who does not believe in the principle of giving and sharing; yaḥ na anuvartayati; the one who amasses wealth, only for his own selfish interest; Kṛṣṇa says such a person is aghāyuh. Aghāyuh means his life is made up of pāpam. he is a sinner; he is a man of sin; and indriyārāmaḥ; he is sensualist who only spends his life, for his sensory pleasures alone; he does not consider anything superior to that; he is a sensualist given to sensory pleasures only; hey Pārtha; mōghaṃ saḥ jīvati; such a person lives in vain; because he is neither useful to himself nor useful to the society. He is not useful to himself because being a sensualist given to sensory pleasures only; he is not going to accomplish anything greater.

Because eating and drinking and procreating cannot be considered a great pleasure because or great achievement because even animals do that successfully. As Vivekananda says somewhere, living a long healthy life, is not a great accomplishment, even a tortoise lives for 350 years; a coconut tree lives longer; therefore long life or having many family members, I have got 3 sons and four daughters; and I have got 24 grandchildren and 72 great grandchildren; that is not a great accomplishment, because pigs have bigger family.

If sensory-pleasure is great accomplishment the animals also do that; therefore the real accomplishment is in the field of karma and mōkṣaḥ and this person who was a sensualist, he did not accomplish anything; his human life has become a waste alone. And not only his life was useless for himself; was it useful to the society; he did not contribute anything to the society also; that the society thanks the Lord that this person dies; because bhū bhāram kurainjithe. பு பாரம் குறைந்தது. (earth's burden is reduced, by a useless's removal!). So somebody sings; there are many animals which are very useful while living; and they are very useful after death also; an elephant; while alive also it is very useful; after death also, many part of its body are used; and he enumerates. What about this human being? While living also utterly useless; afterwards? Some animals are useful for the skin, teeth, hair, elephant hair they use; rhino horn they use for so many things; but this human being while living also useless; after death is also utterly useless; What is the use of such a life? Life is meaningful only when I have shared things from the society and in the process, I have accomplished dharma and ultimately mōkṣaḥ also. Therefore Kṛṣṇa says all the other people they live in vain.

Verse 3.17

the Self (alone) विद्यते न vidyatē na there is nothing कार्यं तस्य kāryaṃ tasya to be

17. However, suppose there is a man who loves the Self alone, who is happy with the Self alone, and who is contented with the Self (alone). There is nothing to be accomplished for him.

In the following two verses, Kṛṣṇa talks about the benefit of karma-yōga. As I had said often, Gīta or the Vēdās do not consider karma-yōga an end in itself. Karma-yōga is not the ultimate sādhana; this must be very clearly remembered. Because as I have often said, karma-yōga cannot give liberation; karma-yōga cannot give self-knowledge and therefore karma-yōga can never be considered an end in itself. But at the same time, we do not say karma-yōga is useless also; karma-yōga is extremely important, especially in the beginning stages, because karma-yōga alone can give purity of mind; and therefore everybody has to follow karma-yōga initially and purify the mind and after the purification of mind one has to necessarily go through the next higher stage of sādhana.

Here alone people commit mistake; they think that karma-yōga can independently take to mōkṣaḥ; Kṛṣṇa makes it very clear; it is not so.

Then what is the next stage of sādhana? That alone we call as jñāna-yōga. One has to contribute to the society; one has to purify the mind and having contributed sufficiently, one has to later withdraw from karma-yōga. Or at least reduce karma-yōga. Because he has to enquire into the true nature of himself. Because as we have seen before our basic spiritual problem is self-ignorance and unless we solve the problem of self-ignorance, any amount of spiritual sādhana is incomplete. Therefore one has to withdraw from karma-yōga; Kṛṣṇa will tell that in the 6th chapter:

आरुरुक्षोर्मुनेर्योगं कर्म कारणमुच्यते ।
योगारूढस्य तस्यैव शमः कारणमुच्यते ॥ ६.३ ॥

āruruṣṭōrmunēryōgaṁ karma kāraṇamucyātē |
yōgārūḍhasya tasyaiva śamaḥ kāraṇamucyātē || 6.3 ||

Follow karma-yōga; purify the mind and grow out of karma-yōga and go to the next stage of spiritual sādhana; like a child entering the womb of the mother and 9 months, the child remains in the womb; the womb is extremely important for the growth of the child for 9 months; or 10 months, and once the child is 10 months old, thereafter, the very same womb becomes an obstacle for the child. Therefore the nature itself has kept an arrangement by which the child comes out of the womb, because the next stage of the growth is not within the womb but outside. In the same way karma-yōga is like the womb of the mother; we have to lead an active life and purify the mind, and thereafter as they say, brahmacarya āśrama, gr̥hastha-āśrama, which is like entering the womb, and thereafter vanaprasthāśrama and sanyāsa-āśrama; is growing out of activity.

First-stage is called pravṛtti; the second-stage is called nivṛtti. First-stage is called involvement; the second stage is called seclusion or withdrawal.

And having withdrawn from extrovertedness, what I am supposed to do; ask the basic question, who am I; what am I really seeking in life; am I blindly doing things; because my parents did; and the grand parents did; often it is mechanical; I went to pre-Lkg. Lkg. Ukg; then school. And then college; and then education is over and I went to job, because everybody did all these; then, everybody married and I also got married; why? That is what my parents did; thereafter got children; why? Because that happens; and thereafterwards I educated them and then got them married; often it is mechanical life; I have to ask the question.

कस्त्वं कोऽहं कुत आयातः

इति परिभावय सर्वमसारम्
विश्वं त्यक्त्वा स्वप्न विचारम् || २३ ||

kastvaṃ ko:'haṃ kuta āyātaḥ

iti paribhāvaya sarvamasāram
viśvaṃ tyaktvā svapna vicāram ||23||

What is life? What is my real nature? Why have I come here? What is my real destination? Why this human struggle? And this is called jñāna-yōgaḥ;

And this jñāna-yōga is in the form of vādānta śravaṇa, manana, nidhidhyasanam. Study of the philosophical-scriptures dealing with their true nature. And assimilating that teaching and discovering the real I, which is ever pūrṇaḥ, which is ever complete. That discovery of the complete-self is called jñāna-yōgaḥ.

And only when I have successfully followed jñāna-yōga, the struggle in life is over. Remember the example I give of the pūri; the pūri you know, when they put in the oil, it runs about; and as even the pūri runs about, it becomes bigger and bigger; and once it has become fully blown; then you will find that no more knocking about; ātmanyēva'tmanā tuṣṭaḥ, stationery, steady. It has attained pūrṇatvaṃ; pūrṇatvaṃ shortened is pūri. So whenever you eat pūri, you remember the life's goal is pūrṇatvaṃ, until then I will be knocking about here and there; not knowing what to do.

Without jñāna-yōga karma-yōga is incomplete; without karma-yōga, jñāna-yōga is impossible. Therefore follow karma-yōga, follow jñāna-yōga, and be free. And the essence of jñāna-yōga is given in these two slōkās briefly.

Karma-yōga was elaborately discussed; jñāna-yōga is put in a nutshell; and who is he? Kṛṣṇa says; mānavaḥ; jñāna-yōgi is really a mānavaḥ, he is the intelligent person; because he has diagnosed the problem; that the problem is self-ignorance; problem is centred on me; as Dayānanda Swami beautifully says; the "Problem is You; the Solution is you" alone. Until now, I thought the problem is with the family, with the government, and that is why every election, they put the vote for the opposite party, thinking that previously when Congress was ruling, they thought that BJP would be wonderful. Then again Congress; how long, until the next election; then again the Janata Dal and then you keep on changing, because we have got only these parties; thus we go on changing the people, changing the house, changing the job, changing the government, some changing the wives or husbands also, everything you keep on changing; that in spite of all these changes that I have not improved shows that the problem is not outside, the problem is with myself; the moment self-enquiry starts, he is a human being.

That is why Kṛṣṇa uses the word, mānavaḥ. This intelligent person comes to self-enquiry, with the help of the scriptures, with the help of guru; guru śāstra upadeśavat. When he does the self-enquiry, then he makes the biggest discovery, the rarest discovery, a pleasant surprise discovery and what is that discovery?

Whatever I have been seeking in life, they already are within me; security I seek; I am the embodiment of security; fullness I seek; I am the embodiment of fullness; peace I seek; I am the embodiment of peace; in fact, all the basic needs of a human being that is already ours; and that is the discovery he makes; and thereafterwards what is his nature; ātmaratirēva-syād. So previously he was happy because of external conditions, after self-knowledge, he is happy, not because of external factors, he is happy because that is his very nature. We have already seen in the second-chapter.

श्री भगवानुवाच ।

प्रजहाति यदा कामान्सर्वान्पार्था मनोगतान् ।

आत्मन्योवात्मना तुष्टः स्थितप्रज्ञस्तदोच्यते ॥ २.५५ ॥

Śrībhagavān uvāca

prajahāti yadā kāmān sarvān pārtha manogatān |

ātmanyēva"tmanā tuṣṭaḥ sthitaprajñāstadōcyatē || 2.55 ||

the one who is self-sufficient, one who does not depend upon external factors; to be full and complete; therefore ātmaratiḥ means the one who revels in himself; and ātma-tṛptaśca; and the one who is totally contented with himself; he does not think of the next higher possibility because he has discovered himself to be infinite; and there is no question of next higher stage of the infinite; there is no infinite, infiniter; infinitest; it is not there.

and therefore, there is no comparison; otherwise the problem is however much I have, I am never happy because there is always someone who has gone to the next higher stage; like breaking the record; any amount of record you break; ask the sportsman are you happy and he will tell that this person has got that record and I have to break that. And there are some people who have broken all the records; and they are on the top, and ask whether you are happy; No. I want to break my own record. There is a Russian pole-vault jumper.. Bubukka or so; I do not know how to pronounce his name, he keeps on breaking records; there is no contentment in the relative accomplishment, but this is one field in which there is total satisfaction.

Therefore, ātma-tṛptaśca mānavaḥ; and not only that; ātmanyēva ca santuṣṭaḥ; his self-sufficiency is total, that he does not depend upon any external factors, I am not one of the sources of happiness for me, I am the only source of happiness for me.

So ātmanyēva ca santuṣṭaḥ tasya kāryaṃ na vidyatē; thereafterwards there is no struggle in his life; whatever he does is not done for fulfilment; thereafterwards whatever he does is out of fulfilment.

There is only a subtle difference: one acts for fulfilment; another acts out of fulfilment; what is the difference can you guess; when I am acting for fulfilment, it means I am at present not full and therefore the action is not an enjoyable action; there is a struggle; there is a struggle; there is anxiety, whether I will accomplish or not, there is always tension; therefore action for fulfilment is saṃsāra; struggle; whereas imagine action out of fulfilment, it is like bathroom singing. You just enjoy singing. Not for anybody else. In fact nobody else wants to listen; not for money, not for anything, you are so happy and therefore you sing. thus, an action out of fulfilment is called leela or sport; jñāni's every activity is a leela; that is why we use the word Kṛṣṇa-leela, Rāma-leela, etc. what is the meaning of the word leela? Leela means an action done with fulfilment or out of fulfilment. Therefore Kṛṣṇa says; tasya kāryaṃ na vidyatē.

Verse 3.18

नैव तस्य कृतेनार्थे नाकृतेनेह कश्चन ।
न चास्य सर्वभूतेषु काश्चिदर्थव्यपाश्रयः ॥३.१८॥

naiva tasya kṛtēnārthō nākṛtēnēha kaścana|
na cāsyā sarvabhūteṣu kaścīdarthavyapāśrayaḥ ||3.18||

इह iha In this (world), तस्य tasya he has न एव अर्थः na ēva arthaḥ nothing (to gain) कृतेन kṛtēna through action; न कश्चन na kaścana nothing (to lose) अकृतेन akṛtēna due to inaction. न सर्वभूतेषु na sarvabhūteṣu Upon no being अस्य च asya ca does he (have) कश्चिद् अर्थव्यपाश्रयः kaścīd arthavyapāśrayaḥ any dependence for any purpose.

18. In this world, he has nothing (to gain) through action; nothing (to lose) due to inaction. Upon no being does he (have) any dependence for any purpose.

So here Kṛṣṇa says a jñāni-yōgi is one who has discovered his inner independence; who has discovered inner freedom; external independence we can never have; physical freedom we can never totally have; because physically we are dependent on external factors. We require food; we require clothing; we require shelter; even driving on the road, you are not totally independent; you have to follow the traffic rules. Even if you do not believe in traffic rules, you have to follow; the buffalos are there, buffalo rules are there; and other things are moving on the road, which means to that extent I do not have freedom; thus for physical freedom, we can never accomplish; in fact, physical freedom I should not ask for; I should voluntarily accept the physical limitation and follow the rules. And it will not become a bondage.

If I accept the traffic signal as a necessity; it is not a bondage; only if I do not understand, it becomes a bondage; so external restriction I should accept, that alone is freedom; but as far as the inner mind is concerned, we can accomplish total psychological freedom and that inner independence is called mōkṣaḥ.

And here Kṛṣṇa says, this jñāni is so independent, that he does not depend upon his action also for happiness; nor does he depend upon inaction for happiness; because these are also two weakness; there are some people who are so much addicted to action; who are called workaholics, their problem is what? They cannot remain quiet; there is one holiday that is going to come, it becomes a nightmare for them; they have to plan 100 things where to go; what to do; and if nothing is there, they get 4 video movies; for some people they are so addicted to action, that inaction is a nightmare for them. Holiday is a nightmare for them; retirement is nightmare for them; even sickness is nightmare; doctor says that you have a back pain and one month bed rest; that is how Bhagavān makes us introspect.

For some people, addiction is with regard to action. There are some other people; their problem is what? kondimadu, erumai, they do not want to act; they will always have some excuse or the other; even for drinking water, they would not get up, they will wait for somebody to pass, just to get water; we have got two addictions; either action or inaction. Kṛṣṇa says jñāni is one who is neither addicted to action; nor addicted to inaction. He enjoys doing action whenever there is a situation; and he enjoys not doing that also; therefore he says; tasya jñānina kṛtēnā artha hā nā. Through action also he does not expect any result; any benefit or any improvement; nā kṛtēnēḥ iha kaścana; nor through inaction he expects any result. Neither he is dependent on action; nor is he dependent on inaction.

Now people are forming retired-peoples'-club, they are forming; and they are also just making the study how to spend time after retirement. Very big issue now; because the whole day is there; and my capacity to act also becomes less and less; I am not able to read when I think of reading something; when I want to hear something, the ears are a problem, I want to talk to someone, no one wants to come near you; they know that once I start I will start from 1967, old stories will start. So therefore, they will change the road on seeing me, so you cannot also talk.

Therefore, gracefully growing old and enjoying old age requires tremendous maturity. We are ready to prepare financially for old age; many people are preparing wonderfully well financially. Mediclaim, LIC, shares, house, financially we are preparing very well, but psychologically our preparation is zero. That when we grow old, not only we suffer; the people around also go through hell. Why? Because we cannot face inaction; as they said: சும்மா இருந்து ஸுகம் பெறுவது எப்படி. How to enjoy myself, even if I am doing nothing?

Therefore Kṛṣṇa says jñāni is one who will enjoy activity, who will enjoy-inaction also. Not only he is independent from the standpoint of action and inaction, more importantly Kṛṣṇa says he is independent of people also. This is still more difficult. As we grow, we get addicted to certain people also. And as we grow old, and we are going to survive longer, even though it is a good news, that I am surviving, the problem is I have to face the death of so many people around me; long life has got an advantage; but remember, it has got a disadvantage also; one by one, people will say Tata. They will disappear; therefore I should be prepared for that also.

That requires emotional independence; enjoying the people's company when they are available and learning to accept their absence when it becomes inevitable. It need not be death; why should we think of death; even a temporary reason, the why has to go to the daughter's house or son's house or something; this husband 75 years old fellow, he cannot withstand that; he does not allow the wife to go anywhere, because right from toothpaste, wife alone has to be give in the hand; they do not know where the toothpaste is kept. 75 year old! They are emotionally dependent; food they have to be served; newspaper has to be handed to the hand; after bath, clothes have to be given; so much dependence; that I cannot withstand a one day's absence of a particular family member. All these are emotional weakness; jñāni is one who does not have any emotional crutches.

Therefore Kṛṣṇa says, kaścīdarthavyapāśrayaḥ; he does not depend upon anyone in the creation; sarvabhūtēṣu among the entire creation, he does not depend upon any person. There are some people who do not depend upon people; but they have got pets at home.

So I had a neighbour, previously when I was staying in another part of Madras, and he had a dog and that dog died and for days together he could not get out of it; he was regularly coming and crying. First I thought his wife would have expired; he would have perhaps not cried that much if his wife had expired; so much attached. In fact one husband used to tell me also; next birth I want to become my wife's dog; because when my wife comes from the class, she was attending the class, when wife comes from the class, first question she asks is: did you feed the dog; she does not ask whether I had eaten or taken coffee or something; that is later. So therefore if not people, we are addicted to pets; something or other we want to hold on to.

Therefore Kṛṣṇa says. Nothing doing; sarvabhūtēṣu kaścid-ārtha-vyapāśrayaḥ. One great jñāni sang a Tamil song; which is the height of independence; ஆசை அறுமின்கள், ஆசை அறுமின்கள், ஈசநோடாகிலும். Aśai aruminkal, aśai aruminkal, īsanōdakilum; even dependence on God is dependence; but that is too much to expect.

Therefore our progress is from world-dependence to God-dependence; from God-dependence we come to self-dependence; world-dependence is saṁsāra; God-dependence is bhakthi, self-dependence is jñānam. Saṁsāra to bhakthi to jñānam. This is our progress. Kṛṣṇa is talking about the height of jñānam here; na cāśya sarvabhūtēṣu kaścid-ārtha-vyapāśrayaḥ; totally emotionally free.

Verse 3.19

तस्मादसक्तः सततं कार्यं कर्म समाचर ।
असक्तो ह्याचरन् कर्म परमाप्नोति पूरुषः ॥३.१९॥

tasmādasaktaḥ satataṁ kāryaṁ karma samācara |
asaktō hyācharan karma paramāpnōti pūruṣaḥ ||3.19||

तस्मात् tasmāt Therefore सततं समाचर satataṁ samācara always perform karma kāryam कर्म कार्यम् the action to be done asaktaḥ असक्तः without attachment हि hi For, karma ācharan कर्म आचरन् by performing action asaktaḥ असक्तः without attachment, puruṣaḥ पुरुषः a person āpnōti paramā आप्नोति परम् attains the supreme.

19. Therefore, always perform the action to be done without attachment. For, by performing action without attachment, a person attains the supreme.

So therefore Kṛṣṇa gives the advice to Arjuna. Arjuna your goal is very clear now. Mōkṣaḥ: total emotional independence; fullness is your goal; because that is all our struggle is for; knowingly or unknowingly our struggle is only for inner independence. And that independence is possible only through self-discovery; discovering your own inner strength.

So therefore, independence requires jñānam. Self-knowledge; and self-knowledge requires mental purity, which means freedom from rāgaḥ and dvēsaḥ. I told you the other day, the impurity is delusion and the delusion is the thought that the world is the cause of my happiness or unhappiness; that is the delusion. As long as I am going to consider the world to be the cause of happiness or unhappiness, I will go on adjusting the world miserably failing. Only when I understand that I am the source of happiness; I am the source of sorrow also; misunderstood-I is the source of unhappiness; understood-I is the source of happiness; Ajñāta āhaṁ duḥkha hētuḥ; jñātā āhaṁ sukha hētuḥ; as long as I do not know myself, I am the source of sorrow; the moment I know myself, the very same known-I is the source of happiness. Until I recognise that, there is delusion; I will go on adjusting the world; and that delusion must go. That is called the inner impurity; and that will go only by karma-yōga.

So now what is route map; follow karma-yōga; purify the mind; follow jñāna-yōga; discover self-sufficiency and thus be free. This is the vēdic life programme. Follow karma-yōga; thus purify the mind; follow jñāna-yōga; discover self-sufficiency; and be free.

And Arjuna therefore you have to start from karma-yōga right now. Tasmād; therefore, kāryaṁ karma samācara; Therefore take to karma-yōga, by following your duty. Kāryaṁ means duty; what is expected of you in a particular set up, is kāryaṁ; and here what is Arjuna's kāryaṁ in this context; Mahābhāratha war. Therefore do not try to run away from your responsibilities; kāryaṁ karma samācara; and how should you do that; asaktaḥ; without anxiety; without projecting too much into future; and missing the present; so therefore, asaktaḥ, without bothering about the future; without brooding over the past, live in the present, and do what you have to do whole heartedly.

Satataṁ, this you have to continue and what will happen as a result of that? Asaktō hyācaran karma and if you keep what you have to do, with a healthy attitude, paramāpnōti pūruṣaḥ; such an intelligent karma-yōgi will ultimately attain mōkṣaḥ. Param means mōkṣaḥ. Such an intelligent karma-yōgi, with a healthy attitude will certainly attain mōkṣaḥ, not immediately, as I said karma-yōga, purification, jñāna-yōga, self-knowledge, mōkṣaḥ. Therefore Arjuna take the bow and fight.

More in the next class.

043 CHAPTER 03, VERSES 20-22

ॐ

तस्मादसक्तः सततं कार्यं कर्म समाचर ।
असक्तो ह्याचरन् कर्म परमाप्नोति पूरुषः ॥३.१९॥

tasmādasaktaḥ satataṁ kāryaṁ karma samācara |
asaktō hyācaran karma paramāpnōti pūruṣaḥ || 3.19 ||

Lord Kṛṣṇa talked about the important topic of karma-yōga from verse No.8 up to 18. And the essence of karma-yōga is giving more and taking less. It is a life of contribution. And when I say contribution, it need not be monetary alone; many people may be able to do; may people may not be, it can be contribution in the form of knowledge; our energy; our time; our love; even a few kind words is a good contribution only.

And this karma-yōga way of life; Kṛṣṇa looked at different angles; and we gave different names also, if you take karma-yōga as a commandment of the Lord, it is called ājñā; vidhi, or vihitha karma.

If you take the same karma-yōga as a worship of the Lord, expression of my gratitude, it is called yajñāḥ, when you look at the same karma-yōga as a means of purification, preparing myself for self-knowledge, then the very same karma-yōga is called chitta śōdhakam, purifier.

And if you look at the karma-yōga as a means of maintaining harmony at all levels; harmony within the individual himself, harmony at the level of family, community, religion, society, nation, and ultimately even ecological. Then the same karma-yōga is called dharma.

From whichever angle you appreciate karma-yōga it does not matter, one way or the other, you have to take to a life of karma-yōga; and then Kṛṣṇa concludes the topic in the 19th verse, which we were in the last class, tasmādasaktaḥ satataṁ kāryaṁ karma samācara.

Since karma-yōga is required for all the people, for spiritual progress, Arjuna you also have to necessarily follow karma-yōga.

And what is the advantage of doing that? Asaktō-hyācaran-karma paramāpnōti pūruṣaḥ; you will attain the highest result, known as parama puruṣārtha; or mōkṣaḥ.

And in this context, we should remember a point which is important that when Kṛṣṇa says karma-yōga will lead to mōkṣaḥ, we have to remember, karma-yōga cannot directly lead to mōkṣaḥ, karma-yōga will lead to mōkṣaḥ through jñana yōga; that is karma-yōga will prepare a person for jñana yōga; in fact he himself will get interested in jñana yōga. It will be very natural. and the jñana yōga will directly lead to liberation; Therefore Arjuna karma-yōga is important; and karma-yōga involves doing the duty and as a kṣatriya your duty is maintaining social harmony and for the maintenance of harmony whatever obstacles is there, you have to remove from the society and now Duryōdhana happens to be the obstacle for harmony; and therefore you have to fight this dharma yuddham, that is the Mahābhāratha war.

And even though it is a painful duty; not a pleasant duty, as the people say when they inaugurate the function or give the vote of thanks; they say it is my pleasant duty to give the vote of thanks. Even though it maybe unpleasant to the hearer, at least he got the mike and that is pleasant for him; so the very fact that he says it is a pleasant-duty indicates that there are many unpleasant duties in life; and for Arjuna this happens to be one, therefore, do not look upon it as an unpleasant duty, you take it as your duty and do the action. Up to this we saw, in the last class.

कर्मणैव हि संसिद्धिमास्थिता जनकादयः |
लोकसंग्रहमेवापि सम्पश्यन्कर्तुमर्हसि || ३-२० ||

karmaṇaiva hi saṁsiddhim āsthitā janakādayaḥ |
lōkasaṅgrahamēvāpi sampśyaṅ kartumarhasi || 3.20 ||

karmaṇā ēva hi कर्मणा एव हि (Abiding) by duty alone, janakādayaḥ जनकादयः Janaka and others āsthitāḥ आस्थिताः have attained संसिद्धिम् saṁsiddim liberation. ēva api sampśyaṅ एव अपि सम्पश्यन् At least considering lōkasaṅgraham लोकसङ्ग्रहम् the upliftment of the society, अर्हसि कर्तुम् arhasi kartum you should act.

20. (Abiding) by duty alone, people like Janaka have attained liberation. At least considering the upliftment of the society, you should act.

So after hearing this, Arjuna may still feel diffident; A diffidence which is common to all the people, especially all the family-people. They often say that Swamiji remaining in the family, and tied down with endless-responsibilities, do you think that it is possible for us to get liberation? And many people have concluded that it is impossible; because they often come and say that staying in the gṛhastha-āśrama they would not get mōkṣaḥ and all and one has to run away and take sanyāsa, only then mōkṣaḥ is thinkable, etc. this is the staunch opinion of the majority of grihasthās. And you need not feel bad about that, Arjuna himself has the same diffidence. He often asks, and he himself wants to take to sanyāsa right now; and Arjuna's case is still worse; because an ordinary gṛhastha has to take care of one family only; but a kṣatriya, a ruler, has to take care of the whole society or nation; imagine the prime minister attending Gīta -class, with all kinds of worries, December 6 is coming, all over security you have to arrange. By that time, other people are saying protest march, assembly elections lost; all kinds of headache, how can a ruler think of spirituality.

Therefore, Arjuna may feel diffident; therefore Kṛṣṇa says: Never feel diffident, even a gr̥hastha remaining in gr̥hastha-āśrama can follow spirituality and attain mōkṣaḥ. As I have said every āśrama has got its own plus point and its own minus point; the only thing is that bank of the river is better than this; therefore you interview some sanyāsi privately they may say that by mistake itself do not come to this āśrama; at least sanyāsi cases are worst cases, because it is one way traffic. Grihasthās are always in an advantageous position, because they can anytime switch over to sanyāsa-āśrama, but the sanyāsi is in a very big disadvantageous position, he can never renounce renunciation. Sanyāsa you cannot give sanyāsa. Therefore every Āśrama has got its own plus and minus point, if you know how to handle the minus point, you can utilise the Āśrama; that is why in a tradition, every stage of life is called a āśrama. It is not that the sanyāsi alone lives in āśrama; and we think house is āśrama; the very fact that tradition says gr̥hasthā-āśrama it means that you can convert your house also into āśrama; and we can convert an āśrama also into a house; because āśrama is also made of bricks and mortar only and especially modern āśrama it is like any other house, because there also all the modern facilities are there; TV is there, internet is there; because Āśrama requires more; Computers are there; this is there; that is there; everything is there; Now what is the difference between āśrama and house; nivṛtta rāgasya gr̥ham tapōvanam. It is the attachment that makes the difference. If the attachment is there, any building is a house; if detachment is there, any building is an āśrama.

A sanyāsi is supposed to have detachment; therefore his residence is called āśrama; many people have confusion; when they want to come to my residence; they wonder, Swamiji, what should I say about your residence. Āśramam? Because it is another apartment; upside there are other apartments and I am in another apartment and therefore, should I call it a flat, should I call it an apartment, a house, a āśrama, they are confused. So now what makes the difference? There is no difference at all; therefore I say you call it residence. Some place I reside. Therefore you call it residence; you need not have confusion. So therefore the difference between house and āśrama is not an external difference, it is a difference caused by the people who are inside there.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa wants to say that Grihasthās can remain in that Āśrama and attain liberation; even rulers can continue to occupy the responsible position and still attain liberation. And Kṛṣṇa wants to give an example and that example is popular example, taken from the Upaniṣad itself; and here the example is of Janaka maharaja.

And we find in the Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad that there are several occasions, where the kings were very learned people. Garga-Ajāthāśatru saṁvada; there is a discussion in Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad; a learned brahmin goes to Ajātaśatru and tells that I know Brahman; and then he gives a description of brahman and Ajātaśatru says that if you know only this much about Brahman, you have not understand properly; your knowledge is incomplete. Yētavannu, only this much you know, he asks? But again that Brahman who is very learned, whose life is dedicated to learning, he also does not keep his false ego, surrenders to Ajātaśatru and says if there is more knowledge that I should get, I surrender to you, you please teach me; Upathvayanithi. Then Ajātaśatru, a kṣatriya, a ruler answers. Prathilōmam chaithath; yat brahmanaha kṣtriyamēyat brahmanēva vakṣyathi iti. Everything seems to be ulta; pratilōmam means what, everything seems to be reverse; because Brahmins are supposed to be the centers of learning, who have to teach kṣatriya, vaiśya and śūdra, and here I am a kṣatriya ruler and I have to teach you. But does not matter; evathvath japaisyami; Ajātaśatru a ruler, teaches Brahma vidya, it is an important section in Bṛhadāraṇya, it is Ajātaśatru Brāhmaṇam/Gārgya brāhmaṇam. That means what: We had Janaka and Janaka occurs several times; it is in Bṛhadāraṇya; thus Ajātaśatru is there; Janaka is there; they were all responsible gr̥hastha and they could remain in karma-yōga, purify the mind, acquire the knowledge and be liberated and even teach others; therefore Arjuna why should you run away from life; and be in gr̥hastha-āśrama and gain knowledge.

Therefore He says: janakādayaḥ, people like Janaka, Aśvapathi, Ajātaśatru and others, saṃsiddhim āsthitā; they have attained liberation. How? Karmana ēva; remaining in a life of duties or responsibilities; without running away from responsibility, without changing the āśrama, these people had attained liberation, which proves it is possible. And therefore what should Arjuna do now? Follow dharma yuddha; purify the mind, continue in Grihasthā āśrama, gain self-knowledge and be a gr̥hastha jñāni. In the 4th chapter, Kṛṣṇa will talk about gr̥hastha -jñāni.

And with this example, Kṛṣṇa has given confidence for Arjuna and with this example, the topic of karma-yōga is over. Now from the 2nd line of this verse, Kṛṣṇa is changing into another topic. Karma-yōga topic is over, with the 20th verse 1st line.

Now from this second line, we are going to have a new topic. What is the background for this topic we should know? Now Kṛṣṇa said in two verses before, that is verse No.17 and 18, that karma-yōga is important for purification; and later for attaining knowledge; and once a person has become a jñāni, then he is a free person, and after becoming free, for him karma-yōga is not compulsory; because means is a must only until the end is accomplished. So for a jñāni karma-yōga is not required; therefore Kṛṣṇa said jñāni can do karma, jñāni need not do karma also.

न चास्य सर्वभूतेषु काश्चिदर्थव्यपाश्रयः ॥३.१८॥

[naiva tasya kṛtēnārthō nākṛtēnēha kaścana|
na cāsyā sarvabhūteṣu kaścīdarthavyapāśrayaḥ||3.18||](#)

Kṛṣṇa has said that jñāni does not require karma. Very careful; Kṛṣṇa does not say, jñāni should not do karma; jñāni does not require karma, he may do, he may not do; he can sit in a place like Ramaṇa Maharṣi or a Tapōvan Maharaj, who was just sitting in a cave without bothering about anything, a passive jñāni; or like Śaṅkarācārya and others a jñāni can be hectically active also. Now Arjuna can take advantage of that verse; because Arjuna wants to get out of karma now; because some excuse or the other, you want to get away from the painful duty; therefore there is a chance that Arjuna claims that I am a jñāni; and there is no way of testing; jñānam cannot be tested with a tester. Is there any test; there is no physical criteria; that is why Arjuna asked Sthithaprajñasya ka bhāṣā; samadhīsthasya kēśava. Therefore how can I know who is a jñāni and who is not. From dress can we make out a jñāni; from தாடி we can make out; if தாடி can be a criterion for a jñāni, then no lady can become a jñāni!; there would be no use of your all coming to the class; it would be a big problem; so therefore, தாடி; ஜடை and மொட்டைய், jaḍai thādi, mottai cannot be criterion, age cannot be the criterion; nothing can be the criterion.

Then what is the criterion for a jñāni? Jñānam is the criterion; and jñānam being within the mind, and since the knowledge is not physically visible; we have no way of knowing a jñāni. So people often ask, Swamiji, please enumerate the present 20th century jñānis. So somebody asked and a sanyāsi was telling; I can tell you about one jñāni; what is that? I am one; because I only know whether I know or not; the second one, how do I know; therefore Arjuna can claim that he is jñāni and then he can say that since I am jñāni I do not require karma for purification, because already accomplished the end and therefore I will go to Rishikesh; Some reason or the other; then expecting such an argument from Arjuna, Kṛṣṇa answers in the following portion; and what Kṛṣṇa says is: Arjuna even if you are jñāni you have to continue your duties.

Even if you are jñāni, you have to continue your duties. Naturally the question comes, why should he continue; afterall, duty is for purification; purification is for liberation; and liberation he has already got; why should he do karma; Kṛṣṇa answers, we will see the details later; even though you do not require karma, as long as you are in the society, considering the surrounding society and the environment, for the sake of the society, you have to continue to follow dharma; you do not follow karma for your sake; for your benefit; but you have to do for the benefit of the society; because you happen to be in the society, you will have to do that. And therefore he tells in the 2nd line, lōkasaṅgrahamēvāpi; for the sake of the well-being of the society; welfare of the society; the upliftment of the society; is called lōka-saṅgraham; for that purpose you have to do your duty. So here Kṛṣṇa is introducing this topic, based on an important principle in our tradition.

Now in our tradition, we say there are three sources of knowledge to find out what is the right way of living; to know what is the dhārmic way of living, we have got three sources.

If we do not know the dhārmic way of living; certainly we will live a life according to our whim and fancy; that is called let-go philosophy; Let go philosophy means what? do whatever you like doing; in Tamil it is said: கண்டதே காட்சி; கொண்டதே கோலம் kaṇṭatē kāṭci; kōṇṭatē kōlam; do whatever feel like doing in the name of freedom, it becomes a licentious life. Such a rāgaḥ-dvēṣaḥ based life, likes-dislikes based life is called wild life; prākṛta puruṣaḥ he is called; he is not a refined person; refined person is called saṃskṛta puruṣaḥ; and if I do not know what is the right way of living; and I go according to prakṛti, means nature-like a child, what discipline the child has got; it does what it wants to do; it wants to go to the bathroom, it goes wherever it is; only the mother knows. Always happens, you give the child to somebody else, and put it in the Swamiji's lap, and it goes for the urine, just at that time. The child senses the person; the child does not have any dos and don't; rāgaḥ-dvēṣaḥ based life is called prakṛta life; dharma-adharma based life is called saṃskṛta life.

If I have to be a refined person, I should not do what I like to do; I should do what is proper. Propriety is more important. Naturally, I should know what is proper. And I should know what is improper. So the question is, what is the source of knowing dharma and adharma; and in our tradition, we have got the guidelines, they say vēdōkilam dharmamūlam; pūrva mimāmsa sūtras give this particular knowledge; pūrva mimāmsa sūtra begin; athātō dharmāḥ jijñāsā; Now we are going to analyse what is dharma, proper way of living; vēdōkilam dharmamūlam; the entire vēdās are our scriptures are the primary source or primary source of dharma-adharma jñānam.

The human being can never know totally because, human beings' knowledge is limited; I discussed before, what we consider as good for some time, later it is scientifically proved otherwise, it is not good for humanity. In spite of so much advancement, we are not able to find what is good and what is bad. So therefore with limited intellect, how can I know; therefore we said, vēda, which is supposed to be revelation from the Lord, is the primary source, which we call as śrutiḥ.

Then we talked about the second source of knowledge, which is called smṛtiḥ; Tat vidam cha smṛti śīlai. Smṛtiḥ means all the secondary-literature which is based on the vēdas. What was proper hundred years before, many of the dharma-śāstrās rules, we are not able to follow; one rule they say is that the bathroom should be 50 feet away; the whole house is now 20 x 20; now you have to go to the neighbours' house; therefore many of the dharma śāstrās rule we cannot follow because the society is changing, and therefore there should be people who understand the spirit of the śāstrās and interpret it appropriately according to times; and those people who study, assimilate and interpret should be objective people; informed people, interested in the welfare of the society; Taitariya upaniṣad says:

.....ये तत्र ब्राह्मणाः संमर्शिनः | युक्ता आयुक्ताः |
अलूक्षा धर्मकामाः स्युः | यथा ते तेषु वर्तेरन् |
तथा तेषु वर्तेथाः | एष आदेशः | एष उपदेशः |
एषा वेदोपनिषत् | एतदनुशासनम् | एवमुपासितव्यम् |
एवमु चैतदुपास्यम् ||४|| इत्येकादशऽनुवाकः ||

.....yē tatra brāhmaṇāḥ saṁmarśinaḥ | yuktā āyuktāḥ |
alūḱṣā dharmakāmāḥ syuḥ | yathā tē tēṣu vartēran |
tathā tēṣu vartēthāḥ | ēṣa ādēśaḥ | ēṣa upadēśaḥ |
ēṣā vēdōpaniṣat | ētadanuśāsanam | ēvamupāsītavyam |
ēvamū caitadupāsyam ||4|| ityēkādaśa:'nuvākaḥ ||

'Look at what learned people in the current times are following & listen to what they preach; you too follow the same' –

A guru is shown by upaniṣad as telling his students when they pass out of gurukulam. Dharma-śāstrās also give provision for this, saying, if there is any doubt or adaptability issue on dharma-śāstrās, reach out to the learned people of the times and take their words as final. But, who is the 'learned' of the time has to be determined.

How beautiful our vēdas are? They are not rigid. Understand that scriptures have to be flexible and therefore give the freedom for the human-beings to interpret according to times. But they put only certain condition, that the human-beings do not have any axe to grind; or else he will interpret the śāstra to his advantage. You have to give maximum dakṣiṇa to me, he will say; therefore he should not be the beneficiary; therefore the second source of knowledge is called smṛtiḥ.

Then the third source of knowledge is called śiṣṭa ācāraḥ. The way of life lead by responsible members of the society; the elders, the cultured people; the informed people; they are called śiṣṭaḥ; means they themselves have been refined by their elders; and they have followed such a way of life, therefore they can serve as models for dharma. And these models, the live-models in the society are called śiṣṭaḥ; and ācāraḥ means the way of life and śiṣṭācāraḥ, means the way of life of the live models, responsible people.

Of the three sources of knowledge, which one is most powerful: Vēda teaches dharma; the smṛtiḥ, secondary literature like even Rāmāyaṇa, Mahābhāratha, Bhāgavatha, purāṇa, smṛtiḥ, secondary literature, they also teach dharma; and live models in the society also (just because I say models, do not think of somebody else, who walk the ramp, wearing something or nothing!) dharma-śāstra models I mean; (I am afraid to say Models! they are setting wrong models). So dharma-śāstra models in society; of these three, the third one is the most powerful teacher, because the śrutiḥ and smṛtiḥ are only in written form; they are cold words; we only hear about them; it has got only an audio effect; I do not see a Rāma, I do not see Vibhiṣaṇa; I do not see Lakṣmaṇa; while the live models give an audio visual effect; they have got better impact on the society; and therefore Kṛṣṇa wants to emphasise here, śiṣṭācāraḥ, otherwise Kṛṣṇa calls here śreṣṭhaḥ ācāraḥ; śreṣṭhaḥ means those people who are superior ones.

Now the next question is: who are the śiṣṭās? Or śreṣṭhaḥ? For every individual or child. The first and foremost example or model for a child is who, you know, all of you know, the first and foremost and most powerful model during the formative period is the mother, therefore mother influences maximum and according to psychologists even right from pregnancy, the mothers' thoughts influence, child knows whether it is welcome outside or not; it seems; so if the mother says that that she is not needing this child, already a dozen is there; that is even after naming the earlier child as Maṅgalam; this has happened, therefore they give the name Maṅgalam hoping that that would be the last, but it still continues and both of them are not interested; and do what is that test; amnio.. test; they know this is a girl child; and they do not want a girl; they say that the child knows whether it is wanted or not; and if the child gets the impression that I am not wanted; both of them are cursing left and right; that child suffers from tremendous complex, inferiority complex etc. and that is why we have got rituals like puṁsavanam; seemanthōnayanam etc. in that they gather people and they create an atmosphere that we are all looking forward to the child's arrival; the child understand it seems; and thereafterwards when the child comes out also, what the mother does and what the mother and father talk, the parents think that the child does not know the language; but the child knows the atmosphere; the heated atmosphere, the temperature it understands, even though not the knowledge.

Therefore the first model is the mother; the next model is the father; mātha, pitha, then the next model is guru; because they are all, if you take the initial few years of child's life, it is constantly with the mother; once it grows up, then only it begins to go to its father; because is always rrrrrrrr. Which child will go? after some time only the child will go to the father; and then in the gurukula-vāsa, the child lives with the guru; therefore guru's every action; one student was telling; previously I used to keep cassettes and distribute; and one student lost the cassette and he came and told that the cassette was lost and he thought that I will be shouting for 45 minutes, and with all the fear he came and I said does not matter; now he says that even I have talked about non-getting angry for years together; but that one experience he keeps remembering all the time; Swamiji I lost the cassette and you did not lose your temper. So, therefore it became an important lesson for him; that is only one second action; one second's action is equivalent to hours of verbal advice.

So, therefore, in Bṛhadārṇya upaniṣad it is beautifully said a person grows into a mature human being, if he has gone through three ideal relationships: one is mātrṛ saṃbandaḥ, next is pitrṛ saṃbandaḥ and the next is ācārya saṃbandaḥ; the upaniṣad says, that person we can give a certificate that he will be a sane person; because his talking about one person, giving about some values about some teaching, then Janaka-Yajñavalkya samvādam only; and Janaka wonders; whether the teaching will be proper or not; then this ācārya says that you need not have any doubt because the one who gives out the teaching is the one who has gone through these three ideal relationships. Yatha Matrumān, Pitrumān, Acāryavān brevithi, thatha shaivali raha; that means it will be true; so, model No.1 is mother; example No.1, 2 is father; No.3 is the ācārya, No.4 is the ruler of the country.

In those days, Kings were examples. Nowadays unfortunately, the terrible politicians are the models; and if those models are not there, we have cricketers and cinema actors with one year rating; and torn jeans and buttonless shirt and all kinds of things when we cannot provide ideal heros, all the other people will become heros and the children will hero-worship only through imitations. That is the only way of hero worship and that is why they always emphasised that the śreṣṭhaḥs must be responsible; mother must be aware of her responsibility; before getting the child; if she wants to be a free bird and she does not want to be a responsible mother, better she does not get a child. Similarly father must be responsible; Guru must be responsible; and a ruler must be responsible; and Arjuna whether you like or not; you are an important member of society. Arjuna is very popular person, because he is an all-rounder, he is a great archer, he is a great powerful person, handsome person also, he can dance, he can sing, he has even gone to the heavens and conquered enemies, and he is such a all-rounder and well-known person; whatever he does, the society is waiting to follow.

And the unfortunate thing is we always like to follow the wrong things, because it is easier; Viśvāmitra and Durvāsa have done so many wonderful things; we will not follow that. We will follow Durvāsa in one thing; in his anger; so whenever people get angry, they say even Druvāsa gets angry, why should not I?; Viśvāmitra ran with Mēnaka; you need not follow that; you can follow so many other things; Viśvāmitra discovered Gāyathri. Mēnaka why are you thinking; think of Gāyathri; so both are connected with Viśvāmitra but why dwell on this. So society is waiting to follow the wrong thing. Therefore Arjuna you must be an extra responsible person and therefore he wants to emphasise śreṣṭhaḥ ācāraḥ in these verses.

यद्यदाचरति श्रेष्ठसत्तत्तदेवेतरो जनः ।
स यत्प्रमाणं कुरुते लोकस्तदनुवर्तते ॥३.२१॥

yadyadācarati śreṣṭhastattadēvētarō janah|
sa yat pramāṇam kurute lōkastadanuvartatē||3.21||

इतर जनः itara janah Every other person आचरति ācarati performs एव तत् तत् ēva tat tat only such actions यद् यत् yad yat whichever श्रेष्ठः śreṣṭhaḥ a superior one(performs) लोकः lōkah The world अनुवर्तते तत् anuvartatē tat follows that यत् सः कुरुते yat saḥ kurute which he sets प्रमाणम् pramāṇam (as) a standard.

21. Every other person performs only such actions whichever a superior one (performs). The word follows that which he sets as a standard.

So these are all important useful verses to know and follow: śreṣṭhaḥ yat yat ācarati, whatever a śreṣṭhaḥ puruṣaḥ; a superior-person, a hero, a model does; and as I said for a child, śreṣṭhaḥ puruṣaḥ is the parent; and whatever the parents or the teacher or a ruler does, itara janāḥ tat ēva ācarati; the other people also follow the same thing because human-beings are sheepish people, that is why many new fashions come.

So one person had a torn pocket; he was smoking or put something and it had torn, and he cut that portion and took another piece of colour and he did that; that's how the bellbottom came. Somebody wrong stitching; he had elephantiasis; big legs, for fitting he had; he did for both legs; these people started following;

Therefore human minds are sheepish minds; therefore it has got an advantage also, he has got disadvantage also; take advantage of that, and what do you do, do noble things at home, all swearing words, the child picks up, we think the child is sleepy and does not know, etc. or playing at the most wrong time, the child will repeat, when Swamiji has come, the child will very very carefully repeat that word; and the mother will say why did you repeat that word; and the child will say that you only said the other day; so you feel like an idiot before the Swamiji. From where does the child gets everything? so every-word I use, every-action I do, if the father gets up early morning and does the pūja, the child will also do deeparādhana, etc. father lights up the cigarette, the child also will also do with the pencil or the pen in the mouth; the child will repeat the same thing; therefore, saḥ yat pramāṇam kurutē which he sets; whatever the śreṣṭhaḥ puruṣaḥ sets as a pramāṇam, standards; in the gurukula or in the home or in the society; especially when the red signal comes, we can see; everybody goes that if there is one person who is waiting there because of red signal; you feel like the black sheep now; you stop for the red signal; behind shouts at you; what kind of person you are, better go; this is how we find one person does, whether it is Pallavan or śreṣṭhaḥ puruṣaḥ; because he has green bus, for him the green signal is there everywhere! and once pallavan and everybody also goes; so everybody's action somebody violates and we also tend to do that; and still worse; if you do not violate, we begin to feel bad; that is still terrible; sa yat pramāṇam kurutē lōkastadanuvartatē; lōka, people follow that only;

न मे पार्थास्ति कर्तव्यं त्रिषु लोकेषु किञ्चन ।
नानवाप्तमवाप्तव्यं वर्त एव च कर्मणि ॥३.२२॥

na mē pārthāsti kartavyam triṣu lōkēṣu kiñcana |
nānavāptamavāptavyam varta ēva ca karmaṇi || 3.22 ||

पार्थ pārtha Oh Arjuna! अस्ति न किञ्चन asti na kiñcana There is nothing कर्तव्यं मे kartavyam me to be pursued by Me त्रिषु लोकेषु triṣu lōkēṣu in all the three worlds न अवाप्तव्यम् na avāptavyam There is nothing to be attained अनवाप्तम anavāptama which is not yet attained (by Me) एव च ēva ca Still, वर्त कर्मणि vartē karmaṇi I remain in action.

22. Oh Arjuna! There is nothing to be pursued by Me in all the three worlds. There is nothing to be attained which is not yet attained (by Me). Still, I remain in action.

So here Kṛṣṇa gives himself as an example. So not only mātā pitā guru should be models; they should give more good models and Heros for children; a Society is an ideal society, refined society which can give healthy models and heros to the children. You take all the purāṇās and take the characters, you will find that they serve as ideal model; especially for children, you will find Ānjanēya, he is always the hero of the children, Mr. Universe,.... with all muscles all over, and he is ready to do any feat, crosses the ocean and if Rāma wants the herb, he does not go on plucking the leaves, he plucks the whole mountain; and when the rākṣasā comes like mosquitos, he destroys. Maśaka. Like maśaka he kills. So children will naturally love, because at that time, you want it; but you will find that Āñjaneya does all these things, through that story they will teach important values also.

Ānjanēya goes and then he searches for Sita all over and then he goes to Ravanā's anthapuram, the harems where many ladies are there; and then he searches there, and comes back and he feels very bad. I have committed a big sin; going to the harem of a king and where all ladies are there; and that also they are sleeping, lying down, I have committed a big mistake, I am not supposed to do that and he feels guilty and thereafter he consoles himself that what I can do, if I have to search for Sīta, a woman; where will I search; not in a pot stop. Therefore if you want to look for a cow will see among the cows only. Therefore I have not done any mistake; even though I went all-over, in my mind, all the time for and looking for Sita, whom I look upon as universal other. My mind has never been polluted; therefore I need not feel guilty. Through Ānjanēya, they are indirectly teaching; what should be the attitude of a male towards a female; mātra paradārāṁśca, para dravyāni lōṣṭavat; the culture says that every women other than your sister, or wife, as a mother; everyone look as mother; and after searching all over, Ānjanēya fails to spot Sīta and you know what he does; I have done everything, now I know what mistake I did; So I was so overconfident; that I thought that I myself can accomplish this task; I never remembered that Lord; now I know that; human ingenuity alone is not enough; human strength alone is not enough; you require the grace of the Lord; the powerful Ānjanēya, the He-man Ānjanēya; the he-man Ānjanēya closes the eyes and says;

नमोस्तु रामाय स लक्ष्मनाय
देवै च तस्यै जनकात्मजायै
नमोस्तु रुद्रेन्द्रिय मानिलेभ्य
नमोस्तु चद्रार्क मरुत् गनेभ्यः

Namōstu rāmāya sa lakṣmanāya dēvai ca tasyai janakātmajāyai namōstu rudrēndriya mānilēbhya namōstu cadrārka marut ganēbhyaḥ

I know that strength must be supported by faith in God, devotion to God. Therefore unknowingly when I am talking about Ānjanēya, healthy attitude towards the Lord, healthy attitude towards women, and again Lakṣmaṇa is another beautiful example, he is also a powerful person, highly restless; Ādiśēṣa avatharam, so hissinglike the snake, very powerful; and when Sugrīva shows various ornaments to Lakshmana, to Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa to identify whether the ornaments to Sīta or someone, Lakṣmaṇa says,

नाहम् जानामि केयूरे ,नाहम् जानामि कंकणे ।
नूपुरे त्वपि जानामि ,नित्यम् पदाभि वन्दनात् ॥

nāham jānāmi keyūrē, nāham jānāmi kaṁkaṇē |
nūpurē tvapi jānāmi, nityam padābhi vandanāt ||

Rāma, I do not know which one is the ear ornament, which is the nose ornament, which is the neck ornament, I have never stared on Sīta with that intention; I can very well recognise, the kōlusu, that leg ornament, anklet ornament, I can recognise because I was regularly doing namaskāra to Sīta like my mother.

Thus you will find that throughout purāṇās, we have got powerful people, they are learned people, they are strong people, they had devotion, they had healthy attitude towards money, guru, other people, women; thus ideal models we have to present; and if we do not have proper models, we will have all kinds of violent models, complaining what is happening in TV and cinema, you will find that they get all kinds of unhealthy attitude; and that is what Kṛṣṇa emphasises here; elders are responsible for the next generation; Arjuna, you are responsible for the next generation. Therefore, act as you should .

Hari Om

ॐ

Up to verse No.20, Lord Kṛṣṇa talked about the importance of Karma, doing one's duty, in the case of a self-ignorant person; an ajñāni. Ajñāni has to do karma because, through karma alone he can purify the mind, and a purified mind alone can attain knowledge; and a wise-person alone can attain liberation.

And thereafterwards Kṛṣṇa said once a person has attained wisdom, then he does not require karma; because once the end is attained, the means become redundant for him. Therefore, a jñāni does not require karma. And this is the topic of karma-yōga which Kṛṣṇa concluded in verse No.20.

Now after hearing this, Arjuna may raise an argument; for which Kṛṣṇa gives the answer; a hypothetical-argument; that is: Arjuna may claim that I am a jñāni; a wise-person; and since I am a jñāni, I do not require karma to purify the mind, because the very presence of jñānam proves the purification of the mind and the very presence of purification or purity proves that he does not require karma; therefore Arjuna can claim that I can get away from my duty; because I am a jñāni, and if I do not require karma or karma-yōga; then I need not do my duty which happens to be very unpleasant-duty in this context. In fact if it is any other karma, Arjuna would have jumped at it; but this karma is very unpleasant; and therefore that argument is possible on the part of Arjuna and imagining such an argument from Arjuna, Kṛṣṇa gives the answer in these verses from 21 onwards and here Kṛṣṇa says Arjuna even if you are a jñāni you have to do your svadharma; your karma.

And for what purpose? Kṛṣṇa says I do agree that you do not require karma for your purification; you do not require karma for your getting knowledge; you do not require karma for your liberation; but even though you do not require, as long as you are in the society; you have to serve as a model for other members of the society. And the other members happen to be spiritually-ignorant and since the other members require karma, you have to set as an example by performing karma, not for your sake, but for teaching the society.

And in this context, Kṛṣṇa talks about certain general-principles and that is according to our scriptures, there are different sources of learning the proper-way-of-living; dhārmic-way-of-living; one can and one should learn from different sources.

If a person does not learn the dhārmic-way-of-living; then the person will go according to his rāgaḥ and dvēṣaḥ; and a life in keeping with my views and fancies will be improper life; it will be prākṛta-jīvitam. And therefore one has to change the life from prākṛta to saṃskṛta; from wild life to a decent cultured life; for that I should know the proper way of living; for that I require the source of knowledge; in Sānskrīt, we call it dharma-pramāṇāni. Pramāṇam means source-of-knowledge; dharma means right-way-of-living, which would lead to liberation and dharma-pramāṇa means sources for knowing about the right-way-of-living; and according to our scriptures three sources are there:

- one is the vēdās, the original source,
- and the second is the smṛtiḥ-granthas, the secondary-scriptural-literature, which are based on the vēdās; like itihāsās, purāṇās, smṛtiḥ, etc. and
- thirdly and most importantly, the lifestyle-of-cultured-people, the lifestyle-of-the-ideal-models-of-society; the lifestyle-of-responsible-elders-of-the-society.

And as I said in the last class, of these three sources, the lifestyle-of-elders is a more powerful medium of communication, because the books have got only audio-effect; whereas the lifestyle of elders have got a video-effect. So one action is equal to thousands of books; suppose a father tells or a son reads in the book, sathyam vadha, sathyam vadha, tell the truth; speak the truth, speak the truth, in all the scriptures, and the child has learned this or heard about this, and one day a phone call comes and son takes the phone and from the other side, from the office, they ask, I would like to speak to so and so, and father tells the son that tell them I am not here; and the son also like father is an idiot; and the son says, my father says that he is not here. This one instance is enough to rule out thousand Hariscandra purāṇām, books and books of literature can be just knocked off, cancelled by one instance; that father does at the formative-age of the child.

Now tell me which is powerful; the action of the parents or the advices of the vēdās and smṛthis and itihāsās. Our scriptures themselves say that the life of elders, their teaching is more intense. And therefore Kṛṣṇa said yadyadācarati śrēṣṭhastattadēvētarō janaḥ; whatever the models of the society preach, not by their words, but by their actions; that is the most powerful teaching.

And as I said again in the last class, mother is the model for the child; father is the model for the child; mātā pitā, next the school teachers; they never unfortunately know their responsibilities. They never come to the school punctually and what kind of punctuality the children will have, if the teachers are not punctual; anything for that matter; therefore the teachers are responsible; and the rulers are responsible and any other elder. And here Kṛṣṇa argues, Arjuna whether you like or not, you are a hero in the society. Like a cricket hero, or a TV hero, whether you like or not, the whole society is watching you. See what is happening to the President of America; the whole society is watching; millions of dollars are spent for one statement, misleading the people; so you can imagine what is the worth of the statement coming from a responsible person in the society; it can shatter the whole world; it can create big moral problems, ethical issues; and therefore Arjuna whether you like or not; you occupy an important position. At this time, you may feel that it is unfortunate; because that is why, once you have a status, it is very nice, to enjoy the status but along with the status goes responsibility also. And when responsibility comes, the man of status says that it would have been fine, if I had been an ordinary person in the society; because responsibilities crush. But Arjuna whether you like or not, you are a responsible member and therefore do your duty; not for your sake; but to lead the society properly.

And Kṛṣṇa wants to give himself as an example; Arjuna I am an avathāra. In fact, I am greater than even a jñāni; because at least a jñāni was a saṁsāri before, and later he became liberated; but an avathāra is one, we would be seeing about avathāra later, is one born jñāni. But even though I am avathāra of the Lord; once I have become your driver; What a position? once I have become your driver; I have to follow the rules; I will have to wash the horse, I will have to wash the chariot; I cannot say that I am the ruler of the world, nothing doing; once I am in a particular position, I have to follow svadharma; and as a gṛhastha I have to follow atiti dēvō bhavaḥ and when a Kucēla comes, even though I am the Lord of the Universe, I have to do pādapūja, because that is again the teaching of the scriptures. I do not claim that I am the Lord and therefore I would not touch the feet of Kuchēla; let him do worship to me. No; therefore, just as I am accepting my duties, whether it is painful or pleasant and Kṛṣṇa also had to kill his own uncle.

Therefore Kṛṣṇa quotes himself as an example here, in this slōkā No. 22, Hey Partha; pārthāḥ mē triṣu lōkēṣu kartavyaṁ nāsti. I need not perform any duty to purify my mind; because as the Lord I am ever pure, as a jñāni I am ever pure; through these actions I have nothing to accomplish; triṣu lokēṣu, in all the three worlds, I need not accomplish anything; nānavāptamavāptavyaṁ. There is no puruṣārtā which is not accomplished by me. I need not attain dharma, I need not attain artha, I need not attain kāma, I need not attain mōkṣa; all the four puruṣārthās are part of me; that is why we have the word Bhagavān for the Lord. It is a beautiful word; I just talked about this in my introduction; the word Bhagavān is a beautiful word; bhaga means six-fold wealth. Bhagaḥ; means six-fold wealth; and vān means the possessor; the one who enjoys; in full measure; and what are the six-fold wealth.

ऐश्वरस्य समग्रस्य वीरस्य यशसा श्रिया
ज्ञान वैराग्य योश्चैव षण्णाम् भग इतिरणाः

aiśvarasya samagrasya vīrasya yaśasā śriyā jñāna vairāgya yōścaiva ṣaṇṇām bhaga itiraṇāḥ

Aiśvarasyam; aiśvarasyam means power; overlordship; not wealth; in Tamil aiśvarasyam is taken as wealth; but according to Sānskrīt aiśvarasyam, Īśvarasya-bhāvaḥ; Īśvara means ruler; Īśvarasya-bhāvaḥ, the status of being the ruler controller of everything; overlordship is aiśvarasyam. And the second one is vīryam; valour, courage; then the third one is yaśaḥ; yaśaḥ means fame; and the fourth one is śrīḥ, prosperity; so overlordship, courage, fame, prosperity, jñānam, knowledge, and finally vairāgyam; vairāgyam means what? The independence, freedom, freedom from all dependence is called vairāgyam, all these six fold wealth in full measure; samagrasya; suppose I have a few rupees, it cannot be called bhaga, all the wealth. Similarly I have power over my servants; that is itself doubtful; power over my driver, doubtful, even if it is there, that will not come under bhaga; absolute overlordship; absolute courage; absolute fame; each one in absolute measure, put together all is called bhagaḥ; and bhagavān means the one who has got all these six in absolute measure.

Now tell me, what Bhagavān has to accomplish in the world; Kṛṣṇa says; anavāptam avāptavyaṁ Nāsti. There is nothing to be accomplished by me, which has not yet been accomplished; but look at me, varta ēva ca karmaṇi; still I am busy doing what I have to do, according to my varṇa and my āśrama; varṇa means as a kṣatriya; and āśrama means as a gr̥hastha; what I have to do I do. So when I myself cannot escape from my duty, how can you do that? Therefore Arjuna even if you are a jñāni, you have to do your duty.

Verse 3.23

यदि ह्यहं न वर्तेयं जातु कर्मण्यतन्द्रितः ।
मम वर्त्मानुवर्तन्ते मनुष्याः पार्थ सर्वशः ॥३.२३॥

yadi hyahaṁ na vartēyaṁ jātu karmaṇyatandritaḥ |
mama vartmānuvartantē manuṣyāḥ pārtha sarvaśaḥ || 3.23 ||

हि hi Because, यदि जातु yadi jātu if ever अहं न वर्तेयम् ahaṁ na vartēyaṁ I do not remain
अतन्द्रितः atandritaḥ tirelessly कर्मणि karmaṇi in action, मनुष्याः manuṣyāḥ the people अनुवर्तन्ते anuvartantē would follow मम वर्त्म mama vartma My path सर्वशः sarvaśaḥ in every way, पार्थ pārtha Oh Arjuna!

23. Because, if ever I do not remain tirelessly in action, all the people would follow my path in every way, Oh Arjuna!

So here Kṛṣṇa says what will happen if the elders are irresponsible; people in position misbehave; what will be the consequences; he says the entire society wants to sheepishly follow the so-called roll-models. As I said in the last class, when the healthy models are not available, then the cinema actors and actress and all those people will become models; and the whole society will be in utter confusion; which Kṛṣṇa calls as saṁkaraḥ; saṁkaraḥ means confusion. Exactly like a traffic jam. Suppose there is red signal and people all are waiting; and then one person looks around and nobody comes and he goes; and the others just watch; they only want somebody to create the precedent; then you will find that all the people will follow; then there will be confusion and there is traffic jam; imagine in the entire-society, at all levels, the violation-of-harmony taking place; the violation-of-harmony with regard to sociological-disorder.

What will happen? That is what Kṛṣṇa says here; yadi hyahaṁ na vartēyaṁ; suppose I do not perform my duty; and that too how; atandritaḥ; tirelessly, if I do not perform my duty, that is enthusiastically I should perform; when I do not have get the benefit, when I have to do it for others' sake, often our tendency will be to do it, beating on our head and murmuring कलङ्क. Kṛṣṇa says No. even if you do not get any benefit; you have to follow certain things to teach others; and when you do that; enthusiastically do it; sincerely do it; whole heartedly do it; because even though you do not see any gross benefit; subtly you are teaching your family members; at least you are teaching your family members; that itself is great.

And therefore, tirelessly, if I do not do my duty, jathu; at all the time; then, mama vartmānuvartantē. So the whole society is waiting for me; so even the thieves quote Lord Kṛṣṇa by saying that Kṛṣṇa stole butter; therefore why can't I steal. Kṛṣṇa did so many other things; they are not willing to do that; still they want to follow with regard to those things, which are very very convenient to them. Society is like that; therefore Kṛṣṇa says; mama vartmānuvartantē; the people will follow my way of life; so varthma, means way of life. That is why Rāmāyaṇa when you say, ayanam means way-of-life; path and Rāma ayanam, the path of life which was followed by Rāma, which is indirect-teaching. So mama vartmānuvartantē manuṣyāḥ; all the human-beings will follow me, alone, sarvaśaḥ, by all means, therefore if I go wrong, it will affect the entire society.

And that is why, they tell this story, how because of human sheepish behaviour problems can be created. It seems that there was a brahman, who went to Rāmēśvaram to take bath; and he had a copper vessel, and he wanted to keep on the sand and take bath, he kept there and then he went; then he was worried; supposed somebody takes the copper vessel and that would be a problem; therefore he dug a hole and covered; so that nobody would know; and he went; after going some distance he thought, the beach is so big, how will I know where I have hidden the copper vessel; some indication must be there; I put any other indication, then persons would have curiosity and they may dig. Then he thought, he will make a Śiva liṅga out of sand; Therefore nobody would suspect, and it would be easier for me to spot after I come back; therefore he made a Śiva liṅga and went for a bath; and being a Brahmaṇa he has a long prayers before the bath and agamarṣaṇa-sutram he has to chant, then sandhya vandhana and other tarpaṇa and all those things he had to.

Then another person came; for bath; and he saw that one person is taking bath and there is a Śiva liṅga made out of sand; therefore he thought perhaps this is the tradition in Rāmēśvaram. Perhaps you have to make a Śiva-liṅga before bath in Rāmēśvaram, because Rāma had done that; a saikata-liṅgaḥ; a liṅga made out of sand; perhaps you have to make a saikata-liṅgaḥ, offer prayers and then only take bath; perhaps that is the tradition; therefore he wanted to follow the tradition; because for many things we do not know the source at all, because ours is a 5000 years old, 10,000 years old tradition; and how do we know when it all began. Therefore he made a Śiva-liṅga prayed and went for bath; Then a third person came he saw two people taking bath, two Śiva liṅgas. Therefore he was a very definite that there is a rule that you have to make a Śiva liṅgam out of sand to worship, in Rāmēśvaram and then only one should take bath. Then fourth, fifth, and hundreds of people came; and all over the beach, there was sand liṅgam; and this poor brahman finished his bath and came, he has got Śiva-liṅgams all around the beach. Now how will he know where his copper vessel is; under which Śiva-liṅgam is this copper vessel hiding; So this person said;

न लोका परमार्थिका |

सेतै सैकतः लिङ्गेन
नष्ट मे ताम्र भाजनम् ॥

gatānugati kō lōkāḥ
na lōkā paramārthikā |
sētai saikataḥ liṅgēna
naṣṭa mē tāmra bhājanam ||

Can you follow this: gatānugati kō lōkāḥ, the whole world seems to be sheepish; if one person wears a jeans which is torn, in one TV programme I saw, that after buying fresh jeans and then with the gun they make the holes and it is more costlier; Somebody worn a worn-out jeans and that has become the tradition and fashion; that is how some dishes are made out of old remaining stale food; and later became delicacy and people make the food stale and make it nowadays; I do not name the dish and hurt some people, some dish are discovered like that they say; so gatānugati kō lokāḥ, na lōkā paramārthikā, no human being wants to think, reason out and do, and because of this habit; sētai saikataḥ liṅgēna, because of the sand liṅgam, made by me in Sēthu, Ramēśvara sēthu, disadvantages of the sheepish tendencies; and there are also advantages.

So therefore, if the children are following you, you have got advantages and disadvantages; the disadvantages are that you have to be responsible and alert. The advantages are that you can teach your children more by action, without using any word; very simple. Similarly teachers also. So Kṛṣṇa says; mama vartmānuvartantē manuṣyāḥ pārtha sarvaśaḥ.

उत्सीदेयुरिमे लोका न कुर्यां कर्म चेदहम् ।
संकरस्य च कर्ता स्यामुपहन्यामिमाः प्रजाः ॥३.२४॥

utsīdēyurimē lōkā na kuryāṁ karma cēdahaṁ |
saṅkarasya ca kartā syāmupahanyāmimāḥ prajāḥ ||3.24||

चेत् cēt If अहं न कुर्याम् ahaṁ na kuryāṁ I do not perform कर्म karma action, इमे लोकाः imē lokāḥ all these worlds उत्सीदेयुः utsīdēyuh would perish स्यां कर्ता syāṁ kartā I will be the creator सङ्करस्य च saṅkarasya ca of confusion also उपहन्याम् upahanyām I will be destroying इमाः प्रजाः imāḥ prajāḥ these people.

24. If I do not perform action, all these worlds would perish. I will be the creator of confusion also. I will be destroying these people.

So here Kṛṣṇa says once I violate my svadharma, i.e., I do not do my social duties, which is pañca-mahā-yajña, and this svadharma also will come under those duties only; if I do not do that; then the other people also will; what you call? Violate the svadharma. The consequences will not be felt immediately.

Because always they say, that Bhagavān does not punish immediately; for any violation of Lord's harmony, he does not punish immediately. Even from health angle. If you violate the rules of health; with regard to eating, or with regard to the water you drink or any other health rule also, Bhagavān has given enough immunity and strength; initially some indications will be given; but only after years of violation, the consequences will be felt; அரசன் அன்ட்ரு கொல்வான், தைவம் நின்று கொல்லும். Araśan andru kōlvan; daivam nindru kōllum. Even for the violation of ecological harmony, we are not punished immediately; if one person cuts a tree in front of his house, not that tomorrow the whole Madras people will die, that is not going to happen, one person does, another person does, another person does, all the houses are converted into flats; 32 flats, 54 flats, etc. population of human-beings increase, population of trees decrease, the population of cars increases, if you violate all the rules, not that immediately the result will be felt; but in due course, the whole health of the society will vary gradually deteriorate, perhaps we may discover the fact and sometime it might have become even irreversible. You might be aware of famous or notorious Chembur fog. Have you heard about it? In Mumbai, an area called Chembur, above that there is a fog which is permanently there; from aero plane you can see it seems, that the Chembur people are not able to do anything; when I went to one house, I asked that lady, she says I have to live with that; I cannot do anything. I cannot even shift from here because, we are here for the last 45 years; we cannot uproot ourselves and settle somewhere; we have to live with that; she has got weezing problems and all kinds of health problems; all caused by that chemical fog. There is no remedy at all; Imagine if the same things happens everywhere.

What will happen? Therefore what Kṛṣṇa says is consequences will not be felt immediately; but gradually we are destroying the creation and first person who violated the dharma is ultimately responsible for that.

So here Kṛṣṇa says: imē lōkāḥ utsīdēyuh. So all these people will perish, not immediately, but ultimately, there will be total disorderliness and many types of diseases, doctors suspect because of the disorderliness and our way of life; using fertilizers now natural food is costing more; natural food is costing more; What Bhagavān has given free, we have to pay more. Thus, because of fertilizers, because of chlorine, using this and that, they suspect many of the diseases, including cancer, they are suspecting is because of unhealthy way of living; That is why Kṛṣṇa says; imē lōkāḥ utsīdēyuh, they will perish;

Karma ahaṁ na kuryāṁ cēt; if I do not do my duty; if I do not set an example; if I do not serve as a model.

And how will I destroy? Not directly, saṅkarasya ca kartā, by creating confusion in the society; with regard to their duties; saṁskāraḥ, means varṇa saṁskāraḥ, and āśrama saṁskāraḥ; with regard to their duties, they will be utterly confused; and by way of that; imāḥ prajāḥ aham upahanyām; I will destroy all these people.

So about this saṁskāraḥ and varṇa āśrama dharma, I will be discussing elaborately in the fourth chapter, I would like to give one relevant point, here. So what should be the basis to choose a profession? Suppose I want to choose a profession; what should be the basis of choosing the profession?

Now the varṇa āśrama dharma has got a provision for that. All the professions must be promoted; all the vocations are important; all the arts must be protected; all the sciences must be protected; music must be protected, dance must be protected; so with regard to the choice of profession, what should be the condition? The śāstrās say when one chooses a profession, it can be based upon two things; one is based upon one's inclination; talents; guṇa based karma; guṇa anusārī karma; which is very good; and which is very ideal because, when I choose a profession, which I love, which I can do very well, then the greatest advantage is what? That I will get satisfaction; I will enjoy what I am doing. In fact, enjoyment becomes the primary thing, the salary becomes incidental thing; and there is no strain. I will look forward to Monday. When I love what I do, I look forward to Monday, when I hate what I do, I look forward to Friday; I look forward to my Sunday classes; you know why, because I love it. And otherwise Friday Saturday is called weekend. Because you are weakened; why you are weakened? not the physical strain; you will never know the physical strain; when you do the job with love; when you love the job, physical strain will never be felt; but when it is done as a burden, one needs double income, both have to work, and even unfortunately in many schools also, the teachers come, because they have to augment the income, not because they would love to share the values and share their knowledge to educate the children, but because they have to augment their salary; and therefore let me go for teaching profession; and many teachers do that; without love and that affects the child and that affects the future generation. In Schools and all these problems are there; therefore, I choose the profession that I love; that is guṇa is one criterion or condition.

And the other thing that was followed is janma that is the birth; which is the most notorious caste system nowadays it has come; caste system is choosing the profession based on one's janma; if a person is not able to choose based on one's guṇa; and the jāti was kept as a basis because the advantages are that the child is exposed to father's profession, right from very very early age; and the child learns from imitation; haven't you seen; a doctor's child will convert every pen and pencil into an injection needle; because it says that I will inject like the father; the child of a musician is exposed to music even when he is in the womb of the mother; and therefore they thought that the child has got lot of advantages and therefore they said he can choose the profession of the father; even now you watch; this month is music month; almost every musician is promoting his son or daughter in which field; music field; and they will talk about it as a plus point; whole family is music family. Maharājapuram Santhānam family; 4 generations music; so they have in their genes. And in India, even occupying the Delhi throne seems to be based on jāti or janma! It is in our blood; and therefore we would not give up.

Therefore the śāstra says, let it be jāti-based or guṇa-based but the śāstra warning is. Now in the jāti-based also, the advantage is that all professions are protected; because parampara -weaving-person, this particular art, particular music, everything is protected, that family takes care of that profession; but what śāstra warn; let the profession be not chosen based on money; once money becomes criterion, there will be lot of problems there would be certain profession, everybody goes; for some days, it was bank, bank, everywhere banks; because less work and more salary; or no work and more salary; I have not gone to any bank; and thereafter sometime everybody computer, computer, computer and you will find that the certain-profession, heavy competition, cut throat all those things and there will be certain professions, nobody comes forward. All the brāhmaṇās are taking to Vyśyās'-profession; business; all the brāhmaṇās are taking to kṣatriya position; MLA and MP position; or taking to śudra profession; working under someone. But you will find nobody comes to the brāhmaṇā's-profession; what is that? learning the vēdās; learning the valuable-scriptures; learning the Sānskrīt; how many people are interested; almost all schools and colleges are abolishing Sānskrīt, either teacher is not there or student is not there; they learn every language under the sun, Japanese, French, etc. Spanish, any language under the sun, except Sānskrīt. Sānskrīt will die; scriptures will die; all these wonderful things, nobody will come forward; scriptures will die; vēda-pārāyaṇa will die; many brāhmaṇa themselves I do not remember, whether they remember Gāyathri. And son asks, gāyathri teach me; and the father says; son, for you upanayam was done yesterday and you have forgotten; for me, it was done 40 years back, how the hell do you expect me to remember 😊 😊 😊. Nobody to study vēdās; in some religion, family decide to dedicate one of the child to the church, as a privilege and blessing but here you find, let the neighbors son become a sanyāsi, I am ready to go and do namaskāram also, but I want my son to become intact; means income intact; we are ready, we glorify the vēdās; we say it is wonderful; but we do not want our children to study the vēdās; our children to study Sānskrīt; nowadays some children are learning Sānskrīt, you know why, because that is easy scoring subject. One language which you can study without knowing; Sānskrīt is taught and written in all the other language, other than Sānskrīt; in English and the answers are written in English. Even without knowing to write, you can write all exams in Sānskrīt by writing in English or any other language.

And they find that you can get easily 90 marks even without studying, which will give me a better advantage to get admission in college; for that purpose, we study Sānskrīt not because of Sānskrīt bakthi. So what will happen if certain money-based profession; certain important things will be lost; and if we lose our scriptures, valuable-teachings will be lost, and Arjuna the condition for Svadharma must be based on guṇa or jāti; svadharma should not be based on money or any other convenience, Arjuna whether you like it or not, do your kṣatriya dharma. Your guṇa is also kṣatriya dharma. Birth is also kṣatriya birth; or whether it is guṇa based profession or jāti based profession, you have to fight the legitimate war. Therefore never try to escape. upahanyāmimāḥ prajāḥ.

सक्ता कर्मण्यविद्वांसो यथा कुर्वन्ति भारत ।
कुर्याद्विद्वांस्तथासक्तश्चिकीर्षुर्लोकसंग्रहम् ॥३.२५॥

saktāḥ karmaṇyavidvāṃsō yathā kurvanti bhārata |
kuryādvidvāṃstathā'saktaśchikīrṣurlokasaṅgraham || 3.25 ||

भारत bhārata Oh Arjuna! तथा यथा tathā yathā Just as अविद्वांसः कुर्वन्ति avidvāṃsaḥ kurvanti ignorant-people act saktāḥ karmāṇi सक्ताः कर्माणि with attachment to action, विद्वां कुर्यात् vidvān kuryāt a wise (man) also should act असक्तः asaktaḥ without attachment, चिकीर्षुः cikīrṣuḥ with a desire to maintain लोकसङ्ग्रहम् lōkasaṅgraham the upliftment of the society

25. Oh Arjuna! Just as ignorant-people act with attachment to action, a wise man also should act without attachment, with a desire to maintain the harmony of the society.

So Kṛṣṇa has pointed out that an ignorant person, ajñāni also should do karma; a jñāni also should do karma; only the purpose is different; ajñāni does karma to get purity, knowledge and liberation; in stages; that is the route that is visualised by him; when jñāni performs karma, it is not for purity, knowledge or liberation, because jñāni has got all the three; his aim is what? Educating the society with regard to proper living; serving as a model; but both should do karma.

Now a person may like to know, if both of them are performing karma, what will be the difference in their attitude? The attitudinal-difference between jñāni's-karma and ajñāni's-karma; and what is difference? Kṛṣṇa says: when ajñāni is doing karma, ajñāni has not attained liberation; and not attained liberation means, he is not happy with himself; bondage means self-insufficiency; self-incompleteness; self-dissatisfaction; not being at home with myself. And naturally, since a ajñāni is not happy with himself, when he does any action, through the action, he wants to discover fullness and happiness; therefore he performs action for happiness; a ajñāni performs action for getting happiness; for getting fulfilment; and therefore there is an anxiety also; will I succeed? Will I get that? only if I get that, I will be fine; if I do not get that, I will be terribly disappointed; I would like to get that house; I would like to marry this particular man or this particular woman; I would like to get a child; and I want the child to be male; or female; everything that I do, it is done out of incompleteness; and therefore it is for completeness; and therefore there is a problem of attachment; or expectation; or dependence, Whereas when a jñāni performs action, he is not doing with a sense of incompleteness, because jñāni by definition is one who has jñānam. Jñāni means the one who has jñānam. Jñānam asya asthi ithi; jñānam means what? What knowledge? Not two plus two is four; if that knowledge we are talking about, we are all jñānis.

When we say jñānam in Vēdāntic context, the jñānam is my nature is fullness; my nature is security; my nature is peace. Whatever I am seeking in life, all those are my intrinsic-nature. ahaṁ-pūrṇaḥ asmi; ahaṁ-amṛtaḥ asmi; I do not require any external-support to fulfill me; to complete me; it is with the sense of fullness that jñāni performs action; and therefore he does not do action for happiness but he does action with happiness; therefore the difference is only in the preposition; that is the only difference. In one, for, in the other, with; when I do for happiness, I am Mr. Samsāri. If I do with happiness, I am Mr. Muktaḥ; That is why Dayānanda Swami beautifully says; we have got Swami so and so... ānanda comes generally. Of course, there are other swamis with a different title also. What does it indicate? Since ānanda is in his very name itself, it indicates that he is the embodiment of ānanda, and the entire life is lead with ānanda; So Swami -so- and-so-ānanda. And what about all other; opposite of Swami, is asāmi. All others are asāmis. this asāmis is so so and duḥkam. That we did not add; we can read that in the face; all the other people do for happiness.

And when I do action for happiness; the action is a struggle; when I do action with happiness; the action is a game; a sport; in Sānskrīt, Leela; Jñāni's every action is a leela; ajñāni's every action is a drag. That is why in all languages, how is the life going; everybody has similar phrase; just going; just goes on in English, Chaltahai in Hindi; in every language, nobody would be enthusiastic; that is typical saṁsāra, this is the attitudinal difference; that is said in the slōka, which we will see in the next class.

Hari Om

045 CHAPTER 03, VERSES 26-27

ॐ

Lord Kṛṣṇa first talked about the importance of karma, an active life, with regard to an ignorant-person; an ajñāni. Ajñāni has to perform karma because karma alone has the capacity to purify the mind; cittasya śuddayē karmaḥ; and this is the topic of karma-yōga in which karma is used for the spiritual purification of the mind.

Having talked about the importance of karma, from the standpoint of an ignorant person, now Kṛṣṇa talks about the importance of karma from the standpoint of a wise person; not a sanyāsi-wise-person, you should clearly remember, a gṛhastha-jñāni, who is very much in the society.

As far as sanyāsi-jñāni is concerned, he does not have the right to do many of these śāstric-karmas, because a sanyāsi formally renounces all the religious activities by removing the sacred thread. At the time of upanyanam, he formally takes up all the religious activities, and at the time of sanyāsa, he formally renounces all religious activities; by symbolically removing the thread; and therefore, a sanyāsi-jñāni cannot do most of the karmas which are entitled for a gṛhastha. So Kṛṣṇa is not talking about a sanyāsi-jñāni here; but a gṛhastha-jñāni, who is very much in the society. And the question is whether such a jñāni can renounce all the karmas, because he does not require purification or knowledge, because he is already a gṛhasthā-jñāni. And Kṛṣṇa's contention is a gṛhasthā-jñāni, he does not require, he will have to continue to do, all the duties, religious duties. Many people ask, can I give up sandhya-vandhanam, srāddham, we are all Gīta -students; that is one of the excuses, therefore, it becomes an ideal thing for giving up. They ask. The rule is: maximum right the gṛhastha jñāni is he can reduce the karma and keep it in a skeleton form; if he has been doing 3 hour pūja or 4 hours pūja, he can reduce it and spend that time in Vēdānta; and not to spend in TV or MTV. He can spend more time in vēdānta if he feels he is ready, if he is a jñāni, therefore he remains in nidhidhyāsanam, but at least skeletally he will have to maintain his religious-duty.

And if a gṛhastha-jñāni wants to renounce religious duty, śāstra gives only one option he has to formally take sanyāsa and quit the home or some other alternative arrangement, but as long as he is a gr̥hastha, religious duty must be maintained. And for what purpose a gr̥hastha jñāni should continue this activity? Kṛṣṇa says: lōka-saṅgraham ēva api lōka-saṅgraham means teaching the society or guiding the society; so lōkasaṅgrah means social well-being; the well-being of the society, Śankarācārya writes in his commentary to take the world away from adhārmic way of living. Too much indulgent way of living; too much materialist way of living; people get caught up in materialistic cycle, therefore they have to be reminded; that something else is there; lōka-saṅgrahārtham karma karthavyam, Arjuna therefore you do your duty.

Then the next question is, if a jñāni also performs karma for lōka-saṅgraham, and ajñāni also performs karma for citta-śuddhi, the phalam is different; one is for the wellbeing of the world, another for the one's own citta-śuddhi; then if both of them are working in the world, what is the difference in their attitude; because externally I do not see any difference. Śankarācāryas also, especially the madhāthipathis also, do elaborate pūja, 2 or 3 hours, then what is the difference; what is the difference in the attitude, we know the answer, they do the pūja for lōkasaṅgraham, whereas the others do the pūja for their own wellbeing. How do you know, in the saṅkalpa we know. dānyam danaṁ, paśum, bahuputralābham lābham (we have to change from bahuputtra to ēka-putra) śatha samvatsaram dhīrgamāyu.

If this is the difference in phalam, what is the difference in the motive or way in which both of them look at the karma? And Kṛṣṇa gave the answer, the difference is an ajñāni does the action with attachment, whereas jñāni performs the action with detachment; Sakthāḥ and asakthāḥ; sakthāḥ means with attachment; asakthāḥ, means without attachment. As I said in the last class, one is doing action for happiness, another is doing action with happiness. There is only a change in preposition. When it is for, you are a saṁsāri, when it is with, you are a liberated person. When I am working for happiness, indirectly it means now I am not happy. Not satisfied; therefore there is a dissatisfaction lingering in the mind of ajñāni there is constant satisfaction in the mind of a jñāni; ātmanyēva'tmanā tuṣṭaḥ.

Now this itself, Kṛṣṇa is going to technically elaborate in the next slōkā. The simple difference jñāni has no attachment, ajñāni has attachment, is the simple difference; now he wants to present, and technically what is the difference between jñāni doing action and ajñāni doing action. In the later slōkās we will see.

Verse 3.26

न बुद्धिभेदं जनयेदज्ञानां कर्मसङ्गिनाम् ।
जोषयेत् सर्वकर्माणी विद्वान् युक्तः समाचरन् ॥३.२६॥

na buddhibhēdam janayēdajñānām karmasaṅginām |

विद्वान् vidvān A wise man न जनयेत् na janayēt should not बुद्धिभेदम् buddhibhēdam confusion in the intellect अज्ञानाम् ajñānam of the ignorant(people) कर्मसङ्गिनाम् karmasaṅginām who are attached to action समाचरन् samācaran Efficiently performing सर्वकर्माणि sarvakarmāṇi – all (his) duties, युक्तः yuktaḥ with discipline जोषयेत् jōṣayēt should inspire (them).

26. A wise should not create confusion in the intellect of the ignorant, who are attached to action. Efficiently performing all (his) duties, with discipline, he should inspire (them).

So here Kṛṣṇa gives an important advice to a jñāni; even though jñāni does not require this advice, he knows it; but still Kṛṣṇa clarifies in this ślōkā; this is an another important ślōkā which Śankarācārya often quotes.

Now when we study our scriptures we find one uniqueness in our scriptures. And that uniqueness is it is full of seeming-contradiction. That is why Hinduism is one of the most complex-religion. It is full of seeming-contradiction; I am very carefully adding the adjective, seeming-contradiction, means what, there is no contradiction. If I say that you are seemingly beautiful; means what, that is why I am saying that example, you are seemingly-intelligent; seeming-contraction means that there is no real contradiction but there is seeming-contradiction.

And why there are seeming-contraction in our scriptures; the reason is the scriptures do not address only one set of people; the scriptures are addressing people of different degrees of spiritual-evolution or spiritual-level. The scriptures are addressing not one level of student. But different levels of seekers; therefore advice can never be uniform; just as a doctor can never give uniform advice to all people. While for one the doctor will say eat well, while for another person, who is crossing 128 kgs, then the doctor will say, reduce at least a bit; take 2 chappathis in the night, doctor said; then this person asked after or before dinner. Then he has to say during dinner. So therefore the doctor cannot give uniform advice, because the patients are different; this is technically called adhikāri bhēdaḥ; adhikāri means the seeker; bhēdaḥ, means different level. So what is food for one person is a poison for another; therefore when the scriptures advice certain things, the scriptures glorify certain sādhanās for a certain group of people and the very same scriptures criticise those very same things in a different context. For example if you go to the karma kāṇḍa, the initial portion of the Vēda, you will find that karma is glorified very much. If you remember the Muṇḍakōpaniṣad, in the Upaniṣad itself, in the initial portion, karma was glorified;

तदेतत् सत्यं मन्त्रेषु कर्माणि कवयो यान्यपश्यंस्तानि त्रेतायां बहुधा संततानि तान्याचारथ नियतं सत्यकामा एष वः पन्थाः
सुकृतस्य लोके ॥ II.1 ॥

Tadētat satyaṃ mantrēṣu karmāṇi kavayō yānyapaśyaṃstāni trētāyāṃ bahudhā saṃtatāni tānyācāratha niyataṃ satyakāmā ēṣa vaḥ panthāḥ sukṛtasya lōkē ॥ II.1 ॥

In the first portion of the Upaniṣad; it says:

tāni karmāṇi ācāratha; perform rituals, perform pūja, do japa, thus it vehemently advices everyone to do karma; And the very same Upaniṣad after a few slōkās only

प्ल्वा ह्येते अदृढा यज्ञरूपा अष्टादशोक्तमवरं येषु कर्म । एतच्छ्रेयो येऽभिनन्दन्ति मूढा जरामृत्युं ते पुनरेवापि यान्ति ॥ II.7 ॥

ētacchrēyō yē:'bhinandanti mūḍhā jarāmṛtyuṃ tē punarēvāpi yānti || II.7 ||

Those people who take to karma are mūḍhāḥ; how is this; only 4 slōkās difference; it says tānyācāratha niyataṃ satyakāmā; and later the very same vēda says; in Taittiriya upaniṣad it says;

अग्निहोत्रं च स्वाध्यायप्रवचने च |

it glorifies karma; and in another place, it says, na karmaṇā na prajayā danēna, tyāgēnaikē amṛtatva mānāśuḥ.

The very vēda which prescribes, the very vēda which glorifies-grihasthāśrama, the very Veda says that wife cannot give mōkṣaḥ, the husband cannot give mōkṣaḥ; son cannot give mōkṣaḥ, money cannot give mōkṣaḥ; therefore quit. Therefore if you read these passages, you will think that the vēdic riṣīs were themselves confused.

Therefore how do you reconcile seeming contradiction? There is only one way you can reconcile; at one stage it is a blessing; the very same thing becomes an obstacle at a later stage. So if you take the example of the child in the womb, the first 9 months the child requires the atmosphere of the womb of the mother, the child can grow only in that atmosphere; and if there is a premature delivery; they have to create an artificial womb called incubator, the child has to be carefully protected. Therefore the womb is extremely important for a child for 10 months, but suppose the child feels very very nice and cosy inside the womb and feels that it does not have to do anything, everything is done by the mother, etc. Therefore feels comfortable and wants to remain permanently there; which mother wants to carry permanently? No. You will find very nature has created what? tyāgēnaikē, what tyāgē, womb naikē, mother need not request, the child need not request; the nature itself has created a situation, the child grows out of it; therefore the womb is good or bad; if you ask, what will you say, up to the ten month it is a blessing; after the 10 month it is an obstacle for its further growth.

Apply this principle to everything in life; everything is good for the initial stage of growth, you will have to enter, grow and then grow out of the set up. A fruit requires the skin for ripening. Without the skin, the fruit cannot ripen; when it is a raw fruit, raw fruit, I do not know the correct word. Bhagavān knows the skin is important, the Bhagavān has created the condition, that if you try to peel the skin in the banana, it would not come; because it is required for ripening, once it becomes ripe, you cannot say the skin is very important, because of that ripening happen, therefore I would eat with the skin; you cannot do that, unless you are a naturopath; for whom the skin is important; unless you are such a rare case, you will peel off the skin; it would not be nice; the fruit alone would be sweet, and you will see the condition, the skin will naturally come also; the more ripe the fruit is, the peeling is smooth;

त्रयंभकं यजामहे सुगन्धिं पुष्टि वर्धनम्
उर्वारुकमिव भन्दनात् मृत्योर् मुक्षीय मा मृतात्

trayambhakam yajamahē sugandhim puṣṭi vardhanam
urvārukamiva bhandanāt mṛtyōr muksīya mā mṛtāt

On Lord, I have entered into a set up and I should not get stuck in any set up; I should learn, I should grow, and I should grow out of that; that is why even wedding is considered only an intermediary womb stage; that is why we had four āśramas. Do not be afraid, I am not asking you to take sanyāsa; the very fact that they kept four āśramas, enter brahmacarya, grow and grow out of brahmacarya, enter gṛhasthā-āśrama, grow and grow out of gṛhasthā-āśrama, do not hold the saree of the wife permanently, or the dhoti of the husband as the case may be. Similarly, vānaprastha and sanyāsa. The idea is everything in life has validity of a particular stage; Kṛṣṇa says karmas also, an active life is also like a womb for the spiritual baby. Even though we are grown up physically, spiritually we are mustachioed baby; even though physically grown up, spiritually babies only and therefore the vēdās say enter the karma womb, do lot of action, take to lot of activities; serve the society, do pañca-mahā-yajñās and grow inwardly. And that is the glorification of karma; and how long it should do? Not permanently do not get stuck with karma;

कृति महोदधौ पतन कारणम्
फलमशाश्वतं गति निरोधकं ॥

[kṛti mahōdatau patana kāraṇam
phalamaśāśvatam gati nirōdhakaṁ ||](#)

Active life is such that you may get into the whirlpool of activity, it would take to more and more and more, it would be like the catching the tail of the tiger; you hold; what happens, you have caught hold; now it runs round to attack you; to escape you also have to run and run around.

Now the problem is the tiger never gets tired; but after some time, if you are tired. Now the problem is if you want to continue to run, you cannot; and if you drop the tail, svahāḥ, over. Every karma can become a tiger tail; therefore make use of karma, and you should know how to grow out and spend time for vēdānta śravaṇa manana nidhidhyāsanam. And therefore Kṛṣṇa warns: a jñāni must be very careful in giving advice to the society. A jñāni who gives discourses to the public, Kṛṣṇa tells more responsibility lies in a person who teaches the society, what is that, he should not ask everyone to drop karma. If those people are mature, then dropping karma is wonderful; because it will be beautifully replaced, vēdānta śravaṇa manana nidhidhyāsanam; but imagine a person is not ready for that; as we saw before, mithyācāraḥ;

इन्द्रियार्थान्विमूढात्मा मिथ्याचारः स उच्यते ॥ ३.६ ॥

[karmēndriyāṇi saṁyamya ya āstē manasā smaran |
indriyārthān vimūḍhātmā mithyācāraḥ sa ucyatē ||3.6||](#)

When an immature person drops karma, the mind has no engagement; neither family responsibilities. Now many of us do not think of many negative things; not because we are saints and all, but because we do not have time to think. Now imagine an immature person drops karma, he does not have family preoccupation, he is not settled his son, he is not settled his daughter, he is not settled his house, he need not take care of his parents, no other duties are there.

Therefore, lot of time, and being immature, he cannot spend the time in vēdānta; vēdānta requires a type of mind, neither karma, nor jñānam, he will become a mithyācāraḥ, he will spend his time, thinking of what, only sense pleasures. And therefore Kṛṣṇa warns; do not ask everyone to drop karma.

Be very careful when you suggest Vēdānta to people; you have to ask them to continue to do their pūja, continue their japa, continue their satsaṅga, they are all supports, religious supports for a person. And therefore here Kṛṣṇa says; karma-saṅginām buddhi-bhēdaṁ na janayēd; karma-saṅgi means those people, who are still interested in action and its results; those who are attached to worldly activities and why they are attached to worldly activities, because they are interested in worldly result; arta-kāma-pradhāna, karma-saṅgis means materialistic-oriented. Kṛṣṇa does not criticise them, they are not what you call wrong or sinners or anything, exactly like a child asking for balloon; just remember ask; when a child is asking for a balloons, you say that it is all worthless; I will give you 500 rupee note; it can buy any balloon; the child does not appreciate the 500 rupees note; what would it do, it would tear and eat it; the child at that stage requires balloon only, do not pull the balloon, only encourage, and if you have time, along with the child with the balloon; and hope, what, that the child will grow and ask for something higher. 25th day birthday, if a person asks for a balloon, that is a regrettable situation.

Similarly, we are all spiritual-babies, we are interested in money, we are interested in name and fame; we are spiritually in childhood state. Being in childhood stage is not a sin; we need not have any complex, Kṛṣṇa says encourage them. Somebody asked, our student only. Swamiji I want to achieve lot of things; get lot of money, is it wrong; I am a Gīta student; suppose I say, you should not, what will he do, he will drop, what, coming to the class. So therefore, when a person is seriously interested in name and fame, an intelligent person should not criticise him and condemn and create an additional guilt complex in him; already full of complexes; and then this is called spiritual-complex. So vēdās encourages do karma, earn money, enjoy legitimately, let it be dhārmic, enjoyment, Kṛṣṇa tells in the 7th chapter,

धर्माविरुद्धो भूतेषु कामोऽस्मि भरतर्षभ ॥७.११॥

dharmāviruddhō bhūteṣu kāmō'smi bharatarṣabha||7.11||

I am in the form of legitimate sense pleasures also; legitimate sense pleasures also is Lord's glory.

Therefore Kṛṣṇa says do not confuse those people, by encouraging vairāgyam, renunciation, detachment, etc. do not encourage; ask them to do karma, but introduce God along with karma. What you have to introduce is not renunciation and vėdānta; many people ask, all college students must be taught vėdānta; because we are all in the late seventies; and booked our tickets. So therefore, by our learning vėdānta, what is much of a benefit, so imagine you teaching: na karmaṇā na prajayā dhanēna, tyāgē naikē amrutatva mānaśuḥ to a college student; how will it be; so what you have to teach is: follow artha karma, pursue artha-kāma, entertainment and security pursue, but along with that add dharma, add values, and along with that add devotion; and follow all those things and having gone through all these things, at the appropriate time;

परीक्ष्य लोकान् कर्मचित्तन् ब्राह्मणो निर्वेदमायान्नास्त्यकृतः कृतेन ॥ Mund. II.12 ॥

parīkṣya lōkān karmacittan brāhmaṇō nirvėdamāyānnāstyakṛtaḥ kṛtēna |.. Mund. II.12 ॥

यदा ते मोहकलिलं बुद्धिर्व्यतितरिष्यति |
तदा गन्तासि निर्वेदं श्रोतव्यस्य श्रुतस्य च ||२-५२||

yadā tē mōhakalilarṇ buddhirvyatitariṣyati |
tadā gantāsi nirvėdaṃ śrōtavasya śrutasya ca ||2.52||

If it is studied appropriately, that is why a guru is necessary, if the scriptures are studied appropriately, there are no contradictions, and therefore Kṛṣṇa says, a spiritual teacher should not encourage dropping of karma, spiritual teacher should not criticise rituals; criticise pūjas; criticise temple visits; that should not be done; what should you do? Encourage.

If he wants to earn money, encourage; just put a word, 'you may also donate to some āśrama', as it would be useful, etc. those people who are attached to karma and phala and ajñānam, those who are still in the stage of self-ignorance, buddhi-bėdam na janayēt, do not create conflict by over emphasising renunciation. Let renunciation be their ideal; and renunciation is something which you do not force, but it happens.

Now are you attached to balloon; I hope you will say: No. Now what did you do for renunciation of balloon; not that you daily meditated that I should drop the balloon, drop the balloon, etc. saying that there should not be attachment, etc. and nor that if I show a balloon tomorrow, you would not say that I would not look at that; because I have renounced that; if I see I will get attachment. No; you may move with balloon, you may play with children also, but you are not hooked to that; neither rāga nor dvēṣa; that is called transcendence; that is called sublimation; that is called growing out. Dispassion should not be forced; dispassion should grow in the mind of a person, what is the difference between forced detachment and natural maturity? In forced detachment, the person will become melancholic. Castrol oil face, no smiling; he is missing something; and when he gṛhastha s enjoying, more miserable; they are going nicely to the cinema, picnics, hotels, etc. etc. he will feel; I am not able to do this, because I have been caught in this dress of sanyāsa.

So therefore, one has to grow out; until then, encourage religion; along with philosophy, religion also must be encouraged; therefore Kṛṣṇa says; jōṣayēt, jōṣayēt means a jñāni should , a religious-teacher, a spiritual-teacher should persuade; jōṣayēt; persuade, encourage, you do not give up your pūja, japa, some people may say; Swamiji, no question of giving up in my case, because, I have not started it at all; so therefore, so if you are doing, don't give up, if you are not doing, keep some amount of religious practice, at least Gāyathri do not give up.

One of the greatest mantras in the world, do not give up and if you are not initiated into traditional Gāyathri, we have a got two types of Gāyathri, I have told you earlier; one Gāyathri for initiated people, another Gāyathri for the non-initiated people, one of the best mantras; do not give up, japa should be there; pāraṇam should be there; pūja should be there; at least mānasa pūja should be there. Therefore jōṣayēt; a gṛhastha - jñāni should persuade all the people to do: what, sarva karmāni, to do all their duties; vidvān, is the subject, vidvān-jōṣayēt, gṛhasthā-jñāni. A gṛhasthā-jñāni should persuade all other ajñānis in the society to do karma, and how should he persuade; not merely verbally, mere verbal advice would have any impact, the best advice is action. As they say, action speaks louder than words. So you may hundred times speak truth; speak truth; speak truth, and you tell lie once, at least, in front of the children you should avoid, one lie in front of child, can nullify years of advice.

Therefore Kṛṣṇa says samācaran-jōṣayēt; a gṛhastha jñāni should persuade not by mere verbal advice. But himself doing; therefore Śankarācārya does not require any pūja; according to śāstra, a sanyāsi does not require any physical pūja; even if he wants to do pūja, it is enough if he does mānasa pūja; vighraha-pūja, is not at all required for a sanyāsi; if the Śankarācāryas in the maṭam, they are doing, it is only to set an example because visitors are there; therefore Kṛṣṇa says; Samācaran, means himself performing those acts, and that too how should he act, not out of duty, but yuktaḥ, with involvement, with commitment, whole heartedly, himself performing action wholeheartedly, the jñāni must persuade others also to act.

Verse 3.27

सर्वशः sarvaśaḥ Under all conditions, कर्माणि karmāṇi all actions क्रियमाणानि kriyamāṇāni are done गुणैः guṇaiḥ by the Guṇas प्रकृतेः prakṛtēḥ of prakṛti अहंकारविमूढात्मा ahaṅkāravimūḍhātmā one, whose mind is deluded by ahaṅkāra, मन्यते manyatē thinks इति अहं कर्ता iti ahaṁ kartā “I am the doer”.

27. Under all conditions, all actions are done by the guṇas of prakṛti. One, whose mind is deluded by Ahankāra, considers “I am the doer”.

Again these two slōkās are very important. These slōkās contain the essence of all the Upaniṣads; two of the most important slōkās of the third chapter, important slōkās of the entire Gīta itself. Here Kṛṣṇa talks about the technical difference, jñāni performing action and ajñāni performing action. What is the difference in their attitude, in the way they look at the action?

And first I will give you the gist of these two slōkās. What Kṛṣṇa says here is: Every individual has got two-I's. First person singular-I's. One is the lower-I called the Ego, which is kartā; bhōktā; which is limited; which travels from place to place, which is the lower-I, in Sānskrīt we can call Ahamkāraḥ; and there is another-I, which is the real-I, which is the higher-I, which we can call as Ātma, sākṣi, etc. What is the higher-I; I have discussed this before; higher-I which is called the Ātma is the nature of pure consciousness, caitanya svarūpam, which is known as Ātma, and Kṛṣṇa often uses the word puruṣaḥ. It is a technical word, puruṣaḥ, not man; puruṣaḥ means the Ātma, which is neither male or female; and what is the nature of this consciousness; I have discussed this also before, four points with regard to consciousness; do you remember;

1. consciousness is not a part, a property or product of the body;
2. consciousness is something an independent entity, which pervades and enlivens the body;
3. this consciousness which is different from the body, which pervades and enlivens the body, this consciousness is not limited by the boundaries of the body; the limitations of the body, dimensions of the body, it extends beyond the body;

4. this consciousness, which is an independent entity, and not limited by the dimensions of this body, does not die even when the body perishes; it is eternal all-pervading principle; we analysed this elaborately, for your reference, I will give you the reference also, we can go back and see those slōkās, from 2nd chapter 12 to 25, I very elaborately discussed this point.

Keep these four points in mind till Gīta is over; for my convenience. Do not ask whether you can forget them after the Gīta is over!

So this consciousness, and I gave an example also, which you should remember, is like the light pervading the hand; light is neither part, product or property of the body, it is an independent entity which pervades and illumines the hand, will not be bound by the boundaries, limited by the boundaries of the hand, it extends beyond and the light will survive, even when the hand is removed. That is why consciousness is often compared to light; it is called jyōtiḥ.

Now this consciousness is our real I. And the aim of all spiritual sādhana is to discover and own up this higher I, which is worth owning because once I own up this higher I, I am immortal asatō mā sat gamayā; tamasō mā jyōtir gamayā; mṛtyōr mā amṛtam gamayā; and jñāni is one who has owned up this higher Self with these words; Aham Brahmā asmi. Brahman means not bound by time and space. That is the meaning of Brahman.

Then what is the lower self? The lower self is mainly the mind. The mind which is a located-entity, located in this body now, this mind, which is enlivened by the higher-I, that is the consciousness, this live-mind is the lower-I. Consciousness is the higher-I, called Sākṣi, Ātma. The live-mind, why do I say, the live-mind, the mind by itself is dead matter, but this mind which is matter and inert by itself, is now live because of what, the consciousness pervading and the blessing, this live-mind is called ahamkāra; karta; where is it located? It is located in this body and it is this ahamkāra, which is operating through this body, experiencing sukham, duḥkham, pain, pleasure and all of them, which is a finite entity.

And it is this ahamkāra which drops this body, and takes up another body; punarapi jananam, punarapi maraṇam, etc. this is the lower I, the ahamkāra and every one of us is a mixture of Ātma and ahamkāra. Now, once we are born as a human being, we have got the biggest choice in life and what is the choice, should I continue to be the miserable ahamkāra, or should I claim my original glory?

We talk about various rights; human rights, childrens' rights, wife's rights; and now they are talking husband's right also; they are forming association, fight for the right, Vēdānta says we are talking about all rights, but we are not talking about one great Right, as a human being, what is that, Right to mōkṣaḥ; right to claim to our infinite glory, like a poor boy is told, that you are inheriting the father's wealth, but however, he could not locate the papers, though somebody said that he is the heir, owner of Rs.50 lakhs; or let us take as one crore in imagination; in Malayalam it is said that in Manōrājyam, why should there a half-rājyam; so let it be one crore; so one person imagine, I want to be the king of half of kingdom; after all you are imagining; I am imagining a half of kingdom, say a full big kingdom; as such you do not get it; OK he inherits one crore rupees; but he did not have the papers, and somebody comes and tells, why do you suffer with this begging bowl; you can be a millionaire. And this person says, imagine I do not want; I like beggary, if he says; we can only sympathise. We are all beggars now; all the time asking for some love, some security, some thing, knocking at the door of everyone; can't you speak two kind words to me, etc. someone phones from another state.

Swamiji I have got everything but my children does not spend a minute with me; she feels that there is emotional deprivation, I am suffering from; millionaire, big house, many cars, therefore with a begging bowl we are going from person to person, and Vēdānta is bringing the patram; at least in the case of children, once two children share, if there are four children 25 lakhs, that only will come; but here the beauty is know, each one of you can claim the infinite, even if two people share the infinite, it is not that you get half infinite and the other person gets half-infinite; infinite is that which will remain infinite, whatever the number of people share it. Pūrṇamadaḥ pūrṇamidaḥ pūrṇāt-pūrṇam-udacyatē. Vēdānta says why can't you claim the higher-I.

Instead of begging, start giving love, in fact many beggars are there; so instead of you begging, you start giving to all the beggars; why can't' you give love to everyone, even if they are miserable and they can't reciprocate; security, why can't you give moral strength, support.

So therefore, the higher I and lower I's are the two things. And Kṛṣṇa says, the Ajñāni remains in the lower I all the time; and therefore he is always dissatisfied because lower-I is permanently apūrṇam. And apūrṇam plus one lakh rupees is pūrṇam? apūrṇam + apūrṇam is only apūrṇam. This pūrṇam is not the pūrṇam of the kozhakatti that you eat!! I am not talking about kozhakatti pūrṇam; but vēdāntic pūrṇam; the infinite. Therefore, a finite plus Rs.1 lakh is equal to finite; finite plus Bill Gates is equal to finite.

So thus, a man who is claiming the lower I, he is suffering because of Ahaṁkāra and he miserably suffers saṁsāra; whereas the one who has discovered the higher I, for him the lower continues for transaction; but the thing is from the vision of the higher I, the lower I and its problems will become insignificant; Like a huge tree; when you are seeing from the ground, it is so huge; but the very same thing you look from a helicopter, it is insignificant; it is so small; similarly, a jñāni is one who is established in his higher I. the lower I is there; mind is there; body is there; it will go through its karma, he will accomplish lot of things; he will not be able to accomplish many of the things; but those ups and downs of the lower I will not disturb him because he has discovered something greatly wonderful.

So thus the 27th verse talks about an ignorant man working in the world, centered on ahaṁkāra, and the 28th verse talks about a wise man working in the world; but all the time centered on the Ātma. The wise man is not affected by the ups and downs which are like mosquito bite to an elephant. It would not even know. This is the difference between jñāni working in the world and the ajñāni working in the world. The details of which we will see in the next class.

ॐ

Lord Kṛṣṇa pointed out in the beginning of this third chapter, that an ajñāni, a self-ignorant person, should perform karma or action because action alone is the method of purifying the mind. Therefore the teaching is: karma is necessary for an ajñāni. And now from the 20th verse onwards, Kṛṣṇa is pointing out that a jñāni also should be performing karma; but the purpose of jñāni's action is totally different from that of the ajñāni. Jñāni performs karma not for the sake of purity or liberation; because he has already accomplished that. If jñāni should perform karma, it is meant for lōkasaṅgraham; so citta śuddhyartham, ajñānina karma karthavyam; lōkasaṅgraham, jñānina karma karthavyam; are you getting. Sānskrīt is like Tamil; For citta-śuddhiḥ, ajñāni should work; lōkha-uddāranārtham, jñāni should work; so the purpose may be different; but karma is necessary, on the part of both ajñāni and jñāni.

So the present topic that we are seeing is jñāninām karma. So naturally the next question is, if jñāni also performs karma for lōkasaṅgrah, if ajñāni also performs karma for citta śuddhiḥ, mental purity; then what will be the difference in the karma that they perform?

So the difference between jñāni's action and ajñāni's action is being discussed in these verses.

The first difference Kṛṣṇa talked about is the superficial difference which anybody can understand, which difference we have already seen; and what is the difference; ajñāni performs action for happiness; whereas jñāni performs action out of/with happiness. Jñāni performs action with happiness. So one performs for the sake of happiness, while the other perform with happiness. Instead of happiness, you can replace with the security or fulfilment, any word. Ajñāni works for fulfilment, jñāni works with fulfilment. ajñāni works for security; jñāni works with security; In short, in the case of ajñāni, whatever he is seeking, all of them jñāni has already accomplished. And therefore in the case of ajñāni every action is a struggle; there is an anxiety; there is a tension, I should succeed, somehow or the other; somehow is mixed with by hook or crook; so many things can be added there; so therefore just as we have in the sports field, they do not mind even taking drugs, somehow or the other to win the gold medal; otherwise they are miserable; in the case of jñāni, actions are not a struggle at all; every action is a sport, one is burden; whereas other is leela; this is the difference at the superficial level, which anybody can understand. Just by looking at the face; you can know; in the one, the tension is writ large; on the other there is total relaxation.

Having talked about that difference, and now Kṛṣṇa is talking about the difference between jñāni and ajñāni or the jñāni's action and the ajñāni's action from technical angle; from vādāntic angle; and what is he going to say; I will give you the gist of these two verses; these two verses are important verses which contain the essence of the vādānta.

In this Kṛṣṇa wants to point that everybody has got a lower self, and the higher-self called the ātma. Everybody is a mixture of ahaṁkāra and ātma. And what is the definition of ahaṁkāra? Ahaṁkāra is the body-mind-complex which is blessed by the ātma and because of which it has become sentient and alive. This we should remember, the word ahaṁkāra is used in this context in a philosophical sense.

In the scriptures the word ahaṁkāra is used in two different context; one is the context of ethics and morality; in the dharma-śāstra context, we use the word ahaṁkāra, there the word ahaṁkāra which is pride which is opposed to humility; as opposed to vinayaḥ. In that place, ahaṁkāra means that is arrogance or pride or vanity; and what is the opposite of ahaṁkāra? Humility or vinayaḥ. In the context of dharma śāstra, ahaṁkāra is pride; but in the context of vādānta, ahaṁkāra does not mean pride, vanity, arrogance or superiority complex but totally something else.

Ahaṁkāra means the body-mind-complex is called ahaṁkāra; the body-mind-complex is called ahaṁkāra; and that too what type of body-mind-complex, naturally, body mind complex is inert in nature according to vēdānta-śāstra, because body is made up of matter, pañca bhūtani, mind is also made up of matter, pañca-sūkṣma-bhūtani, the only difference is body is made of gross matter, mind is made up of subtle matter and therefore the body-mind-complex, is inert, material according to Vēdānta.

And if this material is now acting sentient or alive, it is not because its natural sentiency, but it is because of borrowed sentiency. Like what; we know that the fan cannot go by itself; the fan does not have the capacity to go around by itself; because I see that it does not go around, that means it does not naturally go around; and this fan is going around, that means the fan which does not naturally go around, is now going around. It means what? It is blessed by some other principle. I do not see the principle, it is not visible; both the fans are looking the same; but this is running, and the other is not; from that I infer that this is blessed by something else; and what is that something? Electricity.

If this is understood, Vēdānta says, the inert body-mind-complex, is now alive and sentient unlike the table, the table will not get angry whatever it is done to it; so there is a difference between this matter and that matter, which is caused by an invisible principle and that is called ātma tatvam; or chaitanya tatvam. Therefore this body-mind-complex is blessed by ātma, this blessed body-mind-complex is a live-entity; in Sānskrīt it is called Sa bhāsa; manō or dēha manaḥ; sa abhāsa means that which has got borrowed consciousness; sabhāsam, means borrowed consciousness or blessed by ātma, what is blessed, the body-mind-complex, this live body-mind-complex is called ahaṁkāra in vēdānta.

And in addition to this ahaṁkāra, that is the body-mind-complex, there is another principle; what is that? The ātma, and what is the ātma? The blessing-principle, body-mind-complex is what? Blessed-principle, ātma is what? The blessing-principle, the consciousness principle; thus every individual is a mixture of the blessed-body-mind-complex as well as the blessing-ātma; the blessed-body-mind-complex is called ahaṁkāra or the ego. And this ego is our lower I, and ātma is our higher I. Ego is the lower self, ātma is the higher self; Ego is our lower nature; ātma is our higher-nature; Ego is our incidental nature, Ātma is our intrinsic nature.

Now this Ego and Ātma, ahaṁkāra and ātma have got several differences; this ahaṁkāra and ātma have got several differences; some of which we have already seen before, I will remind you.

The first-basic-difference is that ahaṁkāra is a limited entity, because body-mind-complex, blessed-body-mind-complex, ahaṁkāra is finite, whereas, ātma the consciousness-principle is infinite, infinite means, it is all pervading; So ahaṁkāraḥ-alpaḥ, ātma-ananthaḥ;

The second-difference is ahaṁkāra is anithyaḥ, ahaṁkāra is subject to arrival and departure, that is why in sleep we do not have ahaṁkāra. Is anyone saying I, I, in sleep. the finite I, the located I, the individualized I, Is it available in sleep? It is available now alone; which is appearing with an individualized I, bio-data I. If application form is given; it is date of birth, (date of death they do not put, not because it is not there, but the date is not known now). Therefore, Nationality, parentage, caste, creed, sex, they will ask. And some of the bio-data are physical, some of the bio-data are intellectual; you say M.A. phd. CAIIB, M.Sc. in fact all the alphabets in the language, we put; intellectual bio-data; both of them belong to what; ahaṁkāra, the individualized-I, that obtains in the jāgrat avastha, the moment you go to sleep, the ahaṁkāra is resolved.

So therefore, ahaṁkāra is anithyaḥ, ātma nithyaḥ; and ahaṁkāra is savikāraḥ, ahaṁkāra is subject to all types of modifications. Now I am happy-I, now I am depressed-I, now I am miserable-I, now I am old-I, young-I, sick-I, healthy-I, fair-I, dark-I, bald-I, haired-I; white haired-I, brown haired-I, all belongs to what? ahaṁkāraḥ.

So savikāraḥ, ātma-nirvikāraḥ; and ahaṁkāra is kartā and bhōktā; it performs all the actions and it reaps the results of all the actions; so ahaṁkāra is kartā, bhōktā, ātma is akartā and abhōktā; Where did you see all these. 2nd chapter, verse No.12 to 25. If you remember, wonderful, otherwise go back and read those portions.

Then last one more main difference, Ahaṁkāra is ever a saṁsāri; because it keeps on doing the action, which will produce either puṇyam or pāpam, which will produce sukham or duḥkham; therefore ahaṁkāra is ever a saṁsāri and ātma is never a saṁsāri. Every individual is a mixture of this ātma and ahaṁkāra; nobody is pure ahaṁkāra because there cannot be a pure ahaṁkāra without ātma.

So everybody is a mixture of ahaṁkāra and ātma, this ahaṁkāra we call as Ego or the lower self, ātma is the higher self. Now the śāstra says; you can claim any one of these two as your true self; it is your choice. You can claim any one of the two as your real self. It is your choice. And suppose you decide to own up ahaṁkāra, as your real I, which we have done unfortunately, because we always think of ourselves as what? The finite ahaṁkāra -I. Vēdānta says you are free to claim ahaṁkāra as yourselves; but once you are ahaṁkāra, be prepared for saṁsāra. If you marry a devil, you have to climb the drumstick-tree; you are free to claim ahaṁkāra as yourself; the other-side of ahaṁkāra is saṁsāra. It is like two sides of the same coin; voting for ahaṁkāra is voting for saṁsāra. Because ahaṁkāra will have prārabdhaḥ karma; sañcita karma; and sañcita karma; and even if you exhaust the prārabdhaḥ karma, you are bound to accumulate āgāmi karma; even if you do not accumulate any āgāmi karma, you have got the inexhaustible sañcita karma.

Therefore ahaṁkāra will have to go through ups and downs; there is no such thing called freedom for ahaṁkāra; mōkṣaḥ for ahaṁkāra it is not possible; then what can you do; there is only another alternative; like that riddle that was given to Birbal; in Akbar's court, so a line was drawn and he was told they were given this riddle, you have to shorten the line without rubbing it off; or breaking the board. You have to shorten the line; people were wondering how can I do that. He said it is simple, draw another bigger line in front of that line, even though I have not made any change in this line, in front of that line, this line will become insignificant.

Like the ladies do, the secret; whenever the salt is more, you cannot remove the salt; but what can you do; add hot water, do, therefore, it is as good as reduced without reduction. This is the vēdāntic method; ahaṁkāra can never get away from saṁsāra; ahaṁkāra means, birth will be there; growth will be there; old age will be there, disease will be there, death will of course be there; not only my death; I have to face the death of people around also, association and dissociation, etc. and even avatharas cannot escape, what to talk of miserable human beings;

Therefore what is the way to solve the problem; draw another bigger line; and what is that bigger line; discovery of the higher self, which is nithya-śuddha-muktha-svabhāva; which is ānanda-svarūpa, which is infinite, which is all-pervading and when I discover the higher self, not that the lower self is free from problems, but those problems will become what? Insignificant.

Sometimes you read the stories of the escape of some people from certain communist countries and dictatorship countries and they want to escape. The communist people are terrible. And he would have walked without food for days together; first of all; money would not be there; he cannot go to the hotel, as police is there; body torture, body is emancipated; and he reaches the neighboring country. North Korea to South Korea; now even though his body is going through terrible suffering; having reached the border of the other country, he celebrates.

Now what happens to the other suffering? Is it gone; the sufferings are not gone, when he thinks of the freedom that he has attained, in front of that benefit, all the sufferings, the pain and the legs broken; read wonderful stories, they are all real stories, which happen even now, you can read in Readers'-digest; experiences of people, legs gone, we cannot imagine even one tenth of that, one mosquito bite we cannot tolerate; and this is our condition, and all those pains are not gone, those pains become insignificant, in front of the freedom that he has discovered.

In the same way, jñāni has discovered a higher ānanda, in front of which the physical suffering, the worldly separation, the loss in business or anything and all these things will become insignificant. Whereas in the case of ajñāni, since the higher self is not there, every suffering becomes too magnified like the undiluted rasam, which is full of salt, just as he cannot taste that, the ego cannot withstand the suffering.

And this is difference Kṛṣṇa wants to talk about in the 27th verse Kṛṣṇa talks about ajñāni who is caught in ahaṁkāra. So Kṛṣṇa gives him a special title; this is the season you know,... Sangeetha-śikāmaṇi, etc. ajñāni-śikāmaṇi Kṛṣṇa gives the title, ahaṁkāra vimūdhātma is the title given to all the saṁsāri, they are so much absorbed in ahaṁkāra; they have not discovered their own higher self and therefore every problem of ahaṁkāra is too magnified.

For everything you would like to run away; get out of the whole thing or commit suicide he would say. Therefore, ajñāni who is ahaṁkāra-vimūdhaḥ means deluded lost in the lower-I, is the topic of the 27th verse, and in the 28th verse, Kṛṣṇa talks about jñāni for whom ahaṁkāra and its problems are not absent; but they are insignificant. This is the difference between ajñāni and jñāni. Now in this verse, there are certain technical words, which we have to clearly define.

Now the first word is prakṛtiḥ. Every word has got a specific meaning in this context, and each word has got different meaning in different context; the word prakṛtiḥ is one such word, which has got different meanings in different context. And in this context, the word prakṛtiḥ means the basic matter-principle; otherwise called māya; So in this slōkā, prakṛtiḥ means the basic matter, which you may call the subtlest form of energy; which is called here prakṛtiḥ; another word we use in the śāstra is māya; so prakṛti is equal to māya is equal to basic matter; this is first technical word.

Then the next word we have to note is guṇāḥ; the word guṇāḥ also has got several meanings in difference contexts. In this context, the word guṇāḥ means a product. kāryam; vikāraḥ; so prakṛtiḥ means matter; guṇāḥ means product; joining these two, prakṛti guṇāḥ means product of matter, product of matter; and what is that? Any inert material in the creation, is product of matter; therefore we can call each one of them prakṛti-guṇāḥ; the clock is prakṛti guṇāḥ; book is prakṛti-guṇāḥ, anything that you see around, they are all prakṛti-guṇāḥ, material, in simple English, material is, that which is born out of matter, is material. Matter kāryam, material.

And even though the prakṛti-guṇāḥ means any inert material in the creation in this context which material Kṛṣṇa keeps in mind, so does he keep this clock in mind, this amplifier in mind, what is he keeping in mind.

In this context, Kṛṣṇa keeps the body mind complex in his mind; the body-mind-complex is the inert material and therefore it is product of prakṛti, product it is. And we have seen in Tatva Bōdha, I do not know whether you remember, long long before, once upon the time; from the māya alone, five-subtle-elements were born; and thereafter five gross elements were born and from the five-subtle-elements, the mind and other organs are created, from the gross elements, body is created; and we saw the details also; from the individual satva-guṇa; the jñānēndrias were created; from the total satva-guṇa-mind is created; all these topics, if you remember, it will be good; if you do not remember, does not matter, you remember this much, the body-mind-complex is product of prakṛti, therefore inert matter.

And even though the body-mind-complex is inert by itself, now both of them are sentient; both of them are alive, because of what; because of consciousness borrowed from ātma. Just as the fan is now capable of moving because of the energy, electrical energy is converted into mechanical energy; is borrowed from electricity. And this prakṛti-guṇāḥ, that is the body-mind-complex alone is called ahamkāraḥ. Therefore the final meaning of prakṛti-guṇa is ahamkāra, i.e. the body mind complex, with borrowed consciousness.

Now look at the first line: Kṛṣṇa says: karmāṇi prakṛtēḥ-guṇaiḥ kriyamāṇāni; all the actions are performed by prakṛti-guṇas alone. All actions are performed by prakṛti-guṇas alone; prakṛti-guṇas, means the body mind complex alone, what is the other name for body-mind-complex; ahamkāra. All the actions are done by prakṛti-guṇas alone, is equal to body-mind-complex alone, is equal to all the actions are done by ahamkāra alone. And Kṛṣṇa says sarvaśaḥ; sarvaśaḥ means, under all conditions ahamkāra alone can act. And what is the corollary of it; ahamkāra alone can act means, ātma does not do any action; consciousness does not do any action. Just as the light is there pervading this hall and blessing all the activities here, devotees are coming, the light illumines that; and some devotees look around and return; the light illumines that; some devotees chose to sit; and the light illumines that; and some devotees pull the book and see; the light illumines that; and some of them want to write notes, the light illumines that; and at the right time, the pen does not write, the light illumines that. light illumines all the activities but itself does not enter the temple, does not go out, does not stand, does not sit; does not take the pen, does not write, does not do any action.

And can you say that therefore light is not necessary, as it is not doing any action; and switch off the light; then no work will happen. It does not perform any action; but without it no action can be performed; similarly, without ātma, ahaṁkāra cannot perform any action at the same time, ātma itself does not do any action; therefore Kṛṣṇa says; sarvaśaḥ, ahaṁkāra alone does all action; Ok.

So what? Kṛṣṇa says in the 2nd line, ahaṁkāra vimūḍhātmā; all the ignorant-people are deluded by this ahaṁkāra; i.e. kartā-bhōktā-ahaṁkāra. All the ignorant-people are deluded by this ahaṁkāra; and what do you mean by that; the idea is this: being deluded by ahaṁkāra means, being lost in ahaṁkāra, being carried away by ahaṁkāra. To what extent; to such an extent that they do not have time to think of what the higher real nature, claiming which I can enjoy freedom.

It is like a beggar; he is so busy begging; and somebody comes and tells, you have got your own land in the slum area and under that land, you have got a huge, what you call, treasure, if you can claim that treasure, you need not beg hereafter, and this person says, I am so busy begging, that I have no time to spend for claiming my treasure. Pātram is ready. Vēdā is coming and telling; Claim your birthright; Tilak said: Freedom is my birthright; I will have it. That is politically; in vēdānta we say, spiritual freedom is your birthright; you claim it.

When Vēdānta is saying, uttiṣṭataḥ jāgrataḥ prāyapavarān nibōdhataḥ; everybody is busy with his ahaṁkāra and running here and there; and it is only to suit them, I have to adjust the classes; one class in the morning, one class at 11 o'clock, one class on Sunday, still no one is interested; somehow try to come I say, but no; even the cassettes and tapes are there, buy it and listen; but no, No time. For that they ask. Is there a library which brings the cassettes to home and takes it? Can I keep it for 3 months, whatever you do, they want excuses. We have only for pray for those people. Therefore, ahaṁkāra makes you get lost in karma; and therefore that person is called ahaṁkāravimūḍhātmā, does not allow him to ask the question, am I this miserable ahaṁkāra, or am I something more than this.

kastvaṁ kō:'haṁ kuta āyātaḥ, kā me janani kō mē tātaḥ |

Basic questions, we have no time. It is like watching a movie; initially I see the screen which is the truth; and as even the movie starts, I get absorbed in the characters of the movie, who are nothing but mithya, not even real, they are nothing but lights and shadows, I get carried away by the plot, that I lose sight of what? The screen and then when there is some tragedy, or there is some horror movie, I scream; screen to scream. So therefore Kṛṣṇa says ahaṅkāra-vimūḍhātmā, caught in the lower self, kartā aham iti manyatē; this ajñāni claims that I am the karta-ahamkāra, I am the bhōktā-ahamkāra, instead of claiming Aham Brahma Asmi.

आर्द्रं ज्वलति ज्योतिरहमस्मि । ज्योतिर्ज्वलति ब्रह्माहमस्मि । योऽहस्मि ब्रह्माहमस्मि । अहमस्मि ब्रह्माहमस्मि । अहमेवाहं मां जुहोमि स्वाहा ॥

ārdrāṁ jvalati jyōtirahamasmi | jyōtirjvalati brahmāhamasmi | yō:'hasmi brahmāhamasmi | ahamasmi brahmāhamasmi| ahamēvāhaṁ mām juhōmi svāhā ||

All beautiful mantras which tell you to claim what you are; but this vimūḍhātma, means super idiot; śāstra uses both of them, like that person, two people they wanted to put a nail in the wall; and one person put the nail upside down and the sharp point was this side and suddenly he saw that the head is on the other side, and the sharp portion is facing him; and then he asked who has manufactured this nail; they do not know how to manufacture properly; this head should be this side; the sharp portion should be the other side; then the assistant said that: you do not know; they have manufactured it properly only; you do not know how to use the nail; this nail should be used for the opposite wall, he said. So if one is mūḍhaḥ; another is vimūḍhāḥ; he is correcting and doing mistake; Kṛṣṇa says, you are not ordinary (मूढात्माḥ muttal; you are double-filtered (मूढात्माḥ; ahaṅkāra-vimūḍhātmā, kartā āhaṁ ithi manyatē. This is the ajñāni's action.

Then what about jñāni?

Verse 3.28

तत्त्ववित्तु महाबाहो गुणकर्मविभागयोः ।
गुणा गुणेषु वर्तन्ते इति मत्वा न सज्जते ॥३.२८॥

[tattvavit tu mahābāhō guṇakarmavibhāgayōḥ|
guṇa guṇēṣu vartanta iti matvā na sajjatē||3.28||](#)

महाबाहो mahābāhō – Oh Arjuna! तु tu But, तत्त्ववित् tattvavit the knower of the truth गुणकर्मविभागयोः guṇa-karma-vibhāgayōḥ of Guṇas and their functions न सज्जते na sajjatē remains detached मत्वा matvā with the understanding इति iti that गुणाः guṇāḥ Guṇas (sense organs)वर्तन्ते vartantē function गुणेषु guṇēṣu among Guṇas (sense-objects).

28. Oh Arjuna! But, the knower of the truth of Guṇas and their functions remains detached with the understanding that Guṇas (sense organs) function among Guṇas (sense-objects).

So ajñāni has been talked about; he is caught up in his lower self; he is ignorant of his higher self; and he is not only ignorant; and he does not want to claim also. He will not know himself, and even if advised, he will not know. Neither he claims by himself; nor does he want to claim when somebody wants to help him; that is ajñāni's lot.

Then what about jñāni? Jñāni also has got ahaṁkāra; let it be very clear; jñāni also has got ahaṁkāra; because what is the definition of ahaṁkāra? Body-mind-complex, which is live blessed by the ātma; jñāni has got a body or not? so suppose all the jñānis do not have bodies; they cannot teach; they cannot do upadēśa; and if they do upadēśa; aśiriri like it will come, you do not know where he is sitting; and all those problems will come; and jñāni's happily have bodies; determined by their prārabdhaḥ; and what about mind; another confusion; jñāni does not have mind; it is a very big confusion in vēdānta; because they use the expression manō nāśaḥ; which has created this problem, you should know clearly, jñāni has a beautiful mind, which Kṛṣṇa himself will describe later:

निर्ममो निरहङ्कारः समदुःखसुखः क्षमी || १२ - १३ ||

advēṣṭā sarvabhūtānaṁ maitraḥ karuṇa ēva ca |
nirmamō nirahaṅkāraḥ samaduḥkhasukhaḥ kṣamī ||12.13||

Jñāni is compassionate, when you say, compassion belongs to what? It is the mental attribute; so jñāni enjoys the mind, then why do you say manō nāśaḥ; it is a figurative expression, whatever is healthy, you do not feel the burden; it is a beautiful concept; when do you feel your body; now the fingers are there in your hand; are you remembering that when you are listening to it. Suppose you have a wound in the finger. Then what will happen? Then you will be doing finger dhyānam. it will be calling your attention; therefore when your body is fit, you do not feel the body; because it is so light; somebody said; when the shoe fits to your leg; you do not feel the presence of the shoe; anything; similarly your dress also, if it is too tight somewhere then you will be fidgety; when the dress fits, you do not feel the dress; when the shoe fits, you do not feel the shoe. When the body is fit; you do not feel the body; when the mind is healthy, a sane mind which does not have rāgaḥ-dvēśaḥ kāma-krōdhaḥ problems are not there, that mind is so light, that's why somebody said

भारोऽविवेकिनः शास्त्रं भारो ज्ञानं च रागिणः।
अशान्तस्य मनो भारः भारोऽनात्मविदो वपुः॥

bhārō:'vivēkinaḥ śāstram bhārō jñānam ca rāgiṇaḥ|
aśāntasya manō bhāraḥ bhārō:'nātmaavidō vapuḥ||

The one who does not understand the scriptures, the scripture is a bhāram; even school, suppose you get byheart, without understanding anything, carefully you have to forget, that is a bhāram; if you see, the head is heavy; because now it is crumbling; but what you have understood, it is no more a bhāram; bhāraḥ avivēkinaḥ śāstram; and aśāntasya manō bhāraḥ; aśāntasya when there is disturbance, mind is a burden; when the mind is peaceful, it is not a burden, jñāni is free from mind means; for jñāni mind is not a bhāraḥ. That is called manō nāśaḥ;

That is an aside topic. What I want to emphasize here is jñāni also has got body-mind-complex, which means jñāni has got ahaṁkāraḥ; but what happens to the jñāni is since he has discovered the higher self, the ātma, the discovery of ātma makes the ahaṁkāra lighter, it is no more toxic-ahaṁkāra; it is no more poisonous ahaṁkāra; it is no more burdensome-ahaṁkāra; and in the śāstra, they give the example, dugda bījavat; like the roasted seed; when the seed is roasted, it is not destroyed, it is very much there; and the roasted seed when you use, it is tasty also; in the bathing oil, they put the rice also, so when we were children, it was nice to eat that, at the time of oil bath; it is a painful affair. For that we go to the oil bath; that roasted rice grain is very very tasty; you have not tried, try it; long time since I got oil bath; therefore roasted seed is tasty, it can do everything; except one thing, what is that; germinate;

Similarly, jñāni's-ahaṁkāra will do everything; it will eat; it will talk, it will travel, it is a functional ahaṁkāra, but it has lost its capacity to germinate into saṁsāra, it is non-binding ahaṁkāra, it has become alankāra. ahaṁkāra has become alankāra; that is indicated by the Lord Śiva having the snake in his neck as a bhūṣanam. The snake which is a frightening thing, it is an alankāra for the Lord. Like that ahaṁkāra is; the snake signifies it; the frightening snake can become an ornament.

Similarly the frightening ahaṁkāra can become an alankāra for a jñāni. And that is said here; look at the slōka. he mahābāhō tattvavittu, so Hey Arjuna, oh powerful Arjuna, tattvavittu, jñāni knows the reality; a jñāni knows the reality; so tatvam I told you it can be split into two ways; here the tatvam should be split not as two words, but tatvam as one word and one suffix; tat plus tvam suffix, which means reality; tattvavit means the one who knows the reality; reality of what, guṇa-karma-vibhāgayōḥ.

Here also we should be careful; the word guṇa is the same as the prakṛti-guṇa talked about in the previous verse; here the word guṇa means prakṛti-guṇa which we talked about in the previous verse; (in the previous verse whether we talked about prakṛti guṇa, do not ask, if it is next week, it would be acceptable, not this week) prakṛti-guṇa means the product of basic matter; body, mind, complex, ahaṁkāra. Here guṇa means what?

The ahaṁkāra, which is otherwise called kartā and karma. Ahaṁkāra and its karma he clearly knows.

That means what, all the karmas, meaning actions belong to ahaṁkāra alone, no karma belongs to ātma. This knowledge is very clear; just remember the example, when I move the hand, the motion belongs to the hand alone and the light does not and cannot move; It is there pervading all over, but it is nityaḥ sarvagataḥ sthāṇuracalō'yaṁ sanātanaḥ. Similarly even when we talk about rebirth, it is the ahaṁkāra which travels from one place to another, but the ātma can never have rebirth; because where is ātma, ātma is all-pervading.

Therefore jñāni is one who has understood that all karmas belong to ahaṁkāra alone, not ātma; this division, this distinction he has known. And therefore he knows ahaṁkāra cannot give up action, because as long as ahaṁkāra is there; being a kartā, it will have to perform one action or the other; you can only give up one set of actions; only to replace by another set of actions; so, if a person gives up gṛhastha-āśrama and takes up sanyāsa-āśrama, can he give up the action; eating; cannot give up, only thing is he will change the words; no more house; then he will say āśram; previous he will say I have got a cup or glass; now he will say kamandalu; previously he will say lunch, dinner; now he will say, bhikṣa. You can change the words; but you cannot give up action. Therefore, at the ahaṁkāra level, he knows that the actions will have to continue. Therefore without resistance he allows the ahaṁkāra to work in the world. Depending upon what? The type of āśrama. If you are a sanyāsi, do the activities which is fitting for that; if you are gṛhastha, better do gṛhastha's duty, 24 hours you cannot sit and do the japa, then you will get thrashed; gṛhastha will have to earn; he has to do what he has to; this is the difference between the jñāni and the ajñāni; the details of which we will see in the next class.

Hari Om

047 CHAPTER 03, VERSES 28-30

ॐ

In these verses beginning from the 21st verse onwards, Kṛṣṇa is talking about the duties of a jñāni, who continues to be a gṛhastha or who continues to be in the society. And since jñāni serves as a model for the society, he must be extremely careful with regard to his lifestyle. And Kṛṣṇa says that therefore many things jñāni will have to do, even though he does not require those activities for his own benefit; mainly karma, a jñāni does not require, | naiva tasya kṛtēnārthō nākṛtēnēḥ kaścana || 3.18 || By karma also, jñāni does not benefit anything; and by dropping the karma jñāni does not lose anything; even though for him karma is not required; Kṛṣṇa says: he has to do to educate the society.

And while a jñāni performs actions to guide the people, what will be the difference between jñāni's action and ajñāni's action? Kṛṣṇa talked about the difference from a superficial level first; and the difference is ajñāni acts for happiness; jñāni acts with happiness. This is the difference which any lay person can understand.

And now Kṛṣṇa talks about the difference at the philosophical or technical level; and what is that? Jñāni has discovered the higher self-called ātma; and from the level of the ātma, he is able to see ahaṁkāra as inferior and insignificant and incidental-I. He does not give ahaṁkāra, more importance than it deserves. In the case of ajñāni, ahaṁkāra is given over importance, because ajñāni takes ahaṁkāra to be himself; therefore ahaṁkāra's biography is my biography; ahaṁkāra's ups and downs are my ups and downs, and therefore I am very very serious about the ahaṁkāra's life. But in the case of the jñāni, he has recognised his higher self from whose standpoint ahaṁkāra is not unimportant; he does not neglect the ahaṁkāra, he gives it that much importance as it deserves. Putting ahaṁkāra to play. And what is that ahaṁkāra? We saw in the last class; body mind complex, blessed by the ātma, live body-mind-complex is called ahaṁkāra; and Kṛṣṇa uses a technical word for ahaṁkāra and that is prakṛti-guṇāḥ;

In these three verses; the word prakṛti-guṇāḥ is the technical word to convey the meaning of live body mind complex and live body-mind-complex is called ahaṁkāra in philosophical context and therefore in the 27th verse, Kṛṣṇa talked about the ignorant person; ignorant person identifies with his lower self; identifies with his ahaṁkāra, and he is enamored prakṛtēr-guṇa-sammūḍhāḥ, ahaṁkāra-vimūḍhātmā. Enamored by this Ahaṁkāra, he suffers; he takes himself to be a kartā, and consequently he becomes a bhōkhtā and he is a doer and he is an enjoyer. And a bhōkhtā, means the one who consumes, eats the karma-phalam is the bhōkhtā and a bhōkhtā an eater always enters a mess; gets into a mess; double meaning.

And having talked about an ajñāni who is lost in the ahaṁkāra, and now in this verse, Kṛṣṇa talks about the jñāni who sees the ahaṁkāra and gives it its-importance, but not over-importance. And that is the slōka we are seeing; hey mahābāhō guṇakarmavibhāgayōḥ tattvavit; so jñāni is one, who knows the truth about the guṇa and karma; guṇa means prakṛti-guṇa; prakṛti-guṇa means ahaṁkāra; therefore guṇa karma means ahaṁkāra and its actions. Jñāni knows the truth of ahaṁkāra and its action; and what is the truth?

Ahaṁkāra can never escape from action; whether we like or not; ahaṁkāra will have to be eternally active. If ahaṁkāra tries to rest as they say, if you rest, you will rust; even for maintaining physical health, ahaṁkāra has to be active. That is what, nowadays they are saying that the longevity has increased; previously 50 years was average life. Now 60, 70 people are healthy; because of medical wonders; but if we are going to live longer; we should know how to gracefully grow old; and how to maintain our physical and mental health; and one of the instructions they give is to be active-physically and also intellectually. And therefore, ahaṁkāra has to be a kartā. And as long as ahaṁkāra is a kartā, it has to be a bhōktā also; therefore, at ahaṁkāra-level, life is a series of action and a series of reaping the results-of-action; and many karma-phalaṁs would be wonderful; and many karma-phalaṁs are going to be frightening; or it is going to be very very painful; and jñāni accepts that nature of ahaṁkāra and allows ahaṁkāra to have its own life.

And while he allows the ahaṁkāra to go through its life; governed by prārabdha, what does he remember? Kṛṣṇa here beautifully says: guṇāḥ guṇēṣu vartantē; ahaṁkāra is also prakṛti guṇāḥ; ahaṁkāra is prakṛti guṇāḥ; prakṛti is basic matter; guṇāḥ means product; prakṛti guṇāḥ; product of basic matter. What is that? Body mind complex. Last class what I told, you should remember; prakṛti-guṇa is equal to body-mind-complex = ahaṁkāra; therefore the first guṇa refers to body-mind-complex, which is material in nature; and this guṇāḥ guṇēṣu vartantē. What about the world; world is also prakṛti-guṇāḥ; means product of matter; so body-mind-complex is product of matter, the world is product of matter, ahaṁkāra is product of matter. World is also product of matter; ahaṁkāra has got three guṇās, being material in nature; the world also has got three guṇās; this ahaṁkāra and world will eternally interact. You cannot stop the interaction between ahaṁkāra and the world; and this interaction is going to necessarily produce pleasure and pain. Some interaction will be welcome and many interactions will not be so welcome.

But just because it is not welcome; I cannot try to escape from the world; if you avoid the people in the city and go to Rishikesh; there also there are more people. Once upon a time, Rishikesh was known as a quiet place.

Now go there; the so-called Burmah bazar or Māyā-bazar; that is there in Rishikesh also; and we went to Uttarakāśi for a camp; and Uttarakāśi is 4000 ft. height in the interior of Himalayas, we were expecting to see all kinds of ṛṣṭis and all those things; we see the photo, Amitabh Bachhan starring. That is welcoming us in Uttarakāśī. On inquiry we come to know that there is the Tehri dam; the controversial dam; you know, they are building, therefore so many engineers, workers all the people are there, therefore a small market is there; whether the market is there or not; important the cinema theatre is there. You go to Badrinath and the first shop you find is: that Madrasis come and there is a board which says: Masala dōsai available hot, hot. So you go anywhere, people will be there; if people are not, animals are there, trees will be there.

You cannot escape from the world; and people tired of world and trying to escape takes to drinks and drugs; that also will not improve, they are going to become more miserable and they will become incapable of facing the world; therefore, better accept the fact that I have to face the world and interact with the world; and therefore jñāni understands knows, guṇāḥ guṇēṣu vartantē; ahaṁkāra will interact with the world.

Why is jñāni able to allow that to happen? Because he knows even when ahaṁkāra is interacting; I have got a higher-nature; which is of the nature of caitanyam, which is not affected by all these dramas going; just as the activities of the dream world do not affect the waker; just as the various things happening in a movie screen does not affect the screen itself; similarly the real higher-I am not affected by either the karma or phalam. This fact, the jñāni remembers. So the only way is to discover your higher self, so that you are ready to allow ahaṁkāra to interact with the world without being fuzzy. Iti matvā. With this knowledge, na sajjatē. Jñāni remains detached; he is able to look at his own ahaṁkāra, objectively. He is able to look at his ahaṁkāra objectively; that means he is able to look at his own body-mind-complex- objectively.

Afterall our problem is not the death of the body itself; death of the body does not cause any problem because, so many bodies are dying regularly. What problem we have; daily you read the obituary column; so many people are dying and you are not worried; not only you are not worried, you will also speak philosophically, one day everybody has to leave; etc. We will quote Gīta also; jātasya hi dhruvō mṛtyur; when it is the neighbor's death; therefore the death of the body we are able to accept, with regard to some other body, I am able to accept the law of creation, because with regard to the other bodies, I am objective.

And if I am not able to accept the death of this body, or of a few other relatives, the only problem is I have lost objectivity; Vēdānta does not change any facts of life; Vēdānta gives me objectivity. I learn to look at the closest bodies of me, or my relatives; as one of the bodies in the world; and if jātasya hi dhruvō mṛtyur, is a universal law for all, that is true for the husband or wife, father or mother; it only affects when it is one of our family;

then the God-cursing starts, wondering whether the God does not have the eyes, ears, etc; so that means what the problem is not with God; problem is not with the world.

Suppose you say: Let Lord abolish the law of death; let everybody survive; so that my family people also survive; let us have a New Law; constitutional amendment. 2/3 majority, we just put; imagine the law-of-physical-death is revoked; what will happen; our great-great-great-great-grandfathers, all those people will be now also surviving, with the curved back, 800-year-old, 900 year -old-people, already population-explosion, imagine Bhagavān has kept mortality, physical-mortality perfectly and properly. Our problem is we do not have an objectivity.

We want two sets of laws; one for all the other people; they should die at the right time; one set of laws for me and my two. Like you are standing in a queue; when the queue is moving very very slowly; you curse. What is this? People are taking so much time, everyone should be given only one second; you should allow anybody to stand before the Lord more than one second; Bhagavān said OK. And the moment he comes in front of the Lord, and hears jaragandi, then he says why I have stood here for 6-7 hours and only one second; again we want two laws; all the people in front of me should move fast; in my case, one hour the minimum; this is our problem; we look at our body-mind-complex subjectively.

Therefore we do not accept the laws of the Lord. Jñāni looks at every body, everybody and every mind from universal law. Therefore he does not protest against any event in life; old-age he gracefully accepts; separation he gracefully-accepts; health-deterioration he has to accept; death he has to accept. So this acceptance without resistance is called jīvan-mukthiḥ; and therefore Kṛṣṇa says; iti matvā; with this knowledge, with this objectivity na sajjatē, jñāni remains detached.

Verse 3.29

प्रकृतेर्गुणसम्मूढाः सज्जन्ते गुणकर्मसु ।
तानकृत्स्नविदो मन्दान् कृत्स्नविन्न विचालयेत् ॥३.२९॥

prakṛtērguṇasammūḍhāḥ sajjantē guṇakarmasu|
tānakṛtsnavidō mandān kṛtsnavinna vicālayēt||3.29||

गुणसंमूढाः guṇa-sammūḍhāḥ Those, who are deluded by the guṇās प्रकृतेः prakṛtēḥ of prakṛti सज्जन्ते sajjantē get attached गुणकर्मसु guṇa-karmasu to the actions of the organs कृत्स्नवित् kṛtsnavit A man of complete knowledge न विचालयेत् na vicālayēt should not unsettle तान् मन्दान् tān mandān those immature (people) अकृत्स्नविदः akṛtsnavidaḥ of incomplete knowledge.

29. Those who are deluded by the guṇās of prakṛti, get attached to the actions (born) of guṇās. A man-of-complete-knowledge should not unsettle those immature (people) of incomplete-knowledge.

So Kṛṣṇa comes back to ajñāni once again. In the first line, he repeats the idea given in the 27th verse. So unlike a jñāni, ajñāni's-problem is he does not have that objectivity with regard to his body-mind-complex and ahaṁkāraḥ. Therefore, Kṛṣṇa says prakṛtēḥ guṇa-saṁmūḍhāḥ; here also prakṛti-guṇa means what? Ahaṁkāra; ahaṁkāra is what: body-mind-complex. These three do not forget; prakṛti-guṇa = ahaṁkāra = body-mind-complex. With regard to that saṁmūḍhāḥ, the ajñānis are completely deluded; delusion means that they do not have objectivity. They want two sets of law, one-for-their-ahaṁkāra and one for others'-ahaṁkāra; this is called delusion.

And because of this delusion; guṇa-karmasu sajjantē; they are totally involved in immersed in, carried away by, lost in guṇa-karmasu; here also the word guṇa means prakṛti-guṇa = ahaṁkāra = body-mind-complex, in that and karmasu and their activities. So they are immersed in ahaṁkāra and its activities. So immersed that they have no time to even ask the question, am-I this kartā-bhōktā-ahaṁkāra only or do I have a higher-self; at least the question should come.

That question does not come, because ahaṁkāra keeps that person busy throughout his life; so bālastāvat-krīḍāsaktaḥ; only play; taruṇastāvat-taruṇīsaktaḥ; dating, etc. have started here also; dating-saktaḥ; vṛddhastāvat- cintāsaktaḥ; once vṛddha, then lot of time, physically he cannot be active and lot of past life has gone by all these are in the mind, therefore worry-saktaḥ, when can I study the Gīta? I have been postponing postponing, so therefore, guṇa-karmasu sajjantē; they are immersed in ahaṁkāra.

And what can you do with regard to them? Now what should jñāni or what advice a jñāni should give to such ajñānis? Which ajñānis? Those who are immersed in ahaṁkāra and its activities.

Now Kṛṣṇa says, never ask them to renounce the karmas and ask them to take sanyāsa and go to Rishikesh and Uttarakāśi; it is deadly; no doubt, karmas are bondage, karma phala is saṁsāra; no doubt, but initially karma is required to ripen the ahaṁkāra. So which karma is cause for bandanam, the same karma should help ripen the ahaṁkāra. So karma has a negative side, alright; but we should remember that karma has got a very very important positive side. I gave the example of the skin of a fruit; it is very important in the initial stages for the ripening of the fruit; and that is Bhagavān himself has kept in such a way, when it is raw, even if you want to remove the skin, it will not peel; or else we will feel like an idiot. Bhagavān has made it so wonderful, and that is why it is not being able to peel off. And once it is ripe, Bhagavān himself makes it easily peelable; removable; Why? Because it is not required and not only that, you should not get attached; after all skin is the cause for ripen, how can I be an opportunist; I should not throw away the skin and I will eat with the skin, etc. allow the skin till ripening; and remove the skin, when it is ripe. Urvārukamīva bandhanāt mṛtyōr-mukṣīya māmṛtāt.

Oh Lord, keep all the attachments with me, so family is like skin; it should be there; that is why vēda made the four āśramas compulsory; a brahmacāri was asked to get into gṛhastha-āśrama, because gṛhastha-āśrama, wife, children, duties, are all like the skins to ripen a person.

And once a person has gone through family life and its duties, and also its ups and down; enough he brings up one child (more children, more vairāgyam) bring up a few children. Like that person said; I had five theories of bringing up children, before marriage; and no children and now I have got five children and no theories; because no theories seems to work; what you tried for the eldest, you apply in the younger, it will not work; then you thought I will change the strategy for the third, it fails; fourth, it fails; like that, you do all these things, they are all like what? skins, gṛhastha-āśrama is a skin for the jivātma to ripen; and once the jīva has ripened; na karmaṇā na prajāyā dhanēna, tyagēnaikē amṛtatva mānāsuḥ; that is called sanyāsa-āśrama. I will not ask you to leave everything. If you do not renounce externally, at least internally we have to necessarily get detached from everything, we were attached to before. Every blessed thing we were attached to before, we have to get detached from; therefore what should a jñāni advice; not renunciation; jñāni should advice, be in family life; but follow karma-yōga.

And what is the sign of ripening? sādhana catuṣṭaya saṃpatti. How do I know I have attained that? Kṛṣṇa himself will discuss that later. So therefore Kṛṣṇa says; tān mandān kṛtsnavit na vicālayēt; kṛtsnavit means jñāni; the one who has got total knowledge; kṛtsnam means total. And what do you mean by total knowledge? the one who has got the knowledge of the lower self; ahaṃkāra and also the knoweldge of the higher self, the ātma; that is called the total knowledge; kṛtsnavit means a jñāni, who knows his lower and higher-nature.

And mandāḥ means ajñāni, who has got a partial knowledge; akṛtsnavidaḥ mandān. Kṛṣṇa himself says: mandāḥ, மந்த்ரு in Tamil; that man of half-baked knowledge. What do you mean by partial knowledge? they know only the ahaṃkāra the lower self, they do not know:

न जायते म्रियते वा कदाचिन् नायं भूत्वा भविता वा न भूयः

na jāyatē mriyatē vā kadācin nāyaṁ bhūtvā bhavitā vā na bhūyaḥ

That ātma they do not know; therefore they are ajñānis. Kṛṣṇa says jñāni should not confuse an ajñāni. Na vicālayēt, should not shake him; should not disturb him; by emphasizing sanyāsa. That is why in our tradition, they never emphasize sanyāsa in public, because unripe person taking sanyāsa is danger for sanyāsa itself and is danger for the śāstra, danger for the person, danger for the society; danger for everyone; and therefore only after personal observation, after that only they gave. Dayānanda Swami beautifully says; if a person asks should I take sanyāsa? Say No. you understand it in the question itself; so therefore never emphasize sanyāsa to an ajñāni; encourage him to remain in duties; because once he gets ripened, he need not drop the attachment; once he gets ripened, he need not drop the attachment, then what will happen, urvārukamiva bandhanāt; they will naturally drop like our balloon-desire. Doesn't we have vairāgyam in balloon or not; or did you do daily balloon meditation. As you grow, from your higher status; all these small petty things you cried-for as a child you naturally dropped; and it is so natural, that you are not even aware of the fact that we have dropped nor you put in your newspapers that I have detachment from banana peel; you do not declare it; because it is natural; therefore you grow out of attachment; and therefore Kṛṣṇa says kṛtsnavit, a jñāni should not confuse an ajñāni.

संन्यस्य sanyasya Offering सर्वाणि कर्माणि sarvāṇi karmāṇi all actions मयि mayi unto Me अध्यात्मचेतसा adhyātmacētasā with a devout mind, युध्यस्व yudhyasva fight निराशीः nirāśīḥ without expectations, निर्ममः nirmamaḥ without possessiveness, भूत्वा विगतज्वरः bhūtvā vigatajvaraḥ (and) without anxiety..

30. Offering all actions unto Me with a devote mind, fight without expectations, without possessiveness, (and) without anxiety.

With the previous verse, Kṛṣṇa's advice to jñāni is over; which started from the 21st verse, 20th verse 2nd line onwards this topic started. Kṛṣṇa's first advice was to ajñānis and the second advice is to jñānis. Ajñānis have to do karma for citta-śuddhiḥ, jñānis have to do karma for lōka-saṅgrahaḥ. And when ajñāni does karma for citta śuddhiḥ, it is called karma-yōgaḥ; when jñāni does for lōka saṅgrahaḥ; you do not call karma-yōga; you cannot say jñāni does karma-yōga; to say that a person is a karma-yōgi is to say that he is ajñāni. So therefore, when ajñāni does karma for purification, it is called karma-yōgaḥ; when jñāni does karma for lōka-saṅgraham; upliftment of the society, we do not call it karma-yōgaḥ; it is only jñāni's-leela or jñāni's-karma.

So this jñāni's-duty topic is over. Now in the 30th slōkā, Kṛṣṇa comes back to the topic of karma-yōga once again and sums up the entire karma-yōga in one important verse. This karma-yōga for jñāni or ajñāni? Karma-yōga means ajñāni. Therefore, 29th verse is addressed to jñāni; the topic is over, 30th verse is again addressed to ajñāni, because Kṛṣṇa knows Arjuna belongs to which variety? Ajñāni variety; Kṛṣṇa knows; whether Arjuna wants to accept it to not. Arjuna, either way you have to do karma, and I know you belong to ajñāni category, therefore, perform your duty as karma-yōga; and what is the karma-yōga? Here karma-yōga is defined as the five-fold-discipline.

So a karma-yōgis should observe these 5 rules; 5-point-programme is karma-yōga; This is an important verse which sums up karma-yōga in one slōkā; and what are the five points to be remember? I will rearrange the verse so that we will get a development.

First condition is adhyātma-cētasā. Śankarācārya comments upon this verse as vivēka-buddhi. First condition to be a karma-yōgi is to have a vivēka buddhi; vivēka-buddhi means a right knowledge or right discrimination; that is first condition; and what do you mean by discrimination? The awareness that spiritual goal alone is the primary goal of life. My life is meaningful, purposeful, and valid, only if it is dedicated to the primary or spiritual knowledge or mōkṣaḥ. Yaḥ ātmānam vidhitvā asmat lōkāt-praiti, saḥ brāhmaṇaḥ. Bṛhadāraṇya Upaniṣad says that only that person who spends his life for self-knowledge, and dies after gaining self-knowledge, only that person deserves the title brāhmaṇaḥ; Yaḥ ātmanam vidhitva asmat lōkat praiti, saha brāhmaṇaḥ. Yaḥ ātmanam avidhitvā; Yaḥ ātmanam avidhitvā asmat lōkat-praiti saḥ kṛpaṇaḥ; kṛpaṇaḥ means a miserly person, because he did not spend his life properly.

And therefore, we should remember that the life is valid only if it is dedicated to spirituality primarily. Therefore to be a karma-yōgi, mōkṣa must be my ultimate goal. We do not say dharmartakāma should not be pursued, we require dharma, artā and kāma; artā wealth is required; kāma entertainment is required, because mind requires relaxation; and even puṇyam is required for getting a proper guru; guru one should get and he should be proper. Therefore we require dharma artā kāma, but these are not ends in themselves. If I consider money to be an end, I can never be a karma-yōgi; for a karma-yōgi money can only be a means;

आहारार्थं कर्म कुर्यादजस्रं ,स्यादाहारः प्राणसंधारणार्थम् ।
प्राणा धार्याः तत्त्वजिज्ञासनार्थं ,तत्त्वं ज्ञेयं येन भूयो न दुःखम् ॥

āhārārthaṃ karma kuryādajasraṃ, syādāhāraḥ prāṇasaṃdhāraṇārthaṃ |
prāṇā dhāryāḥ tattvajijñāsanārthaṃ, tattvaṃ jñēyaṃ yēna bhūyō na duḥkham āhārārthaṃ karma kuryādajasraṃ; for eating you have to necessarily work in the world, because you have to earn a living; for what purpose eating; syādāhāraḥ prāṇasaṃdhāraṇārthaṃ; we have to eat so that we can keep ourselves alive; and why should we live; earlier it was said; for living; it was why should we eat; why should we live? For eating, you should not say. Prāṇā dhāryāḥ tattva-jijñāsanārthaṃ; I keep my life going primarily for tattva-jijñāsanārthaṃ; self-enquiry; tattvaṃ jñēyaṃ yēna bhūyō na duḥkham; so this must be very clear; this is condition No.1. Spiritual goal; Then what is the next condition?

2. mayi sarvāṇi karmāṇi sannyasya-ādhyātmacētasā. No.1. spiritual goal; No.2. Mayi sarvāṇi karmāṇi sannyasya. Dedicate, sannyasya should be carefully translated here; normally sannyasya means renouncing. Here in this context, does not mean renunciation, offering, dedicating, what? sarvāṇi karmāṇi, all the actions, to whom? mayi; Bhagavān says Mayi, therefore, at my feet; Īśvarārpaṇa buddhi; dedicate all the actions to the Lord; convert your work into a worship; yadyatkarma karōmi tattad-akhilam śambhō tavārādhanam. Whatever I do, that all is your āradhanam; even eating praṇāya-svāḥ, that is also offering to the Lord, who is in your stomach; and in our religion, ultimately God is not in temples alone, the entire creation is manifestation of the Lord; therefore to do karma-yōga or worship, you do not necessarily require a temple, anywhere you do, mentally offer to the Lord, the action has become a worship.

Therefore what is the 2nd condition; Īśvarārpaṇa buddhi; convert work into a worship. And the corollary of that is, if I am offering the actions to the Lord, whom I revere, naturally I do my best. So I cannot give rotten things to a revered person; when you want to give to someone who respect, you have to give the best; Swamiji I have made this dish, which has come good today; therefore I have brought it for you; so therefore, other day it did not come well; so therefore you want to offer the best to the Lord; therefore if I am going to offer my actions to the Lord, the actions must be wholeheartedly, sincerely done, without grumbling, without grudging; karma-yōgi does not have all that in his dictionary. Even the most grossest job, he does with love. So therefore the second condition is worship. Convert work into a worship. Then what is the third condition?

3. nirāśīḥ. Nirāśīḥ here means literally being not concerned about the result; āśā means concern, saṅkalpa; anxiety; is called āśa or āśīḥ, āśis śabdhaḥ, sakārantha āśī, āśīṣau, āśīṣaḥ; āśā, is another word, akārantha-strīliṅgaḥ; here nirāśīḥ is sakārantha āśis śabdhaḥ.

Very careful; Kṛṣṇa does not say we should not plan for the result; without keeping the result in view, you cannot do any job; even when you have to get into the bus, the bus route No. that you get into depends upon what? The destination in mind; that is why if you ask which no. bus, I should get in; bus stand if you ask, he will ask a counter question, where do you want to go; you cannot say somewhere; then he will send it to mental hospital; so the bus no. is determined by the destination. So every movement is determined by the goal that I want to acquire; therefore Kṛṣṇa does not condemn planning, what Kṛṣṇa condemns is planning is something, worrying is quite another; anxiety is quite another; plan, implement; and leave the rest to the Lord.

I have talked about the difference between planning and worrying. Planning is a deliberate action; which can be done at a particular time chosen by you; suppose you want to have a pilgrimage; Kāśī, Rāmēśvaram, Gayā, etc. you can sit down, also talk to other people, which train, which flight, first where to go, this is all called planning. Planning is a deliberate action, done at a particular time; you can do it; you need not do it; you can change it to another time also.

But what about worrying; is worrying a deliberate action done at a particular time; if you say so, I will tell you, from tomorrow, allot some time for worrying; morning 6.30 to 6,30 sitting in padmāsana, first worry about the elder son; then the second daughter; then the husband is there; or the wife; and thereafter the father, for each 5 to 7 minutes; if worry is a deliberate action, you can choose and do, but worry happens. Therefore it is a reaction. Planning will make you efficient, worrying will make you inefficient; planning is also with regard to future; worrying is also with regard to future; planning makes you efficient; worrying makes you forget even the plan; makes you deficient and inefficient. Vēdānta does not criticise planning; Vēdānta criticises worrying; nirāśīḥ here means worry-dropping kartṛtva; so do not be concerned.

Then you may ask an incidental question; Swamiji I do not want to worry; but what to do, it is there in my mind, especially when I sit in meditation, whether Bhagavān comes or not; worry comes first; what should I do? Worry is because of our inability to face the future; which is born out of mental weakness; worry is incapacity to face the future; our unpreparedness to face the adverse situation that may come, therefore the only solution for worry is preparedness. Strengthening; I have planned for Kāśī, Gayā trip, but I do not know whether there will be bandh exactly on that day. Who is going to do the bandh, how will you know; strike; So you cannot worry; if bandh is there, bandh your plan; I have plans and hope for the best and be prepared for the worst; therefore nirāśīḥ here means preparedness for the future; this the third condition.

4. What is the fourth-condition? Nirmama. Freedom from mamakāra; what do you mean by mamakāra? When success comes; the general human tendency is, when the success comes, I take all the credit; I planned, train I choose, everything I, I, I. The moment there is failure; the plan is given by my wife or my husband or some scapegoat or other; you all would have experienced. Therefore here Kṛṣṇa says; when success comes do not claim the whole glory to yourselves; any success is because of so many factors being favourable to you, which factors are not under your control, including the bandh. And your role is only an insignificant role, compared to the infinite number of hidden variables; they use in all kinds of management and other things; there are so many hidden variables; and there are so many known variables; but uncontrollable variables. So many factors are there; they all have been favourable therefore I got success, therefore no doubt I am proud, I have contributed to the success; but I know that the Bhagavān, all the hidden variables put together are called Bhagavān. Like at the end of the programme, vote of thanks; a long list; last but not the least; what do we do in tradition; put all the external factors into one bracket and that is Īśvaraḥ; therefore nirmama, be grateful to the Lord; you can tell: I succeeded, but do not put a full stop, but a comma and add by the grace of the Lord. Let that humility be there; arrogance is deadly; therefore the fourth-factor is humility. And then comes the fifth factor, which we will see in the next class.

Hari Om

048 CHAPTER 03, VERSES 30-33

ॐ

Lord Kṛṣṇa is summarising the teaching of karma-yōga which he had given before. And in this 30th verse, he is presenting the entire karma-yōga, as a five point programme as it were, the five conditions to be taken care of to be a karma-yōgi. This we were seeing in the last class.

The first-condition that Kṛṣṇa prescribes is adhyātma-cētasa. To be a karma-yōgi, one should be very clear about the priorities of life; karma-yōgis should be considering that spiritual-progress is primary and if material-goals have to be necessarily accomplished, but that is subservient to the spiritual-goal only. This in vēdāntic-parlance, we call nityā-anitya-vastu-vivēkaḥ. Nityā-vastu means mōkṣaḥ; anitya-vastu means dharmārtakāma; dharmārtakāmas are ephemeral; mōkṣaḥ is alone eternal; I have to use dharmārtakāma for attaining mōkṣaḥ. This clarity of the primary goal of life is called ādhyātma-cētasa. Śankarācārya comments, vivēka-buddhi.

Then the second-condition that Kṛṣṇa prescribes is sarvāṇi karmāṇi mayi sannyasya. Once spiritual-goal is my primary-goal, then the immediate thing to be taken care of is purification of the mind; that has to start straight away. Like when people buy a land for an āśrama; the buildings may come later, and activities may start later; the first thing they do is to dig a well and plant some trees; so that the trees will be growing by the time the āśrama is ready, trees will be sufficiently grown up. They will start that first; in the same way; when I am going to be ready for v̄dāntic enquiry, I do not know; how long I will take for getting sādhanā-catuṣṭaya-saṃpatti, I do not know. Therefore let me straightaway start purification of mind; for that you do not require any special license from Government or any other documentation; you can straightaway start; the only way of purifying the mind is involving God. God alone has the capacity to purify because, everything else is already impure. Therefore if I try to use any other mode, it would not work; it is like sometimes you have got, what you call, a hole to allow the dirty water to go out; so that the dirty water in my compound can go out; but often what happens is; instead of it going out, whatever dirty water is there; it will come inside; because all around there is sewage water. Therefore, there is only one purifying source; that is Bhagavān. And even if there is some saint you can purify me; saint does not purify me by himself; saint is the one who has the Lord in his heart and when I say a saint purifies me, who purifies is the Lord-who-is-in-the-saint. And therefore the immediate procedure is to associate yourselves with God. How do you do that? Convert every action into a worship; therefore sarvāṇi-karmāṇi-mayi-sannyasya; Īśvarārpaṇa-buddhya, sarva karma anuṣṭānam is the second-condition.

Then the third-condition that Kṛṣṇa gives is nirāśīḥ; any karma will produce a phalam; there is no fruitless action; every karma will have to produce the result and unfortunately, I have no way of knowing what type of result it will produce. And that is how there is unpredictability in human-life and there are shocking-situations; karma-yōgi has to prepare the mind to receive any type of result; because I appreciate the Lord as the most just-principle in the world. Lord can never do injustice to me. And if there is a gap between what I expect and what happens; the mistake is not with the Lord, but the mistake is with my wrong calculation; human computer may commit mistake; because viruses are all over; you know computer viruses are of different types, whereas Bhagavān's computer can never commit mistakes; therefore the third condition is: preparedness to accept all the consequences which we call as prasāda-buddhi. So vivēka-buddhi, Īśvarārpaṇa-buddhi; prasāda-buddhi. This is the third condition.

Then the fourth-condition to be a karma-yōgi is: if at all your actions are successful, never take the credit to yourselves; because any success depends upon innumerable factors. Of those innumerable-factors, more than 90% are not under your control; if we are conducting this class, that we have put forth effort and we are sitting here is there, but if it should continue, so many favourable-factors are required; including the power situation; if the power goes now, we have to just say pūrṇamadaḥ and get up. That is why somebody asked how the current-situation is? The reply was - Shocking 😊. So therefore, any time, anything can happen, adhyātmika, ādi-daivika; ādi-bhautika can obstruct; therefore those factors are favourable, I am grateful to the Lord; therefore Nirmamaḥ; we do not say that our contribution is not there; certainly we accept puruṣārtaḥ; but puruṣārtaḥ is the smallest percentage, Īśvara-anugraha is the biggest percentage; so many factors are involved; therefore nirmamatvam means what; be humble; be humble; up to this we saw; humility; or mamatva abhāvaḥ; or in the thirteenth chapter Kṛṣṇa calls amānitvam.

So what are the four factors now? Vivēka-buddhi; Īśvarārpaṇa-buddhi; prasāda-buddhi; amānitvam or mamatva-abhāva; you can tell I did everything of course blessed by the Lord; add that clause; I worked hard; of course supported by the Lord.

And now we have to see the fifth-factor, the first 4 factors we saw in the last class, the fifth-factor, almost a natural consequence of the previous four factors. In fact, fifth-factor we need not enumerate, because if we follow the first four, the fifth is automatic, but still being important. Kṛṣṇa adds that; what is that; vigata-jvara; jvaraḥ means fever; and the fever is of two types, one is stūla-śarīra-jvaraḥ; kāyika-jvaraḥ; and the other is mānasa-jvaraḥ; mental-feverishness, which is stress or strain, because there also we say my mind got heated up; body 98.4F; mind-temperature can't be measured, still we use the expression; I got heated up, there is a heated-argument, heated-discussion; means stress or strain or tension is called jvaraḥ; and vigata-jvaraḥ means equanimity or to remember the second-chapter, samatvaṃ-yōga-ucyatē; vigata-jvaratvam nāma samatvaṃ.

Our equanimity is disturbed in two ways; because we function in two-ways; one is we function as a kartā, as the doer of varieties of action; and the second-role that we play is as bhōktā; because constantly the results are flowing in, one side we are acting, another side things are happening; that is why somebody asked; what is life? Life is what happens to you, when you are busy doing other things. You have wonderful-plans; daughter must be like this; son like this, husband like this; suddenly a news comes; something totally-unexpected; till that no talk of life; now, life is what?

Therefore we are functioning in two ways; constantly; as a kartā and as a bhōktā; and our mind can be disturbed both ways.

When I am doing an action which I do not like, there is tension; in fact, they have found that most of the problems are because we have jobs which we do not love or like; especially in the present employment situation; when getting a job itself is difficult; this person is qualified for something and he loves to do something; and then what he gets is totally something else; therefore there is resistance to that work; but what to do? Family is there; children are studying, one has to work for the money; fortunately or unfortunately 8 hours of our waking-period is in job; 5 or 6 days of the week, 4 weeks of a month; and 12 months of the year; and so many years up to retirement, whatever be the age, I have to do the job; imagine I do not love that job; there is a strain every moment; there is a resistance every moment; there is a drag every moment; I always look forward to weekend; and Sunday evenings are always terrible; why, I have to go to work tomorrow. Gīta class is there and I am saved.

So we get lot of diseases and lot of problems when I am not happy as a kartā; and therefore the most important-advice is if you cannot do what you like, learn to like whatever you have to do; start today itself; learn-to-like whatever you have to do; by innovating the job, improving the job, finding something very interesting, doing some research; so that I am enjoying what I do.

One of the most important characteristics of a karma-yōgi, Kṛṣṇa tells in the 18th chapter is, dhṛtyutsāha-samanvitaḥ; he must be the embodiment of utsāh, enthusiasm; half of our tension is gone, if I learn to love what I have to do; and that is equanimity as kartā.

Then the second-source of tension is as a bhōktā, I have resistance to what is happening; and when I have resistance, I blame everyone in the world; and poor Lord also is scolded left and right; because he is in the form of stone, he is saved; therefore as a bhōktā, equanimity is possible, if I learn to accept whatever comes as a result, with the total understanding that Bhagavān cannot be unjust; the most painful-experience is justice only. And if I say that Swamiji I know that it is justice, but I cannot bear it, what to do? You can say and go, but I cannot bear it; Swamiji you are only a single man; I know I have to accept it; but how to do it; surrender to the very same Lord; Oh Lord, I know you are doing justice alone, but I do not have the strength to accept this; please bless me with strength to face what I should face; this is called vigata-jvaratvam and Arjuna as a kartā, he has problem, he has to shoot his near and dear ones; Bhīṣma, Drōṇa, Kṛpa. Therefore as a kartā, it is painful; and after shooting when they are killed.

गुरुनहत्वा हि महानुभावान् ,श्रेयो भोक्तुं भैक्ष्यमपीह लोके ।
हत्वार्थकामांस्तु गुरुनिहैव , भुञ्जीय भोगान् रुधिरप्रदिग्धान् ॥२.५॥

gurūnahatvā hi mahānubhāvān, śrēyō bhōktum bhaikṣyamapīha lōkē |
hatvārthakāmāṁstu gurūnihaiva, bhuñjīya bhōgān rudhirapradighān ||2.5||

Even if he is victorious in war, he cannot be happy because it is the blood stained pleasures that he is going to get. What a painful situation that Arjuna is facing. But there is no other way, he has to love killing them; and without resistance, he has to accept the consequence either of their or his own death. Therefore Arjuna, be calm. Vigata-jvara; So samatvaṁ is the fifth-condition;

- so priority with regard to life goals;
- offering all actions to the Lord;
- accepting all results as God's gift; and
- humbly appreciating the blessing of the Lord in success; and
- finally maintenance of samatvaṁ.

This is the five point programme.

And even if you want to have a five year plan, you can practice point no.1 for one year; take your own time; but it is worth it.

Verse 3.31

ये मे मतमिदम् नित्यमनुतिष्ठन्ति मानवाः ।
श्रद्धावन्तोऽनसूयन्तो मुच्यन्ते तेऽपि कर्मभिः ॥३.३१॥

yē mē matamidam nityamanutiṣṭhanti mānavāḥ |
śraddhāvantō:'nasūyantō mucyantē tē:'pi karmabhiḥ ||3.31||

ते अपि मानवाः tē api mānavāḥ those people ये नित्यम् अनुतिष्ठन्ति yē nityam anutiṣṭhanti who always follow इदं मतम् idam matam this teaching मे mē of Mine श्रद्धावन्तः śraddāvantaḥ with faith अनुसूयन्तः anusūyantaḥ and without being critical, मुच्यन्ते mucyantē are freed कर्मभिः karmabhiḥ from (the bonds of) Karma..

31. Those people, who always follow this teaching of mine with faith and without being critical, are freed from (the bonds of) Karma.

So in these two verses, Kṛṣṇa talks about the advantage of following karma-yōga and the disadvantage of not following karma-yōga. If you follow what will happen? If you do not follow what will happen?

First he talks about the followers. Idam matam mānavāḥ anuṣṭhanti; there are some lucky-people, blessed-people who follow this teaching of mine; to their capacity. Kṛṣṇa does not expect perfection from us; Kṛṣṇa expects only sincere-effort on our part; and therefore mānavāḥ, some people, idam matam, meaning teaching, so this teaching of mine, which teaching; karma-yōga teaching of mine, some people follow, when? Nityam, constantly, some people follow. Because every moment I am a kartā or I am a bhōktā; and how do they follow this teaching; śraddāvantah; with total faith in the efficacy of this teaching; in the validity of this teaching; faith is required because the benefit of karma-yōga is spiritual-in-nature. It is not a concrete-measurable-benefit; like 5% profit or this particular result like crops coming. They say you put this fertilizer and see whether there is increase in the production. So here the benefit is spiritually-quantified; measurable; by following karma-yōga. I cannot tell you follow karma-yōga, your weight will increase, or it will decrease, or the hair will grow, if you do not have; I cannot present any concrete-benefit, because the benefit is subtle-benefit; if it is sakāma-karma, the invisible benefit is adṛṣṭaḥ puṇyam, puṇyam also I cannot show and if it is niṣkāma, the benefit is purification of mind, I cannot show it. I can only say that you practice and see for yourself. I cannot physically show it; therefore what is more important; śraddāvantah, with faith in the efficacy of the teaching and anusūyantah; without asūyah; so asūyah in vēdāntic-context or dharma-śāstra context, asūyah means criticizing-mentality; all the time looking for mistakes-of-others. Dayānanda-Swami says: a proof-readers'-mind; a Proof-reader, really looks for; his job is to find out mistakes; but for a proof-reader it is a virtue. But in life; I should not be a proof reader; but that tendency is very much, if we observe our life, children also if they bring their progress report, maths, 95%, English 98%, therefore Science 100, Physics... Social studies, 68%, how much dates one can remember; this man born when that man died when; poor child it gets only 68 marks; now the mother does not say wonderful; for all 95, 98, she does not see, only she sees is the 68 with a magnifying glass, why did you only get 68. If the child does not get psychologically destroyed, it is only because of Bhagavān's grace. So we think that only we have to point out the mistake, there is a logic also; the misconception is if I go on saying wonderful, the child will become arrogant and therefore I do not want to do that; but the other side is what? The child will be psychologically-destroyed; therefore the most important-thing is critical-mindedness is a very very bad tendency.

And Kṛṣṇa says especially with regard to scriptures we should never have that attitude; because if we have such a critical mind; then we will reject the scriptures and by rejecting the scriptures, scriptures are not going to lose anything and our ṛiṣṭis are not going to lose anything, even Bhagavān is not going to lose anything; Bhagavān does not require our certificate; to whomsoever it may concern; Gīta is without flaw; if I give the certificate; Bhagavān does not expect any certificate from us. If we are critical, we are only going to suffer. Therefore, asūyaḥ, paraguṇēṣu dōṣaḥ aviṣkaraṇam, asūyaḥ; paraguṇēṣu, even the wonderful features of another, dōṣaḥ aviṣkaraṇam, seeing the dōṣaḥ, and suppose I see some defect in Gīta, what should I do? should I blindly accept, am I not a rational person; and intelligent person; should I have a blind faith; should I be superstitious; because especially this is rational yuga; we are supposed to think and accept; so if I see some defect in the Gīta what should I do? We have two answers.

Let us assume there is some defect; then our answer is do not bother about the defect part; bother about the beautiful teaching and try to follow that. Like taking gold from the earth. When I am getting gold, gold does not come in pure form; there may be lot of impurity, just because there is impurity, I do not throw away the gold; what do I do, tons of ore is turned only into a few grams; still I hold on to that, my respect, value for gold is so much, that I take it and remove whatever is unwanted and take the best part:

यान्यनवद्यानि कर्माणि । तानि सेवितव्यानि । नो इतराणि । यान्यस्माक सुचरितानि । तानि त्वयो पास्या नि ॥
तैत्तिरीयोपनिषत् एकादशोऽनुवाकः २ ॥

yānyanavadyāni karmāṇi | tāni sēvitavyāni | nō itarāṇi | yānyasmāka sucaritāni | tāni tvayō pāsyā ni || taittirīyōpaniṣat ēkādaśō:'nuvākaḥ 2 ||

Ṛṣīs themselves openly declare that if there are any beautiful character features in us, take it. Similarly why can't you take the wonderful features of the scriptures? Why do you throw the baby along with the bath water; this is the first answer, assuming that there are defects.

And the second answer is: If you feel that there are certain defects in the scriptures, it only means I have not understood that portion properly. The problem is not with the scriptures, the problem is with our limited intellect; if we have got sufficient śraddha, and probe into the scriptures once again, with the guidance of a sampradāya-guru; there sampradāyam gets importance; you will come to know that, it is proper only; and this attitude is called Anasūya; it is a very very important virtue. Kṛṣṇa stresses in the Gīta several times. In the 9th chapter he tells; in the 18th chapter, he talks of the 4 qualifications to study the Gīta, among the four qualifications, Kṛṣṇa stresses this anasūya qualification. So therefore, anasūyantaḥ. Not being critical. The one who follows the karma-yōga teaching of mine; what will happen to him; tē karmabhiḥ mucyantē; they will be freed from all karmās; they will be freed from all karma-phalaṁs also. In short they will be liberated. They karmabhiḥ mucyantē means jivan muktaḥ bhavati.

But we should add a note; what is that note; if the scriptures say that karma-yōga will give mōkṣaḥ; what is the note that we have to add; we have already seen karma-yōga can give only purity, never mōkṣaḥ; and if Kṛṣṇa says karma-yōga will give mōkṣaḥ, we have to add, through jñānam. That clause we have to add; karma-yōga will ultimately lead you to mōkṣaḥ; how by giving you purity, by giving you guru, by giving you śāstra; by giving an opportunity for sṛavana, manana, nidhidhyasana jñānam; in short, they will be liberated.

Verse 3.32

ये त्वेतदभ्यसूयन्तो नानुतिष्ठन्ति मे मतम् ।
सर्वज्ञानविमूढांस्तान् विद्धि नष्टानचेतसः ॥३.३२॥

yē tvētaḍabhyasūyantō nānutiṣṭhanti mē matam |
sarvajñānavimūḍhāṁstān viddhi naṣṭānacētasah ||3.32||

तु tu – But (there are) अचेतसः acētasah indiscriminate ones ये अभ्यसूयन्तः yē abhyasūyantaḥ who criticize एतद् मतं ētaḍ mataṁ this teaching of Mine, मे न अनुतिष्ठन्ति mē na anutiṣṭhanti (and) do not follow (it). विद्धि तान् viddhi tān – Know them सर्वज्ञानविमूढान् sarvajñānavimūḍhān to be completely deluded with respect of all knowledge नष्टान् naṣṭān and to be doomed.

32. But (there are) indiscriminate ones who criticize the teaching of mine, (and) do not follow (it). Know them to be completely deluded with respect of all knowledge and to be doomed.

Now having talked about those people who follow, in this verse Kṛṣṇa talks about those who refuse to follow. So yē mē matamidaṁ na anutiṣṭhanti; there are so many people who refuse to follow this teaching. Refusal to follow is easier; following is always difficult; not following is always easier; you know why, because when we do not follow the teaching; it means we are leading a life according to our own whims and fancies; an instinctive life; a let-go life; that is கண்டதே காட்சி; கொண்டதே கோலம் kandatē kātchi, kondathē kōlam; in Tamil. Whenever I want to get up, I get up, and then sit in the bed and take bed coffee; and think for another 15 mts and decide whether to get up or sleep again. It is always easier to go by our instincts, which life is called prakṛta-life; prakṛta means doing to the prakṛti; whereas karma-yōga is teaching us to go by śāstra - propriety, śāstra-vidhi-niṣēdhaḥ; it is a saṁskṛta life. And to follow a saṁskṛta life, I have to always fight against my own nature; always karma-yōga is swimming against the tide; uphill task.

That is going down a mountain; what effort is required? Our weight itself is enough; that will take us down; but if you have to climb the mountain, you have to go against the natural gravity and therefore we always look for what? Some excuse or the other; and you will find most of our religious practices are peculiar; during this one month, when you would like to sleep one hour extra, this is mārkaḥ month, and one has to go to the temple at 4 a.m. You know why the śāstra have kept such rules; they want to break our laziness; they want to break our tamō-guṇa; and for a tamō-guṇi, is always easier to give one excuse or the other, and if they learn Vēdānta, they can argue better also; after all Bhagavān is sarva-vyāpi; should one come to the temple? Why should I come to some temple or anything? So therefore, it is always easier to go by our nature;

Therefore he says: yē mē matam nānutiṣṭhanti, because of what abhyasūyantaḥ; finding fault with Gīta teaching; saying that is all superstition; it is all obsolete, no more valid now; yuga has changed; some excuse or the other; it is for thrēta yuga and not for kali yuga; etc. some excuse; abhyasūyantaḥ nā nutiṣṭhanti, sarva-jñāna-vimūḍhān; Kṛṣṇa says those people are utterly deluded people. So they are utterly deluded with regard to all knowledge; sarva jñāna means all knowledge; and what does Kṛṣṇa mean by that; we categorise the knowledge into two types, one is dharma-adharma-jñānam; and the another is ātma-anātma jñānam.

So one is dharma adharma jñānam and another is ātma-anātma jñānam; first we have to get dharma-adharma-jñānam. Later we have to get ātma-anātma jñānam. First is aparā vidya; next one is called parā vidya; Kṛṣṇa says that these people are confused not only with regard to ātma-anātma; they are confused with regard to dharma-adharma also.

Therefore with regard to vēda antha also they are confused; with regard to vēda-purva also they are confused; with regard to athathō dharma jijñāsa, they are confused; with regard to athathō-brahma-jijñāsa also they are confused.

Ok. And why all these? Acētasah; because these people are indiscriminate people; they do not have the rational faculty; they do not learn from their experience; they are unintelligent people, because when the śāstra prescribes certain disciplines you can look at it positively or negatively. Positively you can take it as a prescription given by the śāstra for our own spiritual health; like doctor's health prescription. When they say that you should have some exercise regularly, it is always a painful thing; exercise, one hour walk in the morning is difficult; get up and have breakfast and TV is a happy thing. Walking is ALWAYS a painful thing. If I know why that person is prescribing, not for doctors health; but for my own benefit; then I will follow; similarly I should understand every prescription given by the śāstra is for my own good.

Śankarācārya says in his Kathā-bhāṣyam,

श्रुति सहस्रेषुभिः हितेषिणि; मात्रु सहस्रेषुभि हितेषिणि श्रुति

śruti sahasrēṣubhiḥ hitēṣiṇi; mātru sahasrēṣubhi hitēṣiṇi śruti

The śruti, the vēda is equal to thousand mothers; just as a mother will not prescribe anything which is not good for me; śāstra will never mislead me. That conviction must be there; this is positive way of looking.

The negative way of looking, which is easier is; if I have to follow the śāstra, I lose my freedom; and śāstra is restricting my freedom; I am a human being, I can choose to do whatever I want; therefore I will do whatever I like; false assertion of unintelligent freedom; this is the negative approach. Kṛṣṇa says these unintelligent people have negative approach. And what will happen to them? Kṛṣṇa warns naṣṭān-viddhi; Arjuna you understand all such people are destroyed spiritually; they are lost spiritually; they have lost one precious life; இப்பிறவி தப்பினால், எப்பிறவி வாய்க்குமோ? ippiṛavi thappinal eppiravi vaykyumō; I do not know when my next chance is; I have got a rare chance; I should make use of; I have destroyed myself, not physically, spiritually they are destroyed; therefore Arjuna you decide which category you want to be.

Verse 3.33

सदृशं चेष्टते स्वस्याः प्रकृतेर्ज्ञानवानपि ।
प्रकृतिं यान्ति भूतानि निग्रहः किं करिष्यति ॥३.३३॥

sadr̥śam̐ cēṣṭatē svasyāḥ prakṛtēṛjñānavānapi |
prakṛtim̐ yānti bhūtāni nigrahaḥ kiṁ kariṣyati ||3.33||

अपि ज्ञानवन् api jñānavan Even a man of knowledge चेष्टते cēṣṭatē acts सदृशम् sadraśam according to स्वस्था प्रकृतेः svasthā prakṛtēḥ to his nature. भूतानि bhūtāni all beings यान्ति yānti go by प्रकृतिम् prakṛtim̐ (their) nature किं निग्रहः kiṁ nigrahaḥ what will restraint करिष्यति kariṣyati do?

33. Even a man of knowledge acts according to his nature. All beings go by (their) nature. What will restraint do?

So here Kṛṣṇa points out that everyone is born with a particular personality, which is determined according to śāstra, by the three-fold-guṇas known as satva, rajas and tamas; and the personality of a human being is determined by the proportion of these three guṇās; satva representing the knowledge faculty; rajas representing the dynamism or the activity faculty; and tamas representing the opposite of these two; that which dullens both satva and rajas; inertia faculty; both physical and intellectual inertia. Intellectual- cholesterol, is called Tamas.

Based on this alone, they have classified the entire humanity into brāhmaṇa, kṣatriya, vaiśya and śūdra; about which we will study in the 4th chapter elaborately; here it is sufficient if we note this much; that some people are predominantly withdrawn; some people are predominantly extrovert and activity prone; and there are some others who are not good in either of them; they are good for unskilled mechanical type of action and knowledge.

And once we know our personality, the ideal thing will be to take up a work which is in keeping with our personality. As I said only when the personality and profession tally properly, I will love what I am doing. Otherwise there will be a strain; and therefore śāstra's first preference is we take up any action which is in keeping with our guṇāḥ.

And that is why Viśvāmitra became a brahma-ṛṣī; even though he was born a kṣatriya, he was satva predominant; became a brahma-ṛṣī and Drōṇa, a brāhmaṇa became a warrior, he fought in Mahābhāratha war. Now Kṛṣṇa says Arjuna it is better to go by your prakṛti; by your svabhāva; and you are born a kṣatriya and you are an embodiment of kṣatriya-guṇā; and kṣatriya-guṇā is what, not sitting and meditating; it is impossible for you; if that is what you like, 13 years of forest life you should have enjoyed; you should have considered as a wonderful blessing; and you should have also said that we will continue there itself doing tapas. But Arjuna was one of the most uncomfortable one in the forest and he was waiting for the thirteenth war and ready to fight the Mahābhāratha war because he knew that Duryōdhana would create problems. Arjuna enjoys warfare and he went even to help Indra, he loved it; but now when he has to kill his own kith and kin; he does not want to take up that bitter duty. Therefore suddenly he talks about āśrama, dhyanam, sanyāsa. It is like some people whenever they have problems at home, Rishikesh I will go, they say; because they are definite that the wife will say; do not go; and blackmailing like this, the wife may say one day that you can go now; then your idiocracy would be exposed. So this is called smaśāna-vairāgyam, prasūdikhā-vairāgyam they say: Similarly Arjuna is trying to get out of the whole thing, because he is not ready, therefore Kṛṣṇa advises Arjuna, Arjuna your personality is not meant for sanyāsa.

So you have to go according to your prakṛti and not only you, but any human being; therefore he says; svasyāḥ prakṛtē sadṛśam cēṣṭatē; one acts according to one's own prakṛti; here prakṛti means what; the proportion of satva, rajas and tamas, which will vary from individual to individual.

So svasyāḥ prakṛtē svabhāvasya sadṛśam means anusarēṇa cēṣṭatē; that is why occasional guidance also they tell that you put the child in a room and keep all kinds of play things and watch the child what the child is doing; one child will take the chalk piece and start scribing; painting etc; another child will take to musical instrument; another child will take the screw driver and open everything; another type of mind; each child has got its own personality and they say that if you guide the child according to its inclination it will come up very well; do not say that our child is not interested in anything. You have to check; who knows whether he is fit for Vēdānta or not; you can be happy about it; Ok.

Sadṛśam cēṣṭatē svasyāḥ prakṛtēr-jñānavān-api; which is true even if that person is a jñāni; even a jñāni's life is governed by his prakṛti; you see the biographies of many jñānis; even though all are jñānis; and all have got equal knowledge; the life style that they lead, varies from individual to individual; one has a tendency to withdraw from everything and sit inside a cave; and another jñāni he comes out and establishes institutions and writes books and all those things; which jñāni is great; who is bigger brahman. So active jñāni is bigger brahman; passive is smaller brahman? No. Active or passive; jñāni is a jñāni. So we have a tendency to criticise a passive one saying that they are not contributing to the society, etc. we feel but remember their very presence is a blessing; and in fact they indirectly teach that it is possible for a person to sit quietly without doing anything. That itself is a doubtful proposition for me. Therefore even jñāni's life is governed by their personalities.

That is why Swamiji again beautifully says: that even among Gods you find that they have different personality. Even the very musical instrument that they keep vary; Saraswati can't she have the flute; can't Kṛṣṇa keep the veena; why? Prakṛtēr-jñānavān-api; even Gods indicated that they have a personality; physical and mental; and therefore Arjuna, prakṛtiṃ yānti bhūtāni; all beings, including an animals, tiger has its nature; cow has its nature; bhūtāni; here bhūtāni, living beings; not pañca bhūtāni, where to take the pañca bhūtas and where to take the living beings, one should understand.

Here the word bhūtāni, all the jivaḥ; which includes even animals and plants; prakṛtiṃ yānti; they go according to their nature; and nigrahaḥ kim kariṣyati; what can restraint do? That it is impossible to stop the nature of a person; that is why I told sometime before, if Arjuna is sent to Rishikesh and Uttarakāśi, and he becomes a monk, a sanyāsi, he has got that leadership quality; he will join all the sanyāsīs and will form RSA, Rishikesh Sanyasi Association and will appoint one secretary and he will start fighting; and say that sanyāsīs must be given at least five percent reservation in Parliament; Ghereo, Delhi chalō, because you know dynamism, who can stop. Why are you doing all these with this vēṣam? Why can't you do what you want to do? Nigrahaḥ means suppression; what can suppression do? Do not suppress your nature; just go according to your prakṛti.

More details we will see in the next class. Hari Om

After elaborating talking about karma-yōga in the beginning, Lord Kṛṣṇa is summing up the karma-yōga; in these verses beginning from 31 to 35. In the previous two verses we saw what is the benefit of following karma-yōga and what is the loss in not following karma-yōga. The benefit is a karma-yōgi will attain liberation; of course not directly; karma-yōgi will get the mind purified, which will take him to jñāna-yōga; which will bring him a guru also; which will give him an opportunity for a sṛavaṇa-manana-nidhidhyāsanam; which will give him knowledge and thus which will give liberation. Thus karma-yōga will ultimately lead to liberation; this is the benefit.

And what is the loss for not following karma-yōga; Kṛṣṇa said viddhi-naṣṭāna-cētasah; they are spiritually lost; they have spiritual destruction.

Having said this much, Kṛṣṇa in the 33rd verse pointed that everybody has got an innate svabhāva called prakṛti, which is determined by the proportion of the three guṇās, satva, rajas and tamas, about which we will study in the 4th chapter. Different people have got different character, depending upon the dominance of one guṇa or the other and this character is called svabhāva, and Kṛṣṇa says one's life should be governed by one's svabhāva. Basic svabhāva and Kṛṣṇa said even jñānīs are governed by their svabhāva; that is why even though all the jñānīs uniformly know "I am Brahman", even though all the jñānīs they are liberated; their life styles are not similar or same; one is active jñāni; one is passive jñāni; one is teaching jñāni; one is writing jñāni; all kinds of jñānīs are available depending on their svabhāva. Therefore jñānavan api prakṛtē cēṣṭam. Therefore, Arjuna, do not try to violate your basic nature and in your case, you are a rajō-guṇa pradhāna person; a person in whom rajō-guṇa is dominant; and if you are trying to go against your nature, and trying to run away from duty; it will not work and you will again take up work elsewhere; the only difference would be that the type of work may be different; you may join an āśrama and become an accountant of the āśrama in ochre robes; There are some institutions; I am not saying for criticism; they have got accountant swamis; driver Swami; they have got ticket reserving Swami; they have got postal swamis; only difference will be the name will be Swami; they will continue to do taking care of the accounts, etc. etc. Therefore, why are you trying to break away from your own nature; accept your nature; accept your duty, and convert that duty into a karma-yōga.

Karma-yōga does not depend upon the type of action. Karma-yōga depends upon the type of attitude; a Brahmaṇa is also a karma-yōgi, when he performs his Brahmin duty as Īśvarārpaṇam. Similarly the kṣatriya is doing karma-yōga when he is doing his kṣatriya-duty as Īśvarārpaṇa; even though a brāhmaṇā's duty may involve offering flowers to a deity; because he is a priest; a kṣatriya 's duty may involve killing people, vaiśya's duty may involve, all kinds of manipulations for business; all of those duties can become worship. Kṛṣṇa will say in the 9th chapter.

यत्तपस्यसि कौन्तेय तत्कुरुष्व मदर्पणम् ॥९.२७॥

[yat karōṣi yadaśnāsi yajjuhōṣi dadāsi yat|
yat tapasyasi kauntēya tat kuruṣva madarpaṇam||9.27||](#)

Karma-yōga does not depend upon the type of actions; karma-yōga depends upon the type of attitude. A commercial brāhmaṇa cannot be a karma-yōgi; whereas non-commercial business man; a business man who considers that business as a worship of the Lord and considers his citta śuddhiḥ as more important than making profit; making profit becomes subservient to purification or service, then that non-commercial vaiśya is a karma-yōgi; rather than a brahman priest whose rituals depend upon the length of the note kept as dakṣiṇāḥ; rituals depend upon the length of the rupee notes; even the Rudram has different lengths. 7 mts Rudram; 15 ms. 31 mtrs rudram; all depends on the dakṣiṇāḥ; even the noblest job cannot be a karma-yōga. Therefore Arjuna why should you change your profession? Be where you are; fight; offer it to the lord; purify; know and be free. Up to this we saw in the last class; verse No.34.

Verse 3.34

इन्द्रियस्येन्द्रियस्यार्थे रागद्वेषौ व्यवस्थितौ ।
तयोर्न वशमागच्छेत्तौ हास्य परिपन्थिनौ ॥३.३४॥

[indriyasyēndriyasyārthē rāgadvēṣau vyavasthitau |
tayōrna vaśamāgacchēt tau hyasya paripanthinau || 3.34 ||](#)

रागद्वेषौ rāgadvēṣau likes and dislikes व्यवस्थितौ vyavasthitau are bound to be there. अर्थे arthē towards sense-objects इन्द्रियस्य indriyasya in respect of every sense organ न आगच्छेत् na āgacchēt one should not come under तयोः वशम् tayōḥ vaśam their control हि hi because तौ tau they are अस्य परिपन्थिनौ asya paripanthinau his enemies.

34. Likes and dislikes are bound to exist with regard to the object of every sense organ. One should not come under their control, because they are his enemies.

Now the previous slōkāḥ can create a doubt in the mind of the student. In the previous verse Kṛṣṇa said, every one acts according to his prakṛti or svabhāva; and Kṛṣṇa included even jñāni in the list; Dayānanda Swami beautifully says; Even the Gods has got their own svabhāva; Brahmāji is sṛṣṭi-kartā, using rajō-guṇa; Viśṇu is using sthiti-kartā, using satva-guṇa; and Śiva is laya-kartā using tamō-guṇa; very careful, using tamō-guṇa; not under the spell of tamō-guṇa; even Gods are governed by the svabhāva and actions and that is why different Gods have got different types of vāhanam, different types of weapons; different types of even musical instruments. And Kṛṣṇa also made a statement which can or what can put us off. Nigrahaḥ kiṃ kariṣyati. What you can get out of trying to control them? Nigrahaḥ means controlling the svabhāva; nigrahaḥ kiṃ kariṣyati; what can happen by controlling your svabhāva; indirectly what Kṛṣṇa has said is svabhāva cannot be controlled; because he asked the question; nigrahaḥ kiṃ kariṣyati.

Now this statement can create a big question, what is that? If every person has got a svabhāva, and if that svabhāva cannot be controlled, then it amounts to saying that we do not have any control over our nature; which is as good as saying that there is no such thing called as freewill. Therefore the previous slōkā seemingly negates the freewill by indirectly saying that svabhāva cannot be controlled and trying to control svabhāva is futile. Nigrahaḥ kiṃ kariṣyati. What can control do? It is not a question; it is a statement that nothing can be done. That is why one author conveyed this idea by giving the example of onion; onion has got a basic svabhāva, a particular smell which nobody can remove; and he said

कर्पूरधूलि रचिताल वालः कस्तूरिका कुम्कुमलिप्त देहः ।
सुवर्ण कुम्भैः परिसिञ्चमाना निजम् गुणम् मुञ्चति नो फलन्दुः ॥

karpūrdhūli racitāla vālah kastūrikā kumkumalipta dēhaḥ ।
suvarṇa kumbhaiḥ parisichcamānā nijam guṇam muncati nō phalanḍuḥ ॥

Phalanḍuḥ means onion. A person wanted to change the svabhāva of phalanḍuḥ. He made a beautiful basin of karpūra, vāsana dravyam; and kept the onion in the middle of that and upon the onion he applied kumkuma and kastūri lēhyam (all the perfumes he applied) and suvarṇa kumbhaiḥ parisichcamānā, long abhiṣēkam, with rose water. So therefore, basin is karpūram, middle is kastūri, gōrōcana, top rose water, and after 45 minutes, he removed everything and took the onion and kept in his nose and what, onion is onion, nijam guṇam muncati nō phalanḍuḥ.

Kṛṣṇa seems to say that we all have got some svabhāva. I do not say onion svabhāva. Some basic svabhāva and Kṛṣṇa says svabhāva cannot be controlled; does it mean that we do not have a freewill at all; we cannot transform ourselves? Do we have some control over our svabhāva?

Kṛṣṇa gives the answer and this slōkā is very important because this slōkā alone Kṛṣṇa establishes freewill in the case of a human being. Kṛṣṇa establishes freewill in the case of a human being. Kṛṣṇa says a human being has a control over himself; unlike the animal kingdom and plant kingdom; and that is why look down those jīvās because they have no method of working for their liberation; in our case we can plan, we can work, we can correct, we can improve, and we can accomplish.

And how do we do that? Kṛṣṇa answers that in this slōkā; He says: indriyasyēndriyasyārthē rāgadvēṣau vyavasthitau. What Kṛṣṇa says here is: We all have got certain basic character; and depending upon our character alone, we will have thoughts in the mind; this svabhāva will produce thoughts in the mind; and if those thoughts are continued in the mind; and if those saturated thoughts; those nourished thoughts gets further converted into our words and later, they will get further converted into our action.

Thus we have got three levels; svabhāva-to-thought, thought-to-words, and words-to-action. Svabhāvaḥ, vṛttīḥ, vāk or vākyaṃ, and finally karma. Now what Kṛṣṇa says is this svabhāva produces thoughts; and what type of thoughts, rāga-dvēṣau vyavasthitau; because of your innate tendency you divide the world into the like part and the dislike part; your svabhāva determines your likes and your dislikes; that is why I said in the last class, to find out the svabhāva of a child; what will be the best thing, put all the children in a room and keep varieties of gadgets, certain children are attracted to certain things and also distracted from something else. Other thing one is rāga-viṣaya and the other is dvēṣaḥ-viṣaya; therefore Kṛṣṇa says; svabhāva produces rāga-dvēṣa-vṛttīs and we have no control over the arrival of rāga-dvēṣaḥ-vṛttīs. We have no control over the production of rāga-dvēṣaḥ-vṛttīs; helplessly they surface in the mind, as if you see the world, or even if you go on a tour, you will find certain things attractive and certain things do not attract you. That's why when you travel in a group, you have to just leave them at a place and then 5 or 6 of them would rush in one direction to the masala dosa, another to the boutique, another to diamond shop. Another sits doing nothing. So thus svabhāva produces rāga-dvēṣaḥ-vṛttīs. Kṛṣṇa says we cannot avoid; in fact, we are all bundles of rāga-dvēṣaḥ.

And that is why when any person is interviewed whether it is a cricketer or whether it is a politician, you see most of the questions will be centered on what you like, which pop person you like, which book you like, which place you like, you will find most of the questions will be centered on likes and dislikes only. In fact you cannot define a person without his likes and dislikes; you define a person in terms of his likes and dislikes.

Therefore first Kṛṣṇa says every person has got a svabhāva and the svabhāva produces rāga-dvēṣaḥ-vṛttīḥ. That is said in the first line; rāga-dvēṣau vyavasthitau; vyavasthithau means necessarily present; they are present as a rule, without exception; that is why I said that even Gods are attracted to certain vāhanās. Pillayar got munchor, can' you catch the elephant; he himself is an elephant. Muruga has got his own musical ornaments. In fact the dhyāna slōkās of a deity is the description of the ornaments and the weapons, of a deity, the mala etc. they wear; Sarasvathi will like only white cloth. Why can't she wear orange, red, and green? She says she likes white only; what to do? Yākundēndu tuṣārahāra dhavalā yā śubra vastrāvidā. yā vīṇā... No guitar. One Japanese lady had come; Swami, what do you do? I teach Gīta. and she had not heard properly and she heard it as Gītar. And she was saying; Oh you teaching Gītar. Imagine me teaching Gītar. Standing there and walking around and it would be most interesting thing!! So therefore she has got veena; Kṛṣṇa has flute. This is what; even Gods have got; indriyasyēndriyasyārthē; with regard to the sound they like; with regard to form; with regard to colour; indriyasyēndriyasyā means with regard to every sense objects they have got preferences; the most interesting thing is even after coming to vēdānta; people ask Swamiji which vēdāntic text you like; Gīta; or Upaniṣads or Brahma sūtra or Pañcadaśī or Vivēkacūdāmaṇi; therefore I say Gīta; I do not want to answer. Suppose I answer; they will ask, which chapter, which slōkā, etc. etc. I say I like this slōkā, because it talks about likes and dislikes.

Then the most important thing is Kṛṣṇa says is the arrival of thoughts depend upon your svabhāva; over that you have no control. But whether those thoughts should be allowed to continue or not; should I nourish the thought; should I support the thought; or should I intelligently divert my attention from that type of thought is under my control. The arrival of thought is not under my control; it is dependent upon on my svabhāva, prakṛti, but the perpetuation of those thought is in my hand; and therefore the free will to decide whether that thought should be encouraged or should I nip it in the bud; remember the second-chapter; dhyāyatō viṣayān puṃsaḥ saṅgastēṣūpajāyatē| saṅgāt ... The world enters my mind and produces the thought of anger or jealousy or attachment or love or compassion, the world enters and generates a particular thought; but whether I should encourage that thought or not is in my hand; No.1 under my freewill.

And the second thing under freewill is these thoughts which are nourished, they alone become stronger and stronger; and when they become stronger; these thoughts crystallize into words; suppose you go on mentally scolding a person, donkey, donkey, donkey, etc. one day unknowingly at the wrong moment you will call him donkey. Swamiji is standing near. Something is nearby. So if a word comes, it is not a sudden phenomenon; it is just like a tip of an iceberg; every word is the tip of the iceberg; called thought build-up. If you are getting angry at a person and shouting it is not a sudden thing. I have built up the anger for hours or days together.

And therefore, by controlling the perpetuation of thought; arrival I have no control; by controlling the perpetuation of thought, I can control what? My words. Therefore I have got a freewill over my words.

And then third thing under my control is what? These thoughts alone later get condensed into deeds or action, and therefore the action is the grossest product of the subtlest thought; action is the grossest product of the subtlest thought; when the thought arrives if I am ready to handle the thought, I can control the action also; therefore Kṛṣṇa says freewill can control the action; freewill can control the words; freewill can control the second thought; freewill cannot control the first thought that arises, because the first thought is dependent on what; not freewill but svabhāva. Therefore Arjuna let the thoughts come in your mind; you need not feel guilty about it. Do not say: Swamiji, dirty thoughts come, etc. etc. It will come; you need not feel guilty. Let the thought arise; but I should feel guilty, if I allow that to continue.

Therefore Kṛṣṇa says there you have to use your discrimination; so judge those thoughts and ask the question; are these thoughts worthy of nourishment; and if they are worthy of nourishment, dwell on that; if they are not worthy of nourishment; in the beginning itself, nip, just as a ripple in a lake is very very feeble; but if that ripple of water is fanned, it gradually becomes a small wave; then big wave, and a huge tidal wave it becomes. Over a ripple I have a control; over a tidal wave, I do not have a control. Therefore what is your job? Tayōrna vaśamāgacchēt; Do not come under the spell of those thoughts. And when do you come under their spell? Only by nourishing them; if you decide not to nourish unhealthy thoughts, they cannot do anything.

They give a beautiful example. When a flame, feeble flame is there; the wind becomes the enemy of the flame; it can easily put out the flame; but somehow that flame is nourished into a huge forest fire or conflagration; you will find that the wind does not have the capacity to put out, and what is the rule? If you cannot fight the enemy, join. Therefore what does the wind do? The wind which was an enemy of the weaker fire, becomes the friend of the stronger fire.

Similarly unhealthy thought also, initially it is like a flame; and our intellect can handle that; unintelligently that unhealthy thought gets nourished addiction, then the intellect cannot control that and when the intellect cannot control, intellect learns to justify every weakness. If I do not smoke, how can the cigarette company survive? And if I ask him to give up, he will say yē s; what, coming to your class; your intellect will have all kinds of arguments in favor of its weakness and once we have come to that stage; it is almost unchangeable; incorrigible a person becomes, therefore Arjuna! tayōrna vaśamāgacchēt. Do not come under the spell of rāgaḥ-dvēsaḥ; always nip it in the bud; if it is unhealthy; if it is unhealthy; not everything. and if you do not nip in the bud in the beginning, what will happen. There is another beautiful slōkā also.

जात मात्रम् न य शत्रुम् व्याधिम् व प्रसमम् नयेत् ।
अति पुष्टाङ्गो युक्तोभिः, सो पश्चात् तेन हन्यते ॥

jāta mātram na ya śatrum, vyādhim va prasamam nayēt |
ati puṣṭāṅgō yuktōbhiḥ, sō paśchāt tēna hanyatē ||

Two things must be destroyed in the beginning itself; what are they: śatrum and vyādhi. Śatru means enemy. If enemy is allowed to grow, then he will overpower. The śatru should be destroyed when; jāta-mātram; what is the second thing? vyādhim va, a disease also; many of the disease we have a cure, if we approach in the beginning stage; if they are in the second or third degree, doctor will say to give telegrams. Cannot do anything; especially like Cancer; certain types if it is in the beginning stages.

Similarly, we have got internal enemies of kāmaḥ, krōdhaḥ, lōbhaḥ, mōhaḥ, madaḥ, mātsaryaḥ; śatravaḥ, the inner enemies you handle them in the beginning; otherwise it would be difficult; tau hyasya paripanthinau. They are the robbers; they are the enemies in your spiritual path;

Therefore the essence of the slōkā is free will is there; the first thought alone is not under our control. The second thought is under our control; the words are under our control; the deeds are under our control; actions are also under our control; therefore what? You can discipline them.

Verse 3.35

श्रेयान् स्वधर्मो विगुणः परधर्मात्स्वनुष्ठितात् ।
स्वधर्मे निधनं श्रेयः परधर्मो भयावहः ॥३.३५॥

śrēyān svadharmō viguṇaḥ paradharmāt svanuṣṭhitāt|
svadharmē nidhanam śrēyaḥ paradharmō bhayāvahaḥ||3.35||

स्वधर्मः svadharmāḥ one's own duty, विगुणः viguṇaḥ (though) improperly performed, श्रेयान् śrēyān is better परधर्मात् paradharmāt than another's duty, स्वनुष्ठितात् svanuṣṭhitāt properly performed. निधनम् nidhanam Even death स्वधर्म svadharmā in one's own duty

श्रेयः śrēyaḥ is better परधर्मः paradharmaḥ Another's duty भयावहः bhayāvahaḥ is harmful.

35. One's own duty, (though) improperly performed, is better than another's duty, properly performed. Even death in one's own duty is better. Another's duty is dangerous.

So Kṛṣṇa concludes here by saying therefore Arjuna you have to go according to your prakṛti only; your prakṛti is rajō-guṇa prakṛti; and therefore active thoughts are natural to you; therefore your life should be activity oriented life; but these activities can be dhārmic or adhārmic; whenever there is a tendency for adhārmic activity, you have to nip it in the bud, and whenever there is interest in dhārmic, legitimate activity, you have to go according to that. Therefore you have to respect prakṛti and you have to respect dharma also; and whatever falls within dharma and svabhāva. Two coordinates; X and Y coordinates. It should be in keeping with your prakṛti and also it should be keeping with dharma also; and whatever comes within prakṛti and dharma, legitimacy, such thing you can encourage. If your mind is activity-oriented, vedā says be active; why should you stop? Go according to prakṛti.

But what we are saying is when you are active according to your prakṛti, let those activities be what: in keeping with dharma; like the road rules; wherever, whichever destination you want to go, you can go; the government does not say that you should go only to Tiruvanmiyur. What they say is: it can be fulfilled, when you want to go to a particular destination, you have to observe certain rules; keep left; and all over one-ways; therefore go according to one way, whatever road regulations are there; you follow; therefore your travel is conditioned by two things; what are they? Your desire and road rules. The desire represents your prakṛti and road-rules represent the dharma; similarly your life's journey should be governed by two principles, your personal desires, svabhāva and also what is dharma.

And that is called svadharma; a course of life, which is governed by propriety and svabhāva; and that is called svadharma. Here Kṛṣṇa says; Arjuna svadharma is important; even if it is not perfectly performed. So imperfectly-performed-svadharma is better than perfectly-performed-paradharma; another's duty. Imperfectly performed svadharma is better than perfectly performed paradharma. That is what they tell; the story that a person who is the owner of a huge house, he wanted to go to a place, and when he was about to go, the watchman came and said, please do not go to that place because I had a dream in which your plane is crashing. That was his dream. He told; accident; plane or whatever it is. This person; he also had belief, early morning dream; there is a belief that the early morning dream will generally come true; it is a belief; and therefore this person did not go and peculiarly enough that accident took place and by avoiding the travel this person was saved. And this watchman was very happy. He expected that this person will reward him. And the next day the person called the watchman and said that you really saved my life; and I am going to reward you and gave some money and also dismiss you. I will reward for saving my life; and dismissed him; watchman was wondering; why dismissing; why, because the when the watchman says that I had a dream, what does it mean? Even though the dream is a very good dream; perfect paradharma it is; perfectly saved; it is not the dharma of watchman. Therefore paradharmō bhayāvahaḥ; therefore dismissed. Therefore, perfect paradharma is inferior to imperfect svadharma.

And Kṛṣṇa says svadharmē nidhanaṁ śrēyaḥ; even death in svadharma is welcome; it is OK; whereas paradharmō bhayāvahaḥ; so paradharma is dangerous for oneself and it is harmful to the society also, because once one person violates the svadharma and the problem is remember yadyadācarati śrēṣṭha,... one person jumps the signal, the MTC or whatever it is, he goes and therefore the next person, even though he does not want to jump the signal, but others behind him force him to jump the signal because the human mind is sheepish, one person violates svadharma, and everybody violates, there will be utter confusion in the society and therefore, it should be avoided. And Arjuna your svadharma as a kṣatriya is fighting a dharma yuddha.

So with this conclusion, karma-yōga topic is over. Now Arjuna is going to raise a question for which Kṛṣṇa will give a beautiful answer. We will read the question only.

अर्जुन उवाच--

अथ केन प्रयुक्तोऽयं पापं चरति पूरुषः ।

अनिच्छन्नापि वार्ष्णेय बलादिव नियोजितः ॥३.३६॥

Arjuna uvāca

atha kēna prayuktō'yaṁ pāpaṁ carati pūruṣaḥ|

anicchannapi vārṣṇēya balādiva niyōjitaḥ||3.36||

अर्जुनः उवाच Arjunaḥ uvāca Arjuna asked वार्ष्णेय Vārṣṇēya Oh Kṛṣṇa ! अथ atha Then, प्रयुक्तः केन prayuktaḥ kēna prompted by what अयं पुरुषः ayaṁ puruṣaḥ does this person चरति पापम् carati pāpam commit sin, अपि अनिच्छन् api anicchan even though unwilling, इव बलाद् नियोजितः iva balād niyōjitaḥ as though he is forcibly persuaded?.

36. Arjuna asked: Oh Kṛṣṇa! Then, prompted by what, does this person commit sin, even though unwilling, as though he is forcibly persuaded?

Very important and valid question from Arjuna. Here Arjuna asks: Kṛṣṇa! Scriptures are there to guide everyone and the scriptures clearly present which course of life is favourable and which course of life is not favourable; the scriptures present karma-yōga is healthy; and violation of karma-yōga is spiritual destruction; it is clearly present; and the scriptures talk about the values of life also. And not only the scriptures talk about them, Bhagavān has given us a discriminative power also to know what is proper, what is improper, what is dharma, what is adharma, we come to know from scriptures, we can easily come to know from our buddhi, our thinking also.

That is why Dayānanda Swami beautifully says: We need not enlist the values to anyone; because very human being knows what are the dos and what are the don'ts. Even a thief knows that stealing is wrong; how do you know? Because he knows stealing is wrong; he is doing that secretly. Because he knows it is wrong; he is doing it secretly. If he considers stealing is not wrong, he would have just walked in and taken it and not only that, the most interesting thing is two thieves stole money from a house; and they have got the money; lot of currency; they wanted to divide; and it was night; they were tired and sleepy and they decided that they will sleep somewhere and divide later; early morning we can know from the newspapers how much we have stolen; we need not count it; Even from newspaper report how much money is stolen; we will share it; they slept. Then out of the two thieves; one of the thieves, in the night took the whole money and ran; then the second thief woke up and said that 'that thief' stole my money and ran. Now even a thief does not want, even the stolen money to be stolen; who does not know stealing is wrong; satyam vadha, should we teach; everybody knows the value. Therefore, ignorance of values is not a problem. Everybody knows karma-yōga; everybody knows dharma; everybody knows the values; but the problem is as Duryōdhana says beautifully, I know the values but I cannot follow; jānāmi dharma na ca mē pravṛttiḥ, jānāmi adharma na ca me nivṛttiḥ; I know it is wrong; but I cannot avoid that; like a doctor who can just talk on the evils of smoking with a cigarette in the mouth; he knows it is wrong; but he is not able to leave.

Therefore Arjuna asks, in spite of knowing what is right and wrong; how come human beings, the intelligent human beings, the so-called roof and crown of the creation, how the human-beings commit mistake. So, therefore, anicchannapi even though he does not want to be an evil person; even though he does want to be a dhārmic person only; how come a person pāpāṃ carati; commits adharma; right from politicians onwards; everywhere scam only. How come people do that? So there seems to be some other devil in our heart; as they call Satan. Like that śaitan; whatever it might be; therefore there be some force in our heart; which forces us into all kinds of adhārmic action, not out of ignorance but in spite of knowledge, Oh Kṛṣṇa tell me what is that force; balād niyōjitaḥ

iva. The human being is forcibly engaged to tell a lie, to be corrupt, to be angry, and to be jealous. He seems to be forced by some unknown principle, kēna prayuktaḥ; persuaded by which principle, does a person commit adharmā. Hey Vārṣṇēya; hey Kṛṣṇa, you please tell me; Kṛṣṇa has to answer that question; in the following verses; which we will see in the next class.

Hari Om

ॐ

With the 35th verse, Lord Kṛṣṇa has completed the topic of karma-yōga which is the main theme of the third chapter. And karma-yōga is considered to be the important first stage of spiritual sādhana, even though karma-yōga cannot lead a person to liberation, karma-yōga is very important, because through karma-yōga alone a person becomes fit for jñāna-yōga. Without karma-yōga, one can never get jñāna-yōgyatā, and to get the jñāna-yōgyatā, one has to necessarily go through karma-yōga and once a person has attained jñāna-yōgyatā; thereafterwards karma-yōga is not compulsory.

A person is given an option, either he can totally renounce karma-yōga by taking to sanyāsa-āśrama; or one can reduce the karma-yōga by remaining in gṛhastha-āśrama. So reduction or relinquishment, either of them is permitted by the śāstra; once a person gets jñāna-yōgyatā, mental purity.

And through jñāna-yōga, and jñāna-yōga alone, one will attain liberation; this jñāna-yōga has been already talked about in second-chapter briefly and more elaborately the jñāna-yōga will come in the 4th chapter. So karma-yōga theme is over with the 35th verse.

Now Arjuna raises a question in the 36th verse, which we were seeing in the last class; and Arjuna's question is: a karma-yōgi is one who leads a dhārmic-way-of-life. Without a dhārmic way of life, there is no karma-yōga; and this dhārmic-way-of-life and dhārmic-actions are dedicated to the Lord, Īśvarārpaṇa-rūpēṇa svadharmā-anuṣṭānam; karma-yōga. The very definition of karma-yōga is Īśvarārpaṇa-rūpēṇa svadharmā-anuṣṭānam and therefore a karma-yōgi has to follow dharma, dharma means a legitimate, ethical, moral non-corrupt way of life; karma-yōga pre-supposes dharma. And Kṛṣṇa also pointed out that only by following such a way of life, he will ultimately attain liberation, and if one fails to follow karma-yōga, he will be spiritually destroyed, viddhi naṣṭāna-cētasāḥ.

Now Arjuna's question is this: Every human being has got discriminative power. And it is very easy to know the importance of ethics. In fact, ethics need not be taught to any human being; because all the ethical rules are common sense rules. As I said in the last class, everybody knows what is proper and improper; even a thief knows stealing is improper; that is why he does the stealing action secretly. The very fact that he does that secretly indicates that he knows that it is wrong; not only that, even a thief does not accept his money to be stolen by someone; from that it is very clear that every human being knows, even a child of 5th standard knows that taking somebody else's pen or pencil is wrong. That is why a stealing-child, does that secretly. Similarly everyone knows that telling lie is wrong.

So therefore, ignorance of dharma, is not a problem, because everybody knows that; and the norm of determining dharma is this; what is that? What I do not want others to do to me; I should not do to others; very very simple law. Very simple law to know; I am not telling simple law to practice; I do not want anybody to harm me; therefore it becomes a dharma that I should not harm anyone. I do not want anyone to insult me; therefore I should not insult others. I want everybody to love me; nobody should hate me; which means I should love others; I want everybody to help me, which means that I should be helping others; therefore dharma ajñānam is not a problem. Everybody knows dharma that is why I said in the last class.

jānāmi dharma na ca me pravṛtti, jānāmi adharma na ca mē nivṛtti

Duryōdhanā said. He said jānāmi dharma, na ca mē pravṛtti; I know what is dharma, I am not able to follow; jānāmi adharmam, na cha me nivṛtti; I clearly know what is adharma; but I exactly religiously do that only; so why do I do that;

केनापि देवेन हृदि स्थितेन यता नियुक्तोऽस्मि तता करोमि ,

kēnāpi dēvēna hr̥di stithēna, yatā niyuktōsmi tatā karōmi

There seems to be some kind of a devil; some kind of powerful force within me, which makes me act against my own conscious.

Therefore what is that force which makes a person violate dharma in spite of his desire to be noble. Nobody wants to be an asura; so what is that force? In many religions, they put that force as an external principle; a sātān; or some devil; or some rākḥṣasā, almost every religion places that force as an external force, which is making us violate dharma; so here Arjuna wants to know is there any external power.

And some people think perhaps God himself is making me do that, in the scriptures it is said: அவன் இன்றி ஒரு அணுவும் அசையாது Avan indri or anuvum aśaiyathu (not an atom moves without His consent) God is supposed to make everyone do different actions; therefore some people think that God is making me violate. Some people think that devil is making me violate. Some people think it is my stars. Śani. Vināsa-kālē, viparītha buddhi; to put the blame on some planet, so that I am saved. Therefore it is an extra force that is determining my actions; or is it a force within myself? And if it is within myself, do I have some control over it? விதியை மதியால் வெல்லலாம் Vidhiyai Madiyāl Vellalām; Is it correct? Thus Arjuna wants to know why people take to adharma; what is the cause? Is there any method of transformation? therefore kēna prayuktō'yaṁ pūruṣaḥ pāpāṁ carati. Persuaded by which unseen force, does a human being commit adharma; perpetrates adharma; anicchannapi, even though everyone innately wants to be a noble person; anicchannapi; against his own will; and that is why many people even begin to doubt the existence of freewill; because he Wills to lead a particular way of life; New Year decisions are many; and they are written in the diary; and maximum followed for a week; and thereafter it is the same thing only.

Therefore, do we have really a will at all? Or is there some other force; and that force seems to be what, one group of people say, there is no will at all. fatalistic people; who say everything is determined by some other factor; it is called fatalistic type; there are some other people, who accept the will, but they say that the Will is so feeble that in front of all these extra forces, we are helpless; and therefore Arjuna says; balād niyōjitaḥ. As though forced with what you call a revolver on the temple, and we obey, because a gun is there on your temple. Like that somebody seems to keep a gun on your head and make you say a lie; do akramaṁ, do that, drink, gamble; somebody seems to say; what is that? This is a very basic and important question which comes to every human being one day or the other; so therefore this portion is important portion. Up to this we saw in the last class:

श्री भगवानुवाच--

काम एष क्रोध एष रजोगुणसमुद्भवः ।

माहाशनो महापाप्मा विद्ध्येनमिह वैरिणम् ॥३.३७॥

Śrī Bhagavān uvāca

kāma ēṣa krōdha ēṣa rajōguṇasamudbhavaḥ|

mahāśanō mahāpāpmā viddhyēnamiha vairiṇam||3.37||

श्रीभगवानुवाचः Śrī Bhagavānuvācaḥ The Lord replied एषः कामः ēṣaḥ kāmaḥ – (It is) this desire एषः क्रोधः ēṣaḥ krōdhaḥ (It is) this anger रजोगुणसमुद्भवः rajō-guṇa-samudbhavaḥ

(It is) born of Rajō-guṇa महाशनः mahāśanaḥ (It is) insatiable महापाप्मा mahāpāpmā (mahāpāpmā – (and) very sinful विद्धि viddhi Know this (to be) एनम् ēnam an enemy वैरिणम् vairiṇam in this life..

37. The Lord replied - (It is) this desire. (It is) this anger. (It is) born of Rajōguṇa. (It is) insatiable and very sinful. Know this (to be) an enemy in this life.

So in these verses, up to the end of this chapter, Kṛṣṇa answers Arjuna's question and points out that there is no external force controlling us. So there is no external angel, external devil, controlling us; the whole thing is within yourselves only. So therefore in our philosophy, we do not have an external devil like certain other systems have; here we say, it is all within you only; and what is that basic force? if you ask, it is ajñānam, ignorance alone is the cause of all problems; sheer ignorance working at two levels; in the initial level it is the dharma adharma ajñānam; ignorance with regard to dharma and adharma; and at a higher level; it is ignorance with regard to ātma-anātma. So dharma-adharma, ātma-anātma avivēka, ajñānam is alone the devil, if you want a devil. There is no other force other than this ajñānam.

Here Kṛṣṇa does not talk about the ajñānam directly, because we rarely understand that ajñānam. This basic ajñānam alone expresses in the form of two forces known as kāmaḥ, krōdhaḥ; ajñānam itself bifurcates itself; divides itself into two forces; one is called kāmaḥ; and another is called krōdhaḥ; this kāma-krōdhaḥ alone is the problem; and therefore in the following verses, Kṛṣṇa is going to discuss the problem of kāma krōdhaḥ, the source of kāma-krōdhaḥ, and the remedy or the medicine to the disease of kāma krōdhaḥ; these are the three topics; kāma krōdhaḥ-svarupam; kāma-krōdhaḥ-kāraṇam; kāma-krōdhaḥ-parihārah; this is going to be three-fold topic. First Kṛṣṇa introduces that;

Sri Bhagavan uvāca; so what is your enemy to follow dharma. He says kāma ēṣa krōdha ēṣa; kāmaḥ means desire; krōdhaḥ means anger; yē ṣaḥ kāmaḥ means the desire which is experienced by every human being intimately. I need not bring some desire from outside to demonstrate to you what is a desire. Desire need not be taught; because everybody intimately knows what is desire. The object of desire may vary from individual to individual; but the presence of desire is universal.

And since it is universally experienced by everyone, Kṛṣṇa uses the pronoun, yē ṣaḥ kāmaḥ; this desire, which you feel in your mind intimately. And yē ṣaḥ krōdhaḥ; and this anger which you feel intimately. Everybody has got anger at the tip of the nose; we are just waiting to jump at someone; if we do not get angry, not because it is not that we do not have anger, we have not got an appropriate candidate only. If you get angry inappropriately it is problem; if it is the boss, you will lose the job; with wife, will not give dinner; it is already there at the tip of the nose; therefore Kṛṣṇa says yē ṣaḥ krōdhaḥ sākṣi pratyakdāthaya anubhuyamana; intimately experienced.

And how are they born? Rajō-guṇa-samudbhavaḥ; both of them are born out of rajō-guṇa; more about the guṇas we will see later; therefore I am not discussing that here; three guṇas; satva, rajas and tamas, we will see in the 14th chapter, you have to wait; there we will discuss the three guṇas; kāma, krōdhaḥs are born out of rajō-guṇa.

And why we do we say they are the powerful forces which obstruct karma-yōga or dhārmic way of life? The reason is this, mahāśanaḥ; the nature of kāma is that it is mahāśanaḥ; literally mahā-aśana, a great eater; mahat aśanam bhōjanam yasya saha, māhāśanaḥ; it is a glutton; he is a gundōthara; it comes in purāṇa, he will go on eating without limit. So the idea is this there is no way of fulfilling the desires. Any amount of desires we fulfill, it will never end but it will only expand more and more, as somebody nicely said,

निःस्वो वष्टि शतं शती दशशतं लक्षं सहस्राधिपः
लक्षेशः क्षितिपालतां क्षितिपतिः चक्रेशतां वाञ्छति |
चक्रेशः पुनरिन्द्रतां सुरपतिः ब्राह्मं पदं वाञ्छति
ब्रह्मा शैवपदं शिवो हरिपदं चाशावधिं को गतः || ३६ ||

niḥsvō vaṣṭi śataṁ śatī daśaśataṁ lakṣaṁ sahasrādhipaḥ lakṣēśaḥ kṣitipālatāṁ kṣitipatiḥ cakrēśatāṁ vāñchati | cakrēśaḥ punarindratāṁ surapatiḥ brāhmaṁ padaṁ vāñchati brahmā śaivapadaṁ śivō haripadaṁ cāsāvadhiṁ kō gataḥ ||36||

niḥsvō vaṣṭi śataṁ, when I do not have any money at all, ēka śataṁ, one hundred rupees, one can manage; śatī daśaśataṁ, once I have a hundred, then the next plan is thousand, lakṣaṁ sahasrādhipaḥ; once I get a few thousand, then my desire for lakṣaṁ. lakṣēśaḥ kṣitipālatāṁ, once I have a few lakhs, then I want to become some MLA; lakṣēśaḥ kṣitipālatāḥ, a small king, சிற்றரசர் chittarajar; the king of a small country and once I have become a king of a small country, kṣitipatiḥ cakrēśatāṁ vāñchati; cakrēśaḥ, I want to be emperor with many kings under me; as a cakravarthi am I happy. Cakrēśaḥ punarindratāṁ, what is the use of being an emperor of the miserable earth; I want to be the emperor of the heavens; indraḥ, and you interview, Indra, and ask are you happy, surapatiḥ brāhmaṁ pādaṁ vāñchati; Indra is busy working for fighting the next election; so he wants to become a Brahmāji. What about Brahma? Brahmā Viṣṇupatam, harir hara patam, Brahma wants to become Viṣṇu, Viṣṇu wants to become Śiva; so if you are Viṣṇu bhaktha, change the sequence;! Or you will get angry, this is because this is a Śiva temple; Śiva wants to become Viṣṇu.

The net result is what? Cāśāvadhīm kō gataḥ; there is no end to the desires; why is it like that; why the desires do not end; what is the reason? The logic is this; All the desires are different expressions of one basic desire only; all desires are expressions of one basic desire only; and what is that; now I feel apūrṇaḥ, incomplete; I am not complete with myself; with a small house, or even without a house, I feel incomplete, and my struggle is not to buy a house, or not to get a wife or not to get a child; my desire is through the house, I want to become a complete person; I want fulfilment. So whatever be the type of desires; the desires are superficial, through the superficial desires, I want to fulfill only one desire; that is I, the finite want to become the infinite. So I do not want குறைவு kuraivu, I want நிறைவு Niraivu; therefore whenever I am unhappy please ask the question, what is your குறை kurai. Then he says I have got house, I have got money, children also, they are also married; but for the third child, there is no child; one child does not have a child.

And vēdānta says, an incomplete one can never become complete by acquiring things; a finite one through acquisition can never become infinite; finite plus finite is equal to infinite? Finite plus finite plus finite is equal to finite; you may get anything, by a process of fulfilling the desires, you can never become pūrṇaḥ and therefore our very approach is very illogical approach. The very basic human approach is illogical approach; because I, the finite, wants to become infinite through acquisition. And that is why Swami Chinmayānanda nicely puts; happiness is nothing but the number of desires you fulfill, divided by the number of desires you have; is the happiness. Number of desires you fulfill; divided by the number of desires you have.

Suppose you have got 10 desires and you have a project; one by one you have to finish; for that instalments schemes are started; one by one it is will be fulfilled. No. of desires fulfilled by no. of desires is happiness. So when one desire is fulfilled, I get 1/10 happiness. Two desires I fulfill; 2/10. 3/10, 4/10; therefore the unit of happiness is becoming more and more; 5/10, half has come, then 6/10, 7/10, and then I complete the 10th desire, what will be my happiness: 10/10 is one pūrṇa-ānanda. Until then it was fractional-ānanda; frictional-ānanda; now with the fulfilment of the 10th desire it will be pūrṇa-ānanda; this is my wishful thinking.

But what I discover is a peculiar thing; by the time I fulfill the 10th desire, the number of desires has increased from 10 to thousands. So therefore when you fulfill the 10th desire, what is the unit of happiness, 10 by 1000? So when fulfilling the first desire, the happiness was 1/10, and by the time I fulfill the 10th desire, it is 10/1000, what is 10/1000; it is 1/100, therefore I have progressed from 1/10th happiness to 1/100th happiness; 'progressed' within quotes. How do you know; that is why the 60 year old person's face is even though he has fulfilled so many no. of desires, his face is all gloom; by walking itself it is understood. And what is the illogicality in that; the finite wants to become complete; since it is never possible we will go on struggling, struggling and therefore kāma is called mahāśanaḥ.

Ok. So what. As long as I continue this struggle of fulfilling these desires; I am so preoccupied in my life, because remember, every desire takes your time, your energy; you do not have even time to attend Gīta class; no time for sandhyāvandanam; no time for prayer, temples, scriptural study; because the more the number of desires, the more time is taken and even if you have some leisure time, even at that time, you cannot think of scriptures or anything, there also, we have to do this and that there; previously at least communication systems were very very limited; now the communication system is revolutionised; and therefore even if go to the beach, you go with a cell phone; and there also you cannot get peace; you will get a call and you have to leave; therefore what is the problem, your mind is distracted by worldly desires that you have no time to find out what is the basic problem.

The basic problem you can discover only if you lead a religious life; the basic problem you can discover only if you study the scriptures. A religious life plus scriptural study is required to enquire into my way of materialistic life, so that I will know that my very direction is wrong.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa says desire is your enemy, it does not allow you to ask the fundamental question and therefore you should know how to handle. So mahāśanaḥ. How does kāma obstruct? By distracting your mind to materialism;

पराञ्चि खानि व्यतृणत् स्वयम्भू- स्तस्मात्पराङ्पश्यति नान्तरात्मन् । ॥२.१.१॥

parāñci khāni vyatṛṇat svayambhū-stasmātparāṅpaśyati nāntarātman..... ॥2.1.1॥

In Kathōpaṇisad; Yamadharmarāja is the teacher; everywhere Yama is feared; Kathōpaṇisad Yamadharmarāja is the guru. He says that the people are so extrovert; they have no time to ask what am I doing for the last so many years, I have worked OT, overtime, what have I accomplished? He will never ask the question. And therefore, it distracts; it makes a person extrovert;

Not only kāma is a problem by making me extrovert; then krōdhaḥ is also a problem; what is krōdhaḥ; anger. And how is anger a problem? Anger makes a person violent; and violence is hiṁsa; and hiṁsa is a pāpam; harming other people is a pāpam, as Vyasācārya tells elsewhere;

श्रुयताम् धर्म सर्वस्वम् श्रुत्वा च अवधार्यताम् आत्मनह् प्रतिकूलणि न परेशाम् समचरेत्) from the Mahābhārata) śrūyatām dharma sarvasvam śrutvā ca avadhāryatām । ātmanah pratikūlaṇi na pareśām samacaret ॥

This is being said to Dharmarāja: I am giving you the entire content of dharma. Listen and do not forget. Do not inflict on others that which is inconvenient to you. This is dharma. One can't make the definition of dharma simpler than this.

श्रुयताम् धर्म सर्वस्वम् श्रुत्वा चैव अवदारीयताम् śrūyatām dharma sarvasvam śrutvā caiva avadāriyatām or

स्लोकार्धेन प्रवक्ष्यामि यदुक्तम् ग्रन्थ कोटिषु ।
परोपकार पुण्याय पापाय परपीडनम् ॥

Slōkārdhēna pravakṣyāmi yaduktam grantha kōṭiṣu ।
parōpakāra puṇyāya pāpāya parapīḍanam ॥

Any type of violence is pāpam; there is no sacred violence. Anger makes a person violent, both verbally and physically. Many people are not physically violent; but they have a got a very very sharp tongue, every stage, they will strike; that is all mahā pāpam. Therefore anger makes me do pāpam; and pāpam brings me down in spiritual ladder. And therefore mahāpāpmā; anger is a problem, because it makes a person violent. Therefore kāma makes a person extrovert; krōdhaḥ makes a person violent; an extrovert violent person can never follow dharma. An extrovert violent person cannot follow dharma, cannot follow karma-yōga, therefore these are the two enemies.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa says, Hey! Arjuna, ēnam vairiṇam viddhi; May you understand that these two principles, kāmah and krōdhaḥ are your enemies. This Kṛṣṇa will emphasize throughout the Gīta. In the 5th chapter also the will point out:

श्वनोतीहैव यः सोढुं प्राक्शरीरविमोक्षणात् ।
कामक्रोधोद्भवम् वेगम् स युक्तः स सुखी नरः ॥ ५.२३ ॥

śaknōtihaiva yaḥ sōḍhum prāk śarīravimōkṣaṇāt|
kāmakrōdhōdbhavaṁ vēgaṁ sa yuktaḥ sa sukhī naraḥ ॥ 5.23 ॥

Handling kāma and krōdhaḥ should be the lifelong project of an intelligent human being, because the quality of life is determined by these two powerful forces. And again in the 16th chapter, Kṛṣṇa repeats

त्रिविधं नरकस्येदं द्वारं नाशन मात्मनः ।
कामः क्रोधस्तथा लोभः तस्तस्मादेतत्रयं त्यजेत् ॥१६.२१॥

[trividhaṃ narakasyēdaṃ dvāraṃ nāśanamātmanaḥ |
kāmaḥ krōdhastathā lōbhastasmādētatrayaṃ tyajēt || 16.21 ||](#)

There are three roads to hell; there are three express highways to hell; why big road; so many people are going; not narrow lane, and what are the three roads, kāmḥa, krōdhaḥ, thatha lōbhaḥ; and therefore Kṛṣṇa says ēnam vairiṇam vidhi; Ok.

Here we have to note an important point. Kṛṣṇa is talking about two enemies inside; desire and anger. So naturally, he must be using dual number in Sānskrīt; because in Sānskrīt we have got three numbers, singular, dual and plural; and that is why whoever studies Sānskrīt: ramaḥ ramau ramāḥ; three ramaḥ, vṛkṣaḥ, vṛkṣau, two trees; vṛkṣāḥ, three trees or more. Here Kṛṣṇa is talking about two enemies; therefore he must be using dual number. Peculiarly you find that (these are the problems of knowing grammar, otherwise you can be blissfully be unaware of this usage) he is using singular ēsaḥ is singular; Rajō-guṇa samudbhava is singular; Vairiṇam is singular. Why does Kṛṣṇa use singular-number; because according to Kṛṣṇa, and it is also a fact also, desire and anger are not two separate entities, they are nothing but one and the same enemy from two different angles; they are two sides of the same coin.

How do you say so; Śankarācārya says in the second-chapter, desire obstructed gets converted into anger; obstructed desire turns to anger; fulfilled desire turns to what (that is not required here, but as an aside note; fulfilled desire turns to greed!) that is why gambling people will always, they have a trick, when you gamble a first time, you will win; they will create such a situation; second time also you will win; third time, fourth time, at last, he will lose everything. Therefore desire obstructed turns to anger; desire fulfilled turns to greed. We are not talking about greed; obstructed desire turns to anger; and therefore anger is what? A different version of desire only.

And that is why the intensity-of-anger is directly-proportional to the intensity-of-desire. Suppose you want to see a particular programme in TV. One day match; something like that you have plan to see; suppose you have planned in one month ago; he has prepared the TV, prepared everything; sofa is arranged, and also planned not to go anywhere; popcorn is also ready, empty handed and empty mouth, you should not watch the TV. Everything is prepared, but there is no power at that time. How do you feel? So how much anger; anger is directly proportional to the desire. From that it is very clear that both of them are one and same.

How to handle that Kṛṣṇa has to tell. Next ślōkā he introduces;

Verse 3.38

धूमेनाव्रियते वह्निर्यथादर्शो मलेन च ।
यथोल्बेनावृतो गर्भस्तथा तेनेदमावृतम् ॥३.३८॥

dhūmēna"vriyatē vahniryathā'darśō malēna ca|
yathōlbēna"vṛtō garbhastathā tēnēdamāvṛtam||3.38||

इदम् आवृतम् idam āvṛtam This (knowledge) is covered तेन tena by that (desire) तथा यथा tathā yathā in such a way as वह्निः आत्रियते vahnīḥ āvriyatē fire is enveloped धूमेन dhūmēna by smoke, आदर्शः ādarśaḥ (as a) mirror is मलेन च malēna ca (covered) by dust, यथा yathā as गर्भः आवृतः garbhaḥ āvṛtaḥ the foetus is enveloped उल्बेन ulbēna by the womb.

38. This (Knowledge) is covered by that (desire) in such a way as fire is enveloped by smoke, (as a) mirror is (covered) by dust, as the fetus is enveloped by the womb.

So in the previous verse Kṛṣṇa said kāmā and krōdhaḥ or kāmā alias krōdhaḥ is your enemy; Kāmā's another name. And therefore if you learn to handle kāmā, you need not separately handle krōdhaḥ, because kāmā alone gets converted to krōdhaḥ; and therefore Kṛṣṇa does not discuss the problem of anger; he wanted to discuss the problem of desire only. Therefore first he answers the question.

How does desire cause problem for the human being; just like analysing a disease. How does this particular disease; insulin is not enough; pancreas is not working; how does it affect the person; insulin, digestion will not work; if that does not digest, that will affect that, etc. etc. It is the study of how the disease will affect various organs. For some people kidney will go; for some people eyes will go; for some people brain will go; unless you know how it works; you cannot deal with that;

Similarly, how to deal with desire; for that we should know how does it cause the problem. Kṛṣṇa says desire causes problem by blunting your discriminative-power; reasoning power; thinking power. So a person who is obsessed with a desire cannot think, that is why you use the words, blinded by kāmā. And vivēka-śakti or discriminative power is like a charioteer which guides your life. In Kathōpaniṣad, buddhi or discriminative-power is said to be the driver of the vehicle; just as the driver alone decides which way the vehicle should go. Similarly, the buddhi-driver alone has to decide what should be my way of life; therefore every moment I should know whether I should give importance to spirituality or whether I should give importance to materialism. Which is more important? So that means what, I should have discriminative-power to know the relative priorities of life. Every moment you have to decide: you have a job in a place where the culture is there, where money is not there; you have a job in a place, where money is there, but not culture; you have a choose; whether money or culture, which you want; every moment we have to choose; life is full of choices.

And what does kāma do? It blunts or covers the vivēka śaktiḥ; therefore he says in the second line, tēna idam āvṛtam; tēna; kāmēna; idam means jñānam, jñānam means vivēka-śakti, āvṛtam, clouded, veiled.

And how does desire cover the discriminative power; Kṛṣṇa gives three examples.

The first example the smoke covering the flame or fire. Dhūmēna vahniḥ āvriyatē fire is enveloped. Why this example is given. Agni has got brightness, it can illumine the places around, so it has got enlightening power; it is covered by thick smoke; when it is covered thick smoke, the fire is not able to do what it has to do? What is that? Illumining the place. Just like when there is thick fog; even if the car light is on, it cannot show the road clearly; the visibility is so poor that they cancel the flights also; so this is example No.1.

The second example is ādarśaḥ malēna ca; the mirror being covered by dust. When the mirror is covered by dust, mirror cannot do what it has to do; what should it do; it must be able to show my face and it cannot do that; this is the second example.

The third example is yathā garbhaḥ ulbēna āvṛtaḥ; garbhaḥ means a child, a fetus, a child in the womb is called garbhaḥ, a womb, just as a child is covered by the womb, which means the child is not able to do anything it does not have the power to function; a child in the womb is non-functional; at least not fully functional, because it does not have enough space to function. Therefore covered by the smoke, fire cannot do what it has to. Covered by the dust, the mirror cannot do what it has to. Covered by the womb, a child cannot do anything. In the same way, covered by desire, buddhi cannot do what it has to do. What? Think; thinking is lost; So therefore tathā tēna idam āvṛtam; and these three examples have got significance also.

- When the smoke is covering the flame, it is easier to remove that smoke; you have to only just fan a little bit; smoke will leave; in the homam we do that; it is easier.
- When the mirror is covered by dust, you cannot just fan it and remove, you have to bring a cloth and wipe and sometimes you have to bring a wet cloth and wipe, sometimes you have to even rub; and if it is hardened; so it is a little bit more difficult.

- And if the child is covered by the womb; you cannot do anything, except, wait. Child has to become mature; for 10 months and then and then alone it will grow out of it.

Similarly, the desires are also of three types; those desires which can be easily eliminated by vivēka-śakti; in fact we need not fulfill all desires. Interview the people who have fulfilled the desires; then you will come to know what they have got by fulfilling; so if it is of a milder variety; sheer discrimination is enough; and if it is slightly more intense; then vivēka-śakti will not work; one has to go through the fulfilment of those desires. If you do not understand by buddhi, you have to suffer and understand; you go through the experiences and know what it is all about; and if the desire is so intense, you can never talk about the evil of desires; you have to allow the person to remain, and hope that one day he will grow out. Just as a child asking for a balloon, you do not condemn; complain, you allow the child to fulfill the desire and hope that on the 25th birthday the child would not ask for a balloon. Similarly in some cases, you have to go through brahmacharya, gr̥hastha, vānaprastha, etc. and all those things you have to go through; for some people, not three āśramas, janmās they have to go through, then they will grow out of that. Similarly, here also it has to be handled properly.

More details we will see in the next class.

Hari Om

051 CHAPTER 03, VERSES 38-41

ॐ

Arjuna asked a question to Lord Kṛṣṇa; how come a person violates dharma in spite of his desire to be a good and a noble person. Everybody wants to be a good person, a noble person and everybody knows what are dos and what are do-nots. The do's and don'ts are known to everyone, and in spite of the knowledge of right and wrong, how come a person violates that? How is a person corrupt in spite of his knowledge that corruption is wrong? And Kṛṣṇa is giving the answer in these verses; and Kṛṣṇa's answer was that it is nothing but kāmahaḥ and krōdhaḥ. Kṛṣṇa does not mention how kāma and krōdhaḥ arise. Kṛṣṇa does not mention but we have to note that both kāma and krōdhaḥ are products of self-ignorance.

And that is why Kṛṣṇa is telling at the end that without self-knowledge, kāma-krōdhaḥ cannot be totally handled. Because the root of kāma-krōdhaḥ is self-ignorance, as long as self-ignorance is there; I will mistake myself as a limited person and as long as I conclude that I am a limited person, I am going to continue to have wants. The sense of want, the sense of incompleteness, as one person came the other day and told: Swamiji, everything is fine in my life; but something is missing; and I do not know what it is and you have to tell me; but I can only say that there is something missing in life; either in vague form or the crystallised form of missing is: "I do not have a wife, I do not have a husband, I do not have a child, I do not have a house". 'What I do not have' varies; that 'I do not have continues' like tambura śruti. I want, I want, will be there, as long as the self-ignorance is there. The rāgās will change; but the śruti will continue. pā sā sā pā, Therefore I want I want I want; wife has come then I want that wife, rāgās have changed, from ānanda-bhairavi to duḥkha-bhairavi; I want a child; called mukari, and kēdāra gōula, anger, mukari, crying; ānanda-bhairavi started, then mukari, kēdāra gōula, etc.; rāgās change, but the śruti does not change.

Similarly, the entire human life is a series of 'I want' continuously, only that gap is filled by one thing or the other; I want son, then grandson, then great grandson, etc. etc. And therefore self-ignorance is the cause of kāma-krōdhaḥ and kāma krōdha is the cause of violation of dharma.

And how does kāma-krōdhaḥ lead to violation of dharma? What is the mechanism? How the bacteria of kāma-krōdhaḥ affect the health of dharma; Kṛṣṇa gives the mechanism; kāma's job is what, in English also you can put, comma, comma, there is no fullstop at all; since kāma is endless, in English it is called comma, no full stop. Kāma means desire; krōdhaḥ means anger; desire and anger cloud the discriminative power; discrimination between dharma and adharma is temporarily lost.

Duryōdhanā had the same problem, in spite of his śāstric-knowledge; Rāvaṇa had the same problem in spite of he is being a great Śiva-bhaktha; a great vēdādyāyi, a great sama vēda-singer; who pleased Lord Śiva himself; and Lord Śiva himself appeared and blessed Rāvaṇa. Such a decent well educated person had the clouded discriminative power to such an extent that in spite of the advice of so many people, he could not listen. It is not intelligence is lacking, but the intelligence is temporarily clouded. So that is Kṛṣṇa said in the 2nd chapter.

saṅgāt sañjāyatē kāmāḥ kāmāt krōdhō'bhijāyatē॥2.62॥

क्रोधाद्भवति सम्मोहः ॥२.६३ ॥

krōdhādbhavati sammōhaḥ..... ||2.63||

This sammōhaḥ, in the second-chapter is explained in verse No.38 as covering the discriminative power. What is sammōhaḥ in the 2nd chapter you get the answer in the 3rd chapter, 38th verse. Just as the mirror is covered by the dust; just as fire is covered by the smoke; just as a child is covered by the womb. Similarly the discriminative power is made defunct, is made non-functional temporarily. And at that time, what he does is continuous adharma? That is why in daily sandhya vandhanam, he says kāmō kārṣīt manyurakārṣīt namō-namaḥ; it is in Sandyāvandana; kāma did it Oh Lord; because of kāma, because of krōdha; I violated decency, Dharma; because of krōdha, I did;

kāmo kārṣeeth; kāma-karōti, nāham karōmi, kāma kartā, naham kartā, kāma kārayita; nāham kārayita. Ēṣē tē kāma kāmāya svāhaḥ;

one āhuti for kāma in the hope that it should leave us somehow;

manyur akārṣeeth namō namaḥ; manuur akārṣeeth; manyu karōti, nāham karōmi, manuur kartā, nāham kartā mannu kārayita; nāham kārayita; Ēṣē tē manuu manyave svāhaḥ;

Therefore, we worship kāma and krōdha; because we know that they are the pair of goondas; that is why in our puraṇās generally they will be in pairs; Madhu-Kaidabha, Śumbha-Niśumba, Rāvaṇa-Kumbhakarṇā, Śísupala-Dantavakrā, Hiraṇyakaśipu-Hiraṇyākṣa; they all come in twins; do you know who are they; they are kāma-krōdha; they are not in puraṇā and all, they are here and now, where are they; they are within me in my head, as Rāvaṇa, Dantavakrā, Śísupala, etc. And that is why during Aṅgī Avittam also, 108 or 1008 times, kāmō kārṣeeth japa is done; which means what? These two are responsible for my blunting of my discriminative power; and that is further explained in 39th verse; we will read;

Verse 3.39

आवृतं ज्ञानमेतेन ज्ञानिनो नित्यवैरिणा ।
कामरूपेण कौन्तेय दुष्पूरेणानलेन च ॥३.३९॥

āvṛtaṁ jñānamētēna jñāninō nityavairiṇā |
kāmarūpēṇa kauntēya duṣpūrēṇānalēna ca||3.39||

कौन्तेय kauntēya Oh Arjuna! ज्ञानम् jñānam Knowledge आवृतम् āvṛtam is covered एतेन ētēna by this कामरूपेण kāmarūpēṇa which is in the form of desire, च दुष्पूरेण अनलेन ca duṣpūrēṇa analēna which is (like) the insatiable fire, नित्यवैरिणा nityavairiṇā (and) which is the permanent enemy ज्ञानिनः jñāninaḥ of the wise.

39. Oh Arjuna! Knowledge is covered by this which is in the form of desire, which is (like) the insatiable fire, (and) which is the permanent enemy of the wise?

In the previous slōkā Kṛṣṇa said tathā tēnēdamāvṛtam, the fourth quarter is explained in this particular slōkā. So Kṛṣṇa says kāma, otherwise krōdha, as I had said before, desire and anger are not two separate things but they are one and the same in two different versions only. Only profile, one picture from the front; another from the behind; same person, two type of exposure. Therefore Kṛṣṇa talks about kāma, and you can replace it by krōdhaḥ also; so this kāma covers the discriminative power; the judging faculty is gone. And what type of kāma, the description of kāma is given; duṣpūrēṇānalēna ca; a desire which can be compared to fire; fire will destroy the person or the place where it is; fire will destroy its locus; similarly, like that, kāma will destroy its locus; locus means what, the very mind in which it exists; if the fire is here, the fire burns the hand, if the desire is in the mind, it corrodes, it destroys the very mind; and therefore it is called analēna; analaḥ means fire; and why is the fire called analaḥ.

In Sānskrīt, every word has got a derivation; it has a got a meaning, kārana name it is, alam means satisfaction; tṛptiḥ; anala means that which is never satisfied; that which can never be propitiated; the more you offer oblations to the fire; the more it grows, it never says I will go away. By offering the oblations you can never remove the fire, on the other hand, the fire will only increase by feeding it. Similarly when you fulfil your desire; you are not removing the desire; in fact you are nourishing the desire; feeding the desire; therefore the desire becomes what; it become further gross; and again you offer more oblation, it expands further, since the fire can never be satisfied; since it is insatiable; it is called anala; na vidyatē alam yasya saha, analaḥ; desire is also analaḥ.

That is why I said in the other class, when you get hundred rupees, your target is 1000 and once you get 1000, the target is 10000; one man was telling, he was talking about his watch. Swamiji you know how I got this watch; previously in Madras Island ground there was some fair. And in that some lucky dip, game was there; and in that game, whoever wins the first prize, he will get the watch; then he won the prize and he got the watch; you are very very lucky, without spending money at all; you got the watch. Swamiji you should know, he was gloomy, because the next day for the first prize they gave the scooter. He is not happy that he got the free watch; but he is talking as though he has lost a scooter; he has never got a scooter; but he imagines if I had won the same first prize the next day, I would have got the scooter. Now I could not get the scooter; therefore I have lost the non-existent scooter and he is crying and in that crying he is not able to enjoy the free watch; crying that he got only a free watch. This is called kāmah; Therefore duṣpūrēṇa; that which can never be satiated; and what kind of fire it is; kāmarūpēna; the fire which is in the form of inordinate desire; and jñāninaḥ nityavairiṇā. And a desire which is an eternal enemy of the scriptural students.

Kṛṣṇa makes a beautiful note here; desire is an eternal enemy of a scriptural-student; Gīta -student; whereas it is not an eternal enemy of non-Gīta student. So Gīta -study is advantageous or disadvantageous. Kṛṣṇa says; for Gīta -student it is a greater enemy. Why; the reason is this; the other people do not look down upon their desires; they do not consider it as a weakness at all. They do not consider it a minus point at all. Therefore they go on fulfilling their desires and whatever the consequence, they face. They do not have any guilt complex or any such problem. But after studying Gīta, the problem is what? I am going to feel the guilt like a person; an example will make it clear.

Suppose a person has got sugar problem; he does not know that he has a sugar problem; he is not informed or he is not educated; therefore what does he do? He fulfills his desires; without any guilt or any complex or any problem, laddu and jilebi comes and he eats without restraint. Later the sugar level shot up and whatever consequences he has to suffer, he suffers. Therefore, for an ignorant person, suffering comes only later; and but this person he knows he has sugar; and he knows that eating this jilabi, gulab jamun is going to increase the sugar; and he is not able to give it up also; it is so tempting; therefore what does he do? Even as he is eating, he is going to constantly feel the guilt, even before eating, during eating, and of course later, he suffers; but the other person, who is blissfully ignorant, he suffers only later.

So all non-Gīta students are blissfully ignorant; they may suffer later, but for the Gīta student it is going to be a bug throughout. Therefore either be totally ignorant or totally be knowledgeable; half-baked is always a problem; and therefore jñāninaḥ, for a partially informed person it is a nitya vairi, an eternal enemy and that kāma; jñānam āvṛtam, by that desire the discriminative power is clouded.

And for a spiritual student; the most important wealth is discriminative power; because the first part of his life is karma yōga. And in the first part of life, he has to use the discrimination to find out what is dharma and what is adharma. Therefore the first stage of spiritual stage involves, dharma-adharma vivēka; for that one needs buddhi; once he has crossed karma yōga stage and he comes to jñāna yōga stage, there also he has to use the discriminative power only, discrimination between what and what; satya-mithya-vivēka; he has to know what is real and what is unreal; therefore the first stage of spirituality is also discrimination; between dharma-adharma; the final stage of spirituality is also discrimination, between real and unreal; that means what discrimination is required in each stage of spiritual life; throughout spiritual life, vivēka is important; therefore for us the most important wealth is discrimination. The local wealth may be there or not; but vivēka-sampath that is called sādhanā-catuṣṭaya-sampath; vivēka-dhanam, is the most important one and the kāma robs away this wealth of discrimination. The other robbers may take away my money, they may take away my ornaments, it is all OK, you can again build up, kāma is a greater robber, or a worse robber because he robs away, the vivēka śaktiḥ; and therefore you should be very very guarded.

Verse 3.40

इन्द्रियाणि मनो बुद्धिरस्याधिष्ठानमुच्यते । एतैर्विमोहयत्येष ज्ञानमावृत्य देहिनम् ॥३.४०॥

indriyāṇi manō buddhirasyādhiṣṭhānamucyatē|
ētaiṛvimōhayatyēṣa jñānamāvṛtya dēhinam||3.40||

इन्द्रियाणि indriyāṇi The sense organs, मनः manaḥ the mind, बुद्धिः buddhiḥ and the intellect उच्यते ucyatē are said to be अधिष्ठानम् अस्य adhiṣṭhānam asya the base of this (desire) आवृत्य ज्ञानम् āvṛtya jñānam Veiling the knowledge एतैः ētaiḥ by these, एषः विमोहयति ēṣaḥ vimōhayati this (desire) deludes देहिनम् dēhinam the individual.

40. The sense organs, the mind, and the intellect are said to be the base of this (desire). Veiling the knowledge by these, this (desire) deludes the individual.

So now I am a spiritual-seeker; a mumukṣu; a jijñāsu; and Kṛṣṇa has pointed out kāma is a śatru, an enemy. So now there is a war, a cold war going on between me and my enemy, kāmaḥ. So how to win this war; this is the discussion; therefore Kṛṣṇa wants to take the example of a war itself; because Arjuna is a kṣatriya, a warrior; Kṛṣṇa also is a warrior, and therefore he takes the symbolism of a war.

There are two countries or kings and there is a war between them; how to defeat the other country; when one country has to attack another country. Now America is planning or already attacking Iraq. I do not want to say whether it is right or wrong; there is a war. You know what is the most important thing that they require; because there is a big distance between these countries; around the enemy territory they need a base, to store the weapons, to fuel the aeroplanes, all these requires a base; without a base, they cannot support their army; and that is why around Indian ocean also they are trying to have a base and it can become a big problem also. Therefore victory requires what? A nourishing base near the enemy. And therefore if I want to win over the other enemy, I have to find out what are the bases of the enemy; and if I destroy the bases, the enemy does not get nourishment.

Even during the last war, even there was a rumour planes came to India and fueled and went; it fueled a lot of problems; India allowed or not; it is required; and therefore, kāma also requires certain bases to nourish it; and therefore we have to find out what are the bases; even though terrorists who want to attack Israel, they just take the help of neighboring countries like Lebanon and all, and they have got bases; even ISI have bases in India. What Israel does, once they have got sufficient weapons, they just go and bulldoze, destroy all those bases. So destroying the bases of enemies' support is the most tactical action a person has to do, if he has to win over the enemy.

Therefore Kṛṣṇa asks the question. For kāma to attack me, what are the bases? You handle the bases, kāma-war is half won or fully won. Kṛṣṇa says there are three bases from which desire gets nourishment. First it is generated, later it is nourished by three-bases.

What are they? No.1, indriyāṇi, the five sense-organs are the first-one; because they alone introduce the sense object to me. So just as those people who want to advertise their product, they present the product in the TV and they want to make you somehow watch them; therefore even in-between the news, advertisements come. Then at the time of the news or advertisement, you want to go somewhere and do something, they will increase the volume; advertisers do that; volume will be high-pitch; even if you are away, it will fall in your ears. suitings, suitings, they will shoot. That is the principle, what the TV does, the sense organs do the same thing; constantly present, śabda, sparśa, rupa, rasa, gandha. It will be kept in front of your mind; take this take this; super sale, 30% offer, etc. etc. Buy two, take three; whatever has to be said, they will say and somehow they will make you buy their product. The sense organs come to the sense objects, this is the origin since the beginning.

And then what is the next nourishing base? manaḥ; the advertisement is only for one minute, even not that length; 20 seconds or 30 seconds only, because they have to pay so many lakhs of rupees for a few seconds; they spend so much money, the advertisement pushes sense object into your mind, only within a half a minute or a few second; but the problem is the mind takes over that; it has got a wonderful recording power; whereas the local recording you have to change the cassette on and off; the mind records what you saw when you were visiting Mumbai, which object, which shop, which street; all these will be remembered, whether you remember the Gīta or not; it creates a strong saṃskāra or vāsana by what; dhyāyatō-viṣayān puṃsaḥ; it is relay race, the sense organs do the first job and hands over the baton to the mind, the mind says that I will take care of the rest; and what does the mind do? It goes on dwelling: that it is wonderful, it is wonderful; it is wonderful, etc. etc. the every advertisement is bigger it is useless; even though it does not have any stuff or any value in it; I go on dwelling upon this, what is the mind's job; projection of vāsanāḥ, by what? dwelling upon it by repeating it that is nice that is nice, that is nice, it is worth having, it is worth having, it is worth having; and gradually I want it, I want it, I want it, then I say that without that I cannot survive; See where it started and where it has come. Without that I have been surviving all these years; and I am fat also, that is not understood; where is the problem of surviving also. Like the problem of the boy, who lost the non-existent scooter. Similarly even though I do not possess that object, the imaginary possession itself gives a such a nice feeling that I cannot imagine even a imaginary loss of that thing. So therefore, how does mind do that? By avrithiḥ; sense organs present, the mind repeats it; So this is the second base; manāḥ.

And what is the third-base of kāmaḥ; buddhiḥ; buddhiḥ is the intellect is the third-source, the intellect contributes to the desire by its wrong judgment, by its delusive-thinking; by its indiscriminate-attitude; and what is the wrong judgment of the intellect; that is the judgment is that external-object will make my life happier and secure. That external object or situation or person will make my life happier and more secure; and according to Vēdānta, this is the worst judgment, because Vēdānta says the external world is neither a source of joy nor a source of sorrow; external world is what? External world. And according to vēdānta; I alone am the source of joy also; I alone am the source of sorrow also. Aham ēva sukha hētuḥ; aham ēva duḥkha hētuḥ.

How can I myself be both the cause of joy and sorrow; for that vēdānta gives the example, suppose there is a garland; there is a garland, in semi darkness; it is not very bright; that garland is a nice garland; which I can take or wear or adorn any photo or anything. It is a garland; now what do I do; I mistake the garland as a snake; and that mistaken garland or the mistaken rope becomes the source of sorrow or fear. When it is seen as it is, it is not a source of sorrow or fear; whereas the mistaken rope becomes the source of fear or sorrow. Similarly vēdānta says when I understand myself as I am; it is the source of ānanda; when it is not understood, I am not understood as I am, then the very same I becomes the source-of-sorrow. Understood-I is sukha-hētuḥ; misunderstood-I is duḥkha-hētuḥ. What about the world; it is neither sukha hētu nor duḥkha hētu; how do you prove that the world is not a source of sukha or duḥkha. That also can be very easily proved; one and same object which is the source of joy for someone, the very same thing is the source of sorrow for other; and that is why when one person wants to sell the house, why because he wants to dispose it off; because he finds that he is not comfortable, he is not happy with that; there is another person, to buy it. And even people, two people get married and after some time, they say you are the source of sorrow and they decide to divorce; and the same lady somebody else is waiting to marry; and this man also wants to marry some other lady. This is going on like that; so therefore what is the source of joy for one; the same person is the source of sorrow for the other; from that it is clear, that person is neither the source of joy nor the source of sorrow.

Then I only superimpose sukha-hētutvam and duḥkha-hētutvam; therefore the desire arises because of the wrong conclusion that the external object is source of happiness; and that wrong judgment is the contribution of what, intellect; the sense organs' contribution is what; presentation of the object; mind's contribution is what? Developing a liking an addiction by repeated thinking; avrithiḥ and intellect's contribution is what; wrong judgment that this is source of happiness; and that is why Śankarācārya said: Bhaja govindam, Bhaja govindam, govindam Bhaja mudhamathē; Oh deluded man, other than govinda, other than God, there is no other source of joy in the world. samprāptē sannihitē kālē nahi rakṣati dukṛṅkaraṇē.

Now let us come to the present bases; indriyāṇi manō buddhirasyā. Asya means kāmasya-ādhiṣṭhānam; they are the nourishing factors; ētaiḥ, with the help of these three supporting bases; ētaiḥ means indriya manō buddhi rupa ādhiṣṭhānai, through these three bases, ēsaḥ vimōhayati; this desire overpowers the intelligent human being; who can learn from experiences. Such a intelligent human being is completely deluded; shattered.

And how does it delude that person? Dēhinam, this person this jīva, this intelligent human being it deludes, how? Jñānam-āvṛtya; by covering the discriminative-power; and that is why I had said in my upaniṣad introduction that for a thinking-person, every sense-object is not only not a source of ānanda; but for a thinking person, every sense-object can be only a source of sorrow; because of three defects.

The first defect is; duḥkha misritatvam; in acquiring an object there is pain, in maintaining the object, there is pain, and finally the losing the object, there is the greatest pain; that is the first defect; the second defect is any amount of acquisition does not give satisfaction, instead of enjoying, what I have, remember the watch, every time I look at the watch, I do not enjoy the presence of the watch, I am reminded of what? The missing scooter. What a tragedy; the missing scooter is reminded.

The second defect is dissatisfaction and the third defect is the more I get used to the external crutches; the more I develop dependence on them; a time comes, when I can no more be independent; you can never strengthen your leg by using crutches; you strengthen your legs only by dropping the crutches and learning to walk.

And therefore, the sense-object have got three defects, duḥkha misritatvam, atṛptikaratvam, bandhakatvam, and an intelligent person knows that but; by covering the intelligence the kāma deludes this person, he does not recognise these defects. Therefore jñānaṁ-āvṛtya dēhinam vimōhayati. So until now how kāma attacks and what are the bases of kāma have been talked about.

Now Kṛṣṇa is going to deal with how you have to handle these three bases.

Verse 3.41

तस्मात्त्वमिन्द्रियाण्यादौ नियम्य भरतर्षभ ।
पाप्मानं प्रजहि ह्येनं ज्ञानविज्ञाननाशनम् ॥३.४१॥

tasmāt tvamindriyāṅyādau niyamyā bharatarṣabha |
pāpmānaṁ prajahi hyēnaṁ jñānavijñānanāśanam ||3.41||

भरतर्षभ bharatarṣabha Oh Arjuna! तस्मात् tasmāt Therefore, नियम्य niyamyā controlling इन्द्रियाणि indriyāṅi the sense organs आदौ ādau first, त्वं प्रजहिहि tvam prajahiḥ may you give up एनं पाप्मानम् ēnaṁ pāpmānam this sinful one ज्ञानविज्ञाननाशनम् jñāna-vijñāna-nāśanam which is the destroyer of Jñāna and Vijñāna.

41. Oh Arjuna! Therefore, controlling the sense organs first, may you give up this sinful one which is the destroyer of Jñāna and Vijñāna.

So Kṛṣṇa says here; since Kāma can delude a person, and lead only to more and more dependence, you have to handle the kāma; you have to conquer the kāma, is what He wants to say in this slōkā; and here He uses the expression jñāna vijñāna nāśanam. So if kāma covers the discriminative power, what will be the consequence? He says by covering the discriminative power, kāma destroys both jñānam and vijñānam. Ātma-jñānam and ātma-vijñānam are destroyed by kāma. So here he uses two technical words; jñānam and vijñānam. Both refers to the ātma only; one gains ātma jñānam in two stages; here the first stage is called jñānam; the second stage is called vijñānam.

What is the first-stage called jñānam? In the beginning stage the teacher points out that you consist of: an individual consists of two-parts; one is the anātma, the body-mind-part; and the second is the consciousness, which is the ātma-part; this is the first-stage; ātma-anātma-vivēka.

And what is the consciousness-part; I have told you before; consciousness is not a part, product or property of the body; consciousness is an independent entity which pervades and enlivens the body; consciousness is not limited by the boundaries of the body; and the consciousness survives even after the death of the body and that consciousness is ātma, which is different from the body-mind-complex, and this teaching repeatedly has to take place; after so many hours of teaching, the student at last understands and says that now I have learnt one-thing that I have got an ātma; till now he had no belief in the ātma, he does not know at all; now he says there is an ātma, he calls it soul, he calls it spirit; and he says I have got an ātma; Then who are you; of course I am the mortal body; and behind my body there is ātma I believe in that ātma; Guru has said, it should be true and therefore I believe in that ātma.

In fact that itself is a big-stage; previously he never thought that there is something which survives death. Scientists even now do not accept; only religions talk about the soul or spirit with survives; science does not accept that. Because it is invisible; so now he says I am the body and I have a got a spirit. Now vēdānta says that this is the first stage.

And what is the second-stage-of-learning; instead of saying I-am-the-body and I-have-a-soul, ātma, we have to shift the identification and I have to learn to say: what; I-am-the-ātma and I have an incidental, temporary-medium called the body. And I operate the body sometimes; I do not operate through the body sometimes; just as the spectacles, I use for some time, and I remove the spectacles. Similarly body is a temporary-medium through which I function. That is why in waking state, I function through the body and experience the world; during sleep state, I set aside the body and I do not experience the world. How using the microscope I see the microbes; like that, when I remove the microscope I am not able to see the microbes; like that through the body scope I see the world in the waking; when I set aside the body, I do not experience the world; but am I there or not in the sleep? I am there. Therefore who am I? I am not the body, but I am the user of the body. That is what we saw in the second-chapter.

vāsāmsi jīrṇāni yathā vihāya || 2.22 ||

Just as you change the dress, you change the body also. So this requires lot of śravaṇam, lot of mananam, and much much more nidhidhyasanam; and when I say I am the ātma, it is called vijñānam.

So what is the difference between jñānam, and vijñānam. I have an ātma, is jñānam, is parōkṣa-jñānam. I am the ātma is vijñānam, aparōkṣa-jñānam.

And Kṛṣṇa says everybody has to go through jñānam and vijñānam; initially vijñānam will not come; in the initial classes, one will say that I have understood well; Swamiji; that I have an ātma, and they say, that you teach well, and give me a certificate. So through jñānam alone one has to go vijñānam. Kṛṣṇa says kāma is a big enemy because, it does not allow both jñānam and vijñānam to take place in the mind; because to get both jñānam and vijñānam, he has to come to Gīta -class, because the desires will keep him in desires; 26 hours a day; OT, now internet has come, even business in the night; now no 10-6; 24 hrs. Swamiji I have come to India but I still I work, with internet; I am not saying that you should not work; should not earn; the problem is when I have to spend my whole life in accomplishing, acquiring these things only, it means kāma has won.

If a person has got discrimination, he will also work; he will also earn; not that one should not earn; one has to earn; but the thinking that he intelligently plans his life; that whatever be the work, he will find time for this jñānam and vijñānam. and therefore when I am a slave of kāma, I won't get an opportunity for jñānam; but when kāma is my slave, I will find time; I should find time; scriptural study is compulsory for all. Generally people think, that Gīta is only for those who are good for nothing after retirement; there is no work and if he sits at home, it creates a problem and quarrels; etc. so if there are some camps etc. I am advised to go and come; why are you troubling us always; at least trouble the Swamiji for some time!! Therefore, they want to send such people to me and therefore when nothing else is to be done, they take up Gīta; many people think that Gīta is only for elderly people; when they have spent; spent forces, they have expended all their energy; and it is not according to our traditional; scriptural study is compulsory for all; kāma obstructs scriptural study; because it always, makes you say; Time is money, which was on somebody's table; why can't someone put 'Time is mōkṣa' board!! Because in Time only you get jñānam. Nobody puts Time is mōkṣa; everybody puts time is money, therefore for these two hours, if I work, I can earn something; little bit more money and therefore Kṛṣṇa says Kāma is jñāna-vijñāna-nāśanam and therefore better you handle kāma by dealing with the three bases. The details of which we will see in the next class.

Hari Om

ॐ

Arjuna asked a question to Lord Kṛṣṇa in verse No.36 and the question was what is the obstacle to the practice of karma-yōga and ultimately an obstacle to the practice of jñāna-yōga also; because the scriptures very clearly talk about karma-yōga convincingly; and they do talk about jñāna-yōga also convincingly and the human-beings have a discriminative intellect; and the human being is interested in the ultimate goal of ānanda. In spite of all these things, how come many people are not able to follow karmayōga. There seems to be some powerful obstacle, and for that Kṛṣṇa is giving the answer from verse No.37 onwards and that answer is rāga-dvēṣaḥ or kāma-krōdhaḥ which is otherwise known as mōhaḥ, delusion.

And that is why Śankarācārya wrote the well-known work of bhaja govindam, in which he addressed the people bhaja-gōvindaṃ, gōvindaṃ bhaja-mūḍhamate. Mūḍhamatiḥ means the one whose mind is caught in delusion; and this mōhaḥ, otherwise known as avivēkaḥ is nothing but confusion regarding the priorities of life; arta and kāma, wealth and entertainment becomes more important puruṣārtaḥ, compared to dharma and mōkṣaḥ; So all the human goals broadly classified into four; arta, kāma, dharma and mōkṣaḥ; ārta is wealth; kāma is entertainment; dharma is values, mōkṣaḥ is spiritual freedom. So one side there is wealth and entertainment; endless entertainment through all the channels of TV. And through the internet also now; and the other side we have got the pair of values and mōkṣaḥ, the spiritual freedom. In Kathōpaniṣad they are called prēyas and srēyas.

An intelligent human being is one who considers the srēyas as the prominent and the important one and prēyas is subservient to srēyas; and the one who has got this clarity of vision he is vivēki; non-deluded person; Kṛṣṇa tells in the 2nd chapter:

व्यवसायात्मिका बुद्धिरेकेह कुरुनन्दन..... ॥२.४१॥

vyavasāyātmikā buddhirēkēha kurunandana.

The goal of life is very clear; whereas in the case of avivēkis; deluded people, the arta kāma become more important than dharma mōkṣaḥ; this problem is called the rāgaḥ-dvēṣaḥ problem. Otherwise Kṛṣṇa calls here kāma-krōdhaḥ problem.

And of these two problems, Kṛṣṇa says, kāma is the main problem, krōdhaḥ is only a different version of the same kāma, meaning desire to complete myself. I have a sense of incompleteness; self-insufficiency; and I am struggling to make myself pūrṇaḥ; through various methods; and this struggle to complete myself is called kāmaḥ; it may be through wealth; it may be through entertainment, it maybe through people, wife, husband, children, grandchildren, status, all of them are struggles to complete myself. And Kṛṣṇa does not talk about the krōdhaḥ, the anger; because according to Kṛṣṇa, it is true also, obstructed kāma, obstructed desire alone gets converted into anger; therefore tackling kāma is indirectly tackling krōdhaḥ.

Therefore the question came, how can a person handle the kāma. And Kṛṣṇa suggested three methods as the first step. It is the first aid method; not ultimate solution; just as first aid is very important but that is not the ultimate solution, if you just give first aid and send him home, he will be finished; afterwards, we have to take to the hospital and treat; and the first aid solution to kāma is three fold, they are called damaḥ and samaḥ and vivēkaḥ.

Damaḥ means discipline of the sense organs; so filtering what enters my mind through the sense organs; there must be a board in front of the eyes, no admission without permission; trespassers will be prosecuted; unnecessary thing should not enter. Our mind is not a wastepaper basket; for everything to enter, I am particular. This is called damaḥ, indriya-nigrahaḥ.

And once things have entered my mind, they are capable of generating thoughts; I begin to live in my internally projected world; and these thoughts also I have to edit/ monitor, because these thoughts alone get converted into words and action and therefore I take care of my thoughts also; and unhealthy thought I nip in the bud itself.

अथि पुष्टन्ग युक्तोबि .स पस्छात् तेन हन्यते ॥

[jātamātram jaya śatrum, vyādhim va prasamam nayēt |
athi puṣṭāṅgō yuktōbi sa paschāt tēna hanyatē ||](#)

Two things must be nipped in the bud itself; what are the two things; Śatrum, vyādhim. Śatru means an enemy; vyādhī means a disease; if a disease is not tackled in the early stages itself, that disease can grow and destroy even the healthiest person. That is why nowadays master checkup. Only thing is it costs too much. The idea is if the disease is detected in the beginning, you can solve. Another thing which has to be nipped in the bud is the enemy; there the verse talks about the external enemy. We should extend it to our internal enemy. Any negative thought can become my own ānthara śatru. The fifth column like a terrorist or militant; they are very much within the country; which makes it difficult to handle. In Punjab we faced, in Kashmir we are facing; a clean open war we can fight and win; but this war is very difficult to win; because the enemy is within the country.

Similarly an unhealthy thought is like a militant or terrorist; so this internal enemy in the form of an unhealthy thought is like a terrorist or militant which can obstruct my spiritual pursuit and therefore handling the thoughts; disciplining my thoughts; life is the second method, which we call samaḥ.

So sensory-discipline method one; mental discipline is method two; and the third discipline is vivēkaḥ. Vivēkaḥ is thinking.

Kṛṣṇa has to tell this because generally we do not think; because if we really think, many of these things that we are doing now, we will not be doing; our problem is either non-thinking, or careful wrong thinking; like that person who saw a house with a low door; in villages the door is very low; and this person is a tall person; so many people hit their heads while walking; somebody gave a warning; it is very low be careful. therefore just bend and go and this person wanted to be careful and started bending from here itself and exactly when he came near the door, he raised his head and was hit and got a bump. That is called thoughtful mistakes; there are two types of mistakes; one is thoughtless mistake; another is thoughtful mistake; and what is that vivēkaḥ; understanding that anything external in itself is incomplete thing; a finite thing. I, a finite being, by the acquisition or possession or relation with any finite thing, I can never become infinite. Finite plus finite is equal to finite. You get the whole world as your property, you will be incomplete; you get the whole solar system as your property, still you will be incomplete; you get the whole galaxy as your property, you will be incomplete.

Therefore we find in Kathōpaniṣad a 9 year old boy says; na vittēna tarpaṇīyō manuṣyaḥ; any amount of material possession will not satisfy a human being. The logic behind is finite-plus-finite is only finite. Insecure person gets a few more insecure things; it will only be insecure-plus-insecure; husband is insecure, wife is insecure; insecure-husband plus insecure-wife is more-insecure; previously he was worried about himself only; now worried about wife also; and gets an insecure child; it becomes insecurity cubed; and he gets extra money, and that is again, this money is insecure.

A little bit thinking; you do not require a Phd for that; a lit bit thinking is enough; in spite of this, if there is any doubt, interview any person who has got maximum possessions and highest position, he will tell you that he is maximum insecure. Ask Clinton he will tell; impeachment sword is just above his head; rightly or wrongly he is saved. Who is secure? Therefore security and fullness I have to find in myself or I can never find. This must be crystal clear; this is called vivēkaḥ. Either I am ever-secure or I am never-secure; Either I am ever full or I am never full; So this is called vivēka. World is neither a source of joy, nor a source of sorrow; world is world, I am the source of joy and I am the source of sorrow; mistaken-I is source of sorrow; taken-I is the source of happiness.

Thus, dhamāḥ, Samāḥ and vivēkaḥ are three what you call threefold disciplines, dhamāḥ at sensory level, samāḥ at mental level and vivēkaḥ at the intellectual level;

And Kṛṣṇa says of these three disciplines, which one should be the first step?

What should be the order? Kṛṣṇa says; damāḥ is the first; First start disciplining your sense organs beginning with your tongue. Tongue first; in Tamil; நாவ் அடங்கினால், நாலும் அடங்கும் nāv aṭaṅkiṅāḷ, nālum aṭaṅkum. There is such a statement. Nālum means the other four sense organs. That is my opinion; I do not know about the original commentary. Nāvu is one sense organ; if you master your tongue, both the eating-tongue, entrance; and talking-tongue, exit, is discipline that; therefore Kṛṣṇa said in verse No.41, tasmāt tvamindriyāṅyādaḥ niyamyā; therefore Arjuna start with the discipline of your sense organs; and by way of that pāpmānaḥ prajāḥ hyenaḥ handle, master the problem of kāma; and what type of kāma, not only it is an obstacle to karma-yōga, jñāna-vijñāna-nāśanam, it is an obstacle to jñāna-yōga also, it destroys both jñānam and vijñānam.

And I told you in the last class; I hope you remember, long gap, jñānam is brahman, vijñānam is that brahman I-am. Parōkṣaḥ jñānam is jñānam; aparōkṣa-jñānam is vijñānam; both jñānam and vijñānam are threatened by this kāma, and therefore if you interested in these two, better learn to handle this.

Verse 3.42

इन्द्रियाणि पराण्याहुरिन्द्रियेभ्यः परं मनः ।
मनसस्तु परा बुद्धिर्यो बुद्धे परतस्तु सः ॥३.४२॥

indriyāṇi parāṅyāhurindriyēbhyaḥ param manah |
manasastu parā buddhiryō buddhēḥ paratastu saḥ || 3.42 ||

आहुः इन्द्रियाणि āhuḥ indriyāṇi They declare the sense organs पराणि parāṇi (to be) superior to (the sense-objects) मनः manah the mind is परम् इन्द्रियेभ्यः param indriyēbhyaḥ superior to the intellect, बुद्धिः buddhiḥ The intellect is indeed तु परा मनसः tu parā manasaḥ superior to the mind. यः परतः yaḥ parataḥ – That which is superior बुद्धेः budhdēḥ to the intellect तु सः tu saḥ is indeed that (Self)

42. They declare the sense organs to be superior to (the sense-objects). The mind is superior to the intellect. The intellect is indeed superior to the mind. That which is superior to the intellect is indeed that (Self).

I said that these three fold disciplines is only the first aid. This is not the ultimate solution; it is only a temporary stop gap solution, like two types of medicine, palliative medicine and curative medicine. Palliative medicine is, it will give you temporary relief; you take cough syrup, for one hour you would not cough. The effect is gone, the cough will come back; it is only a temporary solution.

Then what is the ultimate solution; temporary solution you should take; just as first aid is compulsory; damaḥ-samaḥ-vivēka are compulsory; but do not stop with these three; having got temporary relief from kāma, you have to go to the permanent solution.

And what is that permanent solution; ātma jñānam ēva. Self-knowledge alone is the ultimate-solution. Why do we say so? What is the logic behind it? The logic is this; desire is an expression of a symptom of sense of incompleteness. Why do I want things; because without that I am incomplete. Incompleteness expressed is desire; that is why we always ask? What is your kurai? then he says everything is there; but no child; no grandchild, etc. etc. only girl children not there; something or the other; I told you about the tampura sṛuti; I want I want; it continues. Therefore desire is an expression of apūrṇatvam and it will go only by the discovery of pūrṇatvam. Aham pūrṇaḥ asmi; pūrṇaḥ, not the sweet pūrṇam; this is vēdantic pūrṇathvam; pūrṇam means full and complete; I do not lack anything; I do not need anything.

न चास्य सर्वभूतेषु कश्चिदर्थव्यपाश्रयः ॥ ३.१८ ॥

naiva tasya kṛtēnārthō nākṛtēnēha kaścana |
na cāsya sarvabhūteṣu kaścidarthavyapāśrayaḥ || 3.18 || and in the second-chapter,

प्रजहाति यदा कामान् सर्वान् पार्थ मनोगतान् ।
आत्मन्येवऽऽत्मना तुष्टः..... ॥ २.५५ ॥

prajahāti yadā kāmān sarvān pārtha manogatān|
ātmanyēva"tmanā tuṣṭaḥ..... || 2.55 ||

When I am full and complete, I do not need anything; whatever around is luxury. Dayānanda Swamiji beautifully says converting everything around to luxury is Mōkṣaḥ. What is luxury; whatever you possess, you enjoy; when it is not there, you do not miss; that is called luxury; but if you miss that object, it is no more luxury; it has become a necessity. So when the things around are necessities, it is bondage; when the things around me are luxuries, it is called mōkṣaḥ. The very presence of body is a luxury. That Bhagavān has given eyes is luxury; that hands and legs are there is luxury; you will know value hair is there; that is a luxury, when you know many people struggling to get some kind of hair on their head; at least pseudo or patch up, when they struggle only, you have to meditate that you have luxurious hair; whatever be the colour. It is there; it is a blessing; therefore Mōkṣaḥ, aham pūrṇaḥ.

And that is possible only through ātma jñānam and therefore in these two verses, 42 and 43, Kṛṣṇa talks about ātma-jñānam as the ultimate remedy for kāma-krōdhaḥ problem.

And to talk about ātma-jñānam Kṛṣṇa has to define ātma. What is ātma; And we get the definition of ātma in this verse; it is an important verse; this verse is borrowed teaching from Kathōpaniṣad. In the Kathōpaniṣad there are two well-known mantras:

इन्द्रियेभ्यः परा ह्यर्था अर्थेभ्यश्च परं मनः ।
मनसस्तु परा बुद्धिर्बुद्धेरात्मा महान्परः ॥ १० ॥
महतः परमव्यक्तमव्यक्तात्पुरुषः परः ।
पुरुषान्न परं किञ्चित्सा काष्ठा सा परा गतिः ॥ ११ ॥

indriyēbhyaḥ parā hyarthā arthēbhyaśca param̃ manaḥ |
manasastu parā buddhirbuddhērātmā mahānparaḥ || 10||
mahataḥ paramavyaktamavyaktātpuruṣaḥ paraḥ |
puruṣānna param̃ kiñcitsā kāṣṭhā sā parā gatiḥ || 11||

Those two verses, Kṛṣṇa condenses in this verse; and here Kṛṣṇa is revealing the ātma, through a particular method called Arundanthi-darśana nyāya. Arundathi-darśana nyāya means gradual revelation.

In Arundathi-darśana, during the wedding; so one has to see the Arundathi star and this Arundathi star is extremely subtle and therefore a person cannot directly see; therefore first one has to show the grossest one like the moon, therefore you show the grossest luminary that is the moon, then you say you just see in that direction there is a bright star; from that you see the third one and then you go to that; each time the person asks, is this Arundathi, and you have to say No. then he shows the next one, and thus in few stages, he reveals the Arundathi. This gradual revelation is Arundathi-darśana-nyāya or śāka-chandra-nyāya. You show the tree, then show the branch, then take the tip of the branch, then show two twigs which are bifurcating and between two twigs you ask the person to see and that is the star.

Now the vēdānta uses the same method of revealing the ātma step by step; it is otherwise known as pañca-kōśa-vivēka. Arundathi-darśana-nyāya is otherwise pañca-kōśa-vivēkaḥ; First reveal the grossest, then subtle, then subtle, then subtle.

And here the word used is parāḥ; a very significant word, literally the word parāḥ means superior. So a gradation of superior thing is shown, this is superior, superior to that the next one, superior to that is next, and the superior most is the ātma.

And this word parā has got lot of philosophical-significance also, which Śankarācārya explains in his Kathōpaniṣad commentary; he says the word parāḥ signifies three things; simple meaning is superior; but it signifies three-features;

- sukṣmāḥ, mahanthaḥ, prathyagātma būthasca; so that which is superior is subtle, a subtler thing is called a superior thing; that is meaning No.1;
- and the second-meaning is mahanthaḥ; air is still subtle; as you go subtler and subtler it becomes more and more pervasive and when you come space, the ākaśa; it is extremely subtle and therefore it is all pervading. Therefore superior means No.1, subtle, No.2 more pervading;
- and No.3 Śankarācārya says; it is more closer to you; more closer to you. Prathgātma būthasca; so this gradation is talked about; we have to take our mind along with these steps and then ultimately we land in the ātma.

And there is the fourth idea also, which is not directly mentioned by Kṛṣṇa, but to the taken note of here is: a subtler thing controls a grosser thing. Subtler thing is more powerful, capable of controlling a grosser thing.

Keeping this we will see the gradation; indriyāṇi-parāṇyāhu; the sense organs are superior ones compared to the sense objects; the sense organs are parāṇi superior to the sense objects; why? Because the very existence of sense objects is proved by the sense organs alone; for a blind person, the world of forms and colours does not exist; therefore the existence of forms and colours depend upon what? The very sense organ. And therefore compared to the external world; sense organs are superior.

Then Kṛṣṇa says indriyēbhyaḥ param manaḥ; superior to the sense organs is the mind; because the sense organs can function as sense organs only when the mind is there to back; if the mind is not behind, you cannot see. Suppose you are in a railway station, you are going to receive someone, very very crowded and you are looking for that person, your mind is occupied with the thought of that person, and the other people come and pass you, you do not notice. And sometimes they complain also; I came in front of you and you did not smile; you do not smile at all. What happened?

Then he goes on building up also; I saw the other day, he was moving up with my enemy. and he must have put in some word; therefore he also should have become, build up and we kill ourselves, simple reason is he was preoccupied therefore the mind was not behind the eyes; and that is why in English we have an idiom, blank look, means eyes are open but no perception takes place.

Similarly sometimes in the class, ears are open, no hearing takes place and that is why I stop the class exactly on time; because our mind is tuned for one hour class; if I say one and half hour class, you will listen; but if I say one hour and take one and half hours, exceed, it is switched off. That is why I am very very punctual; do not think that I am very very punctual; reason is selfish. Because I want you to hear me; because the mind is elsewhere; and that is why

Brhadārṇyaka says

तान्यात्मनेऽकुरुतान्यत्रमना अभूवं नादर्शमन्यत्रमना अभूवं नाश्रौषमिति मनसा ह्येव पश्यति मनसा शृणोति ।
बृहदारण्यकोपनिषत् पञ्चमं ब्राह्मणम् ॥ ३ ॥

surely through mind alone you are really seeing or hearing; therefore eye is an eye only when it is backed by the mind; and therefore mind is superior to a sense organ;

Then manasasthu parā-buddhi; superior to the mind is the intellect; mind has got mainly two fold functions, one is emotions; and another is doubt; saṅkalpa vikalpathmakam manaḥ; saṅkalpa vikalpatha means to be or not to be, to go or not to go, to eat or not to eat; always doubting faculty is called mind; and emotions also; now both the emotions and doubts can be controlled by knowledge; your discriminative power; in fact that is what a jñāni accomplishes;

अशोच्यानन्वशोचस्त्वं प्रज्ञावादांश्च भाषसे

aśōcyānanvaśōcastvaṃ prajñāvādāṃśca bhāṣasē gatāsūnagatāsūṃśca nānuśōcanti paṇḍitāḥ ||2.11||

Wise people are not under the grip of emotions. Not that they do not have emotions; very careful; minus emotions there is no difference between jñāni and a rock; they are different because we have got sentiments or emotions. What I say, jñāni is not free from emotions, jñāni is not under the grip of emotions, because he knows how to handle them, because of his wisdom; most of the emotions are because of ignorance; unintelligent judgement of situations; wrong perceptive; jealousy, hatred, most of them are unintelligent responses.

Therefore through intellect, emotions can be handled, through intellect; doubts also can be handled; in fact any doubt will go only by clear knowledge and therefore buddhi is capable of handling the mind that is why in Kathōpaniṣad, a beautiful analogy is given; the body is like a chariot; the sense organs are like the horses; mind is like the reins controlling the horses; and buddhi is like the driver; who alone controls the reins and through the reins, controls the horses and through the horses, controls the very direction of the life's journey and therefore Kṛṣṇa says manasastu parā buddhi; vijñānamāya-kōśa is superior to manō maya kōśa. Intellect is superior to mind; rational intellect is superior to emotional mind.

Then what is superior to intellect? He says, yō buddhēḥ paratastu saḥ; that which is superior to even the intellect is saḥ; is the ātma; saḥ means, ātma. Ātma is superior to the intellect also and what do you mean by ātma, is the consciousness because of which I am aware of the very intellect, its knowledge and its ignorance. So when you say I know, I ask you the question, how do you know you know, you say I know English; I ask the question how do you know, you say I know; you say I know I know English; that means what, the knowledgeable condition of the intellect I am aware of; therefore intellect is also an object of my awareness; the knowledge in the intellect is also an object of my awareness; and then I ask you, do you know Chinese; then you say I do not know; then I ask the question how do you know. No Swamiji I know, what do you know; I know I do not know Chinese.

So I do not know is another quality of the intellect; quality of ignorance, therefore not only I am aware of the knowledgeable mind I am also aware of the ignorant mind; both knowledge and ignorance are properties of the intellect; which I am aware of.

Therefore I am neither intellect; nor am I knowledge, nor am I ignorance, I am the consciousness who am aware of the intellect and its property of knowledge as well as ignorance. That I, who is neither the body, nor the sense organs, nor the mind, nor the intellect, all these four are the objects of my knowledge; body is the object of my knowledge; mind is the object of my knowledge; senses are the object of my knowledge.

Again Dayānanda Swami beautifully says when you want to test your eyes or ears; the doctor asks the question do you see; why can't he find out; Swamiji says; I thought that because he is an American doctor; with advanced equipment he will know what I can see and what I cannot. But he puts an empty frame and puts different glasses and asks me: do you see; that means what; I know whether I see and I know whether I do not see. Therefore seeing property of the sense organs and non-seeing property of the sense organ I am aware of; the hearing property of sense organ, the non-hearing property of sense organ.

sauguṇyavaigūṇyavaśāddhi cakṣuṣaḥ ||101||

In Vivēkacūdāmaṇi, Śankarācārya beautifully says; mandaḥ; total deaf; is one thing; mandaḥ, ears are slightly dull; dullness of the ear; sharpness of the ears, total deafness of the ear, all I am aware of. The world is object; body is object; then sense organs are object; mind is object; intellect is object; I am object. No. I am ever the subject; who am aware of all the objects. And I the subject can never be objectified; if I the subject can never be objectified; how do I know I am existent? suppose somebody asks? If I the subject cannot be objectified; how do I know I am existent. What is the proof; you do not require any proof; the very availability of the object, is the proof for the presence of subject; that I have got eyes; I do not see my eyes? I do not see; but the very fact that I am seeing every one of you is the proof for my eye. I do not see; but the very fact that I am able to see you is the proof.

When you take a picture, in that picture so many people are there; and you conclude that if there are 9 people in the picture for that programme at least 10 people must have gone. Suppose you say, automatic photograph, I will ask you the question; camera is there or not; camera is never seen in the picture; camera's existence is never doubted. I the awareness is never seen, but its existence can never be questioned and that I the awareness which proves everything but which does not require any proof. That awareness is the ātma; and this ātma I should know or I should own up as myself.

Then what will happen? That is said in the last verse.

Verse 3.43

एवम् बुद्धेः परं बुद्ध्वा संस्तभ्यात्मानमात्मना ।

जहि शत्रुं महाबाहो कामरूपं दुरासदम् ॥ ३.४३ ॥

ēvam buddhēḥ param buddhvā saṁstabhya ātmānamātmanā |
jahi śatruṁ mahābāhō kāmarūpaṁ durāsadam || 3.43 ||

महाबाहो mahābāhō Oh Arjuna! एवं बुद्ध्वा ēvam buddhvā thus knowing (the Self) परं बुद्धेः param-budhdēḥ which is beyond the intellect, संस्तभ्य आत्मानं saṁstabhya ātmānam steadying the mind आत्मना ātmanā with the mind, जहि दुरासदं jahi durāsadam conquer the elusive enemy शत्रुम् कामरूपम् śatrum kāmarūpaṁ which is in the form of desire.

43. Oh Arjuna! Thus knowing (the Self) which is beyond the intellect, and steadying the mind with the mind, conquer the enemy which is in the form of elusive desire.

So Arjuna, your ultimate task is knowing this ātma, the caitanya tatvam. And what type of chaitanya tatvam; budhdēḥ-param; which is superior to even the intellect, which is the objectifier of even the intellect; which is the subject behind the intellect; that ātma the consciousness you should own up.

And what is the nature of that consciousness; I have discussed before.

- Consciousness is not part, product or property of the body;
- Consciousness is an independent entity which pervades and enlivens the body;
- Consciousness is not limited by the boundaries of the body;
- consciousness survives even after the fall of the body;
- that surviving consciousness cannot interact because of the want of, because of the lack of medium.

So that boundless consciousness and what is the example I give, like the light pervading the hand; but which is not limited by the boundaries of the hand; just as the boundless light is all-pervading but beyond the hand, you do not see the light, but it is there. Similarly, the consciousness is in the body; and it is beyond the boundaries of the body; this sat-cit-ānanda ātma one should know.

And it is not sufficient to know that there is consciousness; more important is learning to train our mind to own up the formless consciousness as the real-I; the formed-body is not the real-I; the formless-consciousness is the real-I.

One western author, Wayne Dyer; who writes beautifully, who is influenced by Indian philosophic teaching; he says when you shift the I, from the formful-body formed-body, to the formless-consciousness, that is called transformation. What is the real-transformation in life? In converting the thin-body to fat-body; not by converting by regular walking; fat-body to thin-body; that is not the real-transformation; the real-transformation is transcending the form. And then what is that? I am the formless-consciousness. Then what about the body and mind? just as I use the spectacles consisting of two glasses; to transact with the world; the body and mind are like the spectacle which I use to transact with the world, during waking, I use the body and mind and transact; during sleep what do I do, body and mind are set aside, that is why I am not able to transact. Transacting-I is absent in sleep; but am I absent in sleep? Non-transacting-I still continues.

What is the proof? That is why happily go to sleep; if sleep is the death of the individual, if sleep is the death of the individual; nobody will go to sleep. We will all stay awake by all means. Now I know during sleep the transacting-I alone is gone; the non-transacting non-located-I continues. Therefore body-and-mind I use and set aside, therefore they are the media, they are not me.

न च श्रोत्रजिह्वे न च घ्राणनेत्रे ।
न च व्योमभूमिः न तेजो न वायुः
चिदानंदरूपः शिवोऽहं शिवोऽहम् ॥ ātma śatkam १ ॥

manōbuddhyahamkāracittāni nāham
na ca śrōtrajivhē na ca ghrāṇanētrē |
na ca vyōmabhūmiḥ na tējō na vāyuh
cidānamdarūpaḥ śivō:'ham śivō:'ham || ātma śatkam 1||

So this is the vēdāntic training. And then what should you do? Ātmanā ātmānam samstabhya; by claiming this new identity, we have to remove the previous orientation; that I am a finite-mortal-insecure-individual is my orientation. Right from birth, my orientation is that I am finite-and-mortal; and I cannot be happy within myself; I require to be fine; to be OK; as a baby bālastāvat-krīḍāsaktaḥ, I wanted the balloons, we want computer game; now 21st century, people will not understand balloons; one Bharatha nātyam teacher was telling about Yaśōda churning the buttermilk; so they have got the symbolism; what is that; no more that is there; so now I have changed the milk-churning-mudra to using of the mixie. So Bharatha nātya mudra is changed hereafter; where is curd churning; no milk at all.

So therefore, the orientation we have to change and new orientation comes; that is called jñāna-niṣṭa. Kṛṣṇa says ātmanā ātmānam samstabhya; svikṛtya, internalise this teaching; steady this teaching; to use the second-chapter language; sthira-prajñāḥ bhāva. What is the difference between prajñāḥ and sthira prajñāḥ? If you are only prajñāḥ; this knowledge is alive in this playground; the moment the class is over, and the chappal is on, the good-old-miserable-bitter-limited-angry-restless-irritable-irritated; that person comes; again if you come to the class, it is good; whereas if I am a sthira prajñā this knowledge continues and it is available whenever I need. So ready availability of knowledge during crisis is called jñāna-niṣṭa; otherwise it is ஏட்டு சுரைக்காய் கறிக்கு உதவாது eṭṭu curaikkāy kaṛikku utavātu.

And how do you that? By nidhidhyāsanam; by dwelling upon this teaching in any manner; either by sharing with someone, or by reflecting within myself; or I write or I teach, I do something or the other; that dwelling is important. So Ātma here means the mind, so steady your mind, ātmanaḥ, with the mind, steady your mind with the mind, which means by the practice of meditation, by the practice dwelling upon the teaching, re-living the teaching is meditation.

Meditation is not sitting with closed eyes; re-living the teaching, either by reading, writing or thinking, etc. or sharing or teaching, is all re-living; samstabhya; jahi śatrum mahābāhō. When you own up this consciousness as myself; I discover pūrṇatvaṁ; because the physical body alone is limited, but I-the-formless-ātma is not limited at all. And this owning up of the pūrṇatvaṁ removes all the wants.

In fact everything is in me-the-consciousness; what do I miss in life? And therefore śatruṁ jahi; Arjuna may you destroy your enemy, kāma rūpam; which is in the form of insatiable want; greed, yearning, urge, in the form of desire; whatever enemy is there; what type of kāma it is? durāsadam; which is incomprehensible, which is very difficult to understand; because majority has not yet understood what is kāma and that is why they try to fulfil the kāma by acquisition; na karmaṇā na prajayā dhanēna, tyāgē naikē amṛtatva mānaśuḥ; that they did not know; therefore this incomprehensible inscrutable kāma you just give up only by pūrṇatvaṁ owning. So this is the ultimate solution. Thus first aid damaḥ-samaḥ and vivēkaḥ; and ātma-jñānam is the ultimate-solution and once kāma is handled; krōdhaḥ is also automatically handled.

053 CHAPTER 03, SUMMARY

ॐ

Today I will give you a summary of the 3rd chapter, which we have just completed. As the very title of the chapter indicates, this is a chapter elaborating the topic of karma-yōga and the background for this chapter is Arjuna's doubt which he expresses in the beginning of this chapter, and Arjuna's doubt is based on the Lord's teaching of the second-chapter.

In the second-chapter, Lord Kṛṣṇa has dealt with both jñāna-yōga and karma-yōga; but you find that Lord Kṛṣṇa has focused more on jñāna-yōga; its very teaching starts with the jñāna-yōga and the Lord starts with saying that the wise alone will be free from sorrow.

अशोच्यानन्वशोचस्त्वं प्रजावादांश्च भाषसे
गतासूनगतासूंश्च नानुशोचन्ति पण्डिताः ॥२.११॥

aśōcyānvanvaśōcastvaṃ prajñāvādāṃśca bhāṣasē gatāsūnagatāsūṃśca nānuśōcanti paṇḍitāḥ ||2.11||

Thus Kṛṣṇa's teaching begins with the glorification of knowledge as a means of liberation. And in the second-chapter Kṛṣṇa concludes the teaching also by glorifying sthira prajñā, describing his knowledge as brāhmī sthitiḥ,

एषा ब्राह्मी स्थितिः पार्थ नैनां प्राप्य विमुह्यति ।
स्थित्वाऽस्यामन्तकालेऽपि ब्रह्मनिर्वाणमृच्छति ॥२.७२॥
[ēṣā brāhmī sthitiḥ pārtha naināṃ prāpya vimuhyati |
sthitvā'syāmantakālē'pi brahmanirvāṇamṛcchati ||2.72||](#)

Thus Kṛṣṇa begins with jñāna-yōga and ends with jñāna-yōga, in between Kṛṣṇa talks about karma-yōga and asks Arjuna to fight.

योगस्थः कुरु कर्माणि सङ्गं त्यक्त्वा धनञ्जय ।
सिद्धिं असिद्ध्योः समो भूत्वा समत्वं योग उच्यते ॥ २.४८॥
[yōgasthaḥ kuru karmāṇi saṅgaṃ tyaktvā dhanañjaya |
siddhyasiddhyōḥ samō bhūtvā samatvaṃ yōga ucyatē ||2.48||](#)

Arjuna, may you do karma. Even though Kṛṣṇa has made the teaching very clear, because of Arjuna's filtered listening; he does not grasp the teaching very clearly; and therefore he gets a doubt.

And that doubt is: if jñāna-yōga is very important, and jñāna-yōga alone leads to liberation; Oh Lord, you should persuade me to take to jñāna-yōga. On the other hand, you are glorifying jñāna-yōga and ultimately you are advising me to follow karma-yōga; you glorify karma-yōga and asks me to do Karma, understandable. You glorify jñāna-yōga, and ask me to follow jñāna, it is wonderful. But you glorify jñāna-yōga and ask me to do karma; it looks unacceptable to me; it is like advertising a product and saying therefore you buy the other product. So therefore the third chapter begins with Arjuna's question which happens to be introduction to this chapter.

With this background we will enter into the chapter proper. From verse No.1 to 7, we get the introduction; in which Arjuna asks the question, Kṛṣṇa tell me, which is better, should I follow jñāna-yōga or should I follow karma-yōga; which is a better path for liberation? And if you consider jñāna-yōga is better, please do not ask me to fight this war, especially the war which I cannot take to at all. So it is comparison of the relative superiority of karma-yōga and jñāna-yōga; that is what Arjuna wants.

And in the introductory portion, Kṛṣṇa makes certain fundamentals very clear, and which is very important for every seeker to know and the points that we have to note in this context is:

No.1: there is no choice between karma-yōga and jñāna-yōga. Therefore we can never ask the question, which one is better. You can choose between two types of pants, which pant is better to wear; you can choose between two types of shirts; which shirt is better; you do not ask the question pant is better or shirt is better. Why? Because there is no choice between these two. If karma-yōga is one means of liberation, and jñāna-yōga is another alternative means of liberation, then you can ask the question, which one is better; but our scriptures have never accepted more number of means for liberation for us to choose. It is very clear that the jñāna-yōga is the only means of liberation; so there is no question of whether to follow jñāna-yōga or not; the only choice is whether you want mōkṣaḥ or not; and if I am a mumukṣu I have no choice with regard to jñāna-yōga.

And the next problem that I face is, if I have to take to jñāna-yōga, I have to possess the required qualification; not only for jñāna-yōga; anything in life requires qualification. Whether you want to play cricket, whether you want to undergo a treatment, whether you want to learn music; music also requires some basic qualification. So jñāna-yōga also requires the qualification; and most of us do not have the qualification; which is purity and maturity and detachment.

And this qualification, therefore, we have to acquire before entering jñāna-yōga; and the qualifications can be acquired only through karma-yōga; there also no choice; so qualifications can be acquired only through karma-yōga; mōkṣaḥ can be acquired only through jñāna-yōga; therefore the essence of our scriptural teaching is follow karma-yōga, acquire qualifications, follow jñāna-yōga, attain mōkṣaḥ. This is the chakani raja margamu of the vēdās; there is no question of any confusion; any other confusion is our creation.

And if you talk of any other yōga, they all will be combined in karma-yōga. If you talk about aṣṭāṅga-yōga, that is part of karma-yōga. If you talk of japa yōga, it is part of karma-yōga; if you talk of varieties of meditation on various dēvathās, that is part of karma-yōga. Any yōga you name, it will be clubbed; it will be within the fold of karma-yōga; and by following that karma-yōga; one should acquire qualifications, then follow jñāna-yōga and attain mōkṣaḥ; therefore Arjuna, your question is wrong; never ask which yōga is better; follow both.

But there is a choice with regard to the life style that you should take to; so there is something called pravṛtti mārga, a life in society, with family, children, with activities etc. which is called pravṛtti mārga, there is another lifestyle which is called nivṛtti mārga, where I do not take any responsibility, no family, no possession, no work, nothing; one is called gṛhastha-āśrama, another is called sanyāsa-āśrama; between the two ways of life; which we call as Niṣṭa. With regard to Niṣṭa you have choice.

And whatever be the lifestyle that you choose, you have to follow both the sādhana. therefore a choose a gṛhasthā-āśrama life style, you have to follow karma-yōga and you have to follow jñāna-yōga; and if you choose sanyāsa-āśrama life style, there also you have to do karma, known as sanyāsa-āśrama vihitha karmāṇi; for sannyāsi also karmas suitable to sannyāsi, are there; which is indicated by the danḍa; for a gṛhasthā-āśrama karma is represented by sacred thread; for a sanyāsa-āśrami, his karmas are represented by danḍa.

And Kṛṣṇa says, Arjuna whatever be your lifestyle you follow both and attain liberation. And naturally the question will come, if there is a choice between gṛhastha-āśrama, and sanyāsa-āśrama, which one is better. And Kṛṣṇa openly says, between the two āśramas, gṛhastha-āśrama is better for 95% or 96% or 97% or 98% or 99% percent or 99.99%. If an unfit person takes to sannyāsa-āśrama, it will bring down the very glory of sanyāsa-āśrama and in the society, sannyāsis will come under a joking matter. I hear that in most of TV dramas, they are digging at sanyāsīs. All kinds of things are coming; the sanyāsa-āśrama as a whole, and sanyāsīs as a whole will be brought down; and therefore gṛhastha-āśrama is safe.

So therefore in the introduction Kṛṣṇa's teaching is: Arjuna, continue in gṛhasthā-āśrama, do your duty, purify the mind, acquire knowledge and be free by becoming a jñāni gṛhastha. And a jñāni-gṛhastha is liberated and superior to an ajñāni sanyāsi; a jñāni gṛhastha is better and superior to an ajñāni sanyāsi and Kṛṣṇa gives himself as an example. You see I am a mahā gṛhasthaḥ; because 16,008 wives; not one or two; somebody asked Swamiji it seems: That you are worshipping Kṛṣṇa who has got 16,008 wives; does he deserve worship. Swamiji said that I am worshipping only because he manages 16,008. You fools are not able to one keep one wife happy and if Kṛṣṇa can make 16,008 wives happy, he requires 16,008 namaskāra. Like that; this is the introductory portion; the most important mantra is

लोकेऽस्मिन्निविधा निष्ठा पुरा प्रोक्ता मयाऽनघ ।
ज्ञानयोगेन सांख्यानं कर्मयोगेन योगिनाम् ॥ ३.३ ॥

lōkē:'smindvividhā niṣṭhā purā prōkttā mayā:'nagha |
jñānayōgēna sāmkyānām karmayōgēna yōginām || 3.3 ||

Two lifestyles are there; Take to anyone lifestyle; follow both the sādhanas and be free; this is from verse No.1 to 7.

Then from Verse No. 8 to 20, Kṛṣṇa elaborately discusses the topic of karma-yōga.

So what is karma-yōga? I told you karma-yōga is a mixture of two words; karma and yōga and karma means proper-action and yōga meaning proper attitude; proper-action plus proper-attitude is karma-yōga.

Then the next question is: what is proper action? The scriptures divide the actions into three types; sātvik, rajasic and tāmasic actions. Sātvik action is the best action; rājasic action is mediocre; and the tāmasic action is the worst. Why? Because sātvik action promotes spiritual growth the maximum; whereas rājasic action promotes the spiritual growth only less compared to sātvik whereas tāmasic actions not only do not promote spiritual growth, it will take a person away from spirituality.

Therefore this gradation is based on spiritual benefit or mental purity; and what is the general definition of sātvik action; all those actions in which the beneficiaries are more, that will come under sātvik action; if the beneficiary is my entire family, some sātvik, and it expands further into the village, still better, it goes to the entire state, still better, goes to the entire nation, it is still better, it goes to the entire humanity, it is still better; it goes to the entire living beings, it is still better, the more the number of beneficiaries, the more sātvik the action is, and the more the purity is.

And rājasic-action is that action in which the beneficiaries are lesser and confined only the family or not even family only myself, I am not bothered about others in the family. Utterly selfish-action will come under rājasic action; where the purity is minimum or less; and the tāmasic action is harmful action, in which I get the benefit and all the other people are harmed. And Kṛṣṇa says Arjuna a karma-yōgi will take to more and more of sātvik action and the scriptures will themselves prescribe pañca-mahā-yajñās as a set of sātvik actions. And I do not want to go to the topic of pañca-mahā-yajña; you must be recollecting. This is proper action.

Then Kṛṣṇa talks about the proper attitude, which is the attitude of samatvam, maintaining the equanimity of mind. And how does one maintain the samatvam; Kṛṣṇa prescribes two methods; one is Īśvarārpaṇa-buddhi, dedicating all actions to the Lord; so that you do not dislike any action. When you are forced to do an action you do not like, there is a tremendous strain.

Those people who go to work without liking their job, there is a tremendous strain and five days a week, six days a week; 8 hours a day, I am doing something I do not like; imagine what a tremendous mental strain a person has to undergo. You get physically and mentally exhausted very quickly and within 40 years you grow old; because there is a constant split personality, I do not like to do this; but I have to do this.

In karma-yōga, what we do is if I cannot get the action that I like, then learn to like whatever action you have to do. If I cannot get a job that I like; better I learn to like whatever I have to do; how do I develop the liking; by dedicating that action to the Lord; and as a bhaktā, I do not want to do any action; I do not want to offer any action to the Lord half-heartedly. Therefore, to maintain Samatvam, I should love my career, my profession, whatever job I have to do; this is called Īśvarārpaṇa-buddhi.

This is not only sufficient; for my actions I am reaping results constantly; not only I am a karta, simultaneously I am a bhōktā; every moment the results of my past-action are coming; not only the result of the immediate-past but the result of the remote-past also; that is why some people get confused; I am leading such a very nice life; how come I am suffering; they forget the fact that my present-experience is not the result of, need not be the result of my present-life; my present-experiences can be the result of the remote-past also; that is why I lead a good life and suffering come; like Dharmaputra suffering and Nala suffering; many noble ones have suffered. And how can I accept that; the only way is learning to accept all the experiences as Īśvara prasāda. Thus as a kartā, develop Īśvarārpaṇa-buddhi, as a bhōktā, develop prasāda-buddhi; Īśvarārpaṇa-buddhi plus prasāda-buddhi is equal to samatvam. Buddhi here means attitude. The attitude of dedicating every action to the Lord and attitude of accepting every experience as Īśvara's gift and Kṛṣṇa says:

योगस्थः कुरु कर्माणि सङ्गं त्यक्त्वा धनञ्जय ।
सिद्धिं असिद्ध्योः समो भूत्वा समत्वं योग उच्यते ॥२.४८॥

[yōgasthaḥ kuru karmāṇi saṅgaṃ tyaktvā dhanañjaya|
siddhyasiddhyōḥ samō bhūtvā samatvaṃ yōga ucyatē|| 2.48 ||](#)

Therefore karma-yōga is samatvam.

Then Kṛṣṇa asks everyone to do karma-yōga, by looking at karma-yōga from different angles. Four angles we saw in this chapter; beautiful way. From any angle you look at karma-yōga it is wonderful.

First-angle is: take karma-yōga way of life as a commandment of the Lord; Īśvara vihitham. If you cannot understand the glory or the importance, at least out of fear, you follow, does not matter; so this is called the attitude of Īśvara's commandment. And just like the rules of the Government; many of them we follow not but because we appreciate those laws, because we will get punishment if we do not follow. Even we obey traffic signal not because of our maturity; if it is out of maturity we will follow at all times; but we follow after seeing whether the Police man is there; if he is, we obey. Even now, after so much education, we follow only out of fear; whenever there is a gross mind; we have to instill fear; for those people who are gross, the Lord says follow karma-yōga, if not out of appreciation, at least out of fear; because if you do not follow, you will get prathyavāya pāpam. Sandhyāvandam, pāpam. No prayers, pāpam; no srāddha, pāpam. Always fear: That is the only language we learn; this is karma-yōga as Īśvara-ājñā.

Suppose we are a little bit matured; Kṛṣṇa says: it need not be out of fear; but it can be out of a sense of gratitude; Follow this way of life; as an offering to the Lord, as a yajñā; as Swami Chinmayānanda beautifully says: What God has given you is His gift to you; what you do with what God has given, is your Gift to the Lord. So with the life, what I accomplish, what I contribute, that becomes my expression of gratitude to the Lord; therefore convert karma-yōga into yajñāḥ; this is the second-angle of karma-yōga.

Then the third-angle that Kṛṣṇa presents is karma-yōga as śōdakam. Whether you take it as a worship of the Lord, whether you take it as Īśvara's commandment, it does not matter; karma-yōga is the best method of cleansing your mind of rāga, dvēsaḥ, kāma, krōdhaḥ, lōbhaḥ, mōhaḥ, etc. Therefore śōdakam, it is a great purifier.

Then the fourth-angle of karma-yōga that Kṛṣṇa presents is karma-yōga as dharma; karma-yōga is the only way of life, by which cosmic harmony can be maintained; ecology can be maintained; environment can be maintained; social harmony can be maintained.

Singing a choir is group of singing; if I want to sing; what is the first and most important condition is that I should know which ṣṛuti they are singing. If everybody is singing Pārthaya... at a particular note, and you chant at a different speed and note; and it creates a disharmony. Even if 20 people chant in one voice, it becomes one chanting; but even if one chants differently the harmony is lost; apasṛuti; it disturbs. So therefore, for that I should be attuned to the ṣṛuti that is there; or I should keep quiet without singing. But it always happens that those who sings in apasṛuti is the loudest; because they are not aware of it; they are blissfully ignorant of the ṣṛuti.

A karma-yōgi 's mind is so expanded that he appreciates the cosmic-orchestra; cosmic-harmony, that he is violating the harmony and this is called adharmā; Thus follow karma-yōga as ājñā; follow karma-yōga as yajñā; follow karma-yōga as śōdakam; or follow karma-yōga as dharma; whichever aspect appeals to you, take to that aspect; but follow karma-yōga. This is the beautiful teaching that is given from verse No.8 to verse 20. 20 first line.

From 20, 2nd line up to verse No.29, Kṛṣṇa talks about the duties of a jñāni. Duties of a jñāni. Even though it may not be relevant to many people, because it is duties of jñāni; it is not necessary for you, we are not jñānis, and also I am not going to become one in the near future, is the thinking of some people here!!

But still Kṛṣṇa wants to give from which we get valuable corollary also. Corollary is more important. And what is that duty; Kṛṣṇa says Jñāni does not require any sādhana; because he has already accomplished the sādhyam, the goal. A means is required only to accomplish the end; after accomplishing the end, the means become irrelevant; therefore, jñāni does not require karma-yōga; jñāni does not require jñāna-yōga; he does not require pūja, he does not require japa, he does not require tapas, Nistriguṇyē pathi vicārātham KO vidhiḥ KO niṣēdaḥ?

He has no dos and do not. Kṛṣṇa says even though jñāni does not require any discipline, all the other people in the society, being ajñānis they all require discipline; and therefore, as long as the jñāni is in the society, he should follow the disciplines to serve as a model to other people; because jñāni being great, the whole society will be looking up to him. That is what it is; when a person wants to become a great cricketer; then he will watch Tendulkar right from the hairstyle onwards. Because he becomes a model; what is your secret of success? In every interview it is asked; therefore jñāni being a successful-human-being, the society wants to emulate him, imitate him, follow him and if jñāni drops all the disciplines, and the society is already lazy and they are already waiting, for some excuse they may follow; and therefore, Kṛṣṇa says:

यद्यदाचरति श्रेष्ठस्तत्तदेवेतरो जनः ।
स यत्प्रमाणं कुरुते लोकस्तदनुवर्तते ॥३.२१॥

yadyadācarati śrēṣṭhastattadēvētarō janah|
sa yat pramaṇaṁ kurute lōkastadanuvartatē||3.21||

Society wants models. Children always keeps the photos of different people in the wall; pin ups. Cricketers, cinema actors and actress, in so many dresses; Constantly watching; that becomes the impression. If the elders are not ready to give good models; bad models will replace the good ones; and therefore it is the elders' responsibility, especially jñāni. Therefore Arjuna, even if you are a jñāni, better do your duty; not for your sake; but for the society's sake; do not confuse them.

न बुद्धिभेदं जनयेदज्ञानां कर्मसङ्गिनाम् ।
जोषयेत् सर्वकर्माणि विद्वान् युक्तः समाचरन् ॥३.२६॥

[na buddhi bhēdaṁ janayēdajñānāṁ karmasaṅginām |
jōṣayēt sarvakarmāṇi vidvān yuktaḥ samācaran || 3.26 ||](#)

So this is primarily advice to a jñāni; but corollary also is very important.

Indirectly through jñāni, Kṛṣṇa is advising all the elderly-people in the society. It is not an advice to jñāni alone; but this is an advice to all the important-people who count in the life of younger-generation and four people count in the life of a young individual, i.e. mātha, pitha, and guru and rāja. Rāja means now you have to say mantri; all the four count very much and therefore Kṛṣṇa is giving a warning to all the parents, watch your life; because even though you do not say directly anything directly to the child; the child is watching and the audio-visual effect is more powerful than any number of advices. In fact, you need not advice at all; Lead a proper-life, that is better teaching than hundred hours of lecturing. Therefore, Kṛṣṇa advises the parents; Kṛṣṇa advises the teachers also, which is very relevant to all the elders. This is the topic from verse No.20, 2nd line to verse No.29.

And then from verse No.30 to 35, Kṛṣṇa summarizes the whole teaching and talks about the significance of karma-yōga; and the 30th verse is the most important verse of this chapter, in which Kṛṣṇa condenses karma-yōga; and that verse is

मयि सर्वाणि कर्माणि संन्यस्याध्यात्मचेतसा ।
निराशीर्निर्ममो भूत्वा युध्यस्व विगतज्वरः ॥३.३०॥

[mayi sarvāṇi karmāṇi sannyasyādhyātmacētasā |
nirāśīrnirmamō bhūtvā yudhyasva vigatajvaraḥ ||3.30||](#)

So he gives a five-point-programme to become a karma-yōgi; what are the five-factors to be taken care of to become a karma-yōgi. What are they?

1. Have spiritual-goal as the primary priority of your life. That is the first indication of karma-yōga. Spiritual-goal is the primary-goal. We do not say that other goals are not required; but we should remember that the other goals are subservient to this primary goal. Because if all other goals do not lead to spiritual-goal; all the other goals are utterly useless; because they are subject to arrival and they are subject to departure also. I got any amount of money, so what? It is going to go. So therefore let material-goal must be there; but let spiritual-goal be given top priority; therefore prioritization is No.1.

2. No.2 is Īśvarārpaṇa-buddhya sarva karma anuṣṭāna. Dedicate all your actions, as an offering to the Lord; so that you do not hate any of your duties. You do not call pleasant duty; it is my pleasant duty, do not use that phrase, any duty must be made pleasant and for Arjuna, the duty happens to be what? What an unpleasant duty? It is killing his own kith and kin; gurus and elders, and Arjuna you cannot divide the duty, into pleasant and unpleasant category, make everything pleasant, by dedicating it to the Lord; so mayi sarvāni karmāni sanyasya; convert work into worship; this is factor no.2. That spiritual goal be primary goal No.1. Convert your work into worship is the second factor.

3. No.3 is Nirāśi; means be prepared for all types of future situations because future is totally not under your control; you are only one of the factors determining your future; you do not say you are helpless; that is called fatalistic approach; you do not save everything is predetermined; we do not say, certainly you determine your future; but we do not say you alone determine your future; that is called arrogance. If I say you do not determine at all; everything is pre-determined; fatalism. If everything is determined by you if you say it is arrogance; you also determine your future; you are one of the important factors who determine your future.

In addition to you, there are many other factors which can influence your future; and the number of factors that can influence is infinite; your husband, your wife, your children, the very government, the budget, my God, all things are there; and a war in Iraq can affect our condition here. Some Saddam Hussain's capricious-decision can affect our lives here; so therefore, future is unpredictable is a fact; and therefore an intelligent person is one who is prepared for facing any type of future; and that preparation is the third factor of karma-yōga; and that preparation is prasāda-buddhi. Lord whatever is the genuine result; let it come to me; and if it is going to be unfavourable, I cannot ask you to change the law for my sake, if it is unfavourable, give me the required mindset, so that I can accept that and work to improve the future. So this is called prasāda-buddhi; or preparedness to accept the future. Then there is no anxiety at all. Anxiety is unpreparedness to face the future.

Then the fourth-condition or factor is Nirmamaḥ; when success comes, do not claim the total credit; even though you are responsible for your success; you are not the only one responsible for your success. There are infinite factors other than you; which all put together we call daivam; you may call it luck; you may call it daivam, you may call it grace; you may call it purva puṇyam; some X factor, all external factors together is called daivam. Therefore in success, remember the Lord's grace. That is called humility. Nirmamaḥ means be humble; take wherever credit is due to you, take the credit; I did not do anything, I did not do anything, you need not say. If you had not done anything, you would not have got anything; I have also done; let us also not be falsely humble; therefore, I have certainly done, I have certainly worked hard; day and night; worked; wonderful; let me remember, that is not the only factor; other factors were favourable; Thank God! This is called humility in success. Acceptance in failure; humility in success; these are the hall marks of a karma-yōgi; this is the fourth-factor and

5. Fifth and final factor is vigata-jvaraḥ; maintain mental-poise, mental-equanimity, mental-balance, which is extremely difficult; but if the first four factors are followed, the fifth factor is almost a natural consequence; so vigata-jvaraḥ, avoid mental feverishness; otherwise called samatvam.

So these are the five-factors; spiritual-priority, converting work into worship, be prepared to face the future, humility in success; and equanimity; and if you are able to follow these five, you are a karma-yōgi and the benefit is your mind is getting purer and purer faster. So this is the essence of 30th ślōka in which Kṛṣṇa summaries karma-yōga.

And then he points out that whoever follows karma-yōga, has spiritual success and whoever does not follow karma-yōga is spiritually doomed;

ये मे मतमिदम् नित्यमनुतिष्ठन्ति मानवाः ।
श्रद्धावन्तोऽनसूयन्तो मुच्यन्ते तेऽपि कर्मभिः ॥३.३१॥

yē mē matamidam nityam anutiṣṭhanti mānavāḥ |
śraddhāvantō'anasūyantō mucyantē tē'pi karmabhiḥ || 3.31 ||

ये त्वेतदभ्यसूयन्तो नानुतिष्ठन्ति मे मतम् ।
सर्वज्ञानविमूढांस्तान् विद्धि नष्टानचेतसः ॥३.३२॥

yē tvētabhyasūyantō nānutiṣṭhanti mē matam |
sarvajñānavimūḍhāṁstān viddhi naṣṭānacētasah || 3.32 ||

They are spiritually doomed; they may get some material benefit; but ultimately they are spiritually lost; they won't get peace of mind at all. So with this Kṛṣṇa concludes the summary of karma-yōga from verse No.30 to 35.

Then verse No.36 to 43, Arjuna asks a question, and Kṛṣṇa answers the question; and the question is: What is the obstacle to the pursuit of karma-yōga? In spite of knowing its superiority, what prevents people from following karma-yōga?

And Kṛṣṇa gives the answer, the obstacle is kāma, krōdha, otherwise known as rāga-dvēṣa; so the materialistic attractions take away the entire life of a person that he never recognises that he has got a spiritual aspect which also has to be developed. that is why we divided puruṣārthaḥ into four; arta-kāma is also important; but dharma-mōkṣaḥ also is important; we are made up of both material and spiritual-personality; anātma is matter, ātma is spirit; dēha is matter, dēhi is spirit; we are a mixture of both; and therefore our life should be well balanced in which I take care of both my material needs and also spiritual needs; in the case of this person, the arta kāma becomes so dominant, that he has no time for spirituality,

बालस्तावत्क्रीडासक्तः तरुणस्तावत्तरुणीसक्तः |
वृद्धस्तावच्चिन्तासक्तः परमे ब्रह्मणि कोऽपि न सक्तः ||७||

[bālastāvatkrīḍāsaktaḥ taruṇastāvattaruṇīsaktaḥ |
vṛddhastāvaccintāsaktaḥ paramē brahmaṇi kō:'pi na saktaḥ ||7||](#)

Even now people ask; there are some youngsters coming, to Gīta; they ask why are you coming now itself; That means when you have exhausted all your energy and when you are good for nothing, and when you are not wanted in the family, such a time you have to come to Gīta, this is the biggest unfortunate misconception.

Kṛṣṇa says kāma-krōdhaḥ is the obstacle; so naturally the question is: how to handle them; so Kṛṣṇa deals with the problem of kāma or materialistic desires; he does not handle krōdhaḥ; because according to Kṛṣṇa and also it is a fact that krōdhaḥ or anger is only a modified version of kāma or desire; obstructed desire is anger; obstructed desire is anger. Therefore if we know how to handle desire; we can handle, we have handled anger. Why do we consider kāma krōdhaḥ to be an obstacle; because a person is preoccupied with their fulfilment; and they can never be fulfilled; even if we have got 500 crores dollars, we cannot be satisfied as the Upaniṣads says: Na vithēna tarpaṇiyō manuṣya. No human being can be satisfied with any amount of money. Therefore it will surface into activity; therefore one should learn to handle.

Now the question is how to handle kāma. So it has to be handled in two stages; the first-stage is to handle kāma in a relative-measure; and the second-stage is handling it in the absolute or total-measure.

In the first-stage one has to follow three-fold discipline to take care of kāma; what are those three disciplines; damaḥ, śamaḥ, and vivēkaḥ; damaḥ means mastery of sense organs; do not allow anything and everything to enter your mind without any control; because the sense object have a knack of taking the mind away; therefore discipline of the sense organ is No.1.

And the second is samaḥ; which is disciplining the mind or thought pattern; if that is not done,

ध्यायतो विषयान्पुंसः सङ्गस्तेषूपजायते ।.... ॥ २.६२ ॥

dhyāyatō viṣayān puṃsaḥ saṅgastēṣūpajāyatē|... | 2.62 ||

The mind has a knack of getting attached to any pleasant thing; even a particular place where you sit for the class; a few classes you sit, you begin to say 'my place', and somebody else sits, you ask him to get up and sit elsewhere. So the mind has got 'gum' all over, it sticks to whatever is available; imagine you have poured gum all over your body; and you walk, what will happen? Anything that flies around will stick; similarly the mind has a problem; any person, any object, any situation, first time I move, then I say that I need that person; then without that person I cannot survive; and I am struck and hooked; for good. So therefore: be Alert; Even if you form an attachment, let it be a noble thing. Attachment to Gīta class, Ok. So therefore the second is śamaḥ.

The third-one is vivēkaḥ; discrimination; and the discrimination is what, a finite plus finite is equal to finite alone; if I am already a finite being; any amount of acquisitions which are finite, can never make me infinite; insecure plus insecure will be secure? Will be more insecure; Therefore thinking that by acquiring and adding I will get more security; more fullness is a myth. Either I am full with myself or I can never be full with any amount of acquisition. Therefore I should clearly know, world is neither a source of joy nor a source of sorrow; I alone am the source of sorrow and joy.

As Dayānanda Swami beautifully puts: “The problem is You; the solution is also You”. Any amount of adjusting the worldly norms cannot bring about any change here. Spirituality begins when you decide to change yourselves. Until then, spirituality has not started; so this is called vivēkaḥ.

By these three methods, we learn to handle the problem of kāma; and this is only relative solution.

Having gone through the relative solution, we have to go to the absolute solution, which is self-knowledge, discovery of fullness within myself; security within myself; ātman ēva ātmanaḥ tuṣṭa. Once I am full and complete within myself, since I am not empty, since I am not emotionally bankrupt, I do not go with a begging bowl of Do you love me; Do you love me; Do you love me; I won't because I am an embodiment of love which I can give to others; whether the others reciprocate or not. So this is called ātma jñānēnakām tyāgaḥ; which is the ultimate solution and therefore Kṛṣṇa tells in the concluding verse:

एवम् बुद्धेः परं बुद्ध्वा संस्तभ्यात्मानमात्मना ।
जहि शत्रुं महाबाहो कामरूपं दुरासदम् ॥ ३.४३ ॥

[ēvaṃ buddhēḥ paraṃ buddhvā saṃstabhya"tmānamātmanā |
jahi śatruṃ mahābāhō kāmarūpaṃ durāsadam || 3.43 ||](#)

By gaining self-knowledge and discovering fullness take care of kāma for good, and if kāma is taken care of; krōdhaḥ is also taken care of. So with this Kṛṣṇa has answered Arjuna's doubt and with this Kṛṣṇa's discourse on karma-yōga is over; and since karma-yōga is the main theme of this chapter, this chapter itself is titled karma-yōgaḥ.

Hari Om.

CHAPTER 04

054 CHAPTER 04, VERSES 01-04

ॐ

In the first-chapter of the Gīta, Vyāsācārya revealed the human-problem of saṁsāra through Arjuna. And it was shown that the human-problem is in the form of rāgaḥ, śōkaḥ and mōhaḥ. Rāgaḥ means the problem-of-emotional-dependence upon external-factors. This is called rāgaḥ; and śōkaḥ means because of this emotional dependence, the mind faces the problem of grief or sorrow, and then the third problem is mōhaḥ; when the mind is in the grip of emotional dependence and sorrow, it is not able to think properly; it is not able to discriminate properly; this indiscrimination or delusion or conflict is the third problem; rāgaḥ, śōkaḥ and mōhaḥ.

And when Arjuna faced this problem intensely in the battle field, Arjuna tried to solve the problem by himself and then he did not succeed and therefore he did an intelligent-thing and that was surrendering at the feet of the Lord and accepting the Lord as his Guru.

In the Bhagavad-Gīta, Kṛṣṇa does not function as the Lord, but in the Bhagavad-Gīta, Kṛṣṇa functions as a guru only. That is why in the dhyāna-slōkās we say, Vasudēva-sutaṁ dēvaṁ kaṁsa-cāṇūra-mardanam, dēvakī-paramānandaṁ kṛṣṇaṁ vandē jagadgurum. Kṛṣṇa may be different; different relationships for different people, but for Arjuna and his students of the Gīta, Kṛṣṇa is guruḥ. Arjuna did an intelligent thing of surrendering to Lord Kṛṣṇa and Kṛṣṇa also willingly and happily accepted the role of the guru. Then in the 2nd chapter, Kṛṣṇa started working on the solution, and Kṛṣṇa's approach was that self-knowledge alone can be the remedy. Any other solution can only temporarily work as a palliative; no other solution can work as the curative; it cannot solve the problem. And therefore Kṛṣṇa decided to give self-knowledge to Arjuna; and because of that alone, Bhagavat Gīta is ātma vidya.

No doubt, Gīta deals with umpteen topics, right from dietary discipline onwards; Gīta talks about so many topics, but Gīta is mōkṣa śāstra, Gīta is ātma vidya; and that is why when Bhīṣma at the time of his death he glorifies Lord Kṛṣṇa and at the time of glorification, Bhīṣmācārya says in the Bhāgavatham.

व्यवहित पृथनामुखं निरीक्ष्य स्वजनवधाद्विमुखस्य दोषबुद्ध्या.
कुमतिमहरदात्मविद्यया यश्चरणरतिः परमस्य तस्य मेऽस्तु ॥ ३६ ॥ vyavahita pṛthanāmukhaṁ nirīkṣya svajanavadhādvimukhasya doṣabuddhyā.

kumatimaharadātmavidyayā yaścaraṇaratiḥ paramasya tasya me:'stu || 36 ||

Bhīṣma stūthi slōkā 1.9.36

Bhīṣma tells Lord Kṛṣṇa when Arjuna was confused in the battlefield: Oh Lord you removed the kumathiḥ, the confused-intellect, you removed; by what; ātma-vidhyaya aharat. So Bhīṣma ācārya calls Bhagavat-Gīta as ātma-vidya only; he does not look upon Gīta as bhakthi-śāstram or karma-śāstram or yōga-śāstram; Bhīṣma ācārya looks upon Gīta as jñāna-śāstram; self-knowledge.

And in the second-chapter, Kṛṣṇa gives the entire range of sādhanas required for this self-knowledge, which is the only ultimate-remedy for rāgaḥ, śōkaḥ and mōhaḥ saṁsāra; and in the second-chapter, which is the essence of the entire Gīta; Kṛṣṇa talked about two stages of spiritual-sādhana, the first stage being karma-yōga, which is an active stage of sādhana, and the second is jñāna-yōga stage, which is a passive or withdrawn stage. While one is pravṛtti the other is nivṛtti; while one requires anātma-orientation the other requires ātma-orientation. Kṛṣṇa deals with karma-yōga and jñāna-yōga briefly in the second-chapter.

Karma-yōga was prescribed as a means of mental-purity and Kṛṣṇa made very clear that karma-yōga cannot give liberation; karma-yōga can only give preparation and preparation itself cannot give mōkṣa; after preparation one has to go through jñāna-yōga which is vēdānta śravaṇa manana nidhidhyāsana. Karma-yōga involves converting our activities into worship; jñāna-yōga involves self-enquiry thorough the scriptures under the guidance of a guru. Karma-yōga is converting our activities into worship and jñāna-yōga is self-enquiry, through the scriptures under the guidance of a competent-preceptor. Kṛṣṇa condensed both karma-yōga and jñāna-yōga in this second-chapter.

And then Kṛṣṇa's aim was to magnify or expand both these topics; because in the second-chapter, even though both these topics are discussed, they were discussed in capsule form, condensed form, Kṛṣṇa wants to elaborate that. I gave the example of the news report in the radio or TV. The first few lines are the headlines; and after the headlines are read, the elaboration of each of the headline in that order; if there is an aeroplane accident near Delhi, first they will talk about the accident, and thereafter, elaborate on how it happened, who all had attended condolence meeting, etc. how many persons died, all maths will be told; this minister visited and they will talk the next news item and elaboration; the elaboration will be in the order of the headlines; and at the end of the news, what will they say; to conclude the news, the headlines once again; this method of communication is called saṅkṣēpa, visthāra, sañkṣēpa; condensation, expansion, and condensation, again; this is the ideal-method of teaching. The second-chapter is condensation of the Gīta; the 18th chapter is also Gīta in capsule; from 3rd to 17th is elaboration.

So Kṛṣṇa had to elaborate, both the topics, karma-yōga and jñāna-yōga; and the third-chapter happens to be the elaboration of karma-yōga. And the fourth and the fifth chapters are going to be the elaboration of jñāna-yōga. So the second-chapter condenses karma-yōga and jñāna-yōga; the third-chapter is the expansion of karma-yōga; the fourth and fifth chapters are the expansion of jñāna-yōga topic and since Kṛṣṇa considers jñāna-yōga to be abstract; subtle and difficult, Kṛṣṇa allots two chapters for elaborating jñāna-yōga. And that is why, the third chapter is called karma-yōga; the fourth chapter is going to be called jñāna-karma sanyāsa-yōga; the significance of the title, we will see later.

So with this background, we have to enter the fourth chapter, we are going to get the elaboration of jñāna-yōga. And therefore only to understand these two chapters well, you have to remember the jñāna-yōga portion of the 2nd chapter; and what is the jñāna-yōga of the 2nd chapter, from verse No.12 to 25; this is condensed jñāna-yōga.

न त्वेवाहम् जातु नासं न त्वं नेमे जनाधिपाः ।
नचैव न भविष्यामः सर्वे वयमतः परम् ॥२.१२॥

[na tvevāham jātu na tvam̐ neme janādhipāḥ
nacaiva na bhaviṣyāmaḥ sarvē vayamataḥ param̐ || 2.12 ||](#)

and concluding with the verse:

देही नित्यमवध्योऽयं देहे सर्वस्य भारत ।
तस्मात्सर्वाणि भूतानि न त्वं शोचितुमर्हसि ॥२.३०॥

[dehī nityamavadhyo'yaṁ dēhē sarvasya bhārata |
tasmātsarvāṇi bhūtāni na tvam̐ śōcitumarhasi || 2.30 ||](#)

This particular portion consisting of about 13-14 verses, this is condensed jñāna-yōga; the 4th and 5th chapters are vyākyaṇam of that portion. And therefore you keep reading that portion as often as possible, at least until the fourth and fifth chapters are over. Because these chapters are based on those or that particular portion; with this background, we will enter into the fourth chapter.

Verse 4.1

श्रीभगवानुवाच
इमं विवस्वते योगं प्रोक्तवानहमव्ययम् ।
विवस्वान्मनवे प्राह मनुर्िक्ष्वाकवेऽब्रवीत् ॥४.१॥

Śrībhagavānuvāca
imaṁ vivasvatē yōgaṁ prōktavānahamavyayam |
vivasvān manavē prāha manurikṣvākavē'bravīt || 4.1 ||

श्रीभगवान् उवाच Śrī Bhagavān uvāca The Lord said अहं प्रोक्तवान् ahaṁ prōktavān I imparted, इमम् अव्ययं योगम् imaṁ avyayaṁ yōgaṁ this eternal yōga विवस्वते vivasvatē to lord Sun, विवस्वान् प्राह vivasvān prāha Lord Sun taught मनवे manavē (the same) to Manu, मनुः
अब्रवीत् manuḥ abravīt Manu taught (it), ikṣvākavē to Ikṣvāku.

1. The Blessed Lord said: I imparted this eternal Yōga to Lord Sun. Lord Sun taught (the same) to Manu. Manu taught (it) to Ikṣvāku.

Even though Kṛṣṇa's-intention is elaboration of jñāna-yōga; before entering into that topic, Kṛṣṇa takes a small diversion in the first eight-verses; and this diversion has got two topics, one is the greatness of the Gīta; Gīta-stuthiḥ; and the second is the avathāra-rahasyam; what is avathāra of the Lord; these are going to be the two topics which happen to be a diversion. Afterwards from the 9th verse onwards, Kṛṣṇa will come back to the topic proper.

First, the topic is the glorification of the Gīta and what is the greatness of the Gīta; Kṛṣṇa says, Gīta is the condensed form of the vēdās themselves. Kṛṣṇa does not want to claim any originality with regard to Gīta-teaching. Normally when we do something, even if it is borrowed from someone, often it happens in the scientific field, somebody does the research, and somebody takes the name, it seems by publishing the paper. Poor students will research and this man will come and put a title and take a doctorate. Normally, the research is done; here Kṛṣṇa does not want to claim the teaching as his own original-teaching; Kṛṣṇa says: I want to confess one thing that this is the beginningless vēdic-teaching alone, whose beginning we cannot trace at all; and in tradition we look upon the vēdās as a gift from the Lord himself, through the ṛṣiṣ.

So the ṛṣiṣ are like the receiving-centers and God is like the transmitting-center; the ṛṣiṣ received the wisdom; and that is why vēda is looked upon as revelation; otherwise technically called aparōuṣēya-śāstrām. And vēda contains all the teachings required for humanity; whether human-beings are interested in material-prosperity or spiritual-fulfilment; vēda has the teaching and it has been coming down in the form of guru-śiṣyā-parampara; and Kṛṣṇa says, somehow this wonderful-teaching, people lost their interest in and therefore this teaching became what? Weaker and weaker; and therefore it being the Lord's-teaching, Lord himself had to take the responsibility of reviving the teaching for the benefit of the humanity.

And therefore the Lord once in a while finds out some-method or the other to revive and Kṛṣṇa says one of the main-purposes of my avathāra is the revival of vēdic-wisdom; killing Kāmsa is incidental. In fact, for killing Kāmsa, he need not come down; one lightning on Kāmsa's head is enough; why should Kṛṣṇa take the trouble of garbhavāsa and jail-vāsa and all kinds of asura facing; to kill the asura, Bhagavān does not require an avathāra; whereas to revive the teaching, Bhagavān has to take the avathāra.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa says, whatever other roles I played, they are all incidental, my primary role is I am functioning as jagat guru; teaching you Oh Arjuna and through you, I am teaching the entire humanity.

And that is why at the end of the Gīta; Kṛṣṇa openly tells Hey Arjuna I love all the people but whoever propagates Gīta, I love more. He says that in his 'ears'. I love all the people, but I love people who propagate Gīta more; that is why I am taking Gīta classes 😊, so that Kṛṣṇa loves me more! And I love you more because for me to teach you are required. 😊😊. Otherwise, what will I do; therefore Kṛṣṇa as the Gītācāryā is the real purpose of the avathāra; and Gīta is revived vēda. This is the glory of the Gīta; that is why at the end, in the Dhyāna-slōkās also,

पार्थो वत्सः सुधीर्भोक्ता दुग्धं गीतामृतं महत् ॥४॥

sarvōpaniṣadō gāvō dōgdhā gōpāla-nandanah|
pārthō vatsaḥ sudhīrbhōktā dugdham gītāmṛtaṁ mahat||4||

Kṛṣṇa is only a milkman; and Gīta is the milk, coming from where, the Upaniṣadic-cow; and at the end of every chapter also, iti Srimad Bhagavat Gītasu Upaniṣadsu; therefore the first three verses talk about the greatness of the Gīta as a condensed version of the Vēdās.

So look at the verse; Kṛṣṇa says here: ahaṁ imaṁ yōgaṁ prōktavān; Hey Arjuna, I had given out the same teaching before in the name of the Vēdās; Now I am giving the teaching in the name of the Gīta. Previously I had given the teaching in the form of Vēdā. What I have done is only give a new name; like Super Surf; same product; with a free spoon and sell the same product. Kṛṣṇa says Gīta is the new name for Vēdā. So ahaṁ imaṁ yōgaṁ prōktavān; yōgaṁ here stands yōga dvayam; karma and jñāna-yōga. And whom did I teach before; vivasvatē prōkatvān; I revealed this wisdom to Surya Bhagavān; I revealed this wisdom to Vivasvān; Vivasvān is Surya Bhagavān and the other teachers will come later; Surya bhagavathē ahaṁ prōktavān.

And what type of teaching it is: avyayaṁ yōgaṁ; a teaching which can never go out of date; which can never become obsolete; which is ever valid even in the 20th century; all other sciences may change; but it is relevant even now; that is why this teaching is called sanātana-dharmaḥ; avyayaṁ means sanātanam. So I revealed as who; as Bhagavān Mahā Viṣṇu, revealed to Surya Bhagavān and what did Surya Bhagavān do, the Sun is called Vivasvān, because vivaḥ means annam; and Vivasvān means annam, represents energy or nourishment and therefore Vivasvān means the energizer, because we know that the Sun alone is responsible for our food; directly or indirectly, if the vegetation should grow, the crop should come, you require rain; if the rain should come, the waters should be evaporated from the ocean. Kṛṣṇa will tell all these in the 9th chapter.

तपाम्यहमहं वर्षं निगृह्णाम्युत्सृजामि च ।
अमृतं चैव मृत्युश्च सदसच्चाहमर्जुन ॥९.१९॥

tapāmyahamaḥ varṣaṁ nigṛṇhāmyutsrjāmi ca |
amṛtaṁ caiva mṛtyuśca sadasaccāhamarjuna || 9.19 ||

The Sun alone absorbs the water from the ocean and the Sun alone gives it out in the form of rain and the rain alone is responsible for the crops. Therefore the Sun is required for our food. And again Sun is required for photosynthesis; without that the plant kingdom cannot get their energy; therefore Sun is called food giver; nourishment giver; energy giver and therefore the Sānskrīt word vivaḥ annam asya asthi iti Vivasvān.

Sānskrīt every word has got its derivation; moment you know the derivation, your reverence will increase; or else you will say just Sun, and that the Sun is hot in May, etc. When you look upon the Sun as a heating energy, then you begin to curse; already you have stated cursing. March 1, till October what are you going to do? So therefore do not look down upon the Sun; without Sun, no food, because Vivasvān.

And what did this Vivasvān do Vivasvān manavē prāha; so Vivasvān taught this to his son, known as Vaivasvatha Manuḥ; who belongs to Surya Vaṁsa; so Rāma's parampara is called Surya Vaṁsa. Sita's parampara is Candra Vaṁsa;

Sūrya-vaṁsa samudbhutam, chandra-vaṁsa samudbhavaam |
putram daśarathasvapi, puthriṁ janaka bhupathē ||

Beautiful slōkā;

ayōdhya puranē dhāram, mithilāpura nāyikām |
raghavānam alamkaram, vaidhēhānam alamkriya ||

one part Rāma's-mahima; the other part Sita's-mahima; in that it is said: Sūrya-vaṁsa samudbhūtham; Sōma-vaṁsa-samudhbhavam.

What I want to say is Rāma belongs to Sūrya-vaṁsa; from Surya, Vaivasvatha-Manu. From Vaivasvatha-Manu, all the other parampara came, and therefore, Vivasvān, Vivasvān manavē prāha. And our age is supposed to be presided over by Vaivasvatha Manu. If you have the habit of saying the saṅkalpa, during rituals like avaṇi-avittam, etc.; there it comes:

Svayambhuva, svarūpaōjīṣa; uttama, tamasa, raivata, chākṣuṣākyēṣu ṣatsu manuṣu vyathithēṣu, saptamē vaivasvatha manvantharē; astavimsathi thamē, kaliyugē, jambudvipē, etc.

So therefore this age is supposed to be presided over by Vaivasvatha Manu; therefore this age is called Vaivasvatha manvatharam. And that is why we are also called manavaḥ; manu puthra; therefore Vivasvān manavē prāha; prāha; he taught to Manu. And what did Manu do? manurikṣvākavē'bravīt. Manu taught this to Ikṣvāku is the name of another king.

So in our tradition we say that the spiritual-teaching has been coming down from in two-parampara; one-parampara is kṣatriya; both the parampara, the knowledge is coming; so this Sanaka, Sanātha, Sananthana, etc. represent the Brāhmaṇa-parampara. Vivasvān, Manu etc. represent kṣatriya-parampara. Kṛṣṇa is quoting kṣatriya-parampara, because here both the teacher and the student belong to that parampara. Therefore Arjuna, you belong to wonderful parampara, you should gain this knowledge. Therefore, manurikṣvākavē'bravīt.

Then what happens.

Verse 4.2

एवं परम्पराप्रप्तमिमं राजर्षयो विदुः । स कालेनेह महता योगो नष्टः परन्तपः ॥४.२॥

ēvaṁ paramparāprāptamimam rājarṣayō viduḥ |
sa kālēnēha mahatā yōgō naṣṭaḥ parantapa||4.2||

परन्तप Parantapa Oh! Arjuna, राजर्षयः rājarṣayaḥ the royal sages, विदुः viduḥ knew, इमम् imam this, एवं परम्पराप्राप्तम् ēvaṁ paramparāprāptam which was thus traditionally handed down, महता कालेन सः mahatā kālēnē saḥ due to long passage of time, योगः yōgaḥ that Yōga, नष्टः naṣṭaḥ is lost, इह iha in this world.

2. Oh Arjuna! The royal sages knew this which was thus traditionally hand down. Due to long passage of time, that Yōga is lost in this world.

Ēvaṃ-paramparāprāptam; thus this teaching has been coming down in the form of guru śiṣyā parampara, like the perennial Gaṅga river; in our tradition, Gaṅga is often looked upon as the jñāna Gaṅga, the flow of knowledge; Gaṅga is perennial, the jñānam is also perennial; Gaṅga also comes from Lord's head; jñānam also comes from sadāśiva samārambhām, from the Lord also. And Gaṅga also removes all the impurities, this wisdom,

mala nirmōcanam puṃsām, jala snānaṃ dhinē dhinē ।
sakṛt Gītāmbhasi-snānaṃ, saṃsāra mala-mōchanam ॥

So if you are going to take a dip in Gīta-Gaṅga, then your saṃsāra-malam will go away. That is why Kṛṣṇa will tell in the 18th chapter, that everyone should read at least one verse from the Gīta daily. It is a wonderful habit; you can develop; just reading one verse, two verse, Kṛṣṇa tells; daily chant 18 chapters; then you will ask: What, Don't we have any other job?

He says at least 9 chapters; then at least 6 chapters; at least 3 chapters; at least 2 chapters; at least one chapter; at least one fourth of a chapter; at least 5 verses, 4 verses, 3 verse; one verse; or half verse. He comes down to that level; From 18 chapters to half a slōka he asks us to study. Who can say I cannot do that?

So therefore, Śankarācārya also said in the Bhaja Govindam, gēyaṃ Gītā nāma sahasraṃ dhyēyaṃ śrīpati rūpamajasram. Therefore Gaṅga and Gīta are compared; because both are purifiers. So here Gaṅga is perennial; this knowledge also is perennial; parampara prāptam. Guru-śiṣyā parampara prāptam. Who knew that? rājarṣayaḥ viduḥ; all the rājarṣīs knew this wisdom; even though they were very much involved in worldly activities; not that they were sanyāsis, who were staying in āśramam; they were very much involved; we are complaining that we are managing one family, and that too, the family of today of 2-3 members; nuclear family. Earlier 5 brothers, 6 sisters, parents, grandparents, aunts, cousins, etc. etc. were all in one family. Generally a house will be a small village. Now, having become smaller, only one generation. We are making such a big complaint; a kṣatriya has to take care of a huge kingdom, and they in spite of their busy schedule, they managed to get the wisdom indicating that where there is a will, there is a way. In fact, in the Bṛhadāraṇya, most of the teachers and students are Kṣatriyās; teacher is also a kṣatriya often; like Ajāthāśatru; etc. and the student is also kṣatriya like Janaka, learning from Yājñavalkya. Therefore Kṛṣṇa says even if you are in the world, you can get this wisdom. When the rāja gets this wisdom; he is called a rāja ṛṣi; therefore rājarṣayaḥ-viduḥ.

But what happens, gradually people started losing interest in that; because distractions were many; TV channels are increasing; MTV even though it is empty; means we will become empty; therefore there are so many distractions now; Kṛṣṇa is complaining of the distraction during Bhagavad-Gīta itself; 5,000 years have gone by; how much he should have complained.

Therefore he says; Hey Parantapa, Hey Arjuna, saḥ yōgaḥ naṣṭaḥ; this teaching disappeared from the earth; or got weakened, mahatā kālēna, during long passage of time; lesser and lesser number of people were interested in this knowledge. Now Gīta Vēdā etc. nobody is interested in; and therefore I had to revive this teaching.

Verse 4.3

स एवायं मया तेऽद्य योगः प्रोक्तः पुरातनः ।
भक्तोऽसि मे सखा चेति रहस्यं ह्येतदुत्तमम् ॥४.३॥

sa ēvāyaṁ mayā tē'dya yōgaḥ prōktaḥ purātaṇaḥ|
bhaktō'si mē sakhā cēti rahasyaṁ hyētaduttamam||4.3||

सः एव saḥ ēva that very same पुरातनः योगः purātaṇaḥ yōgaḥ ancient yōga अयम् ayam is this ते अध्य tē adhya which has been taught by Me इति मे सखा च iti mē sakhā ca because you are my friend, भक्तः bhaktaḥ and a devotee, एतद् हि ētaḍ hi this is indeed, उत्तमं रहस्यम् uttamam rahasyam the higher secret.

3. The very same ancient Yōga is this which has been taught by Me to you now, because you are My friend and devotee. This indeed is the highest secret.

So what did I decide; because protecting this teaching is my job. Because I am the one who brought this teaching to the universe through the rishis and therefore it is my job to preserve this teaching. And therefore I decided to revive this teaching by choosing you as the representative of the entire humanity. Therefore He says, saḥ ēva purātaṇaḥ yōgaḥ mayā prōktaḥ tayaēva; the very same yōga, very same yōga means what, karma-jñāna-yōga; which was there, which was previously called vēda, that is why vēda itself was divided into two parts; one is vēda-purva; and the other is called vēda-antah; vēda-purva teaches karma-yōga; vēda-antah teaches jñāna-yōga; vēda-purva gives purity; vēda-antha gives wisdom; vēda-purva is called karma kāṇḍam; vēda-antah is called jñāna-kāṇḍam; so the very same yōga-dvayam; Ayam is taught by me in the second and the third chapter. Saḥ ēva ayam yōgaḥ purātaṇaḥ; it is the oldest teaching; most ancient teaching. And the beauty is even vēdic ṛṣi declare that we are not the inventors of this wisdom, the ṛṣīs say we ourselves got this wisdom from our guru; iti śuśruma dhīrāṇāmyē nastadvicacakṣirē (Isa.10). The vēdic ṛṣīs themselves were very ancient; they say we got from our ancient forefathers; that means beginning can never be traced. Maximum we can trace is the time of recording the vēdās; but we can never trace the beginning of the vēda. Therefore Kṛṣṇa calls purātanaḥ yōgaḥ mayā prōktaḥ. Therefore, who am I, one of the traditional ācāryās only.

And then the next question is why did Kṛṣṇa choose Arjuna. The very big issue; Pattimandram they will start; unique to Tamil Nadu. Somewhere I read in newspapers, patti mandram for children; for summer which is better, whether it is ice-cream or buttermilk? And then the children come and say that therefore the best thing for summer is Only Ice-cream Ice-cream and Ice-cream only. So pattimandram why did Kṛṣṇa choose Arjuna and people scratch their heads; the answer is very simple, Kṛṣṇa chose Arjuna because Arjuna asked for it. If Dharmaputra had asked, Kṛṣṇa would have happily taught; he did not; Bhīma did not ask; Drōṇa did not ask. Arjuna said śiṣyaste'haṁ śādhi mām tvām prapannam; Do you remember;

कार्पण्यदोषोपहतस्वभावः, पृच्छामि त्वाम् धर्मसंमूढचेताः ।
यच्छ्रेयः स्यान्निश्चितं ब्रूहि तन्मे, शिष्यस्तेऽहं शाधि मां त्वां प्रपन्नम् ॥२.७॥

[kārpaṇyadoṣopahatasvabhāvaḥ pṛcchāmi tvām dharmasammūḍhacetāḥ |
yacchreyaḥ syānniścitaṁ brūhi tanmē śiṣyaste'haṁ śādhi mām tvām prapannam ||2.7||](#)

I am your disciple, please tell me; and to become the disciple, what is the most important qualification, śraddhaḥ and bhakthi. Śraddhaḥ bhakthi jñāna yogād avaiḥ; therefore Kṛṣṇa tells; Arjuna I chose you because you bhaktaḥ asi mē; you are my disciple, you are ready to listen to me; getting people to listen is the most difficult thing; if you have any doubt, try at home. Most of the time, when you are speaking, the other people also will be speaking at the same time; therefore, you are asking; that is itself a big thing; so bhaktaḥ asi me; and saḥ cha iti. And here Kṛṣṇa adds another beautiful statement; Arjuna, even if you have not asked, I would have told you, because you are my friend. When a friend commits a mistake, it is the responsibility of the friend to point out that mistake;

पापात् निवारयति योजयते हिताय, गुह्यम् निगुह्यति गुणान् प्रगडिकरोति ।
आपत्गतम् च नच हाति ददाति काले, सन् मित्र लक्षणमिदम् प्रवदन्ति सन्तः ॥

[pāpāt nivārayati yōjayatē hitāya, guhyam niguhyati guṇān pragaḍīkarōti |
āpatgatam ca naca hāti dadāti kālē, san mitra lakṣaṇamidam pravadanti santaḥ ||](#)

The definition of a friend is given by Bhṛthari in his Nīti Śatakam; one of the definitions is pāpāt nivārayathi; if the friend is committing a mistake, I can just point out and see whether he is available for listening; if he does not listen; leave it. Therefore, Kṛṣṇa says you are a friend; therefore it is my duty to suggest my solution to you; therefore you are my friend; you are my disciple; and therefore I decided to give out this wisdom; what type of wisdom, ētaḍ uttamam rahasyam; which is the greatest secret in the world.

Self-knowledge is considered to be the greatest secret. Why it is the greatest secret? Because what we are searching for in life happens to be within ourselves; and that which is very closely there, we will never search; like that person you know that story, how a person was carrying lot of money in the train; and a thief also was travelling along with him; No.1 thief; and it is from Kanyakumari to Jammu Tawi; 4 or 5 nights. During day time, he counts his money; and thief puts out his tongue, this much, we will see one hand in the night; in the night he will search and search and never finds: 2nd, 3rd, 4th day; at last he just decides to openly confess his inability and asks where did you hide, I am such a thief; and you defeated me. He said I hid it in a place where you will not search; where, under your pillow. So in the night, when you go to bathroom, I keep under the bed, and under your pillow, and in the early morning when you go to the bathroom, I take it out and put it in my pocket. The safest place was your own pillow. Similarly, whatever we are searching for in life:

बालस्तावत्क्रीडासक्तः
तरुणस्तावत्तरुणीसक्तः |
वृद्धस्तावच्चिन्तासक्तः... ॥

bālastāvatkṛīḍāsaktaḥ
taruṇastāvattaruṇīsaktaḥ |
vṛddhastāvaccintāsaktaḥ.. ॥

Where will we get nimmadhi Swamiji; please tell me? You ask; we are seeking nimmadhi and security and fullness and all those things and we can never find because it is hidden most secretive place and that is you yourselves; and therefore this wisdom is called uttamam rahasyam.

And this secret wisdom I have decided to give you, because you are ready to listen; the problem is what you know; when the whole world is searching for peace, these ṛiṣṭis sitting under the tree, they call him; why are you running, what are you searching, we can guide you to its location, etc. come to me they say; but No no No. I have to leave immediately. He wants to stop the running; to stop the running, he should at least listen a little bit; they do not have even that much time he says; Gīta after retirement. They have decided that way; When I am good for nothing, and when it is like I give you the example, suppose a person visits the Chār dhām; Gaṅgōtri, Yamunōtri, Kēdārñāth, Badrināth, he is returning in May month, they have opened, in May month, he visited and coming back, on his way back to Madras, I gift him a sweater and shawl; when he is returning; what's the use? When to give, when he is going. Similarly how to live the life; when should you learn; 99 and ½? So therefore, this is a teaching of how to live; and therefore, people unfortunately are not available for listening. Arjuna you are available and therefore I decided to teach you; ētad uttamam rahasyam; mayā prōktaḥ; taught by me; prōktaḥ;

Verse 4.4

अर्जुन उवाच
अपरं भवतो जन्म परं जन्म विवस्वतः ।
कश्चमेतद्विजानीयां त्वमादौ प्रोक्तवानिति ॥४.४॥

Arjuna uvāca
aparam bhavatō janma param janma vivasvataḥ |
kathamētadvijāniyām tvamādaū prōktavāniti ||4.4||

अर्जुन उवाच Arjuna uvāca Arjuna said, भवतः जन्म bhavataḥ janma your birth अपरम् aparam is later, जन्म janma the birth of the Lord Sun विवस्वतः परम्, vivasvataḥ param is much earlier, कथं विजानीयाम् kathām vijāniyām how am I to understand, एतत् ētat this (statement of yours), इति त्वं प्रोक्तवान् iti tvam prōktavān that you have taught (Lord Sun) आदौ ādaū in the beginning (of the creation)?

4. Arjuna asked – Your birth is later. The birth of Lord Sun is (much) earlier. How am I to understand this (statement of Yours) that You have taught (Lord Sun) in the beginning (of the creation)?

So in the previous three verses, Kṛṣṇa had talked about the glory of the Gīta; the glory is that it is the condensed vēdic wisdom; that is why it is called smṛtiḥ; the original scripture the vēda is called śrutiḥ; because it is heard by the ṛṣīs during their meditation; it was heard from the Lord; heard means internally heard; not the gross sound, but they heard; and therefore they are called śrutis. And all the other scriptures are whatever has been learned from the vēdās by the ṛṣīs; that vēdic wisdom, they remembered, they chewed and they gave out the same wisdom, which is well digested; like Horlicks, Complan, etc. the ṛṣīs put in their mouth, chewed well;

निगमकल्पतरुर्गलितं फलं, शुकमुखादमृतद्रवसंयुतम् ।
पिबत भागवतं रसमालयं, मुहुरहो रसिका भुवि भावुकाः ॥

Nigamakalpatarōrgalitaḥ phalaḥ, śukamukhādamṛtadravasamyutam |
pibata bhāgavataḥ rasamālayaḥ, muhuraḥō rasikā bhuvī bhāvukāḥ || Bhāgavatham ||

Nigamakalpatarōr, the vēda tree has produced the tree of wisdom; the Bhāgavatham wisdom, is taken by Śukha Mahaṛṣi and then digested and that one is given out; that means what, we need only digest half; half is already done by him; and Śukha has been used in a double meaning; like a bird; it is a fruit and again given out. And therefore it is called smṛtiḥ; smṛtiḥ means that which is remembered by the ṛṣīs and represented; and that Gīta is smṛtiḥ is the glory.

And now we are going to enter the next topic in the diversion; which is going to be based on Arjuna's question. When Arjuna heard this much; he gets a big doubt; the doubt is based on Kṛṣṇa's statement. What is that? I taught this wisdom to Surya Bhagavān at the time of creation; at the beginning of the creation; and then Kṛṣṇa said, I myself am teaching this same wisdom to you also.

Now Arjuna's doubt, Hey Kṛṣṇa, I can understand you teaching me; but when you say, you have taught Surya Bhagavān in the beginning of the creation, I am not able to swallow that statement, because I know you were recently born to Dēvaki; and we are almost of the same age; that is why we are able to be friends also; that is why, the word sakhā is used; samanā kyānō sakhāyō, those who have common inclinations etc. people of the same age will have common tendencies; therefore you are my friend, we are almost of the same age; how can you be the teacher of Surya Bhagavān; there is a chronological discrepancy; and therefore you must be bluffing. No doubt I am confused; but you cannot just because I am confused you cannot get away with any statement; if it is over-bluffing, I will not Ok my head; therefore, the secret of your contradictory statement. If you have taught Surya Bhagavān, you cannot teach me; if you are teaching me now, you did not exist at the time of creation.

This is Arjuna's question. Look at it. Arjuna uvāca, papraca; he asked. so hey Kṛṣṇa, bhavataḥ janma aparaṁ; your birth is very recent; within this century; within 100 years certainly only; aparaṁ here means recent; whereas Vivasvataḥ janma paraṁ; so the birth of Vivasvān, Surya Bhagavān is paraṁ; paraṁ means millennia before; not even centuries, but millennia before; because this is supposed to be the beginning of the creation. So then, kathaṁ ētat vijānīyāṁ; how am I to reconcile your two statements? How am I to reconcile your two statement? What are the two statements? That I am that the Lord is teaching Arjuna now and also you yourself taught Surya Bhagavān before; tvaṁ ādau prōktavān; that you are teaching me now, there is no question; because it is seen now; but what I am not able to accept; tvaṁ ēvaṁ ādhau Vivasvathē prōktavān; that you yourselves are Surya's Guru; that I cannot assimilate. Therefore tell me; what is the meaning of that statement; and as an answer to this question alone, Kṛṣṇa is going to introduce the topic of avathāra in the following verses, which details we will see in the next class.

Hari Om.

055 CHAPTER 04, VERSES 05-07

ॐ

I said in the last class that Kṛṣṇa gave a gist of karma-yōga and jñāna-yōga in the 2nd chapter and then karma-yōga topic was elaborated in the 3rd chapter and the jñāna-yōga is being elaborated in the 4th and 5th chapters; this is the development of the Gīta and therefore the 4th chapter happens to be jñāna-yōga-pradhāna chapter.

And before entering into this jñāna-yōga chapter, we find a small diversion in the first 8 verses; in the first 3 verses, Lord Kṛṣṇa glorifies this knowledge consisting of karma-yōga and jñāna-yōga and the glorification was that the very essence of karma and jñāna has already been taught at the beginning of the creation itself, which was received by Surya Bhagavān. So thus at the time of creation itself, the very same teaching was given in the name of vēda; and the very same vēdic wisdom is again revived in the name of Gīta. Only the names are different; in the beginning of the creation, it was vēda; and now it is called the Gīta. And Vēda was received by Surya Bhagavān and Gīta is being received by Arjuna. And therefore it an ancient-wisdom, it is a time-tested wisdom, and therefore it is reliable and valid-wisdom.

This is the idea that Kṛṣṇa wanted to convey. While conveying this idea; Kṛṣṇa mentioned one thing, which provoked a doubt in Arjuna and what was Kṛṣṇa's statement; I taught this same wisdom to Surya Bhagavān in the form of Vēdā and I am teaching the same wisdom in the form of Gīta to you. The students are different and the times are also different; not by few decades or not even centuries but by few millennia; the students are different; Kṛṣṇa's statement is that the students are different; but the teacher one and the same. Who is the teacher? Imaṁ vivasvatē yōgaṁ prōktavān ahaṁ avyayaṁ; there also aham; sa ēvāyaṁ mayā tē'dya yōgaḥ prōktaḥ purātanaḥ; now also I am teaching. This creates a doubt in Arjuna; therefore asked the question; how can You (Kṛṣṇa) be the teacher? Suppose I tell you, I only taught your great grandfather; you are laughing already; You cannot accept. I am teaching you, you will accept but you will never accept that I taught your great-grand-grandfather, if I say I taught, you will not accept because you know I was not existent at that time. And therefore Arjuna asked the question; how am I to reconcile your statements: Oh Kṛṣṇa, bhavatō janma aparāṁ; vivasvataḥ janma paraṁ; your birth is recent; your student's birth was long long time before; how can a recent person teach an ancient student? How am I to reconcile? So Arjuna does not totally negate Kṛṣṇa, because he has got faith in the Guru; therefore he only asked for clarification. This is Arjuna's question and for which Kṛṣṇa gives the answer from verse No.5 to 8.

Verse 4.5

श्री भगवानुवाच
बहूनि मे व्यतीतानि जन्मानि तव च अर्जुन ।
तानुहं वेद सर्वाणि न त्वं वेत्थ परन्तप ॥ ४.५ ॥

Śrī Bhagavān uvāca
bahūni mē vyatītāni janmāni tava cārjuna|
tānyahaṁ vēda sarvāṇi na tvaṁ vēttha parantapa|| 4.5 ||

श्रीभगवानुवाच Śrī Bhagavān uvāca The Lord answered, अर्जुन Arjuna Oh! Arjuna, बहूनि जन्मानि bahūni janmāni many births मे me of mine, च तव ca tava as well as of yours, व्यतीतानि vyatītāni have gone by, अहं वेद ahaṁ vēda I know, तानि सर्वाणि tāni sarvāṇi them all, परन्तप parantapa oh Arjuna! त्वं न वेत्थ tvaṁ na vēttha you do not know.

The Blessed answered -

5. Oh Arjuna! Many births of Mine as well as yours have gone by. I know them all. Oh Arjuna! You do not know.

By way of answering Arjuna's question, Lord Kṛṣṇa is introducing the topic of avathāra, which is an unique concept in vēdic tradition; avathāra is Lord's incarnation, which Kṛṣṇa points out is different from human-birth. When a human-being is born, we call it birth or janma; but when Lord appears in the creation, we call it avathāra; and Kṛṣṇa wants to say here that there are a lot of differences between janma and avathāra; birth and incarnation.

Before entering into the verse proper, I would like to discuss this topic of janma and avathāra proper. There are many differences between manuṣya-janma and Īśvara-avathāra; what are the differences?

Firstly the very cause of manuṣya-janma and Īśvara-avathāra are different; at the cause level itself, there is a difference. So kāraṇa bhēdaḥ is there; and secondly the very nature of manuṣya-janma and Īśvara-avathāra, there is a difference; svarūpams are different; their natures are different; and thirdly the very purpose of manuṣya-janma and Īśvara-avathāra are different; and therefore kārya bhēdaḥ; uddēśa- bhēdaḥ are there.

Thus there are three basic differences; kāraṇa-bhēdaḥ; svarūpa-bhēdaḥ; and uddēśa bhēdaḥ.

Now we will see what are the differences. The very first-difference is the cause of the Īśvara-avathāra and janma. In the case of a birth of a jīva; it is caused by ignorance. It is avidya or ignorance, which is the cause of the janma of a jīva; because of ignorance, the jīva has got the problem of ego; and because of the problem of ego or ahaṁkāra, there is the problem of karma and because of the problem of karma, there is the problem of puṇyam and pāpam; and because of the problem of the puṇyam and pāpam, there is a janma; therefore the janma of a jīva is because of ignorance, therefore we can call it as a fall. It is a clean fall of a jīva.

Whereas in the case of Īśvara, it is never because of ignorance that the birth of Īśvara takes place, it is because of his sarvajñātvam; omniscience; because of the knowledge alone, Bhagavān chooses to appear on the earth; and do what he has to do; the purpose we will discuss later; here I want to discuss cause; therefore what is the first difference? jīva janma is ajñānāt, Īśvara-avathāra is jñānāt; since the jīva-janma is because of ignorance, it is called fall, since Īśvara-avathāra is because of knowledge, it is called descendence, avathāra means coming down out of compassion. It is compassion-based; knowledge-based, conscious-deliberate descendence.

but here it is a fall; there is a difference in going-down-a-well and falling-in-the-well; when something falls into the well, some worker comes and goes down the well and picks up the thing from below the water, in village it used to be there; just goes down and picks up and comes up; that is descendence; when something falls, it is a helpless phenomenon. Therefore, kāraṇa-bhēdaḥ is the first-difference.

The second-difference is the very nature is different. What is the difference? Since jīva janma is because of ignorance, jīva continues to be a saṁsāri. He is a bound person. He is born with sorrow; which is indicated by crying, and continues that throughout the life. He is helpless; he is miserable; he is not a master of himself; he is a slave. As we saw in Muṇḍakōpaniṣad:

समाने वृक्षे पुरुषो निमग्नोऽनिशया शोचतो मुह्यमानः

samānē vṛkṣē puruṣo nimagnō:'niśayā śōcatō muhyamānaḥ || Muṇḍ 3.I.2 ||

therefore janma is saṁsāraḥ; whereas since Īśvara-avathāra is because of, or backed by knowledge, avathāra is nitya-muktha-svarūpaḥ and asamsāraḥ or asamsāri. So jīva is saṁsāri, avathāra is asamsāri.

And not only that, even technical difference, Kṛṣṇa points out in this context, that all the bodies are made up of matter, whether it is manuṣya-śarīram or avathāra-śarīram; but the scriptures say that there is a difference between avathāra-śarīram and jīva-śarīram.

And what is that difference? The jīva-śarīram is not directly out of prakṛti or māya; jīva-śarīram is indirectly born out of māya. What do you mean indirectly born out of māya or prakṛti; māya or prakṛti gets converted into five elements called pañca-bhūthanis and the five elements gets converted into the pañca-bhautika-śarīram. Thus māya does not directly produce the body, but through the five elements alone; it produces the jīva-śarīram; therefore jīva-śarīram is called pañca-bhautika-śarīram or the bhautika-śarīram, whereas in the case of Īśvara-avathāra, the māya does not go through the intermediary stage of five elements, without the intermediary-stage, the māya directly gets converted into Īśvara-avathāra śarīram, and therefore avathāra-śarīram is māyika-śarīram. Māyika-śarīram means māya-to-physical body; Bhautika-śarīram means māya-to-bhūtas-to-śarīram.

It is like we read in science most of the solid materials - will get converted into gas, by becoming liquid in between. This is the normal process solid to liquid to gas. Ice to water to steam. This is the normal process. But in the case of certain substances, they get directly converted from solid to gaseous state; that is the sublimation; similarly, māya sublimates without going through the pañca-bhautika-stage, it becomes māyika-śarīram.

So thus the second difference is in the nature of jīva-śarīram and avathāra-śarīram; the nature is one is baddha or saṁsāriṇa-pañca-bhautika-śarīram; whereas the other one is muktha-māyika-śarīram; and that is why Bhagavān is often called māya-mānuṣa-vēṣaḥ.

Nobody calls us that way. Bhūta-mānuṣya-vēṣaḥ; bhūta, the five elements have got converted. So this is the second-difference at the level of the nature. So we have seen kāraṇa-bhēdaḥ; we have svarūpa-bhēdaḥ.

Now what is the third difference between Īśvara-avathāra and the jīva-janma? The difference is in the purpose. When a jīva is born; it is purely to exhaust the puṇyam and pāpam which have been acquired in the past. We have seen long before that there is an accumulated any amount of puṇya and papās. Of that accumulated puṇya-pāpa, a portion becomes ready and the accumulated one is called sañjita; the mature portion is called prārabdhaḥ, the prārabdhaḥ has to be exhausted. And the prārabdhaḥ can be exhausted only through sukha-duḥkha-anubhavaḥ; prārabdha-puṇyam is exhausted through sukham, prārabdha-pāpam is exhausted through duḥkham, i.e. pleasure and pain, and to experience pleasure and pain we require the body-medium. And therefore it is the prārabdhaḥ which determines the type of body for exhausting puṇya-pāpa. When it is puṇya-predominant-prārabdhaḥ, it will give you nice body, nice parentage, nice family, nice environment. When it is pāpa-predominant prārabdhaḥ, it will give you sick-body, sick-environment, sick-parentage, why because that is the only way we exhaust our puṇyam and pāpam.

And that is why the very design of the body is for the purpose of puṇya-pāpa exhaustion. And that is why we are not able to design the body, genetic diseases, hereditary diseases, all these we are not able to control, because that amount of karma we have to exhaust. Therefore, what is the purpose of jīva-janma; puṇya-pāpa-kṣayam. Exhaustion of puṇyam and pāpam.

And what is the purpose of avathāra? Can you say puṇya-pāpa-kṣayam? Avathāra is not ignorant; not a saṁsāri; therefore avathāra does not suffer from the problem of ego and since there is no ego or ahaṁkāra, there is no question of puṇyam or pāpam. Therefore Īśvara is puṇya-pāpa-athithaḥ; therefore Īśvara can never take an avathāra to exhaust the puṇya-pāpam. He should have first to exhaust! If Īśvara-avathāra is not meant for puṇya-pāpa-kṣaya, then what is the purpose? Kṛṣṇa tells

परित्राणाय साधूनाम् विनाशाय च दुष्कृताम् ।
धर्मसंस्थापनार्थाय सम्भवामि युगे युगे ॥४.८॥

paritrāṇāya sādūnām vināśāya ca duṣkṛtām|
dharmasamsthāpanārthāya sambhavāmi yugē yugē||4.8||

Īśvara-avathāra purpose is protection of dharma and destruction of adharma by protecting the dhārmic-people and by destroying adhārmic-people. So the purpose is dharma-rakṣaṇam or śiṣṭa-rakṣaṇam, to protect, to bless the world.

And that is why the very nature of avathāra, avathāra-śarīram is not designed according to puṇya-pāpa; in the case of jīva śarīram, the design is based on puṇya-pāpa, if good stock of puṇya, no disease body; and if pāpa stock is more, problem from the birth itself. So what will determine the design of the Īśvara-Śarīram or avathāra-śarīram? It will not be for puṇya-pāpa exhaustion; it must be only for lōka-rakṣaṇa or dharma-samsthāpana purpose. It is determined by the type of dharma-rakṣaṇa required.

And that is why you will find before every avathāra comes, there will be a portion in the purāṇā, where all the noble people go and pray to the Lord. Oh Lord, you need not come down for your purpose; but you should come for our purpose. Then He will ask as though He does not know; for what purpose. Generally, some rākṣasa will be there. In the olden days, one or two; Now there are too many; that is the problem; there will be one Rāvaṇa will be there or Hiraṇyakaśipu will be there; they will say please come and destroy of Rāvaṇa. Then what is the purpose of avathāra; Rāvaṇa saṁhāra; at least one of the purposes; then what should be the design of the body; it depends upon the situation; and you know that according to Ramāyaṇa, Rāvaṇa had asked for a special boon, what is the special boon:

रावणो मानुषात् अनैहि अवद्यत्वम् ततानुज ।
निद्रैवत्वम् च य निद्राम् ,कुम्बकर्णो वृणीतचा ॥

rāvaṇō mānuṣāt anaihi avadyatvam tatānuja |
nidrēvatvam ca ya nidrām, kumbakarṇō vṛṇītacā ||

Sri Ramō Dandatha... for Sānskrīt study in olden days. Nobody knows. People think it is some tooth; it is not Rāma's-tooth. It is Sri Rāma Udānthaḥ; udānthaḥ means story. So Rāvaṇa has asked for a peculiar boon; what is that; nobody other than human-beings should kill me. He was so confident that human-beings cannot kill. Therefore if Rāvaṇa has to be destroyed, Bhagavān's avathāra has to be human alone, therefore the design is determined by what? The purpose of avathāra, which is dharma saṁsthāpana.

Similarly, if the akramās was done by Hiraṇyakaśipu, what design can be there for Īśvara-Avathāra? It cannot be manuṣya, it cannot be paśu also; because of the peculiar boons of Hiraṇyakaśipu, that I should not be killed by human-beings or animals; therefore the avathāra śarīram must be Narasiṁha; and not only that, lot of nails should be there; because no weapons should be used. That is the second condition. Then what should be the time? That also is determined by the purpose. Hiraṇyakaśipu has said that he should not be killed during day or night; therefore the avathāra should be in-between.

So thus, the purpose of avathāra is dharma saṁsthāpanam or lōka-anugraha and therefore the design of the body also will be according to that; sometime a bhaktha may pray to the Lord to have darśanam in a particular form. Even they tell that story; that one humble innocent person, sincere devotee; he went to a temple priest and he asked in what form should I worship the Lord. And the priest, he got wild, because he was very very busy, then he said worship as buffalo. He said in anger.

And like the Nachikēta story, this person took that as upadēśa and he was meditating upon the Lord as a buffallo with big horn; and the Lord wanted to teach a lesson to the priest also. Teach a lesson to the world-also, that you can worship Me in any form; one day what happened, they had to take the utsava-vigraha for pradakṣiṇā; and when they were bringing it out, they were not able to bring out; some obstruction was there; everybody was struggling; and this innocent-person, he went and said, you are not able to take out, because the horn is obstructing. What horn? No the Bhagavān is buffalo rūpam, therefore the horn is obstructing and I can very clearly see the horn; therefore tilt your vigraha slightly to the right, and take it out; it happened. The idea is Bhagavān will assume any form for the sake of bhaktha-anugraha; kāraṇa bhēdaḥ is: one is ajñānāt; the other is jñānāt.

Svarūpa bhēdaḥ is: one is saṁsāri, other is asaṁsāri.

and Uddēśa bhēdaḥ is: one is for lōka-saṅgrahaḥ and the other is for puṇya-pāpa kṣayam.

And Kṛṣṇa here tells since avathāra is not restricted by ignorance, the avathāras know the past, present and future; Sarvajñāḥ; therefore all my previous incarnations, I know, Kṛṣṇa says; whereas in the case of jīva-janma; since ignorance limits the jīva; the jīva cannot know what is the past janma; and better you do not know also. Just seeing the nādi, etc. and he will say to the husband that you were a cat or a mouse, etc. That is enough for quarrel in this janma but also in the coming. So better we do not know the past janma. And better we do not know the future janma, because we are not able to present itself, why know the past and future and get confused. Therefore Bhagavān says avathāra is sarvajñāḥ and therefore he knows the past, present and future-janmas, whereas jīva is alpajñāḥ and therefore jīva cannot know the past and future-janmas.

Then the next question is how to know, whether one is avathāra or janma? So how to know whether one is avathāra or janma. Sometimes our mother's scold, avathāram, avathāram; I am not talking about that; how to know which one is avathāra or janma. The problem is we have no method of knowing which one is avathāra, which one is janma; wherever scriptural support is there, we accept them as avathāra. So Rāma is avathāra; what is the proof? Scriptures; Kṛṣṇa is an avathāra; what is proof? Scriptures; wherever there is someone about scriptures do not say anything, we have no way of proving whether one is avathāra or janma; it is purely our personal belief. It is our personal belief; neither can we prove one is avathāra, nor can we disprove one is not an avathāra.

If you are going to say that extra-ordinary siddhis or powers make an avathāra; you will find that many rākṣasās had extra ordinary siddhis, then those rākṣasās also will become avathāra; Indrajit had capacity to appear in 10 bodies; 12 bodies; he can disappear at will; and he can be here also, he can be elsewhere also. Thus siddhis do not prove avathāra because, even a human being can attain siddhis by following sādhanas and even rākṣasās attained siddhis by following sādhana and therefore that does not prove.

And limitations also does not disprove avathāra; because certain avathāras, at least showed certain limitations. For example, Rāma is said to be and accepted universally as avathāra; but in the story, we find several things which can be taken as natural limitation. Rāma had to send people in search of Sītā; one can argue, if avathāra is sarvajñāḥ; why not sent Āñjanēya directly to Lanka; why sent so many people all over; and why should he build a bridge? He could have easily walked over; why walk; he could have gone to Lanka just by the thought. Even though there are certain limitations, we have accepted Rāma as avathāra; and even where certain siddhis and powers are there; as in Rākṣasā, we are not ready to accept as avathāra; therefore it is very clear; that you cannot prove anyone to be avathāra or not. And it is purely one's personal belief.

But one great consolation is, we need not know whether one is avathāra or not, for our spiritual growth. In fact, we do not even require an avathāra for a spiritual growth. What is required for spiritual growth? Purity of mind; and for purity of mind, worshipping any available form of God is good enough. You have got 10 avathāras; Why only 10; Bhāgavatha says avathāraḥ asaṅgēya; 10 are prominent ones; the available scriptures avathāras themselves are more than sufficient for getting citta-śuddhiḥ; by worshipping those avathāras. If I want to accept somebody as avathāra; I can; if I do not want to accept somebody as avathāra or anybody as avathāra; I need not; because for my purification I require what? Īśvara pūja in Rāma form, Kṛṣṇa form, Dēvi form, Viṅayaka form; after all our Hindu panel has 33.3 crores. You do not require an avathāra for citta śuddhiḥ. If you want; you can have; but it is not a compulsory thing.

The next thing that is required for spiritual growth is knowledge; knowledge requires a guru; need not be an avathāra; and even if an avathāra has to bless, the blessing can be only by becoming a guru. Kṛṣṇa can never give mōkṣa to Arjuna, by any method other than becoming a guru.

[Vasudēvasutaṁ dēvaṁ kaṁsacāṇūramardanam |
dēvakīparamānandaṁ ... |](#)

(all these will not give mōkṣa),

Kṛṣṇaṁ-vandē jagadgurum and jñānamudrāya kṛṣṇāya.

Therefore for citta-śuddhiḥ we do not require avathāra; for knowledge we do not require avathāra; therefore avathāra maybe there; may not be there; right now; I may be willing to accept somebody as avathāra; I may not be willing to accept somebody as avathāra. But what is important? Purify, know, and be free.

If somebody wants to accept somebody as avathāra, do not criticise. If you accept that person as avathāra, well and good for worship and if somebody does not want to accept; do not try to prove also to those who won't accept it. Those who do not want; let them not have it; but both of them can attain mōkṣa; how, by purification. Knowledge and freedom.

And Kṛṣṇa we all uniformly accept as Avathāra; therefore Kṛṣṇa says Arjuna I am avathāra different from you; therefore my cause of birth is knowledge and my nature is mōkṣa. And my purpose is what: paritrāṇāya sādḥūnām. This is the topic of avathāra given in this portion.

With this background, we will go to the verse. Kṛṣṇa says: hē Arjuna, bahūni janmāni mē vyatītāni; many janmas have gone by for you, you have taken many janmas; bahūni janmāni vyatītāni tava; for you; may, I have also taken many śarīrams. So you have also taken many śarīrams; I have also taken many śarīrams; number of śarīrams does not prove superiority. Some people try to say that this is my 56th śarīram, as though it is a great thing. We can argue that it is out 56000th or so. The number does not mean anything because we have also taken infinite śarīram; Bhagavān has also taken. Therefore Kṛṣṇa says; bahūni janmāni vyatītāni, but what is the difference between you and me? Ahaṁ tāni sarvāṇi Veda; I continue to be a free-person; I continue to be sarvajñān; therefore I know all the past śarīrams; then what about you? Tvaṁ na vētta; you do not know your past śarīrams; even past śarīram or past class is not remembered! When last week is of doubtful case, what to talk of last janma; tvaṁ na vētta hey Parantapa.

अजोऽपि सन्नव्ययात्मा भूतानामीश्वरोऽपि सन् ।
प्रकृतिं स्वामधिष्ठाय सम्भवाम्यात्ममायया ॥४.६॥ ajō'pi sannavyayātmā bhūtānāmīśvarō'pi san |

prakṛtiṁ svāmadhiṣṭhāya sambhavāmyātmamāyayā||4.6||

अपि सन् अजः api san ajaḥ Even though I am birthless, अव्ययात्मा avyayātmā (and) deathless, अपि सन् ईश्वरः भूतानाम् api san Īśvaraḥ bhūtānām even though I am the Lord of beings, सम्भवामि sambhavāmi (still) I take birth, आत्म-मायया ātmamāyayā through my own Māya, अधिष्ठाय adhiṣṭhāya by resorting to, स्वां प्रकृतिम् svām prakṛtim My prakṛti

6. Even though I am birthless and deathless, even though I am the Lord of beings, (still), I take birth through My own Māya by resorting to My prakṛti.

So here Kṛṣṇa talks about the nature of the avathāra; अहम् अजः aham ajaḥ; aham अहम् अव्ययात्मा aham avyayātmā; अहम् ईश्वरः भूतानाम् aham bhūtānām Īśvaraḥ. I know that I am birthless Brahman. I know my nature. Even though people may celebrate Janmaṣṭami, I do not get confused because of birthday celebrations, I know I am birthless reality and this śarīram is a simple veṣaḥ I have put for a purpose. So I know I am ajaḥ; ajaḥ means not goat; those who learn Sānskrīt, first lesson is ajaḥ. Goat. Gajaḥ; elephant. So in the initial enthusiasm of the fresh learning of Sānskrīt do not translate ajaḥ as Goat and think that Bhagavān is Goat. He is also Goat. That is a different matter; but here ajaḥ means na jāyatē iti ajaḥ; And avyayātmā, and I am of changeless nature; not subject to decay and death; so jarā maraṇa varjitaḥ; ajaḥ means janma varjitha; avyayātmā means jarā maraṇa varjitaḥ; not only I am free from birth and death; bhūtānām Īśvaraḥ; and I am the master of all the living beings; I am not a limited entity; but I am svatantra; I am master; I have not helplessly come down to this world; I have chosen to come to this world.

And how do I manage to come down; prakṛtim svām adhiṣṭāya; by keeping the prakṛti, the matter, the material body under my control I am born. So I am surrounded by matter; jīva is also surrounded by matter, the difference is I am the master of the matter; whereas jīva is slave of the matter or śarīram. Therefore prakṛtim svām adhiṣṭāya.

Swami Chinmayānanda tells a nice example, that a child was going along with his father, on the road. So a thief was coming and a policeman was holding the hand of the thief. So the child asked Father, who is this; This is a thief; This is a policeman, Policeman is required otherwise he will run away. After some time the boy found that another thief was going; and there were two policemen with him, holding him. So the boy asked, Father, Why? And the father replied, this person is a bigger thief; so two policemen, to take extra care. Thereafter, when they were going, the President of the country was coming; surrounded by many policemen. Then the children have the knack of telling the wrong thing at the right time. Now the child, Daddy, Daddy, the biggest thief is going; why because surrounded by many police. Then the father had to explain the difference between thief and President, because both are surrounded by police. In one case, the person is controlled by the Police, in the other case, one is the controller of the Police. The three armies are controlled by the President.

In the same way, I am also surrounded by body-mind-complex; Bhagavān is also surrounded by body-mind-complex called prakṛti; I am a slave; Lord is a master. Therefore he says: svām prakṛtim adhiṣṭāya, aham sambhavāmi, I take a body; how? Ātma-māyaya; with the help of māya-tatvam, by producing māyika-śarīram. That is I do not require the five elements' intervention; māya itself I can directly convert into the śarīram and that is why Bhagavān does not require the regular process of creation.

So even garbhavāsa is not required; in the case of Rāmavathāra also, is not regular process; that is why they say, that the Lord entered into the Garbha; and in the case of Narasimha etc. where is the question of father, mother or anything? from where did the body come? what is the method? nothing; and straightaway and full-fledged form; how is it possible; because it is direct conversion of māya otherwise called prakṛti and therefore Bhagavān says, ātma māyaya sambhavāmi.

And when do I take avathāra. Kṛṣṇa says:

Verse 4.7

यदा यदा हि धर्मस्य ग्लानिर्भवति भारत ।
अभ्युत्थानमधर्मस्य तदात्मानं सृजाम्यहम् ॥४.७॥

yadā yadā hi dharmasya glānirbhavati bhārata|
abhyutthānamadharmasya tadā"tmānaṁ sṛjāmyaham||4.7||

भारत bhārata oh! Arjuna, यदा यदा yadā yadā whenever, भवति ग्लानिः bhavati glāniḥ there is decline, धर्मस्य dharmasya of righteousness, अभ्युत्थानम् abhyutthānam (and) increase, अधर्मस्य adharmasya of unrighteousness, तदा हि tadā hi then indeed, अहं सृजामि आत्मानम् ahaṁ sṛjāmi ātmānam I create myself.

7. Oh Arjuna! Whenever there is decline of righteousness (and) increase of unrighteousness, then indeed, I create Myself.

So here the purpose of avathāra is given; previous one, the nature was given; here the purpose is given. The cause is not mentioned here; we have to supply. And what is the purpose: He says yadā yadā hi dharmasya glāniḥ; this is a popular verse; after the Mahābhāratha TV serial; every child knows; through TV you can approach the children. So whenever dharma declines, whenever values decline, so dharmasya glāniḥ bhavati; and adharmasya abhyutthānam; whenever adharmā increases, unrighteousness increases, corruption increases, tadā"tmānaṁ sṛjāmi; then I create myself. That means I chose whenever it is required.

And this we can understand in a scientific manner also. If the world can be compared to a human body, cosmic body, because like a body, it functions in harmony, like an organism it functions in harmony, and any harmonious system will have its own intrinsic protection device will be there; any natural healthy system will have the provision for its own self-protection; exactly as in the case of a healthy body.

In fact, really speaking, we do not require any medicine to cure most of the diseases; you ask the doctors, they will say, our body has got all the protection within itself. If you see certain simple phenomenon; suppose something enters my nostril; and what do we do; immediately it has to be protected; therefore you do not plan; you automatically sneeze. That is why sneeze can never be controlled; you cannot say wait; you just sneeze; why because it is not will-born, it is intrinsically provided in the system; if some dust particle enters your eye, then tears come; because the system has to be protected. If something enters the stomach, when you eat the jackfruit, if you do not clean it properly, it can create endless problem, you will be in the bathroom most of the time; heavy loose motions, why, because it has to be removed. All these things happen why? A natural system should have a natural protection. And this natural protection faculty will not be operative all the time; if sneezing is going to be all the time; sneezing is not all the time; loose motion is not all the time; tears are not all the time; yadā yadā hi; whenever the system's harmony is disturbed, the system itself produces an appropriate remedy.

The universe is a cosmic system; the Bhagavān's śarīram and whenever there is a disturbance, the world itself will find an appropriate method of defending the dharma; and when will it become active; whenever it is required. Therefore avathāra is like the immunity system of the universe. Exactly like the individual immunity system, avathāra is cosmic immunity system, if you ask, why no avathāra has come now, we will say that it is not yet required. If it has come, it is required; whenever it is required; it will automatically happen. The details in the next class.

ॐ

In the beginning of the 4th chapter, Lord Kṛṣṇa talked about the glory of the Gīta and the glory of the Gīta is that it is the Vēda Sāraḥ itself. What was given in the beginning of the creation as the Vēdas, the same thing is given to Arjuna in the name of the Gīta. The scriptures themselves talk about how the Vēdās is propagated. In Śvetāśvatara Upaniṣad, there is a mantra,

यो ब्रह्माणं विदधाति पूर्वं ,यो वै वेदांश्च प्रहिणोति तस्मै ।
तं ह देवं आत्मबुद्धिप्रकाशं, मुमुक्षुर्वै शरणमहं प्रपद्ये ॥ ७.१८ ॥

yō brahmāṇam vidadhāti pūrvaṁ, yō vai vēdāṁśca prahiṇōti tasmai. । taṁ ha dēvaṁ ātmabuddhiprakāśaṁ, mumukṣurvai śaraṇamaham prapadyē ॥ 7.18॥

This mantra says that the vēda is not the invention of any human being; vēdic wisdom has a super human origin, that at the time of creation itself, the Lord first creates Brahmāji. In the purāṇaḥ from his own navel Brahmāji appears and the Lord himself gives the vēdic wisdom to Brahmaji. So yo brahmāṇaṁ vidadhāti pūrvaṁ yo vai vēdāṁśca prahiṇōti tasmai. And that is why the four heads of Brahmāji represent the four vēdas, and Brahmāji teaches this vēdic wisdom to his disciples and the parampara is maintained. Therefore Lord is supposed to be the author of the Vēda.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa says I alone taught the vēdic-wisdom in the beginning of the creation; and I alone am teaching the very vēdic-wisdom now in the name of the Gīta. And when Kṛṣṇa said this, Arjuna had a doubt, when there is such a big gap between the age of Arjuna, and the beginning of the creation, how can one reconcile that the teacher is one and the same.

When such a question was asked, Lord Kṛṣṇa is introducing the topic of avathāra; I am the original-Viṣṇu who gave out the vēdic-wisdom then, and that Viṣṇu alone is now in the form of Bhagavān-Kṛṣṇa. Behind the Viṣṇu-Śārīram-then, and behind the Kṛṣṇa-Śārīram-now, the Lord is one; the difference is only in the vēṣa; but the Lord is only one. And not only the Lord teaches now, He also says that I am aware of this fact, that I am Bhagavān; I alone have taken all the janmas, matsya, kurma, varāḥ etc. and I have now taken Kṛṣṇa-śārīram, I know all these details; and therefore I am Bhagavān-Viṣṇu's avathāra.

Then naturally the question will come, avathāra also takes body, and the saṁsāris also take body, what is the difference between avathāra's-śārīra-grahaṇam and the jīvā's-śārīra-grahaṇam? And we say that even though śārīram-grahaṇam (means what, taking a body) is common to both; there are certain fundamental-differences. The cause is different. The nature is different; the purpose is different; The Lord takes a body with knowledge and because of his omniscience. So jñānam is the cause of Īśvara-avathāra, whereas in the case of jīvā, ajñānam is the cause of jīvā-janma (jīvā-avathāra you cannot tell). Jīvā's-fall. One is descent or descendance, the other one is fall.

Then the second-difference we saw was, since the Lord takes the body with omniscience or knowledge; the Lord continues to a liberated one. Therefore Lord is Nitya muktah svarūpaḥ; whereas when jīvā takes śārīram, it is bondage; it is bhadda-svarūpa. And one more difference we saw; that Lord's-śārīram is directly born out of Māya; therefore it is called māyika-śārīram; whereas Jīvā's body is directly born out of māya, but through the intermediary process of the five elements. And therefore Jīvā-śārīram is bhautika śārīram, Īśvara-śārīram is māyika-śārīram. This is the second-difference in nature.

And the third difference between Īśvara and Jīvā janma is the very purpose of arrival. Jīvā arrives to exhaust his prārabha puṇya-pāpam; whereas Īśvara arrives not to exhaust puṇya-pāpam, but only to uplift the world. And that is why, Īśvara's arrival is called leela. For Īśvara life is a sport, for jīvā life is a drag, because problem after problem. You ask anyone how is everything; nobody enthusiastically says wonderful; just going on; chalta hai; OK; so and so; pōyindirikku; (similar words in other languages) and only you have to ask one or two more questions, Rāmayaṇa comes, Mahābhāratha comes, Bhāgavatha comes. For Lord, life is a sport; for jīvā life is a burden.

And of these three differences, Lord Kṛṣṇa is pointing out the third difference at the level of purpose in the seventh verse, which we are seeing now. Yada hi Dharmasya Glanir bhavathi, whenever there is a declension of dharma, Dharma we have seen in the third chapter, means cosmic harmony, cosmic rhythm, cosmic health. If you take the whole universe as a body, the cosmic orderliness is called cosmic health. At the individual level also, if every organ is functioning in harmony, it is health; that is why in Ayurvēda śāstra, health is defined as dhātu sāmyam. Dhātu means the various ingredients in the body; there is equilibrium. And ill health is called dhāu vaiṣamyam. And mouth decides to eat more sugar, but pancreas decides not to produce insulin. Therefore there is a disharmony, between eating and absorbing. That means there is ill-health. Similarly, at the cosmic level also; if there is harmony, it is called dharma, and harmony alone protects the universe.

धर्मो विश्वस्य जगतः प्रतिष्ठा लोके प्रजा उपसर्पन्ति धर्मेण पापमपनुदति धर्मे सर्वं प्रतिष्ठितं तम्माध्दर्म परमं वदन्ति ॥
Mahānārāyanōpaniṣad ७९. ७ ॥

Dharmō viśvasya jagataḥ pratiṣṭhā lōkē prajā upasarpanti dharmēṇa pāpamapanudati dharmē sarvaṁ pratiṣṭhitaṁ tammādhdarmaṁ paramaṁ vadanti || Mahānārāyanōpaniṣad 79. 7 ||

Dharma alone is the health of the world and that alone sustains the world. The word dharma is derived from the root, धृ dhṛ to sustain. dhārayati iti dharma. Sustains what? cosmos.

And once the orderliness is disturbed, the whole cosmos will be destroyed; we cannot survive; as they are talking about ecology, environmental protection and all; if there is a nuclear explosion, what will be nuclear winter? The-day-after, there is a documentary or a movie, it seems; if there is a nuclear war, what all will be the consequences? Many people will die immediately and many other people will have a very very slow tortuous death; will be tortured.

That means what? Harmony protects the creation and if there is no harmony, who will have to maintain the creation? The manufacturer should have an inbuilt method of saving his product; any intelligent manufacturer keeps a fuse. If there is more power, there is an automatic system of fuse going; for what purpose; to protect the system. Any intelligent manufacturer will create an inbuilt protective system. Similarly Bhagavān has manufactured the whole creation; therefore it is his responsibility is to maintain it.

And if this inbuilt system does not work, then Bhagavān will have to interfere, because Bhagavān is not only the sṛṣṭi kartā, he is also, sthithikartā. And therefore Lord says here, as the sthithakartā of the universe I will come. When? Not very often; yadā yadā hi dharmasya glānir; whenever there is a declension of dharma and naturally, abhyutthānamadharmasya. When the adharma increases, corruption increases; then tadā, at all those times, ahaṁ ātmānam sṛjāmi, I myself will consciously, deliberately, voluntarily I will take the body.

That is the difference. Can we tell I have chosen to take this body? No. prārabdhaḥ has brought this; it is not voluntarily chosen body; whereas in the case of the Lord, he says that I choose to assume the required type of body.

Verse 4.8

परित्राणाय साधूनाम् विनाशाय च दुष्कृताम् ।
धर्मसंस्थापनार्थाय सम्भवामि युगे युगे ॥४.८॥

[paritrāṇāya sādḥūnām vināśāya ca duṣkṛtām|
dharmasamsthāpanārthāya sambhavāmi yugē yugē||4.8|](#)

परित्राणाय paritrāṇāya for the protection of, साधूनाम् sādḥūnām the righteous, विनाशाय vināśāya for the destruction of, दुष्कृताम् duṣkṛtām the unrighteous, च ca and धर्मसंस्थापनार्थाय dharmasamsthāpanārthāya for the establishment of righteousness, युगे युगे yugē yugē in every age.

8. For the protection of the righteous, for the destruction of the unrighteous, and for the establishment of righteousness, I am born in every age.

How will the Lord protect dharma; and how will the Lord destroy adharma; he says that dharma is protected by protecting the people who follow dharma; dhārmika puruṣaḥ rakṣaṇēna dharmāḥ rakṣitaḥ bhavati. If you want to protect science, what should you do? It is not by printing books that you protect and promote science, instead, if you want to promote science, there is only one way; what is that way? By promoting the scientists, you promote the science. How do you promote music? Not by printing music books; but promoting and helping the musicians; because music does not exist independently, it always exist in people; therefore you can protect music by supporting the musicians; How do you protect vēda? Not by printing more books; that is very easy. Only by protecting those people who are studying the vēda; vēda pātaśāla you have to protect; whoever whichever want to study the vēda, he must be protected; therefore, protection of vēda is by protecting vaidika, protection of science is by protecting the scientists, protection of dharma is not by printing more dharma sāstra books, protection of dharma is by protecting the dharmic people.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa says. sādḥūnām paritrāṇāya. I take avathāra, to support the dhārmic people. And similarly how do you destroy adharmā; not by destroying books again, only by destroying the people who are the cause of adharmā; adhārmika puruṣaḥ nāśanēna adharmāḥ nāśaḥ bhavati; there is a beautiful phrase; śiṣṭa rakṣaṇam; duṣṭa śikṣaṇam; (you cannot interpolate this!). duṣṭa means adhārmic people, śikṣaṇam means punishing and śiṣṭa means dhārmic people, rakṣaṇam means protecting, and that is why in the Gīta dhyāna-slokās, we have a beautiful verse.

भीष्मद्रोणतटा जयद्रथजला गान्धारनीलोत्पला ।
शल्यग्राहवती कृपेणा वहनी कर्णेन वेलाकुला ।
अश्वत्थामविकर्णघोरमकरा दुर्योधनावर्तिनी ।
सोत्तीर्णा खलु पाण्डवै रणनदि कैवर्तकः केशवः ॥४॥

bhīṣmadrōṇataṭā jayadrathajalā gāndhāranīlōtpalā
śalyagrāhavatī kṛpēṇa vahanī karṇēna vēlākulā
aśvatthānavikarṇaghōramakarā duryōdhanāvartini
sōttīrṇā khalu pāṇḍavai raṇanadi kaivartakaḥ kēśavaḥ||6||

If you make a logical study of the comparative strengths of the two armies, by all means Duryōdhanā's army is more powerful; both quantitatively and qualitatively; Duryōdhanā's army is powerful; not only they are powerful, they alone have got all kinds of tricks also. All mischief Śakuni and Duryōdhanā knows. One Bhīṣma can destroy all people. One Drōṇa as the Guru he knows the weakness of the Pāndavās. Guru will only know the weaknesses of the śiṣyā. Swamiji I will ask in private. Guru knows what the śiṣyā is. So Drōṇa knows what the weaknesses of everyone; but in spite of this much difference, if the Pāndavās won, it is because of what; kaivartakaḥ kēśavaḥ and therefore śiṣṭa-rakṣaṇam; duṣṭa-śikṣaṇam. Destroying the adhārmic people.

Here also we should make a note that the adhārmic people can be destroyed in two ways; adhārmic people can be destroyed in two ways; one method is converting them from adharmā to dharma; by sama, dāna, bhēdaḥ (without nāśa and hiṁsā, when you convert the person from adharmā to dharma, you have destroyed the adharmic person) "destroyed" and Bhagavān tries that first; First itself he does not cut the head. Just give them sufficient opportunity and time to change, for Rāvaṇa, even during the last moment, இன்று போயி நாளை வர Indrupōi Nālai vā; still he gives chance.

Similarly for Duryōdhanā also, in the last moment, Kṛṣṇa went as an emissary, messenger and requested, we are ready for compromise. 5 villages you give, or one village with 5 houses, or one house with five bedrooms; or one house with five chairs; then Duryōdhanā said even for one pinhead space I will not give. That means what? sāma, dhāna, bēdaḥs have failed; and therefore Kṛṣṇa said, tasmāt yuddhasya-bhārata; Arjuna, destroy them.

Therefore here He says, duṣkṛtām-vināśāya and also dharma-saṁsthāpanārthāya; and Bhagavān established dharma in a different way also; kṣatriya can establish dharma in one day, brāhmaṇa in one way.

How does kṣatriya establish dharma; by promoting and patronising the dharmic people. What all things they need, it should be provided. If any person is violating dharma, put him in prison, punish; a ruler alone can do that; this is one method of sustaining dharma; promote the dhārmic people, and punish the adhārmic people, this is the method of kṣatriya.

Whereas brāhmaṇa cannot promote dhārmic people; according to varṇāśrama-saṁpradhāya; promotee cannot promote anyone, because he himself is promoted by someone; where he will go and ask; therefore brāhmaṇa cannot promote dharma by money or anything, because he does not earn at all; in the original system; now brāhmaṇās are businessmen. Similarly, brāhmaṇa has no right to punish anyone; just as even now, if we catch a thief, we have no right to punish, we have to handover that thief to the Police; and then the court and enquiry have to do what they are supposed to do; we have no right to judge and punish; how does brāhmaṇa sustain dharma? Brāhmaṇa sustains dharma by teaching, which is the better form of promoting dharma; by punishment you can never promote dharma permanently; By police people, you cannot keep harmony; you can see in the traffic; eve-teasing, everywhere put a policeman, where all you can police. It is impossible to put a policeman everywhere and protect that is all only temporary make shift remedy, the ultimate promotion of dharma is a person should have a value for dharma. If I have a value for traffic rules, I do not require a police person. At any time, I stop, because I know that it is important for the harmony; and if there is a harmonious traffic system, it is only good for others; it is good for me only ultimately. Therefore the ultimate conversion is through teaching and what is teaching; why dharma should be followed; I should know.

That is why Dayānanda swamiji beautifully says: A value is a value only when the value of the value is valued by you. A value is a value only when the value of the value is valued by you. And to know the value of a value, you require a sensitive mind; because when someone violates a value, I do not suffer immediately.

Like by cutting a tree, I do not suffer immediately. when everybody goes on cutting trees, and converting houses into flats, a time will come, when the whole city is polluted; and then everybody falls sick, ask Bombay, Delhi what is happening; you cannot drink water, you cannot breath, and after sometime, one has to walk everywhere, wearing masks. That is why they said: அரண் ஆன்று கொல்வான்; தைவம் நின்று கொல்லும் araśaṅ āṅru kolvāṅ; taivam niṅru kollum. (King kills immediately but God in due course). Therefore I should know the long-term effects of violation of dharma, which requires a sensitive mind; sensitive mind is developed only by teaching; not by advising; speak truth, speak truth, if you say, it is not going to help. You have to teach what is honesty? So kṣatriya protects dharma by protecting the dhārmic people and punishing adhārmic people whereas brāhmaṇa protects dharma by teaching and if you see Bhagavān's avathāra, Kṛṣṇa has done both. How did he do both; Kṛṣṇa protected dhārmic-people like Dharmaputra; and destroyed adhārmic-people like Duryōdhanā; this is Kṛṣṇa's kṣatriya job, and when he taught the Gīta, Kṛṣṇa taught dharma also.

And that is why he has put dharma-saṁsthāpanārthāya and that is reason, among the ten avathāras, Rāma-avathāra and Kṛṣṇa-avathāra are supposed to be the most important avathāras because only in these two avathāras teaching is involved; matsya-avathāra; what teaching? What can a fish teach? Kurma avathāra what teaching? Nothing. Varāha-avathāra; no teaching; but among the 10 avathāras, Rāma taught by living dharma, and Kṛṣṇa taught by teaching Dharma, and therefore these two avathāras we value more. That is why Rāmnavami is there, and Kṛṣṇa aṣṭami is there; have you seen kurma panchami or something like that? No. Or do you sing: Hare Matsya Hare Matsya, Matsya Matsya Hare Hare. Hare Kurma Hare Kurma. No. not because that avathāra is lowly or anything, but these two avathāras are important, because Rāma taught by living; that is why it is called Rāma-ayanam; ayanam means the way of life lead by Rāma; Rāmāyaṇam teaches indirectly, whereas Kṛṣṇa teaches directly.

And therefore, dharma-saṁsthāpanārthāya; and that is why we also say: Do as Rāma did and also as Kṛṣṇa said. Never do as Kṛṣṇa did. If you did it; Kṛṣṇa started stealing and Kṛṣṇa had so many wives, you cannot do; therefore do as Rāma did and also as Kṛṣṇa said. Therefore dharma-saṁsthāpanārthāya, sambhavāmi, I am born, I take avathāra;

And when will I take? yugē yugē; yugē means, every yuga I will take avathāra; or to be more precise, every time it is required. It is not that in one yuga, only once one yuga, there is no rule; yugē yugē means, whenever it is required. If in one yuga, it is required ten times, ten times He will take avathāra. In another yuga, it may not be required at all and I will never take. Therefore the condition is “whenever required”.

Verse 4.9

जन्म कर्म च मे दिव्यमेवं यो वेत्ति तत्त्वतः ।
त्वक्त्वा देहं पुनर्जन्म नैति मामेति सोऽर्जुन ॥४.९॥

janma karma ca mē divyamēvaṁ yō vētti tattvataḥ |
tyaktvā dēhaṁ punarjanma naiti māmēti sō'rajuna||4.9||

अर्जुन Arjuna Oh Arjuna! सः saḥ he yaḥ यः एवं तत्त्वतः वेत्ति ēvaṁ tattvataḥ vētti who thus really knows, मे दिव्यम् mē divyam my divine, जन्म janma birth, च कर्म ca karma and action, न एति na ēti does not take, पुनर्जन्म punarjanma another birth, त्यक्त्वा देहम् tyaktvā dēham after giving up the body, एति माम् ēti mām he attains me.

9. O Arjuna! He who thus really knows My divine birth and action, does not take another birth after giving up the body. He attains Me.

So with the previous verse the introductory part is over; Gīta-stuthi is over; and avathāra svarupam topic is also over; which was an incidental diversion. Now from the 9th verse onwards, Kṛṣṇa wants to come back to our discussion and what is that discussion; mōkṣaḥ mārgaḥ; Our topic is not avathāra; our topic is mōkṣaḥ mārgaḥ, how to attain mōkṣaḥ; because Arjuna had raised this question;

कार्पण्यदोषोपहतस्वभावः ,पृच्छामि त्वाम् धर्मसंमूढचेताः ।
यच्छ्रेयः स्यान्निश्चितं ब्रूहि तन्मे ,शिष्यस्तेऽहं शाधि मां त्वां प्रपन्नम् ॥२.७॥

kārpaṇyadoṣōpahatasvabhāvaḥ ,pṛcchāmi tvāṁ dharmasammūḍhacētāḥ |
yacchrēyaḥ syānniśchitaṁ brūhi tanmē ,śiṣyastē'haṁ śādhi mām tvāṁ prapannaṁ ||2.7||

Hey: Kṛṣṇa tell me what is the ultimate good; Gīta is a mōkṣaḥ grantha; therefore the topic is what; what is the means of liberation; and in this verse, Kṛṣṇa tells knowing the nature of God, also leads to liberation; Īśvara-svarūpa-jñānāt mōkṣa-siddhiḥ; God realisation can give liberation. So this is an interesting thing which we have to note.

In the second-chapter, Kṛṣṇa had mentioned that ātma-jñānam is the means of liberation.

श्री भगवानुवाच ।
प्रजहाति यदा कामान्सर्वान्पार्थ मनोगतान् ।
आत्मन्योवात्मना तुष्टः स्थितप्रज्ञस्तदोच्यते ॥२.५५॥

Śrī Bhagavān uvāca
prajahāti yadā kāmān sarvān pārtha manōgatān|
ātmanyēva"tmanā tuṣṭaḥ sthitaprajñastadōcyatē||2.55||

Ātma-jñānam; self-realisation was presented as the means of liberation, in the 2nd chapter. Here in this verse Kṛṣṇa says, God realisation is the means of liberation.

Now the question is which one really leads to liberation; whether self-realisation or God-realisation or optional or there are two mārgas or is it a choice? The scriptures have also mentioned that for mōkṣaḥ; there is only one mārga; therefore I cannot say self-realisation and god-realisation are two separate paths; I cannot say; because scriptures have said that there is only one path. So there is only one way to resolve this problem; what is that? Self-realisation and God-realisation are identical; they are two names but it is only one.

To give an example, when a wave knows its true nature, what is the realization? The true nature of the wave is water; therefore wave-realisation is realizing the true nature of the wave, which is water. And what is ocean-realisation; it is again knowing the true nature of the ocean; and what is the true nature of ocean; water. Therefore whether you talk about the true nature of the wave or whether you talk about the true nature of ocean, the true nature is one alone; so whether you analyse a wave, or whether you analyse an ocean, you arrive at what? There is only one central truth; that is water.

So similarly, whether you realize your true nature that is the self or whether you realize the true nature of God, you arrive at one such satcidānanda svarupa only. If a person says I have realized the Self, but not God, or if another person says I have realized God but not the Self, it means, remember my example, അഞ്ഞനമെന്നതു ഞാനു അറിയും, മഞ്ഞളുപോലെ വെളുത്തിരിക്കും aññanamēnnatu ñān-ariyumu; maññāḷupōlē vēḷuttirikkuṃ. (I know what anjanam is, black figment, which is used for the eye, how is it, it is white like the turmeric powder). I do not know all the three. Similarly, if a person says, I know God but not the Self or I know the Self and not God, what does it mean? It means he knows neither God nor Self. This Ramaṇa Maharṣi beautifully says in saddarśanam, a well-known work,

यदीशितुर्वीक्षणमीक्षितारं अवीक्ष्य तन्मानसिकेक्षणं स्यात्।
न द्रष्टुरन्यः परमो हि तस्य वीक्षा स्वमूले प्रविलीय निष्ठा ॥२२॥

yadīśiturvīkṣaṇamīkṣitāraṃ avīkṣya tanmānasikēkṣaṇaṃ syāt|
na draṣṭuranyaḥ paramō hi tasya vīkṣā svamūlē pravilīya niṣṭhā ||22||

If a person has experienced God in front, as an object, and he has not recognised that Lord as non-different from one-self that God vision is not real. Seeing God as an object is not-real sight; it is mānasikēkṣaṇam syāt; it is only mānasikam; it is not fact; only when that God is recognised as non-different from the observer, saha ātma or tat brahma aham asmi. Then alone the knowledge has come.

Therefore Kṛṣṇa says here beautifully: yaḥ vētti; suppose a person knows, realises, mē janma, or understand the true nature of my avathāra; and what is the true nature of the avathāra? Kṛṣṇa śarīram is not real Kṛṣṇa, because Kṛṣṇa śarīram is subject to arrival and departure. Real Kṛṣṇa is what? We saw before in verse No. 6; ajō'pi sannavyayātmā bhūtānām-īśvarō'pi san; real Kṛṣṇa is ajaḥ; ajaḥ means birthless; avyayātmā, birthless. Real-Kṛṣṇa is free from birth and death, whereas Kṛṣṇa-śarīram is subject to arrival and departure; therefore what is the real Kṛṣṇa? Not the śarīram, but the Kṛṣṇa-Paramātmā behind the body. Similarly, real-Rāma is not the Navami-Rāma, one who comes on a day and disappears on another day; real Rāma is again the Ātma behind the Rāma śarīram. This fact the one who knows; that does not mean you should not celebrate Rāma Navami; many celebrate Rāma Navami, with pānakam, which is good; irrespective of the others, and Kṛṣṇāṣṭami is wonderful, because Chīdai and Murukku is wonderful. So we can celebrate Rāma Navami and Kṛṣṇāṣṭami, in a big way, in beginning stages, but ultimately we should understand that Rāma is not the śarīram but the ātmarāma, ānandaramaṇa (as in the bhajan). Similarly the real Kṛṣṇa suppose a person knows and also divyam karma, and one who knows the Bhagavān's sports or leelās, and what is that divine sport?

paritrāṇāya sādḥūnām vināśāya ca duṣkṛtām..... 4..8||

The one who really understands the Lord, tattvataḥ; tattvataḥ, in its true nature, what will happen to him, tyaktvā dēhaṁ punarjanma naiti māmēti; that person does not take a body again after maraṇam; which means he will attain liberation. So the knowledge of real Kṛṣṇa will lead to liberation; that is why if you read Bhāgavatham and all, you will find that the Gopis initially worshipped Kṛṣṇa as a person, cowherd boy, as a beautiful person, and their attraction is Kṛṣṇa's śarīram;

अधरं मधुरं वदनं मधुरं नयनं मधुरं हसितं मधुरम् ।
हृदयं मधुरं गमनं मधुरं मधुराधिपतेरखिलं मधुरम् ॥१॥

[adharam madhuram vadanam madhuram nayanam madhuram hasitam madhuram |
hrdayam madhuram gamanam madhuram madhurādhīpatērakhilam madhuram ||1||](#)

That is all wonderful; that bhakthi is required. When Kṛṣṇa was a person, they had problems also; when Kṛṣṇa appears, they will be happy; and when Kṛṣṇa disappears, they will be unhappy;

Gōpika Gītāṃ; Gītāṃ means crying; bhāgavatham

Ruruduḥ susvaram̐; means they cried in Rāga. That is the difference, when Gopis cry it will be in rāgam, and when we cry it will not be in rāgam; but whether you cry, whatever be the reason, crying is a crying; the Lord comes and goes; but the very same Gopis, later describe Kṛṣṇa as न खलु गोपिकानन्दनो भवा-

Kṛṣṇa now we know who you really are: you are not the son of Gōpika nandana; (that is all fun), who is real Kṛṣṇa; akhila-dēhinam antarātma-druk; you are the inner consciousness behind all the bodies; and why you have taken this body; because devotees wanted, you have just temporarily taken a māyika-śarīram; for blessing the world, but we know, that śarīram is not your real nature. This knowledge is called tatva jñānam. And one who has got that tatva jñānam he will attain liberation. And what is liberation? Saḥ mām ēti; he will become one with Me, after death; he will have brahma nirvanam or he will have Īśvara-aikyam;

वीतरागभयक्रोधाः vīta-rāga-bhaya-krōdhāḥ freed from attachment, fear, and anger, मन्मयाः manmayāḥ absorbed in me, पूताः pūtāḥ and purified, ज्ञानतपसा jñānatapasā by Jñāna-Yōga, आगताः āgatāḥ have attained, मद्भावम् madbhavaṁ my nature,

10. Having resorted to Me, freed from attachment, fear, and anger, absorbed in Me, and purified by Jñāna-yōga, many have attained My nature.

So realisation of God has got two stages; first it is realisation of saguṇa-Īśvara; the Lord with a form and next is the realisation of nirguṇa-Īśvara, Lord without a form. So this topic will be elaborated later from the 7th chapter onwards, even saguṇa Īśvara realisation we put in two stages; one is ěka-rūpa-Īśvara-darśanam; appreciating Lord with one form; as Rāma, as Kṛṣṇa, as Dēvi; this is ěka-rūpa-Īśvara-jñānam and we all have to start with that only.

And it is useful and interesting, because we all require; Like Bharatiyar who wrote; Kannan is my friend, Kannan is my child, etc. you can look at the Lord as father; if your father is not alright, you can replace the Lord as the father; when you do not have a healthy relationship with your father; if you do not have a healthy relationship with mother; convert Bhagavān into mother; if you do not have a healthy relationship with the child, convert Bhagavān into child; if you want a guru; convert Bhagavān; anything; any type of relationship, Bhagavān is available, for emotional health, that ěka rūpa Īśvara bhakthi is very useful; you can talk anytime you like. So go to your room, and close the room and then do not make it known outside; and you can talk to your God.

In our tradition so many devotees have done; you can keep it as a confidential report, like the Swiss Bank account; if you say, people will exploit, whom to talk to; therefore the safest place is what Bhagavān; the more you have that relationship, the more Bhagavān will become real and real; when I had been to the north, why north, here also you can see; you have fixed a room, there is a bedroom, and there is also mosquito net, (we will think which mosquito will bite the stone or brass vigraham, etc.); but for such people it is a living God. For them that vigrahah the real Bhagavān and A/c is three; and viśari in silver and golden cradle, etc. the more you take that relationship, the more the Lord will become nearer; this is called ěka-Rūpa-Īśvara-Bhakthi.

Then expand it further and make it viśva-rūpa-Īśvara-bhakthi. Bhagavān is not with one form; but Bhagavān has got the whole universe as his form, भूः पादौ यस्य नाभिर्वियदसुरनिलश्चन्द्र सूर्यो च नेत्रे

bhūḥ pādau yasya nābhiviyadasuranilaścandra sūryau ca nētrē ...

We will see that in the 11th chapter of Gītā; that is further expansion, ēka-rūpam to anēka-rūpam and both are saṅgaṇam only. Then what is the final stage? neither ēka-rūpam nor anēka-rūpam, but arupam-Īśvara; nirguṇa-Īśvara; everybody has to go through these three stages; and you can take as much time as you want; we do not insist that you should all leave Kṛṣṇa and take to nirguṇa brahman today itself; because some people find it extremely difficult to drop saṅgaṇa-bhakthi; and if you force it will become terrible; when a person grows in maturity, they gradually grow out, just as a child who plays with balloons naturally will give up balloon. Now for your birthday, you do not ask your mother for balloon; I hope you do not ask; we will not ask; you have grown out of that; you will ask something else.

Similarly, we should have ēka-rūpa-bhakthi, as long as we enjoy it; naturally we will understand that we appreciate an ēka-rūpa and therefore it is a gradual growth.

And what are the stages that such a seeker will go through is talked about in this slōkā. What are the stages?

vitha rāgaḥ bhayaḥ krōdhaḥ; the first-stage is have saṅgaṇa-Īśvara-bhakthi and follow karma-yōga; by dedicating all your duties to the Lord and by accepting all situations as Īśvara-Prasāda; so this is the first stage of life; that is surrender to saṅgaṇa-Īśvara and then converting the life into a worship.

यत्करोषि यदश्रासि यज्जुहोषि ददासि यत् |

That is why Swamiji says, in our culture, we have to daily cook food at home, because we can eat only after offering to the Lord.

Suppose we plan to cook once in a week; or once in a month, (keep it date wise), then the problem is that you may not mind to eat, or the poor husband may have no choice at all; but for Bhagavān, we cannot offer the food, which was cooked when? (Which Bhagavān only knows!). Therefore Swamiji says that family life means daily cooking; it is a must; then alone it will become an āśrama. Why cooking is important; not that you like it or not; microwave oven has come and one can heat any number of times; therefore the idea is that you have to offer to the Lord before you eat.

By following such a karma-yōga way of life, we will purify the mind which means we get rid of some unhealthy ways of thinking; we get rid of the unhealthy thoughts which are the mental impurities and what are they; rāgaḥ, bhayaḥ, krōdhaḥ; rāgaḥ means attachment; the attachment will be gradually shifted from world to God; that is the second stage.

So world-dependence to God-dependence; because I come to know more and more. Dependence on the world is a risky thing, because the world is very much fluid; anything can happen; at any time for anyone. That is why they say in Tamil. I will come tomorrow and then they put a comma and say provided I am alive; because it is a doubtful. Whether we will complete the sentence is itself a doubtful case. How many cases you know; I saw him only yesterday. Therefore life being unpredictable, only permanent security once I know is God, my dependence will be shifted from world to God; rāgaḥ will be from world to Īśvara-rāgaḥ; attachment to Bhagavān.

Thereafter I later find out that Bhagavān is here itself; then Bhagavān-dependence will be converted into self-dependence. That is the last thing.

World-dependence to God-dependence to self-dependence, wherein I will discover Bhagavān as myself.

Therefore first change is what? Rāgaḥ should go away; emotional-dependence. Then when the rāgaḥ comes down; bhayam also comes down; because fear is directly proportional to the attachment; greater the attachment, greater the fear; that is why, when anyone in the family is little bit late to come home, I do not know the reason, when I do not know the reason, I can take it positively; child only comes late; homework may have been there; school programme might have been there. Suddenly we think of auto accidents; water lorry accidents; or child being kidnapped by someone, every negative news will come to your mind; one telegram is enough to make some families to start crying; even before the telegram is opened. Happened it seems; then somebody came and said you open the telegram; that person is crying, therefore I wanted to support him; and when they opened the telegram and found that the wedding has been fixed.

For that they cried. So why because fear is directly-proportional to attachment; when rāgaḥ comes down, bhayaḥ comes down; then krōdhaḥ also will come down; I do not want to talk more and make you krōdhaḥ.

Hari om.

ॐ

In the first 8 verses, of this 4th chapter, Lord Kṛṣṇa glorified the Bhagavad-Gīta as a teaching of the original vēdās themselves. And then he pointed out that the Lord himself is the author of the Vēdās and the Lord himself is the author or the teacher of the Gīta also. The very Vēdās which had become weak by Arjuna's time was revived by the same Bhagavān through Arjuna or through the Bhagavad-Gīta; and after introducing the avathāra concept to convey this idea, Lord Kṛṣṇa pointed out that the knowledge of God also can lead to liberation.

In the second-chapter and in the third-chapter, he had pointed out that the self-realisation is a means of mōkṣaḥ, here Lord Kṛṣṇa points out that God realisation is also a means of mōkṣaḥ; indirectly indicating that God realisation and self-realisation are identical.

When you look at the truth of the creation from the stand point of the totality, then it is called God. When you look at the truth of the creation from the standpoint of the individual, then we use the word Self. Just as the truth of the wave and truth of the ocean is one and the same water; similarly, the truth of the world and the truth of the individual both are one and the same. When you study from micro-angle, it is called Self-realisation. When you study from macro-angle, it is God-realisation; and then Kṛṣṇa pointed out that this is not an impossible-proposition. Many people in our tradition have followed the religious or spiritual disciplines and accomplished liberation or mōkṣaḥ. And if many people in the past have accomplished that, there is no reason why you also cannot accomplish. So here in the 10th verse, Kṛṣṇa talks about the spiritual disciplines followed by the people of the past.

He talks about the various stages that one goes through; the first one is manmayā, so the verse 10, first line, the middle word, manmayā; manmayā means obsessed with the thought of me, that is keeping the Godhood as the primary-goal of life, that obsession is indicated by the word manmayā, Īśvara-māya. Just as a person who wants to become No.1 tennis player or No.1 chess player; whatever he does in life in his mind, there is only one thought revolving, chess, chess, chess only. Or cricket, cricket, that only. This is called obsession, born out of intense yearning. And here this people have discovered godhood as the primary-goal.

And you should remember that when we talk about God as the goal, from vādāntic angle, Godhood is nothing but our own higher-nature, our own superior nature, or our own healthy-nature; therefore when the scriptures say you have to attain God, what they mean is that you should attain your own fullest growth. Suppose a person is a sick person; incapable of doing anything in life; I want to talk about a healthy person; instead of asking him to become healthy, I can symbolize his own healthy self, as an outside goal. At present I am a sick person; I want to become a healthy person; I can symbolize the healthy person as an external goal and say: you should attain that particular goal; Even though in the beginning I present the healthy-person as an external-goal, what I really mean is becoming or attaining the healthy-person is you yourselves discovering your healthy-nature.

Similarly, vādānta presents God as an external goal, but ultimately godhood is my own secure self; healthy self, full self, contented self, is symbolised as God. And therefore Manmayā means, that they are so much tired of their own mental sickness in the form of rāgaḥ-dvēsaḥ, kāmaḥ-krōdhaḥ; they want to convert their sick mind, a mind of compassion; a mind of love; a mind of security. That inner conversion is called attainment of Godhood. We are not going to physically meet a person; we are only going to discover or tap our own fullest potential.

And that will become clear soon; manmayā, so first they are obsessed with mōkṣaḥ as the puruṣārthaḥ; and they know that this is not an easy task. When physical health itself seems to be so difficult; you have to do regular exercises and proper dieting, walking, this and that; people get bored; then what to talk of mental-health and fullness.

Therefore it is not going to be an easy task; it is full of obstacles; śrēyāṃsi bahu vignāni bhavanti mahatām api. For all noble pursuits, first thing that will come is obstacle. And that is indicated through the mythological story, that when the Dēvās and asuras wanted to churn the ocean to attain amṛtam or immortality; right from the beginning, problems. Dēvās could not do it alone; therefore they had to take Asuras' help. Dēvās and Asurās, you know, they are arch rivals; they somehow team up together; right from beginning, obstacles after obstacles; even temptations after temptations; so many beautiful things also came; but in spite of all the obstacles, they had the determination that we want to attain amṛtam; and at every stage, do you know whose help the Dēvās took; at every stage the Lord was involved. When they were churning the ocean with the help of the mountain, manthara parvatham, you know what happened? It went down; Bhagavān had to come as Kūrma.

That means what we can never accomplish anything without the support of the Lord. No doubt, my effort is a must, but effort alone is not enough, it should be backed by the booster ariel is required; that is Īśvarā-anugrahaḥ; and that is indicated in the next word, māmupāśritāḥ; taking refuge in me; taking my support; or surrendering unto me; they do whatever they have to.

And now that there is determination, it is called appropriate use of freewill, manmayā corresponds to our freewill, māmupāśritāḥ corresponds to Īśvarā-anugrahaḥ. Once these two engines are there, the front engine, called freewill, back engine, Īśvarā-anugrahaḥ, now I am ready for the journey, the question is what is route, I do not know. That one should know.

So therefore, what is the direction? Vīta-rāga-bhaya-krōdhā; you should learn to handle this inborn weakness in the form of rāgaḥ, bhayaḥ krodhaḥ; rāgaḥ means attachment, which includes dvēṣaḥ; which is hatred. So first stop your attachment and hatred problem; which is born out of a wrong thinking; what is the wrong thinking; when I look upon the world as a source of joy, I develop attachment; when I look upon the world as a source of sorrow; I develop hatred. So therefore, sukha-hētu bhuddhiḥ rāgaḥ kāraṇam, duḥkha-hētu bhuddhiḥ dvēṣaḥ kāraṇam. According to vedānta, world is neither a source of joy nor a source of sorrow; I myself am the source of joy as well as the source of sorrow. Unhealthy-I is the source of sorrow; healthy-I is the source of ānanda. Or to use vėdāntic language; ignorant-I is the source of sorrow; wise-I is the source of ānanda; as long as I do not understand this fact, I will go on manipulating the world, either getting things, or getting rid of things, and my entire lifetime is wasted, manipulating people and situations. And by the time I discover that the problem is not outside, I am 99 years old. Then again the next birth, I have to start from the scratch. Therefore an intelligent person understands that the problem is with me. Then the rāgaḥ and dvēṣaḥ are managed. Therefore vītaḥ; one who knows how to handle the rāgaḥ-dvēṣaḥ; the one who is not a slave of likes and dislikes.

Therefore what is the first direction? Managing one's rāgaḥ-dvēṣaḥ; convert, all desires into non-binding desires. This is the first stage.

And then consequent to that is, bhayaḥ-krōdhāḥ; wherever there is attachment, there is fear; I told you in the last class, when one of the members of the family is late to come home, I do not know the reason, so I can imagine any healthy reason, but invariably the mind thinks of accidents or heart attack or water lorry; every water lorry is called yama dhūtaḥ; therefore I will only imagine negative thing; directly proportional to attachment is I am; therefore rāgaḥ-dvēṣaḥ is there; bhayam is there; the next thing inevitable is krōdhaḥ; anger; when my desire is obstructed by somebody, accomplishment is thwarted by somebody, I direct my anger towards that person and the anger is also directly proportional to my attachment. Therefore rāgaḥ, dvēṣaḥ, bhayaḥ, krōdhaḥ, all these four go together.

So first stage in spirituality is learn to handle them. And how to handle them; either by wisdom or devotion; and what is the wisdom. The wisdom is I can only contribute to the future events; I can never control the future events; I can add my contribution, if there is some collection going on; you can contribute your might, but what will be the total collection, cannot be controlled or determined by you. Similarly, with regard to your future, with regard to your child's future, with regard to the country's future, you have got one vote; with that one vote you can only contribute one vote might, but government you cannot totally determine. Once I understand I am only a contributor, not controller; this wisdom itself will reduce adverse response.

If I do not have that much intelligence to understand this fact, the next method is the method of devotion or surrender to the Lord; Oh Lord, future is not under my control; at least give me sufficient strength to face the inevitable. As Kṛṣṇa said in the second-chapter, tasmād-aparihāryē'rthē na tvaṁ śōcitumarhasi. Intelligent-person is one who is prepared for the inevitable. Intelligence is preparation for the inevitable or choiceless; and you can take the help of the Lord. Either rely on yourselves through wisdom or rely on God through surrender, whether you use wisdom or surrender or both, you have to learn to handle the problem of intense attachment; intense hatred; intense fear, and intense anger; and the one who has mastered that, is called vīta-rāgaḥ, bhayaḥ, krōdhaḥ. In the śāstra it is called śuddha-antha-karaṇa; the one with pure mind; the purity of the mind is determined in terms of the rāgaḥ-dvēṣaḥ bhayaḥ krōdhaḥ problem; to what extent I can manage them will indicate my degree of purity. An impure mind is a slave of all the four; whereas a wise mind is not free of them; but it is a master of all these four. And this is the first stage of sādhana attained through karma-yōga way of life. Therefore, Arjuna by practicing karma-yōga, become vīta-rāga-bhaya-krōdhā; OK.

Once the mind is purified, once the mind is no more a slave of these four unhealthy thoughts, what is the next stage? Is this enough to attain mōkṣaḥ; Kṛṣṇa says No. Now the mind is pure-mind, but it is not a wise-mind. So karma-yōga can give only purity; karma-yōga cannot give wisdom; therefore having handled the rāgaḥ dvēṣaḥ s of the mind, you have to separately work for knowledge. Knowledge never happens. Any knowledge, physics knowledge never happens; you have to work for it; you have to join the college; and often there will be no teaching there; you have to take extra tuition also; and then you have to work hard.

Any knowledge is a result of consistent effort for a length of time; when material knowledge requires consistent effort for a length of time; what to talk of spiritual knowledge? It can never happen; you have to work for it; and Kṛṣṇa calls it jñāna tapas; because this is also a type of austerity. To come regularly to Gīta and Upaniṣad class is not a joke; there would be obstacles; guest will come; phone will come; car will be puncture; something or the other will happen; if you have to come and study and remember and progress, it requires what: austerity; and what type of austerity is called; jñāna- tapas.

So by the practice of jñāna-tapas, otherwise called jñāna-yōgaḥ; otherwise called vēdānta śravaṇa manana nidhidhyasanam, by the practice of that, pūtā, these people got completely purified.

Handling the rāgaḥ-dvēṣaḥ is only partial purification; handling kāma-krōdhaḥ is only partial purification; you have to remove the basic impurity for complete purification; and do you know what is the basic impurity; which they call original sin; the basic impurity is self-ignorance; and without removing that basic impurity, one can never be totally pure, and therefore totally healthy; therefore Kṛṣṇa says by the practice of jñāna-yōga; they rid themselves of the final layer of impurity. So when they take metals from the earth, gold, iron or anything; it comes in the form of ore; the iron ore or dhātu in Sānskrīt cannot be directly used; it has to go through several stages of purification. Simple washing; magnetic belt or something, and lastly there is fine impurity is there; only 99%. you have to make 99.99%, electrolytic process you have to use and the last fine impurity is also removed; so grosser method to remove the grosser impurity; subtler method for removing subtler impurity; subtlest method to remove the subtlest impurity, you know what are the steps. you cannot use the electrolytic process in the initial stages itself; like you want to wash, in the kitchen and all; they use it; it would not have water for days together; and if you want to clean it; first clean with simple water; much would go; and thereafter you put one of these powders, it would work; suppose you put the powder, instead of powder absorbing the dirt, the dirt will absorb the powder.

So therefore, the finest impurity is ajñānam. Grossest impurity is rāgaḥ-dvēṣaḥ; subtler impurity is extrovertedness; three layers of impurity; First layer is called malaṁ; second layer is called vikṣēpaḥ, the third layer is called āvaraṇam. Malaṁ is likes and dislikes, grossest one; vikṣēpaḥ is a wandering mind, it is subtler; and self-ignorance is the subtlest one; we have to use three processes to remove these three types of impurity.

karma-yōga removes malaṁ; upāsana removes vikṣēpaḥ; jñāna-yōga removes āvaraṇa; karma-yōga cannot remove āvaraṇam; jñāna-yōga cannot remove first malaṁ also; step by step, all the three will have to be used in the appropriate order; order is also very important; first jñāna-yōga starting and ending in karma-yōga is not possible. Start with karma-yōga. Therefore bahavaḥ jñāna tapasa pūtā; many people have purified themselves totally by finally practicing the jñāna-yōga; not one or two; bahavaḥ.

And by removing all the impurities, what did they find, madbhavam agatha, they did not reach God, they did not meet God, they discovered that I minus impurity is God. God plus impurity is I. Jīvātma minus impurity is paramātma; paramātma plus impurity is jīvātma.

But initially a person does not know that; therefore I tell, He is there; Bhagavān is there, one attains paramapadam; śivalōka prāp̥thi, etc. I have to present it as though it is a physical event of union; but ultimately, it is not a physical event of union at all; but it is a figurative event of self-discovery. Therefore when I remove my weakness and ignorance, I know that I am what I have been seeking all the time. Therefore Kṛṣṇa says madbhāvamāgatāḥ; they all attained My nature; they did not reach Me; they all attained My nature; My nature means what; satyam jñānam ānandam brahma; the nature of fullness; the nature of security; the nature of purṇatvam; they attained; therefore Arjuna, you also have to go through these four stages.

What are the four stages? No.1 spiritual goal must become the top priority; material goals need not be eliminated; but they should be remembered as subservient to spiritual goal; this is called getting a direction in life.

And the second-stage is resorting or taking the help of the Lord in this grand journey, because individually I can never travel; therefore the second stage is surrender to the Lord.

The third-stage is purification of the mind, by reducing the impact of rāgaḥ-dvēṣaḥ bhayaḥ krodhaḥ.

And fourth stage is study the scriptures, gain self-knowledge and Arjuna many have done. You can also do.

itself, पार्थ pārtha Oh ! Arjuna, मनुष्याः अनुवर्तन्ते manuṣyāḥ anuvartantē people follow, mama vartma मम वर्त्म my path, सर्वशः sarvaśaḥ by all means.

11. Whoever approaches me with any desire, I bless them with that desire itself. Oh Arjuna! People follow My path by all means.

So here Kṛṣṇa makes another beautiful point; He gives the suggestion that the spiritual-goal must be the primary-goal. But He says I do not want to impose that goal upon you; if a person is going to claim that I have no interest in spirituality; I do not want mōkṣaḥ; why are you going on enforcing mōkṣaḥ; I do not want; Everybody need not be interested in mōkṣaḥ; and our religion wants to give full freedom to the seeker; no enforcement.

Kṛṣṇa says I am here to suggest and recommend to you that Mōkṣaḥ is a worthwhile goal; in fact, unknowingly you are seeking Mōkṣaḥ alone. If you study everyone of the human pursuit, we are working for independence only. When you are using the bus or autoricksaw and you face problem; bus will stop anywhere except the bus stop and it will be crowded; pickpocket problem; then you decided to take an autoricksaw; then you know the meter will travel faster than Rājadhāni express; and he will always ask for more than what the meter shows. OK. Anywhere you want to give, he will ask where you want to go and then you thought what is the problem? Dependence on auto, dependence on bus is the problem.

Then what do you try to do, buy a bike; what is your aim, it is as though you are interested in the bike, but your desire is independent; and if the bike creates the problem, you try to do something else; all the time, every human being is unknowingly working towards freedom, freedom, freedom, freedom; but they are like some children who cry but do not know what they want. The mother has to imagine, whether some ant have gone into the ears, or whether it is stomach pain or insect bite, or whether it is hungry, or sometimes it catches its hair and pulls and cries; and when it is painful and worried, it pulls hard and cries more. Child does not know that. We are all children, not knowing exactly what we want. If somebody asks what do you want? We will not be able to say exactly what is it that we wants, if somebody asks us what do you want.

We are not clear. Śāstra says you are seeking independence. And if you have discovered this fact, you are mature enough; if you have not discovered this fact, we are ready to allow you to try all other methods; seek artha; seek kāma, seek dharma, seek svarga, seek everything; and having gone through all of them; and having suffered because of dependence, and finally when you come, then also, I will not get angry that I told you before and that you did not listen at all, etc. You get enough kicks and come, I am ready to help you.

But Kṛṣṇa says I will never force Mōkṣaḥ upon you. If you say I am interested in kāma, then also I am ready to accomplish sense objects; I will never say that you should not enjoy pleasures. Vēdās says you can enjoy sense pleasures. Varieties of kāmya-karmās are prescribed in the Vēdās; each karma is for the fulfillment of one one desire. And if you are interested in possessions like wealth, earn enough; enough number of houses, cars, etc. whatever you want; you have, I am not going to criticise, on the other hand I will help you. I will help you perform Avahanti Hōmaṁ. There is avahanthi hōmaṁ for the inflow of wealth. That is popular. There is no hōmaṁ for Mōkṣaḥ; Avahanti-hōma is popular. And if you are interested in svarga, Kṛṣṇa says wonderful, have a tourist visa and go there for a few months and then you come back; anyway you can come back. Therefore Kṛṣṇa says that my job is presenting to you the four puruṣārthās and also presenting to you the means of accomplishing them; and also offering myself as a help to you. It is not that I will help you only if you want Mōkṣaḥ; I am ready to help you in accomplishing everything.

Therefore what is my philosophy? As a person seeks, so I will bless him. Yē yathā māṁ prapadyantē. Let any seeker approach me with any desire; I am not going to criticise; why are you asking for smaller things when mōkṣaḥ is there; I would not criticise; just as a child is interested in the balloon, mother never criticise, what is the use of balloon as it will be burst in two minutes; no mother would criticise; the mother will buy a balloon and give and hope that after a few years, the child will grow out of that.

Similarly Kṛṣṇa says I am like a mother, let a person seek anything; I will help him; I would only put one condition; let the desires be legitimate and let the means of accomplishing them also be legitimate. That is the only condition I will put, following that law of dharma; let him enjoy the life fully. In fact, enjoyment is part of life; to grow out of it; otherwise it can lead to suppression.

But the scriptures say that when you enjoy you should be very very cautious; otherwise you may get dragged by them; just as a person getting addicted to smoking or drinking. So the person must be extremely careful so that the person does not get lost in them. It is like if you have a cup of coffee; you do not know how much hot it is. Then what do you do? Suppose you just hold the cup fully, you get burned. If you do not touch the cup at all, you do not know whether it is hot or not; therefore what do you do, carefully touch and see; you touch to such an extent that you can know the temperature, at the same time, it does not burn you; that is called intelligent living; go through pleasure, but be alert to know whether you will be lost in them.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa says let a person come to me, seeking any goal; prapanna parijātaya, I am like a parijāta tree for a devotee; I will bless him with anything. tāmstathaiva bhajāmyaham; I will approach them only with the desired objects. As Vivēkānanda said, to a hungry person; in front of a hungry person, the Lord should approach with what? Only food. If Lord approaches without food, that person will eat the Lord, if possible; because the hungry person seeks what; not Tatva bōdham; Brahma sūtra class; that is an unintelligent-approach; hungry-person, let him seek food; poor person, let him seek money; but the mōkṣaḥ seeker Bhagavān will give mōkṣaḥ, that is said here; tāmstathaiva-bhajāmyaham.

Why do I bless them with all these goals; because mama vartmānuvartantē, because all my devotees approach me through appropriate effort; all the devotees approach me with appropriate effort, like appropriate pūja, appropriate japa, appropriate karma, or appropriate upāsana, etc. since they are coming to me, by appropriate means, my job is to bless them with appropriate end. To give the appropriate results for the means, is my duty. Therefore I will bless them with whatever they want. Manuṣyāḥ pārtha sarvaśaḥ. So they have come in the proper method.

Verse 4.12

काङ्क्षन्तः कर्मणां सिद्धिं यजन्तः इह देवताः ।
क्षिप्रं हि मानुषे लोके सिद्धिर्भवति कर्मजा ॥४.१२॥

kāṅkṣantaḥ karmaṇām siddhiṁ yajanta iha dēvatāḥ |
kṣipraṁ hi mānuṣē lōkē siddhirbhavati karmajā || 4.12 ||

काङ्क्षन्तः kāṅkṣantaḥ seeking सिद्धिं कर्मणाम्, siddhiṁ karmaṇām the result of action, यजन्ते yajanta they worship, देवताः dēvatāḥ gods, हि hi for सिद्धिः siddhiḥ the result, कर्मजा karmajā born of action भवति क्षिप्रम् bhavati kṣipraṁ comes quickly इह लोके मनुषे iha lōkē manuṣē in this world of human beings.

12. Seeking the result of actions, they worship gods. For, the result born of action comes quickly in this world of human beings.

So Kṛṣṇa says I have presented two paths in the vēdic scriptures; The first part of the vedās deals with path No.1, which is called karma-mārgaḥ; a life of activity, a life of effort; where you go through certain processes. The second-path is presented in the final part of the Vēdās; called Vēdā's-antha, otherwise called jñāna-mārga. Karma-mārga is there;

jñāna mārga is also there. My job is not to force anyone in any path; I will present: karma-mārga will produce the end; jñānam will also produce the end.

What is the difference in their results? Karma-phalam anityam. All the results of karma are finite in nature; and it is full of defects also; I have talked about this in the upaniṣad class. Duḥkha-misritatvam; if accomplishment is a pain, preservation is a greater pain and the final loss is the greatest pain; and any amount of accomplishment will not give satisfaction; atṛptikaratvam; and more and more dependent on external-factors, these are all the defects of karma-phalam; Kṛṣṇa's-job, the scriptures'-job is to teach us what gives us what?

So Kṛṣṇa says; karma-kāṇḍa gives finite-results. And jñāna-kāṇḍa says, if you are interested in infinite-results, it can never be the end product of a process. Infinite can never be the end-product of a process; any process produces a result, which is within time alone; because it has got a beginning, by the same logic, it has got an end. So infinitude or pūrṇatvaṁ, can never be the result of any effort; it has to be in the form of jñānam.

What is this knowledge? If there is infinite, it has to be where; where will be the infinite one; after saying infinite, will anybody ask where, and if I am asking such a question, I am a fool, and if you are scratching your head for an answer, you are bigger fool. If there is something called poornam, infinite it has to be here; and if there is something that is eternal; it should be now; therefore infinitude is a matter of discovery. Therefore jñāna-mārga leads to nitya phalam; karma-mārga leads to anitya-phalam; this has been presented by me in the Vēdās clearly.

But Kṛṣṇa is crying, wailing; He says even though I have clearly pointed out, and the people are experiencing regularly the limitations of karma-phalam, but the tragedy is, still the majority of the people, after long thinking, vote for the wrong party. If they do it without thinking it is OK; but they do it after thinking. That is the tragedy. Like that person getting up, when there is a low door is there; the owner warns; the door is very low, you have to bend. So this person is so scrupulous; so he wants to bend here itself. Carefully; and then he bends and walks and walks and he will just get up correctly when the door comes; this is called thoughtful mistake.

Similarly majority of people after long experiences in life, they decide to vote for karma-phalam; anityam. And why do they do that? There is a reason also Kṛṣṇa says; because to perform karma, the śāstra does not prescribe purity of mind. To do a ritual, they do not say sādhana-catuṣṭaya-sampanna; vivēka is not said, vairāgyam is not said; since purity of mind is involved in jñāna-mārga, and since purity of mind is extremely difficult to get. The moment we talk of rāgaḥ-dvēsaḥ giving up, they give up the Vēdānta, instead of rāgaḥ-dvēsaḥ. Who can do all these; this cannot happen. I love to hate some people; we all have got a list of the same; leaving that person, I do not hate anyone else;

So therefore, Kṛṣṇa says here, karmaṇām siddhiṃ kāṅkṣantaḥ; many people are interested only in karma-phalam; the result of action, finite result; not dharmārtakāma; in Kathōpaṇṣad it is called prēyaḥ; majority chooses prēyaḥ;

श्रेयश्च प्रेयश्च मनुष्यमेतः
तौ सम्परीत्य विविनक्ति धीरः ।
श्रेयो हि धीरोऽभि प्रेयसो वृणीते प्रेयो मन्दो योगक्षेमाद्वृणीते ॥ I.i.२ ॥

śrēyaśca prēyaśca manuṣyamētaḥ tau samparītya vivinakti dhīraḥ | śrēyō hi dhīrō:'bhi prēyasō vṛṇītē
prēyō mandō yōgakṣēmādvṛṇītē || I.1.2||

For a human being, both the finite and infinite are available right in front; the intelligent one chooses the infinite, whereas the unintelligent, the mandāḥ chooses the finite; mandāḥ karmaṇām siddhim kāṅkṣantē; they seek finite results.

And once you choose karma-phalam; vēdic rituals are elaborate; they will say you should go to that temple; and you should offer on and such days; go on pournami day, go for seven pournami days; thereafter you have to offer this grain; at one place you have to offer salt; one place you have to offer mustard seed; something like that; yellow cloth; red cloth; they have got so many conditions; and if you fulfil all these conditions you may get the result; that is also not definite. But these people worship Dēvathāḥ yajantē; they go after varieties of deities; Navagrahas are there; they go after such deities; so dēvathāḥ yajantē; and why? Because karmajā siddhi, kṣipram bhavati; because the karma-phalam is quicker compared to jñāna mārga, because in jñāna mārga, jñāna phalam is quicker; the result of knowledge is very good; getting knowledge is very easy; but preparation for knowledge is the toughest job;

Like wedding; wedding takes place in two minutes; shake hands, exchange garlands; but you ask the parents, how many years before they took the jātakam; and how much dowry, who all asked; actual process is two minutes; similarly jñānam requires only one statement; what is that? You are what you are seeking; Drop seeking; and own up your nature; that is the only thing. Vēdānta is over. You are what you are seeking in life. Drop seeking, and own up your true nature; this much alone is Vēdānta; but for this statement to work, you have to start not from many years; start from anēka-janma saṁsiddham, tatō yati parām gatim; preparation should start from many janmas before. You all must have started the preparation long before; from many janmas; otherwise you would not be even interested in coming here; understanding is a different thing; I know you understand. What I mean is whether you understand or not is a different thing; somehow you got a desire to come and sit here, in this summer day. What forces you; there is some unseen force, that is called pūrva janma sukṛtam; therefore Kṛṣṇa says karmajā siddhi kṣipram bhavati. Therefore people are not interested in purification; it takes lot of time; they are interested only in limited goals of action.

चातुर्वर्ण्यं मया सृष्टं गुणकर्मविभागशः ।
तस्य कर्तारमपि मां विद्धि यकर्तारमव्ययम् ॥ ४.१३ ॥

Cāturvarṇyam mayā sṛṣṭam guṇakarmavibhāgaśaḥ |
tasya kartāramapi mām viddhyakartāramavyayam||4.13||

चातुर्वर्ण्यम् cāturvarṇyam The fourfold division (of society) सृष्टं मया sṛṣṭam mayā has been created by Me गुणकर्मविभागशः guṇakarmavibhāgaśaḥ based upon Guṇa and Karma विद्धि माम् viddhi mām know Me तस्य कर्तारम् tasya kartāram to be its author अपि api Also (know me) अकर्तारम् akartāram to be a non-doer अव्ययम् avyayam (and changeless).

13. The fourfold division (of society) has been created by Me based upon guṇa and Karma. Know me to be its author. Also (know me) to be a non-doer (and changeless).

So I said that the Lord has given the scriptures in the form of vedās; and the scriptures talk about spiritual-end also; material-ends also; here singular; and there plural; you cannot have plural here; only one spiritual goal; infinite; how many infinities are there; only one; material ends are many, plural number. So Bhagavān has talked about two types of goals, spiritual and materialistic; Bhagavān has talked about two types of paths also; karma mārga and jñāna mārga; Bhagavān has talked about the seekers' also; in the form of human beings.

Now Kṛṣṇa says not only I have given the vedās to fulfil different ends, I have also prescribed a lifestyle by following which a person can accomplish both material and spiritual-end; which is an ingenious-device; normally spiritual-end and material-ends are diagonally-opposite. Because in material-ends; I am seeking external-factors to get happiness. I am going from dependence-to-dependence. Because I want to accomplish more and more; I want to depend on more and more objects; one is depending on external-factors; whereas Mōkṣaḥ is depending on myself. One is leaning, another is non-leaning. One is acquiring; one is disposing. One is attachment; the other is detachment. Kathōpaniṣad says:

दूरमेते विपरीते विषूची अविद्या या च विद्येति ज्ञाता ।

dūramētē viparītē viṣūcī avidyā yā ca vidyēti jñātā |

Normally spiritual and material ends are diagonally opposite; but Bhagavān says I have to design a unique lifestyle by which a person can accomplish both material-end and spiritual-end.

And what should be that ingenious-lifestyle? It should be such a lifestyle that a person must be able to fulfil materialistic-desires; one should not say that you cannot do it; Vēdās say: If you are not after materials, understand what they will do. You have read the article; all the magazine, do not smoke, do not smoking, give up smoking, at least reading it again and again, I gave up; what? Reading those books. So when a person is full of materialistic desires; and if Vēdās say that: do not desire; that is the most unintelligent-advice, therefore Vēdic lifestyle is, it encourages to fulfil your desires. And then for fulfilling those desires, it presents certain disciplines. Just follow that; fulfil your desire; but follow certain-discipline.

And what is the purpose of the discipline is not said; it is like a sugar-coated pill. When the child takes the pill, because it is sweet; but it is laxative will be known later; mother will say; take chocolate; similarly vēdās prescribe the disciple, without telling what is purpose. And you know the beauty; if you fulfil your materialistic desires, following the Vēdic disciple, then the beauty is that gradually you get out of these materialist desires, without suppression; and in that place, you discover spiritual desire as the most natural one; and you discover that desire to such an extent that the pursuit of spiritual-desire is not to be considered as a denial of materialistic-desires.

Many people in the society looking at young sanyāsis, they sympathise, பாவம்; ஒன்றிகட்டையாய் மாட்டிண்டு இருக்கான்; ஆத்தில் யாரும் இல்லை. Pāvam; oṅṭikaṭṭaiyāy māṭṭiṅṭu irukkāṅ; ātil yārum illai; they will be sympathising; while these sanyāsīs are sympathising the householders, as they are caught up in never-ending crisis.

So therefore who is to sympathise with whom? Nobody is to be sympathised because everybody has to pursue the appropriate end, at the appropriate age. So when I come to spirituality, I would not miss anything in life; even though the world may sympathise with me; I do not mind. That gradual conversion must take place; so such a life design is the vēdic life design; which is called varṇa-āśrama dharma; about which we will study in the next class.

Hari Om

058 CHAPTER 04, VERSE-13

ॐ

Up to the 12th verse, Lord Kṛṣṇa talked about the nature of avathāra; avathāra rahasyam; as an answer to Arjuna's doubt. Kṛṣṇa began the chapter by glorifying the Gīta, as the very teaching of the vēda itself; and when this glorification was done, Arjuna raised a doubt and as a way of clarification Lord Kṛṣṇa introduced the topic of avathāra; and then Kṛṣṇa pointed out that if a person knows the nature of avathāra; he can get liberation. Īśvara avatāra svarūpa jñānāt ēva mōkṣaḥ bhavati.

जन्म कर्म च मे दिव्यमेवं यो वेत्ति तत्त्वतः ।
त्वक्त्वा देहं पुनर्जन्म नैति मामेति सोऽर्जुन ॥४.९॥

[janma karma ca mē divyam ēvaṃ yō vētti tattvataḥ|
tyaktvā dēhaṃ punarjanma naiti māmēti sō'rjuna||4.9||](#)

And thereafter Kṛṣṇa said that even by this avathāra jñānam one can get liberation, most of the people are not interested in Īśvara jñānam, they are only interested in karmas which will produce material result. So therefore the choice is for the human being whether one should take to karma in search of karma-phalam or whether he should go after jñānam and attain liberation, it is one's own choice. So Mōkṣa is not Bhagavān's decision, mōkṣa is our decision.

And Kṛṣṇa's complaint, if He can complain, most people are not interested in the highest goal is that they are interested in petty perishable result. With that the avathāra rahasyam topic is over.

Now from the thirteenth verse onwards, Kṛṣṇa wants to enter into the main topic of the 4th chapter, jñāna karma-sanyāsa topic. Here we have to remember the background of Kṛṣṇa's teaching. Arjuna was afraid of doing karma or action. Until now, he enjoyed performing action, especially his duties he enjoyed; but in this battlefield he is not interested in doing karma, because it is unpleasant duty. And therefore only Arjuna wanted to escape from karma by taking to sanyāsa. He said I better go away from the battlefield renouncing all the duties and consequent benefits, if any, then bhaikṣyam api varam; bhaikṣyam means a life of sanyāsi. Therefore Arjuna's bug or Arjuna's fear was karma; and Kṛṣṇa's main job in the Gīta is taking out from Arjuna the fear of karma. This fear has to go away because one cannot escape from karma; as long as a human being is alive, he will have to do some karma or the other, as Kṛṣṇa said in the previous chapter, na hi kaścit kṣaṇamapi jātu tiṣṭhatyakarmakṛt; even for one moment, a person cannot remain without action; only you can change the type of action; but you cannot avoid action.

So whatever be your status in life, brahmācāri, gr̥hastha, vānaprastha or sanyāsi; or whatever be your social status, brāhmaṇa, kṣatriya, vaiśya or śūdra, you will have one job or the other to do, suppose you go to Rishikesh and settle in an āśram; and you know what they do, in every āśram, they may welcome devotees to settle, but they have some āśram duties. So the only difference will be instead of doing household duties in Madras, you can do āśram-duties in Rishikesh; with white clothes or orange clothes. Even brahmācāris are given duties. I met one brahmācāri, and asked him what is your duty; he said: booking tickets of my gurusvami. So he is a very popular Swami and he travels all over, and often travel arrangements will have to be done, that is the duty of brahmācāri, and he travels from place to place, and make sure that the Swami is received. Only thing is he is in yellow clothes and therefore called brahmācāri, and he has got a set of duties; and therefore, Kṛṣṇa wants to say, Arjuna, you cannot escape from karma; the cessation of karma is only at that time. You know what is that time? Only at one time, all the actions cease; what is that? Death. When other people will become more active, to dispose the body off. Look at the whole creation, the smallest atom is active, violently electrons are going around the nucleus and the biggest solar system is active and the planets moving around the central Sun. Both at the micro and macro level, karmas are inevitable; therefore better learn to leave with karma.

But the problem is once we take up karma, along with karma comes lot of side effects, like certain allopathic medicines, but side effects are sometimes worse than the cure. Similarly Karma means that there is responsibility. The moment you take up a project, right from the beginning comes, the anxiety that everything should go properly. So before there is an anxiety, and during the performance there is a great tension and at the end often the result is not up to the expectation and therefore there is a consequent reaction. Therefore karma brings mental disturbance, before, during and after.

So what to do with this problem? Arjuna thought that the solution is give up the Karma. Kṛṣṇa wants to say that you cannot give up karma; therefore better learn to accept karma and of course the side effects are there; and for those problems find out some remedy. Like you take antibiotics and along with that, lot of vitamins tablets also you take.

So the next question is: how can I remain in the field of action without being mentally disturbed? One method Kṛṣṇa had already said in the third chapter, viz., the karma-yōga method, and here Kṛṣṇa in the fourth chapter is going to talk about the real solution and that is jñānam tablet. So jñānam is the only solution; because of which you can be active in the world, paśyan, śṛṇvan, spṛśan, jighran, aśnan, gacchan; at the same time you can remain unaffected by both the action as well as the results of action.

So when you have got jackfruit, in Kerala, it is plenty, and when you cut the fruit, inside there is some kind of a sticky substance white, milk white sticky substance, and once your hand comes in contact with that, it gets struck. And generally the tendency is to take it out, and get struck here also. After some time, if you do not know how to handle, all over the place, the sticky thing will be there; you should know before entering the jackfruit, you should know what is the method of handling the jackfruit. In Kerala only one solution for everything. Oil. Coconut oil. So you apply coconut oil in your hand and the knife, before you cut the jackfruit; then enter the jackfruit. So whatever you do, it will not get affected. In the same way, karma is like the sticky substance, kṛtimahōdadhau patana-kāraṇam; karmaṇā badhyatē jantuḥ.

Normally karma is sticky; it does create problems and what is the solution? Apply the jñānam oil; and with that jñānam insulation; you go into any type of karma, it will not affect you. So this is going to be the topic; how to get knowledge and then work in the world without being affected by both responsibilities as well as the results of action.

And to prove the efficacy of jñānam, Kṛṣṇa wants to quote the example of Himself. Kṛṣṇa does not want to quote the example of some saint who is in a cave. Then Arjuna will say that I will also go and sit in the cave rather than fight. So whenever you want to run away, you would like to quote Ramaṇa Maḥarṣi as example. Very convenient. In our culture, the beauty is whatever you want to do, there are some examples. Even if you want to steal, Kṛṣṇa Paramātmā is there as example. So therefore Kṛṣṇa wants to quote an appropriate example, and what is that example? He Himself; Arjuna you look at me; right from birth, I have problems. The birth itself is in jail. And thereafter asuras after asuras; and so many problems I faced and many of them were failures also. Kṛṣṇa's many missions failed. When Kṛṣṇa went to Duryōdhanā, to avert war, Kṛṣṇa could not change Duryōdhanā's mind, it was a clean failure. So therefore, Kṛṣṇa faced all the ups and downs; Kṛṣṇa says that in spite of all my activities, I remain what? Untouched by both the karma as well as the karma-phalam.

Look at the second line of the 13th verse. Tasya kartaram api māṁ viddhi. Arjuna I did not escape my duties. I did do all those karmas. What are those karmas? We will see later; it is there in the first line; He says tasya kartaram api māṁ, I remain a karta, I remain involved in action.

And the greatest action is the Mahābhārata action and he was sitting right in front of Arjuna; Arjuna is safe, Kṛṣṇa became a shield. All arrows has to pass Kṛṣṇa first and Kṛṣṇa has to get lot of bows; lot of arrows; and his job is what? And not a white collared job; white collared job; he has to wash the chariot, he was to wash and tend the horses; Kṛṣṇa says I do not grumble, I am associated with all the karmas, but the beauty is what? Tatapi avatāraṁ mām viddhi. I have the knack of remaining inwardly akārtha. Inwardly akartā means what? Untainted by the action; unaffected by the action; I am able to keep safe distance.

And not only distanced from karma, karma-phalam also which he will say in the next slōka. Karma also does not affect me; karma phala also does not affect me; therefore I am avyayaṁ. Avyayaṁ means undisturbed. I am undisturbed, unchanged, nirvikāraḥ aham asmi.

Then the question comes, what were the duties that the Lord was involved in; or the Lord was involved in? Of course, as Kṛṣṇa, an avathāra, he was involved in many karmas, and also the creator, the Lord, Kṛṣṇa says I had lot of duties, because I am the sṛṣṭi-karta, which is my duty. I am the sthiti-kartā, which is also my duty. In fact, to be a sthiti-kartā, you can understand the meaning, sthiti-kartā means the sustainer of the world: it is a very pleasant duty; and Lord has got another duty, which is very very painful duty; what is that? After sṛṣṭi and sthiti, what is next; laya kartha. Even though people may cry, do not go, do not go, etc. I have to take the job of laya kartha and destroy things also. Sṛṣṭi-sthiti-layam, they are my duties I am involved in.

Not only that; for the maintenance of the creation; maintenance of the harmony of the creation, I also designed a way of life for human beings. As I had said before, any manufacturer will also have a manual published along with any gadget; how to use that particular gadget. Similarly, Bhagavān also having created the universe, has given out a manual also; called the Vēdās. For whose use; for our own use. And what does it teach; how to live a life of harmony, in which both the individual as well as the society will grow. Often there will be a conflict between individual interest and social interest. The vēda has designed a particular lifestyle where both of them are equally taken care of. While I should contribute to the wellbeing of the Society, I have to take care of my own growth.

It is all nice to say, service before the Self; the motto is very good; but everybody wants the self-interest to be also taken care of and Vēdā accepts that we all have self-interest, we all want to personally grow and accomplish the goal of life and Vēdā accepts it as a legitimate desire; and vēda presents a method by which one can take care of the self-interest, at the same parallely take care of the society's interest also, and such a life style is called varṇāśrama vyavastha. Varṇā āśrama vyavastha, vyavastha means the system; the design; the lifestyle; the plan consisting varṇa and āśrama; varṇa means the four fold division of society. Varṇā vyavastha; the four-fold division or classification of society is called varṇa vyavastha, which is meant to take care of social harmony and social growth. When I say social, it means the totality. The community, the nation, the continent, the entire cosmos, is called varṇa -vyavastha;

And the second is āśrama-vyavastha; the scheme of four stages of life; which is meant for the individual growth, which has to parallelly take place, along with social growth. I cannot grow and in the process harm the society; that is not correct. And at the same time, I cannot contribute to the Society and in the process harm myself and the family; like many people, who are interested in social service, they serve the society very well, giving all the time and often what happens is, they do not have time for their own children. And you interview the child and the child comes with such a complaint that my father or mother takes care of the whole world, but they do not give me even 2 minutes, and they feel. That is also not correct. I have to contribute to the society, but not at the cost of individual and family growth. Therefore Āśrama-vyavastha takes care of individual growth; varṇa-vyavastha takes care of social needs; of these Kṛṣṇa is referring to the varṇa-vyavastha here; Kṛṣṇa does not talk about āśrama-vyavastha.

To see in brief what āśrama-vyavastha is: It consists of four stages of life; brahmacarya-āśrama; gṛhastha-āśrama; vānaprastha-āśrama; sanyāsa-āśrama; the very word āśrama shows that in every stage, we are growing or we are supposed to grow inwardly; spiritually; not merely financially. Earlier we had Rs.100 and now Rs.100 crores. It is not that.

The word āśrama is a place for inner growth; not outer material growth; thus the whole life is divided into four āśramas; the first āśrama is brahmacarya-āśrama, which is the stage of studentship. The stage of education, in which one has to learn about the human goal; and teachers in the gurukula system taught that the human life consists of two goals; one is the material goal, we have to earn money, we have to all the things required for our life; like the food, clothing, shelter and entertainment; Vēdās accept all the material needs; a student has to be told that you have to earn, you have to grow you have to be prosperous; but during education, the teachers should say that not only material growth is enough, parallelly one should grow spiritually also. One has to spend time for inner growth, for which alone religious life becomes important, spiritual life becomes important and therefore, a balanced growth of outer and inner personality has to be stressed in the brahmacarya āśrama itself. So therefore first stage the stage of learning where I know the goals of life; both material and spiritual goal.

Then comes the second stage of life; which is called gr̥hastha-āśrama; wherein the implementation begins. During student life, there is no question of implementation because the life is spent in study and so much to study. And what is the implementation? The implementation is initially karma-yōga pradhāna life; plenty of extrovert activities; because that is how a human being born; an extrovert mind, plenty of desires; I want this, I want that; etc. etc. I want to accomplish this, I want to accomplish that. Vēdās say: accomplish; people think that Hinduism talks about only renunciation; No. Hinduism talks about lot of materialistic accomplishment.

May I become famous among men! Svaha! May I become richer than the rich! Svaha! O gracious Lord, may I enter into Thee! Svaha! May Thou, O gracious Lord, enter into me! Svaha! O Lord, I am cleansing my sins in that Self of Thine, which is like a river of a thousand branches. Svaha! O Preserver, as waters flow downward, as the months merge in the year, so may brahmacharins come to me from all directions! Svaha! Thou art a refuge. To me do Thou shine forth. Accept me unto Thyself completely.

This is gṛhasthā-āśrama, in which one fulfills all his desires, in a legitimate manner. And but what vēdās says, it should be in the background of a religious life; the day should start with religion; and the day should be in the background of divinity, and the day should end with religion: with the thought of Lord.

Then if a person does such a karma; he finds that his desires become purified and refined; as they find, enlightened selfishness; even in selfishness, there is higher and lower; and what is that; initially I was interested only in my wellbeing but now my desires are such that not only I should be fine, but also in the process, others also benefit. Sarvē bhavantu sukhinaḥ sarvē santu nirāmayāḥ; the number of people who benefit from my activity is high; so sakāma-karma-pradhāna gṛhastha-āśrama will gradually change to niškāma-karma-pradhāna gṛhastha-āśrama. This is the second stage; full of activity. And nobody can complain; because in the process, he has served the society also; through the pañcamahā yajñās which we saw in the 3rd chapter; deva yajñāḥ in which he contributes to religion; pitṛ-yajña, he contributes to his forefathers; brahma yajñāḥ in which he contributes to the propagation of scriptures; manuṣya yajñāḥ; in which he contributes to the society; all types of social service, and bhūta yajñāḥ through which he contributes to the environmental well-being; yesterday was environment day. Now only that concept has come but it is said in the Vēdās itself; bhūta-yajñāḥ is environmental day; not only planting two saplings on the environment day or cleaning with the broomstick and forgetting it; but taking care of the whole environment for the whole life. For us environment day is not once a year, but everyday bhūta yajñāḥ is important; whatever way you do, just water one tree; it is bhūtaḥ-yajñāḥ; during summer, they just put thottai and then pour water, so that the cows can get water; this is all what; bhūtaḥ-yajñāḥ only. So thus in the second stage of life, I contribute enough to the Society; and in the process purify my mind.

And then the third stage is called vānaprastha-āśrama; where I turn more inwards; I have been an extrovert throughout, running here and there; bhāhya anthakaraṇam should turn antharmuka; this is called upāsana-pradhāna-āśrama; gṛhastha-āśrama is what; karma-pradhāna-āśramaḥ; the next stage is vānaprastha-āśrama, upāsana-pradhāna āśrama; so there he may go out of the house or he can remain in the house itself, but predominantly he turns inwards; upāsana means what meditation? Japa.

And then comes the final āśrama known as sanyāsa-āśrama; wherein either he gets out of the house and takes to the fourth āśrama or he may choose to remain in the family itself, but learns to detach from the family, takes to inner detachment, by the understanding that life is that in which association will have to end in dissociation. I have entered, I have to come out. Relationship also I have entered into; and then I have to grow out; I mentally hand over the responsibilities of every member of the family to Īśvara. Until then, I said I am going to take care of this person, I am going to take care of this person; how long I can take care of? I assume that I am taking care of. Whether I succeed or not, I do not know; that is a different thing; in the name of taking care, I am only spoiling it; that is a different matter. Assuming that I am taking care of, learn to hand over the responsibility to Īśvara; and this inward loosening is the sanyāsa-āśrama. All for what, the more you have detachment, more the mind is available for the last stage jñāna-yōga-pradhāna āśrama; so karma pradhāna āśrama; upāsana-pradhāna-āśrama; jñāna-pradhāna-āśrama.

If a person goes through all the four stages, what is the beauty? He has catered to his own growth also; and in the process, he has catered to the society also. Like a tree producing a fruit; and fruit is eaten by us and the seed is thrown away, in that two things happen; trees take care of social service; what is social service? Gives away fruit; and tree also takes care of its personal interest, the seed is thrown and its own propagation also is taken care of. In the whole creation you study, it is very well designed; the āśrama dharma is also like that only. So this is āśrama-vyavastha; whether a person physically goes through these āśramas or not; one has to inwardly, mentally go through all the four āśramas. This is the āśrama-vyavastha.

The next vyavastha meant for social health and harmony is called, varṇa-vyavastha; which alone Kṛṣṇa is referring in the first line, as cāturvarṇyam maya sṛṣṭam. Arjuna, I am not only responsible for the Āśrama scheme of life, I myself am responsible for the varṇa scheme also; and how many varṇās, means divisions or classes, or groups, and how many groups are there; broadly speaking cāturvarṇām, four varṇās are there; four class of people are there; which means the entire society can be categorised into four; what are those four; brāhmaṇa-varṇa, kṣatriya-varṇa; vaiśya-varṇāḥ; and śūdraḥ-varṇāḥ; brāhmaṇa, kṣatriya, vaiśya, śūdraḥ;

Now the next question is: what is the basis of division? This division can be seen from three different angles. This classification can be seen from three different angles; and therefore the varṇās also have to be seen from this particular angle. What are those angles?

The first one is character based division. Guṇatraya vibhāgaḥ or guṇa-vibhāgaḥ; means svabhāva or character or personality based classification. And to indicate that we use the expression, guṇa-brāhmaṇa, guṇa-kṣatriyāḥ, guṇa-vaiśya, and guṇa-śūdraḥ;

And similarly we have got the classification based on the profession; karma, occupation; and if I am going to look from this particular angle; then I will use the adjective karma, karma-brāhmaṇa, karma-kṣatriyāḥ, karma-vaiśya; and karma-śūdraḥ.

Then again we can look from a third angle also, which is purely based on the birth. In Sānskrīt, the word birth is translated as either janma or jāti; jāti means birth; jātiḥ does not mean caste; jātiḥ means birth; it is derived from the root, जन् Jan, to be born, and the abstract noun of jan, jayathē is jātiḥ; which means jāti based division or birth based division. And when you look at the division from this angle, we can again have jāti-brāhmaṇa, jāti-kṣatriya, and jāti-vaiśya and jāti-śūdraḥ.

Ok. Now we will try to understand the basis of each of these three divisions. Let us take guṇa-wise division; what type of character norms we take to classify a person as a guṇa-brāhmaṇa, which character makes a person guṇa-brāhmaṇa, which character makes guṇa-kṣatriya; we should have the norms. The śāstra talks about that; based on the three basic guṇas, satva, rajas and tamas; this classification is done; The śāstra points out the guṇa-brāhmaṇa is a person in whom satva-guṇa is dominant; and rajō-guṇa is in the middle and tamō-guṇa is the least. So satva-pradhāna-svabhāvaḥ, brāhmaṇa-svabhāvaḥ; whoever he is, in whichever country, he or she may be born; whichever religion he or she may belong to; the satva-pradhāna character.

Now the question is how to know, what is satva-pradhāna character? Again the śāstra says we will be seeing this in the 14th chapter, the word satva represents tranquility or the intellectual-nature or intellectual-efficiency. So intellectual-efficiency; intellectual-tranquility is indicated by satva; whereas rajō-guṇa stands for activity; the tendency to be hyper active; is represented by rajō-guṇa; and tamō-guṇa represents the lack of both; there is neither internal activity, intellectual, nor is there external activity; when will it be there; sleeping. when you are asleep, you are neither inwardly active, nor outwardly active; in contemplation you are not outwardly active, but the mind is alert; when you are running your physically active mind is not thinking; whereas tamas represents the suppression of both the inner and outer activities; and guṇa brāhmaṇa is one in whom satva-guṇa is pradhāna; more an introvert person.

And then the second possibility is this; rajō-guṇa is pradhāna; which means hyper active; and this rajō-guṇa is backed by satva-guṇa; rajō-guṇa is dominant, satva-guṇa is behind; because of this and tamō-guṇa of course is the least, in fact, you can use the formula, rajō-guṇa, satva-guṇa, tamō-guṇa. RST. First variety SRT. So SRT is contemplative, thinking, intellectual; RST is very very active, extrovert, outgoing; but since the satva-guṇa is behind the rajō-guṇa; and satva-guṇa stands for thinking, tranquility, nobility, etc. he is active, but selflessly active. Very active, but his activities benefits most of the society. He also may take but the society benefits more. So this is called kṣatriya-svabhāvaḥ or guṇa-kṣatriyāḥ; RST.

Then the third-svabhāva is defined as RTS. Here also rajō-guṇa is dominant and therefore, not introvert, contemplative, or quiet, but highly active, but rajō-guṇa is backed by what; tamō-guṇa and satva-guṇa is least. 70-20-10% you can put something like that. Here what happens rajas predominance this person is also highly active, but the problem is since satva-guṇa is the least, the activities are highly selfish activities.

So thus selflessly-active is RST. Selfishly-active is RTS. In both cases Rajas is predominant, second line is different. And according to śāstra, RST character is called kṣatriya-guṇaḥ and RTS character represents vaiśya guṇaḥ.

And whoever is selfishly-active, all such people are guṇa-vaiśyas. We are not talking about his birth; we are not talking about his profession. Wherever he is born; whatever be the profession, as long as you are selfishly active, even if it is a religious activity, in which you want to get more money. I took our students to Amarnath and some contractor is there; he said he will arrange everything; cheated us. Took so much money and all the arrangements were very very poor; we have to stay in tents; for Amarnath route of 48 kms. There are no pucca building; therefore the tents have to be arranged; per tent he collected Rs.200-300 and every tent was leaking. And in the night, we had to sit in the bed which broke down, etc. Now it is a very noble service that they are doing, because we really to go to pilgrimage, and it is very nice service, we do not know anything, they are doing wonderful service, if it is used and they are all brāhmins by birth; the very association, a religious association.

Do not ask what I did? That is not the issue; what I want to say is: job is a religious job; but the motive is profit; then they become guṇa vaiśyaḥ; and then the last one is what? TRS. What is TRS? Tamō-guṇa is dominant, rajō-guṇa is lesser and satva-guṇa is the least. and since rajas and satva are less, thinking activity is also very minimum; that skilled activity is also minimum, unskilled activity is also minimum; therefore most of the time either sleeping, or sleepy. And if there is some activity, it is only mechanical thoughtless activity. Unskilled people, mechanical people, they are all called guṇa-śūdraḥ; whatever be the birth; whatever be their profession; such a character is called guṇa-śūdraḥ and such people are called guṇa-śūdraḥ. So thus guṇa-brāhmaṇa, guṇa- kṣatriya; guṇa-vaiśya; and guṇa-śūdraḥ; this is classification based on what? Guṇa.

Then what is the second-classification I said: Profession-based. We go by what the profession that person takes, not bothered about the character; but purely profession wise. Karma-brāhmaṇa, karma-kṣatriya, karma-vaiśya, karma-śūdraḥ.

Now the question is which profession comes under the first variety. The śāstrās says all the activities which are connected with the intellectual process; education, research, propagation, teaching; because all of them are connected with intellectual activity. Intellectual means both spiritual and non-spiritual; aparā-vidya as well as para vidya; including the scriptural study and propagation. The think-tank; the intellectual profession will come under what; brāhmaṇa karma; and whoever has taken that profession is a karma brāhmaṇa; all teachers come under karma brāhmaṇa; whether it is vēdic-teacher, vēdāntic-teacher, physics-teacher, chemistry-teacher; they are all karma-brāhmaṇa.

And the second profession is administration; providing the infrastructure in the society; for all the activities; maintenance of law and order; defense, administration, government; so taking care of the social needs is called kṣatriya-karma and whoever is in the field is called karma-kṣatriya; either in administration or in what you call defence field, which is connected with the orderliness; Kṣatriyā-karma and karma-kṣatriya.

And the third profession that is possible is all activities which lead to the economic growth; economic maintenance of the society; which is very very important; produce wealth. In those days producing wealth means agriculture; now lot of industry, all of them, because without generating wealth, other people cannot survive. So this is vaiśya karma and whoever is involved in trade, in business, in agriculture, in all of them, they are all called karma vaiśya.

And what is the fourth category? All the activities which help the other three; in the running of the other three departments; all the unskilled work, which had to help the karma-brāhmaṇa, karma-kṣatriya and karma-vaiśyas, all these three people require skills; but they can plan, but it has to be implemented by someone, manpower is required; they do not plan but they implement; all the unskilled work, which is done to implement the other three, is called śūdraḥ-karma, and such people are called karma śūdraḥ.

Thus karma-brāhmaṇa, karma-kṣatriya, karma-vaiśya and karma-śūdraḥ; and the most important thing to be remembered is: a person who is a karma-brāhmaṇa need not be or may not be a guṇa-brāhmaṇa; there is no rule that a karma-brāhmaṇa has to be a guṇa brāhmaṇa. I may be teaching vēda; then I am a karma-brāhmaṇa; but if I am interested in making profit, selling Vēdā; marketing-Vēdā, then I am guṇadathaḥ-vaiśya; karma-brāhmaṇa but guṇa-vaiśya; thus one and the same person may be two; based on the way of looking; This is karmadaḥ-classification.

And then the last one is, we do not see either guṇa or karma, purely based on birth; when a person is born to a brāhmin by profession; because he is born to a brāhmin, if you are going to call him a brāhmin, then it is called brāhmaṇyam; jāti brāhmaṇa. We do not know his character yet; we do not know what profession he is going to take yet; but he is born to a karma-brāhmaṇa; therefore he is a jāti-brāhmaṇa; purely based on parentage. Thus we can have jāti-brāhmaṇa, jāti-kṣatriya, jāti-vaiśya; jāti-śūdraḥ. And suppose a jāti-brāhmaṇa becomes an MLA. He is karma-kṣatriya, because he is in Administration. A jāti-brāhmaṇa can become a karma-kṣatriya and suppose as an MLA, he takes lot of bribes; he uses it to only make money. There is no need to say suppose! In India, all administrators are like that; then he is guṇa-vaiśyaḥ; jāti-brāhmaṇa, karma-kṣatriya; guṇa-vaiśyaḥ; three-in-one. Similarly, any number of permutation and combination, you can see. OK.

Now the next topic we have to see whether there is any gradation among these four. Whether there is any gradation among these four? What is the view of the śāstrās? The śāstras say, when you look from the birth angle; jāti, there cannot be any gradation at all; all are to be equally respected; irrespective of one's jāti. Therefore jāti brāhmaṇa, jāti kṣatriya, jāti vaiśya and jāti śūdraḥ, all are equal. Only when we differentiate based on jāti, there will be problems. That is what we are facing now. It is not the mistake of the śāstras; but we are grading based on jāti; while this person knows, the other person is jāti-brāhmaṇa, but he does akrama. So then therefore how can he get respect from the other person; and therefore jāti cannot give a person superiority.

Then what about karma-wise division? Śāstra says from karma-angle also, all professions are equally important; the teachers are very important in a country, in fact, when the teachers are respected alone; they should become respectable, that is a different thing; when they are respected alone, the country will grow. And what about administration; this is also important; defence is also important; Pakistan came to Kargil or they will come straight to Delhi and then to Madras. So defence is also important; then what about economic well-being? That is also important; and what about all the people to implement these things? So therefore karma-brāhmaṇa, karma-kṣatriya, karma-vaiśya and karma-śūdra; all of them, are equal. Therefore nobody can claim superiority. That is why puruṣa-sūktam compares these four professions as the four organs of the body;

brāhmaṇō mukhamāsīt; bāhu rājanya kritā; ūrū tatasya yad vaiśyaḥ; padbhyāguṇm śūdrō ajāyathaḥ

To come here you require feet; and thigh; and then you require the hands for writing notes; and then if there is nothing in the head; what is the use. Therefore all organs are important, for the society, all the four classes are important, therefore there is no gradation.

Then what about guṇathaḥ, is there gradation? That we will see in the next class.

Hari Om

059 CHAPTER 04, VERSES 13-15

ॐ

Lord Kṛṣṇa is talking about varṇa-āśrama dharma, especially the varṇa-dharma as designed by him through the vēdās. And I was discussing this varṇa-dharma in the last class, wherein we saw that the society according to vēda is broadly classified into four divisions, brāhmaṇa, kṣatriya, vaiśya and śūdraḥ; and I also said that this division can be seen from three different angles; one is purely from the standpoint of birth; in which case, we give the adjective, jāti-brāhmaṇa, jāti-kṣatriya, jāti-vaiśya and jāti-śūdraḥ; purely because of parentage.

And thereafter we can again divide the society into four groups based on the type of profession that one takes; and based on that we saw again we can have karma brāhmaṇa, karma-kṣatriya, karma-vaiśya and karma-śūdraḥ. When a jāti-brāhmaṇa goes to rule the country; he will be a jāti brāhmaṇa but he will be a karma-kṣatriya; when he is doing business; he is a jāti-brāhmaṇa but karma-vaiśya; and similarly when one is going to do pure mechanical labour; then he will come under karma-śūdraḥ; even though he may be a jāti-brāhmaṇa.

And then I said that again we can look at the society from the angle of guṇa or character from the character angle when we see, we have got the four divisions, guṇa-brāhmaṇa, guṇa-kṣatriya, guṇa-vaiśya; and guṇa-śūdraḥ. And when a person is a jāti-brāhmaṇa and becomes an MLA or MP or Minister, he is a karma-kṣatriya alright, but when he uses that position, not for serving the society but to amass wealth, then character-wise, he is a vaiśya; guṇa vaiśya he has become. So thus, every human being can be seen from different angles and one person can be brāhmaṇa from all the three angles or he may be a brāhmaṇa from one angle, kṣatriya from one angle, vaiśya from one angle; thus all these three levels are there.

And thereafterwards I discussed the topic: is there any gradation among these four. And in this discussion also we have to ask a question from which angle. And we point out that jāti-wise gradation cannot be there. All are equal from the standpoint of jāti. Therefore jāti-brāhmaṇa, jāti-kṣatriya, jāti-vaiśya, and jāti-śūdraḥ, all of them are equal.

Then what about karma-angle; occupational-angle? That also I pointed out that all the occupations are equally important for the peace and progress of the society; and we saw in the Puruṣa sūktam, beautifully delineated brāhmaṇōsya mukhamāsīt; bāhu rājanya kritā; ūrū tatasya yad vaiśyaḥ; padbhyāguṃ śūdrō ajāyathaḥ. So the brāhmaṇa-profession, karma-brāhmaṇa is one who is responsible for the growth and propagation of knowledge; not only spiritual knowledge, material knowledge will also thrive only when there are scientists; not only they increase the knowledge, they teach also. And that is why brāhmaṇa asya mukhaṃ āsīt. Mukhaṃ stands for vāk, vāk stands for knowledge; knowledge is very important in a society.

And not only we require people to propagate knowledge, bāhu rājanya kritā; we require soldiers, we know very well, especially we are now suffering. Therefore a scientist can peacefully do research only when the country is protected from enemies. Therefore equally important is the soldier; including the administration, defence, all of them; and therefore that is compared to bāhu; bāhu means what; the arms. So therefore the head for knowledge, hand is for defence. So Society's head is guṇa-brāhmaṇa, and society's hand is guṇa-kṣatriya.

And if the society must be strong and grow well, even for research we require money, so grants are required; only then research can be done; many of the people in the West are able to grow in science only because they put lot of money; so without money, Brāhmaṇa cannot do his job; Kṣatriyā cannot do his job; and therefore money or wealth is important; and whoever takes care of that part is called karma-vaiśya; and therefore he is compared to what: ūrū tatasya yad vaiśyaḥ; the thighs and kneecaps. Knee caps are the important thing; because that is the weight-bearing part and that is why by thirty or forty, the first point of the body you become aware of is, Oh ho; I was not aware of the knee cap. It has to carry the body. Similarly the entire society is carried only because of prosperity, therefore karma-vaiśya is like the thigh of the society and then karma-śūdra is like the legs of the society; the very movement of everything is possible only because of it.

Thus Puruṣa-sūktam presents these four-varṇās as the four-organs of the society; and once we look upon them as organs, then we will know, every organ is important. Tell me, Kidney is important or Heart or Brain is important? We will know, when it fails; God bless;

let it not fail; Any organ fails; that is why when there is tooth ache, they will say the tooth ache is the most painful one; then it is headache; they will say headache is the most painful one; everybody claims that problem is the worst affected; every part is equally important and therefore all the professions are equally important; therefore profession_wise cannot be there. If there is a karma-brāhmaṇa doing pūja in the temple, he is important; do not look down upon him; or a professor, he is also important; a soldier is also important; business man is also important. And therefore karma-wise gradation we do not accept. Jāti_wise gradation we do not accept; and all our caste problems are only because jāti_wise gradation we tried to impose. Somebody wanted respect, just because he is a jāti-brāhmaṇa, and then it will not work.

And then finally, we have to see guṇa_wise. And śāstra says, guṇa_wise, there is gradation; character_wise, there is certainly gradation. A person of noble character is certainly superior; he has to be respected; he has to be worshipped, in fact, a truly noble man will not demand respect, people will automatically respect him. OK.

Once we accept gradation from the standpoint of guṇa; the question comes who is superior to whom. The answer is simple, guṇa-brāhmaṇa is certainly superior to guṇa-kṣatriya, guṇa-kṣatriya is certainly superior to guṇa-vaiśya; guṇa-vaiśya is certainly superior to guṇa-śūdraḥ; and therefore all the people should worship and respect whom; guṇa-brāhmaṇa, whether he is karma-brāhmaṇa or not; whether he is jāti-brāhmaṇa or not; irrespective of his birth; irrespective of his profession; a guṇa-brāhmaṇa should be respected.

The next question is why? Why should we respect a guṇa-brāhmaṇa? Very simple. Guṇa-brāhmaṇa is a sātvic-person, who is closest to self-knowledge and liberation. Guṇa-brāhmaṇa is closest to knowledge; because he is satva-guṇa pradhāna; he has to attain knowledge and liberation; liberation means oneness with God; therefore guṇa-brāhmaṇa is Īśvara samīpē vartatē.

Whereas guṇa-kṣatriya is slightly farther; because guṇa kṣatriya performs selfless actions and therefore a man of selfless service is certainly superior; but he is still farther from guṇa brāhmaṇa because guṇa kṣatriya will have to become a guṇa brāhmaṇa and then attain knowledge. So therefore he is twice removed; from selfless activity, he cannot get liberation; from selfless activity, he has to come to self-knowledge; for that he has to get satva-guṇa-pradhāna, which stands for knowledge and enquiry; therefore he is twice-removed.

And guṇa-vaiśya is still inferior because he is extremely active alright, but full of selfishness; and therefore a selfishly active person is further removed from God and therefore he has to go three steps; from guṇa-vaiśya, he has to become guṇa-kṣatriya; selflessly active and from guṇa-kṣatriya, he has to become contemplative minded and he has to attain oneness with the Lord.

And guṇa-śūdraḥ is the lowest in the ladder; because he has not even started the selfish activity; there is neither selfish activity; nor selfless activity; nor knowledge. If all these three are absent; that person is closer to whom; not God; Not even human being; closer to animal; because there is neither selfish activity; nor selfless activity, nor knowledge; and therefore that person is closer to animals and therefore he has to get converted into guṇa-vaiśya; guṇa-kṣatriya, guṇa-brāhmaṇa and thereafter only Īśvara-aikyam; and therefore śāstra says everyone should respect a guṇa brāhmaṇa. And that is why in our purāṇic stories also, we have got stories of Nandanār and other people, who were not at all brāhmaṇās and who were not even allowed in the temple, the temple priests were looking down upon him; and then he stands out, then Bhagavān comes in the dream of the priest and says, you may be a jāti-brāhmaṇa, the priest may be jāti-brāhmaṇa; a priest may be even a karma-brāhmaṇa; Bhagavān says that Nandanār is what brāhmaṇa; guṇa-brāhmaṇa; and therefore you have to honour; you have to bring him in and therefore you have to carry him on the shoulders; and not only that in the 63 Nāyanmār stories you have to include him. Many of the saints in the 63 Nāyanmār category, are not jāti-brāhmaṇas at all; they are all guṇa-brāhmaṇas.

So therefore what is the lesson to be learnt; jāti_wise gradation not accepted; karma_wise gradation not accepted; guṇa_wise gradation accepted; and not only we have to respect a guṇa_brāhmaṇa; the śāstra says that all of us should become guṇa-brāhmaṇa; all of us should become guṇa_brāhmaṇa, that is the śāstric-injunction; therefore there is gradation.

Then the final topic in this that we have to discuss is; where do we have choice in this particular discussion; because we have got jāti_wise personality; karma_wise role we have, and guṇa_wise role we have; among these three; do we have choice at all; if at all there is choice, in which field do we have choice; On enquiry we will find, at the level of the jāti, we have no choice. Because we are already born. So in this janma; we have no choice at all; either we are jāti_brāhmaṇas or we are jāti_kṣatriyās or we were jāti_vaiśyas or jāti_śūdraḥ; we do not have choice; we cannot change from one jāti to another jāti. Certificate we get, if you pay the requisite fee of Rs.10 or 15. I am not talking about that; you cannot change the parentage; thank God, you need not change the jāti for liberation. I can happily accept my jāti, because my superiority or inferiority does not depend on jāti, because jāti_wise gradation is not accepted; therefore I accept my jāti and I am happy with my parentage; therefore there is no choice in jāti.

Then the next is, do we have choice with regard to guṇa. Suppose I am a guṇa-śūdraḥ; Can I become a guṇa-kṣatriya; can I become a guṇa-vaiśya; can I become a guṇa-brāhmaṇa is the question. Fortunately śāstra says, with regard to character, we do have a choice. It is possible for a guṇa-śūdraḥ to become guṇa-vaiśya; it is possible to become for a guṇa-vaiśya to guṇa-kṣatriya; character change is possible. In fact, all the sādhanās prescribed in the śāstrās, are only meant for this conversion. We are all born with tamō guṇa-pradhāna personality; because laziness is natural; ālasyam hi manuṣyāṅām śarīrastō mahān ripuḥ. Laziness is the intrinsic nature of the physical body; śāstram itself has said; now you may be happy; wonderful; there is Śāstras support. And the śāstra gives the reason also. What is the reason? Because the body is made up of the tamas aṁśa of the pañca bhūtas. I do not know whether you remember Tatva Bōdha. We had seen that the sūkṣma-śarīram is made up of the satva and raja aspects of the five elements, whereas the stūla-śarīram is made out of the tamas aspect of the five elements; and since it is the tamas behind the body, body tends to be lazy. We have to get everything done by sitting at one place. If someone is going nearby, we will ask them to get a glass of water. We will not get up. So śāstra says; but the śāstrās says that you have to break the tamas of the body; otherwise there will be no difference between you and an animal.

Therefore our first progress is what?; Tamapradhāna to rajapradhāna; the lazy person should become active-person. And therefore śāstra prescribes the entire ritualistic-kāṇḍa, all the rituals are to break our tamō-guṇa. Because our rituals involve physical activity. Do repeated namaskāra, sit, get up, do that and do this, etc. and that is why everyone says after-all God is within me; my heart; why can't I think of the Lord closing the eyes; why should I get up! Because all such mānasa pujas will appeal to us why, because we are lazy. So whenever your mind says stay; say No; get up in the early morning; go the temple, do pradakṣiṇam, etc. do namaskāra; sūrya-namaskāra; so all these ṣōḍaśa-upacāra-pūja, one of the important purposes is breaking tamō-guṇa, the laziness; so therefore, I switch over from tamas to rajas by karma-yōga; karma-kāṇḍam of the vēdās.

And then from rajō-guṇa I should go to satva-guṇa-pradhāna; because if I am highly active, it is very good alright, but I will never come to study the scriptures. No time for Gīta class. Therefore, over-activity, workholism is also equally dangerous and therefore having contributed to the society to a great extent, I should learn to withdraw and be contemplative and to shift from rajō-guṇa to satva-guṇa, the scriptures prescribe upāsana-kāṇḍam. Varieties of meditations. So karma-kāṇḍam is for from tamas to rajas; and upāsana-kāṇḍam for rajas to satva-guṇa; and once I have become satva-guṇa-pradhāna, I am what: guṇa-brāhmaṇa I have become; I am fit for the next level; and what is the next level?; satva-guṇa to nirguṇaḥ or guṇātītaḥ.

That we will see in the 14th chapter; and that switch-over takes place because of jñāna-kāṇḍam of the vēdās. So thus, karma-kāṇḍam lifts me from tamas to rajas; upāsana kāṇḍam, upāsana lifts me from rajas to satva; jñāna-kāṇḍam lifts me from satva to nirguṇa or Īśvara-aikyam and therefore we all should become guṇa-brāhmaṇaḥ and guṇātītaḥ. Therefore in guṇa, there is a choice, and we should use the choice. In jāti, there is no choice.

And then what is the final-one. Karma. Do I have a choice with regard to karma?; the profession or occupation. We say with regard to karma also, we do have a choice. What kind of choice we have; we can choose the profession based on two types of norms; what are the two possible norms to choose the profession. The śāstra says either go by jāti, or go by guṇa. When you want to choose a profession, either go by jāti; jāti means what hereditary profession; a jāti-brāhmaṇa takes profession of brāhmaṇa, he becomes a karma-brāhmaṇa also; a priest's-son becomes a priest. In fact this was the one which was prevalent in India till very recently. They never had any problem with regard to choosing the profession, because whatever was the profession of the forefathers; if he is playing the Nadasvaram, the son would also start doing the same. And a Kṣatriyā son just rules the kingdom; therefore one method is choosing the profession by heredity; Jāti-based karma.

And what is the second-alternative; if you do not want to go by jāti, you go by the guṇaḥ; what type of personality I have, what type of inclination I have, based on that, I choose the profession; which one is better. If you ask, each one has its own advantage and disadvantage. Suppose I choose the profession based on jāti; what are the advantages.

First advantage is: I need not choose, because often the greatest problem is choosing. Even choosing the dress, for many people it is a great problem. Seeing this, this is good. Seeing that, that is good. So choosing is a pain. No headache at all, you choose profession of the parents, the greatest advantage is that you are exposed to atmosphere; to that atmosphere, even while he or she is in the womb of the mother. A musician's child has got a lot of advantage; because he listens to music, even when he is in the womb of the mother. After birth, even the mother's lulaby would be music. If a mother without saṅgīta knowledge sings a lulaby, even the sleeping child would get up.!! So therefore the child all the time listens either to vēdic-chanting or to music; so therefore the child is exposed and therefore it is prepared for that profession; in fact, most of the professions require training from early age; many of the Olympic champions, gymnastics and all. Suppose you want to take part in gymnastics. You say Swamiji, even sitting down and getting up itself is a big problem; where to gymnastics. All the bones will break. Do you think that you can try gymnastics now or hereafter? You interview Natia komichi; whatever be the name; at the 2nd age of the 3rd year, they start; even the body has to be prepared for that; and therefore when the profession is hereditary; the preparation takes place in early ages, even the dietary disciplines are suited. Because in the tradition, brāhmaṇa's-food was different; kṣatriya's-food was different. If a person is going to the warfront, he cannot survive on brinjāls, drumsticks and lady's finger! They have to eat this and that. So therefore even the food items they were different according to the profession taken. Hereditarily he is exposed and the food habits he takes right from the beginning; and therefore he can smoothly get into that profession; that is the advantage.

But what is the disadvantage; the disadvantage is: by chance he does not like the profession, and then it becomes a miserable life. I take a profession because it is the parent's profession and then I do not like that, say as a vādhyār, wearing the pañcakacam, having the kudumi; and wearing the ear-jewels; (for both the ears, not one); so ear-rings in both the ears, all the other things he sees, he wants to do that, and he is a vādhyār, what to do; so therefore life can become miserable, if I do not like my job. So in jāti-wise choice of profession, the advantage is I can get training from very early stages of life but the disadvantage is if I dislike, it might become miserable. But still in our tradition, jāti based profession was predominant. Even now also, very many places, it is there. In Tirupati and all, there are many jobs, which are done by hereditary rights, including making that pātram; it is a family profession.

Now the second-option is what? I go by guṇaḥ; according to my inclination, whatever profession I like I choose; In this also, there are advantages and disadvantages. What is the greatest advantage?; if I take up a profession that I like; then there is no strain in the personality; in fact, I look for Monday; Sunday evening, if I do not like my profession, Sunday evening becomes a terror with the thought that I should get up tomorrow morning, have to go to the office. Five days a week, 8 hours; in fact, bulk of your life is spent in your office; and suppose you do not like, it creates a lot of psychosomatic problems; because there is split personality; you do not like what you are doing; you curse yourself that it is prārabdhaḥ and fate and that you are compelled to earn, etc. Therefore the greatest advantage is I enjoy what I do, doing what I enjoy, is a very important necessity for a healthy life. If I have to lead a healthy life, I should enjoy what I am doing. So that is an advantage; if I choose the profession according to my character.

But what is the disadvantage in this; the disadvantage is I can never get an early training because, I do not know what type of inclination I will have; until late 7 years or 8 years, 9 years of 10 years, I do not know what exactly I like. Therefore the choosing the profession may become difficult; many people do not know what they like; they will say, it seems I like that; and at other times it seems that is OK, etc. Someone says everything is OK; others say nothing is OK. That is a different case. So I am not very clear. So many parents give choice to the children to choose the subjects in the college; the children are not able to choose; and they will go and ask the Swamiji; what can the poor Swamiji do? So therefore it becomes a big headache to choose and not only that, invariably after you choose, the other thing will appear to be good; like in a hotel; after ordering the dish, seeing the next table's dish, you feel that it seems better; After ordering Uttappam, seeing Pūri, you would like to have that and vice versa. Do not say I am talking from experience. It is only psychology. With regard to everything, including a wife, or a husband.

So therefore human mind has got lot of problems; so after choosing I may always say the other profession is better; இக்கரைக்கு அக்கரை பச்சை ikkarikki akkari pachhai. Therefore I again change the job. There are many people, even after 50 years, this and that and they come, And therefore what is the disadvantage, I may not be able to choose clearly, and I may not get the advantage of early training. So therefore, there is a disadvantage; so in both advantages are there, disadvantages are also there; Therefore Śāstra says, go by any one of them; but until recently, it was jāti based profession; now that is going fast. And already violation had taken place in Mahābhāratha and all. Drōṇacārya was a jāti-brāhmaṇa but he joined what?; the Mahabhārata war. So there he took to what; a kṣatriya dharma, even though he was born a brāhmin; he choose kṣatriya karma somehow; and because somehow inclination for that; Asvathāma, Drōṇa, all these people. Whereas Visvāmitrā was born a kṣatriya; but his inclination was what; dhyānam, tapas etc. and he became the inventor of the greatest mantra; i.e. Gāyathri. He was not a jāti-brāhmaṇa.

Therefore śāstra says, either go by jāti, or go by guṇa; but only one warning the śāstra gives; let not money be the criterion for profession; let not money be the primary criterion for choosing the profession; once money becomes the criterion; all the people will run only for that profession where money comes; one time they were after bank; no work and more money; bankers please excuse. Not much work; but plenty of money and thereafter all the people will go to computer or something; all the people will go to one profession or the other and thus you will find that for certain professions too many people will be there; and for certain professions, there would be no one; and not only that, wonderful arts and crafts and music and dance form; they will all die.

In India in so many places, so many arts and crafts are there; hereditarily maintained; but all the people will drop and come to the city which is overloaded; and then we will do all white collared job and all of them will die away. Therefore śāstra says let not money be the criterion; either go by your talents and choose or go by your jāti.

And therefore, we have no choice in jāti, we have choice in guṇa and we have choice in karma also. This is the varṇa vyavastha which is designed by the vedās and the vedās are supposed by given out by God; and therefore as Lord Kṛṣṇa tells here. Hey, Arjuna, I am responsible for this design of cāturvarṇyaṁ.

Therefore Kṛṣṇa says here, look out the verse: cāturvarṇyaṁ mayā sṛṣṭaṁ guṇa-karma-vibhāgaśaḥ; I have created the four-fold classification of the society; based on guṇa and karma; Kṛṣṇa here does not separately mention jāti because, during Kṛṣṇa's time, jāti and karma were identical, because Brāhmaṇa-jāti, they took up only brāhmaṇa-karma. Only in kali-yuga now, we have got division into three; at that time, a jāti-brāhmaṇa would be a karma-brāhmaṇa also; only guṇa wise he might be different; and now we have a jāti-brāhmaṇa, karma-kṣatriya, guṇa-vaiśya or guṇa-śūdra; therefore Kṛṣṇa refers to two; but jāti also is included in that; I have created..

But this is totally an aside topic What Kṛṣṇa wants to convey here is totally different; the idea is: Arjuna I am also very active therefore. So I am sṛṣṭi kartā; I am stithi kartā; I am laya kartā; I am vēdāsya-karta; vēdādvāra-varṇāśrama dvāra dharmasyapi kartā; kartā means I am active all the time. But the beauty is what; even though I am full of karma or activity, the activities do not bind me. So karma does not bind me.

What was Arjuna's worry; karma binds a person. Arjuna thought and therefore he was trying to escape from karma; and therefore Kṛṣṇa wants to say; Arjuna do not try to escape from karma; you cannot escape from karma, because again your guṇa will not allow. As I said; not only you are kṣatriya by birth; you are kṣatriya by character also; and if you go to forest, as I said, you will form an organisation of forest dwellers; and you will become the President or Secretary of FWA. FDA. Forest Dwellers Association. You will start something like that. So therefore you cannot give up karma; that is not in your blood; not only that, you need not give up karma also; you can enjoy peace in spite of karma. So tasya kartāramapi mām viddhi; understand that I am the doer of all those activities; but at the same time; viddhiakartāram; I am detached from all those karmas; I do not carry those karmas to my bed and worry that today this happened today like this; and what will happen tomorrow, etc. and disturb my sleep. Just thinking over those actions; therefore I am detached from those karmas; and therefore only avyayaṁ; unaffected; I am asaṅgaḥ.

Verse 4.14

न मां कर्माणि लिम्पन्ति न मे कर्मफले स्पृहा ।
इति माम् योऽभिजानाति कर्मभिर्न स बध्यते ॥ ४.१४ ॥

na mām karmāṇi limpanti na mē karmaphalē sprhā |
iti mām yō'bhijānāti karmabhirna sa badhyatē || 4.14 ||

कर्माणि karmaṇi actions, न लिम्पन्ति माम् na limpanti mām do not affect Me, मे न स्पृहा mē na sprhā I do not have a craving, कर्मफले karmaphalē with regard to the result of action-
इति iti thus, सः यः अभिजानाति saḥ yaḥ abhijānāti he who clearly knows, माम् mām Me, न बध्यते na badhyatē is not bound, कर्मभिः karmabhiḥ by actions

14. Actions do not affect Me. I have no craving with regard to the result of action – thus he who clearly knows Me is not bound by actions.

Kṛṣṇa says that karma cannot disturb me. Not only karma cannot disturb me; karma-phalam also cannot disturb me; karma also can give tension; and karma-phalam can give regrets or disappointments; so both are not there for me; therefore Kṛṣṇa says: na mām karmāṇi limpanti; karmas do not affect me; by creating tension; anxiety. And not only that; karmaphalē api mē sprhā nāsti; I do not have even the concern over the results of action. So I am not concerned about the result of action; because every action is going to create an appropriate result; and the Lord will never do any injustice to me, because as they say: I always get what I deserve; never what I desire. Therefore Lord is always just and therefore whatever has to happen according to karma, it will happen; therefore I am not concerned about the result. So here incidentally we have to note, planning for the result is one thing; worrying over the result is another. Vēdānta is never against planning; planning is extremely important; without planning you cannot do anything, even to travel by train or plane, you have to plan and purchase the ticket; therefore planning makes me efficient in the present; in fact, many people say that the research, they say you should take 85% or 75% of time, you should give for planning, give more time for planning; then implementation is easier and quicker. On the other hand, if you do not have plans, even if 100% time you give, things will go haywire. Therefore, vēdānta is not against planning; because planning makes me more efficient in the present. What is vēdānta against; worrying about the result vēdānta is against; because worrying over the result will not make me efficient in the present; it will make me only deficient in the present.

Planning leads to efficiency; worrying leads to deficiency; you become inefficient. How do you know whether you are planning or worrying? Many have confusion even in this. Many people are worrying while they think that they are planning. Actually what is happening is worrying? How do you know? Very simple. Planning is a deliberate action, which you can fix and do at a particular time; whereas worry is not a deliberate action; it is a helpless happening; mechanical reaction. So planning is deliberate action; worrying is mechanical reaction; that is why you can never deliberately worry fixing up a time. Suppose you want to worry between 6 and 7 a.m., as part of your schedule, because you cannot spend time in the office to worry, and in that itself, 5 minutes' worry, on each member of your family, so therefore eldest son, 6.45. to 6.50; then the next daughter 6.50; and more time for the husband/wife, 10 minutes; can you do that? You cannot plan and worry, it happens; whereas planning is a deliberate action; and therefore plan and implement. And therefore once I have planned and decided to implement, thereafter, there is no use worry about after the ticket is booked, thinking what will happen on that day if some bandh is declared on that day; the train may not run at all; so therefore worrying whether the train will go or whether it will reach or whether I will get the connecting train or flight, it is not in my hands; I should put the itinerary properly and stick to it; and thereafterwards karmaṇyēva adhikārastē mā phalēṣu. Therefore we should not mistake the teaching; planning is not prohibited; worrying is. Therefore Kṛṣṇa says, na mē karmaphalē sṛṅhā; I am not concerned even about the outcome of the Mahābhāratha war. And why, Kṛṣṇa has escaped from this problem. So what is the special medicine he has taken; I said in the last class; remember, about how to cut the jackfruit and things to be done before that; oil your hands and the knife with coconut oil; and therefore before going in the rain, have an umbrella; raincoat, you do not stop the rain, but you do not get wet.

Similarly here also, what is the raincoat here; jñānam raincoat; Hey Arjuna, I have the knowledge; knowledge is power; knowledge is defence, knowledge is the best remedy for all the problems; even physical problems can be solved by knowledge; because knowledge increases our mental health and many of our problems are psychosomatic diseases. When mental health is improved, physical health will improve; and therefore my weapon is jñānam; that is why Lord Viṣṇu also holds what cakram; sudarśana cakram; Bhagavān Viṣṇu's-cakram; darśanam means jñānam; su darśanam means right- knowledge; so with the cakram of sudarśanam, I destroy the saṁsāra; ajñānam; ajñāna-janya-adhyāsa; adhyāsa-janya-karma; karma-janya-puṇya-pāpē, puṇya-pāpa janya-sukha-duḥkham; everything I cut; and what Kṛṣṇa says is: this sudarśanam cakram is not uniquely mine, you can also get this sudarśana cakra, jñānam. So therefore Kṛṣṇa says here mām yaḥ iti abhijānāti. So the one who knows this secret of mine; what is that secret; freedom in spite of activity. Not freedom from activity; not freedom from responsibility, but freedom in spite of responsibility. This secret; whoever discovers this secret.

What is that jñānam? Kṛṣṇa has not yet said; jñānam, jñānam he has been saying, but what is that jñānam we have not discussed; that is kept in suspense by him, so that you will continue to come to the class. The knowledge will be discussed from verse No.18 to 25. There we will get the secret knowledge known as self-knowledge, so the one who has discovered this secret knowledge, saḥ karmabhirna sa badhyatē; Even such a jñāni is also not bound by karma; just as bhagavan is not bound by his karma, jñāni is also not bound by his karma.

एवं ज्ञात्वा कृतं कर्म पूर्वैरपि मुमुक्षुभिः ॥
कुरु कर्मैव तस्मात्त्वं पूर्वैः पूर्वतरं कृतम् ॥ ४.१५॥

ēvaṁ jñātvā kṛtaṁ karma pūrvairapi mumukṣubhiḥ |
kuru karmaiva tasmātvam pūrvaiḥ pūrvataram kṛtam || 4.15 ||

ज्ञात्वा एवम् jñātvā ēvaṁ – Having known thus, कर्म कृतम् karma kṛtam action has been performed, पूर्वैः मुमुक्षुभिः अपि pūrveḥ mumukṣubhiḥ api by the ancient seekers of liberation also, तस्मात् tasmāt therefore त्वं कुरु कर्म एव tvam kuru karma ēva you perform action only. कृतं पूर्वतरम् kṛtaṁ pūrvataram which has been done formerly पूर्वैः pūrveḥ by the ancients.

15. Having known thus, action has been performed by the ancient seekers of liberation also. Therefore, you perform action only which has been done formerly by the ancients.

Here Kṛṣṇa says that this secret knowledge, self-knowledge; was not that secret; all the ancients or your forefathers also possessed this knowledge; I am not giving you an unique knowledge; this method has been used, employed by your forefathers successfully. Therefore he says pūrveḥ mumukṣubhiḥ ēvaṁ jñāntva; all your forefathers who were seekers, ēvaṁ jñātvā, they also gained this self-knowledge, in this manner; as I had discussed before, as I will be discussing alter also; the self-knowledge has been gained by your forefathers.

And what did they do; they did not run away from their responsibilities, just as you are trying to run away; they did not do that. They remained where they were; they were grihasthās; they were ruling the kingdom; but they were not affected; therefore karma-kṛtam; they were extremely busy; but inside they were cool like cucumber. They had that inner peace, in spite of external activities; and if your forefathers can do that, why can't you also get the same medicine.

Therefore Kṛṣṇa says: tasmāt, therefore, tvam api karma ēva kuru; You also perform your duties; remain in gr̥hastha-āśrama; do not think of sanyāsa; even though whenever problems comes; and you feel that you have to run away; if at all one takes to sanyāsa, he should take sanyāsa when problems are not there; then alone it is a true need for knowledge; escapist sanyāsa is not accepted; and therefore Arjuna remain where you are and do karma; what type of karma, pūrvaiḥ pūrvataram-kṛtam, the same karma, which your forefathers performed. So here Kṛṣṇa is prescribing jāti-based profession; in fact all the smṛtiḥ granthas prescribe jāti-based profession only, which is now going. It is not followed now; but Kṛṣṇa is talking based on the practice prevalent in those days. More we will in the next class.

Hari Om

ॐ

Arjuna wanted to escape from his svadharma which is in the form of unpleasant action; which involves killing his own kith and kin. And therefore he found karma as a cause of mental worry. And also it is said in the scriptures: karmaṇa-badhyatē jantuḥ; by action, a person is bound. And not only it is scripturally true, and it appears to be true from our own experience also. Whenever we take up any action, there is a strain in our personality; because whether we will be able to successfully complete that action, we do not know; and therefore there is lot of tension; whether we will win the world cup or not. So before the undertaking starts, there is lot of anxiety, the result of the action is not totally dependent on our action, even though we do have a lot of power, even though we can influence the result of action, we cannot totally control the result of action, it is determined by so many factors; one team entering the final seems to be dependent on other teams' victory and defeat; So often our results seems to depend upon so many other factors over which we do not have control at all; and therefore the future is eternally unpredictable, giving us anxious moments; and when the future comes and it is not to our expectations; there is lot of frustration and depression.

Thus karma seems to be a cause of worry; before he starts, during its presence, and later when it gets converted into its consequence. And Arjuna experiences this intensely in the Mahābhāratha field, because it involves his own relatives, and therefore Arjuna wanted to escape from karma and Kṛṣṇa wants to teach Arjuna that one cannot escape from karma. Maximum you can do is you can change the karma from one action to another action; and often you find that when you change the field of action, it ends up as from the frying pan into the fire. So often the later one seems to prove that the previous one is better; like the Ambassador car they say; every later edition seems to bring glory to the previous one. Similarly often to change the servant and new servant proves that the old servant was an angel. Only some stealing only. This man does many things. Maximum you can do is to change the action, you cannot give up the action. Therefore Kṛṣṇa wants to teach Arjuna how to be involved in action; but at the same time, not to be affected by the action, by insulating my mind from the tyrannies of the action; and for that insulation Kṛṣṇa wants to point out that there is only one ointment, like you apply the Odomus to escape from the mosquito. Similarly from the karma mosquito, you have got only one ointment, and that is called jñānam. And apply that jñānam and enter into Karma from which you can never escape; and once you insulate yourselves; not only karma will not disturb you; karma will begin to appear as a game or a sport.

As I had given the example before, when you do not know swimming, swimming pool will become a threat to you; it can destroy you; you can end up in a watery grave, if you do not how to swim; but if you know how to swim, the very same swimming pool would not only will not be a threat; it will become a sporting ground also; you enjoy.

Similarly, karma is like a swimming pool. By itself it is neither a cause of anxiety nor a pleasure, but it all depends upon what type of preparation I have. For a jñāni, karma is a sport; for an ajñāni, karma is a burden. And that is why when Bhagavān comes down and does lot of activities; we give the special name leela; Even destroying powerful enemies for Bhagavān is a leela; for a jñāni every action is a leela; leela means what?; a sport.

And Kṛṣṇa wants to point out that this method of insulting oneself from action is not only available for the Lord; it is available for every human being, only you have to choose to use that; and therefore he wants to introduce jñānam as a protection from the tension caused by karma.

And Kṛṣṇa says that this method is a new method that I am introducing; Hey Arjuna, this method has been used by your own forefathers; ēvaṁ jñātvā kṛtaṁ karma pūrvairapi mumukṣubhiḥ; and they have found it useful; why can't you use the good-old-method? So just as they show one advertisement; kollu patti; patti, daughter and grand-daughter; all of them use the same medicine; even the advertisers use that method; ēvaṁ paramparā prāpṭham; so Kṛṣṇa uses the same technique; your forefathers all these people have used, why cant you use the same மருந்து marundu; medicine.

Verse 4.16

किं कर्म किमकर्मेति कवयोऽप्यत्र मोहिताः ।
तत्ते कर्म प्रवक्ष्यामि यज्ज्ञात्वा मोक्षसेऽशुभात् ॥४.१६॥

kiṁ karma kimakarmēti kavayō'pyatra mōhitāḥ|
tattē karma pravakṣyāmi yajjñātvā mōkṣyasē'śubhāt || 4.16 ||

किम् कर्म kiṁ karma what is action? किम् अकर्म kima akarma what is actionlessness, इति अत्र iti atra in this regard, अपि कवयः api kavayaḥ even sages, मोहिताः mohitāḥ are deluded, तत् tat therefore प्रवक्ष्यामि ते pravakṣyāmi tē I shall teach you, कर्म karma action, ज्ञात्वा यत् jñātvā yat knowing which मोक्षसे अशुभात् mōkṣyasē aśubhāt you will be freed from its evil effect, binding nature (saṁsāra)

16. What is action? What is actionlessness? In this regard, even sages are deluded. Therefore, I shall teach you action knowing which you will be freed from saṁsāra.

So Kṛṣṇa wants to present jñānam or knowledge as the safeguard or the armour and once you say jñānam is the solution, for the problem of tension; naturally the question will come; jñānam about what; because you can never refer to jñānam without referring to the object of knowledge. Therefore what knowledge, do I acquire to protect myself?

And Kṛṣṇa wants to say, it is the knowledge of the nature of karma; what exactly is action; where does it arise; to whom does the action belong? We have been taking the action for granted. We see that we are doing lot of actions. Therefore we say I am doing the action. Therefore if you think that action belongs to you, then the question comes what exactly do you mean by the word "you" or "I". And therefore we have to get into the basic enquiry of what is the nature of karma, and where does karma arise. This enquiry is important because, we have taken for granted; just as we have been taking many things for granted. For generations and generations we thought that earth is stationary and the Sun is going around the earth. We had a geocentric system and at one time in history, Copernicus or somebody said that it is a heliocentric universe; Sun is in the centre and earth is moving around. Many people could not accept. Even the Church did not accept and even the Scientist was prosecuted; harassed and only recently it seems they accepted him; they forgave him; it was told many centuries back, and even recently there was a news item. So when everybody thinks, taking for granted that the Sun is going around the earth, because that is what we are seeing, and in the newspaper also regularly sunrise and sunset timings even now we talk of, and suddenly one person comes and tells the truth that sun does not rise and set but it is earth that is moving round in the opposite direction, first time it is rejected.

And after long time only we know that we are taking for granted, we never enquired into; like the apple falling; still what we do; we eat immediately and give a burp. Only a rare scientist thinks that why should it fall down and not go down. Thus in life, many things we have taken for granted and one thing we have taken for granted is the nature of action.

What is action; and to whom does action belong. And our basic misconception is that I am doing all actions and Kṛṣṇa wants to point out that Arjuna you are not doing any action at all. And when we listen to that, we are going to be as much surprised as the generation which first listened to the news that the Sun does not go round. And then we have to keep on listening and after 25 years perhaps we will say; not that we accept, perhaps it may be true. For those 25 years of vedānta; after that 25 years study, conviction is going to come and therefore Kṛṣṇa says Arjuna: karma svarūpa jñānam ēva parihāraḥ; If you want to get out of tension caused by your duties and responsibilities in life, you should know exactly what is the nature of karma.

And do not think that it is an easy subject, even great philosophers have analysed this and after long analysis they have come to wrong conclusion; it is such a subtle topic and therefore Arjuna I want to discuss that topic. So he says kavayaḥ api mohitāḥ; kavayaḥ means philosophers; great thinkers; even great thinkers are confused; atra with regard to this subject matter and what is that subject matter; kim karma; what exactly is action; and kim akarma; what exactly is actionlessness; or inaction. So what is action; what is inaction; iti atra kavayaḥ api; kavi does not mean a poet; kavi means a paṇḍitāḥ, even scholars are deluded and therefore what I am going to teach; tat, tasmāt, therefore being a subtle subject, tē karma pravakṣyāmi; I shall deal with the topic of the nature of karma; and this discussion is not merely of academic interest alone, this is not an arm-chair philosophy subject, but it has got a practical value in life also.

And what is the practical value, yajñātvā mōkṣyasē, by gaining this knowledge, you will get freedom; so you will be freed; you will be released from what; aśubhāt; from all types of pains in your mind; aśubham means amaṅgalam; amaṅgalam means pains or sorrows; caused by anxiety, tension, worry, and jealousy also; because when they say in the last ball; (being cricket season, that example comes), in the last ball, one team on the top; but the other team is on the bottom. So thus one and the same karma, gives one person the extreme happiness; another person or group of persons extreme sorrow also; so that means what; whether I should be happy or unhappy, I do not seem to have any control at all; that means the world seems to have the switch board of my happiness. If they switch on, we are on.

As somebody nicely said: Do you want to be a thermometer or thermostat; what is the difference between a thermometer and thermostat; thermometer is that which goes up and down depending upon this surrounding; the surroundings determine the condition of the thermometer; whereas thermostat, is that which controls the environment; jñāni is one who is the master of the situation; ajñāni is one who is mastered by, who is enslaved by the situation; and therefore by gaining this knowledge, you are released from the tyranny of the surrounding, and the people, you are like a thermostat, unaffected by both karma, as well as the karma phala; You can fight the Mahābhāratha war, coolly. Aśubhaḥ means saṃsāra; you will be freed from saṃsāra.

Verse 4.17

कर्मणो ह्यपि बोद्धव्यं बोद्धव्यं च विकर्मणः ।
अकर्मणश्च बोद्धव्यं गहना कर्मणो गतिः ॥४.१७॥

karmaṇō hyapi bōddhavyaṃ bōddhavyaṃ ca vikarmaṇaḥ|
akarmaṇaśca bōddhavyaṃ gahanā karmaṇō gatiḥ||4.17||

कर्मणः हि अपि karmaṇaḥ hi api prescribed action also, बोद्धव्यम् bōddhavyaṃ should be known, विकर्मण च vikarmaṇa ca prohibited action also, बोद्धव्यम् bōddhavyaṃ should be known, अकर्मणः च akarmaṇaḥ ca inaction also बोद्धव्यम् bōddhavyaṃ should be known, गतिः gatiḥ (for) the nature of action कर्मणः गहना karmaṇaḥ gahanā is subtle.

17. Prescribed action also should be known. Prohibited action also should be shown. Inaction also should be known. (For), the nature of action is subtle.

So not only I am going to teach you about karma. I will also teach you two allied subjects, which go along with the topic of karma and I will teach you three things: what are they: karmaṇō hyapi bōddhavyaṃ; you have to clearly know what is the nature of karma.

And vikarmaṇaḥ ca bōddhavyaṃ; vikarma means viparītha-karma; wrong-action; niṣidda-karma; prohibited action; prohibited action is vikarma; and akarmaṇaśca bōddhavyaṃ - you also should know what is akarma, what is known as inaction.

So therefore action, inaction and wrong action; so all these three you have to thoroughly understand; without knowing that you will have problem only; so ultimately knowledge is power; and why you should take the initiative to know?; because this knowledge will not automatically come to you; you have to work to gain that knowledge; and therefore he says: karmaṇā gatiḥ gahanā; gahanā means subtle; gatiḥ means nature; in this context, gatiḥ means svarūpam. In Sānskrīt one and the same word will have different meanings in different context. Word Gati has several meanings, in this context, it means svarupam or nature; and therefore karmaṇā gatiḥ means the nature of the action is gahanā, extremely subtle; that means what, without guru-śāstra-upadeśa, you can never understand.

Up to this Kṛṣṇa gives the introduction to jñānam, as an insulting material; and now hereafter, he is going to enter into that knowledge. What is that knowledge? He gives in the next verse.

Verse 4.18

कर्मण्यकर्म यः पश्येदकर्मणि च कर्म यः ।
स बुद्धिमान्मनुष्येषु स युक्तः कृत्स्नकर्मकृत् ॥४.१८॥

karmaṇyakarma yaḥ paśyēdakarmaṇi ca karma yaḥ |
sa buddhimān manuṣyēṣu sa yuktaḥ kṛtsnakarmakṛt || 4.18 ||

सः यः पश्येत् saḥ yaḥ paśyēt He who sees, अकर्म akarma actionlessness (of the self), कर्मणि karmāṇi in the action(of the body) च यः ca yaḥ (potential) action, and he who (sees), कर्म अकर्मणि karma akarmaṇi in the inaction (of the body), बुद्धिमान् buddhimān is wise मनुष्येषु manuṣyēṣu among men, सः युक्तः saḥ yuktaḥ he is a Yōgi, कृत्स्नकर्मकृत् kṛtsnakarmakṛt who has accomplished everything.

18. He who sees actionlessness (of the Self) in the action (of the body) and he who (sees potential) action in the inaction (of the body) is wise among men. He is Yōgi who has accomplished everything.

From the 18th verse, up to the 24th verse, Kṛṣṇa deals with knowledge which is a solution for all human problems, and this portion is the main topic of the 4th chapter, therefore this is an extremely important portion; 18 to 24. Not only in the 4th chapter, in the entire Gīta; this portion is important; and in this portion, Kṛṣṇa condenses the teachings of all the Upaniṣads; and because of this portion alone and similar portions alone, the Bhagavat Gīta is called an upaniṣad; iti shrimat Bhagavad Gītasu upaniṣadsu, if you call Gīta as an upaniṣad, it is because of this subject matter alone.

Karma-yōga is not the essence of the upaniṣad; Even bhakti is not the essence of the upaniṣad; and even aṣṭāṅga -yōga or meditation is not the essence of the upaniṣad; the essence of Upaniṣad is jñānam; and that jñānam is found in a few places in the Gīta; in the second-chapter, we saw in verse No.12 to 25, and the next place Kṛṣṇa gives the crux of the Upaniṣad, is this portion, 18 to 24, and here also, 18th verse is considered is a very very significant verse and not only significant verse, very difficult to understand also. A complex verse, because Kṛṣṇa uses the language of contradiction to make us think well. Otherwise we will superficially listen to Gīta, looking here and there. So we should not listen with 5% mind, we should apply ourselves totally; therefore Kṛṣṇa uses the language of contradiction. If you translate this verse literally, it will read funny.

So the first line says; the wise person sees action in inaction. Wise person sees action in inaction; and the wise person also sees inaction in action; what did you understand? So the wise person sees action in inaction, and the wise person sees inaction in action; here what is the contradiction? If you see a thing wrongly, then can you be a wise person? Who is a wise person? If I say the clip is the clip, I am wise; that is knowledgeable. If I say, this is a book; then I am what? Ignorant person. So therefore when I see a thing wrongly, then I can never be called a wise person; whereas Kṛṣṇa says, the one who sees action in inaction, he sees rightly or wrongly?; In action what should we see; one who sees action in action must be having the right vision; and I should see inaction in inaction; that must be the right vision. But Kṛṣṇa says, the one who sees action in inaction and inaction in action, that person is wise. Thus if you translate this verse literally it does not seem to convey anything and therefore it requires a probing a little bit.

And that is why all the ācāryās like Śankarācārya writes a commentary very very elaborate and significant commentary on such verses. In all other verses, karma-yōga and all, they write a two line commentary. What is there to talk about? But when such verses come, Śankarācārya and other ācāryās write very beautiful and significant commentary and because of that alone we are able to understand also. So these verses are called the knotty verses of Mahābhāratham; So I have told you before; when Vyāsācārya wanted Mahā Ganapathy to become the scribe; Mahā Ganapathy put a condition that once I start writing, I cannot stop. So therefore you have to continuously dictate; if you stop in between, I will go away; now Vyāsācārya is not reading from a book; he has to compose and dictate; because he is the author; so Vyāsācārya said I will do that; I will put another condition; what is that: when you copy down; you should know the meaning and copy down. Normally whoever takes dictation; generally, they have to be thoughtless; that is why generally whenever renunciation comes they write remuneration. When I dictated to a student, renunciation alone gives mōkṣaḥ; he transcribed it as remuneration alone gives mōkṣaḥ; why because they cannot think. So therefore Vyāsācārya put a condition, that you should know the meaning. What he used to do is, he composes many verses and when it is exhausted, towards the end, he composes a knotty verse; (you can have both the spellings, knotty as also naughty!). It is called grantha-grandhi. And therefore when such a verse comes, Vināyaka has to stop and think of the meaning, without knowing the meaning he should write; by the time Vināyaka thinks and understands, next 1000 verses are composed and ready. Because Vyāsācārya; Vyāsāya Viṣṇurūpāya; and Gīta being part of Mahābhāratham; Gīta being part of Mahābhāratham, in Gīta also there are a few knotty verses; one verse was in the 2nd chapter,

यस्यां जाग्रति भूतानि सा निशा पश्यतो मनेः ॥२.६९॥

yā niśā sarvabhūtānām tasyām jāgati samyamī |
yasyām jāgrati bhūtāni sā niśā paśyatō munēḥ || 2.69 ||

This is a knotty verse; without Śankarācārya's commentary, difficult to grasp. And here we have got a knotty verse;

Verse 4.18

कर्मण्यकर्म यः पश्येदकर्मणि च कर्म यः ।
स बुद्धिमान्मनुष्येषु स युक्तः कृत्स्नकर्मकृत् ॥४.१८॥

karmaṇyakarma yaḥ paśyēdakarmaṇi ca karma yaḥ |
sa buddhimān manuṣyēṣu sa yuktaḥ kṛtsnakarmakṛt || 4.18 ||

And we have got another knotty verse in न च मत्स्थानि भूतानि पश्य मे योगमैश्वरम् ।

भूतभृन्न च भूतस्थो ममात्मा भूतभावनः ॥९.५॥

na ca matsthāni bhūtāni paśya mē yōgamaiśvaram |
bhūtabhṛnna ca bhūtastho mama"tmā bhūtabhāvanaḥ||9.5||

Kṛṣṇa uses the language of contradiction. He says the whole world is in Me; and in the next line He says there is no world in Me. What will you understand? Thus the literal translation is: wise man sees action in inaction; and he also sees inaction in action. So what does he want to convey, we should understand.

This can be clearly understood when we know the basic teaching of Vedānta that every individual consists of two parts in his personality. Every individual, according to Vedānta, which is the basic teaching of the Vedānta, consists of two parts, one is the body-mind-complex part called anātma; anātma-aṁśa or dēha-aṁśa; and this second part is the consciousness principle, which pervades the body-mind-complex because of which alone the body-mind-complex is sentient. Just as this bulb is not an individual entity, there is a bulb and filament; bulb may be compared to the stūla-śarīram, filament may be compared to the sūkṣma-śarīram; something to compare, and you think that the bulb and filament together is giving light, but other than the bulb and the filament, there is another invisible principle because of which alone, bulb has become a source of light, which we know as the electricity principle. Similarly, according to vēdānta, every individual has got a bulb and filament, the stūla, sūkṣma śarīram complex called dēha or anātma; and there is another principle, another invisible principle like the electricity; which is inherently pervading this body-mind-complex, as even the electricity pervades the filament. And the electricity is an independent principle, which continues even when the bulb is broken or fused. When the bulb is fused, the electricity is not gone; if there is any doubt, you can check putting finger, and get instant mukthi. Vidēha-mukthi you will get; It is invisible but it is there because of whose presence alone, the bulb is bulb; - śrōtrasya-śrōtram; bulbasya bulb.

Similarly, Vedānta says, the body-mind-complex is blessed by the consciousness principle. Even though the bulbs are many in number, the flowing electricity is one, which is not only in every bulb, it is in-between also; which you do not see; passing through the wires; you do not see; but it is there; but wherever there is a medium of manifestation, the electricity expresses in the form of light. Similarly, consciousness like electricity; very careful, consciousness is not electricity, OK; do not think that whenever power goes, consciousness is also goes. So therefore it is like electricity and you are all, you and this body, are all like bulbs and blessed by the touch of consciousness, the body is live and sentient; and capable of transacting with the world. This consciousness-principle is called ātma, the body-mind-principle is called anātma; the consciousness-principle is called dēhi; the body-mind-principle is called dēha; the consciousness-principle is called the ātma; and the body-mind-principle is sometimes called ahaṁkāra also; the ego and the self.

And about this ātma and anātma, we elaborately studied in the second-chapter, it will be very very fine, if you remember all the details. So there we saw that Ātma is one, anātmās are many; just as electricity is one and bulbs are many; and ātma is all pervading, whereas anātma is limited; like that five or six differences we saw. One is nityam, one is anityam; one is ēkaṁ, another is anēkaṁ; one is nirguṇam, another is saguṇam; one is nirvikāram, another is savikāram, various differences we saw and I would request you to go through the second-chapter. Then this whole section you will remember well; and there while talking about the difference, one difference we emphasised; which is going to be emphasised in this portion also. And what is that? The consciousness principle, the ātma, being all pervasive like space, it cannot do any action; because action involves movement; any action; physical action involves physical movement; mental action involves mental movement; which is called thought-movement; therefore, chalanātmakam-karma; and whatever cannot move, cannot do action; that is why this space cannot do any action; travelling from one place to another; air can move; fire can move; water can move; earth can move; and therefore they can do lot of actions; whereas the space is akartā; and therefore the first lesson that Kṛṣṇa wants to emphasise in this verse is that ātma, the awareness principle; is ever action_less; it is ever free from karma. In fact, it need not renounce karma; why it need not renounce karma; why it need not renounce karma; it should have. Suppose I say, I gave up ten acres of land; and then you ask me, when did you possess it; I never had it; you can give up only what you have. If I can give up what I do not have, I will donate this land to people; just take it I will say. So therefore giving up is possible only when I possess and Kṛṣṇa wants to say that the consciousness-principle is ever free from karma.

Then the second lesson that Kṛṣṇa wants to give is that the body-mind-complex otherwise called ahaṁkāra or ego, can never be free from action; because it is a finite entity; and it is a material entity; it is made up of matter. If you are a science student, it contains chemicals; it is varieties of chemicals joined together; that is why you call it bio-chemistry; why bio-chemistry is possible, because the body consists of chemicals; it is material; or if you study it śāstrically, the body is made up of five elements; therefore it is pāñca-bhūti-śarīra; and matter is in eternal motion. While consciousness is eternally motionless, matter is in eternal motion; and that is why even when I see a motionless object, like a wall; superficially seeing it may appear motionless, but scientifically if you study, it is nothing but an atom bundle; and an atom consists of neutrons and protons and electrons, and constantly electrons are in motion; so we think that it is motionless; but at the subtle level it is.

So one person, Fritja of Capra, he wrote the Tao of physics; in that book, he has given the picture of Natarāja's Eternal Dance. Natarāja is in eternal dance. How do you know that he is eternally dancing? If you look at his jaḍa, it is always parallel to the ground; tell me, when will the jaḍa be parallel to the ground, it is possible only under one condition; when it is fiercely moving; that is why whether it is in Natarāja's picture of an idol; the hairs are in the parallel level; indicates what: Natarāja stands for the viśva-rūpa, the universal form; and he gives the explanation, in the picture itself; protons, neutrons, matter, etc. It is a wonderful study by a Westerner, but he is influenced by our teaching well. So therefore, you take this smallest atom, it is in perpetual motion; you take the biggest galaxy, the earth is itself moving 1000 miles per hour or something; and it is moving around the Sun at 60,000 miles per hour; we are thinking that it is still; but we are also rotating at 60,000 miles per hour. And the whole galaxy is moving; again millions of miles per hour or something. And therefore at anātma level; motion can never stop; it is eternally in motion. And when you see anātma is in rest; even at that time also; there is motion in potential form; that is why when you are planning, when you have got some important thing to do; Swamiji, my son is going to America; this is the time for children to go to America; and getting a visa is difficult; you may get admission to svarga; but not an American visa; and therefore they are interested in more adhr̥ṣṭam; therefore for puṇya phalam, Swamijis are becoming important; so therefore the interview is after a month or a week; but constant restlessness; therefore even though I am not doing any action; there is the potentiality, like a spring in tension, it is waiting; therefore Kṛṣṇa wants to say that at anātma level, karma cannot be given up, ātma-level, karma need not be given up.

Therefore what is wisdom? Accept actions at anātma level; never try to escape from action; and own up the actionlessness or permanent rest in ātma level. I am ever restful, peaceful; at ātma level; and at anātma level, all the time, one action or the other will be there; this wisdom is called jñāna karma sanyāsaḥ; and this idea Kṛṣṇa wants to convey in this verse; karmaṇyakarma yaḥ paśyēd; a wise person sees the actionlessness of the ātma; the permanent peace of the ātma; when karmāṇi, even when there are actions at anātma level; so he does not find peace by stopping the action; but he discovers peace in spite of action. By stopping the action, do not try to get piece; like many people saying. Swamiji, after the last child is educated and I am free; I can attend all your classes; can come to your Aśrama. Many people have promised; now everything is settled, and he is not able to come to even the classes which he was attending earlier. Previously when he was employed, he had time; after retirement, they promised all the cases; what happened? They dropped the earlier class itself. Therefore, there is no waiting for the sea to become waveless to take a dip in the sea. We always think that all these things will be over; and thereafterwards one day I will start Vedānta.

So never try for leisure at the end of action; discover the leisure amidst the action; in spite of the action. So therefore jñāni sees the inner-actionlessness amidst outer-activity. Inner-inactionlessness means what; actionlessness at the level of ātma; outer-action means what? Action at the level of the anātma. Therefore, karmāṇi; anātmanaḥ karmāṇi; akarma; ātmanaḥ akarma, yaḥ paśyēt; now it is clean. The one who sees the actionlessness of the ātma amidst the actions of the anātma; take the example, even when the hand is moving, they know there is something which is not moving; what is not moving; the light which is pervading the hand, which is pervading the hall, which illumines the hand, because of which the hand is known, that light does not have motion; even when the hand is moving. Similarly, even when the body and mind are violently active, what does not move; the awareness-principle does not move at all; that awareness principle jñāni turns his attention towards. Like in a movie also; even when the characters are violently moving; what does not move; imagine the screen also starts moving, in fact characters should move and screen should not move; only then movie is possible; imagine vice versa; the characters are stationary and the screen is moving; like that life is a movie in which the awareness is the screen; and the body-mind and all the worlds are the characters moving; turn your attention to the motionless screen and recognise the screen and then enjoy the movie; so this is first part.

And what is the second part; akarmaṇi ca karma paśyati. The wise person sees action in the inaction. How is it possible? Here what Kṛṣṇa wants to convey is, when the body-mind-complex is resting; either during sleep or at any other time of the day, superficially seeing; it looks anātma is actionless; this is what everybody will say. As I gave the example, the wall is motionless; Kṛṣṇa wants to say that even when the body-mind-complex is actionless, there are actions in potential form. That is when you go to bed, so many actions to be done tomorrow, they are all there in your mind; when you sleep, if you are aware of, the moment you wake up, you become aware, that you have to go there, go here, do that, do this, etc. you just spring from the bed and rush. So during sleep, what happened to all those actions; they were not absent; they were all waiting in seed form. And therefore what is the meaning of this portion; wise person sees potential action, karma means potential action, where? akarmaṇi, in the actionlessness of the body-mind-complex. The wise person sees potential action in the actionlessness of the body-mind-complex, which means, body-mind-complex is ever active; either outwardly-active, explicitly-active or potentially-active; whereas ātma is ever actionless.

And what should a person do? The wise person should be aware of this fact; whenever the actions begin to overwhelm a person. We enter into various activities in life. Later what happens; we know how to enter, like Abhimanyu's padmavyuham; but the problem, he does not know how to get out; similarly, we put our hands and legs all over, and later we do not know how to come out. In Kerala, they give the example of നായരുകൾ പിടിച്ചു പൂലിവാലു് nāyaru piṭicca pulivāl. (Nayars please do not misunderstand, excuse me). It is a popular saying; this fellow caught hold the tail of a tiger and then what happened; the tiger tried to attack him; therefore he caught hold of the tail; that he is behind; the tiger is trying to turn; therefore he also runs; he started running round and round; initially he has the energy to run; the tiger has enormous energy; but we do not have; after 15 minutes going round and round, I am in trouble; even if I leave, even if I continue to hold, I am in trouble; because I am tied, and I cannot leave the tail, as I will be eaten. This is called nāyaru piṭicca pulivāl.

Similarly, I enter into so many fields, so many relationships and I do not know how to get out; that is the time when we feel that we have been caught up in a snare; we are struggling and suffering; when we feel actions are overwhelming. As long as you enjoy actions, no problem; but when the actions are overwhelming; you look for some place, which is free from all the disturbances, śāntam, śivam, and the only centre which is eternally calm is what your own svarupam and if I know how to dip into my śānta svarūpam, it is like deriving tremendous inner strength; so that we can again get into activity and enjoy and therefore wise person enjoys activity, and whenever he has stopped activity, he knows how to dip into his svarupam.

There is that tranquility; that calmness is there in us; only we should know how to dip into that; and Bhagavān wants to give you a taste of that ānanda, when you withdraw from all your body-mind; what ānanda there is Bhagavān wants to give a taste; like in the TVs they have the trailers, next week. You want to taste that drama. Similarly Bhagavān also wants to give you the taste of dis-identifying from the body-mind-complex, which you enjoy every day; when?, during sleep. You are no more identified with your body; you are no more identified with your mind; therefore you no more have a kartā-personality; therefore bhoktā is resolved, and kartā is resolved. And what is the state of deep sleep; absolute ānanda; that is why we are ready to sleep anywhere including dash dash..... So where do you find the ānanda; you are dipping into your own nature because, in sleep you do not have any sense pleasures; where do you get the ānanda from; the inner ātma svarupam; yat suṣuptō nirviṣayaḥ ātmānandaḥ anubhūtayē. The only problem is we get up from sleep and get into trouble; for jñāni he has got this ātma ānanda available all the time; he can dip at any time; and therefore sa buddhimān; such a person is a wise person; among all the human beings; saḥ yuktaḥ, he is called a real yōgi; and kṛtsnakarmakṛt, he is a person of fulfilment. When I say he, she also; do not get angry. Therefore he or she enjoys total fulfilment; and this verse being a subtle verse, Kṛṣṇa himself elaborates this verse in the following verses; therefore from 19 to 24, is a commentary on 18th verse; which we will see in the following classes.

By way of introducing the nature of karma, Lord Kṛṣṇa is discussing the essence of the Upaniṣads in these few verses beginning from the 18th, up to verse No.24. And of these verses, 18th is the key verse; wherein Kṛṣṇa talks about Ātma-anātma vivēka; the difference between the higher-I in me, and the lower-I in me; the higher-I is called ātma; and the lower-I is called ahamkāraḥ.

And the higher-I ātma has been talked about in the second-chapter, wherein Kṛṣṇa pointed out that this ātma is of the nature of consciousness, distinct from the body, pervading the body; it is one and all pervading. And Kṛṣṇa wants to highlight one aspect of the ātma here; viz., ātma as akartā; it does not perform any action at all; it is only a witness. And this akartā-ātma, this ēka-ātma; this pūrṇa-ātma is my higher-nature; and I have got a lower-I also called ahaṁkāra; and this lower-I is nothing but the mind; the mind-principle is called the lower-I.

And according to the scriptures, the mind by itself is inert; but the mind can become sentient blessed by the higher-I; just as the filament in the bulb becomes a bright source of light when it is blessed by the electricity; the filament is not bright by itself; but blessed by the electricity; the filament becomes bright and this place is illumined. Similarly the mind is like a filament; it is matter-principle, but it is made of the special matter called sūkṣma bhūtani and because of its nature, just as we use tungsten filament, which has got special feature; similarly the mind has got its special nature and when such a mind is pervaded by, blessed by the ātma tatvam, the mind becomes a sentient mind; and this sentient-live-mind is called ahaṁkāraḥ; which is kartā and bhōktā. So this finite mind, this finite live-mind, this finite ahaṁkāra, kartā-bhōktā; is my inferior-I, called the ego; and Kṛṣṇa wants to say that, this ahaṁkāra has to perform the action because it is its nature; it cannot remain quiet. And as even the ahaṁkāra performs the karma, inevitably; according to the moral laws of the creation, the ahaṁkāra has to accumulate puṇyam and pāpam. Ahaṁkāra means mind blessed by consciousness, remember. And this ahaṁkāra, exhausts part of the puṇyam and pāpam, and often lot of puṇya-pāpams remain unexhausted and it is carried forward to the next janma; and at the time of the death; it is this ahaṁkāra , which leaves the body. I, the higher self, which is pure-consciousness," "I" cannot leave the body because consciousness is like space, all-pervading. So thus I-the-higher-self, called the ātma; do not do any karma, am free from puṇya-pāpa, and do not travel at all; I am incapable of travelling; but this lower-I, the inferior-I, the ahaṁkāra , is not only capable of doing action, but it is capable of travelling also; and when this ahaṁkāra quits the body; then the body becomes dead body. Because the problem is the body cannot be directly blessed by the ātma; the body becomes sentient only through ahaṁkāra ; just as the bulb becomes bright only through the filament. Similarly, the moment ahaṁkāra quits, the body is like a bulb without a filament; even though ātma continues to pervade the body; the body cannot be sentient because the medium called ahaṁkāra has quit the body.

And this ahaṁkāra alone takes another body and again exhausts the puṇya pāpam and in the process acquires fresh puṇya-pāpam; and thus punarapi-jananam; punarapi-maraṇam, saṁsāra cycle continues for ahaṁkāra ; and there is no way of stopping this ahaṁkāra , because this ahaṁkāra is motivated, activated, because of our identification. And what Kṛṣṇa says, by self-knowledge we learn to own up the higher-I, rather than the smaller-egoistic-I.

And the moment the shift happens, ahaṁkāra loses the fuel as it were, it is like a cycle, wherein the pedaling has stopped. So when you stop pedaling the cycle, what happens; because of the previous momentum, it continues to run, but without the support, the cycle cannot run long; it will stop. Similarly, in the case of a jñāni, ahaṁkāra gets no more patronage. It has got a functional nature, but it cannot bind this person. And this shifting of the I, from the inferior-I, the ego, to the superior-I, the ātma, is called wisdom.

And Kṛṣṇa says, saḥ buddhimān; and since I have shifted the I; from the inferior-I to superior-I, I own up my akartā nature all the time; even when the inferior-I, the ahaṁkāra is active; I do not claim the activity of the ahaṁkāra , I say that in the presence of the actionless-I, the ego is acting; 'I' am free from all the action; so this detachment from ahaṁkāra is the benefit of wisdom. Saḥ manuṣeṣu buddhimān. The one who does not allow his ahaṁkāra to wag its tail.

Otherwise like some people taking the dog for walking; you will find that you will wonder whether they are leading the dog, or the dog is leading them. Like the Alsatian; this fellow will be running behind. Therefore now I am slave of ahaṁkāra; I am subjugated by ahaṁkāra, I am overwhelmed by ahaṁkāra's punya pāpam; in the case of a jñāni, ahaṁkāra is put in its place; it has got a functional nature; but I am not enslaved by the ahaṁkāra ; and therefore Kṛṣṇa says, saḥ yuktaḥ; he is a yōgi, he is a master; and he is called a Svāmi.

So Svāmi the word, even though we generally use for a monk or a sanyāsi, really the word Svāmi means the one who is the master of his own ahaṁkāra. And when I am master of the ahaṁkāra , Svāmi so and so, is invariably followed by ānanda; Svāmi so and so ānanda; but as long as I am subjugated by the lower-I, I am no more Svāmi, I am dāsāḥ; I am a slave. What is Svāmi's opposite is asāmi. All the ignorant-people asāmis; and asāmis is invariably followed by duḥkham; that title duḥkham you need not add, because by looking at the person's face itself it is evident; whether this person is Svāmi or asāmi.

So therefore Kṛṣṇa says that sa yuktaḥ; he is the master; yōgi, and sa kṛtsnakarmakṛt; he is a person of accomplishment; all accomplishment, he is an accomplished person. Why we do say a jñāni is an accomplished person? It is a figurative expression. When human-beings are trying to accomplish things; what is the driving force? Any human beings' any accomplishment or any pursuit, the driving force is without those accomplishments, I feel small. That is why always people say, I want to be somebody in life; because now he or she feels that now he or she is nobody. And therefore since I have a sense of smallness; through accomplishment, I am trying to be somebody, I am trying to be full and complete; fulfilment or pūrṇatvam is the goal. Somebody wants pūrṇatvam through Wimbledon tennis title; another one wants through world cup; another one through some other thing; so the driving force is pūrṇatvam; and the unfortunate thing, he never gets the pūrṇatvam; as ahaṁkāra , the finite ahaṁkāra , whatever be my accomplishments, finite ahaṁkāra plus finite accomplishment, is equal to finite ahaṁkāra . Previously I was a miserable bachelor, BA; now miserable Master of Arts, MA; miserable Phd; and miserable-I continues because finite plus finite is equal to only finite and not infinite. It is the finite ahaṁkāra struggling to become pūrṇaḥ; and life becomes a failure.

And why it is a failure; because my direction is wrong; how can finite become infinite. I never question. And in the case of a jñāni, he never struggles for making ahaṁkāra become infinite; because he knows body will be finite; mind will be finite; the knowledge you study for hundred years, 24 hours, the knowledge you will have will be finite; as they say specialisation is: when you know more and more of less and less; previously I knew less and less of more and more; now I know more and more of less and less; so therefore do you think intellectual fulfilment is possible in the field of knowledge?! Therefore ahaṁkāra can never become pūrṇaḥ; therefore jñāni does not struggle to make ahaṁkāra pūrṇaḥ; he accepts the ahaṁkāra as it is; and enjoys doing whatever the ahaṁkāra can do; a few more sciences I can learn; and but I do not hope to complete all sciences.

And when there is an urge for pūrṇatvam; jñāni does not see the pūrṇatvam in the ahaṁkāra , because he knows it is impossible; so when the pūrṇatvam urge is to be fulfilled; he goes from the lower-I to the higher-I; because the higher-I was pūrṇaḥ; is pūrṇaḥ and will ever be pūrṇaḥ. Therefore jñāni enjoys pūrṇatvam at the higher level; and enjoys activities at the ahaṁkāra level; and therefore there is no struggle and therefore throughout he is pūrṇam; he does not postpone the pūrṇatvam; I am doing a project and after the project is complete, I will be pūrṇaḥ, He never has such hallucinations; such illusions he does not have; one project is completed; another project is going to come.

Therefore I enjoy doing projects and not for pūrṇatvam, I enjoy doing projects owning up my higher pūrṇatvam; and that is why I am ready to quit the world also at any time. Who is going to continue or whether it will be continued at all; etc. no such anxieties; I enjoy doing things, but my pūrṇatvam is all the time there; and therefore, kṛtsnakarmakṛt means jñāni has discovered the pūrṇatvam at a higher level.

Verse 4.19

यस्य सर्वे समारम्भः कामसङ्कल्पवर्जिताः ।
ज्ञानाग्निदग्धकर्माणं तमाहुः पण्डितं बुधाः ॥४.१९॥

yasya sarvē samārambhāḥ kāmasaṅkalpavarjitāḥ |
jñānāgnidagdhakarmāṇaṁ tamāhuḥ paṇḍitaṁ budhāḥ || 4.19 ||

यस्य yasya he whose, समारम्भा सर्वे samārambhā sarvē actions are all, कामसङ्कल्पवर्जिताः kāmasaṅkalpavarjitāḥ free from desires and fancies, ज्ञानाग्निदग्धकर्माणम् jñānāgnidagdhakarmāṇam and whose actions are burnt by the fire of knowledge बुधा आहुः तम् budhā āhuḥ tam sages call him, पण्डितम् paṇḍitam wise.

19. He whose actions are all free from desires and fancies and whose actions are burnt by the fire of knowledge – sages call him wise.

As I said in the last class, these verses are a commentary on the previous verse which is key verse. 19 to 24 is a commentary on the 18th verse. So now once a jñāni has discovered pūrṇatvam, will there be a motive in him to do any work. This is the basic question, people ask. Because generally the activities are born out of dissatisfaction; and there is also a popular saying also that necessity is the mother of invention.

And therefore the general complaint is that now people are working and accomplishing, because they have dissatisfaction; and therefore dissatisfaction and the need is the motive force; and if all the people are going to be satisfied with themselves; aham pūrṇaḥ; then there will be no motive for work; thus the whole world will be what; contented; and people ask contentment means you do not work; in fact, there are people who say that India is backward because of the philosophy of contentment. You should have the drive; which means that you should be eternally discontented. What a philosophy!, you should be eternally unhappy; only then you will work further; and therefore, the philosophy is discontentment alone leads to work and accomplishment; contentment means one will not work at all; this is the misconception of the people; but what Kṛṣṇa wants to say is: a person can work with contentment.

In fact, the true service comes, true work comes out only when there is fullness; and a person's contribution with fullness will be immensely greater because he does not have any axe to grind; because otherwise whatever activity I take, there will be a tinge of selfishness. Because I want to get something out of it; but Kṛṣṇa says, a jñāni alone can contribute with contentment and now the question is: if jñāni has contentment, then what will be the driving force; our scriptures say then the driving force will be purely of compassion; the greatness of wisdom is: the more a person becomes wiser, the more he identifies with the whole world; ignorance makes my mind smaller, selfish, bothered about me and my family; but in the case of a jñāni, because of universal identification, there is universal compassion; which is his nature. He does not show compassion; but compassion becomes his nature; just as a mother has got an instinctive love for the child; just as the tiger loves the baby; anybody comes around, it attacks; it is not born out of will; it is nature-driven; therefore the scriptures give the example, just as heat cannot be separated from fire; just as light cannot be separated from Sun; similarly compassion will become the intrinsic nature of a jñāni.

And that is why we use the title, ahētuka dayā sindhu; so the one who has compassion, without any motive; not that he wants something in return later; and backed by, motivated by this compassion, whatever he can do; he does; according to his resources; and not only according to his resources; according to the need of the situation; just like the mother is motivated by the compassion; what does she do the child; whatever the child requires, she does; if the child wants the mother to play with it, she does; not because she likes; the child needs it; if the child wants food she is going to give that; therefore the compassion gets crystallised into appropriate action; and that is why Kṛṣṇa said in the third chapter, lōkasaṅgrah karmāni; exactly like Bhagavān's avathāra. What is the motive of Bhagavān's avathāra?

धर्मसंस्थापनार्थाय सम्भवामि युगे युगे ॥ ४.८ ॥

paritrāṇāya sādḥūnām vināśāya ca duṣkṛtām
dharmasamsthāpanārthāya sambhavāmi yugē yugē||4.8||

According to the need of the society; Bhagavān takes form; similarly a jñāni is like Bhagavān, doing whatever is required according to the need of the surrounding, and therefore he says; samārambhāḥ; a jñāni is full of undertaking; as active an ajñāni is; so active a jñāni also is. If jñāni is also active; ajñāni is also active; what is the difference between them; he says: kāma-saṅkalpa-varjitāḥ; jñāni's-activity is not caused by discontentment; not caused by smallness; not caused by a lack in his mind; sense of loneliness; that is not the cause; as he said in the third chapter, naiva tasya kṛtēnārthō nākṛtēnēha kaścana. Without that activity also he is full. So therefore, finitude is not the force behind him. Therefore kāma-varjitāḥ; he is free from desires; desires to fulfill himself; so kāmavarjitāḥ; and therefore only saṅkalpa-varjitāḥ; he is free from all kinds of future projections. Why do we project; because now I am not comfortable with myself; now I am not at home with myself and therefore I picturise myself in the future, with a house; how will I look; with this particular dress; how will I look; with that particular girl or boy, how will I look; with that particular degree, how will I look. If I look at the future-I, the ideal-I I look at, and the actual-I I see; there is a big gulf between the ideal-I and the actual-I. And now the actual-I is miserable, not happy; and therefore I want to quickly that ideal-I, but it does not come at all; when am I going to earn and build a house and can leave peacefully in the own house; and therefore there is a restlessness; there is a tension; there is anxiety; the child is born now and I am now thinking of its PhD. Lkg. admission struggle is going on now and I am thinking of which university PhD should be taken and dreaming about that and becoming restless. Why I am restless because I am not happy with the present-I. So therefore all the dreaming, building castles in the air, they are all expressions of dissatisfied-I.

That is what Dayānanda Svāmi beautifully says: I have rejected myself and when I cannot accept myself, I cannot accept the world also; I find fault with every person, every job, every set up, every house, and whatever it is; the problem is not with the world, self-rejection expresses in the form of world rejection. And self-acceptance, expresses in the form of world acceptance. Again Svāmiji beautifully says: a jñāni is at home with himself as he is and therefore at home with the world as it is and therefore no more dreaming and projections; he lives in the present day and I am fine as I am; and I enjoy doing whatever I can do, and whatever I have to do. Therefore he does not travel from unhappiness to happiness; therefore his travel is from happiness to happiness to happiness only. What a beautiful state of mind; so happily he succeeds; happily he fails also; happily he gets things done; and happily he is not able to get things done also.

There is no connection between the set-up and pūrṇatvam; set up belongs to a lower level; egoistic level and the pūrṇatvam belongs to a higher level. To put in Upaniṣadic language, the set up belongs to vyavahārika satta; pūrṇatvam belongs to paramārtica satta; he does not mix up the order of reality. Therefore there no more dreamings. kāmasaṅkalpavarjitāḥ; samārambhāḥ and jñānāgni-dagdha-karmāṇam. And another interesting thing happens and what is that; when a person is in lower-I, the karmās, the actions, do not produce puṇyam and pāpam. Ahaṅkāra vimudhātma, kartāham iti manyatē. Only when I am identified with ahaṅkāra ; that is why they say, when there is a sankalpa, then only it produces puṇyam pāpa; since jñāni does not have the crystallized-ego, it does not produce puṇyam and pāpam. That is why in Tatva Bōdha, we saw, jñāni does not generate āgami-karma. Jñāni does not generate āgami karma, fresh puṇya-pāpam at all.

So therefore he says, karmāṇam-dagdha, dagdha-karmāṇam, all his karmas are destroyed there itself; they give the example of a roasted seed; a roasted seed is a seed;

it looks like the other seed; and you can touch it, you can handle it; you can do everything; except one; it cannot germinate; A roasted seed, if you sow, it cannot germinate; except germination, everything else is common; Similarly, jñāni's-ahamkāra is supposed to be roasted seed like, this ahamkāra has got a functional existence; if you ask him who are you, he will also give all the bio-data or the ahamkāra description. Therefore functional ahamkāra is there; but it will not germinate into further saṁsāra; and therefore, it is roasted and for roasting which fire should you use. For roasting the seed, you use the local fire; for roasting the ahamkāra, what do you do, you require a different type of fire; and what is that fire, jñāna-agniḥ; the fire of wisdom; and by the fire of wisdom; jñāni burns down all his āgāmi-karma.

And tam paṇḍitaḥ āhuḥ; such a person is called a paṇḍitāḥ in Sānskrīt; paṇḍā means self-knowledge; itaḥ means endowed with; paṇḍā plus itaḥ endowed with means paṇḍitāḥ; endowed with self-knowledge. And Kṛṣṇa uses the word paṇḍitāḥ here just to remind Arjuna of the first verse of His teaching. Do you remember the first verse with which Kṛṣṇa begins the teaching. Not dharmakṣētrē, it is the beginning of the Gīta; and not of Kṛṣṇa's teaching. I am talking of Kṛṣṇa's-upadēśaḥ; it begins in the second chapter, 11th verse -

गतासूनगतासूंश्च नानुशोचन्ति पण्डिताः ॥२.११॥

[aśocyānanvaśocatvaṁ prajñāvādāṁśca bhāṣasē ।
gatāsūnagatāsūṁśca nānuśōcanti paṇḍitāḥ ||2.11||](#)

That paṇḍitāḥ, Kṛṣṇa is defining here; who is the paṇḍitāḥ; who has roasted his ahamkāra and has made it incapable of producing grief; na anuśōcanti; roasted-ahamkāra produces healthy actions; roasted-ahamkāra is incapable of producing grief.

So tam paṇḍitāḥ āhuḥ; who gives this title; budhāḥ; budhāḥ means only the wise people can give such a title; suppose we have to choose a noble prize winner for physics, in the panel who should be there; to recognise a physicist; the panel must consist of physicists alone. Suppose one is carnatic music expert, so you put him in the panel to choose the best physicists; no. Similarly a jñāni has to be chosen by whom, only budh budhāḥ; only wise people can recognise another wise person, and such wise people call him a paṇḍitāḥ.

त्यक्त्वा कर्मफलासङ्गं नित्यतृप्तो निराश्रयः ।
कर्मण्यभिप्रवृत्तोऽपि नैव किञ्चित्करोति सः ॥ ४.२० ॥

tyaktvā karmaphalāsaṅgam nityatṛptō nirāśrayaḥ |
karmaṇyabhipravṛttō'pi naiva kiñcit karōti saḥ || 4.20 ||

नित्यत्रितृप्तः nityatritṛptaḥ remaining ever satisfied, निराश्रयः nirāśrayaḥ and independent, त्यक्त्वा कर्मफलासङ्गम् tyaktvā karmaphalāsaṅgam (and) renouncing attachment towards the result of action, सः न एव करोति saḥ na ēva karōti he never performs किञ्चित् kiñcit any action, अपि अभिप्रवृत्तः api abhipravṛttaḥ though very much engaged कर्मणि karmaṇi in action.

20. Remaining ever satisfied and independent, (and) renouncing the attachment towards the result of action, he never performs any action, though very much engaged in action.

So Kṛṣṇa pointed out that a jñāni is free from kāma and saṅkalpa and as defined in the 2nd chapter 11th verse, jñāni is free from grief; na anuśōcanti; in short, jñāni is a free person. As I said the other day, the difference is between a thermometer and a thermostat. What is the difference between thermometer and thermostat; thermometer is the one which goes up and down determined by the surroundings; it is a slave of the surrounding; it is influenced by the surrounding; and when the temperature shoots up, the mercury shoots up and when temperature comes down; that also comes down; this is called ajñāni; and what about thermostat; it is not controlled by the surrounding, whereas that controls the surrounding. In the case of a jñāni, he is not overwhelmed by the situation, he keeps doing whatever he can do to change or to improve the situation. Therefore in one, one is a slave of the set-up, in the other, one is the master of the set up and what makes you a master is only jñānam.

Now Kṛṣṇa wants to point out that a person can gain jñānam, whatever be his status in life. It does not depend upon the lifestyle that one has. Ajñānam ignorance is the cause of bondage; jñānam is the cause of liberation; the set-up has nothing to do with bondage or liberation. And therefore, if a person is jñāni, then he is liberated even if he is amidst the society. On the other hand, if a person is ajñāni, he is going to be miserable even if he is in the best āśramam in Badrinath. So therefore the set-up does not determine, your āśrama; whether you are a brahmacāri, whether you are a Sanyāsi, or whether you are a grhastha; or whether you are a vānaprasthi; the āśrama does not decide. Your varṇa does not decide; you may be a brāhmaṇa, kṣatriya, vaiśya or śūdraḥ; that is why Śankarācārya wrote beautiful pañjakam;

चाण्डालोऽस्तु स तु द्विजोऽस्तु गुरुरित्येषा मनीषा मम ॥ १ ॥

cāṇḍālo-:'stu sa tu dvijo:'stu gururityeṣā manīṣā mama || 1 ||

Even a cāṇḍāla is a jīvan-mukthā and he is a universal guru; if he has wisdom; and even if he is a greatest brāhmin, if he is ajñāni, he is a saṁsāri only. Therefore varṇa does not matter; āśrama does not matter; even religion does not matter; sex does not matter; one may be male or female, the profession does not matter, nationality does not matter; what matters is are you wise, or otherwise.

And therefore Kṛṣṇa wants to describe two types of jñānis in these verses; one is a gṛhastha jñāni; to prove clearly that householders can happily become jñānis. So one need feel guilty that I am only a householder; they are all Sanyāsīs; because some people create that impression; Sanyāsīs means they are superior; householders means they are inferior, even though the Sanyāsīs are given advice in some institutions, never mingle with a gṛhastha; you will get attached to saṁsāra; No; that means there is problem. Therefore Kṛṣṇa wants to say that; āśrama does not make a person inferior or superior. Therefore a gṛhastha can be happily hopeful of getting mōkṣa while living in grihasthāśrama.

Therefore Kṛṣṇa wants to keep three verses talking about the gṛhastha jñāni. Verse No.20, 22 and 23; three verses; even 24; four verses talk about the gṛhastha jñāni, with all involvement and responsibilities and duties and often loans; and richer the person the bigger the loan; that is the general norm. Big company means the biggest loan; to the tune of crores; if they are lesser, in lakhs, and still less, in thousands; even in Rs.10 levels. So with all the loans etc. the gṛhastha can be a jñāni.

And Kṛṣṇa wants to talk about a Sanyāsi-jñāni also; otherwise Sanyāsi may feel guilty; Svāmiji should also be saved; Sanyāsi-jñāni is also possible, in verse no.21. 21 talks about Sanyāsi-jñāni, 20, 22, 23, 24; they talk about gṛhastha jñāni; so this verse is about a gṛhastha.

So what type of gṛhastha he is: second line; karmaṇi abhipravṛttaḥ; naturally when he is a gṛhastha, he has a set up and he is part of a family; part of the society; part of the community; therefore pañca-mahā-yajña, he has to do; and social responsibilities are there; he has to attend weddings, he has to attend whatever it is; he is involved; of course children are there; there are to be educated, they are to be settled; and by the time the children are settled; the grand children are there to be taken care of; all kinds of things; and therefore he has to be extremely active; and this jñāni gṛhastha also is abhipravṛttaḥ; pravṛttaḥ means active; abhipravṛttaḥ; extremely active; this gṛhastha jñāni.

But what is the difference; the difference is nityatritṛptaḥ; he does not seek fulfilment through these activities; if my fulfilment is going to depend upon the child's completion of education, if the fulfilment is going to depend upon child's wedding; and later child's becoming a parent; and that too not a parent of a girl alone; so therefore the parent of a boy, so you can go on and on; when are we going to get fulfilment; when are you going to take bath in the sea after the waves have subsided.

So jñāni does not connect fulfilment with his pursuits. With fulfilment I do the activities; and what is the source of fulfilment; that is the higher I, pūrṇamadaḥ pūrṇamidaṁ. Like suppose the power goes off; God forbid; suppose the power goes off; and I continue to talk and you are able to hear also; suppose, now the mike is functioning; and the power is not there; then what do you infer; I have got alternative source of power; I have got a UPS, uninterrupted power supply. So therefore what happens; I use the regular power as long it is there; and even when it is not there; I have got an alternative source; jñāni's satisfaction, does not come from the set up; if it comes from the set-up, like our power cut, every time the child withdraws, how are you? Something has to be asked. I love you; I love you; you have to keep asking; that is the new thinking. Honey, I love you. Honey, I love you. Honey, I love you. So if you do not ask/say one day, the other person will think that you are upset and angry with them. So constantly I require supply of love, because of love-bankruptcy. Like the drying of the rivers; all the time looking at the face that somebody has to tell, I love you; I love you, etc. Therefore father's day, mother's day, sister's day, etc. brother's day. So all the time you have to tell and you have to send the cards. I do not say that you should not send all the cards, birthday cards, valentine day cards, anniversary cards; get-well cards, etc. If any of these cards did not come, dried up, miserable. What a miserable life?

So whereas this person if the cards and congratulations comes, wonderful, if they do not come, equally wonderful. If the people are around, wonderful. If they are not around, it is equally or more wonderful; but do not tell that; OK. You were not at home and it was wonderful, if you say like that, they will feel bad; so keep it to yourselves; do not express that thought. So please write letters: I am missing you; I am missing you, etc, even though it may be a lie. When are you coming, etc? It is not hypocrisy; just because the other people require the patting; jñāni does all these things to support others; that is called love; but when he seeks support, it is attachment. If I give support, it is love. If I seek support emotionally, then it becomes attachment. Therefore jñāni does not have these emotional hang-ups, therefore nityatritṛptaḥ; aham pūrṇaḥ asmi.

And once the UPS is there, uninterrupted pūrṇatvam supply, vādāntic UPS; uninterrupted pūrṇatvam supply, pūrṇatvam is fullness, contentment, is another UPS. And once that pūrṇatvam is there; nirāśrayaḥ. Naturally I do not lean psychologically on any external factor; because leaning is because of emotional weakness; just as I have to use a walking stick, when the legs are weak. Using walking stick is a sign of weakness, not sign of strength; so depending on external factors is not a sign of strength but it is sign of weakness and weakness is caused by ignorance. So the strength comes only from knowledge and therefore this person is nirāśrayaḥ; he does not psychologically, I am using the word psychologically; because physical dependence on external world; I cannot avoid; because food is required; clothing is required; shelter is required; physically we all will have to depend, if not now, when we grow old, two sticks or four sticks may be necessary; or even after holding, one may not be able to walk, etc.

So physical dependence does not cause saṁsāra; emotional dependence alone is the problem; the problem is even if there is somebody to hold on my hand, I am not happy because I want this particular person to hold on. That is called emotional-problem. If this person serves I cannot eat; I can eat only if X serves. That is called emotional-dependence.

And therefore no such dependence; therefore nirāśrayaḥ; and therefore only karma phala asaṅgam tyaktvā; he expects a particular result for the action; because very action is a planned action, and you have to project properly, so he expects the results of action, but he is not concerned over the result of action; expectation is one thing; concern is quite another; expectation is based on planning, concern is based on worry.

Therefore, karma-phalā-saṅgam, when a parent brings up the child, he should have certain plans; certainly it is OK. I want to put the child in this university; and I want to do and any parent would expect good future for the child, but there is a difference, if the expectation is fulfilled, it is fine; if the expectation is not fulfilled, what kind of protection, psychological immunity I have. Everybody is prepared for success. Am I prepared to face the failure? Dayānanda says; very beautifully; Success in life is nothing but preparation for failure. A man who is well prepared for failure is a successful person and if I am not prepared for failures, as long as I succeed I am fine, up to semi-final I have come it is fine; final got defeated, read the newspaper, suddenly all the 11 Pakistani players from heroes they have turned villains; effigy burning, stone throwing; and the defeated and came, they were heroes; heroes to zeros.

So therefore, what preparation I have I should ask; and the preparation is nothing but being independent; therefore karmaphalāsaṅgam tyaktvā; āsaṅgam means emotional dependence, concern, anxiety; tyaktvā; jñāni gives up. And with such a healthy mind, such a prepared mind, such a immunised mind, this jñāni performs all the actions.

And what is his condition; naiva kiñcit karōti saḥ; in fact such a jñāni is as good as free from all actions; both in the philosophical sense and psychological sense also; both ways you can see.

In the philosophical sense he is free from action because, in and through all the activities he remembers his higher self ātma, karmaṇyakarma yaḥ paśyēd and therefore he does not claim the action; that is philosophical significance of the expression.

Psychologically also we can study; amidst the action, he is free from those actions because those actions are no more a burden on him; there it does not produce tension; it does not produce anxiety; it is so light; there is no bāram; he does not spend sleepless nights on that particular responsibility; and therefore naiva kiñcit karōti saḥ; this action do not become a burden on him.

More we will see in the next class.

ॐ

From the 18th verse up to the 24th verse of this fourth chapter, Lord Kṛṣṇa is giving the essential teaching of the entire Gīta; the essential teachings of all the Upaniṣads, viz., ātma svarūpa jñānam. And Kṛṣṇa wants to point out that once a person gets this self-knowledge, for such a person, karma; that is action, actionlessness or inaction, both of them, will not be a problem. So he can be active in life, action will not be a shackle for him and he can be quiet in life also; inaction also will not affect him. On the other hand, if this knowledge is not there; then karma also will be a problem; and giving up of karma also will be a problem.

So when an ajñāni is active, he will think that dropping all the actions will be freedom. After retirement there will be happiness. And when a person does not have anything to do, then that also creates a problem, then he begins to think of taking up some work again. So thus, in the case of an ajñāni, when he has karma, akarma will appear to be better, and when he has no karma, then karma will appear to be better; therefore, Kṛṣṇa wants to say that the problem is not with either action or inaction, the problem is inside the mind.

And as long as you do not solve the internal problem, if you are active also, you will have problem; if you are passive also you will have problem, only the type of problem will be different, but the problem will continue. And therefore, never try to change externally; never try to change the action, but try to change your understanding about yourselves; and this knowledge will solve all the problems.

And therefore only once a person gets this knowledge, let that person be an active gr̥hastha; he or she is liberated; or whether he or she is a sanyāsi, and then also, if there is knowledge, there is freedom. Therefore; āśrama does not determine freedom and bondage, but it is the knowledge that determines; and therefore in these verses; Kṛṣṇa wants to talk about both a gr̥hastha-jñāni as well as a sanyāsi-jñāni. And he wants to say that gr̥hastha-jñāni is also liberated in spite of a busy life; sanyāsi-jñāni is also liberated in spite of his, what you call freedom from all the activities.

Therefore, in the 20th verse, which we were seeing in the last class, Kṛṣṇa said, nityatṛptaḥ, nirāśrayaḥ grihasthāḥ jñāni. So this gr̥hastha jñāni, is ever fulfilled, not because he has completed the family duties, but because he finds the fulfilment within himself or herself. There is no question of fulfilment after completing the duties, because in gr̥hastha-āśrama, duties will come, wave after wave, like the waves in the ocean. When can a person take bath in a waveless sea? Like that there is no question of completing the duties and thereafterwards finding rest. Therefore rest has to be found not by completing the duties, but in spite of duties.

And this is what a gr̥hastha has done and therefore he is nityatṛptaḥ and therefore only nirāśrayaḥ; and children's future, is not going to decide his peace of mind; and therefore, nirāśrayaḥ, he will contribute his best for the growth of the children; but what happens and my peace of mind, I do not want to make a connection. And therefore nirāśrayaḥ; does not depend upon people; does not depend upon events; and therefore, karmaṇyabhipravṛttō'pi; even though he is very extremely intensely active, naiva kiñcit karōti saḥ; he is as good as free from actions, because those actions do not become a burden for him. So he is, as somebody nicely said, when your shoe fits your feet, you do not feel the presence of the shoes. When do you feel the presence of the shoes? When it does not fit properly; then all the time, it draws your attention; I am here, I am here.

In fact, as the story goes, Mulla used to wear very very tight shoe, then somebody asked, why are you wearing such a shoe; he said: 'for getting the enjoyment of removal in the evening', he said. Ok. If you are such a person, that is a different thing; when something is fit, you do not feel the burden. For a jñāni, karma is not a burden at all. Up to this we saw in the last class.

निराशीर्यतचित्तात्मा त्यक्तसर्वपरिग्रहः ।
शारीरं केवलं कर्म कुर्वन्नाप्नोति किल्बिषम् ॥४.२१॥

nirāśīryatacittātmā tyaktasarvaparigrahaḥ |
śārīraṁ kēvalaṁ karma kurvanna"pnōti kilbiṣam || 4.21 ||

tyaktasarvaparigrahaḥ having renounced all possessions, यतचित्तात्मा yatacittātmā (and) having restrained the mind and body, निराशि nirāśi he (remains) free from desires, kurvan karma कुर्वन् कर्म engaging in (minimum) activity, शरीरम् śarīram required for the maintenance of the body, केवलम् kēvalam without attachment, न आप्नोति na āpnōti he does not incur किल्बिषम् kilbiṣam sin

21. Having renounced all possessions (and) having restrained the mind and body, he (remains) free from desires. Engaging in (minimum) activity required for the maintenance of the body without attachment, he does not incur sin.

So in this verse, Kṛṣṇa talks about a sanyāsi-jñāni. So a person who does not have any possession; wives, children, bank balance, etc.; he is a monk; and Kṛṣṇa says that person also is a free person. And therefore he says: tyaktā-sarvē-parigrahaḥ. So this sanyāsi-jñāni has renounced all his possessions; parigrahaḥ, all possessions; not only things, even relationships. So all of them he has given up, which means he is in chaturtha āśrama; and nirāśi, after giving up those things; if a person is going to miss them, then the giving up is of no use. Kṛṣṇa already talked about such a person in the 3rd chapter,

इन्द्रियार्थान् विमूढात्मा मिथ्याचारः स उच्यते || ३-६ ||

karmēndriyāṇi saṁyamya ya āstē manasā smaran |
indriyārthān vimūḍhātmā mithyācāraḥ sa ucyatē || 3.6 ||

After physically renouncing pleasures, if a person going to think of them or feel jealous of those people; they have a nice house, wife, children, money, car, etc. one can drink coffee as and when needed; if he is going to miss those things, renunciation is suppression.

Therefore, renunciation is meaningful only when I do not miss what I have renounced. And therefore Kṛṣṇa here says this monk or sanyāsi is, nirāśi; he does not lack anything in life; and yatacittātmā; and the one who has mastered his body, mind and complex by sādhana; because if a person has to give up comforts in life, he has to make his body fit for that; otherwise if the body is used to those comforts, sleeping in A/c, then, even though you are mentally prepared, the body is not ready. And therefore, the one who wants to take sanyāsa, he must have physical fitness as well as mental fitness.

And therefore yatacittātmā; here the word ātma means body, śarīram; not satcidānanda ātma, but the body, cittam means mind, both of them are mastered. And such a person what karma he does, śarīram kēvalam karma kurvan. So he does not have any family or possession; he does not have any responsibility also. Possession and responsibility go together; and that is why we say Gṛhasthā-āśrama has got an advantage also; a disadvantage also. Sanyāsa-āśrama has got an advantage also; a disadvantage also.

What is the advantage of gṛhastha-āśrama; there is security; in fact most of the people want gṛhastha-āśrama and children for what purpose; in old age, for a little physical help and support from them. There is a fond hope that the children will take care; and therefore possession of a house, bank balance, children, etc. there is an advantage of security; but the disadvantage is you have the responsibility of taking care of them. So security is advantage; responsibility is disadvantage. What about sanyāsa-āśrama; no responsibility; no wife to take care; no children to educate; how to invest properly; seeing the interest, no money to invest; there is nothing to invest; so therefore, there are no responsibilities at all; but at the same time, there is a disadvantage, what is that?; there is no security; a sanyāsi gives himself at the hands of the Lord.

अनन्याश्चिन्तयन्तो मां ये जनाः पर्युपासते |
तेषां नित्याभियुक्तानां योगक्षेमं वहाम्यहम् ||९-२२||

[ananyāścintayantō mām yē janāḥ paryupāsatē |
tēṣām nityābhīyuktānām yōgākṣemam vahāmyaham||9.22||](#)

That is a different LIC; that is also yōgākṣemam; so sanyāsi has got that LIC. Gṛhastha has got Mount road LIC; therefore every āśrama has got plus and minus points; therefore do not compare the āśramas, learn to find security within yourselves.

And therefore śārīram kēvalam karma; since he does not have any family responsibilities, or even social responsibilities. So sanyāsa-āśrama is a civil death; so therefore, he does not have even power to vote; he is not supposed to take part even in this duty; no duty at all. If I have a vote, I have to judge; nobody is better; that is a different thing; at least he has to make a comparison; this coalition, that coalition, etc. all these are distractions; therefore Sanyāsi does not have even social duties. What karma he does?; he has got only one duty; Bhagavān has given a body to him; and he is the trustee of this body and therefore until the prārabdhaḥ is over, he has to take care of the body, as Lord's property; and therefore Kṛṣṇa says, śārīram kēvalam karma; for the maintenance of the body; whatever karma is required; snānam, vastram, bhikṣa, etc. karma kurvan; kurvan and again bhikṣa, he should not choose; if he is in the house, he can request for Adai today, dosai in the evening, etc. but here he cannot ask bhavathi dosai dēhi; bhavathi bhikṣām dēhi; no complaints, no comparison; śārīram kēvalam karma kurvan kilbiṣam na āpnōti; he does not get any karma-phalam. Kilbiṣam literally pāpam, here pāpam means karma-phalam; since he does not have an ego, karma will not produce puṇyam also, karma will not produce pāpam also for him. So this is a sanyāsi-jñāni.

यदृच्छालाभा संन्तुष्टो द्वन्द्वातीतो विमत्सरः ।
समः सिद्धावसिद्धौ च कृत्वापि न निबध्यते ॥४.२२॥

yadṛcchālābhasantuṣṭō dvandvātītō vimatsaraḥ|
samaḥ siddhāvasiddhau ca kṛtvā'pi na nibadhyatē||4.22||

yadṛcchālābhasantuṣṭaḥ यदृच्छालाभसन्तुष्टः fully content with whatever is obtained by chance, dvandvātītaḥ द्वन्द्वातीतः unaffected by the pairs of opposites, विमत्सरः vimatsaraḥ and remaining free from jealousy, समः samaḥ he is equanimous, सिद्धौ च असिद्धौ sidhdau ca asiddhau in success and failure, अपि कृत्वा न api kṛtvā na though engaged in action, निबध्यते nibadhyatē he is not bound.

22. Fully content with whatever is obtained by chance, unaffected by the pairs of opposites, and remaining free from jealousy, he is equanimous in success and failure. Though engaged in action, he is not bound.

So this verse can be taken as either a gṛhastha -jñāni slōka or a sanyāsi-jñāni slōka; in both ways one can interpret; Śankarācārya takes this verse as the description of a sanyāsi-jñāni. But this can be taken as a gṛhastha -jñāni also; I will take this as the description of a gṛhastha -jñāni, because one has to go by the majority here! So therefore, I will interpret that in that way; both are OK. And what is his attitude in life? yadṛcchālābhasantuṣṭaḥ, he welcomes whatever happens in life as a result of his karma; so yadṛcchālābhasantuṣṭaḥ; satisfied with whatever comes to him as a result of his action; because we should remember that the events in our life are not totally controlled by us; this is a very important lesson that we have to remember throughout the life, my future is not totally controlled by me.

But we should be very careful, because we tend to go to two extremes; there are one set of people, who claim that I can order my future and I can decide my future; I can totally control my future; this is one extreme, the arrogant type of people; and they will talk like that until they get thrash from the Lord. No human being can claim that. Even Bhagavān when he came as avathāra he could not totally decide what is going to happen. So one extreme is over-confidence; then the second extreme is the fatalistic type, who say that nothing is under my control; I do not have any control at all with regard to my future; this is the other extreme; one takes hundred percent responsibility; another takes zero percent responsibility. Gīta says both extremes are wrong. Then what is the right attitude; I am one of the contributory factors with regard to my future.

And I am a very powerful, very important contributory factor with regard to my future; I cannot totally decide, but I can influence my future. If I do not have the total control, then what are the other factors which will control? All the other factors put together, we call daivam. Because the other factors are numerous to enumerate. Right from weather onwards; right from war somewhere else; everything can influence today's condition. As somebody said, you cannot pluck a flower without disturbing a star. That means the whole world is interconnected and therefore the number of factors that will determine my future is so numerous that instead of enumerating them; we have put all the extraneous factors into one huge bag and we call it daivam; or prārabhdam or Īśvara iccha, God's will. And therefore what should be my attitude? I contribute my best and once I have contributed my best, I prepare my mind, to receive any type of result; and this attitude is called yadrcchālābhasantuṣṭaḥ; yadrcchā means whatever happens as karma-phalam; in that lābha, santuṣṭaḥ; some commentators read this word twice; yadrcchālābhasantuṣṭaḥ; yadrcchā-lābha-santuṣṭaḥ; so whatever comes also he accepts; and whatever does not come also he accepts. Yadrcchā-lābha-santuṣṭaḥ. Ok.

But again we should be very careful with regard to these things; whatever comes as karma-phalam, it is according to the Law of the Lord that I have to accept that does not mean that we should not work for improving the situation. If the failure happens, I have to accept it because it has happened; and therefore it is choiceless. But at the same time, with regard to the next result; I have got control and therefore I can do, whatever has to be done. Therefore accept the present; work for the future; accept the present; work for the future. So worry cannot change the present; worry cannot change the future also. Present requires acceptance; future requires hard work. This is the simple philosophy of Gīta; present including past, requires acceptance; future requires hard work. Both of them do not require worry; Therefore Kṛṣṇa said; aśōcyānanvaśōcastvaṃ; Arjuna, you are worrying, because nothing solves worry. yadrcchālābhasantuṣṭaḥ; and dvandva ātītaḥ; one who is beyond the pairs of opposites; which Kṛṣṇa described in the second-chapter,

वीतरागभयक्रोधः स्थितधीर्मुनिरुच्यते || २-५६ ||

[duḥkhēṣvanudvignamanāḥ sukhēṣu vigataspr̥hāḥ |
vītarāgabhayakrōdhaḥ sthitadhīrmunirucyatē || 2.56 ||](#)

यः सर्वत्रानभिस्नेहस्तत्तत्प्राप्य शुभाशुभम् |
नाभिनन्दति न द्वेष्टि तस्य प्रज्ञा प्रतिष्ठिता || २-५७ ||

[yaḥ sarvatrānabhisnēhastat tat prāpya śubhāśubham |
nābhinandati na dvēṣṭi tasya prajñā pratiṣṭhitā || 2.57 ||](#)

Life is nothing but facing a series of pairs of opposites. And dvandvātītaḥ means the one who has gone beyond the pairs of opposites.

Then the next question, what do you mean by gone beyond the pairs of opposites; gone beyond means what; will he go upstairs? No. In fact, you cannot physically go beyond the pairs of opposites because, wherever you go, there will be pairs of opposite; therefore what is going beyond the pairs of opposites; it is nothing but not allowing the pairs of opposites to disturb the mind. Making the pairs of opposites incapable of disturbing me too much. That is all we can do. You cannot stop the pairs of opposites, but you can immunise yourselves, strengthen yourselves; just like when you want to go to Badri, Kedar, wherever there is a huge pilgrim centre, there will be lot of crowd will be there, lot of diseases around, you cannot change the condition there; you immunise yourselves.

In the same way, you cannot stop the pairs of opposites but you can protect yourselves against them; and what is the protection; I hope you remember; when you cut the jackfruit; what is the protection; coconut oil; then enter into jackfruit; nothing will happen. Similarly, apply the coconut oil of jñānam when you enter into the world of pairs of opposites, you have transcended them. So dvandvātītō vimatsaraḥ; the one who has gone beyond competition.

According to our śāstra, competition is not a healthy thing; even though nowadays they say competition alone brings the best out of the people, our śāstra is not very much in favour of that; śāstra feels that it is like drug induced power; so when a person takes certain banned drugs in olympic games etc. it is called performance enhancing drugs; but still they ban. Why should they ban? even though it increases the performance. Side effects are not good; they are powerfully negative. In the same way, śāstra feels competition may bring the best, but invariably it is going to make you compare with the winner. Invariably going to lead to depression. Invariably it is going to lead to jealousy. And invariably it will lead to cheating also. Therefore all these are because of competition; our śāstra says love and co-operation must be the means of performance enhancing; not mātsaryaḥ. That is why mātsarya is included in six enemies of the individual; kāma krōdhaḥ, lōbhaḥ, mōha, madaḥ mātsaryaḥ. And jñāni is one who does not have this problem of competition; vimatsaraḥ; and when there is no competition, when somebody wins; when somebody performs better, I can congratulate. Otherwise congratulations would be more externally lip-service while cursing the hell inside; heart burning inside. Oh today the better player won the game; that is all story.

So therefore, vimatsaraḥ; samaḥ siddhāvasiddhau ca; siddhiḥ means success; asiddhiḥ means failure; sama means equanimous; I told you the other day, according to vedānta; success is defined as capacity to manage both successes and failures of life. That is true success. Because nobody can get 100% success in life; people do talk how to get success
